are giving away free Grand Slam breakfasts! Yep, I said free...as in, all you gotta buy is your coffee. Pretty cool, huh?

I'm sure this killer offer is not news to anyone who watched the Super Bowl on Sunday, but seeing as Christine and I were otherwise engaged (and just now finished watching the Bowl commercials on Tivo) we just heard about the Denny's deal of the decade last night.

Two Million People Swarm Denny's for a Grand Slam Breakfast

Posted by: Burt Helm on February 03

Denny's hit, ahem, a grand slam with its Super Bowl promotion. On Sunday during its Super Bowl ad, Denny's announced that it would serve a free "Grand Slam" breakfast (eggs, pancakes, sausage, and bacon) to anyone who wanted one this morning. So how did it go? A rep for the company just told me that two million people walked through the restaurant chains' doors today, and that each Denny's restaurant served an average of 130 Grand Slams per hour . Earlier today, "denny s locations" was #9 on Google Trends, which tracks fast-rising searches.

Ad Age sent four reporters out to brave the lines today. Once they got seated, it sounds like they were pleasantly surprised by the experience.

The ad that started it all:
