Hill AFROTC Chief Reassures Seniors

By ART SIEGEL
Managing Editor

All Air Force ROTC students will be permitted to register and will continue to receive deferments and subsistence payments.

Col. Robert P. Halloran, professor of air science and tactics, announced yesterday that this decision covers advanced students who had been informed through the newspapers that they would be eliminated as part of a drastic curtailment of the AFROTC program.

THE SENIORS who elect to complete the course will be commissioned in accordance with the budgetary limitations set up by Congress and the manpower requirements of the Air Force.

Although all students may not be commissioned at graduationo, all those who successfully complete the prescribed course will eventually be commissioned.

The local contingent of Army ROTC announced yesterday that all members of the Class of 1954 who complete the course successfully will be commissioned. All members of the Class of 1953 who completed the course have been commissioned and are going on active duty, according to Col. George R. Stevens, professor of military science and tactics.

Stevens said that of those qualified, 100 per cent were accepted into the advanced Army course. In both branches, the basic course consists of the first two years of college and the advanced course consists of the junior and senior years.

HE ADDED that a limited number of highly qualified ex-AFROTC students will be accepted by Army ROTC.

Stevens said he anticipates a large frosh enrollment in Army ROTC. He said there are no limitations on the number of men that will be accepted and stressed that the acceptance policy will be virtually the same as in previous years.

Halloran said he anticipates the Air Force corps will number more than 1,000 men after registration is completed. He expressed optimism, referring to the recent order that AFROTC students must "fly or get out." The policy regarding the continuation of seniors in the program with all attached privileges and benefits applies to non-flight training students as well as those who are physically qualified for and desire to fly.

Halloran said that the majority of advanced courses juniors have indicated a desire to fly. Future limitations on the advanced course enrollment will depend upon the needs of the Air Force. Thus a modification of the summer curtailment announcement appeared likely.

UNIVERSITY VICE - PRESIDENT Frank P. Piskor said Monday that he advises all students to remain in the program. He also recommended that freshmen who are interested in the program, register for it this week.

Piskor said that once a student passes by the opportunity to join the corps, and once a student drops out of the corps, he is not eligible to receive a commission through ROTC.

Piskor said that even if a student in AFROTC is not commissioned at graduation, or if as a commissioned officer he is put in an inactive status, he will probably have the opportunity, when

Staff to Inquire At DO Office

All last year's Daily Orange staff members are urged to inquire at the Hellbox this afternoon concerning beat assignments. Photographers who worked on the paper last year or wish to contribute this term are especially in demand; they may contact Arthur Siegel, managing editor.

Freshmen who wish to join the DO staff may sign up with Janet Caro, executive editor, any afternoon this week.

Frosh Lids Sold Out In First Two Days

All-Time Record Set By Orange Key

Frosh lid sales reached the sell-out figure of 1,426 yesterday, establishing a new record for the annual event sponsored by Orange Key, junior men's honorary, Edward Hardy and Howard Osofsky, co-chairmen, announced.

For the first time in Hill history, the entire supply of the colorful orange and blue beanies were completely bought up by the freshmen. Last year 1,222 lids were sold by Orange Key, the previous high.

First freshman to buy his lid was Leslie Cohen of Syracuse, entering the College of Liberal Arts, who picked up his at 8:03 a. m. Monday at the booth in front of the Infirmary. The last beanie was sold at 12:25 p. m. yesterday to a frosh at Sims who was identified as Brian Malcolm of Nyack.

First day sales totaled 1,385, despite cloudy weather mixed with occasional heavy rains. Final tabulations showed the Skytop booth in one day of operation sold 336 lids. The Sims-Slocum booth was second in total number with 301 in two days.

Members of Orange Key will meet at 10 p. m. today in the Sigma Alpha Mu house to elect officers and plan the group's annual banquet.

Zoology Professors Attend Conference

Professors Maurice M. Alexander, LeRoy C. Stegeman and William L. Webb of the College of Forestry's zoology department attended the Northeastern section of the Wildlife society sessions at Bretton Woods, N. H. Monday and yesterday.

Reservations Open For Stadium Seats

Seniors May Obtain Special Section

Student reserved seating for football games begins this weekend with the Saturday evening Temple contest. Student sections will also be open for those who do not desire reserved seats.

A special arrangement has been made for Saturday's game whereby only seniors will be given seating preference. A large section will be blocked off and held for seniors until Saturday night.

MEMBERS OF other classes may obtain reserved seats on a first-come first-served basis. Each student may pick up a maximum number of four reservations by presenting a corresponding number of identification cards and tickets at the men's gym after registration.

Those students who have reserved seats for the game must present ID cards, tickets and reservations at the stadium gate.

No seats will be reserved after the game starts. Ushers will leave their posts at that time and the sections will be open for general seating.

PLACARD CHEERING will be held in sections 9, 10 and 11 as in the past. All seats in these sections will be reserved and students who accept these seats are expected to cheer.

Russian Program students may pick up tickets for the Temple game at a booth in the Quonseteria tomorrow from noon to 1:30 p.m. and from 3 to 4 p.m.

Hoople Center Receives Grant

The University's Gordon D. Hoople hearing and speech center has received a $3,000 grant from the National Cancer institute.

The grant will enable Dr. Louis DiCarlo, executive director of the Center, and a Walter Amster, an instructor on the center's staff, to study the breathing and speech coordination of larynegectomized patients.

Dr. DiCarlo and Mr. Amster plan to prepare an X-ray motion picture in connection with the study on the patients who have had their larynxes removed due to cancer or injury.

Hendricks Groups Welcome Freshmen At Convo Tonight

Chapel night, highpoint of Hendricks chapel offering to incoming frosh, gets under way at 8:30 p. m. today, with welcomes by Dean of the Chapel Charles C. Noble, co-chairmen of Chapel board Patricia (Rusty) Roden and Deane Lavender, cheerleaders and trumpeters.

This eighth Chapel night will carry on a tradition of skits, dancing, food and fun. "It will serve as an introduction to our unique Chapel program, one of the most active brotherhood programs of any college in the nation," Betty Evans, newly appointed Chapel executive secretary, said yesterday.

A series of slides will be presented with the cooperation of the audio-visual department, giving a visual picture of the elements in the Chapel program; Chapel board, fellowship groups, all-Chapel committees, Jewish student fellowship, Protestant council and Casowasco conferences.

As per plans of the Chapel night committee under James Fellows, the assemblage will retire downstairs to the Chapel lounge and Colonial room, where a rotating entertainment program will be presented under the direction of Arthur Kinney.

Entertainment will feature the Noble Dean with his accordion, songs by Fred Griesinger, ragtime piano by James (Jazz) Flanigan, and song parodies by the Canterbury club.

After refreshments, the frosh will end the evening dancing beneath Syracuse skies to music over a sound system.

Chapel night this year will have a theme of "Reaching Out," which was the key to the recent Casowasco conference. Tonight's convocation will explain why Hendricks chapel is the spiritual as well as material center of the campus.

J-School Occupies Old Women's Gym

The School of Journalism has moved into the old women's gym, but the journalists' legendary home, Yates castle, still stands.

Demolition has not yet begun on the ancient structure, slated to come down to make way for extensions of the State university College of Medicine.

THE HELLBOX, prefab home of the Daily Orange, has also been spared, pending word from state authorities.

Meanwhile, extensive remodeling has been carried out in the women's gym, providing office and classroom space, photography darkrooms, a typography laboratory and a library.

Razing of the Castle was originally slated for laste June 1; however an informal drive to save the building a san example of classic architecture was spearheaded by Hill journalism alumni. A picture of the structure appeared in an issue of the New York Times Sunday magazine.

IT'S LID TIPPING time, as the Hill's new frosh arrive at the New York Central station. Dean of Hendricks Chapel, CHARLES C. NOBLE, extends the welcome hand of a friendly campus. It is fairly evident that the members of Orange Key, who sell the frosh cranial adornments, boarded the train in Utica—for lo and behold, the members of the Class of '57 already have their lids. A busy week awaits the freshmen, who will run the gamut of orientation activities—from the psychological tests in the morning to the gala frosh mixer. These frosh coeds will make many upperclassmen yearn for the bygone days of the mixer. Mais c'est la vie. DO Photo by Audio-Visual

By ARLENE LAMBERT
Editor-in-chief

The Class of 1957 was urged to "make no small plans or dream no small dreams" by Chancellor William P. Tolley at its first convocation Monday.

Speaking to more than 2,000 students in Hendricks chapel, the Chancellor explained to the newcomers the great progress in building and education that is now taking place at Syracuse—progress that was never "sensed by its founders whose dreams were too modest."

"But no dream is too great for you or for the University," he challenged.

The Chancellor also warned against the drift against liberal thinking which is becoming apparent in America. He maintained that a curtain of silence or the lessening of freedom of thought should be reconized for what it was—a form of slavery.

He then glanced up at the Chapel wall and read the appropriate inscription: "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free."

The function of a University is to encourage critical thinking, develop intellectual perfection, teach students how to study, how to think accurately and how to evaluate all types of problems, the Chancellor stated.

Dr. Tolley compared a university with a gymnasium, calling it a place for mental wrestling, mental and moral muscle, discipline and endless hard work.

The university in America, according to the Chancellor, has a special responsibility as a leader of world thought. It must respect public opinion but not bow its knees to it.

"A University like Syracuse is not unable to speak out against veil and wrong because it is a free institution with a mission and an ideal," he declared.

The Chancellor was introduced by Vice-Chancellor Finla G. Crawford, who praised the accomplishments of a Syracuse graduate, J. Roscoe Drummond, now head of the Washington Bureau of the New York Herald Tribune.

Prof. Arthur Poister gave the organ prelude while Frank Hakanson directed the singing.

Miss Parker Gets Director's Position

Duties began July 8 for Miss Margaret Parker who was appointed director of university social activities last spring by Dean of Women Marjorie C. Smith.

MISS MARGARET PARKER, a former Syracuse student dean, has assumed her duties as University social director.

in Liberty, Mo. where she was director of student activities. She took her bachelor's degree at Kansas State College.

Miss Parker served as head resident for Sims III and Waverly cottage while studying for her master's degree here. Waverly cottage has been razed to make room for the university's expansion program since then. Of this Miss Parker says, "They liked me so well they tore down my cottage."

The young social director beams, "It's wonderful to be here." And she expects that the most enjoyable part of her job will be the students themselves.

She succeeds Mrs. Alexander H. Dunbar, the former Miss Elizabeth Broad, who resigned in the spring.

Seniors to Register For Job Placement

Seniors have been advised that the job placement program will begin with registration this week. William Phipps, director of placement, has announced that all seniors will be given a copy of the booklet "Getting the Right Job" during registration.

Seniors will also be given a number of registration forms, which, if filled cut carefully, will aid the placement office and prospective employers.

Even though some seniors have made post-graduate plans, they are advised to participate in the program so the placement office can follow the individuals' progress and maintain records for later reports.

During the school year, those seniors who register will be interviewed concerning future placement. Male students should bring completed forms to the business placement office in 105 Slocum, and coeds should contact Miss Dorothy Osborn in the women's building.

GovernmentsMove Into New Offices

Both men's and women's student governments have moved into new offices for the coming semester.

MSG, evicted from prefab 12 by bulldozers making way for construction on the University's new law school, is now located in building 30, behind the psychological services center on College pl.

WSG now occupies offices on the third floor of the new Women's building on Comstock ave. Regular office hours will begin Monday, Sept. 28.

During the remainder of this week, coeds with questions about permissions or WSG regulations may contact President Mary Ann Dalton, Theta Phi Alpha, or Vice-President Elizabeth (Liz) Brydon, Kappa Alpha Theta.

Tentative Figure Shows 2,300 New Students Expected

By ED HARDY
Daily Orange Junior Editor

The admissions trend is running slightly above last year, the University Admissions office said yesterday. A fall enrollment of about 9,500 is anticipated by John S. Hafer, dean of admissions.

Indications point to a larger freshman class than in 1952, when 1,588 registered during the first week.

The freshman class enrollment may total 1,900 or more by the time registration is completed. The number of transfer students will be about 400, according to unofficial estimates.

Although no complete figures will be compiled until next week, 2,878 new admissions were reported by Dean Hafer Sept. 15. This is an increase of 335 over 1952 and includes 2,474 freshmen and 404 transfer students.

More than 100 Korean veterans, taking benefit of the GI bill of rights, will attend Syracuse this fall. One-hundred eighteen had been admitted through Sept. 15.

The Admissions office announced that only veterans' applications are being considered now. Applications from non-resident freshmen and transfer women students were closed early this month when all available housing was filled. It was the second time since world war 2 that this was done. There are about 650 places for frosh and 750 for upperclass women in University housing.

Men's housing is still open, according to Jack C. Buckle, acting director of men's residences. A total of 669 freshmen are living in University housing, he said.

The figures made public Sept. 15 were expected to drop after registration if, as in previous years, many applicants fail to show up to register.

Registration begins at 8:30 a.m. tomorrow in Archbold gymnasium and continues through Saturday until 4:30 p.m. Students will meet their advisors and choose courses before registering and paying tuition in the gymnasium. Every student has already received official notification from his college as to where he should register.

The arrival of the freshmen and new students on campus Monday was marred by rainy skies that didn't clear until early evening.

Traffic jams were reported on College pl. near Sims hall, on University pl. from Walnut pl. to S. Crouse ave., and on Skytop rd. as parents unloaded the newcomers. Parking spaces were at a premium near all houses and on campus. There were few cases of visitors' automobiles being ticketed by city police as compared to the rash of illegal parking summonses issued last year.

One-hundred thirty-three Goon squad members, 26 members of Traditions commission and numerous guides welcomed the bewildered freshmen to campus. Alan Anderson and Barbara Suchy are co-chairmen of the Orientation Week activities, with Miss Margaret Parker, director of social activities, coordinator for the University.

College convocations are on the program for today for the frosh and transfer students. Several changes have been made in the schedules listed in the Newcomer's Daze booklet. The Business Administration convo will be from 10 a.m. to 12 m. in 104 Slocum;

Co-op Book Mart To Open in Lounge

The student cooperative book mart will open Thursday in the women's lounge of the men's gym, according to Jean Spencer, book mart president.

The book mart will open at 9 a. m. and remain open during registration hours until Saturday afternoon for taking in books. The sales will begin on Monday.

Students who have stubs from last year may bring them in Friday, Oct. 2 and Saturday, Oct. 4. The official closing date of the book mart is 12 noon Oct. 4.

The book mart is sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega, service fraternity and the book mart organization. Students wishing to work may do so by contacting Jean Spencer, president, at Alpha Omicron Pi.

Women's Dorms Crowded; Temporary Centers in Use

Women are taking the campus by storm.

Cottages and dormitories for women are now filled to capacity and two temporary houses were opened this week to accommodate freshmen and transfers who had not yet been assigned to living quarters.

MISS KATHRYN COPELAND, director of women's housing expects to close the temporary frosh cottage at 504 University pl. today as there will porbably be enough cancellations to reassign everyone. All but one had been assigned to permanent housing yesterday.

The temporary transfer cottage at 301 Euclid ave. should be closed by Monday because half of its occupants fill campus vacancies as they occur and others move to Blackwell cottage.

Blackwell debuts as a Syracuse university living center this fall. The house was purchased recently from a private owner. It is one of five cottages opened this year to provide additional campus homes for women.

Three of these houses were occupied last year by men students,—Woodworth, Spring and Wilbur.

According to Miss Copeland, about 1,400 women have been assigned to 53 living centers, including Sims and Shaw dormitory for freshmen and upperclass women respectively.

Since two head residents are yet to be appointed, two women's student government senior officers have been appointed to take temporary charge of two freshman cottages. Patricia Fay is in Heffron cottage and Ellen (Billie) Williams has Wilbur cottage.

Frey cottage is open for three months only and is listed as special housing in a release from the dean of women's office.

BECAUSE OF the unexpected increase in enrollment of women students, many assignments were held up until the last minute, at which time as many as possible were put into permanent housing.

Last Wednesday Miss Copeland wired all students without housing assignments to report to her office upon arrival in Syracuse. The two temporary cottages were opened and it is expected that all will be in permanent living centers by Monday, in time for the beginning of classes.

Everything is now under control, according to Miss Copeland. "The students have been wonderful about it," she said yesterday.

MSG, WSG Slate Convocations Today

Men's and women's student government will hold convocations especially for the frosh at 7:15 p.m. today. New frosh males will convene in Crouse auditorium, while the coeds will meet in Hendricks chapel.

Mary Anne Dalton, president of women's student government, will preside at the WSG convo. Dean of Women Marjorie Smith will address the frosh, on the topic "New Horizons". She will also present the members of her staff: Margaret Parker, social director, Kathryn Copeland, director of women's residence organization, Ruth Haddock, assistant dean of women and Dorothy Osborn, vocation and guidance director.

"Fuzzy Frosh" will then be introduced as well as many of the coed campus leaders.

Stanley Leff, men's student government president, will act as chairman of the MSG convo and will present other MSG officers. The frosh training program will also be explained.

To the Class of '57:

Dear Freddy and Suzie Frosh:

Here you are—for better or for worse—a member of the Syracuse university family. Right now you're having a few days all to yourself in order to look around before some of your big brothers and sisters return. This is a hectic time of donning and doffing orange caps, memorizing rules, greeting new faces, scurrying to convocations especially for you and in general, just seeing what it really means to belong to the "crazy college kid" atmosphere.

Between busy moments you perhaps have already noticed that it really isn't as crazy as the saying might indicate. Oh, yes, it's confusing at times and perplexing to the unitiated. Even then, the purpose of it all comes creeping through.

You are reaching Syracuse at a time when the building and development program is reaching its highest peak. A new law school, modern men's dormitory and stately engineering building will soon be part of the University skyline. The "old oval" is fast becoming the "new quad."

Yet, the reason of your being here or why the Syracuse campus exists cannot be described in terms of the brick and mortar. Even by describing its nationwide fame in research, journalism, medicine, forestry, or other phases of curricular study, one cannot answer these questions.

Each of you, on the surface, may be in college for a different purpose. Some of you want a specialized training while some of your companions feel that only a general course of study will give them the information needed for future employment.

Some of you may be here to find a lifelong partner; others, to be relieved of army duty for another four years. Some of you will aim for valedictorian while your roommate may well be thinking that social success is more important.

But whatever your direct motives may be, Freddy and Suzie, chances are that you're really here for the same purpose: to become a more responsible, effective and happy citizen.

As college students you will learn how to think, evaluate and analyze. Lifelong habits and interests will come under close scrutiny. You will be taught how unlimited are the boundaries of a critical, independent and discriminating mind.

You will gain a broader perspective on your life and life in general. New fields of human thought will suddenly open before you.

You will meet students of different nationalities, races, and religions—meet, work, play and live with those whom you formerly thought of as "different."

You will probably have to learn to take some pretty bitter medicine with good grace. You will learn that the world in college and out, is filled with people of radically different ideas, morals and actions. Yet to be aware of these differences and not be surprised is a part of the process.

You will have the opportunity to appreciate spiritual values and eventually compose a philosophy of living to guide you through the remaining years.

We are proud to have you among us, Freddie and Suzie, while you are in this process of learning to be that responsible, effective and happy citizen. Syracuse is abounding in friendliness and enthusiasm, cheerfulness and energy and the lessons it teaches on optimism cannot be forgotten. In fact, your days on the Hill will probably take their place among the brightest of your life. And it won't be long before you utter with all your heart:

"Flag we love—Orange, float for aye!"

Come to the Convo

Three more Frosh convocations are on tap for tonight. Yet these three are many times more important than the title "convocation" can possibly convey.

Dean of Women Marorie Smith will speak to the freshmen coeds on college life in general, and campus participation in particular. top coed leaders on campus will be introduced.

In the next building, the males of 1957 will be hearing about student government and also meeting BMOC's.

The third convocation will be held in Chapel, one hour later. Here, the "Heart of the Campus" will be explained in terms of organization and procedure by means of skits and slides.

These three seemingly separate convos all stress the fact that a freshman need not be alone. There are many organizations on the Hill waiting with arms outstretched to welcome him or her into their fun and activity.

So frosh, why not take out a few minutes tonight to see what these groups can do for you. Who knows—you may go and stay all year.

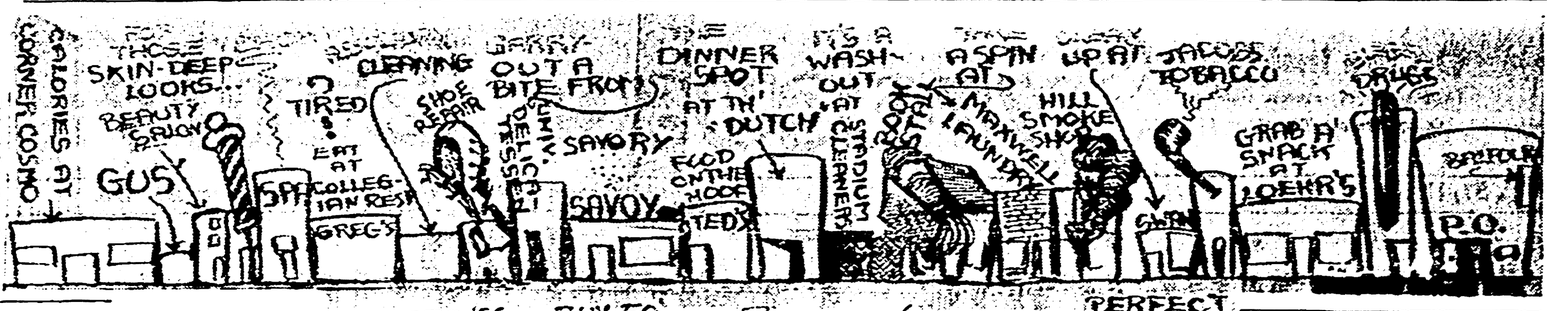
Letterary Comment

If you disagree with a word or two that slips into the Daily Orange, we beg and deplore you to drop us a condemning line or two. Intelligent or slightly idiotic comment is welcomed and as may as possible will be printed. Watch for your word of wisdom in the LETTERARY COMMENT column that creeps onto the page from time to time.



But the Orange Guide Didn't Tell Us This

It's not all in the "Orange Guide", the whole story about the University campus. You'll have to read in between the lines or, better yet, eavesdrop on upperclassmen's bull sessions, to find out about the little publicized but well-known aspects of the Syracuse scene.

Foremost among points of local interest is the old stone bench, located between the administration building and the Hall of Languages. Legend has it that any coed not kissed at least once while seated on the bench will remain an old maid. This probably accounts for the hordes of freshmen women who frequent the spot; they want to assure themselves early in their college career that spinsterhood will not be theirs!

A short hop, skip and dash from the bench is the Hill kaffeklatsch, better known as the Corner store. Returning alums find their initials carved in the back booths, where heavy-eyed students get that essential cup of coffee in the ten minutes between morning classes.

It's the "great, grey way," the block on Marshall st. where neon lights shriek and pinballs clink. The little man sells newspapers from his box in front of the Cosmo, coeds lug laundry bags down to the various cleaning establishments, and wealthier Syracusans lug money bags to the University branch of the Syracuse Trust.

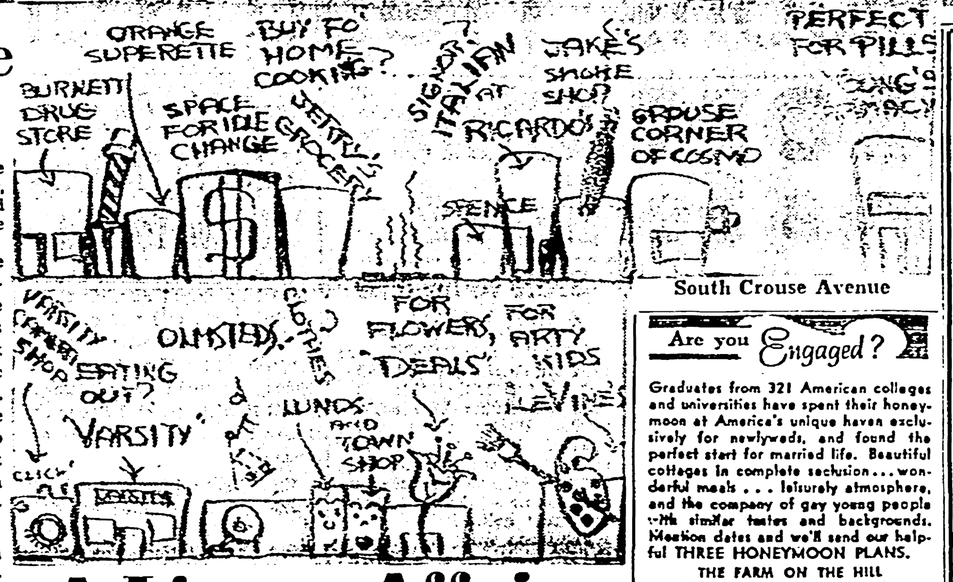
Wheels and people who want to be wheels indulge in extended lunch or coffee dates at the Dutch Haven, while pinball experts display thir prowess at Manny's and Jake's (hot pastrami sandwiches also on sale).

Athletes and their admirers occupy the booths in the Varsity, while pizza-lovers crowd into Ricardo's. Chefs with cooking facilities do their shopping at Jerry's, Ted's or the Superette, while those who want just a loaf of bread or a half-dozen apples stop in at the University delicatessen.

Unusual gifts, cuddly stuffed animals and greeting cards are available at the Hill Bookstall, usually occupied by several mature kittens, while pocketbooks (the mystery-Mickey Spillane type) comprise one of the ninety-odd departments in Manny's smoke shop.

The records that are heard above the myriad of Marshall st. noises comes from Olmsted's, where shelves are filled with everything from Mozart to mambo, and the floor is occupied by all varieties of radios, television sets and victrolas. Music-lovers spend hours in listening-booths there — and sometimes even buy albums!

But more glittering than any other sign in the little neon community is that above the Hill's lone bistro, the Orange. It was here before the University, and the rules still stand: stag men in the bar, couples in the rear "Orange Room." After a grid game, it's the place to celebrate or lament—no music except a jukebox, but all that crazy college atmosphere!



South Crouse Avenue

AT LARGE: UPTOWN—DOWNTOWN

Now that we have spent a few delightful days on the Hill acquainting ourselves with the surroundings, let's look up a few tips on downtown diversions during our academic tenure.

A Common Center or Walnut bus will take us downtown and the chief point of alightenment is S. Salina and Jefferson st. The flickers, (movies to you youngun's) are all on Salina with the exception of the Eckel which is slightly east on Fayette st. All the theaters are bunched around Jefferson except the Midtown which is a block north of Clinton Square on Salina and the Strand which is a block south of Jefferson on Salina.

Tops in general department stores are Deys and Edwards. Men's clothing in good style is found in Wells and Coverly, with a good twopants suit at Howard's. Girls with a weighty yen to open a charge account frequent Flah's and Addis. Clark's Music Store is the downtown point for Olmsted haunters. All are on Salina.

Books for literary followers abound in Economy Book store which is just off Salina on E. Washington. And jewelry stores for those with lighter minds and weightier pocket books include Rudolph's and Wilson's . . . they, too, are on the main drag.

If one is on the town for food we suggest the Brass Rail on Warren st. just off Jefferson or the Spa (tops for steak) on Clinton Square. You don't spend too much at Kupperman's on Warren, a block down from Jefferson and the Villa on Lodi st. is Pizza Supreme.

Deuce

(Attempting a new theory that at least two heads are funnier than one.)

"Tip that lid!"

A Linear Affair: Hurry Up & Wait

It was Grant who said "I will hold this line if it takes all winter" . . . and not that of the fellow ahead of you in the registration line.

Tomorrow we all renew our oaths to Syracuse signed on blank checks and the multiplicity of cards that are supplied upon requests. Although it may seem hard at first you will find with time that the process is fiendish. Certain suggestions are made to the young ones as follows:

Find your advisor. His name is in alphabetical order in the main library . . . but the important thing is to find the man himself.

Have a vague idea of what you want to take. Study the curriculum book and know where to find the courses you want . . . (or don't want, then eliminate.)

Get to the Men's gym early and tackle the shortest lines first. The courses are easy to find. DON'T LOSE THE CARDS GIVEN YOU.

Have your IBM cards filled out before you go. Once you have gotten your class assignment cards. COPY YOUR SCHEDULE ON THE BACK OF THE REQUIRED CARDS. (THERE ARE TWO OF THEM.)

If you find that the pay lines are jammed, go home. You can skip back early the next morning and slip right through.

And don't forget to register when you are scheduled to . . . no other time. If the schedule is adhered to, registration will not be the unhappy situation it usually is.

Good luck . . . and don't forget the Goon squad information booth and the main info counter in the center of the gym.

Start-of-the-Term Quiz

It will help you get better grades on your end-of-the-term quizzes

Sharpen your pencil and scratch your head for a few moments. This "quickie" quiz will save you a lot of head-scratching, hair-pulling and sleepless nights when those all-important finals come up at the end of the term.

	True	False
1. The New York Times brings you more news than any other newspaper.	☐	☐
2. The New York Times has the biggest staff of reporters and correspondents of any newspaper.	☐	☐
3. The New York Times has 100 correspondents overseas in all important world capitals.	☐	☐
4. The New York Times has the biggest Washington bureau of any newspaper.	☐	☐
5. The New York Times has the biggest staff of sports writers of any newspaper.	☐	☐
6. The New York Times prints more of the news you need to help you in your courses.	☐	☐
7. Faculty members in colleges all over the U. S. read The New York Times and recommend it to their students.	☐	☐
8. Reading The New York Times every day can help you get better grades, and keep you interestingly informed.	☐	☐

Answers: *If you answered "true" to all the questions, you get 100%. And you'll get a lot closer to 100% on the exams that really count, if you read The New York Times every day to keep up with the news that will help you in your class work. You'll enjoy reading The Times, too...its colorful sports pages, the movie, stage and book reviews, the food and fashion page, the daily crossword puzzle. SDS Cards on Sale During Registration

Student discount cards, enabling Syracuse students to receive 3 to 25 per cent discounts on purchases in neighboring stores, will be sold by men's and women's student government workers at registration booths.

The cards can be obtained for 25 cents and entitle the bearer to discounts on articles purchased in any store which is under the student discount contract. Thus far, service stations, flower shops, clothing stores, and a local cleaner have joined the program.

The SDS is part of a country-wide program sponsored by the National Students' association. Last semester, representatives from MSG and WSG contacted Genesee, Westcott and Marshall st. stores and enlisted their cooperation. A list of participating stores will appear in later editions of the Daily Orange.

The 25 cent fee will be split between the national and the campus organization to cover administrative handling as well as providing government with an independent source of income.

Ballet Will Open Music, Dance Series

The Slavenska-Franklin Ballet, to be presented here Oct. 28, will open a series of music and dance programs sponsored by the Civic Morning Musicals, inc.

Theft Discovered At Phi Tau House

A strong box containing $500 was taken from Phi Kappa Tau fraternity house according to Robert Derck, house manager and president. The theft was reported Monday, Sept. 21.

The contents included receipts from students who lived at the house during the summer months.

Derey said that he had left the strong box in an upstairs closet under a pile of clothes on Sept. 11. After a 10-day absence, he discovered the theft.

The box, weighing approximately 80 pounds and measuring 12 by 16 inches, had been padlocked. An investigation is being conducted.

LA College Sets Study Lectures

The Improvement of Learning program of the College of Liberal Arts will begin its annual series of "How to Study" lectures tomorrow and Friday afternoons in Hendricks chapel. The lecture, given by Dr. William D. Sheldon of the reading laboratory, is designed to help freshmen improve their reading rate and comprehension.

Dr. Sheldon will discuss the development of study skills, and will introduce the frosh to the Hill's improvement of learning program. The hour lecture will be given Thursday and again on Friday. Freshmen attendance at one of the lectures is required.

Freshman Baton Champ Gets Stadium Spotlight

STEPPING INTO the Archbold stadium spotlight Saturday night will be ALTA BURG, Liberal Arts freshman who holds the title of international baton-twirling champion. The 19-year-old has held the New York state and national twirling championships.

When the marching band takes to the field Saturday night at the Temple-Orange grid contest, a member of the class of 1957 will be in the Archbold spotlight.

Alta Burg, a liberal arts frosh from Red Lion, Pa., will be exhibiting the skills and tricks with the baton that made her an international champion.

Twirling since 1948, this 19-year-old miss, first started garnering state's honors in 1950 and won her first national contest in the national baton twirling majorette Queen of America contest one year later.

International recognition came her way at the official World's Baton Twirling Championship contest in Johnstown last year. Since that time Alta has appeared as guest twirler with numerous exhibition bands, guested on the "Band of America" television show and reigned as queen of an infantry division reunion. National conventions as well as other TV appearances have also kept Miss Burg on the active list.

Her latest public appearance was in Chicago when she performed at the August Chicagoland music festival at Soldier's Field and at the two pre-festival luncheons at the Palmer House and the Conrad Hilton hotel.

During the summer, the international champion entertained on the Dave Garraway TV show and also performed at the Philadelphia Inquirer music festival.

During her freshman year, the young brunette will live at Woodworth cottage. She is interested in sports and glee club work as well as twirling. Feature editor of her high school paper, Alta also participated in dramatic programs, and student government activities.

Tau Theta to Sell Hill Song Albums

Tau Theta Upsilon, senior men's honorary, is conducting sales of "Syracuse Sings" record albums from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. in front of Sims hall during Orientation week.

The records contain selections of University songs sung by campus groups including alumni glee club, men's glee club and the University chorus.

Tau Theta Upsilon sponsors many campus activities during the year. Among them are a co-sponsorship of Spring Weekend.

Miss Vaughn, Cole Will Appear Here

Nat "King" Cole, well-known recording artist, will appear with Sarah Vaughan, Ralph Marterie and his orchestra, and Illinois Jacquet and his orchestra in a musical show, "The Biggest Show of 1953," at 8:30 p. m., Friday, Sept. 25 at the War Memorial.

With a supporting company, these four acts are using Syracuse as the premiere city for a 40 stop international tour. Tickets are now on sale at the Syracuse Nationals ticket office in the State Tower building.

Stickers Verboten On Car Windshields

Better take those "Syracuse" stickers and Greek letters off the windshield of your car.

Meyer Prowda, director of the Bureau of Motor Vehicles in the county, warns drivers that any kind of sticker is not allowed on windshields, front or rear. The ban on them went into effect June 1 and violators are subject to arrest and a stiff fine.

The law, however, does not prohibit stickers on the side windows of vehicles where they do not interfere with vision.

Gridders Open Season Saturday Against Temple

Fleck, Stark Selected Saturday Captains

By JOEL FEIDELMAN and LEE KIKLIER
Daily Orange Junior Editors

Seniors Bob Fleck and Pat Stark have been elected co-captains of the Orange football team for the opening game against Temple on Saturday night in Archbold Stadium.

Fleck was an all-American tackle on the INS mythical team last year, along with being named on most all-Eastern teams. This year he has trimmed down to a mere 243 pounds and has been shifted to right guard where Coach Floyd (Ben) Schwartzwalter feels he can be better utilized.

STARK ALSO WAS an all-Eastern nominee last season at quarterback. The 170-pounder threw 11 touchdown passes in leading the Orange to a 7-2 record and is expected to spearhead the Syracuse offense again in the current campaign.

Fleck and Stark are among the 21 lettermen that Schwartzwalter will try to mold into a team comparable to last year's Eastern champions.

Late in the summer, Villanova, a 1952 Eastern grid power, was added to the schedule giving Syracuse a full nine-game card. This could be the crucial game in this year's scramble for the Lambert Trophy, symbol of Eastern grid supremacy.

All in all the past summer could not be considered a fruitful one for Coach Ben. Several personnel losses cut deep into his plans for the 1953 season. Avatus Stone, whom Schwartzwalder counted on in filling a crucial end position plus duties as safety man and punter, signed a professional football contract and is currently excelling in the Canadian Big Four.

TO MAKE MATTERS worse Ben lost Don Althouse, last year's punter, due to scholastic difficulties. Art Troilo, speedy right halfback, has been designated as the current punter. He will also fill the wingback spot vacated by the recently drafted Mark Hoffman. The loss of Hoffman was tragic considering he had only one semester left in the College of Engineering.

And yesterday it was learned that Vinne Vetgara, fullback transfer from West Point and one of three brothers on the Orange squad, had been injured in practice and will be lost for the opening game. It is hoped that the arm injury will be ready for the Boston university game next week.

All is not gloomy in the Orange camp, however. Lettermen will be starting in all positions except center, where Ted Kukowski, a tenacious transfer from Annapolis, will be holding forth.

Probable starting lineup for Syracuse will be: Herb Steigler and converted halfback Ray Perkins at ends, 222-pound Jim George and 225-pound Les McClelland at tackles, Fleck and Sam Johnson at guards, and Kukowski at center. Stark will lead the team from the quarterback slot, Troilo and Bob Leberman will hold down the halfback jobs, while Bill Wetzel, powerhouse of last year's team, rounds out the starting backfield.

EXPECTED TO SEE much action in this new era of one-platoon football are 210-pound tackle Paul Kernaklian, soph halfback Bill Micho and quarterback Bruce Yancey. Yancey, an All-American lacrosser, excelled in the defensive halfback spot last season.

The first three games against Temple, Boston university and Fordham will be played in Archbold stadium. Then the Orange takes to the road for consecutive visits to Penn State, Illinois, Holy Cross, and Cornell. They return home November 14 for the annual Colgate game and close the season the following week against Villanova in Philadelphia. This will mark the first gridiron meeting between the Wildcats and the Orange.

AVATUS STONE, whose sudden departure from the Syracuse university football team prompted a frantic search for a punting replacement. Stone signed a professional football contract during the summer and is now starring for Ottawa in the Canadian league.

Villanova Can Thank Brother for Filipski

Villanova can thank a letter from an ex-University of Tampa guard for bringing them their all-American halfback. When Gene Filipski was dismissed from West Point he was lost and confused. Then a former Tampa gridder wrote a letter to Villanova college from Washington D. C. explaining the situation. Villanova considered and said they would accept Filipski. They have never regretted it. The U of Tampa alumnus: Ben Filipski, Gene's brother

Owl Attack to Test Syracuse Defense

Ben Schwartzwalder's Orange football squad will have to be at its best defensively Saturday night if they expect to halt the Temple Owl's hard-charging backs. The Philadelphians gave their future opponents a beware signal Friday night when they easily trounced Albright, 34-0.

Junior left halfback Tex Robinson will again be around to give the Piety defense a stiff test. The swift back is being rated as one of the best in the East this year. His halfback partner will probably vary throughout the night with either Ken Stout, Jimmy Kapp or Bill Sheaffer capable of breaking away for a TD. Stout is first in line.

SOPHOMORE fullback John Hadley may turn into one of the darkhorse stars of the season after an outstanding performance in the opener with Albright.

Senior Carmen Piccone will probably fill the quarterback post again this year. A mediocre passer but a tricky field general, he has been battling with Gus Braccia for the job but is being given the edge on his added experience.

The entire starting backfield is composed of veterans who will be out to avenge last year's defeat at the hands of the Saltines. Only big backfield loss for the Owls was halfback Duke Wuzzardo.

Heaviest man is Piccone at 182-pounds, proof of the extreme speed of the attackers. Robinson and Hadley both tip the scales at 170-pounds.

IN ADDITION to the superabundance of talent in the backfield, the Owls have had quite a bit of success with various trick formations. They switch their attack frequently and provide a problem for defending crews. Saturday night, the Saltines should be well satisfied with their defensive prospects if they can quell the Owl speedsters.

Freshman Crew

Frosh coach Vic Michalson requests all candidates for the frosh crew to check at the crew information table in Archbold gym during registration. The table will be located in the Trophy room near the cashiers' booths.

SERIES EVEN

When the Temple Owls invade Archbold stadium Saturday night they will be seeking to clinch a victory in the rubber game of their ten-game series with Syracuse. Each school has won four contests with one game ending in a tie in the series which began in 1944.

Along the Sidelines

BY KEN LENT, DAILY ORANGE SPORTS EDITOR

The King is arriving Saturday night. Once again the annual Fall Madness takes the Syracuse campus in its grip. The frosh saw part of it at the Pep rally last night. It's been discussed over coffee at the Dutch Haven and beer at the Orange. Terms such as Coach "Schwartzwalder," "one-platoon," "school spirit" and "Orangemen" identify it as the chief topic of conversation on the Hill from now through November. King Football is here.

It has been interesting to note the various "experts'" predictions on Syracuse's '53 grid chances. They have ranged all the way from one forecaster who said the Orangemen would just barely win half of their games to others (definitely in the majority) who picks us among the top in the East.

Most of the crystal gazers have been concerned with the effect which the Orange Bowl disaster would have upon the morale of the team. Judging from all available reports, the morale has never been better.

It's a public secret that the Schwartzwaldermen did well in a scrimmage with Army two weeks ago. Both the line and backfield showed to advantage so that the entire coaching staff was pleased with the team's performance.

• • • • •

Ben Schwartzwalder

The official opening of the Central New York grid season was reserved for yesterday afternoon at the Scottish Rite luncheon in the Hotel Onondaga. Both Hal Lahar, Colgate's mentor and Syracuse's Ben Schwartzwalder conservatively outlined their chances for the year.

The Orange coach emphasized than an excellent first-team would take the field Saturday but Syracuse will have trouble if any of the first-string gets injured. Commenting upon the help that the new one-platoon system should give the Syracuse team, he joked, "If our squad keeps shrinking, we'll contemplate a further change to six-man football."

• • • • •

We were talking to Ted Dailey, Orange line coach, who scouted Temple in its 34-0 drubbing of Albright. Ted reports that the Owls are vastly improved over last year's team which held the Orange scoreless until the final three minutes of the first half.

He singled out Larry Cardonick, junior guard from Philadelphia, for special praise. It was Cardonick who last year almost single-handedly stopped the Orange offensive during the first 27 minutes. With the Philly bruiser playing both ways, the Owl offensive will be doubly dangerous.

The Temple backfield, according to Dailey, has speed, deception and maneuverability plus stamina. The latter quality was shown in the Albright clash as it wasn't until well into the third quarter that Temple coach, Al Kawal, made any substitutions. The Owls have been described as in mid-season form and a tough, hard-hitting club.

Most fans think that fall is not the time of year to start talking about such warm weather sports as crew. Coach Vic Michalson, however, rightly believes that it's the early crew coach who gets the athletes and so the freshman mentor has set the machinery in motion for a frosh crew information table at registration.

Last year, over 65 freshmen answered the call and the result was a better-than-average frosh crew. Vic told us that the practice sessions in the fall are limited to one-hour a day in late afternoon thus providing a pleasant break between classes and dinner.

Syracuse, with the advent of the Intercollegiate Regatta, might eventually become the rowing capital of the sports world. In crew, a freshman can find a sport that takes up little time, interferes little, if any, with classes and generates the biggest team spirit on the Hill. We suggest to any qualified freshman that he look into the opportunity via the crew information table at registration. It will be well worth his while.

QUOTABLE QUOTES: Ben Schwartzwalder, referring to the Orange Bowl game and the start of a new football season, "We've been in the frying pan. It will be nice to get into the fire again." Chancellor William P. Tolley, welcoming the guests to yesterday's lucheon, "I'd like to wish Cornell and Colgate all the luck in the world except on November 7 and 14."

THANK GOODNESS DEPT: The biggest upset last weekend, named by some as the greatest in the last quarter century, was little Mississippi Southern's 25-19 stunner over mighty Alabama. Chancellor Tolley reported yesterday that the Mississippi giant-killer tried desperately to get on last year's Orange schedule. 'Nuff sed.

BILL ORANGE SAYS: It'll be a high-scoring game in Archbold this Saturday . . . I wonder how come the draft board took Orange back Mark Hoffman who was an Engineer with only one semester until graduation. Evidently none of us can be sure we have a school deferment until we get the diploma in our hands.

Pro Grid League Starts Sunday

Professional football teams will present the only two-platoon ball in the country when they open their season this Sunday. Twelve teams in six cities throughout the nation see action.

General consensus has it that the top two teams in the Eastern division of the National Football League will be Cleveland's defending champion Browns and the Pittsburgh Steelers. The Western Division looms as an affair between world champion Detroit Lions and the much-stepped-on Green Bay Packers.

Strangely enough, opening day finds these four teams playing each other in inter-league play. The Browns play the Packers at Milwaukee while the Steelers are at Detroit.

Both the Steelers and the Packers are new to the position on top of the speculation lists. The Steelers have been slowly improving under Coach Joe Bach, and this is supposed to be the year.

The Packers who have taken many bumps in their time, are filling in the sore spots with the best 1-2 quarterback combination now operating in the league. Tobin Rote and Babe Parilli have now moved into the limelight formerly occupied by Bob Waterfield and Norm Van Brocklin of the Rams.

SYRACUSE STREAK

Syracuse will lay a nine-game Eastern college winning streak on the line when they meet Temple Saturday night. The Orange last lost to an Eastern college came late in 1951 at the hands of Penn State.

SOUTHERN SPLIT

The new division of the Southern conference into the Southern conference and Atlantic Coast conference is the second split in 20 years down south.

East Will Sport Many Grid Stars

Almost every team on the East coast swings into action this weekend. Just what does the East have to offer in the way of good two-way players? The first name that comes to mind is a familiar one: Steve (Ike) Eisenhauer, Navy's guard.

Ike played defensive guard last year, but now times have changed and he will back up the line and play offensive guard. Says Ike of one-platoon football: "Now I'll know whether I'm a defensive guard or a football player."

OUT PITTSBURG way they are all set as far as 60-minute linemen go with Eldred Kraemer, a 215-pound, 6 foot 3 inch tackle. He made Grantland Rice's all-American team last year.

Colgate had a great end in Gary Chandler but he has been switched to a backfield spot. When Syracusans mention Chandler's name, they speak softly for he almost ruined the Orange single-handedly last fall.

Much of Penn State's chances rest in the hands of big end Jesse Arnelle. Syracuse stopped Arnelle last year by stopping the source of the passes: Tony Rados. Arnelle should have another record-breaking year.

Of course Bob Fleck of Syracuse who made all-East last year is frequently mentioned. Backs are plentiful in the East, as anywhere else. Fred Attaya of Army, Homer Smith of Princeton, Ed Molloy of Yale, Villanova's Gene Filipski are the easiest choices to make for an all-East backfield.

Foreign Educators Begin Study Of American Institutions Here

Educators from countries in South America, Europe, Asia and Africa began an intensive 13-week study of American educational institutions here Monday under the joint direction of the School of Educational and the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs.

The group of 29 foreign teachers and administrators will attend seminnars on secondary education, visit school systems throughout the state and attend meetings of social and civic organizations in Syracuse.

Syracuse university is one of three universities in the United States selected to administer the foreign teacher educational program.

Students May Join Hill Organizations In Tuesday Sign-ups

All campus organizations are invited to participate in the activities sign-ups held from 1:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday in the women's building

Traditionally held for freshmen to sign-up for any activities in which they are interested, upperclassmen are also welcome to sign-up.

APPROXIMATELY 33 activities are planning to participate. Among those who already have signed up are women's student government, Syrcico, Syracusan, textbook lending library, dance class instructors, the Daily Orange, men's student government, Boar's Head, the book mart, Dilemma, Onondagan, and Students for Democratic Action.

The sign-ups are sponsored by Traditions commission and the Goon Squad. These activities wishing tables may reserve them by calling 76-5571, ext. 506.

The sign-ups are held to give students a chance to select activities, according to Jim Carr, chairman of the sign-ups. Those activities not registering members may have information booths to explain the structure of their organizations.

Unlike other years, the sign-ups will be held in the evening for those students unable to attend in the afternoon because of labs or work.

Hill's Traditional Old Oval Gives Way to New Quad On Mud-Covered Campus

By EILEEN CHAMBERLAIN
Daily Orange Junior Editor

When it rains in Syracuse, "mud" is the not-so-secret word on the University campus.

The reason? Workmen have torn out the sidewalks as the old oval becomes the new quadrangle in Syracuse university's program of expansion and building.

FRESHMEN ARRIVED Monday, raised their umbrellas and viewed a large space in front of Hendricks chapel decorated with a few parallel concrete walks and a lot of mud.

Released last spring was a master plan allotting $50,000 for grading, leveling and reseeding all over the campus. Before the semester ended, trees had been set in on the oval parallel to the Library and Hall of Languages.

During the summer former oval pavements disappeared and work was begun on a geometrical pattern of sidewalks. More parking space, marked in yellow, came into existence behind the administration building and curbing was added in front of the library and the men's gym.

A former driveway around and in front of the chapel is gone and a ditch has been dug extending from University pl. between Smith and Lyman beyond Machinery hall to accomodate large pipes for a new University heating system. Part of this was filled in yesterday as that work neared completion.

THE CERAMICS building was razed and ground was leveled in June in preparation for the new law building behind Crouse. This structure is the first in the development of a "social science quadrangle" in that area.

Between Crouse college and Archbold stadium, the law building will be 135 feet long and 63 feet wide. It will be four stories on the west side and three on the east and will house classrooms, faculty offices, administrative offices, seminar rooms, a practice courtroom, reading rooms, lounges and library.

Bids will be accepted in November for construction of two new engineering buildings, one south of L. C. Smith hall and the other behind Machinery hall. Completion date has been tentatively set for September, 1954.

It's all part of a 50-year plan announced by Chancellor William P. Tolley several years ago Completed buildings and plans for structures in the immediate future number ten.

ALREADY CONSTRUCTED and in use are Sims Dining hall, Archbold gymnasium, Joe and Emily Lowe Art center, Robert Shaw dormitory, special education building, steam station and women's building.

Marion hall will be erected directly behind Watson on the north side of Waverly ave. The building will probably house 665 students.

'57 Class Includes 91 Korean Veterans

As the Class of 1957 enters the Syracuse scene, 91 Korean veterans will comprise part of the large freshman group, according to Jack Buckle, Director of Men's Counseling and Housing.

This year, four of the Collendale prefabs will house this group of veterans. Buckle said yesterday that more buildings will be readied at Collendale if additional space is required.

In previous years, some veterans had been housed in dormitories on campus.

Buckle said this year's veteran group is slightly larger than last year, and mentioned the possibility that the number may be increased by registration.

The veterans' education will be financed at college according to Public Law 550 or, as usually known, the GI Bill of Rights.

The government provides a day and a half of free education for each day that a veteran has served in the armed forces. Thirty six months is the maximum amount allowed.

SENIOR EXEC COUNCIL

Applications are now being accepted for positions on the senior executive council. They may be submitted to John Beach, Phi Gamma Delta, or Barbara Suchy, Delta Gamma, by Saturday, Sept. 26.

Applications should include name, address, phone number and campus activities.

Fall Enrollment To Remain Same As Previous Year

By ED HARDY
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Enrollment at Syracuse university this fall will remain about the same as last year, with 8,100 students expected to register on campus starting today, according to Keith J. Kennedy, registrar.

Despite an increase in the admissions trend this year over 1952, a smaller senior class will counterbalance a gain in the freshman class, he said.

LAST YEAR'S campus enrollment figure was 8,181. The figure does not include the State university's colleges of Medicine and Forestry.

Officials at the College of Medicine said that total registration there would remain about the same as last year, while the College of Forestry expects a rise of about 20 students.

Total 1952 enrollment at all colleges of Syracuse university was 13,627, including 2,717 at University college and 1,803 at Utica college.

Estimates place the number of campus freshmen at 2,200, about 200 more than 1952. New figures released from John S. Hafer, dean of admissions, show that a total of 2,536 freshmen have been accepted. For the first time in several years there are more women than men in these numbers—1,322 females and 1,214 males.

"THE INCREASE in admissions here is in line with the U.S. Office of Education report on school enrollment for the fall," Dean Hafer said. "The report, issued last month, showed that college and university enrollment throughout the United States will total about 2.5 million, or 100,000 more than last year."

Registration gets underway at 8:30 today in Archbold gymnasium and continues through Saturday. The gymnasium will close at 5 p.m. daily, not at 1 p.m. as listed in the Calendar of Events in yesterday's issue of The Daily Orange.

Students must report to their advisors first and select their courses. After receiving a dean's office schedule card, students will face the semi-annual "rat race" in Archbold gymnasium, where actual registration will be completed.

Entrance to the gym will be through the east door only, the registrar emphasizes. Students should remember to bring master name and personnel cards with them, he said.

IN THE GYMNASIUM students will sign up for all classes and receive an IBM card for each course. Next stop will be the checkers' tables and then the tuition lines, usually the longest of any during registration.

Registration at a time other than that assigned, except by special permission, will subject a student to a late registration fee of $25, the registrar said.

Tuition in all colleges is now $350 per semester. Excess hours are $22 each, with nine hours or less $22 per credit hour.

A schedule of courses being offered for the first term is available at the Registrar's office in the Administration building.

'Hail to Thee, Cornell . . .' ???

Embarrassing moments department:

There were some red faces among the feminine campus leaders at the women's student government convocation in Hendricks chapel last night when a cheerleader--who shall remain nameless-- was called upon to lead the frosh women in the Syracuse Almer Mater.

With the entire assemblage, including the dean of women's staff, standing, the cheerleader momentarily forgot how the song started. A campus leader helped her out by singing the first word and the entire gathering on the stage broke out with:

City Women's Club To Hold Sign-ups

City Women's club will hold sign-ups in the Trophy room of the Men's gym on the days of registration. An additional booth will be set up Tuesday in the Women's building at the regular sign-ups.

