Where to Promote Education Events and Opportunities

Looking to share an event or professional learning opportunity beyond Bank Street? The platforms below can help you reach current and aspiring educators and the broader education community.

I Teach NYC

- Description: Hosted by New York City Public Schools, I Teach NYC shares career development, professional learning, and leadership opportunities as well as grants and other resources for New York City educators.
- Cost: Free to submit.
- Audience: New York City public school teachers, including educators interested in professional learning, career advancement, leadership development, and financial resources.
- Event Submission Link

TeachNY

- Description: A statewide teacher recruitment initiative developed by the New York State Education Department and TEACH, TeachNY helps people explore the teaching profession, find teacher preparation programs, access coaching, and learn about scholarships and financial support.
- Cost: Free to submit.
- Audience: Aspiring teachers across New York State, including high school and college students, career changers, and school staff interested in becoming certified teachers.
- Event Submission Link

Chalkbeat

- Description: Chalkbeat's community events calendar promotes education-related events and activities through a searchable online listing and its newsletters.
- Cost: Free for events that are free to attend; $25 for paid events and job/career fairs.
  - Note: An account is required to submit an event. You can create an account during submission.
- Audience: Teachers, school leaders, parents, students, and other education professionals, with reach depending on the Chalkbeat bureau and event location.
- Event Submission Link