Membership in City Women's club is open to all frosh and upperclass women city students.

LIMBERING UP THEIR lungs for Saturday's siege, Frosh preview what will happen in the Syracuse cheering sections when Temple comes to town. Preparing to root for a winning score over the Owls, they follow the cheerleaders in a new jazz version of "Sound Off." They're saving those '57 lids to wave in unison at Temple cheerers across the field. It's the spirit that counts; and the ethereal being pictured above will be on hand in the flesh come football evening. The screaming background was snapped at Tuesday night's inaugural pep rally.

Overflowing Crowd Attends Chapel Nite

Opening to an overflowing Chapel at 8:30 p.m. yesterday, the eighth annual Chapel night served as an introduction to the Class of '57 of "the heart of the Syracuse campus."

The frosh were welcomed by Patricia (Rusty) Roden and Deane Lavender, co-chairmen of Chapel board and were led in cheers by a delegation from the cheering squad.

The Hendricks Chapel program, covering all faiths and denominational groups and all-Chapel committees, was presented in audio-visual fashion through the use of slides and narration.

Dean of the Chapel Charles C. Noble next gave an introductory "pep talk" to explain the brotherhood program and how the Chapel activities are directed toward a deepening of individual faith.

The scene shifted to the Colonial room and Chapel lounge, where refreshments were served and entertainment presented. The Noble Dean led a songfest with music on the accordian.

Chapel leaders were present to greet the frosh and familiarize them with the year's plans. The evening's program was ended with square dancing under the Syracuse stars.

WAER Housed In New Facilities

WAER, the campus FM station, opened its fall broadcasting season Sunday, from improved facilities in the radio workshop, according to Gilbert Katz, promotion director.

Freshmen and transfer students are invited to visit the workshop, now housing five fully equipped studies and observe the staff's operations.

The workshop is located behind the Main library and is open every afternoon and evening.

Sophs May Apply For 'Hop' Positions

Applications for soph hop chairmanships are now being accepted, according to Margaret White, soph class president. The annual dance will be held Nov. 14 as part of the Colgate weekend festivities.

Applications should include applicant's name, address, phone numbers, previous experience in arranging such affairs, ideas for the hop and campus activities.

Sophs are requested to turn in applications to Harriet Ehrlich, Shaw hall.

Official Expects Unchanged Army, AFROTC Enrollment

By ROGER J. HERZ
Daily Orange Junior Editor

With army and air force ROTC expecting a large enrollment, this first day of registration is expected to answer a question hanging fire over the corps at Syracuse--whether enrollment in the programs will remain constant or drop sharply.

The truce in Korea has been given by many as a reason why registration may be lessened; others point out that war is still a reality; the hiatus being nothing more than a truce.

LT. COL. GEORGE R. Stevens III, head of the Syracuse army program, sees the picture for frosh enrolling in army ROTC relatively unchanged from previous years.

The Hill army ROTC professor told The Daily Orange yesterday that there are a limited number of places open in Military Science III for highly qualified former air force ROTC students who have ehibited "exceptional leadership" and who stand in the upper ten per cent of their class academically and militarily.

If such students can pass the army physical, he said, they will be accepted in the advanced program. Any student meeting these standards may register at the army ROTC booth in the gym.

Stevens said that all members of the Class of 1954 who successfully complete the course will receive their commissions. All members of the Class of 1953 who completed the course have been commissioned and are going on active duty.

COL. ROBERT P. Halloran, head of air force ROTC on the Hill, said he anticipates that more than 1,000 men will be in the AFROTC corps upon completion of registration. He stated that all seniors in AFROTC, whether or not they are in the flight program, will receive deferments and pay, and will eventually receive their commissions.

The AFROTC program has been revamped and will include the following fields of study:

Freshmen will study, after introductory classes, introduction to aviation, global geography, international tensions and security organizations and instruments of national military security.

The freshmen army curriculum covers organization of the army and ROTC, American military history, individual weapons and markmanship. Both groups have an average of one hour of drill per week.

HALLORAN NOTED that a majority of the junior advanced course AFROTC students have indicated a preference for flying after graduation. He said that future selection criteria for the advanced course will be determined by world conditions, department of defense budgetary limitations and manpower authorizations.

Ketcham Named New Cit Instructor

Ralph L. Ketcham has been appointed instructor in citizenship at Syracuse University. Dr. Stuart G. Brown, department chairman, announced the appointment yesterday.

He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, liberal arts honor society; Kappa Phi Kappa, professional education fraternity; and Delta Tau Delta, social fraternity.

Tests Scheduled For Deferments

Selective Service qualification exams will again be offered this year, according to Assistant Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford. The tests will be held Nov. 19, 1953 and April 22, 1954. Deadline for the fall test is Nov. 2.

Clifford said an announcement will be made concerning the date when applications will be available.

All male students are eligible to take the exam if they are regularly enrolled students and are applying for student deferments.

No student may take the new series of exams if he has already taken one of the tests.

Approved Housing A Must for Males

All males attending the University, who have not received degrees from Syracuse or other recognized colleges and universities must abide by housing regulations for undergraduates.

Jack C. Buckle, director of men's counseling and residences, said yesterday that students in the five-year programs must live in approved housing. Engineering, architectural, certain education and special students are included.

Those students who have valid reasons for living in housing other than that approved by the University, must submit petitions to the dean of men's office. If these petitions are disapproved, the students must move into approved housing.

No undergraduate student living in an approved private home or in a fraternity may change his residence during the fall semester, 1953-54, Buckle added, unless a written release signed by the householder or fraternity president is presented at the office of the dean of men for approval.

Students who move under any other conditions will be responsible to the householder of the home or fraternity president from which they move, for the entire semester's rent.

Miss Hazard Gets Jr. Officer Position

Mary Elizabeth Hazard, a junior in the College of Liberal Arts, has been appointed a women's student government junior officer.

A resident of Yonkers, N. Y., Miss Hazard will act as chairman of the WSG academics panel during the coming year. She was president of her dorm groups during her freshman and sophomore years.

Miss Hazard ran for secretary of house presidents assembly last year but declined candidacy when she was nominated to vie for one of six junior officer positions.

Senior Exec Council Applications Due

Applications are now being accepted for positions on the senior executive council. They may be handed in before Saturday, Sept. 26. to John Beach, Phi Gamma Delta, or Barbara Suchy, Delta Gamma.

Applicants should include name, phone number, address and campus activities.

Need Subscriptions To Insure 1954 Book

The 1953 Onondagan to arrive about Nov. 7 may be the final yearbook published on the Hill.

The present fate of the ON was revealcd yesterday when University Vice-president Frank Piskor stated that the University will not require seniors to purchase a 1954 edition. For the past four years seniors have been billed for their yearbook at the time of graduation.

BECAUSE THE STAFF has now no set income on which to depend, production plans cannot be laid.

To assist in solving the problem, Thomas Beckett, editor of the ON, will conduct a poll of seniors at registration. Each member of the class of '54 will be asked if Syracuse university should have a yearbook and if he will voluntarily support it.

In the past, approximately two-thirds of the ON's revenue was derived from subscription, three-quarters of which was paid by senior class members.

Unless almost all of the seniors vote in favor of voluntary subscriptions, the '54 ON may never be published, since the underclassmen, buying less than one-fourth of the books, could not make up the difference.

THE UNIVERSITY took this action because of the many student complaints last June when the seniors were billed at graduation. More than one hundred students chose to pass up their diplomas rather than pay the fee. Many students from the previous year also took this way to protest the billing.

The plan to bill seniors was originally adopted by the student body four years ago when the voluntary subscription arrangement did not prove adequate. No student poll has been taken since that time to see if student sentiment has remained the same.

If student support cannot be raised, the final decision as to publication rests with the recommendation of the publications board.

Hellbox Open For New Sign-ups

Freshmen who wish to join the editorial, advertising or sports staffs of the Daily Orange are urged to contact Janet Caro, executive editor, in the Hellbox behind Yates castle.

Persons with writing or business experience and those interested in photography or art work are needed.

Former staff members are asked to report to Arthur Siegel, managing editor, for assignments.

Book Mart to Open In Men's Gym

Re-selling to Begin Monday Morning

The student cooperative book mart will open at 9 a. m. today in the women's lounge of the men's gymnasium to accept in used textbooks for resale, according to Jean Spencer, book mart president.

The book mart will be open until Saturday afternoon to accept textbooks and will begin sales on Monday morning. The book mart's location has been moved to the men's gym to make it more convenient for students.

WORKERS ALSO are needed for the book mart. Those interested should contact Jean Spencer at Alpha Omicron Pi. Anyone may become an active member of the organization by putting in six hours during one semester.

Persons who have stubs from last year may bring them into the book mart on Friday, Oct. 2, or Sat., Oct. 3 only. Profits will be used in a scholarship fund.

Last spring the book mart broke its all-time record by taking in $4,866.32.

Each student selling a book sets his own price on it. No book is sold under or over the designated sum. Students may pick up their money or unsold texts at the end of the week.

A SERVICE fee of five cents is charged for books sold for under $1.50 and 10 cents for any books sold above that price. This fee is to cover the costs of the operation of the mart.

The book mart is jointly sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega, service fraternity, and the book mart organization. It was established 20 years ago to combat the high price of books.

Unclaimed textbooks will be donated to the textbook lending library. Students must call for books or money when requested.

University Target Of Mock A-Bomb

Syracuse University will be an atomic bomb tarket under plans for a night test exercise being drawn up by the New York State Civil Defense organization.

Slated for three days—Nov. 19-21—it will be the first night test to be held in the state.

Ground zero will be University pl. and College pl. at 4:15 a.m. It will be assumed that the atom bomb will explode on the ground, leaving a crater 100 feet deep and 1,000 feet across. Thus many University buildings, dormitories, fraternities and sororities will be completely "demolished."

A similar test exercise was conducted last November, but at that time ground zero was Clinton Square in downtown Syracuse. Archbold gymnasium was a test field hospital during the drill.

DISCOUNT CARDS

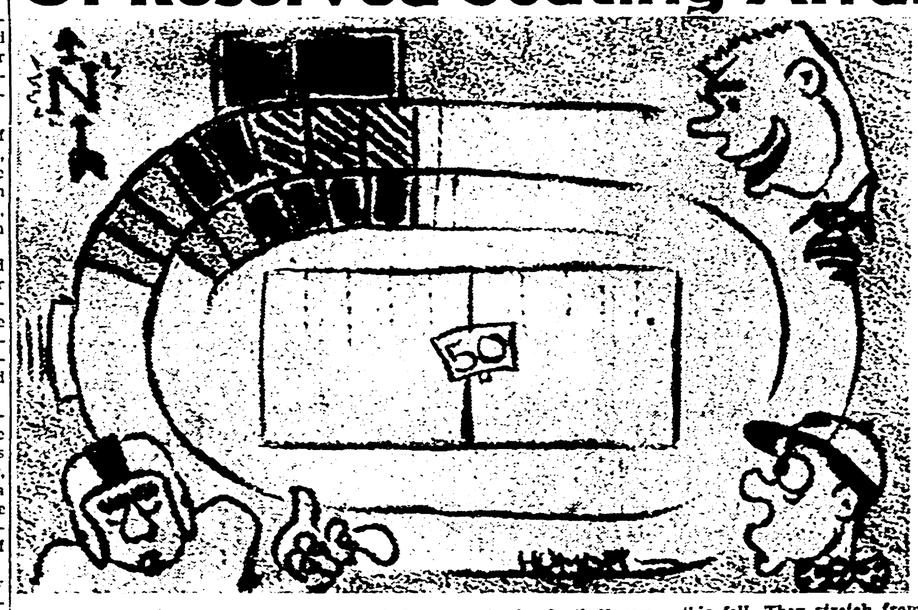
WAER to Air MSG Explanation Of Reserved Seating Arrangement



THE AREAS MARKED above are the student stands for football games this fall. They stretch from the end zone to the 45 yard line. The blacked and striped areas are reserved for this Saturday's game only on a seniority basis. The striped areas are reserved for those students wishing to participate in placard cheering. The gray areas will be unreserved. The student section seats nearly 6,900.

By EILEEN CHAMBERLAIN
Daily Orange Junior Editor

To avoid confusion over football reserved seating and to explain the system more fully, men's student government will present a program over WAER today at 8 p.m.

Members of MSG will explain how the newly initiated system works, with emphasis on the special seating arrangement for Saturday's Temple tilt.

NO SPECIAL section has been reserved for seniors. MSG officials stated Tuesday that seniors would sit together, but according to altered plans seniors will have the better seats, but not in a specially reserved section. After an estimate has been made of the number of seniors who will probably attend Saturday's game, seating authorities will assign places accordingly.

These sections will be reserved: Wooden bleachers in sections 108, 109, 110, 111 and one-half of 112; stone seats in sections 7, 8, 9, 10 and 11; metal bleachers in sections A and B. Sections 9, 10 and 11 of the stone seats are also reserved for placard cheering. Students who

Seniors at switch: ON or off

The 1954 "ON" may me "off" before it can be begun.

This distressing situation came to a head last June when more than one hundred members of the class of '53 relinquished their right to obtain diplomas. They refused to pay the eight dollar fee charged by the University to cover the cost of the yearbook. This also happened in 1952.

The University faced the fact that here was a public relations problem of the first magnitude. It had been four years since any student group voted on the issue of a compulsory fee. Some of last year's seniors, therefore felt that they should not be required to purchase the book.

Supported by the students' protests, the Administration decided to discontinue billing seniors. Onondagan editors were told that from then on the costs must be borne by subscriptions voluntarily paid.

This is reverting to the manner in which the post-war Onondagans were paid for, the fery method which was overthrown for the compulsory fee four years ago.

Seniors have always been the mainstay of the Onondagan. Underclassmen could not be counted on in the past to purchase more than one-fourth of the books published.

Therefore, it is up to the seniors to decide the fate of the ON. During registration, those seniors who wish pictures in the yearbook (providing one is published), will be asked to make appointments for them. At the same booth a questionnaire will be handed out to ask the seniors if they intend to subscribe to the annual.

If most of the seniors agree to purchase a book, the ON's future will be assured. Otherwise, underclassmen's subscriptions will probably not be enough to guarantee the necessary minimum number.

As one of the largest universities in the nation, Syracuse certainly has enough students, activities and sports to justify a yearbook.

The question remains: does the class of '54 have enough enthusiasm and interest in the book to justify its publication financially?

Seniors have until Saturday to give their answer.

Give a little, take a lot

How to save money in one easy step.

Just walk to the student government booth at registration and ask for a student discount service card. The ticket is twenty-five cents and may be purchased upon presentation of the student identification card.

How will your money be saved? The SDS card enables you to receive a cash discount of from three to twenty-five per cent on all purchases made in stores contracted under the plan.

Student government representatives worked for several years to procure this service for the student body. Downtown stores did not think that the plan would be financially beneficial so they refused to join.

After a survey of campus opinion had disclosed that students would be willing to trade in the Genesee-Westcott st. area, government workers began to canvas the neighborhood shops.

At last five stores agreed to the contract and the student discount service, after three years of planning, became a reality last spring. This fall two more stores were added, including a Marshall st. dry cleaning establishment. More stores and theaters may soon follow.

Even back in your home town the SDS card may be valuable, as the program is nation-wide in scope. A list of stores throughout the country that have enrolled in the plan can be obtained at the MSG office.

Money derived from sale of the tickets goes to advertising and administrative work with the remainder going to the treasury of the student governments. With this money the officers will further programs which aid the students.

You can't go wrong. Just one purchase at the enrolled flower shop, dress shop, men's wear shop, service station, supermarket or five and dime might well cover the cost of the ticket. And the money for the card benefits the students at large.

Give a little, take a lot.

A long line at the SDS ticket booth will prove that the students realize their student government has produced a valuable service.

Weather —Or Not

By HUGH O. MUIR
Editorial Director

If there is a line that is thinner than that between sanity and madness, it is that margin between summer and winter in Syracuse.

The shivering Frosh who has dredged his sweater from the bottom of his trunk earlier than he expected may be perplexed. His home in sunnier climes, that is 98 per cent of the rest of the United States, was still gripped in the sweat of summer when he left. But upon arrival, he felt the clammy hand of winter upon him.

To the average nine-month resident, local commuters excluded, Syracuse is a land of perpetual chill. A glim of light on swiftly fading foliage presents a slim hope of warmth. But the clouds make old Sol play shivery peek-a-boo and we slowly relapse to the recluse of heavier and heavier clothing.

Winter proper tosses cold ermine over the Hill by November after concentrated nights of frost. Once the snow has fallen it stays . . . except when needed. Far too many weekends which attempt to celebrate the cold presence have dropped in winter thaws. And it also gives claminess to the soul . . . and rubberless feet.

Days of frosty breath will march on through the months and many a spring formal requires bulky coats over the lady's lovely lace.

Meteorologists explain that Syracuse happens to lie in a low valley region funneling weather fronts off the cooler Great Lakes. The resulting trifle disturbance in nature drops deluges of rain upon our still thawing skulls. A scientific explanation never dried a sock.

At last, with May, comes the belated zephers that warm. One doffs ones heavy togs at last . . . only to pack them away and leave for a hot sticky home.

Life here may be earnest . . . but the weather is a sham . . . or do we mean shame.

Oval in a Square Quad

By JOHN JOHNSRUD

The old oval is having a $50,000 face-lifting operation in its transformation into the new East Quadrangle. The master plan for redevelopment calls for the creation of a narrower, tree-lined quadrangle which will provide more land for the construction of new buildings. An extension, the West Quadrangle, is envisioned for the other side of the chapel.

Begun with the planting of trees before the end of last semester, the work has proceeded steadily. Grading, leveling and reseeding of the oval, requiring the most time and effort, was followed by the construction of the crossroads which are still to be completed.

The new layout of the walks will afford easier and safer travel between buildings. The elimination of the road cutting across the oval in front of the chapel and eventually the one in front of the library should be a boon to the pedestrian students for it permits walking on the quad without the danger of being run over. With the road out the walks could be put down in a more efficient geometric pattern instead of the large criss-cross of paths. There will be no more worn strips of grass because the new walks cover all the main routes of travel across the oval.

The paths were designed not only for students but also for the use of trucks transporting supplies to the various buildings not on the main access road. Space created by the closing of the cross-oval road has been turned into a new parking area. Located between the chapel and the Administration building, this area has a capacity of about 40 cars.

TIME FOR A CHANGE? ALWAYS!

On the risk of sounding condescending, we'll point out at the beginning that we are old seniors. As the tide of education is about to founder us on the beach of life, we seek refuge in recollection.

Not only is this a changing university, it is a whimsically confusing one. Some three years before we got here the nursing school had a new building built down on Irving ave. There it stood in solid brick through our freshman year. But on returning as sophomores we found they were tearing it down again for the VA colossus.

When we were juniors a new concrete walk was laid between Chapel and the administration building. It was to enhance the old sundial which was placed in the center of the path. We strolled there many a time as third-year men. But when we hustled back this fall we were met with macadam parking, and our sundial was over under a tree, a well-shaded piece of stone.

This erratic move at crumbling things up caught our favor last spring, however, when the word was made law that Yates Castle was to come down. We had trudged its gloomy halls and were none too sad to anticipate this disappearance.

So after meditating in the shade with the sundial this fall we fled over the hill to Irving to survey the last remains . . . and that blasted building was still there.

It is getting so you can't trust anybody.

Changed Substitution Rule Could Prove Troublesome to Pietymen

On early reports Syracuse will be a two to three touchdown favorite over Temple in the opening Orange's grid game in Archbold on Saturday night at 8:15. But in this era of one platoon football it has been discovered that anything can happen.

Last weekend Alabama, who Grantland Rice picked as the best collegiate eleven in the nation, was a 25 point favorite over Mississippi Southern, yet was beaten by the unknown Southern school.

CALIFORNIA, TEXAS and Washington were also top heavy favorites last weekend but lost to underrated teams. Alabama and Texas were winning going into the final minutes of play only to tire and drop the contests. Villanova jumped off to a gigantic lead aganist Georgia only to tire as early as the second quarter and lose by an impressive score to the Bulldogs.

This all goes to prove that 1) offense is being stressed in the one platoon system; 2) all teams are somewhat equal since specialty subs can't be thrown into the game at the coach's leisure; and 3) conditions will be a telling factor, if not the most important, on differentiating between a powerhouse and an average team.

This year coaches have to teach last year's specialists and one-way boys how to play the good old fashion game of football. No member of the current Orange eleven played over a total of 60 minutes of two-way ball in last year's 10 games. This is Coach Ben Schwartzwalder's biggest job now to bridge the gap between offense and defense.

Athletic Squads Seek Freshmen

Orange coaches have issued calls for freshmen candidates in three fall sports. Yearling cross-country men should see Coach Bob Grieve in his second floor office in Archbold gym between 9-12 today or tomorrow. Opening practice is Monday afternoon.

Freshmen soccer candidates should report to Coach Andy Coccari in the locker room of Archbold stadium at 1 p. m. today or tomorrow.

AN ORANGE FIRST

The meeting between Syracuse and Villanova in Philadelphia on November 21 will be the first time these perennially Eastern powerhouses have ever met on the gridiron.

Thru the Muck

By ED MEYER

Associate Sports Editor

Introducing our old friend, Pete the Prophet. Yeah, you remember the same guy who used to do the football predicting last year. But this time Pete is here just in a visiting capacity and the subject isn't football. It's a spiel about two champions who Pete and his prophet making organization were hired by to see if they could come up with the answers to each one's respective problems.

Problem number one was recently filed by one, Rocky Marciano of Brockton, Mass. Mr. Marciano is confronted by a situation which a Mr. Joe Louis, a recent member of the fistic fraternity, also had. That is trying to crush the enemy with artillery instead of less maneuverable weapons. In other words the world's leading (toughest at least) prize fighter is facing a boxer in the true sense of the word.

When Marciano steps into the ring at the Polo Grounds this evening he'll have to match jabs and hooks with an opponent who is known for his speed and accuracy. A guy who can hit fairly hard and then work his way (he hopes) out of his opponent's mighty swings. That is Mr. Roland La-Starza to a tee.

La Starza, the "fancy Dan", feels he can beat the champ by going fifteen rounds. In fact, everyone feels the same way except Rocky who plans to end it all before the later rounds. But if Rollie's hit and run tactics are as effective as the last champ's (Jersey Joe Walcott) he might be going home tonight with a newly decorated belt and the world's heavyweight title.

Our second enevelope has the name Casey Stengel written at its bottom. And since Ole' Case is another Bronxite (at least for part of the year) we have decided to try and solve his troubles also. As most sports followers know next Wednesday Casey, the boxer, will tee off against Charley (Dressen) the artillery man for another world's championship.

Stengel is a four time winner and Dressen a one time loser. But this year the situation may be just a little different. The Brooklyn followers in our organization feel that they finally can do the impossible. Once more they reiterate that the Brooks have the greatest "this" and the finest "that". This has been going on since Brooklyn got a baseball team. Only this year they have finally "hit the nail on the head" because they are correct.

Dressen has about five Marciano's on his team who can belt the ball farther than Rocky hopes to hit Roland. When you face guys like Snider, Campanella, Hodges and Robinson you just have to keep your guard up otherwise you're finished. But on the other hand Stengel really shouldn't moan. Because this year he is the sly puncher; the guy with the tricks up his sleeve; the fellow with the crafty pitching staff and the man with the finest clutch players in baseball in back of him.

Pete feels that you can't go against the champions. That bat of John Mize's, the clutch trio of Raschi, Lopat and Reynolds; the unbelieveable skill (or is it luck as they say in Dodgerland) of the team as a whole are all just a few of the ingredients that Stengel will have on his side. As for Rocky; well he should win, but look what happened to Carmen Basilio last week.

The only fear that Pete has is that Brooklyn may explode at the Stadium and shock the Yanks to shambles in four straight. But things like that only happen in Brooklyn according to Red Barber. So its Marciano and the Yanks to cop the big ones over the next week. But say, didn't Pete pick the Orange over 'Bama?

accept these places are expected to cheer.

Students may pick up game reservations at the men's gym after registering. A booth will be open during all three days.

Each student is entitled to a maximum number of four reserved seats upon presentation of the corresponding number of identification cards and game tickets at the booth. If one person wishes to pick up reservations for one, two or three friends, he must have their tickets and ID cards.

FOR THE Temple game only, reserved seats will be assigned on a basis of first-come first-served. For the other three home games of the season, reserved seating preference will be in order of classes, from senior to freshman. Block seating receives last preference.

Unreserved student sections will be located in stone sections 4, 5 and 6 and in wooden sections 106 and 107. If there is a large demand for reserved seats one or more of these sections may be converted to a reserved seat block.

Syracuse Meets Temple in Night Opener Tomorrow

Got Those Registration Blues

COMES REGISTRATION afternoon, eager frosh become tired, their eyes fatigued by small holes in strange places on multicolored cards. Grand Central station reopened for the semi-annual run yesterday and the long lines began. An ideal place for a snake dance or a conga line, the kids picked their courses and the profs obliged. And we think we've got it rough these days. Just think of those tired IBM machines.

2,301 Syracusans Register By Close of Initial Day

By EILEEN CHAMBERLAIN
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Freshmen topped all other classes in yesterday's first registration period at the men's gym.

Of 2,301 students who scheduled courses and presented cashier's cards to be stamped, 599 were members of the frosh class.

REGISTRAR Keith J. Kennedy, who released first day figures last night, announced that registering seniors gave the frosh a close run. The fourth-year people were out in a force of 571 at the gym.

Graduate students who turned in IBM cards yesterday numbered 386; there were 381 junior and 327 sophomore registrants. Also registering were 37 special students.

In general yesterday's registration went along smoothly as Syracusans filed through checking lines, scholarship lines and payment lines. Speed in picking up scholarship slips was greatly facilitated by a formation of three lines instead of the previous single line.

Scholarship officials asked upperclass men, upperclass women and freshmen to form separate lines while waiting to reach the desk.

HOWEVER, A time-consuming stalemate arose in preparing identification cards.

One student was photographed three times before his identification picture was developed satisfactorily.

In yesterday's registration 881 Liberal Artists topped all other schools and colleges. Public health nurses, with 10 registrants, and journalism students, with 20, showed at the foot of the list.

More than 200 students were signed up for work in the College of Fine Arts, Business Administration and the School of Education. The graduate school had 311 students as of yesterday.

Totals for the School of Nursing and the School of Speech were the same. Each school registered 81 students.

About 8,100 people are expected to register during the three-day period and officials anticipate heavy lines today and tomorrow.

Frosh Registration In ROTC Courses Shows Decrease

Col. Halloran, Stevens Await Final Results For Decisive Trend

By ROGER J. HERZ
Daily Orange Junior Editor

The following joint statement was given to the Daily Orange last night by Col. Robert P. Halloran, head of the Syracuse air force ROTC detachment, and Lt. Col. George R. Stevens, head of the army ROTC group:

"Freshmen registration for army and air force ROTC has shown some decrease over last year's registration figures for the first day. No definite trend can be established at this time due to the fact that two days of registration remain, and freshman male enrollment figures are not available."

ON SEVERAL occasions yesterday lines at the physical education booth in the gym were considerably longer than last year, while ROTC lines appeared shorter.

A sampling of opinion gathered yesterday from freshmen in Archbold gym resulted in the following thoughts concerning enrollment in ROTC:

Students not enrolling in ROTC talked of the truce in Korea, an expectation of lessened draft quotas and some talked of joining the reserves. Several students felt confident that they would earn high averages and be allowed to finish college.

Freshmen signing up for ROTC mentioned as major reasons the advantage of "spending two years with the privileges of an officer, not as an enlisted man," and that of "doing what I want to do (choice of field) in the service." Some AFROTC mentioned an interest in flying.

REGISTRATION IN sophomore, junior and senior ROTC classes was normal. Over 50 per cent of air force seniors have already registered.

All freshmen with questions about the ROTC program, whether or not they have already registered, were urged by both corps heads to contact any officer in the gym or in Machinery hall.

Col. Halloran has stated that all seniors in AFROTC, whether or not they are in the flight program, will receive deferments and pay and will eventually be commissioned.

BOB FLECK, who will co-captain the Orange in tomorrow night's football opener against Temple in Archbold stadium. The 243-pound senior has been switched to guard after receiving all-American honors last year at tackle.

Orange Launch Defense of East Championship

By LEE KIKLIER
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Temple university and one-platoon football make their Syracuse debut tomorrow night in Archbold stadium. The 8:15 kick-off opens Syracuse's 1953 grid season and their defense of the Lambert trophy. Syracuse, returning 20 lettermen, has been made a 15 point favorite over Temple, which already beat Albright 34-0. However, the exception sems to be the rule in this renaissance of football.

Quarterback Pat Stark and guard Bob Fleck will co-captain the Orange onto the field in this first game. One of the questions people will be asking is whether or not Fleck can last. The Monster—6 foot 2 inches, 243 pounds, an INS all-American last year, has been shifted from tackle to guard which requires more pulling out of the line. He is deceptively fast and reported in good shape this year.

STARK, AN ALL-EAST selection last year will direct Uncle Ben's unbalanced winged-T formation. This formation runs from an unbalanced line, two tackles on the right side of the center, and gives the right halfback an optional position when they line-up.

Coach Ben Schwartzwalter will start his fifth season as a Syracuse coach, Temple will be playing Syracuse for the tenth time—each have four wins and a tie, and Archbold stadium, the first bowl stadium in the East, will bear the weight of its 46th season.

The new one-platoon system follows under the limited substitution rule. The game is divided into six unequal periods. Both the first and third quarters are periods unto themselves. The second and fourth quarters are divided into two periods; the first eleven minutes and the last four minutes. Under the new rules no player may leave and re-enter the game in the same period. He will be forced to re-enter at the beginning of the following period.

Uncle Ben has always been in favor of the limited substitution system though he used two-platoons last year in self-defense. He feels that once the team learns to play both ways, the range will be much the better for it.

NATURALLY THE converting of last year's specialists into this year's 60-minute-men is Schwartzwalder's biggest problem, but several other problems presented themselves.

He had to rebuild the spirit and morale to offset last year's

DO Staff to Meet In Castle Tuesday

The staff of The Daily Orange will meet at 4 p. m. Tuesday, Sept. 29, in 105 Castle, Arlene Lambert, editor-in-chief, has announced.

Beat assignments, policy announcements and plans for the years are on the agenda for the meeting.

Turn Back Time Sunday Morning

"Turn back the hands of time" will be the song sung around Syracuse at 2 a. m. Sunday as the nation returns to standard time.

The switch from daylight saving doesn't have to be made in the wee hours of the morn though. Clocks should be turned back before you hit the sack or you may find yourself an hour ahead of everyone else Sunday.

Hill Prof Presides At Chem Session

Dr. Henry Linschitz, associate chemistry professor here attended a symposium on solar energy at the University of Wisconsin last summer.

The symposium was sponsored jointly by the National Service Foundation and the University of Wisconsin to review and explore the non-agricultural utilization of solar energy.

Sluggish Demand For Reserve Seats

Calls for student reserved seats were reported slow yesterday as registration swung into its first day at the men's gym.

Although long lines continued from morning to closing time for identification cards, not many students were requesting reserved seats at the men's student government booth.

Marvin Wallen of MSG said reserved seating officials expect a rush Saturday for Temple game seats. By that time students will have made definite plans for the game and will have definite dates.

THE SYSTEM has run smoothly so far, according to representatives at the booth.

For the Temple game only, seniors are receiving preference for seats, although there is no special section reserved for them. Freshmen and upperclassmen can obtain seats without specification as to class. Those who request reserve tickets early will receive the better positions.

Student seating occupies approximately one-fourth of Archbold stadium and one-half of the space allotted for Syracuse rooters. The reserved sections include A and B of the metal bleachers, 4 through 11 and half of 12 in the concrete section, and 104 through 111 in the wooden bleachers on the field.

Students only are allowed to sit in the student section. James H. Decker of the athletic office said yesterday that students who wish to bring friends to a game must buy tickets for the friends and for themseleves in other sections if they wish to sit together. Gate officials refuse to admit anyone to student sections without an ID cards.

MARRIED STUDENTS whose wives or husbands do not attend Syracuse university have been provided two concrete sections for game attendance. Decker stated that this arrangement has been in effect since married students invaded the campus shortly after World War II.

A student husband or wife may surrender his ticket to the athletic office in exchange for a seat in section 18 or 19 of the stadium. When he receives this seat reservation he may purchase a ticket which will entitle him and his wife to sit together during the game.

This means that the married student is obliged to buy only one ticket for each game he wishes to attend. However, if he and his wife plan to attend the Colgate game, two tickets must be purchased at the athletic office in the Trophy room of the men's gym.

GORDON TO PRESIDE

Dr. Louis Gordon, Syracuse university chemistry professor, will preside at the session on analytical chemistry of the fall meeting of the American Chemical Society to be held in Chicago this week. More than 8,000 member chemists will attend meetings at the Conrad Hilton hotel.

Syracuse-Illinois Clash Rates TV

The gridiron clash between Syracuse University and the University of Illinois Saturday, Oct. 24, will be televised from Champaign, Ill.

The game will be one of four in a panoramic coverage of college football around the country that day by the National Broadcasting company. The National Collegiate Athletic Association has set up an 11-week video schedule for collegiate football, with no team being telecast more than once during the season.

Services Will End Orientation Days

By ED HARDY
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Religion will be in the spotlight Sunday as Orientation week comes to a close and freshmen begin thinking about their first college classes.

Dean Charles C. Noble will preach on "What's Going to Happen to You Here" in the first Chapel service of the year at 10:50 a. m.

Nearly all the chaplains on the Hendricks chapel staff will participate. The Rev. Wesley Conrad, new Episcopal chaplain, will direct the first part of the service. Rabbi Irwin Hyman, rabbi protem for Jewish students, will read the scriptures with the Rev. Arnold Nakajima, Presbyterian chaplain. The Rev. Arthur Hopkinson, Jr., Methodist chaplain, will offer the benediction.

ROMAN CATHOLIC masses will be celebrated by the Rev. Gannon F. Ryan, Roman Catholic chaplain, at 9:30 and 11 a. m. in Crouse College auditorium.

Jewish students will attend a Sabbath Eve service at 7:15 p. m. today. Dr. Fred Krinsky, Jewish counselor, will conduct the service which will be followed by an Oneg Shabbat.

Protestant and Jewish fellowship groups will meet at 5:30 p. m. Sunday for a convocation. This will be followed by meetings of individual religious groups.

Roman Catholic students are invited to an open house and reception from 6 to 8 p. m. in St. Thomas More chapel, 112 Walnut pl. Father Ryan and members of the executive council will be on hand to greet newcomers.

AS IN past years, the Newcomer's Mixer party, last night in the Women's building proved to be one of the most popular events on the Orientation week program. Traditions commission reported many upperclassmen who tried to storm the dance were turned away.

Another dance is slated at 9:45 p. m. today in the Women's building.

Also on today's schedule are Greek convocations to introduce frosh to rushing. Panhellenic association meets Class of 1957 women at 8:30 p. m. in Crouse college auditorium. At the same time the Interfraternity convocation will be held in Hendricks chapel.

Only special event tomorrow is a tour of the city, leaving campus at 1:30 p. m. Frosh will see the Eastern champion Syracuse gridders in action under the lights at the Stadium tomorrow night.

Faculty members will visit frosh living centers Sunday afternoon. The annual Big Chum-Little Chum party will be held at 8 p. m. Sunday for women while men are attending the sports convocation in Archbold gymnasium.

Women's Building Set for Vic Dance

The first open social function in the Women's Building will take place tonight when students will attend a Vic dance from 9 p.m. to 12 in the Dance Studio.

Stag or drag the dance is open to frosh and upperclassmen. It will be sponsored by Traditions Commission and the Goon Squad with Sandy Eakin and Stuart Parker as co-chairmen.

ADMISSION IS FREE. Upperclassmen must have last year's ID card or present a new card. Frosh should wear their lids for admittance.

The dance is under the direction of Miss Margaret Parker, University social director. Miss Parker has held the position since mid-summer when she succeeded Mrs. Alexander Dunbar, the former Miss Elizabeth Broad, who resigned last spring.

The studio in which the dance will be held has been planned for dance classes, women's physical education classes and social functions. It is also equipped with a stage for movies and large meetings. It is on the second floor of the new building.

Siegfried Lectures Industrial Editors

Prof. Lawrence B. Siegfried, chairman of the graphic arts department of the School of Journalism, addressed the Upstate Council of Industrial Editors last night.

He returned Wednesday from Oklahoma City, where he addressed the annual convention of the American Chamber of Commerce Executives. The address, concerned largely with the results of a nappraisal of Chamber of Commerce publications, was presented before an audience of approximately 500 persons.

Burning draft cards

Those freshmen who think they can tear up their classification cards because the hostilities have ceased had better take another look.

Americans are continually plagued by a desire to talk themselves into a Shangri-la, when the actual Shangri-la is in their own minds only.

Many Syracusans—and collegians throughout the nation's campuses—are willing to let themselves believe that this dizzy planet has again settled down—to an eternity of peace.

If it were only true.

Actually, the present period is one of flux and uncertainty. We are faced not only with the problem of obtaining toleration—and later cooperation—among nations, but also with the possibility that efforts at peace will fail and that defenses must again be raised.

If peoples had the alertness to remain prepared for unfortunate events and at the same time work for a workable peace, the nation's youth would not be caught in the turmoil and uncertainty in which it today finds itself.

The United States has drastically lowered its minimum defense requirements; but it seems likely that Congress will backtrack at the next sesion and reinstitute adequate defense measures.

This uncertain period certainly suggests—if not demands—that the Selective Service System continue its operations.

Educators have suggested that the college man plan his life in terms of the world situation—not necessarily in terms of what it is on Sept. 25, but on terms of what it might be in years hence.

What the individual student does is something that can be decided only by himself. Whether he joins the reserve, takes ROTC or just waits for the draft, it is foolhardy to consider that come the bright spring days of next year, Gen. Hershey will light a mass bonfire of induction orders on the Capitol lawn.

In a consideration of ROTC, the freshman would do well to study both its advantages and disadvantages. ROTC's primary recommendation, however, is that it prepares the student to be placed, during his service, in the most profitable position for himself—and for the nation.

Civilized peoples are notorious for disbanding their defenses when the guns are put down and then uniting solidly when the weapons are again raised in aim. It's better to work for the best, but always—even when the bullets stop—to keep the crisis in mind.

Put the draft cards back in your wallets, men.

Managing Editor

Long lines in vain?

For those of you who waited more than two hours in line yesterday morning to receive your identification cards com[illegible] promise from the Registrar: "Never again."

Yes, never again, according to Keith J. Kennedy, will the early birds who were through the cashiers' lines by 9 a.m. have to wait until 11 a.m. before their pictures are snapped. Never again will those same lines extend downstairs into the trophy room past the cashiers.

In the past fifteen years (ever since pictures were affixed to cards and passbooks) the lines were rarely as long as those yesterday. Everything that could possibly go wrong, did just that.

The chairs were not removed from the gym as early as they might have been, the carpenters were late in starting, the electrician was delayed, printing difficulties arose, fuses were blown and one man from the personnel connected with picture supervision was not on hand this year.

The result of this snow-balling tardiness was dismaying to freshmen and intolerable to seniors. The less patient (or perhaps the brighter) students left the line to return and complete the process today.

The Registrar, seeing the consternation, delay and confusion promised that the hold-up would never be repeated. Conferences with the workers and employees concerned is on his agenda. The lines of communication between registration workers and his office concerning the progress of booths, electrical wiring and carpentry are expected to be strengthened.

When January registration and particularly September '54 registration rolls around we hope that the lessons learned yesterday will not be forgotten,—that the problem of taking ID pictures will be solved forever—and that these lines shall not have been in vain.

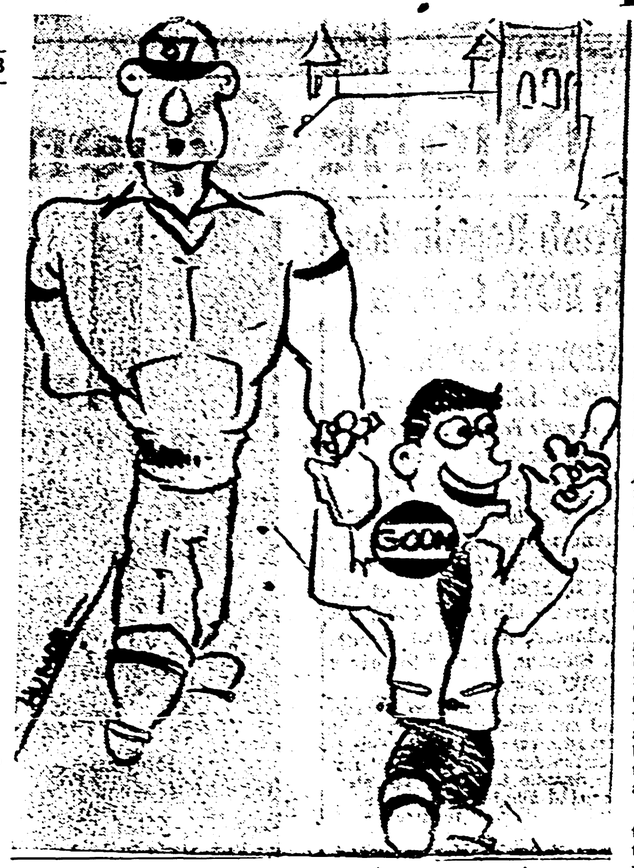
'I Was a Goon Squader'



By JACK REILLY

The life of a Goon Squader is far from easy.

To the inexperienced eyes of the incoming frosh and to the more experienced, but not-so-observant eyes of many of the upper-classmen, this preceding statement might be disregarded as so-much publicity.

Yet—let it be known—no such assumption could be further from the truth.

We arrived Sunday, the day before the frosh, for the first meeting. From thence to eternity; no doubt, not a free moment has appeared nor will appear.

We received instructions, scurried to sundry and varied meetings (all held at the same time), and prepared for the invasion of the freshman group.

The big day arrived. We all got up bright and early to welcome the new additions to the University. Some of us dashed down to the railroad station, to greet them, and to carry their bags; others of us rushed to the respective dorms around the campus (and Skytop!) to show the neophytes to their rooms and to continue carrying their bags; still others of us spent our time leading the lost frosh around.

We found ourselves carrying trunks that weighed at least a ton for some hulking football players who could have easily carried two trunks alone and have thought nothing of it; we found ourselves leading the new students to the wrong rooms, only to have to pick up the trunks and carry them out again; we found ourselves reliving our own first few days haze, that occurred only a short year ago.

We discovered we were to act as ushers. The Chancellor's Address was our first opportunity to display our ability.

The picnic and the pep rally were Tuesday's big events. We waited on the Library steps in the cold, cold Syracuse weather while the busses attempted to transport us all to the Ski Lodge before frost-bite set in.

After an enjoyable sojourn out there, we returned to the campus to instill in the freshman the much-needed spirit for our football team and to revive our own "esprit de corps" between the spectators and the football squad.

Wednesday we spent all our time working on posters for the Frosh mixer and showing the frosh the campus on the perennial campus tours. Many of us arrived home that night with aching feet from the tours and dusty shoes from the construction.

Thursday still kept up the busy pace. All day long most of us worked on one of the big events of orientation—the Newcomer's Mixer Party.

Now, with the success of the Mixer, we can rest on our laurels.

But wait! There are still numerous convos, the Vic Dance, and the Big Chum-Little Chum Party among others to be held.

Notes on Frosh Mixer

By HOMER

(An elusive member of the staff dropped the following notes on the desk late last night. Our reticent reporter had gained admittance to the season's opening social event, the Frosh Mixer.)

Slipped past three armed guards and machine gun tower near women's gym. Tried back door, swimming pool entrance . . . . locked. Jimmied window . . . found it entered women's locker room, too shy to try it. After fruitless attempt to scale wall, tried front entrance. Walked right in. Was apprehended by Goon Squader, strangled the fool. Once on the gym floor found walls jammed . . . . plenty of space in center of floor. Music playing . . . little dancing. Found small knots of freshmen being harangued by Goons . . . blank expressions. Nervous thoughts about opposite sex apparent. Wandered over to the men's side. Found no men . . . lots of boys examining walls for place to hide . . . Goon hauling two Frosh toward floor center bodily . . . they strangled the fool. Music suddenly blared and in panic boys and girls met . . . furtive glances for safety followed by mumbling submission. Only means of communication was "Where do you live? . . . "really?" and "What are you studying here?" Answers usually in low tone intended for a point three inches to the right of the listener's head. Noticed Traditions member found Goon dancing with particularly luscious doll . . . strangled the fool. Upperclassmen with notebook making the rounds . . . tidy looking ex-brunette abandons Frosh partner to observe him at closer range. Her number is 4-9869. Traditions member is now dancing with particularly luscious doll. Some Goon started a conga line, place starting to get crowded . . . grabbed the ex-brunette and ducked out. Wooden Leg for 'Safe-Keeping'

Have you heard about Mrs. Jennings' wooden leg?

Probably not, because it's fifteen feet long, and pretty well hidden down in the machine shop in Steele Hall.

Mrs. Jennings is the secretary of the physics department, and to look at her sitting behind her desk, you'd never dream she needs a wooden leg fifteen feet long.

It all began a few years ago when a new safe was put into the physics office. The floor began to give, and it was propped up with a beam in the machine shop, directly underneath.

Naturally, being so close to her desk, it was promptly christened Mrs. Jennings' wooden leg, and has remained so ever since.

Each physicist, the day he passes his orals for a PhD in experimental physics, is solemnly handed a small bronze placque with his name and year of degree on it, made by the machinists, and he nails it to the beam. Since they started at the bottom, some years ago, this June's crop had to shinny almost to the top to hammer the record into Mrs. Jennings' leg . . . the wooden one, we mean.

WHICH WAY WILL TEMPUS FUGIT?

Come Sunday a.m., one and all are theoretically supposed, cordially invited and morally obligated to turn the clock back to one o'clock or ahead to two. We never can recall which.

Daylight savings bows out for the year at that time. The system is a scheme to let students enjoy sunlight in the evening, by which time they've awakened, whereas the early morning hours go past unnoticed in any event.

Some individuals are going to have trouble. Guys and dolls with automatic watches who like to claim that their timepieces are untouched by human hands. People with 400 day clocks. Cowards who won't set their alarm for the middle of the morn to make a correction.

Because most everyone has trouble recalling just which way to turn the clock and when, the editorial staff of The Daily Orange offers the following suggestion:

See the sundial.

(Ed. Note: Personally, we're turning ours back an hour. How about you?)

DIG IT, MAN

We overheard this one at Registration yesterday.

Two professors were looking out of the front of the Men's gym at the men digging up the earth and mounding dirt all around on the new quad.

"Really some mess, isn't it?" said one to the other.

"Yep," said the other, "they'll get those blasted woodchucks yet."

Ready?...Set?...Hike!

By DON HENRY

Freshmen, we humbly ask you to pity us. We may have been irritatingly frequent in our requests for you to "tip that lid," but we don't think we deserved a fate as horrible as was benignedly handed me by the Daily Orange Editorial Director.

"Humor", as he is deceivingly called, smiled regretfully at me and bellowed, "Hey you! Write a bit on what the Frash should know about the first football game. You know, what they should wear, where they should sit, what they should take, and so forth. And don't make it a dry, itemized bit."

How in Humor's sake does one write a story on such a topic? However, "orders is orders," as someone memoriably quiped, and the rest of this space shall be dedicated to the instruction of ignorant frosh on what to know about the first football game.

Before joining the other ice cubes in Archbold stadium, you should have plenty of warm clothing and plenty (at least one) of warm escorts. Also bring with you the expectation of becoming hoarser than hoarse, else Dean Noble will have your head.

Unless you wish to participate in placard cheering, you are welcome to any concrete slab you desire. Placards will be used by everyone who sits in sections 9, 10 and 11 of the stone seats.

Binoculars are a very popular choice for most popular mechanical device among the male constituents of every football game. I base this statement on the high number of gleeful cries that fill the air at half time when the twirlers strut their stuff.

An old blanket spread neatly on the concrete will save wear and tear on sensitive posteriors. It also adds warmth to the situation.

Well frosh, that's about it. Vaya con dios if any of you have to pound out a story like this one next year.

Deuce

"You would flunk the course."

Campus Parking Permits to Continue On Previous Basis

Officials to Assign New Registration Cards, Stickers

Campus parking permits for this year will continue basically the same as in past year except that new registration cards and stickers will be assigned. They may be obtained at 907 S. Crouse ave.

The deans and directors of the various departments are first asked for lists of people who are eligible for campus and faculty parking tickets for the year.

THE REGISTRATION cards and a letter are all then sent to each of the people mentioned on the lists, explaining the rules and regulations of the parking. These cards must be returned and the parking permits are then issued. The procedure is fundamentally the same for students at the University who desire permits.

This year, different areas have been selected for parking and certain ones have been excluded. A new parking space has been opened behind the Administration building.

Last May, a group of professors, Graeme O'Geran, Robert Lett, and William Crane, submitted a complete study of the parking problem on campus to the administration with extensive recommendations, but as yet final preparations for the year are incomplete.

Parking areas designated this wek by the University are as follows: Mt. Olympus, students only; Hendricks field, student, faculty, employees; Behind 123 College pl. and Waverly ave.: south side, faculty; behind Psychology building, special permits; behind St. Thomas More chapel, students, faculty and employees; behind Lowe Art center, art faculty; behind Special Education building, special education staff; 905-07 University ave., behind bookstore, buildings and grounds employees.

Hill Administration Names Instructors

Two new instructors will be among new faculty members meeting students when classes open Monday morning.

Willis D. Moreland has been named instructor in the social studies department and Dr. Kenneth E. Crook, Jr., in the plant sciences department.

A GRADUATE OF Central Missouri State College and the University of Nebraska, Moreland has been on the Nebraska faculty for two years. During World War 2, he served as a lieutenant in the Navy. He is a member of Phi Delta Kappa, professional graduate education fraternity.

In addition to teaching social science on the Hill, Moreland will assist with education classes.

Dr. Crook, a graduate of Harvard University, received his M.S. and Ph.D. degrees from Syracuse. He is a Navy veteran and a member of Pi Sigma, plant sciences honorary; Sigma Xi, national research honorary; Society of American Bacteriologists, and American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Panhellenic Convo Scheduled Tonight

The Panhellenic convocation for women interested in rushing will be held at 8:30 p.m., today in Crouse auditorium.

Dean Smith, the officers of Panhellenic, the preferential committee and freshmen advisors will explain the rushing system. Handbooks will be available at the convo for those who did not receive them.

Registration for rushing will be Saturday from 9 to 5 p.m. and Monday from 1 to 5 p.m. in the Women's building. Late registration will not be permitted.

GUIDES' PERMISSIONS

Junior and Senior Campus Guides must pick up permanent blanket permission cards at the Women's Student Government office today or tomorrow, Liz Brydon, WSG vice president, announced yesterday. The white cards will be used for Sunday night house meetings. Each week the guides also must fill out green blanket slips which will be available at the dormitories.

Miss Burg to Twirl Baton For Owl-Orange Clash

By JOY YUNKER

The University marching band will spell out the name of Alta Burg as the 18-year-old freshman steps into the Orange spotlight for the first time tomorrow night when the Saltine Warrior meets the Temple Owls in Archbold stadium.

Before the game the band will march down the field in square formations to form a V as the team dashes onto the field.

HALF TIME will see the band forming a diamond in tribute to Temple and the figure 1 in time to a medley of college songs.

Miss Burg will display the double baton technique which brought her the titles of international baton twirling champion and Pennsylvania Forensic and Music League baton twirling champion for three consecutive years.

Fire batons will also be brought into play at the night game a feat which will remind the upperclassmen of the days of Dottie Grover, who graced Archbold stadium for four years.

The Liberal Arts freshman credits her success with the double batons to a roller skating accident. Back in 1947 she broke her right arm, but twirled the next day and at each succeeding game with her left hand.

THESE PERFORMANCES left her as capable with one hand as with the other and opened new tricks and skills to her with which to vary her routines. All this thanks to a broken arm.

Miss Burg hails from Red Lions, Pa., and is a graduate of Red Lions high school, where she participated in journalistic, dramatic, and student government activities. At Syracuse, she calls Woodworth cottage "home".

GRACED ALREADY by the presence of a champion drum majorette for four years, Dottie's successor, Alta Burg, a world champion, seems likely to win the hearts of the friendliest campus in the world. She'll twirl two fiery batons in her campus debut at the game Saturday. Alta will fiddle while Temple burns.

Senior Applications Due Tomorrow

Exec Council Seeks New Members

The deadline for applications for the Senior Executive Council is tomorrow, according to John Beach, senior class president.

Applications may be turned in to Beach at the Phi Gamma Delta house or to Barbara Suchy, class vice-president, at Delta Gamma. The applications should include name, address, phone number, campus activities, and ideas for class programs.

Those students who applied for the council at the end of last spring's semester need not reapply, because their applications have been held over. Interviews for the applicants will be conducted next week.

The executive council is composed of 12 members, with six members already chosen. They are the four officers and the top two defeated candidates for class president.

The senior class tentatively has made plans for a senior class show, in addition to sponsoring the Spring Weekend formal dance.

The executive council is supplemented by the senior assembly, consisting of one member from each living center. The assembly is presided over by Barbara Suchy, class vice-president, with the aide of the executive council.

Discount Service Continues on Sale

Student discount service cards will continue to be sold at registration for 25 cents upon presentation of identification cards, it was announced yesterday.

Stores participating in the plan, which offers three to 25 per cent discounts to students, are Stadium Cleaners on Marshall st.; Nadine's Dress shop and Rob Roy's Men's shop on Wescott st.; Mayflower Market, Ben Franklin store and Marie's Flower shop on E. Genesee st.; and Service Lubricating company at E. Fayette st. and Irving ave.

'Born Yesterday' To Open Legitimate Theater Season

Broadway Comedy Begins Series of 3 To Appear Here

Legitimate theater will get another fling in Syracuse when "Born Yesterday" opens at 8:30 p. m. Tuesday at the Astor theater.

The hit comedy about a big-time junk dealer and his stupid blonde girl friend will open a season of seven plays scheduled to run through Dec. 20.

Sponsored by James Russo and Michael Ellis, who produced "Two's Company," starring Bette Davis, the series will include three former Broadway hits, and four pre-Broadway tryouts.

SEATS RANGE from $.60 to 3, the lowest legitimate stage prices offered in the area for several years. Tickets are available at Gene's Smoke Shop on Marshall st.

"Born Yesterday" is the comedy which ran for three years on Broadway and won Judy Holliday an Academy Award for her movie creation of the dumb Billie Dawn role.

It will star Jay Jostyn as Brock, the crooked junk dealer. Jostyn starred as "Mr. District Attorney," famous on radio for many years.

John Dall, known from "The Corn is Green," will play the young man hired to teach Billie Billie will be portrayed by Vicki Cummings, who starred in last season's production of "Midsummer."

Music Students To Present Concert

Four students from the School of Music will participate Sunday evening in the New York State Conference of School Superintendents at Saranac Lake, Dr. Capurso, director of the School of Music announced yesterday.

Attending the conference will be 350 high school superintendents and principals, in addition to college deans and New York State education officials.

ONE OF THE soloists will be Miss Louise Orlando, a senior in music education. A soprano, Miss Orlando represented the state in the Miss America contest in 1951.

Robert Johnson, also on the program, is a tenor soloist with the University chorus. Like Miss Orlando he is a senior in music education and a native Syracusan.

Baritone Fred Griesinger, the third soloist, was the vocal star of White Bucks and Tales. Griesinger also was a soloist in the Commencement concert last May.

Miss Lucille Giers, the accompanist, is a senior piano major. Miss Giers was soloist with the University Symphony Orchestra at the winter concert. Like the others, she holds a scholarship from the University.

Piskor Begins First Year At New Position Monday

Former Dean of Men Frank P. Piskor begins his first full academic year Monday in the newly created post of vice-president and dean of student services.

In one of several moves taken by the board of trustees last June the position was created to end an overburdening in the offices of the Chancellor and Vice-Chancellor.

DEAN PISKOR will establish and coordinate policy in the following fields: management of scholarship endowment, administration of scholarships, housing services, dormitory budget, budget control of Chapel activities, student government activities and student welfare groups.

He will serve as chairman of the Women's building policy board, but will not supervise the offices of the dean of men and dean of women, who will continue counselling and direct supervision of functions related to student activities.

The Chancellor's "cabinet" is now composed of Hugh Gregg, vice-president and treasurer; F. Gordon Smith, vice-president and executive secretary; Kenneth Bartlett, vice-president and dean of public relatoins; Frank Piskor, vice-president and dean of student services and Dr. Francis Wingate, comptroller.

The above serves as the policy formulating group assisting the Chancellor. The position of comptroller is new and Dr. Wingate will be concerned with budgetary procedures, internal audit, maintenance of accounting records and policy matters for non-academic personnel of the University.

CARLETON L. Krathwohl, member of the Syracuse faculty since 1951, has been appointed associate dean of men and will assume the administrative responsibilities of that office.

Three staff members of the dean of men's office have received promotions. Former Assistant to the Dean Earle W. Clifford has been appointed assistant dean of men; Jack Buckle has been raised from acting director to director of men's counseling and residences; and Jim Carleton has been named assistant to the dean.

Dean Krathwohl, who will be assisted by Clifford, Buckle and Carleton, also serves as assistant professor of education. He received his B.A. and master's degree in education from the University of Buffalo in 1938 and 1942 respectively.

These innovations in title and positions are the result of two surveys, one University-run and one conducted by an outside agency. The University survey started shortly after World War II when the sudden influx of students caused enrollment to jump from 6,000 to 14,000 and placed many extra burdens on the administration.

TIP THAT LID!

Some freshmen are finding their status somewhat difficult to take.

It's not enough that upperclassmen put them in their places but now workers at the veterans hospital are getting in the act. A tractor driver yesterday insisted that two frosh coeds tip their lids.

But then perhaps he was a former engineering student.

Coach Issues Freshmen Crew Call

Michalson Seeks Candidates for Tangerine Shells

By DAVE BENNETT

Attention freshman men! Help wanted. Occupation: crew member. Previous experience needed: none. Hours: One per day for four days a week. Opportunities for advancement: unlimited. Payment: a position on Syracuse university's crew squad. All interested frosh should visit the crew booth located in the gym during registration.

No, this is not a paid advertisement. It is a call put out by Coach Vic Michalson, frosh crew mentor, for all freshmen interested in joining the crew squad.

CREW IS ON the rise at Syracuse. One reason, of course, is that the Intercollegiate Rowing Association regatta, the world series of crew racing, is held on Syracuse's Onondaga lake. But another, more important reason is that Orange crews are steadily improving. A look at the records of the past few years will prove this.

But Syracuse crews can continue to improve only if crew members learn the fundamentals of rowing early. The only way they can do this is by joining the freshman crew.

A meeting will be held for all varsity crewmen, new candidates and coaches at 5 p.m. Monday in the crew room of Archbold gymnasium. All men interested in joining the frosh crew are urged to attend this meeting.

Prior to Monday's meeting, however, new candidates may obtain information concerning crew at the crew booth during registration.

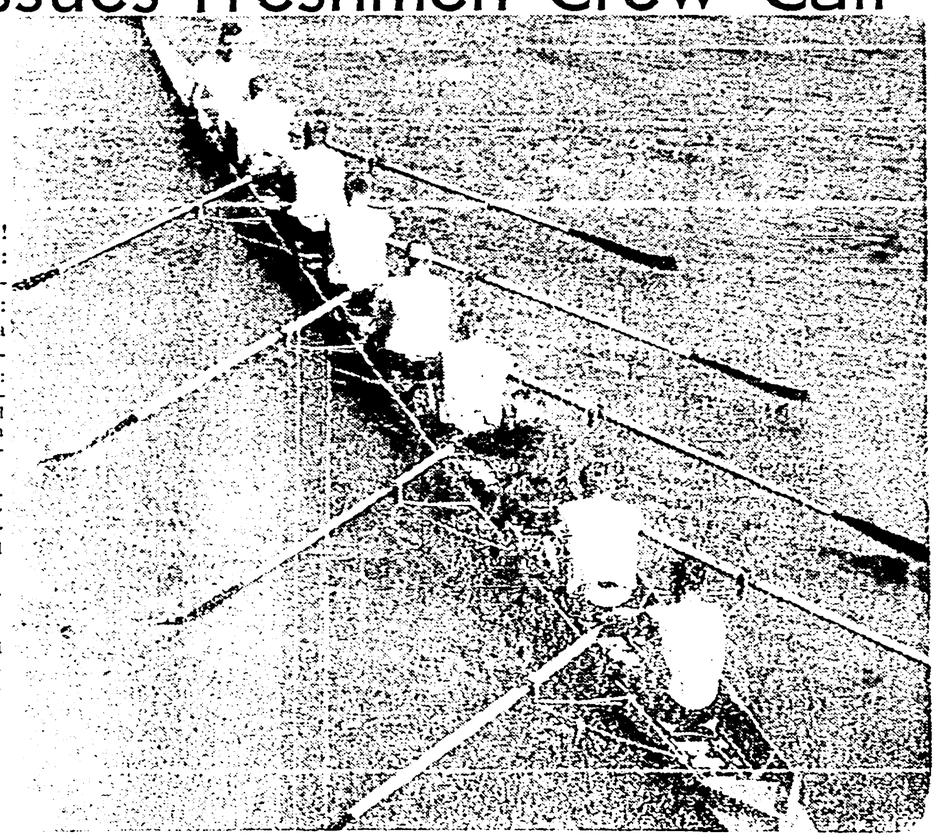
BECAUSE ALMOST all candidates for the frosh crew have had no previous experience in rowing, a perspective oarsman must be taught how to row before becoming a part of a racing crew. For this reason, crew practice for all new men will begin on Wednesday, Sept. 30. A schedule will be posted by 2 p.m. of this day showing the time each man will row each day.

New crew members are required to row only one hour per day for four days of each week. One day a week, practice will be held at Onondaga lake. For only five weeks of the school year, and these late in the spring semester, will frosh crew candidates be required to put in over one hour a day on practice.

Coach Michalson stresses the fact that there are no cuts on the crew squad. Every man that turns out may continue to do so as long as he desires.

At Syracuse, a crew member will utilize rowing facilities which are second to none. A view of some of these facilities will be afforded on Tuesday when all crew men and new candidates will meet at Archbold gym at 4:15 p.m. and go by bus to the Ten Eyck boathouse on the lake where a varsity turnout will be observed.

COACH MICHALSON believes that crew has much to offer as an activity and as a sport. He asks only that you visit the crew booth if possible, and attend the meeting on Monday.



Shown in a workout on Onondaga lake is one of Bill Orange's steadily improving crews. Syracuse has become the center of the crew world since the famed "Poughkeepsie Regatta" was shifted to the Salt city. The Hill frosh crew will begin practice sessions soon under the direction of Coach Vic Michalson.

Gridiron Foes Open '53 Football Seasons

While most of the interest in Saturday's football games will center around Archbold stadium, the rest of the opponents on the Orange grid slate will be seeing action—many for the first time this season.

At nearby Ithaca, the two rivals of Bill Orange for Upstate honors, Cornell and Colgate will collide in what promises to be a very close contest.

CORNELL WILL START sophomore backs, including the highly touted Bill DeGraaf who will open at quarterback. Only Guy Bedrossian, a burley fullback who is probably the Big Red's best runner, was a starter last season. The rest of the veteran backs have been pushed out by the newcomers.

Colgate has several veterans of last year's highly successful team back, including Capt. Gary Chandler, who has been shifted from end to halfback, and ace passer Dick Lalla.

Villanova opened its season last week dropping a game to strong Georgia 32-19. The big, rugged Wildcats seemed to fizzle out in the second half after trailing Georgia only 13-12 after the first two periods. Villanova faces another tough foe this week meeting Texas.

Penn State has a rough opening opponent in the Wisconsin Badgers. The Nittany Lions have a good passer in Tony Rados and an excellent receiver in Jesse Arnelle. In all, Coach Rip Engle has 17 returning lettermen, with the guard position looming as the biggest weakness.

SYRACUSE'S intersectional rival, Illinois, must find a replacement for Tommy O'Connell who will do his quarterbacking for the Chicago Bears. The Illini will face Nebraska in her first game of the year and all indications point to a close battle.

Fordham has several returning lettermen led by quarterbacks Vinnie Drake and Roger Franz. Coach Ed Danowski has promised to install some split-T plays in his offense to take advantage of Drake's running ability. The Rams do not open until October 2 when they meet Detroit.

Boston university has lost Harry Agganis—nuff said. The Terriers have a large rebuilding job on their hands and may find it hard having a winning season. The Terriers will face Syracuse here on October 2 in their first game of the '53 season.

Holy Cross has the same trouble as Boston university. She must replace star passer Charley Maloy, however, the Purple had a strong freshman team and several of these boys are expected to bolster the varsity squad. Holy Cross meets Dartmouth tomorrow and should have enough guns to start the football off on the right side of the ledger.

Frosh Grid

Coach Les Dye, freshman football mentor, has issued a call for frosh grid candidates. Those who are interested should get in touch with Coach Dye in his Archbold gymnasium office today or any morning next week.

Frosh Soccer

Freshmen soccer candidates should report to Coach Andy Coccari in the locker room of Archbold stadium at 1 p. m. today or tomorrow.

11th Round Kayo Wins for Marciano

Rocky Marciano retained his world's heavyweight championship with an 11th round TKO over Roland LaStarza last night in New York's Polo Grounds. By ring-time Marciano was a 4-1 favorite, by the 11th round he was covered with LaStarza's blood.

As early as the second round Marciano opened a cut over LaStarza's right eye. He worked on it until the eighth and then added LaStarza's nose to the mess. At the 11th round, which never began, LaStarza was bleeding from his right eye, the left side of his nose, his mouth and his right ear.

Marciano remained unbeaten by winning his 45th fight, 40 of which were by knockout. Marciano was warned for butting in the first round and had the sixth round taken away from him for a low blow. Ruby Goldstein officiated.

In the eighth round LaStarza tired quickly. He was wobbly and failed to return any punches. In the tenth and last round Marciano swung a right hand and the momentum carried him to the floor. It was not a knockdown. LaStarza failed to answer the bell for the 11th.

Marciano is expected to get the biggest cut of his profesional career, taking 42½ per cent of the gate. An estimated 40,000 fans paid their way in to see the fight. It was also televised on a closed theatre circuit throughout the nation.

As usual, a Brockton, Mass. contingent followed Marciano to the ringside. They are his loyal fans and about 300 of them wore black sweaters with white lettering which read: "Rocky Marciano will never lose a fight." He still hasn't.

Along the Sidelines

By KEN LENT, DAILY ORANGE SPORTS EDITOR

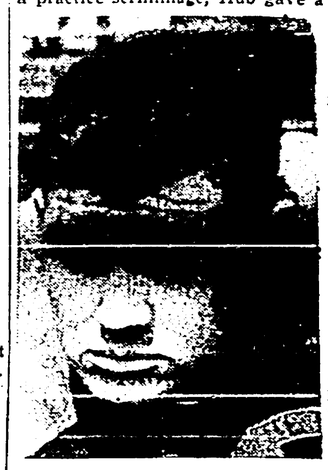
He was just another name on Syracuse's football roster last year, "Harshbarger RG". The average football fan didn't recognize him the way he knew Pat Stark or Bob Leberman because Hub never got his name in the headlines.

When he finally got top billing in the papers, it had little to do with football. To the papers, the story was probably worth only a few lines, for things like that happen every day. To Hub, it was the most important occurance of his life.

It happened as he was coming home to Barboursville, Pa. from Syracuse. Hub had graduated from the Hill in June and worked here during the summer. About three weeks ago he finished his job bought a motorcycle and started home.

He was passing through Pennsylvania when he lost control of the vehicle. When he became conscious, he was in the Somerset Community Hospital. That was three weeks ago. Last weekend, the doctors amputated his leg below the knee.

On the Hill, Hub was well liked. A three-letter man, he was a nice, easy-going fellow who played his guard position in a steady unpretentious manner. Out on the field, whether in a game or just a practice scrimmage, Hub gave a 100% effort.



Hub Harshbarger

Roy Simmons, who coaches the Orange boxing team in addition to his grid duties, recalls the time that Hub answered the call for ring candidates two years ago. Roy at the time was desparately in need of heavyweights and so Hub along with others tried out.

Roy recalls that Hub appeared to be a good puncher and might have made an excellent heavyweight if he could have remained out for the squad. Football plus studies in the School of Education, however, prevented him from pursuing the fistic sport any further.

Right now, Hub is lying on a hospital bed in Somerset with a plate in the upper part of his leg where it was crushed and a stump below. Hub doesn't want sympathy. He isn't that type of guy. But a letter or card from a friendly Syracusan could do more for him than a gallon of medicine.

Possibly some Syracuse football fans could drop a line to:

Mr. Hubert Harshbarger
Somerset Community Hospital
Somerset, Pa.

It could be sort of a repayment for the time, effort and spirit Hub gave to Syracuse. A hospital miles away from home can be a mighty dreary place at times.

We had a pleasant chat with Les Dye, Syracuse's genial freshman football coach yesterday morning and found that he is more enthused about this frosh team than any other squad in a long time. The yearlings have been working out for over two weeks and from all reports they could turn out to be one of SU's finest frosh clubs.

Be that as it may, Les realizes that he could still use more material so he has issued a call for any other candidates. Any would-be gridders should contact him at his office in Archbold gym any morning next week.

Getting back to the boys who are out there now, the Tangerines seem to be bigger, faster and have more spirit than in previous years. The first day that the freshmen were up here, the varsity gridders told the frosh to show up to practice wearing the traditional Orange lid. They did.

They'll have to wear them until the Syracuse-Colgate frosh battle November 13. If the Tangerines happen to lose the game, they will be required to wear the chapeaux until January. A lid can get awfully soggy during the usual wet Syracuse winter. We trust that the frosh won't have to wear them that long.

TICKET TALK: There should be 15-20,000 at the Temple game according to M. Harold Michaels, head of the ticket department. That there has been an upsurge of interest in the Orange around the Central New York area is indicated by the fact that season ticket sales are up by 50% over last year.

The sales for the remaining three home games with Boston U., Fordham and Colgate games have all been going briskly. Most of the better locations for the traditional Colgate battle are gone with only the end zone and side field bleacher seats left.

Six hundred and fifty alums from Buffalo are planning to journey down for the Ram game. Every day downtown fans come to the gym to obtain blocks of seats for their friends and themselves. Let's hope this outside support of the team, which has been lacking in recent years, keep up.

DID YOU KNOW THAT . . . The Orange harriers are not losing a series to a major opponent since cross country was started here. Penn State has come the closest to edging Syracuse by splitting 20 meetings . . . . Temple has not scored on Syracuse since their 7-6 upset over the Schwartzwaldermen three years ago . . . . The Orange have not played a tie game since 1944.

Bill Martin Can't Keep Show Going Despite Good Try

By BOB LEFKO
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Yesterday at 10:30 p.m., radio station WSYR presented a comparatively new way of broadcasting a boxing match. Instead of employing the normal punch-by-punch description, the local radio outlet employed a redescription of the Rocky Marciano-Roland LaStarza heavyweight championship fight in round-by-round summary style.

The new style of broadcasting was used after the International Boxing Club had blacked out all home radio and TV broadcasts of the fight. It proved to be a capable substitute only for the extremely astute fight fan but one that will not keep many fistic followers away from other entertainment.

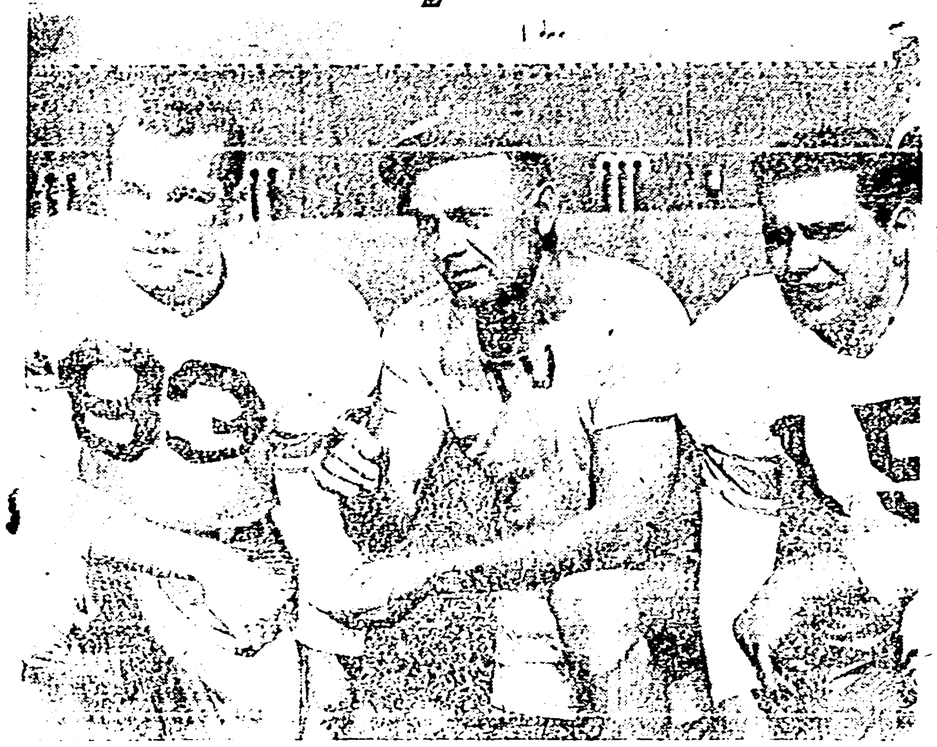
BILL MARTIN gave a capable description of the clash with what little information he had to work with but even he was unable to project the feeling that you were at ringside, after all, you weren't and neither was he.

Much of the broadcast time was spent with Martin describing the fighter's personal and fighting histories, their builds and other unimportant facts which fail to provide interest when two top sluggers are throwing leather at each other.

At the end of each round, you were informed who had seemingly taken the round in the opinion of Oscar Peterson, the well-known sportswriter. This was the only actual way of knowing how the fight was progressing and even then it seemed unfair to judge on just one man's opinion. Even the best have been known to disagree radically.

Personally, the announcer's limited description of the opening stanza seemed to favor Marciano but Peterson thought it went to the challenger. It will be interesting to see how the official judges and the referee voted.

All in all, the summary rebroadcast of the fight did not seem a success at all. I for one will watch a TV movie or go to sleep early the next time this new and uninteresting method is used.



Co-Captains JOE McGEE and CARMEN PICCONE and COACHAL KAWAL of the Temple Owls will be present at Archbold Stadium tomorrow night when the Philadelphians help Syracuse open the 1953 grid season. McGee, an end and Piccone, the quarterback, will be important factors in the visitors' speedy offense.

Speed Chief Asset Of Temple Line

By LOWELL TOENNIESSEN
Daily Orange Junior Editor

The Temple Owl swoops into Archbold stadium tomorrow evening anxious for a shot at Ben Schwartzwalder's Eastern champions in the lid-lifter of the 1953 grid season. Game time is 8:15.

Al Kawal's Templars are vastly improved over the '52 edition which succumbed to Syracuse 27-0 and are expected to provide an interesting opener for the two-touchdown-favorite Orange. The visitors from Philly already have a platoon-less game in the records, a 34-0 shellacking of Albright last week in the Pennsylvania metropolis.

A six-foot, 175-pounder, Tex also handles the Owl punting and returns opponents' kicks.

Ken Stout pairs with Robinson at the halves while John Hadley, 180-pound senior, draws the bucking assignment. Carmen Piccone, heaviest of the Owl backs at 182, starts his third campaign at quarterback.

THE TEMPLE LINE appears solid at all but the tackle spots. Tom Walters is the only experienced operative at this position but Kawal hopes George Ponis, converted sophomore guard, will fill the hole on the right side. Don Plugge, letterman who saw little service in '52, will probably step in if Ponis fails to make the grade.

Larry Cardonick, brilliant line-backer, will debut as an offensive guard in the new era of one-platoon football. Jim Cloney gets the nod over John Rightus for the other mid-line spot. Lee French starts at the pivot post with Leo Rutkowski, a fine sophomore, close behind.

The end position is one of Temple's bright spots with four returning wingmen available. Joe McGee and place-kicking Dick Stolte get the starting roles with veterans Bobby Daniels and Joe Ciasullo in reserve.

Although the visitors' line averages only 190 pounds, the added conditioning gained in Saturday's tussle with Albright may offset the 20-pound-per-man weight advantage held by the Orange forward wall.

Walters is the only Owl regular who tips the Toledos over 200 pounds, weighing in at 203. The Syracuse line, meanwhile, boasts four men over the double-century mark (Fleck, McClelland, George and Steigler) while fullback Bill Wetzel registers 205.

Tomorrow evening's tussle will be the tenth in the series which dates back to 1944. Each team has won four while the '44 inaugural ended 7-7.

First Meeting Slated To Help Organize Fall Intra Program

Although the sports spotlight in these first few weeks of the fall semester is directed on the Orange football team, the intramural athletic program on Piety Hill is set and ready to get under way.

All teams that wish to enter the fall program must have a representative at the intramural manager's meeting to be held Wednesday, September 30 at 7 p.m. in the Trophy room of Archbold gymnasium.

ANYONE DESIRING to enter the individual intra tournaments may sign up at any time in the office of intramural director Milt Howard in the gym.

Team sports for the fall season include touch football, swimming, bowling, and cross-country. Individual tournaments will be held in horseshoe pitching, tennis, and golf.

Touch football will begin on October 5. Teams will be divided into flights according to their position in last year's standings. This situation not only assures a close race in each flight, but does not handicap any team's chances by placing it in competition with more powerful squads.

Ten touch football games will be played each night. The contests will start at 6:15 p.m. with two of Hendricks field's gridirons being utilized. The games will be 30 minute affairs with two new tilts slated every 45 minutes.

A round-robin system will be used to decide team pairings. Each team will play every other team in its flight. With the advent of a higher enrollment, director Howard estimates that many more teams will participate in the intramural program. Over 150 contests are slated in touch football alone for the coming season.

Orange Bowl defeat. Replacement of six departed ends has been a big problem, as has the development of a new punter. One problem which has yet to be proven solved was a sieve pass defense of last year's team.

Last year's game down in Philadelphia was consistently interrupted by falling handkerchiefs and bodies. A total of 213 yards was counted off in penalties, with many being refused. Syracuse lost four men in the game including Art Troilo and Bill Wetzel who will start tomorrow night. Wetzel at the time of his injury last year, was leading the nation in rushing. The whole thing took 3 hours and 10 minutes to play so delaying were the extra-curricular activities.

Just two years ago first string quarterback Pat Stark broke a leg in the Temple game—also the first of the season in Archbold. Feeling between the two schools has remained cordial, but the feeling between the football teams is something else again.

STARTING AT ENDS for the first game will be Herb Steigler 6 foot 4 inches, 205 pounds and Ray Perkins 6 foot, 182 pounds. Steigler will start offensively at around will start offensively on the right end and will switch with Steigler on defense. Perkins comes from Cleveland, Ohio while Steigler's home is in Harrison, New York.

Fleck will stand on one side of the center while 6 foot, 187 pound Sam Johnson will stand guard on the other side. Fleck is a Coatsville, Pa. boy and Johnson is from Uniontown, Pa.

At center will be Naval academy transfer Ted Kukowski. "Cookie" a 6 foot 1 inch, 195 pounder from Clifton, New Jersey will be the handy man on the defense—linebacker. Uncle Ben is very pleased with Kukowski and his marvelous defensive play. Ted will call defensive signals and spend his time roving behind the defensive line. Kukowski can become one of the best centers ever to play on the Hill.

PETER STARK, a local boy, will start at quarterback. He will be starting his third season as first string quarterback, although his career three years ago lasted for about a half-a-game. Stark is 6 foot, weighs 172 pounds.

Bill Wetzel, the tank-driving Korean vet, will be up to his busting tactics from the full spot. Wetzel, 6 foot 1 inch, 205 pounds from Canton, Ohio, will aid Kukowski in backing up the line on a six-man line. Wetzel, until he was slightly injured in the third game of last season, led the nation in rushing. On a five man line defense it will probably be Ray Perkins that falls in as a linebacker.

At lefthalf will be Bob Leberman, 6 foot, 180 pounds from Hamburg, N. Y. Leberman, who has been a pleasant surprise on the defense is a high-steping, exceedingly fast halfback.

The wingback spot will fall to Art Troilo, 6 foot, 177 pounds, from Harrison, New York. Troilo has also drawn the punting assignment. The left-footed punter is the product of the search prompted by the sudden departure of Avatus Stone.

ON PUNT DEFENSE, Syracuse has been toying with the idea of a double safety—the two halfbacks. This necessitates using Pat Stark and Wetzel as blocking backs about half-way down the field.

Coach Ben's front wall, at 210 average will outweigh the Owl's by about 20 pounds. These 20 pounds, however, might not prove to be advantageous in this new age of football. The cold nights, coupled with first game nervousness will make Syracuse prone to a few more fumbles than usual. Conditioning, however, will be the big factor. Many teams have already fallen due to improper or insufficient training.

Grieve Seeks Freshmen Harriers To Bolster Veteran Piety Squad

With the first cross-country meet just a matter of two weeks off, Coach Bob Grieve is busy rounding his varsity and frosh squads into shape. Since the Orange varsity is almost completely comprised of veterans, the major problem of Grieve at the moment has to do with the frosh.

Some freshmen aspirants for the hill and dale sport have already reported to Grieve, but he is still looking for more freshmen to try out for the squad, preferably but not essentially with previous x-country or track experience.

GRIEVE HAS issued a call to all those interested in running for the Orange frosh this fall to report to him in his office in Archbold gym any Monday, Wednesday or Friday morning between 9 and 12 a. m.

Each year at this time Grive must gather together an entirely new freshman cross-country squad. He naturally would like any frosh who has competed in high school cross-country or in track events of one-half mile or greater distance to participate in cross-country on the Hill.

Varsity participants and the few frosh candidates who have already reported to Coach Grieve worked out at Hendricks field the first three days this week. Yesterday the harriers put in their first day's work on the Drumlins course.

Grieve has stressed that workouts will be limited to about one hour each day, excluding Saturdays and Sundays. A bus will leave the gym at 3:45 p. m. each day and will return shortly after 5.

WITH ALMOST half the squad graduating next spring Grieve is especially anxious to build a strong yearling team. Next fall he will have several holes to fill in his varsity aggregation.

BOB GRIEVE will once again coach the Orange cross team as it tries to recapture the NCAA crown which it lost last season.

Grieve's squad will carry a record of nine consecutive victories into the season's opener with Colgate October 10 at the Drumlins uled for Friday, October 30.

Following the opener with Colgate, the Piety harriers will journey to New York October 17 to compete with Navy and St. Johns.

October 24 will find the Orange squad in Ithaca to meet the Cornell harriers.

This will be the only home meet of the season.

It's back to New York November 7 for a dual meet with Fordham. The IC4A meet will be held in the metropolis Monday, November 16, and the season will come to its conclusion the following Monday, November 23, at East Lansing, Michigan, where the NCAA races will be staged.

Syracuse finished third in last year's IC4A meet, fourth in the NCAA run and a strong second in the NAAU competition.

The closest the Orange runners came to defeat in dual and triangular competition last season last season was the Army meet. The Piety runners edged the Black Knights 31-34, with Pitt finishing a poor third.

Ray Osterhout distinguished himself last season by finishing second to Charley Capuzzoli of Georgetown in the NCAA run. Both Osterhout and Capozzoli broke the course record at East Lansing last year, with the Orange captain finishing 13 seconds behind the Georgetown flash.

This season, the Orange harriers will seek to recapture the NCAA title which they won in 1951. Michigan State finished first in the national run last season with Indiana a very close second.

Seniors Choose Seating Monday

Seniors and graduate students may pick up reserved seating tickets for the Boston university football game Monday in the Trophy room of the men's gym.

This game will be the second in which the newly-initiated reserved seating is used. The Boston football game is scheduled for Friday, Oct. 2, in Archbold stadium.

Juniors should pick up seat tickets Tuesday.

Sophomore seats will be arranged Wednesday.

Freshmen may obtain their reservations Thursday.

Block seating reservations will be completed Friday. All cottages, living centers, sororities and fraternities should make arrangements to pick up block seating positions on that day.

If a student wishes to pick up three or four tickets he must do so on the day assigned to the lowest member of the group. For example, if there are three seniors and one sophomore in the party, the tickets must be drawn on Wednesday, which is the day the sophomores may pick up reservations.

EACH STUDENT who requests a reserved seat must present his identification card and his general admission ticket at the window in the Trophy room. If one person picks up reservations for a group he should have an ID card and ticket for each student who wishes a seat.

Seats will be reserved only until game time. After that time the ushers leave their posts and all sections will be open for general seating.

Those who wish to attend the game and who are not university students will not be allowed to sit in student sections.

Mart Still Taking Books for Resale

Gym Coed Lounge Set for Collection

The book mart will continue to receive books for resale from 9 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. today and tomorrow in the women's lounge of the men's gym, according to Jean Spencer, president of the book mart.

Miss Spencer stressed that students should bring in first semester textbooks because they will be in particular demand when sales begin Monday morning.

There is a special shortage of books for citizenship, English 1a, English 40, forestry, engineering, chemistry 6a, Bible and Religion 10, education, zoology 1, Botany 1, business law, accounting, general education books and speech books.

THE BOOKS will go on sale next Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. Money will be given out and unsold texts returned all day Thursday and Friday and Saturday morning when the mart will close for the semester.

Students who have stubs from last semester may bring them to the book mart Friday and until noon Saturday. Any money not collected at that time will go towards the scholarship fund and unsold textbooks not claimed will be donated to the textbook lending library.

Students who bring their textbooks to the book mart set their own selling price and books will not be sold at any other price.

Approximately 400 books were brought to the book mart yesterday, according to Miss Spencer. It is expected that this year's sales will exceed last semester's record-breaking $4,866.32.

'Voice' Employee Here as Frosh

One freshman entering Syracuse university almost lost his job this summer—simply because he was too popular.

Hill grid prospect Billy Brown of Yorktown Heights made front page news in June when the Voice of America announced that the cost of answering the deluge of fan mail in response to his weekly broadcasts was too much to handle on a curtailed budget. The Voice threatened to drop Brown's show.

Protests poured into the Voice offices and with the aid of private funds and a club of local teenagers to help answer the fan letters, Brown remained on the air.

PLANNING TO study law here, Brown was captain of his Yorktown Heights high school football and basketball teams and was on the baseball and track teams there. His social studies teacher got him the broadcasting job.

The Voice of America show runs 15 minutes once a week and reaches teen-agers around the world. His program, transmitted in English, is picked up by the BBC in England and beamed to Europe. A linguist in New York translates Brown's words in Urdu, a Moslem form of Hindustani, and the version is sent to South Asia.

Among subjects covered in the casual talks about American teenage life are sports, school, hobbies clubs, movies and other such activities. He also plays popular records.

The broadcasts, which started early in 1952, now draw from 300 to 600 letters a month from foreign teenagers. A group of American teen-agers answers each letter for Brown, since he hasn't the time to take care of all of them personally.

The newcomer to Syracuse is considered an outstanding prospect for the Orange gridders' frosh team.

Onondagan Faces More Money Problems

Incomplete Enrollment Totals Show Slight Gain Over '52

By ED HARDY
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Enrollment in 12 of the University's 17 colleges and schools totaled 6,867 during the regular three-day registration period that ended Saturday, Registrar Keith J. Kennedy reported.

The figure, which does not include the College of Law, University college, Utica college or State University Colleges of Medicine and Forestry, is 154 greater than the number who registered in a comparative time last year.

LATE REGISTRANTS are expected to swell the final campus total to about the same as last year, when 8,181 enrolled, Kennedy said.

As anticipated, the freshman class is the largest, with 1,795 men and women. The junior class, with only 1,170, is smallest.

There are 1,422 sophomores and 1,272 seniors. Graduate students number 1,109 and special students, 99. All totals will be increased in final tabulations after late registration.

Once again the College of Liberal Arts is largest on campus with an enrollment of 2,547.

OTHER REGISTRATION figures are: business administration, 752; education, 540; engineering, 543; fine arts, 920; home economics, 356; graduate, 853; nursing, 270; speech and dramatic art, 228; journalism, 42; and public health nursing, 41. Kennedy said 225 persons were dually-enrolled.

There are 670 frosh in ROTC. Last year there were 740.

When final tabulations are made, it is expected that total University enrollment will be about the same as last year, 13,627. This included 2,717 at University college and 1,803 at Utica college. University college registration will not be completed until Friday, while there is no report yet on Utica college totals.

Last year's campus enrollment of 8,181 did not include the Colleges of Medicine and Forestry. Officials at both colleges expect registration to remain about the same as last year.

IDENTIFICATION CARDS and football tickets for those who failed to get them during registration will be available from 1 to 5 p. m. Friday in the northeast corridor of Archbold gymnasium.

For most students registration took a shorter amount of time than last year, with the only real delay experienced getting identification cards and football tickets. Men's and women's physical education lines were fairly long this year, as were those for most of the freshmen courses Thursday and Friday.

Cashier lines moved rapidly in comparison with past years. An improvement was also reported in the queues for scholarship students.

Faigle Named Dean Of Speech School

Veteran Faculty Member Keeps LA Post

Dean of Liberal Arts Eric H. Faigle has been named dean of the School of Speech and Dramatic Art on the Hill. Dean Faigle will continue in his position as liberal arts chief.

Faigle, who has been dean of the largest college in the University for nearly three years, was appointed to the faculty 25 years ago as a geography instructor. He was promoted to assistant professor in 1935, associate professor in 1940 and full professor in 1943.

IN 1938, Faigle was administrative assistant to the dean of liberal arts. He was named associate dean in 1942 and assistant dean in 1945.

Faigle has traveled throughout Canada in teaching and research positions. During world war II he was a consultant to the Geographical Research section of the Army and later served as a postwar consultant to Syracuse's postwar planning committee.

Books authored by Faigle, an expert and professor in geography, especially geography of New York state, include "Syracuse, A Study in Urban Geography," "Study in Land Use of Syracuse," "Onondaga County and Syracuse in Their Regional Relationships," and "College Geography is Fettered."

Faigle is a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Association of American Geographers, American Society for Professional Geographers, National Council for the Social Studies, Sigma Xi, Phi Kappa Phi, Phi Gamma Phi and Beta Gamma Sigma honoraries. He is also a member of Alpha Chi Rho fraternity.

Chapel Sign-ups Slated for Today

Sign-ups for all Chapel activities will be held between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. at tables on the north side of the Chapel today and tomorrow.

In case of rain students may enroll for the committees in the Colonial room, Deane Lavender, Chapel board co-chairman, announced.

The seventeen groups include Syracuse-in-Asia, Social Service, Ushers, Human relations, and Skeptics Corner, which meets weekly at Dean Charles C. Noble's home.

The mental hygiene committee, newly established, will offer a weekly lecture series on mental health relating to student problems.

Students interested in learning about the chapel program and preparing for leadership within one of the groups, may sign up for the six-week training program. This will include weekly lectures by administration and student leaders.

Women's Building Scene of Sign-ups

Activities sign-ups will be held from 1:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. today in the women's building, according to James Carr, chairman.

Traditionally sponsored by Traditions commission, the sign-ups are held to give freshmen and upperclassmen a chance to select and join activities.

UNLIKE OTHER years, the sign-ups will continue until 6 p.m. to give those persons unable to attend in the afternoon a chance to sign up.

Approximately 50 organizations are expected to have tables for the sign-ups. Other organizations not signing up members will have booths open to explain structure and give information. Memberships also may be sold by the organizations.

Among those organizations planning to attend are women's student government, Panhellenic association, Red Cross, textbook lending library, book mart, men's student government, Dilemma, Daily Orange, Syracusan, Onondagan, Syrcico, dance class instructors, Boar's Head, United Students' Party, Tri-Orange, Young Republicans club and Students for Democratic Action.

Many of the organizations also will set up displays to signify the activities in which their group participates.

The Goon Squad will act as ushers. All available members are requested to report at 12 noon to the women's building.

DO Staff Meets In Castle Today

The staff of the Daily Orange will meet at 4 p.m. today in 105 Castle. All members must attend.

Freshmen who wish to join the DO staff will meet at 4:15 p.m. Thursday in 105 Castle. Those who cannot attend the meeting are asked to contact Janet Caro, executive editor, in the Hellbox.

Photographers who wish to work on the paper may contact Arthur Siegel, managing editor, in the Hellbox, preferably at 3:30 p.m. today.

Book Mart Moves Toward New Mark

Sales on First Day Reach $2,900

The student co-operative book mart was well on its way last night towards breaking its own record by selling 980 books amounting to $2,900 in its first day of sales.

Sales of the second-hand textbooks will continue today, tomorrow and Thursday while money will be paid and unsold books returned Thursday and Friday and until noon Saturday.

Due to a demand for certain textbooks, students may still bring in used books, according to Jean Spencer, book mart president.

The books and their authors which are particularly in demand include: College Botany, Fuller & Tippo; Understanding and Using English, Birk & Birk; Technical Drawing, Gresecko, Mitchell, Spencer, third edition.

Also all forestry books; Psych and Life, Ruch, fourth edition; College Algebra, Richardson; Basic Statistics; College Zoo, forestry; General Zoo, Storrer; Elementary Accounting, Johnson; Logic, Ruby; Sociology 1a; Growth of Western Civilization; Analyt and Calculus.

There also are a great supply of the following books: Effective Study, Robinson; Art Today, Faulkner; Exploring Journalism, Wolseley and Campbell; Fields of Psychology, Guilford; Readings in Western Civilization, Knoles & Snyder; Making of American History, Sheehan.

Also, American Democracy in Theory and Practice, Carr, Morrison, Bernstein & Snyder; New Training for Effective Speech, Oliver and Cortwright; Training the Speaking Voice, Anderson; Fundamentals of Math, Richardson; Essentials of Chemistry, Garrett, Haskins & Sisler; Psych & the New Education, Pressey and Robinson; and Textbook of Chemistry, Elder, Scott and Kanda; The Human Approach (Biology), Villee; The Plant World, Fuller; Plane Trigonometry, Heineman.

Frosh Will Take Exemption Test

A two-hour examination on writing, reading and the mechanics of English will be given by the English department at 7 p.m. today to freshmen desiring exemption from English Ia and Ib.

Dr. James Elson, head of English I, stated that seating arrangements will be made as the students register at the department office in HL.

Successful completion, though giving no credit, will leave the student free to take another course of his choice, not necessarily in the English department.

Women to Make Room Changes

Women students who wish to change rooms or living centers for any reason should see Miss Kathryn Copeland in the dean of women's offices at the new Women's building between tomorrow and Friday, Oct. 2.

Students who are dissatisified with the rooms assigned to them this fall may make arrangements to move into different quarters at this time.

More SDS Cards Go on Sale Today

All 2,000 student discount service cards were sold by student government workers at registration last week.

Two thousand additional cards will go on sale today, according to Sidney Weinstein and Arlene Swertfeger, co-chairmen. Cards may be purchased for 25 cents each from junior guides, at activity sign-ups today in the Women's building, at men's student government offices in building 30 and at Stadium Cleaners on Marshall street.

"THE STUDENT discount plan was a greater success than ever anticipated," Chief Civil Service Commissioner Stephen Reiss said.

Merchants in the plan report a brisk business from cardholders.

Students must present identification cards with discount cards to participating stores, Reiss advised.

Stores in the plan, offering three to 20 per cent discounts, are Stadium Cleaners on Marshall street; Nadine's Dress shop and Rob Roy's Men's shop on Westcott street; Mayflower Market, Ben Franklin store and Marie's Flower shop on E. Genesee street; and Service Lubricating company at E. Fayette street and Irving avenue.

THE STUDENT discount service is part of a nation-wide program sponsored by National Students' association. The 25 cent fee will be used by student government and NSA to publicize the plan, cover administrative costs and provide an independent source of income for special projects.

The SDS card is valid in stores in many cities across the United States. A list of participating merchants in the larger cities is on file in the men's student government office.

Included are St. Paul-Minneapolis, Chicago, Detroit, Boston, Bethlehem, Pa., Bloomfield, N. J., New Rochelle, Boston, New Haven and others. Details are incomplete on New York city merchants in the plan, Reiss said.

Chapel Committee To Advise Objectors

A Hendricks chapel committee will counsel conscientious objectors regarding their status under present draft laws this year.

According to Dean Charles C. Noble the group includes the Rev. Arthur Hopkinson, Robert Laubach, Dean Frank Piskor, Dean Marjorie Smith, Roland Smith, Dean Robert Stone, the Rev. Walter Welsh, Prof. Norman Whitney and Dean Noble.

Established last spring, the advisory council will aid conscientious objectors in dealing with their particular problems, the Dean said. Appointments with the committee or its members may be made through Dean Noble's secretary in the chapel, 76-5571.

Students to Forfeit Scholarship Help

More than 100 students may forfeit their scholarships for failure to pick up vouchers during the registration period last week, Frank P. Piskor, University vice-president and dean of student services, announced yesterday.

Such students, entitled to scholarships for this semester, will forfeit them if the vouchers are not picked up by Oct. 5. This applies only to those scholarship holders who do not pick up vouchers during registration.

Reserved Seating Program Called 'Very Successful'

About 2,500 Students Occupy Sections At Owl Game

By EILEEN CHAMBERLAIN
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Results of the first student reserved seating program at a Syracuse football game were very successful, according to reserved seating chairmen, with about 2,500 students occupying seats in the reserved sections at Saturday's Temple tilt.

This number represents roughly 50 per cent of regular student attendance at home games. "The system was very successful so far as attitude was concerned," said David Krohn, co-chairman of student reserved seating, yesterday.

STUDENTS WHO had reserved places for the Saturday game were accommodated and ushers were able to remove people in the wrong seats.

A few drawbacks arose because of students arriving en masse five minutes before game time. This made it difficult for ushers to check all tickets rapidly and resulted in a milling crowd just inside the gate.

Co-chairmen Krohn of MSG and Jean Dale of Women's student government pointed out that future seating will be facilitated if students do not present their reserved seat tickets at the gate. Collectors of game tickets may become confused and take reserved seat tickets by mistake. In this event students will be unable to claim seats.

When a student picks up his seat ticket he should look at the stadium diagram to see where his seat is. At the game he will then be able to go quickly to that section and be seated without difficulty.

ALL STUDENT sections will be reserved at the Friday night Boston university game, with the exceptions of stone sections 3 and 4.

Seniors and graduate students reserved their game seats yesterday and juniors are scheduled to pick up their tickets today in the trophy room of the men's gym.

Sophomores and freshmen will be able to obtain reserved seating tickets tomorrow and Thursday respectively. Any groups who wish block seating may arrange for them today and pick tickets up Friday.

Krohn stressed that two students who wish to attend the game together may pick up tickets on the day assigned to the higher class member. For example, if a senior dates a junior he should obtain reserved seats on Monday.

IF A GROUP of four want seats together, those people must wait until the day assigned to the member of the lowest class in the group.

Men's student government president Stanley Leff commented yesterday, "Although the plan hit several snags, it is well worth continuing."

AFROTC EXAMS

ROTC students enrolled in Air Science IIIa classes undergo the first of three special air force examinations at 7 p.m. tonight.

Further financial complications are now clouding the already dim future of the 1954 Onondagan.

Final student payments on the 1953 ON must be made before any preparation can be made for this year's book.

CHARLENE VELON, ON business manager, disclosed yesterday that those students who hold four-dollar subscriptions for last year's book must pay the remaining four dollars before the editors can begin any plans for the '54 book.

The 1953 ON will arrive on campus around Nov. 7, according to late word from the publishers. All books have been sold, but students holding the half-paid subscriptions must complete payment before they will be entitled to heir copies. will be entitled to their copies.

Money may be turned in at the Onondagan office in Yates castle from 2 to 5 p.m. any day this week The four dollars may also be re-returned to Miss Velon at the Pi Beta Phi house, 210 Walnut pl.

Final tabulations of the poll of seniors taken at registration was inconclusive. Although 1,300 seniors registered for courses, only 550 filled out the questionnaire.

MISS VELON indicated that the response of those answering was more than 97 per cent in support of a yearbook. However, the discrepancy between the number of seniors registering and those filling out the questionnaire too was large to permit any valid conclusions.

Plans are now underway to poll those seniors who may have forgotten to sign the form at registration. The possibility of polling underclassmen as to their support of the yearbook is also being discussed.

ON editors are now conferring on alternative methods of financing publication of the yearbook. However, these plans cannot be carried out until the money has been collected for the 1953 book.

Delivery of last year's ON has been postponed until November because of an earlier delay in meeting publication deadlines. The publisher then had to fulfill other commitments before being able to resume work on the Onondagan.

The present status of the yearbook was revealed last week when the Administration disclosed that seniors would no longer be required to purchase the yearbook. ON editors could not begin plans for the '54 edition, therefore, until they had some way to measure the number of voluntary subscriptions that might be collected.

Women's Pool Opens Tomorrow

First Recreational Swim Friday

The swimming pool in the new Women's Building will be opened to students for the first time tomorrow night as co-eds attending the WAA picnic initiate the swimming facilities following the meeting.

Friday will mark the opening of the pool to all women on campus with the first recreational dip scheduled for 4:30 to 5:30 p.m.

THE POOL schedule, to be put into effect next week, will permit general student use of the pool on Mondays and Tuesdays from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. with the only evening dip on Wednesday from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock. Additional recreational opportunities have been planned and will go into effect as soon as the recently ordered regulation swim suits arrive.

WAA students who will use the pool tomorrow night must provide only their own suit, cap and towel. However, all other students who plan to swim must also provide their own suit and cap along with admission cards until the University swim suits arrive. The regulation cotton swim suits which will be used later in the semester will be available for use after October 15.

After arrival of University suits, only they will be allowed in the pool and one will be furnished to any woman holding a regular or special privilege card. The cotton suits will be mandatory as the pool filter facilities can handle a larger number of cotton clad swimmers than those in lastex or wool suits, thus opening the swimming program to more students during each plunge or class period.

The number of students using the pool during the first few weeks will be limited due to individual suit materials, however limitations will be high and are not expected to inconvenience swimming groups.

REGULAR OR special privilege cards will also be required of all women using pool and other recreational facilities of the new building.

Regular cards at $5.00 each

Orange Key Names Bolden as President

Also chosen were Stuart Parker, vice-president; Kevin Wilson, secretary, and Lowell Toenniessen, treasurer.

Kevin Wilson and Oliver Richards were named co-chairmen of the committee to welcome members of visiting teams to the Hill.

The annual Orange Key banquet honoring new members will be held at 6:30 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 11 at Tubbert's.

Orange Key members will meet at 10 p.m. Sunday at the Phi Gamma Delta house to map plans for the year.

Haven Freshman Helps Nab Man

A Rochester man posing as a model agency representative was recently apprehended here because of the quick thinking of an 18-year-old Syracuse coed.

Sol Brodie of Rochester approached the girl on University pl. and told her he was looking for models for a TV show. She was apparently unimpressed by the line, for when he returned to her dorm, Haven hall, asking to see her, she called the University Police.

The University police notified the Syracuse police, and Patrolman Giacomo Birardi arrested Brodie on charges of disorderly conduct.

Oct. 31 Selected For Chest Event

The annual Campus Chest Carnival has been set for Saturday, Oct. 31, according to Campus Chest co-chairmen JoAnn Swalm and Stuart Parker. The Carnival, for years a campus highlight, will once again raise funds to aid Campus Chest week.

The site for this year's affair has not yet been chosen. It has formerly been held on the Oval.

LETTERS WITH applications for booths will soon be sent to all living centers.

A meeting of the Campus Chest committee will be held at 7:15 p. m. Thursday in Room 306 of the Women's building.

The following appointments have been made: Executive secretary, Carol Terpening; treasurer, Jon Bjornson; publicity, Millie Auerbach and Bob Lefko; brochures, Tess Oesterreicher and Phyllis Lavine; promotions, Diane Hirchhorn and Stu Smith; speakers bureau, Jane Arnold and Bernard Bregman.

In charge of special events are Hal Steinberg and Inga Loeb, Carnival; Bob McAllister and Margo Baum, Feather day; and Jean Jackson, Syracuse-in-Asia representative.

Also solicitations: fraternity division, Jack Hennessey and Howie Osofsky; sorority division, Betsy Wright and Marilyn Murtha; independent men's division, Chet Gino; independent women's division, Joan Brownell and Marilyn Day; city division, Diane Johnson; faculty gifts, Ann McKaig and Artie Koeppel; and special gifts, Carole Krupkin and Rosemary sonen in his first varsity encounter Ferris.

LATE REGISTRATION

Tomorrow at 5 p.m. is the deadline for late registration, Registrar Keith Kennedy has announced. A fee of $25 is charged for late enrollment.

Registration Rat Race

CRAZY, MIXED-UP college kids became slightly crazier and ever so slightly more mixed up last week in the twice-yearly registration. The process went quite smoothly this fall and except for a long delay in ID photos, long lines were things of the past.

Spirit in the flesh?

One might say that the following comment was a challenge.

Saturday night we had a sports contest that ran rather well for the followers of Syracuse athletics. It was the first game for the frosh . . . everybody enjoyed it one must admit, (excluding the obvious.) The point is that when it came time to spontaneously give vent with a bellow we all just cut loose in fine fettle.

But when the time came to organize some whooping and hollering when the playing was somewhat dull, it just didn't whoop. We all know from the days in dear old High that organized rah, rah is a tough thing to negotiate when nobody is performing gyrotechnics on the field.

Well, you have picked up the theme by now. Now to try some constructive comment without getting preachy.

¶ Cheers—Syracusans have agreed that the Orange has collected some poor cheers over the years. There are some good ones too, but the current has been toward something new. Last Saturday night we got them. As good as they may or may not have been, their presentation was inadequate. Notice we point out that the cheers were not necessarily bad, but they did not bounce when they hit the other side of the stadium. We know, we were there.

It is true that the cheering squad has not had much time to practice. But there is that inherent quality that must go with a cheer, a bounce, that was not present when the new screams of athletic adulation came out. The element needed is precision . . .at both end of that looong cheering squad line.

¶ Placard Cheering—The placards were nice to sit on, we must admit. They take that cement chill out of you. It is a shame that we all cannot have one to fight that concrete grip, but the University did not sink funds into placards for such comforts.

We had two cheers Saturday, both in the second quarter as we recall. The S.U. one was ragged and the FIGHT slogan slunk off down ragged aisles of orange and white. The second one went up just as a timeout ended; we were sitting on the other side and we judge that the chief cause for the disintegration of the FIGHT display was that people were more interested in the mayhem on the field.

The suggestion here is that the placards flash up at the beginning of nearly every time-out and that a booming male voice get on that microphone. We all coerce more easily at an authoritarian ring. Also for future generations it is to be noted that white is a poor background for orange.

¶ Band—First off let's get in the word that the band sounded really fine . . . a credit to the players and leaders who whupped 'em into shape so fast. We merely trust that the ragged marching lines have learned their lesson and will pay their debt to society by going straight.

¶ Reserve Seating—Well, at least we couldn't find any fistfights. There were a few claimjumpers but most of the apprehended ones shuffled off. It ran difficult for some who wanted to sit with buddies.

And the ridiculous pile-up at the student entrance shortly before game time was obviously caused by the complacent knowledge that the seat stolidly awaited them. Another gate is needed; the opening of the gate which pours into section B would inconvenience no one. More ushers are needed to keep the furtive ones out of the reserve sections.

This writer is struck with the simplicity of merely having reserved sections for seniors, juniors etc. respectively instead of specific seats. That sort of simplicity seems to frighten people.

By the way, we are going to print those new cheers later on; that "ragmop" one is simple.

What's to have been said, has been said, so we will drop the discussion for now . . . mull things over and we will be listening and watching Friday night.

Oh, yes, speaking of spirit . . . isn't Miss Burg a gem?

Asleep at switch? ON, off

The fate of the ON is still undetermined.

The poll of senior support at registration proved inconclusive since less than half of the members of the class of '54 took the necessary one minute to fill out the questionnaire.

Besides being faced with the problem of collecting a sufficient number of voluntary subscriptions, ON editors must also collect all money outstanding for the 1953 ON before any plans can be put into effect for this year's book.

Once more students are being puto a test. If a 1954 yearbook is to materialize, those sophomores, juniors and seniors still owing four dollars on last year's ON must pay the remaining fee.

Meanwhile, ON editors are discussing ways to poll the remainder of the seniors and the underclassmen on whether they would support a yearbook. They are also discussing alternative plans of financing the book.

Until these programs are announced, students can do two things:

1. pay the remaining four dollars on last year's ON, and
2. start saving money to subscribe for a '54 yearbook.

"Notice how much friendlier the women seem after so many guys were drafted over the summer?"

? on Communist Party Conviction by Regents

By HUGH O. MUIR

Editorial Director

Fear has cast the die.

Last Thursday the Board of Regents of New York state announced their verdict after a six months trial of the Communist party on the charge of being a subversive organization. "Guilty."

The Feinberg law, under which the Communist party was convicted, passed the New York legislature in 1949. It stated that no member of a subversive organization should be allowed to teach in New York schools. The Board of Regents was then given the task of deciding which organizations were "subversive" as defined by the law.

The Feinberg law was attacked as an invasion of fundamental constitutional rights and a denial of academic freedom.

This challenge was carried to the U. S. Supreme court. In March 3, 1952, the law was declared constitutional. The following December, the Regents began their hearings.

As a creature of the New York legislature, the Regents verdict was practically foreordained. It had been carefully pointed out in the Feinberg law that the Communist party was a "subversive group" from whose influence the school children of the state must be protected.

The Board of Regents is appointed by the legislature and, according to the State constitution, is "subject to legislative control." The Regents appointed their own special counsel so that in effect, the Regents became judge, prosecutor and jury. The guilty verdict did not take this writer by surprise.

At the final hearing last June 25 in Albany, the Communist party, aside from the usual emotings trademarked of such hearings, pointed out that any evidence against the party must be culled from party actions before 1949, the date of the passage of the Feinberg law, or the law would become ex post facto. This was ignored by the Regents.

This writer covered the hearings for a national wire service and noted the relative effectiveness of the two closing briefs. It was a battle over definition of terms. There was the phrase "the revolutionary right to overthrow" the existing form of government. Counsel for the Regents made this the basis for Marxism-Leninism upon which the Communist party stood.

That particular quotation came from Lincoln which in turn was a paraphrase of the U. S. Constitution.

Unfortunately, the Regents convicted the Communist party on its own (the Regents') definition of terms. Actual subversive ACTIONS of the Party were never presented. This was due, primarily, to the fact that no such action existed prior to 1949, (and actually could not be found in any form until the 30's.)

All of this goes rather hard on the U. S. policy of being fair to all before the law. The appeal of last Thursday's verdict is now on its way to the Supreme court; it seems but a matter of time before long it gets there. The Court will then have to take a national stand on whether or not the Communist party is subversive. This is something that it has been trying to avoid. To date, only individuals have been convicted for "subversive" activities.

The argument presented by this writer is not that the Communist party is not subversive, neither are we saying that the Reds should be banished. This is an attempt to point out that an approach clear of bias would see some weight in the Communist brief.

But fear has collapsed our platform of perspective.

The dangerous move of driving the Communist party underground gained momentum last Thursday.

IT'S 'BORN YESTERDAY' AT ASTOR

The local legitimate theater scene, which has been somewhat on the sparce side during the past few years, will receive a decided boost this evening at 8:30 p.m. when the Astor theater throws open its doors for the grand premier of a 30-week season of stage productions.

The downtown Syracuse theater, one of the best equipped in the country, will swing into the new venture with the rowdy comedy favorite "Born Yesterday."

Vicki Cummings, Jay Jostyn (Mr. D.A. of the radio family) and John Dall will star supported by a cast which includes Syracuse alumnus Kenneth Bowles. Bowles is familiar to campus drama fans with his recent role in the Boar's Head production of "The Tempest."

The Astor housed last Spring's successful production of "White Bucks and Tales", presented by Syracuse university in co-operation with the Boar's Head Dramatic Society and the Class of 1953.

The local theater managers hope to lure area play-goers with the promise of cut-rate prices and plenty of available seats for each performance. At this point, the 30-week schedule will proceed on a trial basis.

In sight for the 1953 segment of the Astor line-up are: Oct. 6-11, "The Man Who Came To Dinner" with Edward Everett Horton and Vicki Cummings; Oct. 13-25, "The Happy Time" with Jay Jostyn; Oct. 27-Nov. 3, "Red Letter Day" starring Ann Harding; Nov. 10-22, "Home at Seven" with Paul Muni; Nov. 24-Dec. 6, "Elmer the Great" starring Joe E. Brown; and Dec. 8-20, "Dead Pigeon" with Joan Lorring.

Disk Stars Go 'Big Time'

Vaughn, Nat Head Show

By DICK CASE

The thrill is gone. It disappeared in a vapor of clinking cash registers in the auditoriums and arenas across the country. Briefly, the touring "record shows" have finally succumbed to commercialism and have slipped to a form something short of a Broadway extravaganza.

The 1953 chapter of the "Biggest show" series had its world premiere in Syracuse last Friday evening amid the generous screams of a few thousand eager fans in the downtown Memorial auditorium. For a brief moment after the auditorium's curtain parted on the highly-publicized record star package, it appeared that this show might shape itself into fast-moving showcase of music.

"The Biggest Show of '53" boasted the talents of Ralph Marterie's dance band, Illinois Jacquet's combo and the vocalizing of Nat Cole and Sarah Vaughn. The need was also felt to include some vaudeville acts which provided a happy time between the music but were entirely unnecessary in a show such as this.

In the beginning, it was apparent that the booking agents had a good idea in the big shows. This fine format has, however, now shed its former skin and has emerged a very stiff, swift, staggering production aimed directly at the pocketbooks of Americans who spend their free hours listening to records.

Ralph Marterie's band, which recently completed a swing through 75 campuses, is perhaps best known for its recordings; although the Syracuse performance indicated that the group could be a dancing organization. Ralph's sometimes sweet, sometimes swinging arrangements, while fine from the first ten rows, just don't find much warmth in the great expanse of an auditorium. Hampered by tricky arrangements to be mastered at the last minute, the Martiere crew lacked the oomph to stop the show. This is, however, a band to watch.

The King, Nat Cole, flips through his rehearsal sheet to give Daily Orange Reporter Dick Case an idea of what to expect in the disk-star studded show that sounded from the War Memorial stage last Friday night.

Perennialy sassy, always entertaining, Sarah Vaughn pleased local fans with a line-up of new, old, borrowed and blues renditions of her record hits. At times, Sarah waged a rugged battle with the band reminding us once again that her intimate style does not belong in an arena.

The fine, swinging combo headed by sax artist Illinois Jacquet rocked the Memorial for a few happy moments and slipped off amidst a tremendous ovation from appreciative Syracuse jazz fans. Jacquet's colorful horn was one of a few enjoyable phases of the music package.

As usual, too much cannot be said for Nat Cole. He is truly the "King" and one of the finest show-stoppers in the business. He "wowed 'em."

It's Priceless!

Take a guess at the score and it could be YOU!

You can Win a Swell Prize
In Wells & Coverly's Weekly

Football Score Contest

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS

A. The contest will run each week throughout the 1953 Syracuse football season.

B. Each week is a new contest . . . to see who can come closest to guessing the score of Syracuse and their opponent for that week.

C. Write your guess of the SCORE and the quarters in which they will be made . . . together with your name and address on a slip of paper and deposit it in the special box that is in the Wells & Coverly Shoe Shop on the Street Floor. (One entry only, please)

D. Entries must be placed in the box before the store closes at 5:30 p.m. on the Friday immediately preceding the game.

E. The winner will be the person whose guess comes closest to the actual score of the game and the quarters in which the score was made. In the event of ties duplicate prizes will be awarded.

F. The winner will be announced weekly in the Daily Orange on the Tuesday following the game.

This is how the Syracuse-Temple game would have been perfctly guessed!

Watch Flagpoles, WAER Suggests

"Watch those flagpoles!" is the word for today.

According to WAER Program Director Nancy Hoehle, the campus radio station is planning a big surprise due in about two weeks. Till then, keep your eye on the flagpoles around the campus, for "IT" may appear any time.

Syracuse Speaks

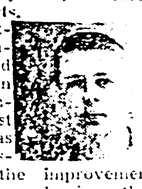
Editor's note: Pete Preston, an enterprising photographer, herewith discloses the results of interviews with several members of the Class of 1957. Preston concerned the talks with first impressions of Syracuse university. This is the first in a series of spot campus interviews.)

By PETE PRESTON

Fred Ermlich, Skytop M-5, Gilboa, N. Y., liberal arts.

I found everything pretty much as I expected it to be on the campus. However, I don't particularly like taking the after-dinner bus back to Skytop with its terrific crowds. Nevertheless, I like the wider walks here, and I certainly can't ignore the large group of girls at Syracuse.

Paul Bell, Skytop M-6, Winthrop, N. Y., liberal arts.



I am quite satisfied with Syracuse so far and find it quite an attractive campus. I saw it last year when I was up here and especially like the improvements that have been made since then. I think this is a very progressive college.

Barbara Cain, Haft cottage, Ellenville, N. Y., liberal arts.

Syracuse is very friendly for such a large university. There are many fine views from the campus and everything seems to be quite progressive with all the construction underway. As far as my activities are concerned up to now, I didn't think registration was too bad, and the orientation was exceptionally well planned, which, I guess almost all the freshmen enjoyed.

Marjorie Harrison, Sims 5, Bronx, N. Y., liberal arts.

This university is quite impressive on first sight and appears to be quite friendly, although it is somewhat countrified compared to New York city. The Oval is just lovely, even with the construction going on. The orientation was also a lot of fun, though hectic.

I love Syracuse university. It's a very friendly campus and there are numerous activities going on all the time. There are even good shopping facilities right here near the University. The pep rally was wonderful and I am eagerly looking forward to classes.

will be issued to students registered for class in the department while $3.00 special privilege cards will be available to graduate students, staff and faculty women and any other students not registered in the department. Students may secure regular cards tomorrow or Thursday in class while special cards may be obtained in Room 202 of the Women's building on any week day beginning tomorrow between 9 a.m. and noon and from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Both regular and special cards will include use of a small storage locker, suit or uniform for any activity in which the holder is participating, hair washing and drying, shower and dressing room facilities.

COTTON SWIMMING suits which will be issued later in the term to regular and special card holders will be Jantzen styled, one piece and colored by size. Suit colors include aqua, red, navy, wine or black.

Special regulations for swimmers along with priority rules for special use of the pool will be announced later in the week.

Drummond Heads Herald Tribune's Washington Staff

J. Roscoe Drummond, Syracuse University graduate and editor-in-chief of The Daily Orange in 1924, joined the staff of the New York Herald Tribune yesterday as chief of the Washington bureau, Whitelaw Reid, editor and publisher, has announced.

Drummond will supervise the New York paper's Washington coverage and will write a nationally-syndicated column of news and comment four times a week.

Washington bureau chief for The Christian Science Monitor since 1940, he succeeds Bert Andrews, who died in Denver Aug. 21.

Drummond joined the Christian Science Monitor in 1924 as a reporter and has served as European editorial manager, chief editorial writer and executive editor. From June, 1949 until August, 1951, he was on leave of absence from the newspaper, serving as European director of information for the Economic Cooperation Administration.

He was awarded the George Arents medal in 1946 by Syracuse University "for distinguished service and exceptional excellence in journalism."

The new bureau chief returned to Syracuse last April to speak at the 50th anniversary dinner of The Daily Orange.

WAA Schedules Picnic Tomorrow

A survey of the coed sport scene will highlight the annual women's athletic association picnic held from 4:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. tomorrow at the Women's building.

The annual party will acquaint frosh and transfer students with Hill athletic activities. Coeds will have the opportunity to participate in basketball, volleyball, softball and tennis. WAA officials will present entertainment and box lunches will be provided.

Tickets are available at activities signups until 5 p.m. today in the women's building. Tickets are priced at 75 cents to cover box lunch costs.

1,093 Coeds Enroll For Physical Ed

A record 1,093 women registered for physical education instruction courses during the first three day sign-up period.

The number is a marked increase over previous years and shows the highest percentage of the entire coed enrollment in the school's history participating in the program.

Hill Gridders Prepare for Terriers; Backs Wetzel, Vergara Sidelined

The Piety Hill football team yesterday started intensified practice in preparation for the invasion of Archbold Stadium on Friday night by Buff Donelli and his Boston University Terriers.

Though pleased with Saturday night's 42-0 romp over undermanned Temple, the Syracuse coaching staff expects stiff competition from the Terriers and forsees a close, hard-fought game.

IT WAS DISCLOSED yesterday that fullback Bill Wetzel, injured while making a tackle in the opening minutes of the Temple game, has a sprained ankle and will not be able to play against BU. Coupled with the pre-season shoulder injury of Vinnie Vergara, another fullback, who will be unavailable against the Beantowners, the loss of Wetzel leaves the Orange weak in the line-bucking post.

Soph Don Laaksonen filled in admirably for Wetzel in the Owl encounter, and will undoubtedly start on Friday night. Understudying him will be Dick Darr, the only other fullback on the Orange squad without an injury. Quarterback Ed Albright will attempt to learn the fullback position in practice this week, giving the Orange three sophs in this spot.

Another sophomore who showed excellent potential in the Temple game was halfback Lyle Carlson who scored two touchdowns. He registered the first Orange touchdown of the infant season by slicing over guard from the one-yard line at the beginning of the second quarter and added his second 6-pointer of the evening by catching a 14-yard Pat Stark pass in the fourth quarter.

The Pietymen showed their superiority early in the game as they scored a safety after Temple had handled the ball only three times. The Orange received the opening kickoff and, unable to gain momentarily, punted to the Owls. On their first two offensive plays, the Owls were penalized and pushed back toward their own goal. The pass from center on the next play was woefully high and sailed beyond the end zone for an automatic safety and 2-0 Syracuse lead.

Carlson scored his first touchdown at the beginning of the second quarter after Dino Hadjis had raced 15 yards on an end-around deep into Temple territory. A high pass from center forced the ballholder, Pat Stark, to pass for the extra-point. Neil Brenneman snatched the pigskin in the end zone for the point.

With both Stark and Bruce Yancey passing beautifully, the Orange really opened up in the second half. End Ray Perkins caught an over-the-shoulder pass on his fingertips and outlegged the Temple safetyman to the end zone to account for the third Syracuse TD. Tackle Jim George converted the extra point.

The Orange started to move up the field at leisure against the tired Owls during the final quarter. Halfback Art Troilo, who excelled in punting all night, dove across the goal for a touchdown, but George's placement was blocked and the score stood 22-0.

Perkins spearheaded the next tally as he passed on an end around to Laaksonen for 22 yards. Quarterback Yancey carried the ball across on a beautifully executed 17-yard bootleg play in which not a hand was laid on him.

Shortly afterward Neil Brenneman, a demon on defense all night, recovered an Owl fumble on the 14-yard line and Stark passed to Carlson for the TD. A Stark-to-Hadjis pass netted the extra point. In the final minute of play, Syracuse gained possession of the ball on the Owls' two and Mickey Rich legged it over for the final touchdown. Dick Darr converted the extra point to make the final score 42-0.

GRID BITS! Coach Ben Schwartzwalder used 42 men in the Temple game, one more than he used in any game last year when the fad was two-platoon football . . . This was also a higher score than registered by the Orange last year in any game . . . The Orange netted 202 yards on the ground and 214 yards in the air as compared to 83 yards passing for Temple and -13 yards on the ground for the Owls . . . This speaks for the efficiency of the Orange line . . . This was the third straight year that Temple has not scored on Syracuse . . . The Eastern Intercollegiate Football Association yesterday named Bob Fleck as one of the East's unsung heroes of the past week's action.

Piety Foes Fail In Grid Contests

A sextet of Bill Orange's 1953 grid opponents saw action Saturday with only Cornell and Holy Cross emerging victorious in the first big weekend of platoon-less football. Illinois, mid-season Big Ten foe, rallied in the final period to tie Nebraska, 21-21.

Cornell's fine sophomores took advantage of several Colgate mistakes to whip the Raiders, 27-7, at Ithaca in the day's only meeting of Syracuse opponents. Soph backs Bill DeGraff, Dick Meade and Dan Begin combined with veteran Guy Bedrossian to over-run the Maroon.

Holy Cross rolled over Dartmouth's Big Green, 28-6, in the weekend's nationally televised contest as end Tom Carroll hauled in two touchdown aerials. The victory was costly for the Crusaders, however, as they lost their finest back, Gerry O'Leary, for the season.

Villanova and Penn State dropped intersectional tilts, the Wildcats succumbing to Texas, 41-12, while Wisconsin whitewashed the Lions, 20-0.

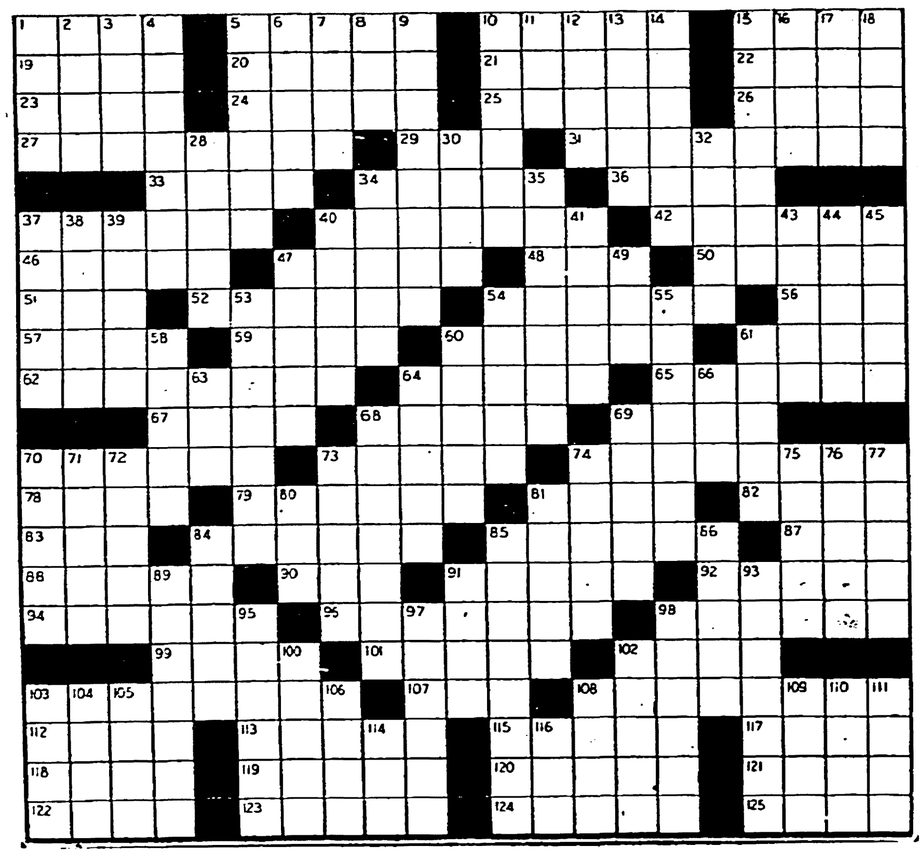
GOOD LUCK?



Along the Sidelines

By KEN LENT, DAILY ORANGE SPORTS EDITOR

It has been Bernie who has been doing yoeman service on behalf of the annual Intercollegiate Regatta since the spectacle has been in Syracuse. Tomorrow the SRA is meeting to discuss the Regatta's future in the Salt City. It has been no secret that while the best facilities for the race, housing of the crews, etc are available here the Regatta has lost money (over $5,000 this year) because of lack of attendance.

One of the solutions, still in the thought stage, which Bernie mentioned, concerns a plan where the World Series of Rowing might be held here for three years and then shifted to Seattle, Wash. every fourth year.

This idea would not only give the excellent Coast crews a chance to host the event, but would also avail the Eastern squads of a Western trip. If the plan goes through within the next two years, the same freshmen who heard Bernie speak yesterday could be in Seattle rowing one June.

Buff Donelli

In talking about Boston U. who opens its season against us this Friday night at Archbold, Arnie Burdick, the Orangemen's publicity drumbeater, came up with some interesting figures on Buff Donelli's team. In two practice scrimmages, the Terriers not only beat Yale and Harvard but also outran both teams in ground yardage by at least 3-1.

Passing was practically taboo with Terrier tossers only throwing 8 aerials in both tests. The Boston line is reported "vastly improved" over last year headed by Ray Cataloni who is the BU candidate for all-East guard.

When Sam Pino, the leading Beantowner ground gainer in 1950, was mentioned as returning from the Marines i time for the game, Orange coach Schwartzwalder winced, "It's like Wetzel telling me he had a broken leg knowing THAT guy's coming back".

The Terriers come in Thursday afternoon with a squad spoiling to revenge last year's 34-21 loss at the hands of the Orange. As Ben said, "If it's any team Donelli likes to beat, it's Syracuse."

BILL ORANGE SAYS: I wish I could have heard the band and cheerleaders up in the steel bleachers. The new idea of splitting the band into sections and sending them around the stands might help to pep up some lagging Orange spirit . . . . It certainly looked more than the reported 18,000 in the Stadium Saturday to me . . . . That new frosh drum majorette Alta Burg could really twirl. M-m-m, boy!

A smiling, rugged-looking alum who looked as if he could step into a shell immediately and row with the best of them spoke to some 60 frosh crew candidates yesterday. One who has loved rowing ever since he last stepped out of a shell in 1922, Bernie Dawson has continued his interest in crew as president of the Syracuse Rowing Association.

Syracuse Booters Scrimmage Today

By ALEX STRASSER
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Coach Andy Coccari put his varsity booters through another practice session yesterday in an attempt to iron out errors before today's scrimmage game against Hamilton on Hendricks field. Game time is 3:30 p. m.

This will be the Orange's second scrimmage game. Last Saturday, the Piety booters opened their practice games against the Sampson flyers.

FOR THE second straight year, returning veterans dominate the soccer team. Two of the returning booters, Sig Wirth and Bill Nelson, are all-Americans and figure to give the Orange a powerful one-two punch on the attack.

Coach Coccari, however, is still looking for more upperclassmen and freshmen. Men wishing to join the team should see Coccari at his office in the gym or during practice in the afternoon on Hendricks field.

All-American Sig Wirth, who played center-halfback most of the time last year, has been working out at the wing positions while Billy Nelson, another all-American, has seen action on both the outside left and outside right slots.

THE ORANGE'S main weakness of last season has come back to haunt them again this year. Coach Coccari finds himself without a goalie, unless he moves offensive star Gunnar Wirth to the goal position.

Wirth did see some goal duty last season, but his removal from the forward line weakened the attack. Orv Wambold, who held down the goalie position during the main part of the 1953 season, is another possibility for the starting goal slot.

The Orange will once again be strong at defense with Capt. Don Moller the stabilizing factor. Moller was one of the key men on last year's Orange squad which won five games, while only losing one.

Other returning veterans who have been figuring strongly in recent practice sessions are Duncan Robb, Chuck Mayhood, Nick Razos and Bud Gorman.

ROBB, WHO held down the outside left position on the 1953 squad, has worked well at this position this year. Mayhood and Razos are possible starters at the fullback positions.

Some other players on whom Coach Coccari is relying on are Halfback Don Schupe and Wingman Bill Ayres.

Schupe, who ran the 440 and did some hurdling for Track Coach Bob Grieve last year, has shown strong potentialities at the wing positions.

THE 1953 soccer season will officially open this Saturday as the Orange booters travel to Ithaca to meet Cornell. The Big Red booters are anxiously awaiting this chance to topple the Piety booters, who were among the top soccer teams in the East last year.

Following the Cornell game, Syracuse meets Cortland State on October 17, Sampson on the 24th and Union on October 31, all on the road.

Colgate is scheduled for November 6 while the final date for the Hobart game has not yet been set. Both games will be played on Hendricks field.

Sailing Recruits To Meet Tonight

All candidates for the freshman and varsity sailing teams should report to 203 HL at 7:30 tonight it was announced yesterday by team captain Jack Cummings. Practice sessions are scheduled to commence Friday afternoon on Lake Onondaga.

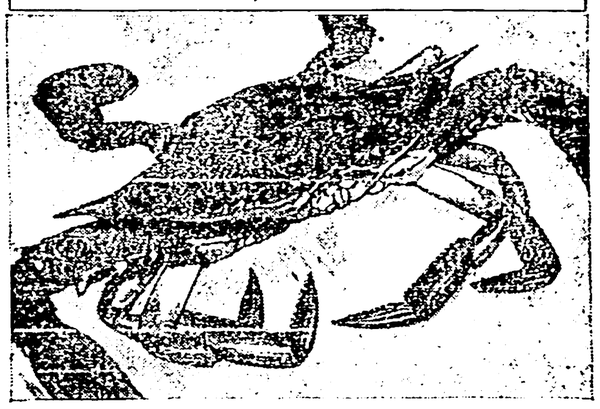
J. Paul Sheedy* Switched to Wildroot Cream-Oil Beclaws He Flunked The Finger-Nail Test



"Go jump in the lake," squalled Sheedy's mermaid with baited breath, "You look simply crabby with that messy hair. Better get your hooks into Wildroot Cream-Oil, America's favorite hair tonic. Keeps hair combed with no trace of greasiness. Removes loose, ugly dandruff. Relieves annoying dryness. Contains lanolin. Non-alcoholic. I shell never sea you again until you start using it." Paul crabbed 29¢ and bought Wildroot Cream-Oil. Now he's the crab-apple of her eye. So water you waiting for? Hurry and get a bottle or handy tube at any toilet goods counter. And nets time you visit your barber, ask for Wildroot Cream-Oil on your hair. Then you'll be the best catch on campus.

Alta Burg Twirls Way Into Hearts of Hill Fans

By POLLY REED

Lovely Alta Burg, Syracuse university's new drum majorette who twirled her fiery batons into the fan's hearts Saturday night, is glad to be back on the field performing. She wasn't nervous at all, she says, because she's been appearing with marching bands since the second grade.

"Of course, then I was sort of a mascott," she said with smile. But from the seventh grade until she graduated she was head drum majorette for her high school in Red Lion, Pa.

She had a bad moment when she picked up her gasoline-soaked fire batons. Through a mistake, the excess gas was not shaken off, and gasoline sprayed in her eyes and mouth, and over her new orange and blue uniform when she began to twirl.

The uniform was made especially for Alta and consists of orange velvet shorts and jacket, with a large blue Syracuse seal on the jacket. Two blue stripes on the sleeve, and a huge shako with ostrich plumes complete the outfit.

Alta has never been burned by fire batons, although her younger sister has a bad scar to remind her of the time she misjudged. If the batons are kept moving they don't get too hot, but if a majorette stops twirling or if she must stand with the batons, the hair on her arms may be singed.

A TWIST IN the old freshman gag of hiding hats and asking other frosh to tip theirs occurred when Alta and her roommate, Audrey Hedlund, walked from the stadium after the game. Alta had dressed, and was wearing her hat, when a call came to "tip it, frosh." They did so, then turned to face a group of laughing high schoolers!

"Syracuse certainly is a friendly place," asserts the blue-eyed miss. "I found everyone so nice and ready to help, especially the Goon Squad. And believe me, I tipped my lid plenty often, too!"

Alta, a member of the class of '57, is enrolled in the College of Liberal Arts, with a physical education major.

Lending Library Opens Tomorrow

The textbook lending library will be open from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. tomorrow in the third floor library of the women's building, according to Alice Camp, chairman.

More than 1,400 books are available and cover almost all subjects. They are available for borrowing by students by the semester.

The books are current textbooks which have been donated by students, faculty and the book mart.

Phi Kappa Tau Robbed of $90

Approximately $9 including $4 in bills and a wrist watch valued at 50 was stolen from the Phi Kappa Tau fraternity house Saturday night.

The burglar entered the second story study rooms of the house sometime between midnight Saturday and early Sunday morning according to city police.

Women Athletes Meet at Syracuse

Meeting in the Women's building Sunday, athletic association representatives of twelve central New York colleges outlined sports schedules for the year.

Following an address by Lucille Verhulst, Director of Physical Education, bidding was opened as representatives selected dates for their respective sports days.

Syracuse WAA plans to send teams to eight schools during the coming year and will sponsor three Hill sports days.

A tour of the women's building and refreshments completed the afternoon program.

Syracusan Plans Issue for October

The first issue of the Syracusan, will be on sale the third week in October. The campus humor magazine last year was ranked as one of the top five in the country. It also had one of the largest circulations.

All students who are interested in working on the editorial, business or art staffs of the magazine are asked to come to the Syracusan office in the Hellbox behind Yates castle or sign up at the activities booth in the Women's building.

Soprano Will Open Fall Concert Series

Miss Roberta Peters, one of the leading coloratura sopranos on the American opera scene, will open the 1953-54 Famous Artists concert series at the Lincoln Auditorium this Friday at 8:15 p.m.

Miss Peters sensational debut in the Metropolitan Opera had critics raving all over the nation. Subsequent triumphs in opera, television and radio established her as a bright new star in the operatic field.

She sang under Sir. Thomas Beecham at the London Royal Opera and recently starred with Ezio Pinza in the movie, "Tonight We Sing."

Student tickets for the concert are on sale at the University Book store for $1.50. Professor Murray Bernthal, Fine Arts professor, is again directing the series this year.

Britain to Offer Grad Scholarships

The British government will offer annually 12 scholarships for American graduate students. The awards will be known as the Marshall Scholarships.

Both men and women under 23 years of age are eligible for these awards. Students may use these scholarships at any university in the United Kingdom. The awards will be made for two years, but may be extended for a third year.

The value of a Marshall Scholarship will be $1,540 a year. Individual scholarships may be raised to $1,680 a year because the cost of living at British universities varies.

Persons interested in applying for scholarships must apply before Oct. 31, 1953. Further information is available from Earle W. Clifford, assistant dean of men.

'GREAT BOOKS' SERIES

The Syracuse Public Library will sponsor a series of discussions on great books, with the opening sessions slated this week at the library.

WAER Introduces Many New Shows

Friday Night Football Contests on Air

Several new programs will make their debut on WAER this fall, according to Nancy Hoehle, program director for the station.

The first week in October will bring the first program of several National Association of Education Broadcasters shows.

ON THE SPORTS schedule this year is the broadcasting of city high school football contests by the WAER sports staff.

The station is also making plans for a new American Theater series. "On Stage, America" is designed to interest the American theater through radio, according to Ed Rasch and Gil Katz, the program's producer and director respectively.

The series, which will begin in November, will consist of eight shows containing all aspects of the American theater. These include the evolution of the American theater, tracing of the play from author to opening nights, music in the theater, theater guilds and "The Theater Goes to War."

WAER also expects to carry a full schedule of the Crouse concerts on Sundays starting Oct. 4.

THE WSG Sunday night show has been expanded to include MSG and other campus organizations. This program will be heard Sunday nights from 10 to 10:15 p. m.

Also planned for this year are broadcasts of outstanding musical shows from the Rural Radio network. These will include the famed WQXR "Sunday Symphony."

The WAER studios, which are located behind the Main library, are open any time for visitors. The station is on the air from 2:58 to 10:15 p. m.

2,711 Students Join Hill Organizations During Sign-ups

WAA Signs 600 Girls; 250 Join Ski Club In New Building

By MARY VIVIAN
Daily Orange Associate Editor

Activity sign-ups yesterday in the women's building signed up 2,711 students for 51 activities representing 31 organizations, James F. Carr, chairman, announced last night.

This number went over last year's 2,624 mark, although a much larger crowd was expected because of the increased freshman class. However, many organizations on campus were not able to be contacted.

Women's athletic association signed up the most prospective members with 600 signatures on their list. The ski club came in second with more than 250 students signing up.

The outing club came out ahead financially by signing up 63 members at three dollars each. They also signed up 182 other prospective members. Financially, the Young Republicans club came out second by selling 50 cent subscriptions amounting to 70 dollars.

Boar's Head signed up 147 members while Campus Chest attracted 131 students. The art students association signed up 79 members by displaying sample art work and a mobile sign to illustrate their work.

The Young Republicans club came out highest on the political list with 112 signatures. The Young Democrats attracted 53 while Students for Democractic Action signed up 39 students.

The Onondagan signed up 57 members for editorial and business positions in spite of the present controversy regarding their fate. The Syracusan signed up 147 for their editorial and selling jobs.

Women's student government signed up 213 women for their secretarial and other staffs, including their student training program. Men's student government attracted 30 men in addition to selling student discount cards.

There were four sign-ups for the chess club and 31 for dance class auditions for instructors, and several requests for ping pong, although these organizations are not in existence as yet. There also were requests for the Spanish club and King's Bench.

Chapel Sign-ups Continue Today

Sign-ups for Chapel activities and the Chapel training program will continue from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. today in front of the Chapel.

The training course, replacing Chapel's second cabinet, is a six week course giving a comprehensive coverage of the Chapel program and its relation to the university.

The program will be divided into two groups meeting at 4:15 p.m. and 7:15 p.m. Tuesdays. Dean Charles C. Noble will open the first meeting on October 6, speaking on the philosophy of the Chapel. His talk will be followed by a short social gathering.

Skeptics Corner, the discussion group meeting at Dean Noble's home, recorded the most enrollees at the end of yesterday's sign-ups. In case of rain the booths will be moved to the Colonial room.

Interviews Slated For Exec Council

Interviews for applicants to the senior class executive council will be held from 7:30-9:30 p.m. today at the Delta Gamma house.

John Beach, class president, said yesterday that although another series of interviews will be scheduled, it is preferable that all applicants attend tonight's sessions.

There will be one more interview series and appointments will be announced sometime next week, Beach said.

A senior assembly will be organized and work started on a senior show.

Registration Aftermath - Classes

LOOK AT THOSE crazy mixed-up kids! The semester's in full swing and the Hill's students have more or less located the buildings where their classes are held. The major buildings are now easily recognized by the Class of '57, but the pre-fabs still give the frosh trouble. If you're assigned to pre-fab 32, kiddies, bring a pencil—that's the Hellbox, the DO's home—and you're hired.

Student Cars Require Hill Parking Permits

By JACK REILLY

Parking registration for all student and faculty parking at the University is still underway and all who have cars and are using University parking areas, must register their cars.

Any car parked on University property must have a properly issued sticker which must be firmly placed on the inside of the left-hand window of the automobile. These new stickers can be issued to all students, faculty members, and employees of the University, and can be obtained from F. B. Pettengill, 907 S. Crouse ave.

BECAUSE OF the limited space, campus parking with special stickers is limited to the administrative staff, deans, directors, departmental chairmen, 25-year men, and special cases to be approved by the parking committee.

New parking areas both on and off campus have been organized and the area on Mt. Olympus is now available for student parking. The following parking areas have been planned for this year:

On-campus-parking is limited to special stickers and guest parking only. Car cards for guests and heavy deliveries will be issued by the gateman and must be returned to him. Parking after 11 p.m. can be obtained by special permission only.

Mt. Olympus is for student parking only, the rear of 123 College pl. for faculty only, and Hendricks Field for students, faculty and employees.

THE REAR of the psychology building is for special permits only, while both Waverly ave. on the north side and the property adjacent to St. Thomas More House are for students, faculty, and employees.

The rear of the Lowe building is only for the school of art faculty, the rear of the special education building is for special education parking only, and the rear of the bookstore is for buildings and grounds employees.

Penalties for infractions of these parking rules for students are $1 for the first offense, $3 for the 2nd offense, $5 the 3rd offense and reporting to Dean of Men's office, and suspension of all parking privileges and disciplinary action by the student court after the 4th offense.

Education Program Granted Charter

The Empire FM School of the Air has been granted an absolute charter to replace its provisional charter by the New York state Board of Regents.

The operation since 1947, the network broadcasts programs to elementary and junior high schools over a 20-station network. WSYR-FM originates 15-minute shows for the network Mondays and Fridays through the facilities of the University Radio center.

NEW DORMITORIES

Space for 629 male students will be available when Watson and Marion halls, new dormitories, open next year.

Positions Available For Chest Carnival

Harold Steinberg and Inga Loeb, co-chairmen of the annual Campus Chest carnival have announced that positions are now open for committee chairmanships for the affair. Applications for these chairmanships should be turned in to Steinberg at Phi Epsilon Pi or Miss Loeb at Sigma Delta Tau by Sunday.

Applications should include name, address, telephone number, activities, ideas and committee preference. The various committee openings are booths, tickets, poster publicity, cleanup, trophies and decorations.

The annual carnival is scheduled for Oct. 31 on the old Oval with Chancellor Tolley giving the opening address. As usual, all fraternities, sororities, living centers and other organizations will provide booths for entertainment throughout the day.

Proceeds from the carnival will again go toward the Campus Chest week drive which is the only fund-raising campaign held on campus. Chairman for the overall drive are JoAnn Swalm and Stuart Parker.

An overall meeting of the Campus Chest committee chairman will be held Thursday at 7:15 in Room 306 of the Women's building.

Grid Block Seats Available Friday

Block seating for this week's Boston university football game will be available Friday at the trophy room of the men's gym for those groups who wish to sit together.

Sophomores are scheduled to pick up reserved seat tickets today and freshmen may obtain their seats tomorrow. All students who wish reserved seats should pick them up at a special booth across from the ticket window in the trophy room.

A maximum of four tickets will be given to each person who wishes them. However, the seats will be assigned according to the member of the group in the lowest class.

One person may obtain two tickets on the day appointed for the higher class member.

MSG VISIT PLANNED

Members of men's student government will visit freshmen dorms at Skytop Sunday night to explain the MSG training program, Sanford Patel, executive commissioner announced yesterday.

Clifford Announes Fulbright Deadline

Grant Applications Due October 15

Application for Fullbright grants for graduate study are now being accepted, Earle W. Clifford, assistant dean of men, announced yesterday.

Deadline for applications is October 15. This permits the Fullbright committee of the University to process applications before forwarding them to the national committee by the October 31 national deadline.

The grants are awarded to United States citizens for study in the following nations:

Australia, Austria, Belgium, Luxembourg, Burma, Ceylon, Denmark, Egypt, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, India, Iraq, Italy, Japan, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Pakistan, Philippines, Sweden, Thailand, Union of South Africa and the United Kingdom.

Dean Clifford told The Daily Orange yesterday that a larger number of applicants is expected this year than last year, when about 45 students applied.

Also being offered this year are grants under the Buenos Aires convention for graduate study in 16 South and Central American countries.

Further information and application forms are available in the office of the dean of men.

ON TOUR

Dr. Margaret Shetland, director of the department of public health nursing at State University College of Medicine, is on a 10-week tour of South America. Her trip is sponsored by the World Health Organization.

Completion of Senior Poll Needed to Save Yearbook

Seniors who did not cast their ballot at registration on the question of supporting a 1954 Onondagan will be given a second chance.

A ballot will be found on page three of today's Daily Orange. All underclassmen who would like to purchase a '54 ON as well as those seniors who have not already been polled are urged to fill out the ballot.

BALLOT BOXES may be found in Shaw dorm, the library, Maxwell, HL, the Corner Store and the University Book Store.

Thomas Beckett, yearbook editor, disclosed yesterday this poll was necessary in order to obtain the views of the 700 seniors who did not vote during registration.

While the response from those seniors voting was overwhelmingly in favor of the book, more than half of the class did not cast ballots.

Beckett emphasized that even if a senior does not want to support the book, he should clip the ballot indicating his opinion so that an accurate tally of the seniors may be made.

THE EDITOR also stressed that the ballot was not a subscription blank. Signing the ballot with a "yes" vote means only that the student will support the ON if and when it is published.

If enough votes are turned in to guarantee the necessary minimum for printing, ON workers will then contact those students to obtain the subscriptions.

The possibility of the elimination of the 70-year-old book became known last week when the administration revealed that seniors would not be required to purchase a yearbook. Senior purchases had amounted to three-fourths of those books published.

Since a minimum number was not guaranteed, ON editors decided to poll seniors at registration on voluntary subscriptions. Only 550 out of 1,300 seniors filled out the form. The Daily Orange ballot to poll the remainder of the seniors and also underclassmen was then decided.

FURTHER PROBLEMS arose Monday when Charlene Velon, business manager, announced that money outstanding on the 1953 ON should be paid before plans for the '54 book can begin.

ON offices, in the Castle, will be open from 2 to 5 p.m. the remainder of the week.

Book Mart Breaks Own Selling Record

After two days of selling used textbooks, the student co-operative book mart broke its own record by registering $4,600 in two days of sales.

The book mart took in $1,100 yesterday to complement the $3,500 taken in on Monday. This sum went over the $4,500 worth of books sold last semester during the mart's four days of sales, according to Jean Spencer, book mart president.

Approximately 380 books were sold to students yesterday which makes up a total of 1,280 books sold in the two days of business.

The book mart will continue its sales today and tomorrow. The books which are sold are those which the students take in for reselling. Each student sets his own price on his books and nothing is sold over or under that price.

Students are urged to bring in books which they still wish to sell, particularly in those courses which have a large enrollment, such as English 1a, zoology, botany, citizenship and general education.

Sales of the used textbooks will continue today and tomorrow. Unsold textbook and money will be given out tomorrow and Friday and until noon Saturday.

Money not claimed by the deadline at noon Saturday must wait until next semester to bring in their stubs. Books not claimed by then will be forfeited to the textbook lending library.

Any profits made from the sales are used towards a scholarship fund. Those students who have stubs from last semester may bring them in all day Friday or until Saturday noon.

LONG LINES

Students desiring to pay fees at the cashier's offices in building 24 on University pl. faced long lines winding up the street yesterday afternoon.

Nats to Play Host To Local Children

City Benevolent Unit Arranges Feat

Charles (Bud) Mitchell, public relations director of the Benevolent Unit of Syracuse, has announced that the organization has arranged for 35 members of the Percy Hughues school to attend the Oct. 25 Syracuse Nats basketball game.

Mitchell said that the tickets have been made available through the courtesy of the Nats, and that the trip is being arranged through the assistance of the Red Cross and the Volunteer center.

Mrs. Dottie (Grover) Gabor is president of the organization. The group has a long record of giving assistance and recreation to the city's handicapped children.

Mitchell said that the children were shown the Orange bowl movies through the courtesy of Theodore Daly of the athletics department here on the Hill. Mitchell has worked with many celebrities for the organization through the cooperation of the Fayetteville theater.

Last year, Mrs. Gabor helped Mitchell and the others in the organization in presenting the annual "big show" for the local children.

The organization also sponsors picnics and baseball games during the summer.

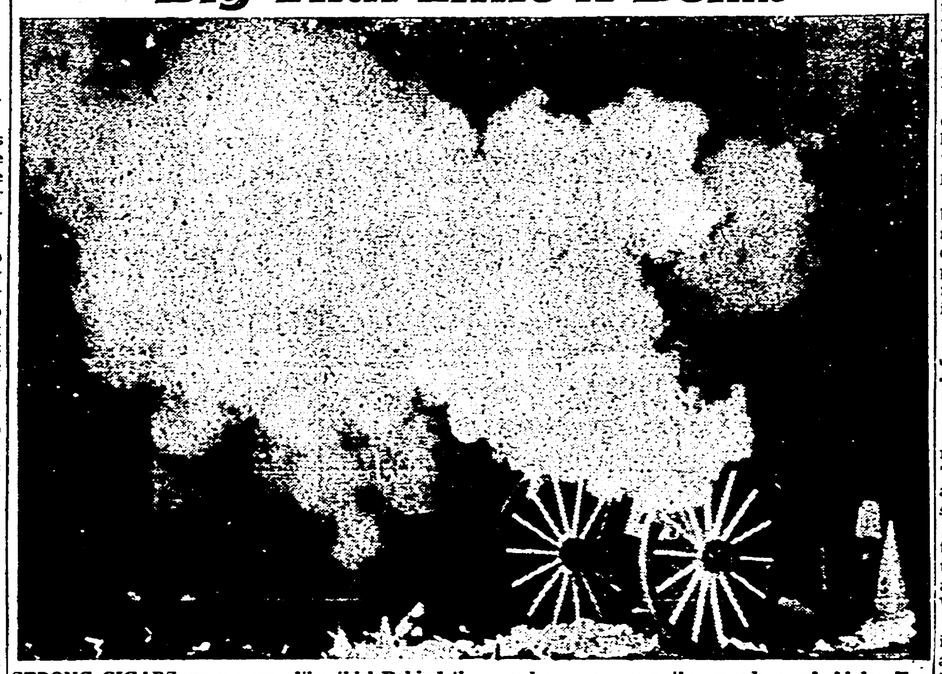
Bids are expected to be taken Nov. 4 for the first of two buildings on the Quad to house the College of Engineering.

Dig That Little A-Bomb



STRONG CIGARS were never like this! Behind the smoke screen are the members of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, owner of the nationally famous ATO cannon. The boys got excited last week when Syracuse romped over Temple, 42-0. They brought plenty of gunpowder—and the roar of the ATO cannon was heard 'round the immediate vicinity. Photo by Pete Preston

Mrs. Roosevelt Plans Visit Here

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt will visit Syracuse Oct. 21, according to an announcement yesterday by Prof. Donald G. Bishop, faculty advisor to United Nations at Syracuse university.

Bishop said it is expected that Mrs. Roosevelt will visit the Hill during her stay here.

She will speak at 8:15 p.m. Oct. 21 in Lincoln auditorium under the joint sponsorship of UNASU and Syracuse Association for the United Nations.

DO Will Publish First Coed Page

The Daily Orange will publish the first women's page of the semester Friday, Oct. 2. All news items for the "Social Whirl" must be given to Flip Sirola at the Hellbox no later than 2:30 p.m. Thursday.

All persons interested in joining the photography staff of The Daily Orange are asked to contact the managing editor as soon as possible. Photographers are paid for each picture published.

Three Turks Enroll In Forestry College

Among the new students at Syracuse this semester are three "Young Turks". They include Turan Sahin, Sadi Binay, and Edip Ozturk, who have entered the school of forestry under the auspices of the mutual security administration.

The students are employed by their country's ministry of agriculture, and are studying to find new methods of enlarging Turkey's forests.

Psych Professor Receives Award

"The Best Things in Life," a new book by Harry Hepner, S.U. professor of psychology here on the Hill, has been awarded the B. C. Forbes book award prize. This book will be published Oct. 13 by B. C. Forbes and Sons Publishing company, New York.

Perspective of life, capacity for enjoyment of the best things in life and fine arts are discussed in the book, Benefits of personal philosophy are also covered.

Included in the book, which has been written in "simple language," neglecting the language of an academic philosopher, are some full-page photos of nature scenes and reproductions of fine arts, used to illustrate the author's discussion.

JSF Will Plan TV Programs

The Jewish Student Fellowship radio-TV committee will meet at 7:15 p.m. today in 105 HL to plan a monthly television program series.

The first program, concerning the effect of Jewish life, is scheduled for October 28 on WHEN-TV as part of the series, "These Things We Share."

The group which produced similar programs last year invites anyone interested in writing, acting, or illustrating to participate. For further information, contact Phyllis Lavine or Milton Shester in the Chapel board room.

Managers to Meet Tonight to Obtain Application Sheets

By ROGER J. HERZ
Daily Orange Junior Editor

An intramural accident insurance program will be offered to all male students participating in the intramural program, Carleton L. Krathwohl, associate dean of men, told The Daily Orange late yesterday.

Sign-up sheets for insurance will be distributed through intramural managers from living centers and fraternities, who meet at 7 p.m. today in the Trophy room of Archbold gym with Milt Howard, director of intramural athletics.

KRATHWOHL SAID that the insurance will be offered at 50 cents per semester or $1 per year. It will protect students subscribing to the program against medical and hospital charges which might result from an accident while participating in a sponsored and supervised intramural event.

The insurance will provide up to $500 per accident over and above what the student health service provides. Cost of the latter is covered for most students by payment of tuition.

In order to have the insurance companies accept the plan, a minimum of 50 per cent of the total number of intramural participants would have to be enrolled.

The program is made available on a voluntary basis, but because of the insurance companies' needs this minimum percentage must be met.

THE NEW associate dean of men said that "a great deal of the credit for getting the program into its present form is due to the interest and work of men's student government."

Krathwohl met Howard and Insurance company representatives early this week to complete groundwork laid last year by MSG and women's student government. The insurance program applies only to male students at the present time.

MSG has been informed of this latest action, he said, and has given favorable expression. Student government officials stated that they will be available to answer students' questions regarding the program.

The feeling of the University, Krathwohl said, is that of providing the best possible service for students. He said that a complete expression is needed as to how students feel about intramural insurance "as well as a more comprehensive plan covering the entire student body of accident and sickness insurance."

He said that if the intramural plan is put into effect for this academic year, the administration will continue a study of protecting student welfare in conjunction with student government.

City Library Slates Discussion Groups

The Syracuse Public library has scheduled discussion groups on great books. This group consists of twenty or more adults who meet for two hours every week.

The aim of the program is to "get people to think." Questions are discussed in terms of the ideas and experiences of the members. Covering great authors including Shakespeare, Locke and Machiavelli. Great books groups discuss everything from religion to politics.

Four first year Great Books groups will be formed during the week of Sept. 28. Meetings will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Syracuse Public library, onalternate Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays. A second year group will meet on alternate Thursdays. This group is open to all persons who have attended any previous Great Books discussion groups.

These discussion groups are all open to the public. For further information, contact Miss Ruth M. Phillips at the Syracuse Public library, 74-5321.

LANDSCAPING COST

Landscaping around the new Women's building is expected to cost $50,000. Trees are being planted and 1,500 rose bushes and a ground covering of pschysandra will be added.

Seniors vote: ON or off?

It may be a little early in the year to say "get out and vote," but it's later than you think (at least as far as the 1954 Onondagan is concerned.)

The Daily Orange has printed a ballot on page three to determine just what seniors and underclassmen are thinking regarding support of a '54 yearbook. All seniors who have not previously voted on the issue are being asked to tear out the form and drop it in any one of the conveniently-placed boxes.

If you, as a senior, do not wish to see Syracuse without a publication that is found on every other campus of comparative size, then vote FOR support of the ON.

If you, as a senior, do not mind ending a 70-year-old tradition, then vote NO.

But the important thing is to vote!

Unless more than 500 seniors return the ballots, there is little hope that a '54 ON will ever materialize.

Even underclassmen can aid the seniors in the fight to keep the "ON" on. Freshmen, sophomores and juniors who would support a yearbook may also turn in the ballot.

But it's mainly up to the seniors.

What's your answer, class of 1954?

English diet: vitamins plus

The gifted student has been treated like the weather—everybody talks about him but nobody does anything about him.

This year, however, Syracuse university has not only talked about him (or her), but has taken positive steps to inject some vitamins into his curriculum diet.

The University English department has publicly planned and given an English test for frosh, which, if passed would permit the student to omit the University-required English Ia and b from his studies.

Previous to this semester, little publicity was given to an examination of this type for frosh. However, this fall, the details of such a test on a large scale were ironed out. All freshmen who wished to take the test were accommodated.

For the superior student the value of a test such as this cannot be underestimated. For one who is sometimes held back with required courses, this is a chance for the advanced student to make his college years more worthwhile.

If he is among those students passing the test, he will be allowed to enter upperclass English courses and proceed at his own speed. He will no longer be held back by the mechanics of a program into which he did not fit.

We applaud the English department for their action and hope that other departments will consider similar action for required courses.

Wanted (personal reward)

Nearly everybody reads the Daily Orange.

In fact, it'd be safe to say that everybody who cares about what's going on at Syracuse university takes time out each morning to scan the pages of this paper.

You'll see our readers at the Corner store, a cup of coffee in one hand and a DO in the other, perusing the front page in the ten-minute break between classes. You'll see professors eyeing the editorials and political columns. And sports fans turn automatically to the inside page for news about the upcoming game.

It's students who make up the bulk of our readers, and it's students who publish the Daily Orange. From advertising demons, circulation experts and promotion whizzes to ace reporters, feature writers and photographers, they're all enterprising young Syracusans to whom the Hellbox is a second home and Frank Locke a second father.

The DO is their baby; the ads, stories, pictures and actual pages are creations planned and carried out by staff members.

The DO operates in a climate of complete freedom; although we are financed by a University subsidy, in addition to advertising revenue, editorial policies are formulated by the student staff members.

As a college daily, we rate pretty well; we're proud to have received many All-American citations, awarded by the Associated Collegiate Press to the few top papers in the country.

And there's plenty of room for you new Syracusans who would like to become part of the DO crowd.

Bob Goldstein, the DO business manager, has room on his staff for budding advertising and promotion people, while Ken Lent, sports editor, will welcome with open arms all you young Grantland Rices.

And in the main news room, we need reporters with a nose for news, feature writers with gifts for the unusual, photographers and cartoonists and prospective journalists who want to learn everything there is to know about publishing a newspaper.

We'll be meeting with all new students interested in joining the DO at 4:15 p.m. tomorrow in 105 Yates castle. And we hope you'll be there.

SIGHTS ON SU CAMPUS; OWL TEARS

By MILT SHEFTER

Orientation notes: Incoming Frosh at Snow Haven, also known as Skytop, were greeted by the gay sounds of laughing playing children last week. Seems an elementary grade school group has invaded this male sanctuary bringing about a definite tone down on language usage. New language barrier?

Line of the Week: Bob Dishy at the Frosh Mixer (supposedly limited to Frosh, Goons, and Traditions members) "Welcome to all you Goons, Traditions members, Frosh, Sophs, Juniors, and Seniors." Incidently, Mr. Dishy's impersonation of the typical Freshmen at the Big Chum-Little Chum party was so well received, even he was forced to the limits of merriment, or in the jargon of the stage, it broke him.

Footnote on same: Songs from the entertainment, supervised by the same trio of White Bucks and Tales frame, (Angelos, Okun, Leider) will be pressed on wax. The new Alma Mater is every bit as beautiful as "My Sweet" from the senior musical, which is tops in my book. Still no news from Life or Downbeat mags which were considering a layout on White Bucks and Tales.

Am I Hearing Hurt Hoots: The Temple Owl is still trying to untangle its wings and smooth its ruffled feathers after the plucking it received from an embittered Orange still suffering from a slightly worse juicing in Miami. Call it coincidence or irony but after trouncing Albright college in the opener, the Owls were repayed by a team which included one Edward Albright who saw slight action towards the end of the first half at Q-back. And . . . give that man a cigar—his hometown is the home of this same Albright college. No relation if you please but it sure is a small world, isn't it?

Then to the business at hand: Classes started with the usual flourish and last minute switches. One chap who filed cards at registration noticed which class Alta Burg was in and enrolled in it. Arriving early and seating himself besides an average sort of gal, he discovered she was from Miss Burg's cottage. He asked her to identify this new edition of Dotty Grover and then shrunk to the proverbial two inches. Un hun, that was Alta Burg right beside him. Was my face red!

And now if you'll excuse me, I've got to get my shoes shined. Seems one dark evening I walked on what used to be the Old Oval. Squish, squish.

An Evening at the Theatre

'Born Yesterday'

By JOAN NADELHAFT

Daily Orange Associate Editor

The worst thing a revival has to contend with is the inevitable comparison between itself and the original. In a play such as this one, the comparisons are not only inevitable, they are brutal. In the case of "Born Yesterday," the characterizations of Brock and Billie Dawn were so outstanding when originally done, that it isn't possible to forget them when seeing the play now running at the Astor. Vicki Cummings' Billie Dawn was not Judy Holliday's. She tried hard to keep it from being so, and she succeeded. Miss Cummings has courage to attempt the role so soon after the original. Her concept of Billie Dawn, standing by itself, was more than adequate. It is a shame she had to labor under such a handicap.

Jay Jostyn had a double type casting ghost to contend with. In addition to combating Broderick Crawford, the Harry Brock of the movie, he had to make the audience forget those years of radio, when he was the most famous crimebuster around, Mr. District Attorney. To hear Mr. DA speak Brock's crooked lines was as jolting as if Joe Friday had taken a bribe. He's good, but he was licked before he started.

John Dall was the best thing in the play, aside from the superb script itself. He was smooth and properly enthusiastic about the cause of the little man. As Paul Verrall, who teaches Billie about freedom and rights, he was excellent.

Carrol Ashburn played Brock's lawyer and gave an uneven performance. Sometimes he was very fine, as in his closing speech, which unfortunately cannot be repeated in a college paper. During is off moments, he was routine.

Among the minor roles, which were, for the most part, good, we spotted a familiar face. Kenneth Bowles, late of the University, appeared in the bit of the assistant hotel manager, a part which served to delineate Brock's personality as a big spender, and did nothing more, either for Bowles or the play.

As we mentioned, the play itself is wonderful, and those fabulous lines just as good as ever.

THE PLAN ON 'MORNING MUSICALS'

Syracuse's series of metropolitan culture, The Civic Morning Musicals, will premiere its 1953-54 season on Oct. 28 with the appearance of the Slavenska-Franklin ballet in Lincoln auditorium.

The group of 50, headed by Mia Slavenska and Frederick Franklin, includes a symphonic orchestra conducted by Otto Frolick and will present a full-scale ballet production.

Morning Musicals has also scheduled four other fine attractions in the Lincoln auditorium for the remainder of the season. The series, operating in Syracuse since 1890, has brought many of the world's most accomplished artists to local audiences.

On Nov. 23, Virtuosi Di Roma, one of the rare phenomena of the modern musical world, makes its first Syracuse appearance. This unusual group features fourteen selected soloists from Italy's Collegium Musicum Italicum.

January 21 finds Luboshutz and Nemenoff, artists of the duo-pianos, making a local appearance. The celebrated performers are said to be at the pinnacle of achievement.

George Szell and the Cleveland symphony orchestra are booked for Feb. 8 in the auditorium. The Cleveland orchestra and Mr. Szell are well-known and well-liked by Syracuse audiences who have been very receptive to the symphony in the past.

The final chapter of the Morning Musicals' concert season falls on March 26 when Spanish soprano Victoria De Los Angeles is slated to present a recital. Miss De Los Angeles has already been selected as the star of the opening performance of the Metropolitan opera company.

It's Priceless!

A third-string quarterback named Witherspoon had a Laudable Ambition. He wanted to be first-string quarterback. Particularly to start the opening game under the Admiring Eyes of his Number One Girl. Unfortunately the coach was a Hard Man to Convince. So our hero, undismayed, uncorked a Master Plan.

Two weeks before the opening game, the coach got a Telegram. Message—"Ten reasons why Witherspoon should be first-string quarterback. First, Witherspoon is resourceful. Witness this approach." Each day the coach received a similar Telegraphic Tribute to the Sterling Qualities and Gridiron Prowess of Witherspoon, ending on the tenth day with "Witherspoon knows the T-formation to a T. Incidentally, his father is considering endowing a new gymnasium."

Who started Saturday? Our boy, naturally. Did very well, too. Played all season. "Just one of my Finds," the coach murmurs modestly, when found in the New Athletics Building.

Nothing puts a point across as convincingly as a Telegram . . . whether you're trying to get a "Yes" out of a Coach, a Chick or that Checkbook at home. (Fact—when it comes to prying Pesos out of a Recalcitrant Parent, a Telegram is just about the world's Best Crow-bar). Whatever your message, it'll Mean More when it goes on the Yellow Blank.

Orangemen Lacking Strength at Fullback

Coach Ben Schwartzwalder is busy readying his Piety Hill charges for the invasion of Archbold stadium on Friday night by the Boston University terriers. A light workout was held on Monday, followed by an intensified drill yesterday.

Aside from the fullback slot, where the two top men, Bill Wetzel and Vinnie Vergara, are on the injured list, the Orangemen came out of the Temple romp with but nary a scratch. The loss of these two men has weakened the Syracuse attack vastly however.

THE ONLY remaining linebuckers on the squad, Don Laaksonen, Dick Darr and converted quarterback Ed Albright, are sophs and have little, if any, experience in actual collegiate play. Laaksonen, taking over for Wetzel in the Ovi encounter, displayed much puntential, but Schwartzwalder is probably wondering how the burly soph will stack up against BU with a line heavier and more experienced than Temple.

The Orange coaching staff had built most of their offense around Wetzel who was murder on plunges through the line. Citing the importance of Wetzel, Ben remarked yesterday that after the pre-season scrimmage with West Point, the Cadet Coach Red Blaik described the Orange fullback as one of the finest fullbacks he has seen in many years.

Aside from attempting to patch up the injury-ridden fullback slot, the higher echelon of the Orange are faced with the problem of an adequate defense against the Terriers' attack.

Syracuse not only attacked Temple but assaulted the national statistics. According to latest figures Syracuse is now No. one in the nation in both total defense and rushing defense. The Orange rank eighth in the country in total offense and third in passing offense.

Syracuse Booters Lose Practice Tilt

Sampson Wins, 8-2; Hill Defense Poor

Sampson's hard charging soccermen drubbed the Hill booters in a scrimmage on Hendrick's field, 8-2, yesterday afternoon. Al "Dusty" Johnson banged home four goals for the Sabres.

Syracuse, which opens its season this Satruday against Cornell, were completely outclassed by the aggressive airmen. The only Orange goals were registered by the Wirth brothers, Gunner and Sig.

Jumping off to a three goal lead at the half, Sampson was never headed, Orv Wambold, Hill goalie was bombarded by shots, as the Piety defense wasn't very sharp.

Sampson opened its season last Saturday against Brockport Teachers with an easy 5-2 win. They present a veteran array, similiar to the one that Syracuse beat last year, 7-5. However with a year of experience they seem greatly improved. The Orange booters will have to tangle with them later in the season.

THRU THE MUCK with MEYER

By ED MEYER
Associate Sports Editor

This is a story about a roommate of mine. A guy who I only stayed with for three weeks but from whom I learned what a true athlete is really like. Oddly enough his name is Armstrong. No relation to Jack of the "all America Boy" fame but right up there on top when it comes to love and incentive for the field of sports. I doubt very much if there are many others around these days like Mr. Steve Armstrong, Syracuse's crack miler and cross country man.

We have to go back to the beginning of last June to get the real facts about the high flying junior. I was working publicity for the intercollegiate Rowing association for the first three weeks of the month and my roommate at the Kappa Sig house was this same fellow, Steve Armstrong.

All track followers here on the Hill had seen the thin, solidly built soph move into his own over the past year. First it was in the fall with the hill and dalers and then in the spring in his specialty, the mile run. Sure, the kid was a good runner, but so what. That is probably the attitude we all had, including myself, until I actually met the guy.

Steve, who hails from New York city, was staying up in Syracuse the whole summer. He had picked up a job at Carrier corporation and decided to stay on the Hill over the vacation months in order to make some of that extra spending money. But when a guy loves to run he just can't be kept in one place for too long a time. That I found out about Steve Armstrong.

Steve Armstrong

In the three weeks I spent with him not once over the weekend did he remain in Syracuse. Instead he'd pack up his valise and start hitching to spots all over the state competing in amateur races. It might be to New York one weekend or the next to Buffalo but "traveling Steve" would never stay still. And by the way, even with the track season over on the Hill he still kept in fine shape and did very well in all of his races.

So you sit back and start to admire the kid. He looked thin in shape but was as "tough as nails" when it comes to competition. Anytime I'd ask him how he got that way he would reply, "You spend a summer at Parris Island with the Marines and if you aren't rough after that, then something must have snapped upstairs."

That was Steve, all the time joking and kidding around or talking about track. When I first met the kid he seemed very quiet but I gradually began to become more friendly with him and that shyness was completely disappearing. Anytime I'd bring up running, there was Steve ready to discuss any phase of the sport.

Steve never actually told me this story about himself but the fellows in the house explained just how far the kid went towards his love of the sport. When the Hill runners go on trips Steve used to take with him a jar of honey in the bus and eat all the way to the race. It supposedly helps build up your strength. I hope he does not mind bringing this out because this is probably the best way to show how far a true athlete goes toward his incentive and loyalty to a sport.

So over the summer I got to thinking about Steve. My thoughts turned to admiration for a guy who can give so much of his time and thoughts for one sport. And yet he is just about the most modest individual I have ever met. He's always anxious to find his mistakes and make up for them during a practice session. Coach Bob Grieve must find him one of the easiest athletes he has ever worked with. Things like that usually produce championship material.

You just have to tip your hat to the guy and what he has done towards making himself and his sport a clean and fair symbol of the true competitive spirit.

Steve is a good runner. In fact he may yet prove to be one of the real Orange greats of all time. But he has a long way to go yet. We are not saying that someday he'll be a member of the Olympic team or predicting a fine success in the future. But we do believe that with his unbeatable desire to win combined with his love for the sport he'll be mighty hard to pull ahead of on that final turn down the homestretch.

Quite a fellow; this Steve Armstrong.

-Operation Big Switch-

In a bulletin late last night, the American League Board of directors said that they gave their approval to the plan to move the St. Louis Browns to Baltimore. Bill Veek reportedly sold out to a group of Baltimore businessmen.

As yet there has been no decision made concerning the fate of the Baltimore Orioles, the International team now in that city. This also means that the offer Del Webb made to move the Browns to Los Angeles for an estimated price of $4 million will be abandoned.

Defense Minded BU Still Tough Despite Loss of Agganis

With the departure of all-American quarterback Harry Agganis, experts throughout the country have been discounting Boston U. in pre-season reports. Nevertheless, prospects for the Terriers have been improving rapidly and Buff Donelli's crew can be expected to prove worthy opposition to the Orangemen Friday night.

Although Donelli is noted as an offensive advocate, he is expected to alter his style this season and bank on his veteran defensive line. Recently he admitted his plan to "take our defensive unit of last year, teach them enough to get by on offense, then protect a lead if we get one."

LEADING MAN in this new system will be veteran guard Ray Cataloni who is being touted as the man to take Agganis' place on the all-American lists. The 205-pounder from Foxboro, Mass., missed action last year after breaking his leg in the season's opener but is expected to make up for it this season.

Other veterans who will bulwark BU's "vastly improved" line include center Frank Guliano, guard John Pappas and tackles Don Fraser and Mike Vendetti.

Weakest spot on the forward wall will probably be at the flanks where both Tom Lavery, Agganis' former chief aerial target and Tom Gastall are missing. Lavery has graduated while the latter has switched to the signal-calling spot to replace the Golden Greek. Expected to fill the gap are senior lettermen.

Despite the loss of the unforgettable Agganis, Donelli will be able to field a formidable backfield. Passing will be infrequent but such runners as Sam Pino, Don Defeudis, Lou Petroka and Joe Terrasi should give defenders trouble.

PINO IS A surprise starter as he is still in the Marines and will not be released until tomorrow. Nevertheless, he is planning to fly to Syracuse for the game and should be ready to start. Described as a battering ram fullback and a fine linebacker, Pino could easily develop into the sparkplug of the Terriers.

Only $4.50? Fantastic!

Walking away from the ruins of his flying saucer, the tiny creature opened his emergency kit. Peering into it with his middle eye, he beheld a stack of greenbacks, packs of chewing gum, and a sheet of instructions which read: "In this kit you will find everything you need to live as a college student. All college men wear clothes and chew gum. Buy clothes, chew gum constantly...and good luck!"

The trembling clerk handed him a Van Heusen Oxfordian. "Gleeps, that's really a mimsy!", screeched the little fellow, feeling the luxurious Oxford fabric. "How much is it?"

"Only $4.50," quavered the clerk. "I have them in the smartest new colors...and white to boot. Plus roll collars, button-downs and new short collars."

"Only $4.50? Fantastic!", piped the creature. "I'll take one of each!"

Carefully he counted out twenty sticks of gum and laid them on the counter. "Keep the change," he chortled, putting the shirts under his middle arm. And munching merrily on a crisp ten dollar bill, he waddled out.

Text Library Will Open Today

The textbook lending library will be open from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. today in the library on the third floor of the women's building, according to Alice Camp, chairman.

The library lends textbooks to students desiring them on the semester basis. There are approximately 1,600 textbooks available to students this year.

BOOKS ARE obtained from donations by students, and faculty. Those books unclaimed at the book mart also are forfeited to the library, as are those books unclaimed at the lost and found and at University dorms.

Any books are welcome at the library. The library also will be open from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. tomorrow and Friday and will receive donations at this time.

The library has been moved from its former location in the Student Union to the third floor library of the women's building. It is believed that the library will benefit more from the facilities of the new building.

There are books covering almost every subject available in the lending library. There is a large number of freshmen books.

Persons who wish to work at the lending library may contact Miss Camp at the lending library during these hours. The lending library is open at the beginning and the end of every semester.

Magazine Schedule Contest for Coeds

Winner May Land Mademoiselle Job

Women undergraduates, under 26, may win a trip to New York, represent the campus in Mademoiselle and land jobs in the writing, advertising or art fields in the magazine world if they are selected as this years Mlle reporter on campus.

The annual contest sponsored by Mademoiselle will end on November 30th. After writing a 1,500 word criticism of Mademoiselle's August 1953 College issue in general, the entrant should pick out a particular field that interests you and criticize in detail. This should be mailed with a sample of your work to: College Editor, Mademoiselle, 575 Madison Ave., New York 22, N. Y.

Name, class year, college and home address, major and minor and extracurricular activities and summer jobs will help the judges pick the SU campus reporter for '54. All entries must be typewritten.

Wild Blue Yonder

A FINE TIME—but a hot one—was had by all. The advanced Air Force ROTC cadets spent four weeks last summer at summer camps throughout the United States. These Syracuse cadets spent four weeks at Shaw AFB, S. C. Some were luckier: the boys at Westover AFB, Mass., spent two days in Bermuda.

WSG Announces New Coed Hours

Senior women who will graduate at the end of this semester have been granted 12 o'clock weeknight permissions by vote of the standards council of women's student government.

These permissions become effective immediately. Graduating senior women are required to return four of their pink permission slips to WSG since they have no use for them except for city overnights and special 2's for formals.

In past years the fourth year coeds have voted at registration for or against the 12's. However, there has been such a consistently overwhelming favorable vote that standards council decided to adopt them without polling the women.

'It's Priceless!' Daily Orange Priceless Penny Contest

Priceless Penny

This is the reverse side of a Canadian penny. All details are presented . . . NOTE the letters "DO" under the date. This is what you are looking for when you are hunting a Priceless Penny.

PRICELESS Penny Time is here!

At last every collegiate individual has an opportunity to win an evening at the Paramount theater, records from Olmsted's, an orchid corsage from Markowitz or a gift from Lunds . . . FREE! . . . and at no financial risk. Syracuse university's answer to the money fad that has rent New York City is the Priceless Penny Contest!

The details are simple and run as follows:

The object of your search is a Canadian penny that has the letters "DO" scratched on the back under the date. Twenty-five of these identical coins were spent yesterday afternoon in the Marshall street area. These 25 are now in circulation waiting for you to spot them in change you may receive in making a purchase.

We repeat once more: the letters "DO" are scratched on the BACK of a CANADIAN penny UNDER THE DATE.

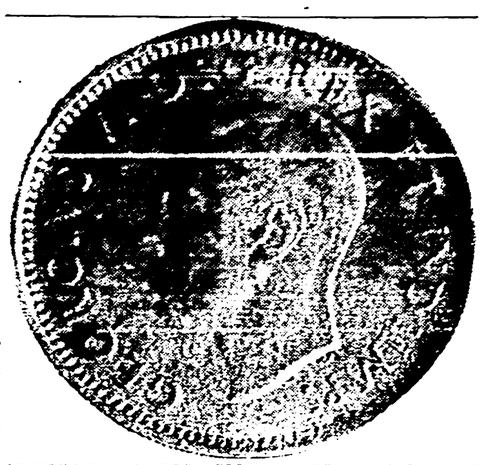
If you are fortunate enough to acquire one of these coins, bring it down to the Hellbox any time after 2 p.m. today, tomorrow or any day next week. Deliver it in person to any senior editor, that is, either the editor-in-chief, the managing editor, the editorial director or the executive editor.

To win, all you have to do is present the coin to us. It would also be appreciated, for purposes of publication, if you could remember what you purchased when you got the coin in change and where you bought the article.

Winners' names and details about the contest will be printed from day to day in the Daily Orange.

Any person employed in the Marshall street area and members of the Daily Orange staff are not eligible to win. It might also be pointed out that each coin is coded so that "counterfeiting" of a "Priceless Penny" is impossible.

Good luck in the contest . . . let this be a diversion from the task of returning to the academic world. Whether it's for prizes, change-counting or mere table talk, we have two words for the entire shebang: "It's Priceless!"



THIS IS THE COIN YOU ARE LOOKING FOR. This is a photograph of the FRONT of a Canadian penny. The mark which may make it a Priceless Penny is on the reverse side and described in the two accompanying sketches.

Vol. 51, No. 6 | Syracuse, N. Y., Thursday, October 1, 1953 | 4 Pages—5 Cents

THE CHEERLEADERS stand ready, the band tunes up, and the first pep rally of the season gets underway. More than 5,000 Syracusans are expected to participate in the rally and parade, which starts at 6:45 p.m. today in front of Sims.

Marching Band, Alta Burg Lead Year's First Pep Rally

More than 5,000 Syracusans are expected to march through campus at 6:45 tonight enroute to the first all-University pep rally of the year.

The cheerleaders and Alta Burg, frosh twirling sensation, will lead the parade as it winds around the campus, picking up groups of students all along the route. Starting point for the parade will be Sims dorm.

SCHEDULED TO start at approximately 7:15 in front of the library, the rally will feature a public appearence of Coach Floyd Schwartzwalder and an introduction of the Orange eleven. The Syracuse marching band will be near the parade's head. Conducting the music-makers will be Kenny Fredericks.

According to Lois Cohn and Len Eisen, co-chairmen, Goon squad members will be on hand to supervise. All frosh will be required to wear their lids.

Greek houses have indicated that they will cooperate with the parade committee and they have assured the chairmen that they will send large groups to the parade intersections to join with the marchers.

Fraternities, sororities and living centers have been invited to carry flags or posters which would make them recognizable to new frosh.

Freshmen have been asked to bring Orange Guides with them if they are still not familiar with the University cheers. The Orange cheerleaders will be on hand at the rally and will also be active in the parade.

Frosh Coed Excess Causes Changes In Living Centers

Registration of freshman women this fall has made it necessary to change four upperclass and graduate cottages to frosh living centers and to open a former men's house to the new coeds.

Miss Kathryn Copeland, director of women's housing, said yesterday that a total of 663 freshman women are now living in University cottages and dorms. This is 96 more than were listed in hill residences last year.

TO ACCOMMODATE the unexpected overflow, a temporary frosh house was opened at 504 University pl. during the first days of orientation. This has since been closed, as cancellations enabled housing officials to transfer the temporary occupants to permanent quarters.

Three former upperclass cottages, Ostrom, Thornden and Sperry, became frosh living centers. Lund, a graduate cottage, was assigned to freshmen and the first year coeds also appropriated Woodworth cottage which was a men's residence last year.

Total registration for University women's housing came to 1598 as of yesterday, Miss Copeland said. This is a gain of 96 over last year.

The last of the transfer students were moved from temporary to permanent housing Tuesday afternoon when they left the house at 301 Ostrom ave. to reside for the year in Blackwell cottage.

LOCATED AT 600 Ostrom ave., Blackwell was recently purchased by the University from Mr. and Mrs. F. Ware Clary.

Other transfer cottages are Spring, Beebe and Chamberlain. Spring and Beebe were formerly occupied by men students.

Miss Copeland stated that 727 upperclass women are housed in University dormitories and cottages. This is nine less than last year's upperclass total.

Graduate women students in University quarters number 108, eight more than those registered by Oct. 2 of last year.

Bus Ad Dean to Teach in Turkey During Year's Leave of Absence

Dean of Business Administration Robert E. Stone has been granted a leave of absence by the University for a year to a teaching and lecturing position at the University of Istanbul, Turkey.

Stone, dean of the college since 1950, is being sponsored by the Ford Foundation. During his absence, Assistant Dean Morris E. Hurley will be acting dean.

DEAN ROBERT E. STONE will leave Syracuse Sunday for the University of Istanbul, where he will teach for a year.

HE WILL also act as a consultant on the establishment of an Institute of Business Administration at the Istanbul college until his return to Syracuse Sept. 1, 1954.

He and Mrs. Stone will leave Syracuse Sunday and board an Italian liner in New York Monday. Eight days later they are scheduled to arrive in Naples, where they will change ships for Beirut, Lebanon. They will consult with Kenneth Iverson, near-east representative of the Ford Foundation, then depart for Istanbul.

Stone, a native of California and long one of the state's leading attorneys and educators, joined the Syracuse faculty in 1946 as professor of business law.

Asked by President Harry S. Truman to serve on a three-man emergency fact finding board, Stone investigated and reported recommendations for the settlement of labor disputes that grew out of the nationwide railroad strike of 1946.

HE IS the author of more than 70 articles about business law. His books include "Business and Property Law," one of a series of texts in the University Casebook series; and "California General Handbook for Lawyers," a manual for lawyers entering the practice. Stone is also co-author of "Fundamentals of Business Law," a college text published in 1950.

He received his BA in 1916 at the University of California and then earned his doctor's degree there. Stone then practiced law with an Oakland California firm and returned to the University of California. He taught commerce and supervised clinical work of third year law students at California's School of Jurisprudence.

While a resident of California, he served as chairman of two state

Talented New Twirler Adds Unique Routine

By POLLY REED

Eunice Mallott, newest addition to Syracuse university's marching band, has just about everything.

She's blessed with blue eyes, long blond hair which she wears in braids on top of her head, a never failing smile, and in addition, can she twirl those batons!

BILL ORANGE got his first look at her at the Syracuse-Temple game when she twirled on the Temple side with her fire batons.

Fans will again have a chance to view this pretty White Plains, N. Y., miss during tomorrow night's half time show, when Eunice will twirl a routine never done before at Syracuse. The routine's a secret and no one will be allowed to view it until the actual half time show.

When this reporter talked to Euncie at her campus home, Marshall cottage, the phone rang for her constantly. There was a steady stream of callers, including newsmen and photographers from Syracuse papers.

She handled all with ease and charm, and didn't get flustered even when a roving TV photographer from television station WHEN stopped us in Walnut park to take film for an evening TV show.

AS SHE changed from her spangled red and gold uniform, Eunice told us about her new costume. It has blue shorts, with a white jacket and an orange sash from one shoulder to the opposite side at the waist. White boots and a huge white fur shako complete the costume.

Eunice is New York state champion, Eastern states champion, and Letter Carrier's national champion. She's traveled all over the United States with bands, and has performed with the U. S. Army band. Kate Smith fans have seen Eunice on Kate's TV show, and Ted Mack featured her on his TV spot.

She has a total of 40 medals, all

Students to Claim Unused Textbooks

Book Mart Sets Saturday Deadline

Book mart will be open today to sell textbooks and to begin returning unsold books and pay out money, according to JaepSnne money, according to Jean Spencer, president.

Those persons who have book mart stubs from last semester may claim their money by bringing the stubs to the women's lounge of the men's gym either tomorrow or by noon Saturday.

The deadline for paying out any money or returning textbooks is Saturday noon. Those books not claimed will be donated to the textbook lending library. Money not claimed will be given towards a scholarship fund.

The book mart is still accepting a few books for which there is a particular demand, such as freshman English, zoology, citizenship and general education.

Each students sets his own price on the books which he brings to the book mart. No book will be sold above or under that given price.

The book mart is sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega, men's service fraternity, and the book mart organization.

Staff Members Needed by DO

Freshmen and transfer students and all photographers interested in joining the Daily Orange should meet at 4:15 p.m. today in 105 Yates Castle.

Reporters, sports and feature writers, photographers, cartoonists and artists are needed on the editorial staff, while positions open on the business staff include work on advertising, circulation and promotion.

Any students who cannot attend today's meeting but wish to join the DO staff are urged to contact Janet Caro in the Hellbox.

City Womens Group To Hear Speaker

Miss Ruth Haddock, assistant dean of women, will address the City Women's club at 7 p.m. today in the city women's lounge of the new Women's building.

All city women who have signed up for the club, and others interested in doing so, are invited to attend.

This year's [illegible]m will be headed by Lo[illegible]rea, president; Mary Fl[illegible]e president; Liz Hickey, r[illegible]ding secretary; Carol Palumb, corresponding secretary; Debbie Byrnes, treasurer and Janet Brenneman, social chairman.

Syracusans Write For Publication

Vincent R. Rogers, assistant instructor in the school of education here, and Edward J. Jam, a 1949 graduate of the college of Liberal Arts, both recently contributed articles to "The Instructor," a magazine for elementary school students.

Rogers' selection was "Midnight", a story for children in the upper grades, while Jam contributed "New Ball Game," which gave directions for balance kickball.

WAER Program Covers Campus

"It's Your Show," the new Sunday night WAER program, has been expanded to include the whole campus in its coverage of campus organizations.

Any campus organization or faculty group, may contact Joyce Grossman at WAER if it want material on the 10:00-10:15 program.

1954 ON Needs Seniors' Ballots

Only 30 seniors, out of a ossible 700, voted in yesterday's Onondagan poll sponsored by The Daily Orange.

Unless the remaining seniors turn in their ballots today or tomorrow, the 1954 ON may never go to press.

THE BALLOT on page three should be filled out by seniors who did not vote during registration regarding support of a '54 yearbook. Ballot boxes are located at Shaw dorm, HL, Maxwell, the Corner Store, Book store and library.

Thirty-six coupons, all affirmative, were turned in yesterday. Thirty seniors, three juniors, two sophomores and one freshman voted to support a '54 ON. This brings the total senior vote to 580, still less than half of the class.

Thomas Beckett, Onondagan editor stressed that all seniors should vote, even those who do not wish to purchase a book. An adequate tally of class opinion cannot be made unless all seniors cast their ballot.

Underclassmen are also asked to turn in the questionnaire if they will support the yearbook.

DURING THE registration period, only 550 seniors completed the form asking their support for a '54 ON. Approximately 1,300 seniors registered. Although 97 per cent of those voting favored retention of the yearbook, not enough seniors were polled to permit production plans to materialize.

The possibility of the Onondagan history ending with the 1953 book came to light last week when the Administration revealed that seniors would no longer be required to purchase a yearbook.

Faced with the problem of having no minimum number of guaranteed subscriptions, ON editors decided to conduct a poll of senior opinion on the subject of voluntary subscription.

BACK TO SCHEDULE

The DO resumes five-times-a-week publication next Monday.

Hundred Men, Girl Highlight Halftime Show

Syracuse university's marching band has planned a half-time show the Boston-Syracuse game centered around the theme "100 men and a girl."

After marching to the center of the field playing the "American Red Cross March" the band will salute Boston by forming the traditional BU on the field with twirling done by Eunice Mallott, nationally famed twirler. In this formation the band will play the Feist Football Medlay.

THE BAND will go immediately into the figure 100, signifying the teamwork which goes into producing the weekly show. In this formation the men will play the "Band of America" march.

Immediately afterward, the band will perform its famous military "to the winds" drill.

New drum major Alta Burg will be saluted when the band forms the word "G A L" and plays the pop tune "I Want a Gal."

Miss Mallott, '57, comes from a family of seven—she has four sisters, all of whom are twirlers and have won awards in that skill.

HER FAMILY was once chosen "Family of the Year" and for the past two years Miss Mallott has been touring the nation with her manager.

Climaxing the halftime show, will be the formation of a four-colored rainbow and a pot of gold featuring Alta Burg and her fire batons while the band plays "Over the Rainbow."

The men will then form the traditional block S and play the Alma Mater before resuming their position in the stands.

Kenneth Fredericks is again directing the marching band, with Peter Manikas as student director. Raymond Austin is president and David Crossman personnel manager. Richard Pocolla is in charge of properties, and Kelvin Smith takes charge of the uniforms. Alta Burg is drum majorette.

Last year the Syracuse University marching band members were treated to a trip that is probably the dream of all campus musicians. They were feted in Miami Beach and Miami, Fla., during the Orange Bowl celebration. The band, with Dottie Grover Gabor at the fore, made a lasting impression during halftime—even though the Oarngemen lost the game.

LOOKING FORWARD to the second win of the season, members of the Syracuse university marching band, graced by ALTA BURG, lovely frosh baton twirler, kneel in preparation for a salute to the opposition. Good music, lovely majorettes, but small consolation to the losing team—BU, that is.

Yanks Top Dodgers In Series Opener

Timely hitting and clutch pitching enabled the defending champion New York Yankees to score a 9-5 victory over Brooklyn in the opening game of the 50th annual World Series.

The Yankees jumped off to a 4-0 lead in the opening inning by taking advantage of Carl Erskine's wildness. The Dodger starter, who was a 20-game winner during the regular season, gave up three bases on balls and three base hits by Hank Bauer and Billy Martin to account for the four runs.

JIM HUGHES replaced Erskine on the mound for the Brooks in the second and gave up a solo blast to Yogi Berra in the third. Brooklyn tallied its first run in the fifth on a homer by Junior Gilliam.

The Dodger bats opened up on Allie Reynolds in the sixth as Gil Hodges and George Shuba hit homers. Shuba's blast came with one man on base. Johnny Sain replaced Reynolds on the mound for the Bronx Bombers in that frame.

Successive singles by Roy Campanella, Gil Hodges, and Carl Furillo netted the tying run for the Flatbush team in their half of the seventh.

With Clem Labine on the hill for the Dodgers, the Yanks scored what proved to be the winning run as Joe Collins, New York first sacker, lined one deep into the lower right field seats.

Hill Republicans Convene Tonight

Syracuse University's Young Republican club opens it fall activities at 7:30 p.m. today, with an informal meeting at the Phi Gamma Delta house.

Dean Robert Stone, College of Business Administration, the club's honorary faculty advisor, and Ben Carroll, a local Republican attorney, will speak.

New officers will be introduced, and refreshments served. All interested students are invited to attend.

Exhibit Features Water Colors

Lowe Art Center has been playing host to a group of 31 water colors, presented under the auspices of the California Water Color society. The paintings, on display until October 5, are on of several groups selected each year by the society for exhibit.

This society originated in California in 1929, and became well known for its break with impressionistic traditions of the time.

It leads the movement of American countryside painting, and today is a nationwide association of artists.

It's yours for a sign-up

It took five years but we finally got it.

All male students participating in intramural sports are at last eligible to be enrolled in an accident insurance program.

The beginnings of this plan go back one year farther than a college generation—back to the days when Lee Taub was president of men's student government.

He proposed to MSG that the assembly prepare legislation on intramural insurance. Little did he realize that he was the father of a Syracuse "five-year plan."

Sam Goekjian, president of MSG in '51-'52, also favored such a program and started the wheels in motion by opening negotiations with various insurance companies.

During that next summer, however, the State of New York changed its laws concerning this type of insurance. It was learned that at least 50 per cent of those students participating in intramural activity would have to be enrolled before the plan cond be put into effect.

This was a slightly different proposal than the plan originally passed by student government.

Negotiations continued during both semesters last year with the State Insurance Commission, the body which fixes rates and examines the administrative procedures of such insurance.

Because the plan was still snarled in red tape when vacation time arrived last June, student government enlisted the aid of the dean of men's office. Between the efforts of the two groups, the plan was finally cleared.

For 50 cents per semester or $1 per year students can receive up to $500 per accident over and above that which the student service provides.

There's only one more step necessary to insure the program on the Hill. And that is for those participating in intramural sports to sign up for the insurance. The program still needs the acceptance of at least 50 per cent of those students before it can be effected.

Last year there were several Syracusans injured in intramural activity. These accidents can repeat themselves this semester.

Why not play safe? The protection is yours for a sign-up.

Seniors, cast your ballot now for YOUR 1954 yearbook. Help the ON beat the count of ten.

What's the Orange flavor?

One of the comments frequently heard from Syracusans after last week's Temple clash was that very few students were familiar with the new cheers.

The Daily Orange is glad to print them so that there may be no such excuse in the future for any lack of enthusiastic cheering on the part of the student body.

'Born' at Astor

By MIKE BRAUN

The return of the legitimate theater to Syracuse is destined to be a huge success, if the applause accordind to the cast of "Born Yesterday" at the Astor theater Tuesday evening is any indication.

This wacky Garson Kanin farce stars Vicki Cummings, Jay Jostyn and John Dall. Mr. Jostyn, in the role of Harry Brock, plays a tycoon who made his roll in junk. Arriving in Washington to see how legislation of interest to the refuse industry is progressing, he is approached by Mr. Dall who plays one of the Atlantic Monthly's bright young men.

Of course Brock's interests are not on the up and up so the interview is declined. However, Harry does offer Dall the opportunity of tutoring Miss Billy Dawn, late of the follies. Miss Dawn is the type of girl who thinks that peninsula is a new medicine that has just been discovered.

When asked how she expects to get a third mink coat from Harry, she naturally answers, "If he don't come across I don't either." Culture, however, is triumphant and at the end Miss Cummings and Mr. Dall are wed and open a joint subscription to the "Partisan Review."

"Born Yesterday is just the first in a series of plays that will be on view at the Astor. In coming weeks such proven favorites as "The Happy Time," and "The Man Who Came to Dinner" plus many that have not opened on Broadway yet will be shown.

Among the stars scheduled to appear are: Edward Everett Horton, Sherry Britton, Joe E. Brown, Hurd Hatfield, Lisa Ferraday, Paul Muni, Joan Lorring and Marlon Brando.

The plays at the Astor are an experiment that is receiving nation wide attention. Recently the New York Times and "Theater Arts" magazine devoted articles to it. What makes it so unusual is that not only are big name stars appearing in a small city playhouse, but the prices are much less than even the average movie. The motto of the theater is, "always 500 seats under $1."

The next play in the series will be the farce, "The Man Who Came to Dinner," starring Edward Everett Horton. The part of Banjo which is the part Harpo Marx took in the original production will be played by Jerry Stiller who is a 1950 graduate of Syracuse. He majored in Speech and Dramatic Arts.

Michael Ellis, the co-producer of the series, said in a curtain speech that . . . "it is up to the theater lovers of Syracuse to turn out to see these productions. This is the only way we can gauge the failure or success of the experiment."

The Purpose Of the Astor Experiment

The movement to decentralize the legitimate theater is gaining impetus this season, with off-Broadway programs being started all over the country.

Cities, such as Syracuse, which haven't had a theater season in years, are trying the experiment of a regular series of plays, with Broadway casts.

The 30-week season being launched at the Astor theater here this week is part of the movement. Two New York producers, Michael Ellis and James Russo, are sponsoring the program. They are the gentlemen who were responsible for bringing Bette Davis back to the stage last December.

The American National Theater and Academy (ANTA) has been spearheading the decentralization program in line with their purpose of promoting a "living theater" in America. Their encouragement, both spiritual and financial, has started groups such as the Louisville, Ky, theater, a pioneer in the movement.

The theater seemed an indispensable part of life fifty years ago. The American public was accustomed to see the greats of the theater regularly. Stars such as Sarah Bernhardt, Ellen Terry and John Barrymore played small cities as a natural part of being an actor.

The movies changed all this and gradually, people forgot the stage, except when they were reminded that the local film was a "Broadway success." Since the advent of ANTA in 1946, the return to grassroots theater has been spreading.

Who benefits? The play-going public, naturally. And the theater itself, which up to now, has been dying a little more each year.

HOLD THE LINE PLEASE

The switchboard of the University received a call the other day that was about three decades late. When the ring was answered a voice asked, "May I speak to Chancellor Day, please?"

Dr. Day served as head of the University from 1893 to 1922.

'HEARING AIDS'

By DICK CASE

This column was conceived during a peaceful Syracuse supper-time as I reclined on Andrew Carnegie's firm stone steps which rise to the library. A pre-dusk quiet had settled about our mud-splattered campus and barely a sound could be heard save the muted tones of bulldozer moving down College-place and a freshman whistling a happy tune as he scaled Mount Olympus to discover the secrets held by its lofty peak.

Occasionally a Dixieland-like sound crept around from the radio shack. But then I remembered that WAER toed the classical line and dismissed the noise to imagination.

In wait of a late friend, a hodge-podge of thoughts scooted in and out upstairs and since space was hanging open for the first attempt at "Hearing Aids", a few of said thoughts have been recorded in what follows.

It is interesting to note that college students are no longer considered very individualistic in their musical desires. The taste has gone from the mouth to the ears.

I wish Marilyn Monroe won't try to sing.

My vote for most beautiful record of the year goes to Tommy Dorsey's work on "The Most Beautiful Girl in the World." The old Rodgers-Hart femme emerges more glorious than ever via the Dorsey arrangement. Decca says an LP of love songs in the same style is due soon.

I see where June Christy joined her former daddy Stan Kenton for The Man's European tour. Could this arrangement be permanent? Valle.

I wish Jane Russell won't try to sing.

Uncle Steve Allen's hip tales for the crazy kids are "the most", to say the least. As a matter of fact, so is Uncle Steve. Obeepshebam.

Peggy Lee has stepped back into the groove which she has been out of for so long. Try her new LP "Black Coffee" for size and see what I mean.

Attention social chairmen (square or otherwise): See to it that some swinging, swaying, GOOD bands are brought to the campus dances this season. It's not as difficult as you might think.

I also think that it would be a great idea to get down to something more substantial in the way of a column next week.

Sweet dreams.

Gracious Living By Ostrom's 13 & 1

By EILEEN CHAMBERLAIN

Last September 328 women students at Syracuse university moved into a large dormitory built for modern living. Tuesday, Sept. 29, 1953, thirteen coeds and a head resident took up residence in a home designed for gracious living.

The home is located at 600 Ostrom ave. and was formerly owned by Mr. and Mrs. Ware Clary who sold it to the University and have moved into the DeWitt apartments. This home is now Blackwell cottage and houses 13 transfer women students and head resident Miss Barbara Wood.

Because of heavy registration for women's housing, the University opened three former men's residences to the coeds and purchased Blackwell, a 7-bedroom cottage with accommodations for 14 girls.

Late Monday night Miss Wood went with transfer students assigned to a temporary house at 301 Euclid while they inspected their proposed permanent home.

They couldn't see very well in the dark, but anything was better than the temporary housing. The transfer coeds decided to take it.

Tuesday at 5 p.m. they transported belongings to Blackwell to find a very comfortable and pretty home awaiting. One coed resident said yesterday, "We're so lucky to be here. I'm glad I waited so late to apply."

In addition to a private sun porch and a lounge with a large picture window overlooking gardens in the yard, Blackwell has two rooms with fireplaces. The first was the Clary living room and has been converted to a quadruple bedroom. A double room on the second floor contains the other fireplace.

One single room on the third floor was formerly occupied by a maid. Besides a closet this room boasts a sink hidden behind another door which would appear to be a second closet.

Blackwell girls don't worry about storing luggage and trunks. They have their own attic on the third floor of the house.

This cottage is like a head resident's dream come true. Miss Wood's quarters are located where Mrs. Clary did her cooking and dish washing not so long ago. Above the student dean's desk is a large metal contraption with a bright fluorescent lamp to light her working space. This was probably used in the Clary kitchen to absorb excess grease from cooking.

In a separate alcove is a large kitchen sink and enough cupboard space for twenty head residents. This space Miss Wood has all to herself. She plans to use it for entertaining the Blackwell girls.

At first glance it's hard to believe that this well-shrubbed house set back from the street is a living center for university women. This reporter tiptoed in the front door, half afraid to be invading the privacy of an Ostrom avenue housewife or family.

Although the coed residents of Blackwell were offered rooms in Shaw dormitory, all but one selected the cottage for a home during the coming year. "It's wonderful to be settled finally in such a beautiful home," they sigh.

The telephone man appeared for half an hour Tuesday and now Blackwell girls have communication means other than face-to-face interviews. The number: 4-9563.

Syracuse Second in Lambert Poll

Along the Sidelines

By KEN LENT, DAILY ORANGE SPORTS EDITOR

A simultaneous death and birth occurred in the World of Baseball this week and many are the mourners and glad-handers. The funeral was held in St. Louis with the sale of the American League Browns to a group of Baltimore businessmen.

The announcement of the "big switch" was, of course, greeted with shouts of gladness as the Maryland city saw its first major league club spawned since the fabled Orioles of the late 19th century.

It was appropriate that the move came on the eve of balldom's biggest spectacle, the World Series, for it pushes the Baltimore club off on a note of optimism. The move may end with the death knell of the Maryland club being tolled soon.

We're definitely of the faction which feels that the choice of Baltimore was not one of the best which could have been made as a major league site. Our reasons for this conclusion are twofold.

First, Baltimore is much too close to two other "weak sisters" in the league, Washington and Philadelphia, both of whom have had attendance sickness for years. Second, the city is in the already baseball crowded East—far away from the not fully tapped Goldmine of the midwest and Canada.

It seems that cities such as Minneapolis, St. Paul, Kansas City or our neighbors to the north, Montreal and Toronto could more adequately support a big league club. In these metropolises, fans from not only the city proper but also the vast surrounding territory would flock to the games.

Baltimore is bound to encounter more difficulty. With Washington right next door and Philadelphia literally across the street, Baltimore will have no place but its own 950,000 citizens to draw from.

The Baltimore franchise will probably hold good for one year, maybe two. But, in the long run, by drawing from the same population center as the other Eastern AL clubs, it will be a case of the baseball owners going to the well once too often.

Despite the fact that Baltimore is the sixth largest city in he Union, we feel taht the move made this week by the American League will eventually necessitate the switch of some Eastern team within the near future. We agree that the Browns had to be moved but to quote an old proverb, "Two wrongs do not make a right."

COMING ATTRACTIONS: Bernie Dawson, president of the Syracuse Rowing Association, has stated that a bid will definitely be extended to have the 1954 Regatta held on Lake Onondaga again. This is good news as there was some doubt due to the amount of money lost (over $5,000) in this year's promotion.

Center Ted Kukowski and tackle Les McClelland have been elected to co-captain the Piety football squad for the Friday night tussle with Boston university in Archbold stadium.

The first weekly ratings for the Lambert trophy find Syracuse defending Lambert trophy winner, in a strong second place position to Penn, 13-7 conqueror of Vanderbilt last weekend. Cornell, Holy Cross and Fordham, future opponents of the Orange, are in third, fourth and fifth place respectively in the struggle for Eastern supremecy.

THE NEWS that Syracuse has

been dropped to the number two slot this week is hardly discouraging to the Orange squad and coaches who are only concentrating now on Friday night's clash with BU. The mortality rate of major gridiron powers to already taste defeat in this infant season is high and the Piety Hill coaches are only concerned with a victory this weekend.

The players who opened the season against Temple will probably get the starting nod against BU with the exception of fullback where soph Don Laaksonen will fill in for the injured Bill Wetzel. Of some gratification to Coach Ben Schwartzwalder and his aides are the performances of several substitute linemen, both in the Owl game and in practice sessions this week.

A lack of depth on the Orange forward wall was one of the problems confronting Schwartzwalder this fall, and it seems that this situation is being alleviated. The play of sub center Paul Slick, coupled with the tenacious tactics of Kukowski in the linebacking spot, seem to give the Orange more strength in this position.

In the Temple encounter after the Orange had scored a touchdown early in the second quarter, Kukowski made a high snap from center on the try for the extra point and ball-holder Pat Stark had to leap to catch the ball. Brenneman, realizing instantly that it would be an impossibility to get off the place kick, jumped across the goal line and yelled to Stark to throw him the ball for the extra point. The coaching staff was very impressed with this quick thinking on the part of the converted halfback. And Syracuse scored an extra point.

Position Changes Expected Before First Soccer Contest

More changes will be made in the Orange soccer line-up following yesterday's 8-2 loss to Sampson Air Force base in the second scrimmage game of the season.

Sampson showed strength at all positions yesterday in registering their one-sided triumph. Syracuse, on the other hand, showed weaknesses in its forward line.

ALTHOUGH THE Piety defense was spotty at times, it shapes up better than the offense. With six halfbacks to choose from, Coach Andy Coccari hopes to present a strong defensive line in the season's opener against Cornell this Saturday.

One switch being contemplated by Coccari is the return of Gunnar Wirth to the goalie position. This would weaken the forward line even more, but it would fill the gap in the goalie slot.

Last year, Wirth showed his potentialities at the goal position when he held Brockport State Teachers scoreless in the second half, after they had scored four times in the first half.

Soccer Bits—More freshmen are still needed for the frosh team. Two frosh games have been set. The yearlings will play Colgate on Oct. 9th and Cornell on Nov. 6. Both are away games . . . The Orange booters have a new coach for the first time in 26 years. Art Horrocks, who became head coach of soccer in 1926, after three years as frosh coach, resigned his coaching position this fall . . . Andy Coccari of the Physical education department is the new coach. This will be Cocarri's first coaching position for Syracuse university. He is the third soccer coach in the history of the University. Red Paisley was the first Orange mentor.

Intramural director Milt Howard announced today that a faculty golf tournament will be held in the near future at the Tecumseh golf course. The tourney will be either an elimination or a one day affair and participants will receive handicaps. A trophy will be awarded to the winner.

College of Fine Arts Has Anniversary

Syracuse university's College of Fine Arts celebrates the 80th anniversary of its formal opening this academic year.

The college opened in 1873, the first in the United States to grant collegiate degrees in fine arts.

ITS FOUNDER, George Fisk Comfort, who was the college's first dean, was a former landscape painter who devoted his life to fine arts education and appreciation.

He first had the idea of such an institution while on a European tour in 1861. He returned to Syracuse, made plans for the college, and then set up the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York city, which was opened in 1872.

Dean Comfort also founded many other institutions, such as the American Philological society, Modern Languages association, and the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts.

The Central New York chapter of the Citizens Fine Arts League of America will present three memorial gifts to the College in honor of the founding.

An oil painting by Dean Comfort, a bronze bust of the dean, and a historical plaque about the life and work of the dean will be given to the College.

first places, and a second and third. All this is out of only 46 competitive tries. She also sports 14 trophies, all but one of which she gave to her younger sisters.

After high school Eunice had offers to go into TV work performing her routines, but she realized that this might not last long, so she's here at Syracuse as a Liberal Arts student going into education or TV. Personally, this reporter hope it's TV, as we could stand more of her sparkling smile and whizzing batons. Anyway, we're glad she picked Syracuse!

STUDENT DEAN PLACEMENT

Positions have been found for 34 former members of the student dean course, according to Miss M. Eunice Hilton, director of the student dean program at Syracuse. The women have been placed in a wide number of colleges ranging in location from Massachusetts to Oregon.

Syracuse Gridders Favored Over Terriers

Women's Informal Rushing Will Commence Tomorrow

By POLLY REED

Fall rushing for Syracuse university women begins informally at 3 p.m. tomorrow and Sunday with an open house. Rushees and actives will wear sweaters and skirts, socks and loafers or bucks.

The rushee will be in a group with others attending the same house, and will be guided by a leader, usually an alumna who will answer general questions about the house.

See page six for alphabetical listings of rush groups.

Rushing begins informally, then gradually eases into the final formal party. Between the open house and formal party come a weekend of informal parties, and a day of costume parties. The total period of rushing covers five weeks.

EACH RUSHEE received form cards at registration which should be filled in before attending the open houses. The cards should be brought by the rushee to the house and left so the house will have a record of who has visited there.

Rushees are also requested to stay with their group leader to avoid haste and confusion, and to give the sorority girls a chance to meet rushees under easy, unstrained circumstances.

All Christian girls will go to all Christian houses, and all Jewish girls will go to all the Jewish houses. However, any girl who wishes to cross rush, go to both Christian and Jewish houses, should call Nancy Knapp, 75-1978 for final arrangements.

From 12 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Oct. 7, campus and city girls may call for their bids and return replies for the informal party at the Panhellenic office, 311 Women's building. All replies must be made in the Panhell office on special cards, which are available there.

Each bid must be answered, either accepted or rejected, and once a bid is answered, it should not be changed.

ONCE RUSHING has started, sorority pins will again blossom forth, but no girl acting in a big chum or guide capacity, nor any girl fulfilling Goon Squad duties or visiting a freshman house may wear her pin.

Rushees and sisters may, of course, converse on campus, but the subject of rushing, and sororities in particular, should be avoided except during the rushing parties at the sorority houses.

There are two freshman advisers, Mrs. Sidney Blumberg, and Mrs. Clarence Pollatsek who will gladly answer questions about houses. Their hours at the Panhell office are every Wednesday from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m., and Thursday from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. during formal rushing.

Rushees should wear the name tag which they received during Orientation week to each party during the open house weekend

RUMORS and speculation about houses should be discounted. A rushee who likes the girls in a particular house should not be influenced by her roommate's reaction to the house, or to stories someone may have picked up concerning the girls.

Each girl's decision is her own, for it is she who must live in this house if initiated. It is she who must pick a new roommate and live with these girls, some of them for two or three years.

A wise decision will mean four years of good times and happiness with girls chosen to be "sisters." It's up to each individual to make her decisions carefully, wisely, and on her own.

Students Warned On Seating

Students must sit in their own student section rather than the reserved sections sold to the general public, athletic department officials reminded last night.

Any student discovered sitting in the non-student area will be subject to ejection from the park and possible temporary loss of his identification card.

Alumni IFC Meets On 1953 Rushing

Convocation Scheduled Oct. 12 for Frosh

Members of the Alumni Interfraternity council of Syracuse university outlined this year's fraternity rushing schedule and reinterated directives against "dirty rushing," at a meeting of fraternity house presidents and rushing chairmen Wednesday night.

Dr. Charles Gwyn emphasized rules against the entertainment of freshmen by fraternities on dates other than those specified by the Alumni council. This was in an attempt to overcome the misinterpretations of these rules in recent years.

To explain formal rushing, a convocation has been scheduled for Oct. 12 for freshmen interested in rushing. Anyone desiring immediate information about rushing should call IFC President Frederick (Fritz) Briggs at 75-2056, or Arthur Finger, rushing chairman, at 75-9407.

Prof. Theodore Denise, fraternity advisor, cited some of the rushing practices to be avoided, and explained their negative effect on the personalities of all concerned. He explained some of the mechanics of rushing to clear up misunderstood points.

Keynote of the meeting was by Theodore Glou, President of the Alumni Interfraternity council, who expressed a strong desire to strengthen the Hill fraternity system in all ways possible.

SUPPLY MOVED

The Air Force ROTC supply room has been moved from the basement of Machinery hall to quarters under the southwest part of Archbold stadium near Hendricks field.

Block seating for tonight's football game with Boston university will be available from 2 to 5 p.m. today at the special booth in the Trophy room of Archbold gymnasium.

Individual seats will also be assigned, according to David Krohn and Jean Dale, student government chairmen of reserved seating.

A large number of good places still remain, they said. Only one placard cheering section was filled by upperclassmen through Wednesday, indicating that more freshmen would participate in the cheering than last week, Stephen Reiss, Chief of Civil Service of men's student government, said.

He urged students holding reserved seats to come at least 15 minutes before game time to avoid the last-minute rush. Reserved seat tickets should not be presented at the entrance gates. Only the regular student ticket and identification card is required to enter the stadium.

Government workers, Goon squad and Traditions members will usher.

Junior Exec Council Chooses Members

As a result of application and interviews, which were held at the end of last year, six students were chosen to assist the class officers on the executive council.

The following members are: Barbara Witter, Susan Berman, Lois Cohn, Deborah Torello, Carol Amacher, and Kevin Wilson.

Also serving on the council will be Marcia Sank and Art Koeppel, who were candidates in the spring elections. The project of the council will be the annual Sno-Ball, which is held the Saturday night of Winter Weekend.

JSF SERVICES

Jewish Student fellowship will hold Sabbath evening services at 7 p.m. today in Hendricks Chapel so that students will be out in time to attend the Boston game.

Dr. Fred Krinsky of the Maxwell School of Citizenship, serving as Jewish counselor, will deliver the sermon. JSF president Henry Einhorn will be the student reader with Paul Harrison as cantor.

The services should be over by 7:45 before the start of the game. On following Fridays they will be held at 7:15 p.m.

Applied Science to Receive Electrically Operated Brain

Utility companies will be able to supply better service to their customers and keep the cost of electricity down with the aid of a very specialized type of electrical brain which is now being built for Syracuse university.

Chancellor William P. Tolley has announced that construction of the half million dollar machine, called a network analyzer, has been made possible through the cooperation of Niagara Mohawk Power corporation and the New York State Electric and Gas corporation. These companies have agreed to use the analyzer in their operations, making it possible for the University to install the equipment.

THE ELECTRICAL brain, 66 feet long and seven feet high, will be completed by General Electric company by next summer and will be installed in a glass enclosed, air conditioned room in the $1.5 million College of Engineering building being planned for the Quadrangle.

The device will be valuable to utility companies and their customers since it will enable the companies to determine the most practical and inexpensive way of expanding their operation.

Cities served by utility companies grow at different rates and the companies must know exactly how heavy a demand for service will be made by each city 10 and 15 years in the future.

A complete power system can be reproduced in miniature on the network analyzer. Engineers from the University, utility companies and students will study proposed changes and predict how the power system will perform under all possible types of load conditions. They will also anticipate fault conditions, such as occur when lightning strikes, and design protective devices to prevent power failures, minimizing inconvenience to electricity users.

"THE UNIVERSITY is pleased to acquire this equipment because it will benefit millions of New York residents," Chancellor Tolley said. "It will also make it possible for us to offer a graduate program in electrical engineering in power system analysis." Only a handful of universities in the country present courses of this type.

Niagara Mohawk, New York State Electric and Gas and the General Electric company which is building it, will be the principal users of the device. Other utility companies in New York

Architects Hold Annual Picnic

One hundred and twenty-five students attended the School of Architecture's annual picnic yesterday at Green Lakes state park. Festivities got under way at 2 p.m. with the traditional football game between the forsh and the upper classes. The freshmen were defeated 24-6.

Other sporting events were: horse shoes ,softball and it has been reported, a few hardy individuals went swimming.

After the games a lunch consisting of hot dogs, beans, potato chips and coke was served.

The picnic, one of many events sponsored by the architecture school during the year, was put on by the upper junior class in order to acquaint the freshmen with the students and faculty of the college on an informal basis.

Overall chairmen were Kermit Lee and James McLeod. Lee and Ascanio Ottaviano were in charge of refreshments.

Prof. Francis Marston and Miss Martha McGavock of the architecture faculty were chaperones. The freshmen were in charge of clean-up.

NOBLE TO SPEAK

Dean Charles C. Noble will address the Canterbury fellowship at 6:15 p.m. Sunday at Grace Episcopal Church.

He will speak on the relationship between Episcopalians and the Chapel program. His talk will follow a supper served at 5:30 p.m. in the church on the corner of University ave and Madison st.

TED KUKOWSKI will be one of the two Syracuse co-captains in tonight's gridiron battle with Boston university. The husky center is playing in his first season for Bill Orange and is doing a great job as middle line backer.

Laaksonen Starts At Fullback Slot In Arclight Tilt

By JOEL FEIDELMAN

The Syracuse football team will be aiming for its eleventh straight victory over an Eastern opponent tonight at 8:15 p.m. in Archbold stadium when it takes the field against Boston university.

Although a three touchdown favorite in most quarters, the Orange could be hard pressed for a victory tonight. The loss by injury of fullbacks Bill Wetzel and Vinnie Vergara has weakened the team considerably in this department. Starting at the fullback slot will be inexperienced soph Don Laaksonen, backed up by sophs Dick Darr and converted quarterback Eddie Albright.

A MAJOR Orange weakness in previous campaigns, in adequate pass defense, will undoubtedly be put to test tonight by the Terriers. BU, led by the golden arm of Harry Agganis, was a passing machine the past few years, and even Agganis has graduated and has become an assistant Boston university coach, the Terriers can be expected to rely somewhat on the airways.

In practice sessions since school started Coach Ben Schwartzwalder has been concentrating on improving the Orange pass defense, and the results of the Temple game were very encouraging in this department.

As far as rushing defense goes, Schwartzwalder has few, if any, worries. The Orange are first in the nation in rushing defense after limiting the hapless Owls to a -13 yards on the ground last week. The Piety Hill players also lead the nation in total defense with a per game average of only 70 yards, showing the definite improvement in the pass defense.

BU will undoubtedly be a different story than Temple was however. The BU line compares favorably in weight and experience with the Orange forward wall. This was one of the shortcomings of the Owls. BU also has a wealth of running backs and two boys who can really throw the pigskin around the field.

A HIGH scoring game is expected tonight by those who remember last year's 34-21 Orange victory over the Terriers. Tonight could be a test of how strong the Orange is defensively. Extensive practice this week, culminated by a light drill last night, has put much emphasis on defense.

Leading the Orange in the ninth game of the Syracuse-BU football series—the Pietymen have won six out of the eight games—will be co-captains Ted Kukowski and Les McClelland. The Orange players elect new co-captains for each game.

Kukowski is a transfer center from Annapolis who has strengthened the ball-snappingslot considerably. Backing up the line on defense in truely professional style, the tenacious Kukowski has been compared by many football writers in this area to All-American George Strohmeyer, a Notre

Sukoenig Will Open New Concert Series

Opening the School of Music 1953-54 concert series, Sidney Sukoenig will present a piano recital at 4 p.m. Sunday in Crouse auditorium.

Professor of piano in the fine arts college since 1948, Sukoenig came to the Hill after eight years with professional status at the Juilliard School of Music in New York city.

BEFORE HE made his American debut in 1930, he toured Europe, appearing in Berlin, Vienna, Dresden, London, Budapest and Hamburg.

Sukoenig, since arriving in the U. S., has presented concerts at Town Hall, Radio City Music Hall, and at Carnegie Hall, where an autographed picture of him hangs in the lobby today. At one time, Sukoenig had his own CBS network program three times a week. He has appeared several times as soloist with NBC and Radio City symphony orchestras.

Beginning his formal music education at a very early age, Sukoenig studied with James Friskin and Ernest Hutcheson in this country and with I. Phillip, Gieseking, Edwin Fischer and Paul Hindemith on the continent.

Sukoenig distinguished himself on the Hill by giving the first Chapel concert at Lincoln auditorium in the city in 1950. Through his appearance, $1,500 was obtained for the different faith groups affiliated with Hendricks chapel.

THE FIRST group on Sunday's program will feature Handel's Chaconne in G Major, Mozart's Rondo in A Minor, and Beethoven's 32 Variations in C minor. The Liszt Sonata in B minor will make up the second portion of the program. After the intermission, Sukoenig wil lcomplete the recital with two groups of short selections by Debussy.

A tea for members of the University administration and frosh in the school of music will be held following the recital. The entire series of 18 concerts are free of charge and designed as a public service by the University. Free campus parking is offered to those attending the concert.

PROF. SIDNEY SUKEONIG, famed virtuoso, will give a piano recital Sunday to begin the University concert series. Admission is free.

Band to Introduce New Show

LIGHTS DIM, a match is struck, and Syracusans will be treated to a fantasy in the dark, a spectacle made possible by the skill and artistry of ALTA BURG.

Tonight's half time show will be centered around the theme "100 Men and a Girl" when the Syracuse university marching band, led by Ken Fredericks, takes over between halves of the Syracuse-Boston game.

The band will assemble by the goalposts and march down the field playing the "American Red Cross March" and then salute Boston by forming a human BU on the field. Eunice Mallott, pretty freshman twirler, will perform a routine never done before on the Syracuse university campus.

AS MISS MALLOTT twirls, the band will play the Feist Football Medley, then go immediately into the figure 100 signifying the teamwork which goes into producing each week's half time show. In this formation the men will play the "Band of America" march.

Immediately afterward, the band will perform its famous military "to the winds" drill.

New drum majorette Alta Burg will be saluted when the band plays "I Want a Gal" and forms the word "G A L" on the field.

Climaxing the intricate show will be the formation of a four-colored rainbow and a pot of gold. Alta Burg will be featured with her fire batons, while the band plays "Over the Rainbow."

CHEERLEADERS, DRUM majorettes, Goon squaders, sorority and fraternity houses and frosh houses all followed the band last night from Sims and the library steps, down several campus streets and back to the library.

Placard cheering will be used at tonight's game as it was at the Temple-Syracuse game. Goon squad row captains will be in charge of seeing that the placards are used properly and all returning.

The three new Syracuse cheers, Orange Bop, Orange Fight and the Sound Off cheer will also be used at the game in addition to the old cheers.

Hill Coed Twirls For Red Raiders

Colgate university, underdowed with members of the distaff sex, will be graced by the presence of a Syracuse coed during the half of the Colgate-Holy Cross tilt.

The top baton twirler, Shirley Christie is a home ec soph. She will lead the Red Raiders' marching band as the group salutes Andy Kerr, former Colgate football coach.

Miss Christie comes from Suffern, N. Y., and was selected as one of the six best baton artists on the eastern seaboard in 1951. She won second and third place awards in a champion of champions contest in New Jersey.

This is a return appearance for Miss Christie, after a baton show last January at a basketball game. At tomorrow's game, she will wear a new costume of white lame, which she designed and made herself.

A Canadian penny spent in the Corner store brought a prize to a coed a half hour later when she bought an ice-cream soda in the Dutch Haven.

Eight pennies, 32 per cent of the number circulated, have been turned in and prizes await the alert students who found them.

HELEN HARDCASTLE, '56, got her priceless pennies in change on Marshall st., and found she had a "DO" penny later at her dorm. Hugh O. Muir, Daily Orange editorial director, had spent the penny for a piece of chewing gum at 2:30 yesterday afternoon. Helen got the penny at the Dutch Haven about 30 minutes later.

One penny was in circulation for more than 25 hours, before it was located in the Varsity by Arthur Funari at 4:15 yesterday. Vince Rigolosi, a senior, also found a priceless penny in his change at the Varsity.

Andrew Pohl really hit the jackpot. A piece of bubble gum paid for with a nickel brought change in four priceless pennies! Hugh had purchased a Hershey bar in Gus' Smoke shop. The bubble stuff was purchased 21 and one half hours after Muir slinked along Marshall st. spending his pennies.

(Editor's note: Muir spent 25 cents and brought back quite a few goodies to the Hellbox. Unfortunately all of our readers couldn't find pennies. Cheer up, though—we still have two packs of chewing gum, a one- cent stamp and some licorice. Come on down.)

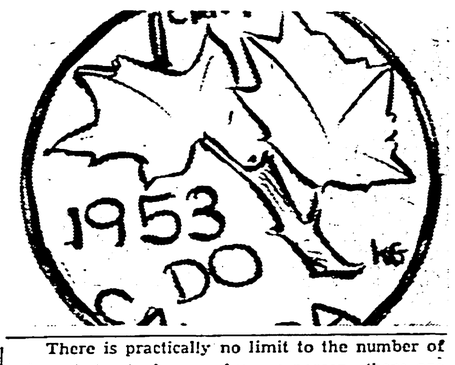
The contest is still open! From statistics gathered thus far, it is extremely likely that some of them are still on campus. You have until 5 p.m. Monday afternoon to find a priceless penny and bring it to the Hellbox.



There is practically no limit to the number of prizes that may be won by one person—there are 17 pennies still in circulation. No member of The Daily Orange staff nor employees on Marshall st. is eligible however.

The prizes awarded so far include tickets to "All-American," now playing at Schine's Paramount and starring Lori Nelson, Tony Curtis and Herman Hickman; an orchid corsage from Al Markowitz; a gift for men from Lund's and records from Olmsted's. More prizes await winners who bring priceless pennies to the Hellbox. The earlier we see you, the better prize you gt.

Th Daily Orange knew where each penny was spent through code markings on the pennies. These markings were engraved in addition to the "DO" that was on each penny. After the coins were turned in, the editors figured exactly where each was originally spent.

Get All Duplicate ID Cards in Gym

Any student who has lost his ID card must see Mary E. (Liz) Brydon or Stephen Reiss for written permission to pick up a new card from 1 to 5 p.m. today in the men's gym.

Miss Brydon will be at the women's student government office, Women's building, or at Kappa Alpha Theta, 306 Walnut pl. Reiss will be at the men's student government offices in prefab 30, behind the psych service center.

GRADUATE DANCE

Syracuse university's graduate students will kick off this year's social activities with a dance from 8 to 12 p. m. tomorrow in the Women's building.

Sponsored by the Graduate Commission, the dance is a "stag or drag" affair. All grad students are invited; a 35 cent admission fee will cover the cost of refreshments.

On a Sunday afternoon

Presidents are assigned to one hall of fame, and musicians—the good ones—to another.

Often a musician's hall of fame mainly rests in the memories of those who hear him play.

These memories we have enrich our lives, and though each means something different to the individual, for all of us alike they make life so much fuller.

Sidney Sukoenig, professor of piano in the Hill's School of music, is one of the famous piano virtuosos of our time.

He has consented to open the University's annual recital and concert series Sunday in Crouse auditorium. Admission is free and campus parking will be permitted.

Prof. Sukoenig has appeared in virtually every major capital and recital hall and with nearly every major orchestral group in the world.

He has studied under Hindemith, Phipp, Decreus, Boulanger, Gieseking and Fischer. Sukoenig has had regular radio series on NBC and has appeared as soloist with groups that include the NBC symphony and Radio City symphony. He made his debut 23 years ago with the Berlin symphony.

Sukoenig has also taught piano in the Juilliard School of Music and now maintains a studio at Steinway hall in New York, in addition to his position in the Hill.

Sunday's concert waits upon no admission fee. It waits merely upon the memories you'd like to have, the relaxation you probably seek—and your entrance to Crouse college on Sunday afternoon.

To avoid confusion...

It's reserved seating time once more!

Here are some general hints and suggestions to alleviate several of the problems that arose from the new seating plan.

1. Even if you have reserve seats, plan to arrive at the game at least one half hour before game time. This will avoid that last minute throng at the gate, which last week was so long, that some people did not have time to claim their reserved seats.

There's plenty around to see even 30 minutes before the kick-off. The team comes on the field for warm-ups and the band adds the collegiate touch with color provided by our youthful twrilers. Those who really make a science of the game use the extra time to great advantage by learning the number, position and name of both Syracuse and opposition grid-players.

2. Have all three cards ready to present to the gatemen and ushers. The gatemen must see the ID card and the regular game ticket. Only the goon squad ushers look at the reserved seat ticket.

3. Look at the picture on page five of today's Daily Orange and find out exactly where in the stadium your respective section is located.

4. Avoid sitting in the reserved section without reserve tickets until after the kick-off. Violation only increases confusion and bad tempers.

5. Avoid also those seats reserved for the general public. We have our own special section for which we have paid our own special prices. Nothing but ill feeling between the people of Syracuse and the University students can result from such action.

A dream splashes true

The dream of the half-century will officially open with a splash at 4:30 p.m. today.

For more than fifty years coeds on the Syracuse campus have talked of the time when they would have a swimming pool of their own. Miss Katherine Sibley, longtime director of women's physical education, never let these dreams die and even envisioned the present structure which houses that pool.

One of the largest indoor swimming structures for women in the nation, the new pool has attracted as much favorable comment from alumni and visitors as any of the new additions to the Syracuse building program. Even the male population has been caught casting envious eyes on the spacious and colorful beauty.

The pool will be open from 9:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. daily for classes, special parties and general student dips. The latter will be held from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. Mondays and Tuesdays with evening plunges set for Wednesdays from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m.

A priority schedule for use of the facilities has been set up to allot the remaining time in an equitable manner. The instruction program of the physical education department, dips sponsored that department, and the Women's Athletic Association will receive first consideration followed by special student groups and organizations.

Even the males will be able to enjoy "the blue heaven" when dressing room facilities for them are completed.

It's been a dream well worth waiting for.

It is our good fortune to be on campus at the time when a coed, after more than a five decade wait, can at last say, "Meet you at the women's pool."

Slocum's Face Gets A Lifting

By HOWARD VAN KIRK

Daily Orange Associate Editor

So there we were, 65 feet above the pavement, on the windy heights of Slocum hall. A little bit out of breath, it's true, and maybe a little scared. It doesn't sound so high, but go up sometime and look down.

We asked the rugged looking individual (all sculptors should be rugged looking) what he was doing. Not too bright. We could see what he was doing. But he patiently explained that he was removing "Joseph Slocum College of Agriculture" from the Indiana limestone face of the building with a pneumatic drill. Why? So he can inscribe "Slocum Hall" in its place. Simple, but we were kind of shaken by the climb. We were facing the climb back down, too.

The sculptor, for that's what he turned out to be, is Norman Pearl, who has been studying rock busting under the noted sculptor Ivan Mestrovic for four years.

We stood there in our work clothes (we'd changed into them to get past the guard, which, we found, didn't exist), the wind whistling through our teeth, and tried desperately to think of things to ask Pearl in order to forestall our descent.

He told us that the scaffolding had taken a week to assemble, beginning on Monday, Sept. 21, and that he had started work on a contract basis last Monday. He got the job through the art school, who in turn got it through University official Hugh Gregg, who later told us that the Chancellor had initiated the action, since its been some time since we've had a College of Agriculture on campus.

Steeling ourselves, we leaned over the railing and watched a limestone ship drift lazily to the ground a long, long way down. We decided to ask a few more questions.

"How long do you expect the job to take?" we asked. He told us that he expects to spend about two more weeks, depending on the weather.

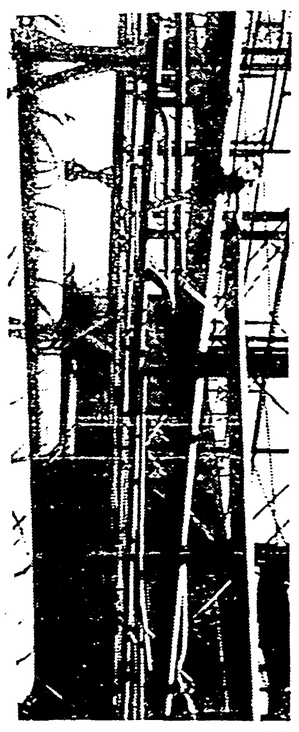
Our brain stopped functioning and we could think of no more questions, so we thanked him for his information and patience and started quakingly down the little ladder. We got safely to the bottom, heaved a sigh of relief, and heard the compressor start again, as he went back to work.

Then we began to dig. Mrs. Russell Sage gave the University $350,000 back in 1915 to erect an agricultural college in memory of her father, Joseph Slocum. Ground was broken in 1916 and classes began in 1918.

The College of Agriculture was discontinued in 1932, after The State University opened one at Cornell. By that time, Business Administration, Citizenship, Architecture, Home Economics and Education had moved in. Citizenship moved out in '37 when Maxwell was com-

So now, after 21 years, the last vestige of the College of Agriculture is leaving Syracuse. Bon voyage, and we hate to see you go.

Gusher?



Not an oil well at all . . . this maze of pipes spider-webs its way up the front of Slocum hall these days ;it provides a base for the youthful sculptor, who is carving a new name on the pediment.

Bi-partisan Gets Top Legal Post

By ED HARDY

The appointment of Gov. Earl Warren of California to Chief Justice of the United States is one that should please both Republicans and Democrats.

When the 62-year-old Warren takes his seat on the bench of the Supreme Court Monday, he will bring with him an unblemished record of honesty and integrity to fill the important post President Dwight D. Eisenhower has entrusted to him.

Although subject to Senate confirmation in January, it is unlikely that the legislature will do anything but acclaim the choice, despite the precedent that no President since Washington in 1795 has appointed a Chief Justice when Congress was in recess.

Warren is a self-made lawyer of Scandinavian background. Although he can show no actual experience as a judge, he established a reputation as a crime prosecutor during his 15 years as district attorney of California's Alameda county and four years as state attorney-general.

In more than 30 years of public service, he has never lost a state or local election. Now in his third term as governor—a position from which he must resign—Warren has had almost complete support of both major parties in California. He polled more than a million votes over Democrat James Roosevelt in 1950. Four years earlier he won both party primaries.

In selecting the Californian for Chief Justice, Eisenhower described him as a middle-of-the roader. Many of his policies conform to those of the President. Yet his appointment can in no way be called a repayment of a campaign debt by Ike, for Warren makes no bargains and is not a politician in the sense of the word. He lays too much on the line.

Some Republicans regard him as a liberal bordering on socialism. Any chance he might have had for nomination in the 1952 party convention was blocked by extremists.

The appointee terms himself a "progressive Republican trying to keep up with the times." Warren feels that although Americans aren't socialists, they must commit themselves to social progress.

He is an advocate of social security and favors compulsory health insurance. Labor accepts him because he has spoken out for collective bargaining and the right to strike. And as a coastal state governor, Warren goes along with state ownership of offshore submerged lands. He believes in the United Nations and aid to the peoples of the free world. And his record has been bi-partisan.

The new Chief Justice will face a full agenda this fall in a session that includes the school-segregation issues, called by some the most explosive problem since the Dred Scott decision.

Warren is convinced of "one law for all men." He will bring such sensible and moderate views to the court and as Chief Justice should help to rebuild confidence and consistency needed in an objective tribunal.

Stan Kenton And Jazz Coming Back

Perhaps the greatest collection of jazz personalities ever gathered under one Syracuse roof will be featured in the War Memorial auditorium on the evening of Nov. 13, it was revealed yesterday by the Syracuse Nationals office.

The impressive showcase of talent, itled "The Festival of Modern American Music", will feature the orchestra of Stan Kenton, blonde vocal stylist June Christy and the progressive sounds of Dizzy Gillespie and Stan Getz plus several yet-be announced attractions.

The show, sponsored by the Syracuse National's corporation, is one of the first of its type to play Syracuse in many years and the local bookers promise that special plans will be formulated for campus music fans who are certain to be sent into rapture over such a production.

Stan Kenton, recently returned from a highly successful tour of Europe, is a favorite with local audiences who are familiar with his modern moods from The Man's Capitol recording. Kenton's most recent Syracuse appearance was in the fall of '52 with the "Biggest Show" series.

A former Kenton vocalist, June Christy came out of a semi-retirement to accompany Stan on his European tour and it appears that the arrangement may continue. Hill platter collectors have placed Miss Christy in their particular Hall of Fame with such recordings as "I Remember April."

The combos of Dizzy Gillespie and Stan Getz are numbered among the finest by those with a taste for the very progressive interpretation of music.

Alright. Flip your lids now, you crazy moderns.

Sunny Columbus

Thumbing through a news release on European tours we came across the following paragraph which needs no further comment:

"With its narrow winding streets and Moorish-Roman architecture, Barcelona appears much more like a provincial town than an important port city. Yet many expeditions to the New World sailed from there. A statue of Christopher Columbus looks out over the harbor and a replica of his "Santa Monica" is tied up at the docks."

Coeds Corner Will Highlight Feminine News

There is nothing like a dame. She makes the world go round, provides interest in boring classes, makes surveys like Dr. Kinsey's possible. For all these attributes she certainly deserves some special attention. So . . . .

by Juli...

Informal fashions created by Coeds Corners own designer. Perfect for lounging, studying or to wear when washing clothes. Always be assured of being smartly dressed even if your only companion is a box of soap flakes.

The figure holding the book wears tight toreador pants and a jersey blouse with loose neckline.

The next model wears a lounging coat of multicolored striped cotton.

Ski pyjamas are worn by the gal holding the candle. Fireman's red is a popular color for this outfit.

The last figure wears a boxey lounging coat that has huge envelope pockets and high collar.

With this issue of the Daily Orange there is born a new women's page to be called Coeds Corner. This is the page for the gal deep in Bill Orange's heart. This is the page where fashions, features and lots of feminine fun will always fill all eight columns.

Here's a sneak preview of what will be printed on Coeds Corner in future issues.

FIRST, THERE will be fashion illustrations drawn exclusively for this page by Juli, our answer to Vogue, who will give you the campus dress angle with a drape by Christian Dior thrown in.

Also, the famous photographer of feminine angles Pete Preston is out right now developing some interesting shots.

Fascinating and intriguing interviews with famous and campus figures about things you never thought coeds cared about or did will be a regular feature on this page.

Some big men on campus are going to sound-off on what they think of that highly controversial lady of movies, calendars and plunging necklines, Marilyn Monroe.

OUR OWN etiquette authority will give you the lowndown, or rather the highbrow points on soup spoons, coke bottles and colored dungarees.

These are just a sample of what will be forthcoming on Coeds Corner. Any ideas would be appreciated.

And remember, for feminine fun, features, and foibles please look us up, everytime.

'Blonde Bombshell' is Only Gal In Syracuse Student Flying Club

By LIZ GODDARD

Eleanor Worster, senior sociology major, holds an enviable position as the only woman in the Syracuse Flying Club.

"I don't know whether to proud of it or not," she said. "At least the boys listen to what I say when I get the chance to talk at meetings."

CALLED THE "Blonde Bombshell" by club members, Ellie says she flies for relaxation. Holder of a private pilot's license and with more than 125 air hours to her credit, she also serves on the clubs board of directors.

Eleanor Worster

The organization, officially known as the Syracuse Student Flying Club, Inc., owns two planes. Its 25 members, mostly student pilots, are from the city as well as the University. At present the club is grounded due to financial difficulties.

Ellie, now 21, earned her license early last year at Stephens Junior College in Columbia, Mo. There she piloted a plane two hours each day.

Recalling her first cross-country flight, a 300-mile trip, Ellie said she flew over the airport without noticing it and spent an hour finding it again.

"IT ISN'T a license requirement to be able to map courses mathematically," she explained, "but it certainly helps."

She thinks a woman generally finds the mechanical part of flying most difficult. "You have to know all about the engine and how it repair it," she said. "You can't just pull into a garage when you're in mid air."

The blonde coed believes more women can and should learn to fly. "It takes a lot of nerve to

Ellie hopes to become a flight instructor eventually. She confessed to being afraid to operate the elevator in her own home. "I know it's silly but I keep thinking it's going to fall."

Outing Club Plans Open House

This coming Saturday, Oct. 3 at 8:00 p.m., the Syracuse University Outing Club is opening the season with an Open House at the Ski Lodge. Admission and refreshments are free. Slides will be shown of trips and activities. All students and faculty are invited.

Anyone who is interested in horseback riding and is a member of the Outing Club may ride for a special rate; included are some instructions. At 12 noon this Saturday the group will meet in front of the main library.

On Sunday the group will make its annual trip to Clark reservation. This will be the first hike of the season for the group. At 2 p.m. members will meet at the Ski lodge and they will stay for a picnic supper. Those who go should bring their own lunches. A return trip will be made in time for Folk Singing in the Women's building at 7:30 p.m.

Memo On Manners

A girl with manners is always welcome wherever people gather. If she is a guest her attendance is a pleasure for she is never loud or brazen, but courteous and a good listener.

If she is a hostess her invitations will never be turned down. She'll never have to worry about faked excuses because those invited just don't care for her manners.

WHEN THE girl who knows her do's and don'ts manner-wise introduces people she does the correct thing of presenting the gentleman to the lady and not the other way around.

She remembers names no matter how strange or nearly unpronounceable they may be. Anyone who can get through an introduction like "Mr. Cholmondeley Sniggle meet Miss Eldora Schimelfeffie" deserve an "A" rating in any guest book.

A little trick this smart hostess has is to mention something complimentary about each person as she introduces them.

When others are deep in conversation she does not barge right in and insist that they listen to her description of "that charming little hat with the perky bow that I almost bought but can you imagine how much it cost—though it really was worth the money—only I didn't have that much with me."

THE SMART hostess does not introduce people and then minutes later come charging back to introduce them to her third cousin Ethel from Idaho or to a friend who is a friend of Bob's mother's great aunt.

Is this girl you?

NEXT ISSUE OF Coeds Corner will feature a story about campus men and Marilyn Monroe.

Fashion Notes On Campus Wear

Mr. Dior's new skirt length is really the fashion news of the year but it will be quite a while before copies of his creations appear on the Syracuse campus.

In the meantime the news in fashion on campus is separates. They provide the greatest possibilities for getting the most outfits from a minimum capital.

FROM ANY BASIC OUTFIT you can derive nearly a dozen others simply by the use of accessories. To a plain shirt and jersey blouse a huge cummerbund of brilliant color is added and presto, a smart outfit.

Leather and tweed skirts are high fashion this winter. Leather comes in a spectrum of colors and as for tweeds, well there it's the txeture that counts.

Orlon sweaters are popular now. Particularly the kind that have rosebud ribbon embroidery around the neck or down the front of a cardigan. Other decorations are seed pearls, sequins, rhinestones.

Sweaters can also be hand-embroidered in exactly the design and with just the type of trimming desired. Knitting stores and the sewing departments of big stores carry embroidery that can be bought by the piece and just tacked onto the sweater.

FOR LOUNGING there are comfortable toreador pants available in an infinite variety of materials. Paisley prints on quilted cotton are exceptionally pretty and moderately priced.

Suits are always in style and this year there are many that have boxey jackets and instead of just a matching skirt there is a jumper with a detachable top so there are really three outfits in one: a regular suit consisting of jacket and skirt, then jumper and jacket combination or jumper alone.

Plan Now for '54 Trip

The beginning of October might seem a little early to be talking about plans for next summer, but when the talk concerns something as important as a trip to Europe it's never too early to begin.

Experiment in International Living is the kind of a trip that does not rush madly from one tourist sight to another but helps those on the trip to get to know the country of their choice really well.

"EXPERIMENT" tours specialize in placing those on the trip in a European family home in the country preferred. The American will find people of her age in that family.

For one month the American styled shoe. Hgih, slender heels and pointed toe are the features. will live and play the way her hosts do. In this way learning the real side of the people comes easily.

For the second summer month there is a trip over the country with the rest of the Americans on the tour and the young people from the European homes in which they stayed.

Just before the boat sails for the American shore at the end of August there is one free week in which the Americans can go anywhere they please.

Further information about "Experiment" tours is available by writing to Experiment in International Living, Putney, Ver-

WSG ASSEMBLY

Any city coed desiring a seat on the WSG assembly must turn in a petition signed by 20 city students to the WSG office by Tuesday.

Frosh Listen; Just for You

This is a story just for freshman women.

Here for all you little beanie wearers is a preview of what you can expect in the coming year in this northern outpost called Syracuse University.

First of all the cold weather will soon be here with all the fury of an unleashed lion plus a few tornado-like winds just to stir things up a bit.

IF YOU haven't brought your heavy, heavy winter clothes with you either send for them special delivery or else make plans to spend the rest of the winter indoors.

If there is someone you know who will lend you a portable electric blanket this would be the ideal thing to have.

But of course the snow has its advantages. Sometimes it covers the ground so well classes can hardly be held. And after the walks have been cleaned and an invisible sheet of ice has formed, then there is the added delight of wondering if you will make it safely down the hills without making it a special journey to the infirmary.

Then there will be days when it just rains and rains and the sky never stops dripping. Everyone goes around with hair looking like flappy shoelaces and even slickers don't do much good. And after the rain comes the mud. Euch fun to sink your clean white bucks into.

BUT OF COURSE the snow and rain and winds are really things we could not do without up here. How else could we enjoy the annual Syracuse-Colgate football game if we didn't huddle together on freezing concrete seats and risk an attack of double pneumonia.

Love Probed Under Microscope; Science Discovers Unusual Facts

By FLIP SIROTA
Coeds Corner Editor

Down through the ages scientists and plain everyday people too, have been trying to learn the secret of why and how girls react to the opposite sex and vice versa.

Since the invention of the microscope and long before Dr. Kinsey's survey were even one shocking statistic in the dear guy's head, scientists have been working intensively to learn the facts about a successful romance and happy marriage. They put love under a microscope and came up with some surprising answers that may cause some coeds to sit back and think and maybe discard a few old ideas.

Q. Can a girl be in love with more than one man at the same time?

A. According to surveys a great many are. Women think they are capable of loving two or more males at the same time. College coeds, statistics show, are definitely not monogamous in their heart feelings.

Q. What personality factors may cause love to pass you by?

A. Here are some findings that are likely to be surprising. Attributes such as fatness, bad taste in clothing, or sloppiness, shyness or stubbornness are not decisive factors.

Qualities most likely to put a damper on your romance rating are: 1—independence; 2—choosiness—being overcritical in choice of husband. (After all there is only one Gregory Peck); 3—fear of the opposite sex; 4—lack of a come-hither look.

Q. Is starry-eyed love a good basis for marriage?

A. A noted marital relations authority says those stars in a gals eyes are the true glue that keeps a marriage together. Independence from parents and agreement on everyday matters are also important.

But the kind of love that causes "cardial respiratory phenomena" accompanied by daziness and confusion which results in putting the left shoe on the right foot is the true kind. So, if the love bug doesn't bite hard just apply some soothing application and sally forth for another round.

Q. How can one tell if it's the real thing or just infatuation?

A. Easy. Just wait a bit. Studies show infatuations seldom last more than a month or two. Caution: take your time. If not, you'll probably wake up with a wedding ring plus an emotional hangover.

Q. How are people most likely to meet the person they are going to marry?

A. Here Lady Luck and the law of chance play leading roles. Many meet their future mates through mutual friends. A good many meet on blind dates. Very few marry high school sweethearts and no one has ever married a knight in shining armor who appeared on a prancing white horse and carried them off.

Q. What happens if you are disappointed in love?

A. Unless one is luckier than average she is likely to have at least one love flop that seems so serious at the time they doubt if they will ever recover. Remedy: just pick up the pieces and begin again.

Science says that no matter what your type of personality there are many people ideally suited to you and you will meet them if you just give time a chance. The world is full of people who have drawn a couple of blanks before hitting the jackpot. So happy hunting gals.

Priceless Pennies?

"BANDWAGON"

"The Bandwagon" ranks as the best musical film of the year to date in the company of a couple others greats like "Hans Christian Anderson." Forsaking, of course, the plot in each case.

Just Some Jokes

Coeds sometimes can be awfully funny.

Some of the things they do make even other coeds wonder.

Back in the 1870's when coeds, only they were called ladies then, first started to travel on railroad trains they took ludicrous precautions to make sure no male strangers spoke to them during the journey.

One way was to carry an armful of fluffy, trailing blankets bundled around something that occasionaly emitted a mournful wail. The illusion of motherhood was achieved by a crying baby doll. No young men spoke to them.

Then there is the story of the coed who was alarmed that the letter she just mailed would never reach its destination because the envelope was upside-down when she put the address on it so how would the mailman be able to read where it was going?

There is nothing that could be so gratifying to a coed as to see her boyfriend's ex-flame with her haid flapping like wet shoelaces from the rain.

When a coed's allowance says she can buy that extra dessert her waistline tells her she better not.

A pretty redhead gal walked down the street window-shopping. After awhile she noticed a smooth Latin type following her. She turned to him indignantly. "You've been following me for blocks but you can stop right now. I'm not the type of girl you can pick up."

The Latin bowed and smiled. "My dear lady," he said, "I am not picking you up. I am picking you out."

It worked!

If kissing is the language of love an awful lot of people like to talk things over.

Drum Major, Twirler Will Lead Marching Band

Twirler Eunice Mallott

Drum Major Alta Burg

By POLLY REED

Dottie Grover has stepped aside.

Now Syracuse has a double barrelled combination to lead the marching band and entertain the fans for the next four years.

Drum major Alta Burg and twirler Eunice Mallott are the answer.

Two twirlers are always better than one, and that's what we have now. We're not sure whether fans will flock to Archbold to see the Piety eleven or Eunice and Alta, but for ourselves, we are really impressed upon meeting these two girls who surprised fans who believed that there's "only one Dottie." That may be so, but we'll take Eunice and Alta are taking over nicely.

ALTA comes from Red Lion, Pa. She worked on her high school newspaper, was in the glee club, dramatics, and Girl's Athletic association. A Liberal Arts girl, she's heading toward a physical education career.

When interviewed at her campus home, Woodworth cottage, she said she liked Syracuse men, because "they're so stall. In high school they were all so shrimpy."

WE DISCOVERED that both of us like steak, lobster, and shrimp. When I commented that if this were ever printed, we'd never get any dates, she quickly replied, "Just put down hot dogs!" That's the kind of girl Alta is, natural, with a sense of humor, and a dash of Syracuse freshman thrown in.

Alta's first championship came when Penn State sponsored a twirling contest for all Pennsylvania high schoolers. The state championship was at stake. There Alta won the first of a string of titles.

Her national champion title came in St. Paul, Minn., where she won first the junior title, then went back next year and copped the senior title.

Alta needs plenty of room for baton practice. At home, she once threw the batons too high and they sailed through the ceiling.

Accidents during performances are nothing new to Alta. Once a baton caught in her skirt hem and ripped the whole thing off. She laughs over it now, though it seemed pretty serious at the time, when two Goons walked up and started talking. First they made me smile, then laugh. I felt better and really began to like Syracuse.

"It certainly is the friendliest campus I've ever been on. People at other colleges where I twirled when still in high school seldom smiled and spoke on campus like Syracusans do."

Eunice and Alta are looking forward to four years of twirling at Syracuse. And Syracuse is looking forward to four years of Eunice and Alta. The two girls form a combination that this reporter views as unbeatable; combined they are Pennsylvania champion, New York state champion, Eastern States champion, Letter Carrier's champion, American Legion sweetheart, and national American champion. What more could one ask for?

"I'm just glad nothing like that has happened in several years," she said.

EUNICE BALLOT, lovely twirler from White Plains, N. Y., has had several similar mishaps.

"I think the worst time was when I was twirling as sweetheart of the American Legion in New York City. An 80 piece band formed a circle around me in front of the Governor Clinton Hotel in NYC. Loudspeakers announced that I had never lost a baton, and that I hadn't dropped it once in a week of competition. At the very end of my routine, the baton slipped and flew into the midriff of a very portly clarinet player. He just folded like an accordian!"

The pert miss is New York State twirling champion, Eastern States champ, and Letter Carriers national champion, in addition to being the American Legion's favorite.

EUNICE thanks the Goon Squad for making her feel right at home here. "The first day it was raining, and I hadn't had much sleep for several nights. I was sitting on the steps of Marshall cottage feeling miserable,

Whose name is lost among a team
Of 50 guys named "Dick."

I'm glad to see they're playing now
With 11 at a time
Instead of switching 22
When someone crossed a line.

Old Archbold has not changed much
And the football game they play
Is like the game that I was in Back in the good, old day.

I used to run and pass that way
And I was all right too
Oh to be on the field tonight
As I was in '22.

BILL ORANGE SAYS: In some quarters, Boston U. is being quoted as three touchdowns underdogs but you can't prove it by Ben Schwartzwalder. Ben has maintained since the beginning of the season that BU could be a tougher game than most people think.

A New York newspaper bore out the Syracuse coach's conviction by making the Orange just 5-point favorites. Any team which can run up four yards to every one of Yale's and maintain a 3-1 yardage ration against Harvard should have something.

Terriers to watch include line-busting Sam Pino who was outstanding against the Orange in 1950. Fresh out of the Marine Corps, Pino will have the way cleared for him by all-American possibility Capt. Ray Cataloni at guard.

A sleeper to watch is little Johnny Nunziato, quarterback, listed at 148 pounds soaking wet and standing only 5-4. The Somerville senior has looked well in pre-season practice and will be doing his best to step into legendary Harry Agganis' shoes.

Booters Encounter Big Red Tomorrow

Soph Gets His Chance

DON LAAKSONEN will be filling in for the injured Bill Wetzel at fullback tonight when the Pietymen play their second home game of the season at Archbold Stadium against the Boston University Terriers.

By STAN ROSENFELD

Syracuse's powerful soccer team opens its season tomorrow afternoon against Cornell at Ithaca. Playing the first of a six-game schedule, Coach Andy Coccari's veteran crew are in for a tough test against an improved band of Redmen.

The big change in the Hill lineup will see Eric Zwerts, a newcomer to Syracuse soccer at the starting goal. Zwerts who was sidelined last year with a broken leg is fast rounding into playing shape. AS SOON as the big fellow can move around a little better, he probably will be switched to the center forward slot. Meanwhile his presence in the net should add greatly to the Piety defense.

Sig Wirth and Bill Nelson, both of whom have received all-American ratings during their collegiate careers, will be on the attack for the Orangemen. This duo is probably as good as can be seen in intercollegiate play.

Gunnar Wirth, the other half of the brother combination will also be at a forward slot for Coccari's crew. There was a possibility that Wirth would start at goal, but he was freed for the attack with the return of Zwerts.

Don Shupe, a newcomer and veteran Nick Razos looked very good for the Hill booters in their recent scrimmages. Shupe, a halfback, is also a member of Bob Grieve's track team and his speed blends in well with the Syracuse attack. Razos has been throwing his sturdy frame around with a great deal of ability and hustle.

DEFENSE, WHICH was the standby of last year's once-beaten Hill soccermen, again shapes up very well. Capt. Don Moller is the anchor of a sturdy wall. Chuck Mayhood and Duncan Robb also figure prominently in the Orange plans.

While not looking very sharp against Sampson, it must be remembered that it was only a practice scrimmage. Sampson came here anticipating a regular season game, and played their first stringers throughout. Coach Coccari, meanwhile, substituted freely in an attempt to get a better line on his boys.

Sampson opened its season with an impressive 5-2 victory over Brockport Teachers last Saturday. They had been in practice for several weeks and were definitely in mid-season form.

Cornell has been practicing for about the same length of time as Syracuse and has not played any regular season games. This Saturday will be the opening test for both teams.

The Orange booters played an early season scrimmage with the Brockport State Teachers team and showed to better advantage then in the Sampson contest.

Four of the six games on the Hill soccer schedule will be contested away from home. Besides the Cornell tilt, Syracuse will face Cortland State, Union and Sampson on the road. Our only home engagements will be with Hobart and Colgate.

Frosh Tennis

All freshmen tennis aspirants are urged to see Coach Francis O'Brien this afternoon at 3 on the upper courts at Skytop. Practice will be held this fall as long as good weather continues.

Football Managers

All freshmen and sophomore men wishing to try out for football manager should report to Al Zak in the Archbold stadium locker room any afternoon this week.

Football . . .

Dame mainstay four and five years ago.

McClelland is one of the reasons that the Orange are leading the nation in rushing defense. A 225-pound table, Les teams with All-American nominee Bob Fleck to give Syracuse a stonewall line. McClelland's play against Temple gave rise to reports that he, also, is being mentioned for seasonal honors.

ASIDE FROM fullback, the Orange lineup will probably be the same tonight as started against Temple. Converted halfback Ray Perkins and Herb Steigler, showing improvement with each outing, will open at the end slots.

Extra-point kicker Jim George and McClelland will be the Orange tackles, teaming with guards Fleck and Sam Johnson to bloster the middle of the Syracuse forward wall. Kukowski, a standout in the Owl encounter and considered one of the best centers in the East, will be the center.

Leading the team from the quarterback slot will be veteran Pat Stark, a good passer and runner and a shrewd ballhandler. Rounding out the backfield are halfbacks Art Troilo and Bob Leberman and fullback Laaksonen, the only neophyte in the starting eleven.

Slated to see considerable action tonight on the basis of performances in last week's game and in practice sessions this week are quarterback Bruce Yancey, last year's safetyman on defense, who teams with Stark to make the signal-calling and passing position the strongest part of the team, and center Paul Slick who excelled while spelling Kukowski last week.

Also expected to see considerable action tonight are tackle Paul Kerkalian, ends Dino Hadjis, Pete Schwert, Whitey Brenneman, guard Cal Smith and backs Lyle Carlson, Mickey Rich and Sam Alexander.

Experienced Men Sought For Piety Sailing Squad

By JACK DICKERSON
Daily Orange Junior Editor

With only two of last year's first string skippers back this year, the Syracuse university sailing team has several openings for experienced varsity sailors as well as a few additional frosh for the freshman team.

Returned to the Hill this fall are team Captain Jack Cummings and last year's captain, Jack Dickerson, both juniors with a good amount of skippering background. Also returning this season are Anne McKenzie, a crew member on last year's varsity, and Mary Jean Perry, a prominent figure of last year's outstanding freshman team.

SOPHOMORES KEN Resen and Len Montague figure to come into their own as helmsmen this fall while Bob Latham, a junior, may also strengthen the Orange fleet. Resen, a member of Gus Eriksen's crew, was out most of last year due to crew workouts and Latham was ineligible.

Among the top candidates for the freshman team are upstaters Jay Short and Artie Arnold. Short is known as one of the top Snipe skippers in this area.

The varsity schedule lists six regattas this fall with two at home, two at Cornell and one each at Annapolis and Kings Point. The opening event will see the Orange sailing against Colgate and Cornell October 10, racing for the Bea Patterson Trophy. Two major trophies the varsity will compete for this fall are the Nevins Trophy at Kings Point and the War Memorial Trophy at Navy.

Freshman sailors are strongly urged to register with the freshman team. This fall the frosh team has two regattas scheduled with the opening one at Syracuse on October 18. The second regatta will be the Eastern Championship which is being held at Navy November 1.

GUS Erikson has replaced the sailors internationally famous coach, Stan Ogilvy, who has left Syracuse and is now at Hamilton College. Gus, better known as the crew coach, will be heading both the varsity and freshman teams in a bid to put the Orange sailors on top in the East.

Intercollegiate sailing on the Hill received a tremendous boost with the acquisition of ten dinghies last year. The team has made the Onondaga Yacht club its headquarters and holds its home meets on Onondaga lake. In the past season the Hill sailors have compiled an impressive record over major colleges in the east and mid-west.

The Schedule:
Oct. 10—Triad Regatta at Cornell; Oct. 17—Quadrangular at Syracuse; Oct. 24-25—Nevins Trophy at Kings Point; Oct. 31—Quadrangular at Syracuse; Nov. 7-8—Upstate championship at Cornell; Nov. 14-15—War Memorial Trophy at Navy.
Freshmen:
Oct. 18—Mid-Atlantic Eliminations at Syracuse; Nov. 1—Mid-Atlantic Championships at Navy.

Syracuse U Picked For Phys Ed Convo

The Syracuse university campus has been selected as the site for the 1954 conference of the Eastern District Association of the American Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation. The proposed dates for the meeting are September 10-12, 1954.

Syracuse was selected for the meeting at the seventh annual fall conference held this month at the University of Massachusetts, according to Dr. John H. Shaw, who will be conference manager next fall. Dr. Shaw is chairman of the physical education teacher training program here on the Hill.

The purpose of the fall meeting is to schedule the year's program for the 5,000-member association. Only association and regional officers and committeemen will attend the conference.

Fordham Opens

Syracuse's next football opponent, the Fordham Rams open their 1953 football season tonight when they invade the midwest to play the University of Detroit.

Donelli Rates Orange Footballers Better Than Lambert Winners

Single Platoon System No Problem for BU

By BOB LEFKO
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Boston University has a large supply of lettermen returning this year and prospects seem fairly optimistic for the squad. Nevertheless, the Terriers' coach, Buff Donelli feels that Syracuse will be "just too strong" in tonight's clash under the Archbold Stadium lights.

Commenting on the game after arriving at the Hotel Onondaga yesterday afternoon, the famous Buffer stated he didn't know whether he'd rather see the Orange pass or run since they would probably score either way.

AFTER SEEING last week's Orange tilt with Temple, the Terriers' mentor feels that the Saltines are even better than last year's Lambert Trophy squad. He stated that the Pietymen were "good in size, fast and extremely well-balanced."

The slightly-graying coaching veteran was pleased with the news that his squad won't have to contend with the powerful running of Bill Wetzel, who he said "killed us" last year.

Nevertheless, Donelli felt that Ben Schwartzwalder would find someone else to fill the gap satisfactorily. "After all," he stated, "he always does." In his opinion, either Don Laaksonen or Dick Darr is a capable substitute although they don't quite "hit as hard as Wetzel."

Commenting on the new single-platoon system, Donelli felt it would have little effect on his squad this year since most of the players went both ways last season. He felt the school's that will suffer greatest are those with greater material numerically which won't be able to put it to use.

HARRY AGGANIS, the great all-American quarterback is of course the biggest loss for the Buffer's squad. He was in Donelli's opinion, one of the greatest field-generals of all times. If he wasn't such a fine defensive player also, he might have been even more highly rated offensively according to his coach.

Donelli feels that by playing the entire game in the two-platoon era, Agganis lost the opportunity to more fully size up the situation and be even extra effective.

Boston U. has not yet played a game but has had two scrimmages, opposing Yale and Harvard. The Terriers made fine showings in both clashes but "neither squad compares with Syracuse," according to the unconfident coach.

Best BU's candidate to tage Agganis' place on the all-American lists is Capt. Ray Cataloni, left guard. The veteran was held back in his progress last year when he broke his leg in the season's opener. This season he is rated as the "outstanding player on the squad and easily the best in New England."

TAKING AGGANIS' spot at quarterback will be one of the smallest players in college football, John Nunziato. A 5 foot 4 inch, 150-pounder, he is considered a good ball-handler and a fine hustler. Nevertheless, his lack of height will greatly hinder the passing attack.

Pressing Nunziato for the spot is Tom Gastall, a former end. Donelli rates him above Nunziato as a passer but "lacking in experience." He also has the advantages of height over Nunziato on pass defense.

Another hotly-contested backfield post is at fullback where both Lou Petroca and Sam Pino will see action.

Pino was the only member of the Terriers who did not arrive with the team. He was released from the Marines at Cherry Point, N. C. only yesterday and at last reports was scurrying to make plane connections to Syracuse.

THE HARD-running fullback could turn into the star of the team later in the season but right now he is handicapped from rustiness. He practiced earlier in the season while on terminal leave but has been back at camp for 10 days, missing the practice sessions.

Petroca was the starting plunger on last season's squad and is rated one of BU's top runners. This is important since running will probably be the main facet of the Terriers offense with the lack of an outstanding thrower.

With Syracuse having such a strong center line, Donelli plans to do much running around the flanks. Called on for this duty will be two more veteran halfbacks, Lou Terrasi and Don DeFeudis.

Both are speedsters and should provide trouble for the Orange flankers, Ray Perkins and Herb Steigler. Last season they proved a good contrast to Agganis' passing with their speed but they may have more trouble carrying much of the load alone.

DONELLI DISCLOSED the rest of his starting line would find Jim Meredith and Marco Landon at the flanks, Don Fraser and Mike Vendetti at tackle, John Pappas at right guard and Frank Guiliano at center.

Most of these boys are experienced at both offense and defense having gone double time in 1952. Landon is the only one who may have trouble since he was strictly a defensive performer in the past.

After having had a chance to scout the Orange in last week's Temple game, it would seem that BU would have an advantage. Donelli feels differently though since he says "Schwartzwalder knows our system and personnel even though he hasn't been able to scout us."

In contrast, Buff feels that having "one game under their belt" will be a big help for the Saltines. One game can prove to be a big help and he says he has seen a team change like "night and day" from the opening to the second game.

Here He Is!

WE FOUND HIM! Les McClelland who reportedly appeared in yesterday's copy of The Daily Orange, didn't. Instead of big Les who will start at tackle for Orange Friday night, the picture was that of Jim Meredith a left end of Boston University fame.

LOU TERRASI will be manning the right halfback position for Boston university tonight when the eTrriers hook up with Syracuse in Archbold stadium. The veterans speedy end runs are expected to cause trouble for the Orange.

Yanks Win Again; Mantle's Homer Decides Contest

An eighth inning home run by Mickey Mantle, with Joe Collins on board provided the winning margin as the Yankees downed the Dodgers, 4-2 in the second game of the World Series. This victory gave the New Yorkers a 2-0 lead in the best of seven games.

Two lefties, Ed Lopat of the Yankees and Elwyn "Preacher" Roe of the Dodgers were engaged in a tight 2-2 deadlock in the bottom of the eighth when Mantle hit one high and far into the left field seats. It was the 21-year-old Commerce, Oklahoma prodigy's third series homer. He had hit two four-baggers in last year's series.

THE YANKEES opened up quickly in the first inning off Roe. They scored a run without the benefit of a base hit as the skinny Brook lefty was wild. He issued two walks and Berra's long fly brought in the run.

Lopat seemed on the ropes in the fourth inning as the boys from Flatbush pushed across two runs and threatened to break the game wide open. Steady Eddy beared down however, and stopped the threat.

Billy Martin collected his fourth hit of the series a fly ball which dropped over Jackie Robinson's leaping glove in the seventh to tie the score. The ball was caught by a lucky fan in the first row of seats.

Roy Campanella, slugging Dodger catcher, played despite a painfully swollen throwing hand. He had been hit by Allie Reynolds in the Series opener. Campy refused to have x-rays taken until the series was over.

As is the custom with most Dodger games, the boys required nearl ythree hours to reach a decision. Brooklyn no doubt would have settled for a shorter game and a win.

Tomorrow the series action will take place in Ebbetts field. The Brooklyn ballyard seats only 30,000 and all the seats should be filled.

The home of the Dodgers is condusive to power hitting. Furthest point of the park is in dead center field, only 402 feet away. The power of the Brooks, which so far has been practically dormant, might explode in this park.

The task of stopping the Dodgers, will rest upon the broad shoulders of Vic Raschi. His opponent will be Carl Erskine. Erskine lasted only one inning against the Yanks in the series opener.

"Big Vic" relies on an overpowering fast ball and a good curve. Erskine's best pitch is a slider, which he throws with an assortment of curves and a live fast ball. The slender Brook righty compiled a 20-6 record over the past year.

Ray Osterhaut Leading Runner As Orange Preps for Colgate

After one week of workouts, Coach Bob Grieve's varsity harriers are slowly rounding into shape in preparation for the Oct. 10 meet with the Colgate Red Raiders at the five mile Drumlins course.

Grieve plans to run the maximum 12 men in the Colgate meet to determine which of his boys will be used in the tougher runs later in the season.

ONLY CAPT. Ray Osterhout is sure of a starting role in all the varsity encounters for the coming campaign. His past performance indicate that the Orange endurance runner should have his best year in the hill and dale sport.

The Red Raiders possess two fine runners in Russ Bradshaw and Art Wallack, Bradshaw has developed greatly over the past two seasons and should prove Osterhout's chief threat for first place honors in the meet. He won the mile run in last year's Syracuse-Colgate track meet.

Little is known about the sophomores in the Colgate roster but unless there is a dark horse or two among them ,the Piety thinclads will be favored.

X-COUNTRY BRIEFS: Chuck McGlynn, a sprinter on last year's track team, has been working out with the team and may be a surprise starter in the Colgate run. Grieve says he will let him run if he feels he can go that distance . . . . Any lower classmen wishing to try for a spot on the harrier squad should see Coach Grieve in his office in Archbold gymnasium. The scenic Drumlins course gives the boys a chance to commute with mother Nature . . . . Grieve also seeks applicants for the job of x-country manager. Those interested should see him in his office.

Intra Program Begins Tuesday

Intramural football will get under way at 6:15 p.m. Tuesday night with ten games scheduled for the Hendricks field gridirons. The 30 minute contests will be played two at a time, the last one slated to start at 9:15 p.m.

Next week's schedule will be a curtailed one, but the intra pigskin program will feature a full card on four evenings of competition the following week.

Intramural Director Milt Howard reports that the touch football program must be finished by Thanksgiving, with competition expected to cover a six or seven week period.

Director Howard also disclosed that the intramural cross-country run will be held at the Drumlins course on October 31. He urged all participants to start training now for the gruelling 2.9 mile event.

Syracuse Speaks

(Editor's note: When Syracusans have something on their mind, Pete Preston is usually there to snap their photos and get their opinions. This time Pete asked what students thought of he present reserve seating system. Their answers—and photos—follow:)

By PETE PRESTON

John Brand, 115 College pl., New Rochelle, N. Y., fine arts '54

The present seating arrangement is wholly unfair to organizations and individual students. To my knowledge, it was never approved by any student government. I heave heard that it was decided upon by an executive agreement. Even if it means spliting the student section, putting the paying customers between us, I think we deserve more and better seating.

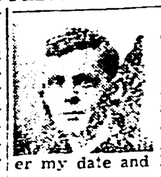
I think it's senseless! With all the upperclassmen in the placard cheering section, the cheering is a complete failure. My idea—either no reserved seating or no placard cheering.

Mary McElroy, Peck H, Sidney, N. Y., liberal arts, '56

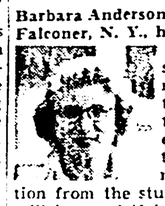
The seniority reserved seat plan is all right, but should be carried out all the way. That is: say if an upperclass boy dates a lowerclass girl, they should be allowed to sit in the upperclass section.

Edward Porteous, 412 S. Beech st., liberal arts, '56
(Transfer from Bowling Green university)



I'm a city student and I date a city girl. Reserved seating fouled up the seating enough at the Temple game so that after my date and I had to go into the stadium at different gates, I never did meet her again until after the game. Also my so-called reserved seat was on the five-yard line and I could just about see the game. Now, at Bowling Green, they work reserved seating so the students sit on one side of the field and the paying customers sit on the other.

Barbara Anderson, 125 Euclid ave., Falconer, N. Y., home ec, '55



This reserved seating plan needs two things, in my estimation. More explanation to the students and more co-operation from the students. I think it will be good if it can be worked out. It will mean less confusion but also less cheering. in some better way.

Allan Saiger, 1014 Euclid ave., liberal arts, '56

I think it will be good if it works. At the Temple game, I didn't get there until just before the game started and my reserved seat had been taken. I guess everybody just sat where they wanted to.

Tours Scheduled For New Rushees

This year inaugurates a new rushing policy. To ease confusion often attendant at open houses, a conducted tour for groups of rushees has been planned.

An alumnae from each house will act as guide and the group will leave the Women's building at 1:15 to make the first appointment at 1:30 p.m. Rushees will stay at the first house, then proceed to the next, allowing five minutes between visists.

Groups 1 through 10 will meet Saturday in the dance studio on the second floor of the Women's building.

Group 1, Abdallan, J., to Basil, M., 2, Batka, I. to Dorda, 3, Bawka to Cantore, 4. Caramella to Combs, 5. Connor to Davis, 6. Denhard to Fandrich, 7. Farrall to Gildea, 8. Gilkey to Hargroves, 9. Harner to Holsten, 10. Hotchkiss to King. Groups 11 through 19 meet in the third floor lounge of the Women's building.

Group 11. King to Lofgren, 12. Lotz to Malitor, 13. Malymeux to Noone, 14. O'Brien to Polakas, 15. Pollack to Sansone, 16. Sass to Simpson, 17. Skiele to Terwilliger, 18. Teschmacher to Wolworth, 19. Warner to Youngs.

Groups 101 to 106 will meet at 1:15 in the lobby.

state, in the United States, and in foreign countries will also be able to contract to use time, and the university will utilize it for instructional purposes.

The Syracuse university device, which will be one of the largest in the world, is particularly important because it will help meet the demands for analyzer usage resulting from the huge expansion program in the New York State and nation-wide utility industry.

Two University faculty members have spent the past year learning to operate the elaborate electrical brain so that they will be able to help the companies and train students in its use. D. William Spence, instructor of electrical engineering, will be in charge of its operation when it is installed on the campus. Charles R. Cahn, also an engineering instructor, will assist.

Rushing Open House Slated for Tomorrow

Informal fraernity rushing begins tomorrow as fraternities hold their first open house, Rushing Chairman Arthur Finger announced Friday.

There will be four open houses before formal rushing begins. Tomorrow's session is scheduled for 7:30-9:30 p.m. Other dates are: Friday, 7:30-9:30 p. m.; Sunday, 2-5 p.m., and Tuesday, Oct. 13, 7:30-9:30 p.m.

A CONVOCATION will be held at 7:30 p.m., Monday, Oct. 12 in Hendricks chapel for those planning formal rushing. All rushees must attend the convocation to learn formal rushing procedure, Finger said.

Formal rushing starts Wednesday, Oct. 14, when rushees should file bids for the rushing sessions and pay the fee of $2 in the Trophy room of Archbold gymnasium.

The rushing pamphlet, "Meet the Greeks" and The Daily Orange should be consulted for information on rushing schedules and procedure. Frederick Briggs, 75-2056 and Finger, 75-9407, will answer any questions on rushing.

Shaw Acquires Adjacent Property

The University has no plans at present to build an addition to Shaw dormitory on property at Ostrom and Euclid ave. recently acquired from the heirs of Mrs. Isabella Miller, Hugh C. Gregg, University vice president and treasurer, said yesterday.

The frame house on the corner property was inhabited by Mrs. Miller until her death in December. She did not want to sell to the University at the time that plans were laid for the dormitory, Gregg said.

The house is being razed and the land will be graded and seeded in accordance with the general landscaping plans of Shaw.

The dormitory was built with plans allowing for possible extension onto the new property. Such an addition in the future is not out of the question, the vice president reported.

Applications Ready For Draft Test Scheduled Nov. 19

Applications for the selective service college qualifying tests are now available in the office of the dean of men. Deadline for filing for the Nov. 19 exam is Nov. 2.

Earle W. Clifford, assistant dean of men, advises all students registered with selective service to take the test.

THE EXAM, three hours long, provides evidence for the use of local boards in considering a student for deferment from military service. Syracuse university will be one of approximately 1,000 examination centers.

Skytop freshmen received application materials last night at house meetings. Distribution point for city freshmen will be the City Men's lounge, 202 Waverly avenue. The resident advisor in charge may be contacted for application blanks and information.

If an undergraduate student scores above 70, he may be deferred. Graduate students must score 75 to receive a deferment based on the exam.

This is a way toward a deferment in addition to class standing, Clifford stressed, and advised that all students who have not taken the test should do so this year.

"Specialization in any area tends to work adversely in a general test of this type, and therefore the sooner a student takes the test, the beter he will probably do," Clifford said.

Reserved Tickets Available Today

Reserved seating for Saturday afternoon's football game with Fordham university will be available to graduate students and seniors from 2 to 5 p.m. today in the Trophy room of Archbold gymnasium.

Juniors will be able to pick up ducats tomorrow, sophomores Wednesday and freshmen Thursday. Groups desiring block seating must wait until Friday to pick up their tickets.

Two persons wanting to sit together may get reserved seats on the day allotted to one higher in class.

Medical, Dental Aids Offered

One hundred medical and dental scholarships of $750 a year will be awarded by New York State to state residents upon the basis of merit on an examination scheduled for October 26, Edwin D. Smith, assistant dean of Liberal Arts, announced yesterday.

Applications for admission to the competition may be obtained from Dean Smith and must be filed by October 15, 1953 with the Bureau of Examinations and Testing, State Education department, Albany 1.

House Presidents Eligible to Vote In New Assembly

By EILEEN CHAMBERLAIN
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Campus house presidents will attend the first meeting of the women's student government assembly Wednesday evening and the first session of the newly-inaugurated house presidents' training program tomorrow night.

For the first time representatives elected by the women students will have voting seats in a body which was formerly composed of campus leaders, junior officers and WSG officers. The assembly replaces the old council, which was abolished when coeds approved a new WSG constitution in last spring's elections.

THE CHANGE from council to assembly, in which the presideut of the house presidents assembly becomes speaker of the WSG assembly, is one of three major ones in the new constitution. The WSG president switches from presiding officer to coordinator of women's student government affairs.

Dean M. Eunice Hilton of the College of Home Economics will address the house presidents tomorrow night and Speaker of the Assembly Patricia Fay will preside over the meeting.

WSG junior officers, although they are panel chairmen, assume an ex-officio role with no vote in the assembly.

Panel chairmen for the coming year are Dorianne Bright, public relations; Mary Elizabeth Hazard, academics; Lois Clark, organization and internal structure; Pa-

THE HOUSE policy panel is new this year. Formerly two junior officers were assigned to chair the student welfare group.

In order to handle problems that previously arose in HPA, the house policy panel was formed to cut unnecessary deliberation in the assembly over individual house problems.

The second major innovation under the new constitution is the adoption of the standards council. Formerly the regulations board, standards council was proposed to draw closer parallels in top levels of government with the standards council in women's living centers.

Composition of standards council is about the same as that of reg board, but in addition to de-

Salt City Five Comes Home For Autumn Engagements

A rejuvinated Salt City Five this week kicks off a fall season of engagements which will take them as far from home as Puerto Rico and as close as Syracuse's "Memory Lane."

The Five, born on the Syracuse campus several years ago when all the boys were Hill music majors, made a brief local stop this week with a special two-day engagement at "Memory Lane."

Following a show in New York city over the weekend, they will travel to Puerto Rico to bring their particular brand of jump music to naval bases and army camps on the island.

FORMER ARTHUR Godfrey "Talent Scout" winners, the instrumental group plans to hop back to Syracuse as often as possible between their metropolitan engagements.

Will Alger and his Salt City men have received several decided boosts in the past few months from the country's jazz fans and the music critics. They tied for sixth place in a poll conducted by "Downbeat" magazine among the nation's music critics regarding their favorite instrumental combo.

Stephen White, columnist for Look magazine, gave the Five an orchid in one of his recent columns and they were the subject of an article by George Hoefer in "Downbeat" in which the jazz writer referred to Will Alger's crew as "a top Dixieland Hope."

The boys now boast an entirely new routine built around their music and they term it "the most, to say the least."

THE DIXIELAND combo has played in many major night spots in the east. They have been featured at the famed Frank Dailey's Meadowbrook in New Jersey.

Last year, after Syracuse won its last football game—an "away" tilt at Fordham—literally thousands of Syracusans jammed Child's Paramount on Broadway to hear the familiar group.

It was Syracuse night then—and it seems to be Syracuse night everytime some Hill students gather to hear Uncle Will and the boys.

AGRICULTURE

Young Republicans Hear Dean Stone

Robert E. Stone, dean of the College of Business Administration, said yesterday that loyalty to the country should come before loyalty to the party. He addressed the first meeting of the Young Republican club of Syracuse university last Thursday night.

Dean Stone emphasized that a person should not vote for the party but for the candidate who is running. He also suggested that "bigness in business was inevitable if we want efficiency," but that "many problems would arise from expansion."

THE DEAN stated that "the people of this country had no choice and no idea of the delegates that went to Chicago to choose the presidential candidates, because the delegates were elected by committeemen who were in turn elected by their friends."

Also on the agenda was an address made by Ben Carroll of the local Republican club. He stressed the idea that with intelligence, organization and money, anything would be accomplished in politics." Carroll advised the group that in order to be successful in politics one

Special Students Attend Hill Games

Under a policy started last year, Syracuse university played host Friday night to more than a thousand high school students from Central New York.

The University sent invitations to 62 schools. Twelve hundred high schoolers attended the Temple game and about 1,500 are expected next Friday. All high school students sit together.

Faculty Members Present Papers

Three faculty members of the College of Engineering presented papers on network synthesis at the National Electronics Conference held in Chicago, Ill., last week.

Dr. Samuel Seely, chairman of the electrical engineering department, spoke on "The Role of Analytic Continuation in Network Synthesis." The topic presented by Dr. Wilbur R. LePage, professor of electrical engineering, was "The Role of Conformal Transformations in Network Synthesis." "Formulation of the Approximation Problem" was discussed by Norman Balabanian, instructor of electrical engineering.

Get in the whirlwind

The whirlwind we call rushing is once more upon us.

For the next few weeks freshmen males and coeds (along with many upperclassmen) will be caught up almost completely in the first blast of this time consuming but important activity.

Whether or not Suzie and Freddie Frosh have already decided to "go Greek" or remain independent, we urge that they both attend the first rushing sessions.

One sometimes fears or builds up unreasonable prejudices about that which he does not understand. As this is true in the world of physical science, so too does this relate to the fraternity—independent question.

The difference between the two groups is not so vast as some individuals have contended. Yet many freshmen enter the college campus with the idea that the addition of a Greek letter makes one a "social snob." If they do not see and actually meet the students from the fraternity and sorority houses, these myths may well persist for the remainder of their college life.

The cause of many misunderstandings that arise between representatives of the two groups can be traced back to this same problem. Never did the independent get an insight into the meaning of Greek activity. His ideas are still framed by the myths he learned even before entering the college atmosphere.

During this whirlwind, the rushee will find out at first hand, what sorority or fraternity students like to talk about, how they are dressed and act on such occasions and what type of living facilities they are offered.

No longer will he have to rely on pure hearsay for the "truth" about Greek life. He will have seen it at first range.

He may eventually find that the Alpha to Omega gamut is something into which he would not or could not be placed. He is free to leave the rushing program any time before the final selection.

But he did not lose anything from having attended the sessions. On the contrary, he has dispelled those myths and has seen the real "truth." No longer need he wonder about the Greek atmosphere, for he has been given some understanding into the lives and activities of these people. He may also end rushing with new friends—both among the Greek houses and among those rushing with him.

To be considered in any discussion on the value of becoming a fraternity man or sorority woman are the following questions:

Am I able to meet the scholastic requirements?

Can I assume the financial obligations that would be imposed by membership?

Will I have sufficient time to devote to a special group whose demands can rarely be shirked?

Are there other areas where my time and effort might better be applied?

Will intimate association with people of similar character and taste help or hinder my personal development?

These questions should be answered truthfully before making a final decision.

Ultimately, each freshman is faced with these questions and each answers according to his particular situation. It is only after a careful examination of both sides that he should finally select the road of "going Greek" or remaining independent.

'We' of th' World! Arise!

By ROGER HERZ

A hypothetical cynic we know started the fall blast the other day with a comment on spirit.

"Students at the game looked dead," he preached, "they're void of any pride."

Keep an ear to the ground.

We hear that word "they" and its equivalents too much for comfort.

"They're all doing it."

"Everyone eats there!"

"White bucks are the thing to wear."

"People just don't do that."

This diatribe isn't just in re the scuffed shoes, but the "they."

We claim "they" doesn't exist. "They" is a fiction in most cases.

Have you heard the excuse for poor government?

"The people don't care." Reduce "the people" to x and "they" to y, and x equals y.

We hereby propose a new word, a word more expensive considering our stockpile of ego.

The word we suggest: "we." It, too, is a pronoun, but in common usage it makes a world of difference.

"We" exists. There aren't many "theys" in the world.

Let's be vulgar for a minute. (That's vulgar in the sense of common, mon vieux.)

Who is responsible for poor spirit, poor government and a lot of other poors? Be brave: it's the "we" of the world.

We don't agree with the cynic. We think spirit round these parts is pretty good. Lots of people are plenty proud to go to what for us is the best University we've yet seen or heard of.

There's the place to start: let's remember that a major part of "we" is "me." Every day in every way we're not going to get better and better unless the various and assorted plurals of "me" do so individually.

Some will argue that effort ought to end at the "me" level. Our belief is that since we all live in the same crazy mixed-up world, we are our brother's keepers ad infinitum.

There's a difference between cynicism and cynical criticism. Maybe at times we blast a bit too bitterly. We aim to reform the human race. This is good, necessary and quite beneficial to our tattered planet. But let's remember the first person, too.

We hereby resolve to do a little saving of our own self. There's plenty of room aboard the "Excelsior." It's a long trip and takes a lifetime, but what a load can be accomplished.

To start, THINK. That's just about the biggest bigger than life size word that be. It's the key to all the ills of mankind. Think about voting. Think about what we say. Think about what we do. Think of how to do more better.

Prolix.

On Intangibles

By the Editorial Director

We now go into the second round of the intangible but oh so vocal element of rah at football games. Like everybody else, we haven't got much time to practice for the big Colgate tilt some 6 weeks off.

On the credit side: the band is getting better. In fact their marching was one of the few improvements on the field over the Temple game last week. They also are in good tune and quite brassy

We also thought Miss Burg was fine but are somewhat tired of gazing at the back of Miss Mallott who seems to have been imported to keep the collegiate foreigners across the bowl happy. We are also getting curious about what she may look like at close range.

The cheering squad really took the Orange followers over the course Friday night . . . our vocal chords rested not at all. But the old locomotive yell had better be abandoned until the looong squad can find some way to synchronize their hands in the going up and the coming down of same.

(By the way, the missionary work of the squad across the way in the visiting high school section may verily bring in converts; yea, the Syracuse multitude shall increase many fold.)

Placard cheering increased in numbers and acquired a voice more alto than soprano. However, must that voice constantly be in competition with the band? This was not the mode once upon a yesteryear.

Reserve seating is compromising itself into workability. It seemed to many people that the sections closed around 8 instead of kick-off time but we still didn't see any fist fights.

Well, that seems to take care of most of those invited to the show. We were fielding a 21-point favorite squad but comment on that would take us out of our field. In all fairness, we must say they gave us a thriller, and what is the sport for if not that?

Notes on B.U. Game

By HOMER

(After dinner on Marshall st. last night we dropped into the Hellbox and found these notes on the desk. They were on the back of an old Temple game program . . . the errant fellow had vanished leaving a torn Fordham pennant on the floor.)

Parked on Alumni house lawn and beat it around to stadium entrance. Packed . . . circled over to players entrance, empty . . . no players but couple guys in orange suits loping around. Tried to slip through . . . everything went black. Carried head around to student gate . . . shared box lunch and canteen with other waiting student. Said he'd been there since his 1 o'clock class. Finally got in at middle of second quarter . . . found my seat in reserved section filled. Asked fellow to move . . . everything went black. Got my head on right by half time my canteen half empty . . . somebody with propeller on hand in field, hot breath down the back of my neck, fellow panting on my left, gentleman being held down by two buddies on my right . . . that propellor base has deffinate wiggle, structural design odd. Everybody suddenly yelling . . . looking for team but only dog-on field, yelled at dog to hold that line . . . canteen down three-quarters. Game got started again, view getting hazy with that blasted canteen so low. Counted 64 men on field counting all four coaches and both cannons. Men in chartreuse suits with purple dots carrying ball toward picket fence at end of field . . . row of people facing student seating making vain attempts to fly . . . kept yelling at me to block that kick, kicked anyway, everything went black. Found my head under wooden bleachers, gun went off ending game . . . two TO's fainted from noise. Grabbed date and started scaling concrete wall to exit. Scaled placards off top seats, glide nicely . . . two-headed goon squader lurching toward me . . . some senior claiming my date. I emptied the canteen . . . everything went black.

1 OPINION CONCERNING 'ETERNITY'

"From Here to Eternity"

Reach into your pocket. Take out your wallet and handkerchief and start walking. Head toward Loew's Strand and you are ready to witness "From Here to Eternity." That is an experience; that is an accomplishment. The film, in comparison to the book of the same name, is washed up a bit, and nicely dried in parts with humor. The main feature, however, is alleged dramatic tension, which didn't quite succeed in its attempt. The plot was trite, but the stereophonic sound, effective photography and excellent character depiction somehow manage to camoflage all this.

Frank Sinatra proves himself in his dramatic role and the picture actually terminates before he gets a chance to sing.

Despite cries and sighs of, "Frank Sinatra is the greatest" and just plain cries and sighs over Lancaster, Montgomery Clift obviously carries the brunt of the picture, and, glancing at the outstretched eyeballs of any feminine viewer, he apparently "carries" his audience.

Swoon goons consistently brand Clift as an Adonis and are greatly "moved" (usually to the first row) by his verility. He has more than fine physical appearance; this man is an actor. Courageous he is, in his portrayal of a fighter determined not to return to the ominous ring. It is when this determination is attacked that we see the stoical facet of his character; when we see Montgomery Clift for what he is worth; the prominent star in a film which has disturbed television's cries of motion picture mediocrity; a star who colors the type of hero which will probably remain in the hearts of many from here . . . to eternity.

Campus Lites by Klenk

. . . and home to the dorm.

"...and the rains came."

The phrase "people talk about the weather but never do anything about it" rings true. But if anyone takes the chance to write about the weather, miracles are often effected.

Writers on this paper have at times taken a glance out the grimy window and gone off on a philosophical tangent about seared leaves and blustery winds. They learn better.

A week ago last Thursday we shivered into our longies and blew on our fingers a bit to type a curse about the chill in the air.

The next day it got warm. A freak, we said. The next day it got warmer . . . we've been muttering in our shirtsleeves for a week. Now is the time to recant. Syracuse weather through betrayal, is fine.

Blazes, last year we wrote a piece on the beautiful fall weather with burning leaves and stuff . . . the next morning there was six inches of snow on the ground.

Fini.

RELAXING WATCHING 'HOLIDAY'

"Roman Holiday"

First, introduce an attractive princess escaping from her tedious royal life; then, present an enterprising young newspaperman whose journalistic ethics are somewhat questionable; and finally, add romance.

These forces should combine to make a dull, trite, and cliched movie of little interest.

But under William Wyler's superb direction, using the picturesque scene of Rome as the actual location spot, and with veteran actor Gregory Peck and outstanding newcomer Audrey Hepburn as leads, the film sparkles in simplicity and naturalness.

The old plot of the princess of a mythical kingdom who forsakes her royal duties for a few days to go "on the town" is again revived.

This time it's Princess Anne (Miss Hepburn) who tires of the regal way and by chance meets an enterprising young journalist (Peck) who finds her highly interesting, both professionally and personally.

Then the fateful question arises: Will the journalist dine and wine the princess for the new story involved, or will he disregard all such pettiness for the sake of decency, honor, and love?

But the plot is not the important part of the picture. Director William Wyler has nicely blended naturalness and sophistication and has established a quick and even pace. The on-the-spot filming of the picture in Rome's splendor and beauty has provided a touch of authenticity, which aids immeasurably.

The real kudos of the day go to a complete unknown before the picture—Audrey Hepburn—for saving what otherwise might have been just a fair picture.

Greek Questin: Pro and Con

Along Fraternity Row

By AL BARTKEVICIUS

The problem of whether or not to "go Greek" has long been on that has plagued new students on the Hill and in colleges across th country. There have been innumerable arguments pro and con, son of them good, some of them completely illogical. With the man points to consider, it's no wonder that some people get lost in the own arguments and only confuse themselves.

Point one in almost everybody's argument would probably b the financial aspect. It is true that some fraternity houses are ou of the reach of many not-so-wealthy students. However, in th Syracuse fraternity system the range of expenses is quite wide, an there is a lot of room for men of varied financial means.

And what do you get for your money? You get meals that ar substantially better than any that have to be produced in large quan lities, such as in University dining halls and in many restaurants you get a building to live in that is more of a home than a dormitor could ever be; you get a wide variety of planned social events, for mal and informal.

The ...s of a fraternity live in the house for the duration of their college careers. Naturally the house will be in as good condition as possible, and will be made as liveable as possible. And due to the more efficient house organization in a fraternity, the many social events will be planned and carried out much more effectively than those of a University living center.

A problem arises with the subject of social events—the problem of the number of such functions. It's true that fraternity member must attend a minimum of parties, etc., and that this could cut int the studies of a student. Bu it is also true that published figures in dicate that the overall fraternity scholastic average is higher tha the male independent scholastic average. Draw your own conclusion

Although in most cases the independent housing assignments work out well, very often certain persons in a house just cannot get along well together. Due to the mechanics of the rushing system, this very seldom happens in a Greek house. Before deciding upon a fraternity, you get a chance to meet every member of it, and most of the rusheees who are also interested in pldeging. This practically eliminates the possibility of personality clashes.

Let's say that you've thought it over, and have made the de cision to enter a fraternity. Ahead of you are two, and maybe three years of living with men of your own choice, men whose compan you know you will enjoy, men who will help you in any prob lem that arises. You yourself will have opportunities to assist fra ternity brothers who may need guidance in any matter; you wil have a hand in the development of all those who are associated wit you those two or three years.

In the end, you will have something that might be called "fra ternity spirit." It can't be defined, it can only be felt. And with it g the all-important ties that you have made in your college years, tie that you will never regret having made.

Sororities-Sisters All

By POLLY REED

Why is it true that now, more than ever before, more and mor women each year are being initiated into women's fraternities o sororities?

Why is it that many of these women seem to go in to a hous as "diamonds in the rough" and emerge as polished and beautifu stones?

Why do sorority women have such close bonds in the house, and with sorority women all over the world?

First, membership in and life at a sorority house is a concen trated experience in human association. In that single sentence is th whole sum and substance of fraternities.

The college and the fraternity are laboratories of life. The fra ternity takes up a student's education where the classroom leave off.

In a sorority, many personalities are brought together under one roof. Women from cities and women from the prairies live and work and sleep in the same house bound together by the ties of sisterhood and the vows they spoke at initiation.

In a sorority house there is a loyalty which makes each woma want her house to be tops. There is a common objective which im mediately sets up a high standard of conduct and performance. Th intangible thing called "organization spirit" is the greatest force i civilization and it's in greatest evidence in a college sorority.

Conformity is not encouraged in most houses. Instead, each in dividual is urged to pursue her interests to her own goal. Living to gether under the bonds of sisterhood makes women feel responsibl for each other. Help is given to those who need it scholastically, an evening classes are set up for pledges with low averages.

Sorority life is an experience in living, where each sister benefits from the talents and ideas of the others, yet is always free to pursue what she feels important.

Rights and privileges are given a sorority woman, while she i turn, must live up to her pin and vows. Greek life is a framewor within which work, play and cooperative living shape gracious wo men.

Many beautiful and lasting friendships are formed in sorori associations. Women choose sororities and sorority women choo pledges on the basis of their common interests and ideals. Therefor it stands to reason that a sorority sister will find many close an satisfying relationships within her house.

Sorority women are always welcome back to their house a their alma mater, no matter how long ago they graduated. Chap ters at other colleges welcome their sisters who have transferre and alumnae chapters in home towns provide advantages for sor ority graduates. Business and social contacts open up to the fra ternity member after graduation.

Each sorority has its own charity projects, and all are worth This way, sorority women learn that self-gratification is not nece sarily the prime function in life, but that helpig others less fortuna than themselves can be a rich and rewarding experience. This is lesson sorority women carry with them all their lives.

The whole question of going Greek boils down to the individ ual. After reading and thinking about the sorority ideals and sor ority life and friendships, consider whether you want to be one o a great group of sorority women, an unbroken band of sisters.

Independents' View

By DON HENRY

At least half of the male students at Syracuse university are independents. Many of you frosh, and upperclassmen, are probably debating right now whether you should go Greek or not. An attempt will be made to point out just what an independent's life is like on the Hill.

University housing offers many cottages, dormitories and approved private homes for the non-Greek student to choose as his living quarters. Thus, he is free to choose his living mates.

Many times students on the Hill feel they cannot afford to pay initiation fees, social dues and other costs that Greeks must pay. As an independent, the student can spend as much as he wishes or can afford.

Hardly any of the organizations on campus are limited to Greeks or to non-Greeks. (The obvious exceptions are IFC and Pan-hell) Independents have often taken leading positions in these organizations.

The so-called "power" of the Greek organizations lies purely in the organization of the group unit. The "power" is usable only in such organizations that require action by a student body as in campus elections.

Advancement on a merit basis equates the chances of both fraternity man and independent to attain positions of leadership on campus.

It is understandable to assume that independent students can devote more time to the campus activities of their choice then can the Greek students, who have to participate in their fraternity activities as well as in campus organizations.

Last year the Independent Students association, an organization which was dedicated to provide a program of social and service activities for all independent students on the Hill, functioned in the cause of the non-Greeks. As the active need for it declined ISA became defunct.

Non-Pastisan league, an independent political party, presents non-Greek students with the opportunity to organize politically. NPL, however, has not yet shown signs of organizing for the 1953-54 campaigns. Independents can re-organize these programs to add to their voice on campus.

The intramural athletic program, under the direction of Milt Howard, offers to independents as well as Greeks, a chance to compete in athletic games. Cottages, dormitories and city men may organize teams for every sport. Football, basketball, softball and bowling are the major sports on the intramural schedule.

Many non-Greeks find it more convenient to eat at Marshall street or in other local restaurants. They do not have to eat at a specific hour of the day.

Under the surface of all these points which we have brought you is the deep independent nature of the non-Greek student. He does not want to be bothered with the additional conformities of fraternity life. He will abide by the laws the University administration has established, but he wants to be free of anything else that will inhibit him in his daily campus existence.

The Women Say:

By MARIA HEITZ

"To go or not to go" Greek that is, is on the mind of many frosh now that rushing is here. No doubt a lot of you just don't know whether to join a sorority or else have packed many an idea about them into your bag along with your wardrobe when you took off for school.

There are plenty of good arguments pro and con, but remember you don't have to go Greek to be in the swim. Whether or not you do is up to you, but never accept the life of an independent as a sad fate. It just isn't! And don't think independents are a sorry lot of failures, most of them chose to remain unaffiliated.

There are so many activities on campus: there are so many organizations and clubs that you probably won't have time to join all the things you'd like to. And unless you come home from class every day to bury your nose in a book, you'll find more than enough to keep you busy and you'll find companionships galore.

You'll also find out that you don't need Greek letters over your front porch to have fun with the gals you're living with.

You can choose your friends among Greeks and non-Greeks, and you don't have to live in the same house with them to make your friendships last. You can have just as much fun and just as many friends with the kids you meet in class and in the clubs you join.

Major activities are welcoming frosh and urging them to join. WSG, WAA, Boar's Head, the radio station WAER and all the publications on campus will take up more time than you can put in if you're worried about how to spend those hours in between studies and coffee breaks.

For those of you who have no particular interests in any specific field can satisfy your varied interests in anything from the Philosophy club to the Outing club.

Probably the most important aspect of this whole thing is that you don't have to be affiliated with a sorority o ge ahead in campus activities. There ARE some colleges where you don't stand a chance unless you have a house to back you. But at Syracuse you're chosen for your own merit as a campus leader and not by the pin you happen to be wearing.

This is not an attempt to tell you that you should or shouldn't join a sorority, but I'm merely saying this: look around you before you make up your mind. Don't rush headlong into anything just because it sounds good or because you've got the mistaken idea that it's the thing to do, or else you'll be an outcast from all the worthwhile things that are going on about you.

It isn't being an independent or a Greek that's going to make your four years here something to remember, it's YOU. The friends you choose won't be that because they're wearing the same pin you are; not because they're the ones you live with but beause they're the ones you think are worthwhile.

By remaining your own boss, you don't owe your decisions to anyone, you don't have to answer to anyone except your own sound judgement and University regulations.

Make up your own mind, and if it seems as though you're being lectured again it's because everyone wants to see you make the best of your four years at SU and get off to a good start.

You're on your own now, whatever you: decision. Good luck.

Coccari New Soccer Coach; Third Mentor in History

By ALEX STRASSER
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Art Horrocks' departure from the coaching field this fall ended the longest reign of a soccer coach at Syracuse university. Horrock's has been head coach of soccer since 1926 following three years as freshman coach.

Horrocks was only the second soccer coach in the history of the University. Varsity soccer started on the Hill in 1921 under Coach Red Paisely. Paisely was head soccer coach until his retirement in 1926. Three years earlier, Horrocks assumed the freshman reigns and from then on until his retirement this fall, he has been coach of Soccer.

IN HIS LONG coaching reign, Horrocks has seen many fine players and coached many good teams on Piety Hill. His best squad, with the possible exception of the 1952 team, were the booters of 1936.

With a record of seven wins, no losses, and two ties, the Orange booters of 1936 were rated one of the top teams in the nation. Two records, which still stand today, were recorded in that year. The team scored 49 goals in a nine games season, 23 of which were made by Gitto Simino

Syracuse's all-time great, according to Horrock's is Simino. A high scoring forward with an uncanny sixth sense enabling him to be where the important play was being made, Simino was the spark plug of all the Orange teams he played on.

Horrocks saw soccer hit both its peak and ebb at Syracuse. During the 1930's, soccer was at its peak of popularity on the campus.

WITH THE COMING of World War II, and the rapid growth of football, the University dropped its support of soccer and in 1951, for the first time since the elevation of the team to varsity status, there was no soccer team representing Syracuse university.

Last year, however, Horrocks revived soccer on the campus with the aid of soccer stars Sig Wirth and Billy Nelson. The team of 1952 then went on to have one of the finest records of all Syracuse soccer teams.

Andy Coccari, who replaced Horrocks as head soccer coach this fall, is in charge of Physical education I. He received most of his training at Cortland State Teacher's college. Then, following a span in the Navy, he did some work at Cornell before coming to Syracuse.

Coach Coccari first became acquainted with soccer during his high school days. He spent four years of soccer at Belfast High school, besides participating in baseball, basketball and track.

Football and soccer were always Cocari's favorite sport. When he broke a rib playing football, Coccari decided to make soccer his No. 1 sport.

The team sport with the widest international following, soccer is also a very intricate game. Thus, Coccari had his work cut out for him this Fall when he assumed the coaching reigns.

WITH THE LARGEST frosh turn-out in recent years, Coccari expects to find replacements for the starters who will graduate this June.

Coccari hopes to build Syracuse into a perennially strong soccer team. He knows that it will "take years to do this." However, he feels that with its large foreign student body, Syracuse can turn out to be one of the powerhouses in college soccer.

COACH ANDY COCCARI took over the coaching reigns of the booters this fall, after the retirement of Art Horrocks. Coccari is only the third soccer coach since the founding of the varsity team in 1921.

can's on the starting team, Coccari is hoping for a winning season this year. If he can patch up the forward line and if the goalie problem gets straightened out, Syracuse might find itself with its first defeatless year since 1936.

Fencers to Contact Dr. Burtt in Gym

All those interested in joining the fencing team should see Capt. John Goldstein in the fencing room during week-day afternoons or contact Coach Benjamin Burtt at Bowne hall.

Freshmen as well as upperclassmen are needed. The departure of epee man Hugh Muir leaves only Capt. Goldstein as the only returning epee veteran. Sabermen and foilers are also needed.

BU Ties Hillmen; Rams Led by Franz Here on Saturday

By JOEL FEIDELMAN
Daily Orange Junior Editor

All thoughts in the Syracuse football camp are on the game with Fordham this Saturday afternoon in Archbold Stadium after the Orange rallied against Boston university on Friday to gain a 14-14 tie.

Though the Orange could only tie the Terriers, they remain undefeated and hope to continue this record against the Rams, considered by many experts as the best football team in the East. Led by sensational quarterbacks Rog Franz and Vinnie Drake, Fordham boasts a heavy, experienced line and fleet running backs to match its passing prow-

THE GAME with BU on Friday was a keen disappointment in most circles, and the Orange coaching staff is hoping that the spirit of the Piety Hill gridders has not vanished. In practice sessions this week, the higher eschelon of the Orange will attempt to correct weak spots shown in the BU fray, of which there were many.

After a sluggish, listless first half which found the Terriers with a 14-0 lead, Syracuse came alive in the third quarter to score two quick touchdowns and tie up the game, but the Orangle offense could never get started and the final quarter was a series of frustrations for Orange diehards.

While the Orange played the first half in low gear, the Terriers started fast and furiously. With a running attack which sped through the Orange line time and time again, the Beantowners marched to two TD's with Don DeFeudis and Lou Petroka, thorns thorns in the side of the Orange, all night, doing the scoring.

All this while the BU line held the Orange to a scant 24 yards the first half. The closest the Orange were able to get to pay dirt was the BU 27-yard line.

After taking adrenaline shots ing the halftime intermission, or something with the same effect, Syracuse was a different team in the final half. Led by the spectacular running of Bob Leberman, the Orange rapidly worked toward the BU goal. Leberman scored the touchdown on fourth down from the 12-yard line and Jim George kicked the extra point.

THE NEXT TIME Syracuse got its hands on the ball, a punt roiling dead on the 16-yard line, quarterback Bruce Yancey called for a shift, took a handoff from fullback Don Laaksonen on a buck lateral series and sped 84 yards up the sideline for a touchdown. Again George kicked the extra point to knot the score at 14-14.

As the final quarter started the Orange again made a move into Boston university territory and seemed enroute to another touchdown. The running of Leberman and Art Troilo, combined with a 24-yard pass from Pat Stark to Leberman gave the Orange a first down on the BU 16-yard line. The BU defense here tightened up and fullback Don Laaksonen, on fourth down, missed a first down by three inches at most on the six yard line, giving BU the ball on downs. An attempted intercepted pass which failed in the final minute of play stopped all Orange hope of salvaging a victory.

Excelling on the Orange forward wall all evening were center Ted Kukowski, seeming to be everywhere in his linebacking slot, end Ray Perkins, guard Bob Fleck and tackles Les McClelland, while Yancey, Leberman, Toilo and Vinnie Vergara starred in the backfield.

Harriers Prepare For Opening Meet Against Colgate

With only a week left before the opening meet of the season against Colgate at Drumlins, Coach Bob Grieve has been busy rounding his harriers into shape.

Grieve will run as many men as possible in order to be able to get a better line on his boys. The only harrier sure of a starting role however, is Ray Osterhout.

Russ Bradshaw and Art Wallack of the Red Raiders figure to give Syracuse the most trouble. Not too much is known of the rest of the squad, which is composed mainly of sophomores.

AXEL SPOTS—Bob Grieve is still looking for more lower classmen for his frosh team. Those interested should see Coach Grieve in his office in the men's gymnasium. Grieve also seeks applicants for the position of x-country manager.

Grid Rams on Upswing; Fifth in East

By BOB LEFKO
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Fordham will be Syracuse's opponent this Saturday but nine months ago you could have gotten mighty good odds that someone else would be visiting Archbold Stadium Oct. 10. True, the New Yorkers were on the schedule but it looked like Fordham would not be playing anyone in 1953. Football seemed on the way out.

The Rams' new president, the Very Rev. Father Laurence McGinley, had weighed the extreme lack of enthusiasm against the red ink and seemed ready to give up in dismay. It was then the students and alumni of the New York school came out of their hermitage and decided to fight against a football-less future.

THEY LOOKED back on the great days of old when Fordham's elevens were viewed with awe and decided to see if it couldn't happen again. They not only displayed their new found enthusiasm orally but supplemented it with an outlay of cash to back the squad.

Si Manning, resident secretary of the Alumni Association sent over 20,000 letters to alums throughout the country and was greeted with an amazing response. Over 2400 rooters pledged to purchase $10 blocks of tickets for the four home games, an advance sale of $24,000, just $6,000 less than the Rams' entire net receipts for all their 1952 games at home and away.

Enthused by this surprising upsurge of spirit, the school's Alumni Football Committee stepped in and pledged another $100,000 to assure against any possible loss. This settled matters and Father McGinley admitted that football was to remain at Fordham.

Next move in the improvement was the rental of the Polo Grounds for all home games. This was a mighty big step towards advancement since the outmoded Triborough Stadium on Randalls Island had proved a big handicap.

MANY GRID BOOSTERS had stayed from games just because of the extreme inconvenience of the Stadium. This may seem preposterous but for verification of the bad location, ask some of the Syracusans who missed half of last year's clash with the Rams because they couldn't find the place.

Despite this sudden upsurge of football spirit, Fordham's administration has continually stressed that the school will definitely adhere to all NCAA rules, thereby giving no special aid to football stars. Fordham's football stars will also have to attend class.

The Rams' coach Ed Danowski states he frequently has less than half the squad at practice sessions because of class schedules. He's no complainer though since he seems just as satisfied with his high number of boys on the High Honor List (9) as with his squad's wins, two in 1952.

Nevertheless, Danowski seems to fell that this might be the year in which he'll be able to do quite a bit of talking about his squad from a football standpoint. He feels that the single-platoon system may prove an aid to the team which is smaller numerically than many opponents.

IN ADDITION, the return of Capt. Jack Hyatt, sidelined last season with an attack of polio should prove a big help. His hard running coupled with the expert passing of quarterback Roger Franz and Vinnie Drake should provide a well-balanced offense.

Franz was heralded as an outstanding prospect in his sophomore year but hit a second-season slump last year. Danowski is counting on him to come back in great style under the new regime of 1953.

Danowski isn't the only one who has high hopes for Franz and the Rams. All the Fordham alums feel that 1953 will be the year in which the Rams will again shine. They feel that the famous "Seven Blocks of Granite" will soon be forgotten in contrast to the new regime.

University May Drop January Graduation

Two Syracusans to Attend Funeral of Boston Guard

Two Syracuse university representatives, Les Dye, freshmen football coach, and Stanley Leff, president of men's student government, will attend the funeral of John Pappas at Worcester.

The 20-year-old Boston university guard died here early Saturday morning after playing in the BU-Syracuse game Friday night.

The funeral of JOHN PAPPAS, Boston university varsity guard, who died here Saturday morning, will be attended by two Hill representatives.

A telegram, drawn up by Leff and Mary Ann Dalton, women's student government president, has already been sent to Boston university. The message, addressed to the relatives of Pappas and Boston university students, expresses Syracuse university's sympathy concering the death of one of BU's top players.

The telegram read:
"The student body of Syracuse university wishes to convey to the student body of Boston university, and to his parents, its deepest sympathy for the untimely death of John Pappas."

Chancellor William P. Tolley immediately contacted Harold C. Case, president of Boston U., after hearing of the misfortune. According to Buff Donelli, BU coach, Pappas was taken out of the game after the guard had complained of dizziness to one of his teammates.

Pappas lapsed into a coma after being helped off the field early in the fourth quarter and never regained consciousness. He died at 3:30 a.m. Saturday morning in University hospital. Donelli stated he didn't know of any bump or blow which might have caused his death.

ACCORDING TO Dr. Edward Swift, Pappas died of a "rare brain hemorrhage." It reportedly occurred in the mid-brain impairing vital body processes. There was no fracture, Dr. Swift reported.

Hailing from Worcester, Mass., Pappas was in his final year at Boston after playing three years of football for the Terriers.

He was the first to die from injuries suffered in a college football game this year. It was also reported to be the first death resulting from play since Archbold stadium was opened in 1907.

Boston university senior players will act as honorary pallbearers today.

Noble to Inaugurate Training Program

Dean Charles C. Noble will open the first sessions of the newly organized Chapel training program today by speaking on the philosophy of the Chapel. Meetings will be held at 4:15 p.m. in the Chapel lounge and at 7:15 p.m. in the Founder's room of Maxwell.

The program, designed to replace the second cabinet, will explain the three phases of Chapel—Jewish Student fellowship, Protestant fellowships and the Chapel board.

Representatives of the administration will discuss the relationship of Chapel to the University and Dean Eunice Hilton of the Home Economics college will speak on leadership.

The six-week course is divided into two sessions so that all those interested may attend. The program is intended to give students an overall view of the Chapel in addition to the special training they will receive in committee and group activities during the year.

Graduate Group Slates Signups

Graduate students may sign up to work on Grad Commission committees and activities at 7 p.m. today in the Slocum lounge.

Officers of the commissions will be elected at tonight's business meeting, the first of the fall semester.

All Syracuse university grad students are invited to join the group, which plans social and cultural activities aimed at grad students.

NAVAL COMMISSIONS

Four Syracuse university alumni received their ensign commissions August 14 upon a successful completion of the four months course of instruction at the Navy's Officer Candidate school.

Martin C. Chaitt, '50; Malcolm Stuart Singer, '52; Edwin J. Gros, Jr., '53; and James Michael, '53, were the recipients of the commissions.

ID CARDS

Photos for ID cards will be taken from 1 to 5 p.m. Friday in the Men's gym.

Goons' Sweetheart Will Reign at Ball

Silvestri and Kibby Head Goon Affair

"Goon Squad Sweetheart" will be the title given to the freshman coed chosen to reign over the Jiminy Cricket Ball from 8 to 12 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 24, in the Women's building.

Co-chairmen George Kibby and Don Silvestri, in announcing that this affair is the first of its type held by the Goon Squad, expressed the hope that future Squad members would continue the dance.

WHILE THE CONTEST is open to freshmen only, any student may attend the dance by purchasing a 50-cent ticket, either at booths which will be set up throughout campus or at the door. Freshmen will also be able to secure tickets through their dorm representatives.

Any freshman dorm, male or female, may submit an application for a frosh co-ed, along with a 50 cent fee for each entry. Blanks will be printed at a later date in The Daily Orange.

Kibby and Silvestri have announced the following committee heads:

DECORATIONS, Shelia Hicks, Annette Manzella, Marilyn Raube, and Allen Plate; Queen committee, Betsy Thomas, Gloria Giovanello, and Whitey Wilson; Treasurers, Norman Churchill and Sheila McGrath; Entertainment, Lanny O'kun and Ray Caldiero; Chaperones, Genevieve Volotta and Leslie Rubin.

Tickets, Joan Poppe and Samuel Braun; Tickets Booths, Suzanne Taylor; Ticket Takers, Herbert Portnoff and Stuart Leslie; Applications, Bayne Chase and Jill Thomasmeyer; Posters, Marie Basil, Marilyn Raube and Ronald Wohl; Publicity, Irene Purdy, Polly Reed and Grace Frary; Checking, Janet Brenneman; and Cleanup, Anthony Leiacono.

Goon Squaders wishing to assist with the dance may contact committee heads.

Lockers Available For City Women

City women may get locker assignments from 2:15 to 4:15 p.m. tomorrow or from 10:30 a.m. to noon Thursday in the Women's building.

The lockers may be used to store books and lunches; however they are not large enough for coats. A 25-cent key deposit must be paid; this fee will be returned at the end of the semester.

Any city women who cannot obtain lockers at the scheduled times due to classes may contact Barbara Bushnell, 72-7728, or Barbara Witter, 4-3121 ex. 12, after Monday.

INSTRUCTOR'S PAPER

Richard Lea, instructor in forestry at Syracuse university, will deliver a paper before the Northeasterly Wood Utilization Council, Oct. 9 at the Hotel Syracuse.

The paper, "Some Economic Considerations of the Use of Wood Ships as a Farm Woodland Enterprise," was prepared by Lea L. A. Hamilton, of extension forestry at Cornell university; and John H. Fedkiw, instructor in forestry economics at Syracuse.

Mix-up Keeps Vets From Boston Game

VA Patients Denied Admission at Gate

Twenty holders of the Purple Heart did not view Friday night's Syracuse-Boston game because of an administrative mix-up.

According to reliable sources at the Veterans hospital, 20 men were to be admitted as guests of the athletic department.

The veterans, some of them in wheelchairs, arrived at the stadium at 7:30 p.m. The ticket taker, a professional employee having no connection with the University, said that he was told to admit only 10.

James Decker, of the physical education department, was then contacted. He again approved the admittance of all the men.

By the time the approval reached the gateman, forty-five minutes had elapsed; the men had returned to the hospital.

Rather than have only 10 men see the clash, all the vets decided to go back.

When reached by the Daily Orange today, Decker stated administrative details had caused the delay. He stated that the incident would not be repeated.

Seven Syracusans Perform in Play

Footlights will glow on seven University students as the curtains part for tonight's production of "The Man Who Came to Dinner" at the Astor theater.

Filling speaking roles will be three majors in the School of Speech and Drama. Reed, a junior, will portray June Stanley, the rebellious daughter of the famiy entertaining "The man," while Mrs. Dexter, a local clubwoman, will be played by Anita Khanzadian, a senior. Sidney Kalcheim, drama sophomore, will play Westcott, the radio announcer.

Also appearing will be Donna LaMont, David E. Rogers, Burt Weekes and Thomas Campbell.

Other students from the drama department will be called upon to fill minor roles in forthcoming Astor theater productions.

LIBRARY RESEARCH

The Syracuse University Library associates, a team of prominent New Yorkers, will organize this week to give future Syracuse researchers a big boost in their fact-finding operations.

The aim of the library associates is to increase the historical material that is available to the hard-working researcher.

Who's Got the Penny?

"PRICELESS PENNIES" contest is officially over and eight pennies have been presented to The Daily Orange and prizes will be given. As noted in the picture above, pennis—Canadian pnnies—became extremely valuable for the last few days.

Failure to Cooperate Hinders Seating Plan

By ED HARDY
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Students are still failing to cooperate with the reserved seating program, Stephen Reiss, chief of civil service of men's student government, charged yesterday.

"Student government has done everything possible to make the program work and publicize it," he said, "People still won't understand it, even though we have made it very simple."

ABOUT 2,300 students held reserved seats for the Boston university game Friday night. That was a slight drop from the Temple game, according to David Krohn and Jean Dale, co-chairmen of the program.

Confusion Friday night was not as great as at the previous game, with more persons claiming seats before 8 p.m., they said.

Juniors will be able to pick up reserved seats for Saturday afternoons' clash with Fordham from 2 to 5 p.m. today in the special booth in the Trophy room of Archbold gymnasium.

"The reserved seating program has been explained in The Daily Orange, over WAER and by posters sent to every living center and in most campus buildings," according to Reiss. Government members manned booths at registration to explain the system to students.

STUDENT USHERS, police and deputy sheriffs have been empowered to enforce the reserved seating plan, Reiss stated.

The civil service chief also answered the comments made by students in Pete Preston's "Syracuse Speaks" column that appeared in Friday's Daily Orange. "Most of the answers were based on poor information, he claimed.

Biggest fault was found with the criticism that charged that the seating plan "was never approved by any student government . . . It was decided upon by an executive agreement."

Reiss: The program was the result of a joint agreement by men's and women's student government. Fred Burke and Iris Roth, last year's student government presidents, got the athletic governing board to agree to the program and government assemblies gave blanket power to implement their authority from the board in any way they saw fit.

THE PROGRAM fell to civil service to carry out. Madge Evans and Reiss, civil service chiefs, Stanley Leff and Mary Ann Dalton, presidents, and Miss Dale and Krohn worked out the details, studying similar plans in other colleges.

One of the other critics said an upperclass man should be able to sit in an upperclass section even if he dates a lowerclass girl.

Reiss: This is already part of the program.

A third student objected that his city date could not sit with him in the student section.

Reiss: Naturally only students are allowed to sit in the student sections.

The civil service chief urged that students in the future come early to claim their seats and recognize the rights of reserved ticket holders.

MSG, WSG and Alpha Phi Omega members have ushered at the previous games.

Training Program For House Prexies To Open Tonight

Campus house presidents will attend the first in a series of four compulsory training sessions at 7:15 p.m. today in the dance studio of the women's building

Because of the increased representative role to be played by the prexis the training program begins this year to inform them of various phases of student government and leadership.

Dean M. Eunice Hilton of the College of Home Economics will explain the responsibility and other aspects of leadership at tonight's session. Following her talk the group will be divided into four sections to hear explanations of the work done by women's student government panels.

Ann Lines, associate civil service chief, will discuss the panel system with city women who are assembly members, while WSG President Mary Ann Dalton explains their workings to frosh house presidents.

Upperclass representatives will be divided into two groups and will hear WSG vice-president Mary E. (Liz) Brydon and Assembly Speaker Patricia Fay.

At next week's meeting Miss Dalton plans to explain the new WSG constitution and changes brought about through its adoption. She will also presennt a brief history of the house-presidents assembly.

The third session will concern the philosophy and background of rules and regulations as viewed by Miss Brydon. Who's Who Among the Administration and Campus Leaders will be the subject of the final meeting. The speaker is to be announced at a later date.

Each member of the assembly will be required to submit an evaluation of the program after its last session.

The men's student government training program for future student leaders is expected to begin the first week in November. This program consists of six meetings and those participating will receive certificates upon completion of the course.

All men who expect to become government or class leaders must complete the training program.

Debating Team Slates Interviews

Dr. J. Edward McEvoy, new coach of the Hill's debate team, has announced that interviews for potential new members will be held today and Thursday from 2:30 to 4 p.m. and Friday from 4:15 to 5:15 tomorrow. All interviews will take place in 414 HL.

This year's officers of the debate team are Howard Osofsky, president; Marilyn Mawson, vice-president; Alex Strasser, secretary and Hal Vine, manager.

Chancellor Favors Elimination of Policy

By TOM LONG

Chancellor William P. Tolley disclosed to The Daily Orange last night that the Administration is considering the elimination of January commencements.

This action would make the June 1954 graduation the 100th commencement in Syracuse university history.

SINCE 1950 the number of seniors receiving diplomas in January has decreased. Last year 426 students were eligible to be graduated. Figures from the Registrar's office show that less than 300 took part in the ceremony.

This year the eligible number is estimated at 375 but is likely to drop considerably before January. Compared with last year's figures this would set the number of actual graduates attending the commencement at less than 250.

CHANCELLOR WILLIAM P. TOLLEY said yesterday that the University administration is considering an idea to drop January commencements.

Chancellor Tolley indicated that Administration officials would prefer to hold only the normal June exercises. The concentration of effort and finances in one commencement would increase the effectiveness of this program, he declared.

The number of graduate students receiving diplomas has increased steadily since World War II. Conversely, the undergraduates receiving diplomas has decreased since 1951.

IN THE PAST, the undergraduates composed the largest number of those taking part in the ceremony. If this trend continues, the number of January graduates will dwindle to a new low.

Almost 900 students were graduated in January 1950, but the number dropped to 718 in 1951. Only 582 seniors were eligible in January 1952 and last year the total was 426.

The cost of January graduation is estimated at $8000 by Vice-president Kenneth Bartlett. He stated that Syracuse is one of the few colleges in the nation holding a mid-year ceremony.

Voicing approval of the abolition of January exercises, Bartlett said that there was room for only one large public enterprise.

"We would be following current practice and old tradition in having only a June grduation," he stated.

Wheadon Releases Research Revenues

Volumes Total Over Three Million

The total volume of sponsored research handled by Syracuse university's Institute of Industrial Research during the 1952-53 fiscal year exceeded $3,000,000.

Announcement of the gross revenue was made in a report to the institute's advisory board by William C. Wheadon, administrative director of the institute.

Wheadon reported that the volume of research contracts rose sharply during the last three years with the result that Syracuse university, through its institute, had assumed a major role in organized research in the United States.

"Last year's record," he added, "emphasize the notable contribution the institute has made to national defense, to the process of business and industry, to the welfare of the community and to international good will."

The institute's director also observed that the volume of federal government research continued to outweight industrial research during the 1952-53 fiscal year—a condition which holds true in other major research centers in the United States.

25 Fellowships Offered Women

The American Association of University Women is offering 25 fellowships for advanced study or research during the academic year 1954-55.

Awarded to young women who have completed residence work for their PhD degree or who have already received the degree,, the $2,000 fellowships are unrestricted as to subject and place of study.

Applications which can be obtained in Maxwell, are due by Dec. 15, 1953. For additional information, applicants should write to: Secretary, Committee on Fellowship Awards, American Association of University Women, 1634 Eye st., N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Local Fraternity To Rush with IFC

Pi Alpha Chi has announced that it will hold rushing at the same time as the other Hill fraternities this year instead of its usual delayed rushing. This announcement contradicts the "Orange Guide" which erroneously reported the house as having delayed rushing.

This will be the first year in its history that the recently remodeled house has rushed with the other brotherhoods.

CONKLIN SPEECH

Howard Conklin, of the department of Agricultural Economics at Cornell university, spoke before forestry economics seminar students yesterday at the College of Forestry.

Speaking on "Land Use Trends and Problems in New York State," Conklin was also heard by other forestry students and members of the faculty.

Home Ec Council To Fill Vacancies

All freshmen home ec majors who are interested in a position on the Home Economics Student Advisory board must file petitions for the two board vacancies.

Applications may be obtained in the Home Ec office Wednesday, Oct. 7, and must be turned in by 5 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 21.

The board advises the faculty on any problems which may arise and various academic phases of the University. It acts as a planning group for all events in the College, including the annual Home Ec student-faculty jamboree, Sub-Frosh convo, Awards Tea and convo for graduating seniors.

The board, the first student advisory group on campus, consists of two representatives from each class. Editor of the Home Ec college paper, president of the Home Ec honorary, Omicron Nu, and president of the Home Ec club. Dean M. Eunice Hilton and her assistant, Miss Mary X. Grimes are advisors to the group.

Sophs to Apply For Hop Post

All applications for chairmanships of the Soph Hop must be turned in by 5 p.m. today to Harriet Ehrlich in Shaw dorm or any soph executive council member. activities and ideas for the hop.

Applications should include name, address, experience, campus actviities and ideas for the hop.

All applicants will be interviewed tonight in 202 Maxwell. Those with last initials from A to M should be there between 7:15 and 8:15 p.m., those from M to Z from 8:30 to 9:15 p.m.

Applegate Named Station News Head

Alvin Applegate, a senior political science major, has been named WAER news director, according to Gilbert Katz, station promotion head.

Applegate has worked as announcer on local stations in Asbury Park, New Jersey, and Bethlehem, Pa. He has also done newspaper work for the Bethlehem Globe Times and the Asbury Park Press.

He will have charge of the campus FM station's news programs and announcements.

Walt Kelly Slates Return

Pogo May Seek 1956 Nomination

The Daily Orange was informed late last night from Okefenokee swamp that the defeated presidential candidate, Pogo Possum, is following the tradition of other statesmen and making a worldwide tour to meet his constituents. It is expected that the possum will again seek the presidential nomination for 1956 as soon as his forces can be mustered. Albert the Alligator, Pogo's campaign manager, was unavailable for further comment. He was in a smoke-filled room at the time, a staff reporter was informed.

Syracuse university launched the last campaign for "I Go Pogo", when Kelly visited the Hill to speak for his possum.

The Daily Orange will again back Pogo for president if he decides to run, the staff announced.

SWIMMING TRYOUTS

Tryouts will be held for Women's Athletic association synchronized swimming at 7:30 p.m. in the women building today. Girls are asked to bring their own suits, towels and caps.

Freshmen girls are to report at 7:30 p.m. Upper class girls should report an hour later. All candidates are asked to be prompt.

WALT KELLY, creator of POGO, told The Daily Orange in 1951 that the Hill's reception overwhelmed him. He especially praised Dean of Hendricks chapel CHARLES C. NOBLE whom met Kelly when he arrived here for Spring weekend.

Pogo the possum's papa, Walt Kelly, returns to the Hill for a day Oct. 9, after being away from his most loyal Pogopites for a year and a half.

Kelly, creator of the famous comic strip "Pogo" will address the annual convention of the Empire State School Press association at the Hotel Onondaga.

C. Wesley Brewster, professor in the School of Journalism and executive secretary of ESSPA, said yesterday that more than 1,000 high school students are expected to attend the convention.

Kelly will discuss the status of freedom of speech in the United States and he will also describe his cartooning technique.

The comic strip "Pogo" was a post-war creation of Kelly. It was syndicated by Post-Hall and is now one of the top ten strips in the nation. Three "Pogo" books have also been published. They are "Pogo", "I Go Pogo" and "Uncle Pogo's So-so Stories."

Syracuse university was the first college in the nation to sponsor the lovable little possum in the race for the presidential nomination.

KELLY JOURNEYED to the Hill for the 1951 Spring weekend to begin the "I GO POGO" campaign. More than 6,000 buttons spread through Archbold stadium at the then annual Stadium Open House, where Kelly told Syracusans that Pogo's stand on water fights was "a wet and dry issue. He might have a slippery time of it."

"Pogo's only cabinet," said Kelly, "will be in his kitchen."

Later the same evening, in the old Student Union, then on the site of the partially completed men's dorm, several thousand students settled themselves on the floor to watch Kelly do some chalk drawings of Pogo and Albert the Alligator, his campaign manager.

In Memoriam

A student leader, a talented team man, a popular athlete—John Pappas was each of these to the students at Boston university.

On behalf of the Syracuse student body we wish to add our sympathy to that expressed by our student government representatives Sunday.

We extend our sincere condolences to the parents and relatives of this young gridiron star.

We join in spirit with Boston university in mourning a fellow student.

On the way out?

One of the last remaining vestiges of the post-war college boom may be abolished this year.

Chancellor William P. Tolley revealed to the Daily Orange yesterday that the Administration favors the elimination of the formal January graduating ceremonies.

Syracuse is one of the few institutions in the entire nation to continue this practice. Born in the days of world war II, the mid-year commencement has now outgrown its usefulness.

In 1950, when 900 students finished their college career in January, the University was providing a needed service. However, the number of January graduates in 1954 is estimated at a maximum of 375 students. Based on past records less than 250 are expected to actually take part in the ceremony.

It is especially fitting that the practice be abolished before this January, since the next graduation will be the 100th commencement of the University—a milestone to be celebrated with maximum fervor.

Another reason for eliminating the January exercises is the expense involved. Up to $8,000 had been alloted in past budgets for the ceremony. The expenditure of such a large sum of money for the benefit of such a small per cent of the students does not seem justified.

Should the abolition of the mid-year ceremony meet with approval from the groups concerned, some of this money may well go to financing a well-known speaker of exceptional caliber for the 100th June commencement.

In these days of shrinking budgets and rising costs any large saving such as this should be lauded.

Approval by the student body is necessary for the elimination of the obsolete practice. The question will probably be submited to student government groups and other representative campus organizations for their comment.

We heartily approve of the abolition of this wartime antique and urge other students to seek its elimination.

Costly misunderstanding

An unfortunate misunderstanding—one that must never occur again—sent a group of disillusioned patients at the new VA hospital home Friday night after being refused admittance to the football game.

Some vets had been invited to the game by the University. They asked for permission to bring a larger number and Lewis P. Andreas, athletic director, quickly consented.

However, the gatemen—professional ticket-takers who have no other connection with the University other than at games—were not informed that the additional patients were to be given entrance gratis. Hence, some of the vets were turned back.

All the patients left, apparently thinking that the University had gone back on its word.

Later, when the University officials heard what had happe[illegible] they phoned the hospital, explained what had happe[illegible], and invited the veterans back.

But many of the veterans had gone to bed and others had lost interest. Five were wheelchair cases.

We trust that such a situation will be the last of its kind. If the University is kind enough to donate passes to veter[illegible] or any other group, it should ascertain that ticket-takers will honor them.

An offspring of this occurrence is a new idea—an idea that would improve University public relations immeasurably and still cost the University absolutely nothing in monetary consideration.

It would be wonderful if every veteran in the new hospital were invited to the Fordham game Saturday afternoon. Archbold stadium is filled only for the Colgate game.

The vets, who probably need relaxation more than most of us, would certainly appreciate this gesture.

The Man Who Came to the Astor to Dine

By JOAN NADELHAFT

When Edward Everett Horton as Sheridan Whiteside, who is a dead ringer for the late Alexander Woolcott, opens at 8:30 at the Astor theater tonight, two SU alums will hold down important supporting roles.

Gerry Stiller, 1950 grad, will recreate Harpo Marx' original role of Banjo in "The Man Who Came to Dinner" which will play through Sunday at the downtown theater.

Stiller first appeared on the Hill in 1947 in a Tambourine and Bones production of "Blossom Time." The Daily Orange reported then that "he stole the show." He also appeared in "Girl Crazy" here in 1947, "Long Live Love," 1948, and played the lead in the very successful "Bourgeois Gentleman," in 1950.

Ken Bowles, who has long been known for his starring roles Boar's Head's productions, such as "Antigone," "The Tempest," both last year, and "Richard II," two years ago, will play the part of Sandy, a labor leader and the romance interest for the daughter of the household. Bowles also had a small role in last week's production of "Born Yesterday."

"The Man" was written in 1936 by George Kaufman and Moss Hart, the team who gave American audiences "Winged Victory" and many other famous hits.

Since that time, their lives have been made miserable by all those people who claim to have proof that the playwrights meant to satirize the acid-witted Woolcott. Wollcott, himself, though publicly furious, was conceded by many who know him to be secretly pleased at the backhanded compliment.

Woolcott, for many years, wrote a column entitled "The Town Crier," and ranged in it from thoughtful essays to some of the most satiric comments on the theater and America in general. If will Rogers was the chronicler of a nation's humor, Woolcott was the raconteur of its hidden hypocrisy.

The play is supposed to be based on a real incident. when Woolcott accidently broke his leg at a friend's home, and stayed on there for weeks, while he recupterated. The comedy is involved in how his demands for luxurious comfort and general bed temper disrupted the entire household.

The Strip From Cafe To Astor

By JAN CARO

A stripteaser who likes acting and is allergic to mink sat in the Tau Delta Phi living room Saturday night, waving away profferred glasses of unspiked punch and inquiring as to the whereabouts of the pastrami sandwich she'd ordered.

Sherry Britton will be featured as the glamorous and sharp-tonqued actress of "The Man Who Came to Dinner," opening tonight at the Astor theater. And she was a perfect example of typcasting in her sneak Syracuse debut at the Tau Delt party.

The actress waxed enthusiastic about tonight's comedy—except for a bit of stage business in which she is locked in a mummy case and carried out—horizontally.

Miss Britton works at acting "whenever I can afford it," concentrating mostly on summer stock and off-Broadway work like the Astor series. Her one Broadway escapade was ill-fated; she had the feminine lead opposite John Garfield in a 1951 fiasco, "Peer Gynt," which folded after four weeks.

The mink allergy? She ignores it, preferring a slight rash to storing away her treasured coat.

For sustinence, Miss Britton depends on long-term nightclub stints; after the week's run at the Astor she'll open at the Club Samoa in New York city's 52nd st. neighborhood.

"It's a singing and dancing routine," she explained. "Shall I tell you the ending? It'll horrify you. I do a strip!"

We weren't horrified; Sherry was disappointed.

HEARING AIDS

By DICK CASE

The battle flags are unfurled over the Metropolitan Opera house once more and throaty cries of revenge echo from the popcorn machine to the very heights of the Diamond Horseshoe.

It seems that the Met has lost another horse from its golden stable in the struggle between the art forms. This time it was Helen Tarubel.

Things first began to pop early last week when Miss Traubel, termed America's best-known Wagnerian soprano, received a threatening letter from Met boss Rudolf Bing to the effect that she was to discontinue her night club appearances or suffer the consequences.

The rather large lady with the large voice balked at signing her 1953-54 contract with Mr. Bing declaring subbornly that the prexy's stand was "rank snobbery."

"Artistic dignity is not a matter of where one sings," shouted Miss Traubel, "and to assert that art can be found in the Met but not in a night club is rank snobbery."

I do not wish to jump to the direct aid of either of the foes in this particular struggle except to mention several points in favor of each.

Mr. Bing is plainly justified in demanding respect for his beloved Met. True, the night club art and the form of culture found at the opera house are not copesetic. He is quite correct in expecting that his employees will draw the line. However, the Met's big brother should have realized by now that the operatic kids must be handled with felt pads.

Miss Traubel, on the other hand, stands on a few feet of firm ground. With no contract restrictions, she has a perfect right to engage in any extra-Metropolitan activities which happen to come along.

The fine Trauble voice has proven a rather humorous foil for Jimmy Duante's funnery on several of the Nose's late television productions. As for the night clubs, Miss Traubel insists that she loves the music of Gershwin, Haney, Kern and Rodgers which she cannot render at the Met.

I imagine there is considerable jubilation at the Traubel household now that the lady is free from the chains that bound her to the Manhattan opera company. It's doubtful, however, just how long she can reap a harvest singing a restrained form of jazz in the night spots.

Today, next week, or even next month will not bring an end to the hostilities down at the Met. The swords will remain flourished for some time . . . . at least, as long as there are Wagnerians who'd rather croon "The St. Louis Blues."

Among the Korean veterans living at Collendale A-9 while attending classes on the Hill, are men like Jim Packer who has spent five years in the Marine corps.

He enlisted in April 1948, and was stationed in Hawaii for two years with a guard detachment. After the Korean war broke out, he was transferred to the American Graves Registration Repatriation program and assigned the duty of escorting American war dead to their homes. He was the escort for the first Marine to win the nation's second highest award, the Distinguished Service cross.

Sent to Korea, he served with the famous First Marine regiment at the battles of Bunker Hill, during August and September, 1952; the battle of "The Hook" during October, 1953; and the battles for outposts Reno and Vegas in, the spring of 1953.

Although Marines are rarely in a sheltered position during combat, Jim regards his closest call as being one in which he was among a group of Marines in Tokyo who missed a Korea-bound C-119, "Flying Boxcar" due to a mix-up in bus schedules. The plane crashed hours later at Seoul airport killing all aboard.

While serving in Japan, he was liaison representative for the Marine corps at Haneda International airport in Tokyo. While on this duty, he was a member of the party that greeted forty Hollywood personalities on their arrival in the Far East. Among these were Walter Pidgeon, (shown in accompanying picture with Jim), Debbie Reynolds, Paul Douglas, Keenan Wynn, Carlton Carpenter, Rory Calhoun, Jan Sterling and Dawn Adams.

After returning from the Far East, Jim was discharged at Treasure Island Naval base in San Francisco during April, 1953. Jim is now 23 years old and has his home in Rome, N. Y. His plans call for a career in the field of radio after graduation from the College of Liberal Arts.

Insomnia Inn is Gone

It is with cosiderable regret that we note the passing of one of the top disk jockeys from the local radio dial.

Bob O'Donnell, host of the nightly "Insomnia Inn' (WSYR, 11:15 p.m.-midnight,) has left his position at that Syracuse station to persue musical duties at WHEC in Rochester. During his two years with the local NBC affiliate, O'Donnell won a wide listening clan among Hill music lovers who enjoy something a "little different", as Bob put it.

"The Inn" has been replaced by a rather sprightly pop record show and the idea of a late jazz show has been abandoned entirely.

It was a wise move, however, not to try bringing back "Insomnia Inn" without Mr. O'Donnell. It is best that he left dragging his show behind him.

LETTERARY COMMENT

We know that it is a common failing of college students to be proficient at letter writing. Communication home for the shear sake of informing risks extinction in college behavior. But we of The Daily Orange have more than a passing interest in what you think of us or your school . . . . good or bad.

TRAGEDY

Bereavement.

Ah, sob and the agony of those who follow the sport with the light and carefree hearts and pockets. Consolation to those who so recently have felt the loss of a team spirit, of a cherished idol, of a ten dollar bill.

Oh, the wrenching and tearing of shirts and parlay tickets. Peace be with those who turn with a smoldering heart and evil eye to designs on the men from the Bronx. In this hour of our wretched loss, we have no recourse but to fling our woes to the wind and Charley Dressen.

To the old folk who view the coming winter with disconsolate and weakening heart . . . those to whom life has lost its spark we urge a takening up of faith for the coming spring.

But to the stunned political scientists we extennd the most heartfelt words of all. The indignation that must have arisen within his breast at this complete victory of such a concentration of power has destroyed many a thesis . . . the history of equality of men has been set back half a century.

To the new-made rich ones we but sneer; to the recently reduced paupers we but whisper the words of hope: even old Stengel can eventually make a mistake.

Deuce

Along the Sidelines

By KEN LENT, DAILY ORANGE SPORTS EDITOR

Monday quarterbacks held a field day yesterday over Friday's game at the weekly "Break Bread with Ben" session and leading the post mortem was none other than the Orange football mentor himself.

The Syracuse coach realizes that the 14-all standoff was really a moral victory for the Terriers. With the Hillmen's next opponent, Fordham, described by Coach Ed Danowski as the "best Fordham team he has coached in his eight years at Rose Hill," Ben realizes he has his work cut out for him.

In discussing the BU scarer, Schwartzie stated that his boys would have to work especially on pass defense and basic fundamentals this week. "We weren't executing the simplist plays we have," he said.

Since players such as Bill Wetzel, and the latest addition to the hospital crew, Dino Hadjis, who broke his wrist Friday night, are out of action, Ben will make a lot of lineup changes before this Saturday rolls around.

Ben also spoke about the lack of finesse which Syracuse exhibited. We can't help but agree with him. During the entire game, the lighter Terrier line continually outcharged our own forward wall. Time after time, Lou Petroka, BU's charging fullback, in addition to other Terrier ballcarriers broke into the Orange secondary.

Statistics bear up this point as the enemy gained 96 yards on the ground in the first half to a mere five for Syracuse.

Commenting on one of the game's deciding plays, Ben said he felt that Syracuse should have gotten credit for the safety which Lou Petroka, BU fullback, stepped out of the end zone while punting late in the second quarter.

You'll remember that the two points were disallowed because an Orange player was allegedly off side. The Orange coach states that the game movies clearly show that the Orange linesman made no contact with an opposing player and got back on side before the ball was snapped. Under current grid regulations, this is not an off side.

The big play, when Don Laaksonen failed to make a first down on the BU five by inches, also came in for controversy. One of the referees told Ben after the game that if the ball had been placed down pointing toward the goal, instead of toward the stands, the Orange would have made the first down.

Laaksonen can't be blamed for he had the ball tucked against his body in the conventional manner with the end of the football away from his body. It's pretty hard to juggle the pigskin around to the desired direction while being tackled.

Rocky Pirro, Piety line coach, had quite a bit to say about Fordham, whom he scouted with Roy Simmons in the Rose Hillers' 21-7 win over Detroit on Friday. Rocky also saw the Illinois-Stanford tilt the next day and he felt that the Rams were better than either club last weekend.

Only one man is under 200 pounds in the Fordham line and their backfield is loaded. Roger Franz and Vinnie Drake, the Ram passers, together completed 17 passes out of 29. With co-captain Jack Hyatt back after fighting polio for a year, the Rams are at top strength.

Hyatt had polio of the throat and reportedly can eat only certain foods even now. All his meat has to be cut into small pieces and the courageous Ram has had a difficult time keeping his weight up. It wouldn't be surprising if the visitors go into Saturday's game the favorite.

• • • • •

Jim Decker, assistant athletic director, should be congratulated for the action he took following John Pappas' untimely passing. There's an unpublicized rule set down in the book that game officials are not allowed to talk to the press about anything which happened in a game they work.

Realizing that the public might get the wrong impression if the officials were not allowed to answer newsmen's inquiries, Jim called Asa Bushnell, commissioner of the Eastern Intercollegiate Football association.

The call paved the way for the press statement made by Referee Leroy J. Kelly who stated that the game was "hard fought but exceedingly close and above board."

Booters Forward Line Revamped Following 1-1 Tie With Big Red

Double Trouble

QUARTERBACKS ROGER FRANZ (left) and VINNIE DRAKE provide the Fordham Rams with two of the most feared passers in the East. The Orange pass defense will have to be at its best to stop these two aerial artists.

By ALEX STRASSER
Daily Orange Junior Editor

With less than two weeks remaining before their encounter against Cortland State Teacher's college, the Orange booters resumed practice sessions yesterday in an attempt to overcome weaknesses that cropped up frequently in their forward line last Saturday against Cornell.

Syracuse tied the Big Red booters 1-1, in one of the most exciting games ever played between the two clubs. The game was tied at the end of regulation play and two overtime periods were played, all that collegiate soccer rules allow, before the game was officially declared a tie.

IN AN EFFORT to overcome the perennial goal problem that has been bothering the Orange, Coach Andy Coccari started offensive star Gunnar Wirth in the goalie position. Wirth handled his position adequately, stopping the shots that got past the strong Orange defense with the ease of a veteran.

Other Orange veterans who figured prominently in Saturday's contest were defensemen Sig Wirth and Don Moller. Wirth, who has played more on the offense than on defense in his three years of college soccer, turned in a fine defensive game while scoring the Orange's only goal on a solo shot.

Once again, the Orange's chief problem lay in its thin offensive wall. The Orange forwards, who played nearly the entire game of 88 minutes, never could launch a strong offensive against the Cornell goal. Unless a sudden improvement in the line occurs, the Orange defense will have to carry the brunt of the fight against Cortland.

AXEL SPOTS: Prior to its game with Syracuse, the Cornell booters downed Cortland State, 1-0. Syracuse will meet the same Teachers a week from Saturday. . . . Track star Don Shupe turned in a fine performance at the right halfback position . . . More freshmen booters are still needed, Coach Coccari announced today.

Grid Line-up Altered In Coach Ben's Plans

Head Coach Ben Schwartzwalder led his boys onto Hendricks field to prepare for the business ahead: beating Fordham. The Boston tie, as disappointing as it was, taught Ben exactly where the trouble lies. One of the obvious shortcomings: a fullback. Laaksonen couldn't go, Vergara wasn't called on, so it remained for Bob Leberman to fill the gap. Not only did Bob have to dash like a halfback but he was called on for the chores ordinarily assigned to a fullback.

Uncle Ben plans some changes in the lineup, but most of them are just for conjecture. Several names are being shuffled in the rumors. Among them: Bruce Yancey for Pat Stark, Cal Smith for the injured Sam Johnson, Lyle Carlson for Art Troilo, Pete Schwert for Herb Steigler. All these plans, however, will develop as the week goes on.

IF FORMER Fordham games are a precedent, itshould be an air-circus ala Southwest conference. Two years ago the fans who watched the Fordham game at Archbold stadium came away with stiff necks. The audience felt as if they were watching a slow motion ping-pong game: their heads going up and down the field watching the long passes. Avatus Stone had more than the Ram quarterback, Roger Franz, and Syracuse came out with a greuling 33-20 win.

Last year Syracuse went down to Randall's Island to play in a Triboro stadium that look like it sank in the East river. In ankle-deep mud, Syracuse decided to fight fire with fire and every touchdown in the 26-13 win came via a pass.

Syracuse was ahead at the beginning of the last quarter: 20-0. Vinnie Drake then replaced Franz, who up to that time had completed only 12 out of 24 passes. Drake showed him how: two touchdowns and eight out of 12. Pat Stark had quite a time. He tried 15, completed nine but for four touchdowns.

Yanks Cop Series Fifth Straight Time

Martin's Clutch Single Wins Game in Ninth

Brash Billy Martin's game-winning single in a storybook ninth-inning yesterday gave the New York Yankees an unprecedented fifth straight World Series championship.

Martin's clean shot through the box sent Hank Bauer scooting across the plate with the fourth Yankee run after Bauer had walked and advanced to second on Mickey Mantle's infield single.

The blow was especially devastating to the Bums since they had just overcome a 3-1 deficit in their half of the ninth with a two-run rally.

After Hodges hit an infield fly, Duke Snider worked an 0-2 count for a walk. Carl Furillo, regular season batting champion, was the next batter. Furillo took a full count, and then blasted a homer 345 feet into the right field stands to deadlock the score.

The Yanks jumped off to an early lead in the first inning by putting together a single, a double, two walks and an infield error to tally two runs. Rizzuto opened the Yankee second with a clean single. Whitey Ford stroked another one-bagger and the Scooter advanced to third. Woodling then skied deep to left and the Bronx Bombers had a 3-0 lead.

The Dodgers were handcuffed by Ford until the sixth when Jackie Robinson doubled, stole third and dashed home on Campanella's infield out.

With the Series win the Yanks closed out a record breaking year. Their capture of the American league pennant for the fifth year in a row set a new record. They didn't stop after entering the playoffs. Billy Martin's hit set a new Series record for the most hits in a World Series by an individual player.

Allie Reynolds who got credit for the win set a pitching record: the most World Series wins by a pitcher—seven.

Coach Dailey Inaugurates First Fans' Forum Movies

The Daily Orange will renew its yearly habit of Fans' Forum this Wednesday night at 7:15. Movies of the Boston university football game will be shown, tentatively scheduled for the Trophy room of Archbold gym.

As usual one of the Orange coaches will be on hand to narrate the movies. This week line coach Ted Dailey will kick off the forum. The Daily Orange sponsors the forum to give the fans a chance to see the game over again from the other side of the field. The movies are the ones that the coaches use to study every Monday morning.

BEFORE THE films are run the coach will stand before the audience and answer questions that any fan might have concerning the team.

Ted Dailey will point up the highlights of play, stop the film and re-run it for the benefit of the fans.

Syracuse plays most of the best teams on the schedule away from Archbold stadium. These movies enable the fans to see every game on the Orange schedule. The only way to assure the continuation of these movies is for the fans to come to the forum.

The movies were taken from atop the press box and probably afford a better view of the game than was had by most students.

IN SUCCEEDING weeks The Daily Orange intends to have every coach up for inquisition before the fans. The coaches usually answer any questions asked by the fans are are glad to participate as long as the forum draws fans.

Many points of the Boston game have come under some commennt. The movies will afford an opportunity to see many of the questionable plays. Syracuse scored a safety in the second quarter, only to have it nullified by an offside penalty of their own. With these two points Syracuse would have won the game. Fans will get a chance to see this debateable offsides.

Ted Dailey, an expert on the Orange line, will also be able to supply the fans with some knowledge of the Fordham team which comes into the stadium this weekend. Dailey has been in on the scout's sessions. Fordham was scouted in their game against Detroit last Friday night.

This will be the eighth successive year that Fans' Forum has been sponsored by The Daily Orange.

Grid Rivals Split Weekend Contests

Bill Orange's grid rivals split an octet of weekend games as Illinois, Fordham, Holy Cross and Temple triumphed in the second big round of collegiate football.

Ed Danowski's Fordham Rams were impressive in rolling over twice-victorious Detroit, 21-7, in their season-opener. The Rams, led by the double air-arm of quarterbacks Roger Franz and of Vinnie Drake, invade Archbold stadium Saturday to battle the Orange.

Holy Cross trampled Colgate, 19-6, in a battle of future Piety opponents while Illinois turned back Stanford, 33-21, and Temple whitewashed Bowling Green, 21-0 in other weekend contests.

The three remaining Hill rivals, Cornell, Penn State and Villanova, took it on the chin Saturday. Powerful Rice toppled Cornell, 28-7, Penn defeated Penn State, 13-7, for its first victory over State in six seasons, and Villanova dropped its third straight, 18-12, to William and Mary.

MSG Civil Service Sets Deadline For Assemblymen Nominations

The new men's student government assembly will be chosen at a campus-wide male election Wednesday, Oct. 28, Stephen Reiss, chief of MSG civil service, announced yesterday. Deadline for petitions for assemblymen is 5 p.m. Monday.

Balloting will be held concurrently with freshmen elections at about six booths on campus.

THE 1953-54 assembly will be the first to be selected and operated under the revised elections act passed by the MSG legislating group last May.

Chosen on a non-political basis, the group will be composed of nine members from each of the four classes. There will be at least three fraternitymen, three independents and one city student from each class.

A petition available in the civil service office, Building 30, must be signed by 20 members of the candidate's class and returned to candidate's class and returned to the office by Monday. Endorsement must be by members of the classification the candidate wishes to represent.

Any male student is eligible for election provided he is not on individual probation and is eligible for extra-curricular activities in accordance with the rules and regulations of the University.

CIVIL SERVICE will check eligibility and release the list of candidates within five days after the deadline for petitions.

A candidate must indicate on his petition what classification he wants to represent. Prospective Greek pledges must run in the fraternity division. A candidate by accepting endorsement under one classification may not run or be elected under any other group, according to the act. If after elected he changes his status, he must resign from the assembly.

Voters will be allowed a maximum of nine votes. In each class the three Greeks, three independents and one city student receiving the highest number of votes in their respective groups will be elected. The remaining two places will be filled by the two runners-up among the remaning candidates regardless of affiliations or classifications, the act states.

Campaigning will be allowed by student government after noon, Oct. 17.

STEPHEN RIESS, chief of civil service, announced yesterday that deadlines for assembly petitions is 5 p.m., October 12.

CORRECTION

Vincent R. Rogers, assistant instructor in education, will instruct students in practice teaching for elementary education and will conduct a workshop in educational administration this fall. The Daily Orange erroneously said Tuesday that Dean Virgil M. Rogers would assume these duties.

DU LOCATION

Delta Upsilon fraternity is located at 426 Ostrom ave. at the corner of Ostrom and Marshall and not at the corner which was stated in the rushing booklet, "Meet the Greeks."

Chesterfield Reps Appointed for Hill

Elizabeth Hazard, Arthur Koeppel and Arthur Siegel have been appointed campus representatives for Chesterfield cigarettes, according to an announcement by Campus Merchandising Bureau, Inc.

They were chosen from applicants throughout the nation to represent Chesterfield cigarettes on campuses. The position will provide experience in merchandising, advertising and public relations, as the student representatives get on-the-job training in conducting sales promotion programs.

DRAMA

The School of Speech and Drama was known as the School of Oratory at its founding in 1917. It was the first institution in the country to offer the degree Bachelor of Oral English.

Frosh Petitions Due For Class Positions

Freshmen will go to the polls Wednesday, Oct. 28 to elect their class officers. Petitions are due at student government offices by 5 p.m. Monday, Madge Evans and Stephen Reiss, chiefs of civil service, said yesterday.

Students wanting political party support must submit applications to Tri-Orange or United Students' parties before filing petitions.

TRI-O HAS set a Thursday deadline on applications, which should be submitted to Patricia Carroll, Kappa Kappa Gamma, or Edwin Hochberg, Phi Epsilon Pi.

United Students' party applications also must be handed in by tomorrow to Robert Garver, Sigma Phi Epsilon, or Richard Bancroft, Sigma Chi.

Applications should include name, local and home addresses, phone number, high school activities and ideas for the class of 1957.

Independent candidates—those who do not want party affiliation—will only hand in petitions to civil service

BOTH PARTY leaders indicated last night that they would seek to postpone the date of the elections or the date when petitions are due.

Petitions are available in the men's student government office, Building 30. They must be returned by Monday with signatures of at least 25 members of the freshman class endorsing the candidate for office.

President, vice president, secretary and treasurer will be chosen in the election.

Petitions will be cleared by student government by Oct. 17.

EACH PROSPECTIVE candidate must note any political affiliation on his petition.

Dean Shirley Names Additions to Faculty

Three additions to the State university of New York College of Forestry faculty and staff were announced recently by Dean Hardy L. Shirley.

They are George H. Haines, business director; Paul G. Keat, instructor in economics; and Marguerite Van Bree, member of the registrar's staff.

Haines replaces Augustus J. Carroll, who will assume full-time duties as business manager of the College of Medicine here.

A colonel in the U. S. Army during World War II, Haines was business manager of Champlain College. He is a graduate of the University of Rhode Island and took advanced work at Brown university and the Rhode Island college of Education.

Keat received his Bachelor of Business Administration degree from Washington University in St. Louis. A certified public accountant, Keat taught at Washington university and was a research associate in the Indutsrial Relations center of the University of Chicago.

Formerly resident registrar at Champlain college in Plattsburg, Miss Van Bree still holds that position although the institution was closed in July. The records of Champlain college have been transferred to the College of Forestry, where she will also assist in registration work.

FORESTRY REGISTRATION

The State University of New York College of Forestry currently has 107 graduate students enrolled in its course.

Forty-eight New York state students, 34 out-of-state students, and 58 veterans compose part of the group.

There are presently 25 foreign students studying at the college. They include members from Burma, India, Germany, Turkey, Sweden, and Israel among others.

FELLOWSHIP MEETING

The Fellowship of Reconciliation will hold its first meeting at 7:30 p.m. today in the Chapel lounge. Dr. J. Theron Illick, faculty advisor, will address the group.

FOR explores non-violent methods of solving world tensions and racial problems in an effort to promote brotherhood.

WAA Blazers On Sale Today

Sponsored by the women's athletic association, the Syracuse blazer sale will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, October 6 and 7 in the women's building.

Tweed and flannel blazers are available in traditional blue and white. This year, for the first time, flannel charcoal blazers will be offered for sale. Prices range from $18.95 to $23.95, piping included.

Open to all classes, the sale includes personal fittings. The fitting schedule is as follows: Tuesday, 9-11:30 a.m., A-F; 1-4:30 p.m., G-M; Wednesday, 9-11:30 a.m., M-R; 1-4:30 p.m., S-Z. Coeds unable to sign up on the designated afternoon or morning may order blazers at any other time on the schedule.

WAA President Virginia Sheldrick emphasizes that women need not have signed up at registration in order to purchase Hill blazers.

LIGHTS OUT

In Sims dormitory lights were furnished by the University until 10:30 p.m. in 1907. After that hour lamps were permitted at the expense and care of students.

USP, Tri-O Leaders Get Petition Deadline Delay

— BULLETIN —

Deadlines for petitions have been extended to 5 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 14, Stephen Reiss announced late last night after a meeting of WSG-MSG civil service personnel.

Because of fraternity rushing, however, Robert Garver, USP chairman and Edward Hochberg, the Tri-O chairman, stated that party deadlines could not be extended.

Freshmen wishing to run on the USP slate must still have their applications in today. Tri-O deadline is at 5 p.m. tomorrow.

By ED HARDY
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Requests by Tri-Orange and United Students party leaders for postponement of freshman elections or extension of petition deadline is "under consideration," Stephen Reiss, chief of men's student government civil service, reported yesterday.

Deadline for petitions as announced this week is 5 p.m. Monday. Elections are planned for Wednesday, Oct. 28.

USP MOVED ahead with hurried plans for drawing up its slate by putting a deadline of this afternoon on applications. They should be given to Robert Garver, Sigma Phi Epsilon, or Richard Bancroft, Sigma Chi.

Party Chairman Garver said that interviews with prospective candidates will be held tonight. Time and place of the meeting will be announced later and candidates notified.

USP's nominating meeting will be held tomorrow night, Garver announced.

Edwin Hochberg, Phi Epsilon Pi, and Patricia Carroll, Kappa Kappa Gamma, are accepting applications through tomorrow from freshmen wanting to run under the Tri-O banner. The party will hold an organizational meeting at 7:15 p.m. today at the Alpha Gamma Delta house.

APPLICATIONS FOR both political parties should include name, local and home addresses, phone number, high school activities and ideas for the class of 1957.

Independent candidates — those who do not wish party affiliation, will only hand in petitions to civil service.

The class governing act, which was revised last March, sets the date of frosh elections "not earlier than Oct. 1 nor later than Oct. 30," Reiss stated.

Since the current budgetary setup will allow only one fall election, frosh class officers must be chosen at the same time as MSG assemblymen. The revised assembly elections act sets the date for chosing assemblymen between Oct. 28 and Nov. 15.

PETITIONS ARE available in the men's student government office, Building 30. They must be returned to the civil service offices of men's or women's student government by Monday with signatures of at least 25 members of the freshman class endorsing the candidate for office.

Petitions must mention any party affiliation.

President, vice president, secretary and treasurer will be chosen for the frosh class in the Oct. 28 race.

Elections for men's student government assemblymen will be held concurrently with the freshmen elections. Nine members will be chosen from each class, with a minimum of three fraternitymen, three independents and one city student.

Civil service will clear petitions for eligibility by Oct. 17.

Poetry Contest Deadline Set

Deadline for the 10th annual college competition of the National Poetry association has been set at Nov. 15.

The contest is open to any college student and there are no limitations as to form or theme. Shorter works are preferred by the board of judges due to space limitations.

Each poem must be typed or printed on a separate sheet of paper and bear the student's name and home address as well as the name of the college attended.

Manuscripts should be submitted to the National Poetry association, 3210 Selby Avenue, Los Angeles 34, Calif.

DISCOUNTS

Morton's Appliance Center, 941 E. Genesee-street, has been added to the list of stores offering 10 to 20 per cent discounts to holders of Student Discount service cards.

Dr. McEvoy Returns To Directing Debates

Dr. Edward J. McEvoy returns to the campus this year to resume his teaching in the School of Speech and Dramatic Art and to take over his former job as debate coach.

Dr. McEvoy, who is now a director of discussion and debate and director of the student speaker's bureau at Syracuse, stated that he was glad to be back and is anticipating "another big year of debate activities."

INTERVIEWS for all interested in debating this year are being held today from 4:15 to 5:15 p.m. and tomorrow from 2:30 to 4 p.m. in 414 HL.

This year, Dr. McEvoy plans a program parallel to last year's with the emphasis on an increased junior varsity debate program. Also planned are more debates in fraternities and sororities. This was introduced last year in a sorority and proved so successful that further activities of this nature are scheduled, the coach said.

A debate with the University of Vermont will be the first important meet of the year. This is scheduled for sometime in November.

Two debate teams from the University will also be sent to Hamilton college to compete in the "novice tournament."

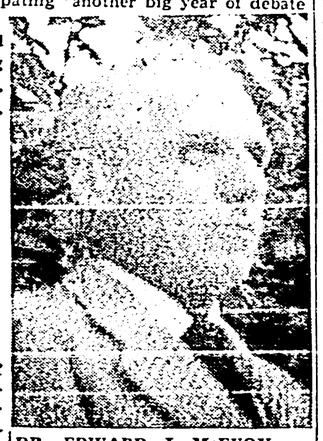
IN 1951, Dr. McEvoy left for further graduate work at the University of Southern California. He worked two and one-quarter years there on his doctor's dissertation. While there, he was a lecturer in the public address department and also judged many debates.

He received his PhD from U. S. C. in September of this year.

Cornell, LeMoyne, Colgate, University of Rochester, and Canisius are included in the group of colleges that the debaters will meet in an intercollegiate meet during the year.

The club officers are Howard Osofsky, president; Marilyn Mawson, vice-president; Alex Strasser, secretary and Hal Vine, business manager.

Sixteen students have already signed up for debating during all-campus sign-ups.



DR. EDWARD J. McEVOY returns to the Hill and to his position as debate team coach after studies at Southern California.

Skiers Will Hold Meeting Tonight

Syracuse's ski enthusiasts plan to hold their second ski club meeting of the year at 7:30 p.m. today at the ski lodge.

SUSKI, open to any student interested in skiing, meets every Wednesday night at the ski lodge. Members get together to exchange ideas on equipment and ski areas, to enjoy pre-season training and to further the cause of skiing as a national sport.

Ski school, the oldest university ski school in the country, is another aspect of the ski program on the Hill. The school, which begins with a convocation and registration in November, is headed by Mrs. Barbara Wadsworth of the physical education department.

Mrs. Wadsworth is secretary of the board of directors of New York State Professional instructors association, a USEASA assistant certified professional ski instructor, and an instructor in the New York State Winter Sports club.

Besides having the oldest registered university ski patrol in the country, Syracuse has a ski team which has won the western division championship five times since its start in 1946.

Men's Glee Club Meeting Tonight

The organizational meeting of the Syracuse university Men's Glee club will be held at 7:30 p.m. today in 205 Crouse. Fred Hakinson, director of the glee club, has extended an invitation to all University men to attend the meeting.

This year Hakinson has planned a program of old and new music, and novelty and serious numbers. He pointed out to fraternities the advantages of having men in glee club for experience of male chorus singing.

If the caliber of the group warrants it, off-campus tours will be arranged during the year.

Charles Rudd is president of the organization.

Robert Warren Wins IFC Award

World War 2 Veteran Gets $250 Grant

Robert F. Warren, a senior majoring in industrial design in the College of Fine Arts, is the first recipient of the Interfraternity Alumni council scholarship award.

Valued at $250, the award will be made annually to an outstanding senior at the University, according to Theodore Glou, president of the IAC.

The selection of the senior student, who need not be a fraternity man, is made by a committee composed of Glou, Irving Harney, vice president of the IAC and Dr. Frank P. Piskor, vice-president and dean of student services.

Warren, a world war 2 veteran attended Alfred university before coming to Syracuse. He has been vice-president of the industrial design class during his junior and senior years.

The other members of the Warren family, are also students at the University. Mrs. Warren, who is employed by the Syracuse State school, attends evening classes at University college. Their son, Gregory, four-and-one-half, is a "student" at the University's nursery school.

Reiss Appointed To NSA Position

Stephen Reiss, Chief of Civil Service of men's student government, has been appointed subcommission chairman on students courts of National Students association.

In this position Reiss will aid in making surveys and preparing information for schools interested in student court systems.

New Cut Policy Sent for Senate Committee Action

Student Government Proposes Uniform System

The proposed revisions to the University cut policy have been referred to the Senate committee on instruction, Vice Chancellor Finlay Crawford said yesterday.

The committee, however, will not be appointed until the Senate meets around the middle of this month, according to Dr. Crawford. The cut question is expected to come up at some later date when the committee meets.

PROPOSALS THAT would allow undergraduates with high scholastic averages greater freedom in class cutting were submitted by men's and women's student government to the administration during the last academic year. The deans and directors of the University referred them to the Senate committee.

Also an attempt to introduce a uniform policy among all the colleges, the plan was discussed and passed by student leaders at the spring Pine Brook conference.

Mary E. (Liz) Brydon, chairman of the joint student government cut system sub-comittee; James Robinson, chairman of the men's student government academics panel; and Marjorie Dretel, chairman of the women's student government panel, worked in conjunction with the executive committee of the University in working out a suitable revised policy.

Under the new system, students who have been on the dean's list in their colleges for two or more consecutive semesters would be exempt from absence regulations. Those on the dean's list for one semester would be allowed two cuts per credit hour in each course the following semester.

Dilemma to Hold Editorial Meeting

Dilemma, the campus literary magazine, will hold a open meeting for those interested in working on its various staffs at 5 p.m. tomorrow in 104 HL.

Those who cannot attend the meeting may leave their names during the rest of the week with the secretaries in the English office, located in the HL basement, or the School of Journalism office.

According to Co-editors Betty Barsha and Patricia Roden, members wanted for the editorial staff include writers of short stories, literary reviews, criticisms and articles on art, drama or music. All types of poetry are also used. Contents may range from experimental types of writings to serious literary work.

Fine artists may contribute drawings, while people interested in the business staff may work on advertising, layouts, promotion and sales. Business manager is Donna Cromwell.

Contributions may be left in the English or journalism offices.

December is slated as publication date for the first issue of this year's Dilemma, with a larger magazine size and changes in format being utilized.

Survey Reveals Students Tardy for Distant Classes

By JACK REILLY

A survey conducted by the Daily Orange reveals that many students are unable to arrive at classes on time since courses have been scheduled in the new Women's building.

Registrar Keith J. Kennedy indicated to the Daily Orange today that there would be no change at present in the policy of a 10-minute interval between classes.

COURSES HAVE been continually disrupted by late-comers since meetings were first held in the new building. In addition to the physical education classes, psychology and English groups have held classes in the Women's building.

Yates Castle is still in active use with class meetings of ROTC, sociology, and journalism.

Starting from the center of the campus at Hendricks Chapel, a student must walk for seven minutes to get to the new Women's building. Going to the other end of the campus, a person needs five minutes to walk from the Chapel to Yates Castle. Both of these walks were clocked at a brisk pace with walking conditions good.

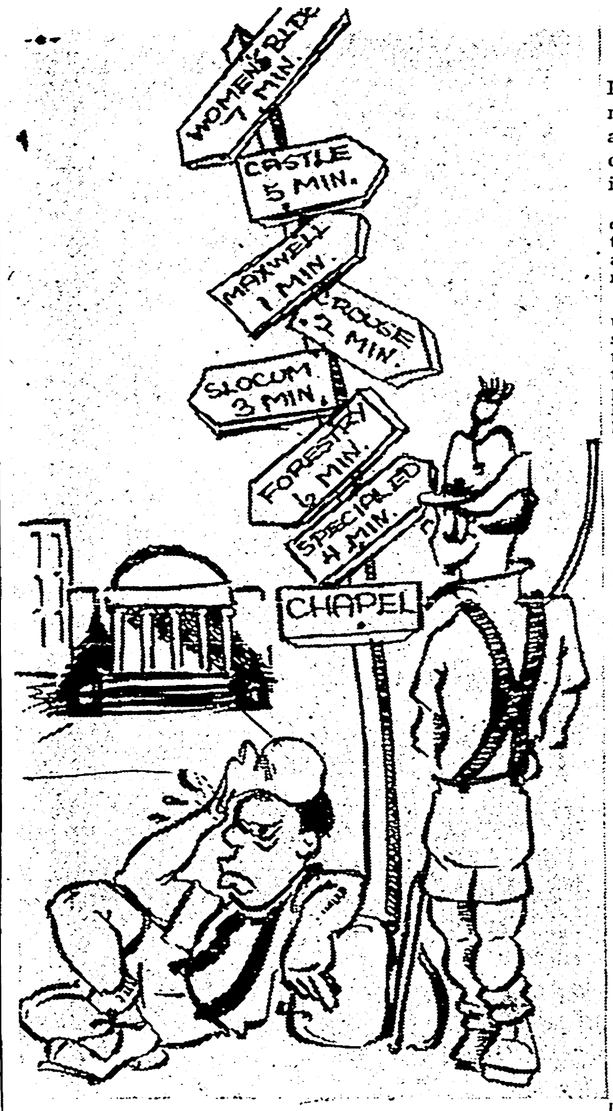
Therefore, combining the two time periods, an absolute minimum of 12 minutes is required to make the trip from the Women's building to the former journalism school. This is also under ideal weather conditions, with no crowds or lines in evidence and presuming that classes are dismissed on time.

IF A STUDENT were making the trip from Crouse college to the Women's building, the normal time would be approximately ten minutes and 15 seconds. However, if he should have a class on the second floor of Crouse and then one on the third floor of the new building, additional time would be required.

Time would also be required for the student to leave the building, with several minutes delay after dismissal because of the heavy traffic in corridors. This could involve 15 or more minutes.

From Marshall auditorium on the forestry campus to the Women's building might take up to 13 minutes. Time could also be added to this if the instructor didn't dismiss class at the scheduled time.

The distance from the Special Education building to the Women's building is eleven and a half minutes—another time that exceeds the limit. Snow, sleet, or rain could further delay the student.



IT'S A LONG hike from one end of campus to another. A poll taken by The Daily Orange reveals that 10 minutes is not always enough to make the journey between classes. This was the conclusion reached even when rapid steps were used by reporters.

Goons' Sweetheart Applications Due

Winner Will Reign At Dance Oct. 24

Applications for the "Goon Squad Sweetheart" will be found on page 4 of today's Daily Orange. Any freshman coed is eligible for the title, and her name may be submitted by any member of the freshman class. A fee of 50 cents will be charged for each application.

Co-chairmen George Kibby and Don Silvestri have announced that there is a minimum of two applications to each coed house; however, each cottage may submit as many entries as it wishes.

Applications must be turned in to the dorm representatives by Monday, Oct. 12.

All judging will take place from 7-9 p.m. in the Women's building; rooms will be announced at a later date. All entrants will be judged on Oct. 13, semi-finals are Oct. 15 and finals will be held on Tuesday, October 20.

The name of the Sweetheart will be announced at the Jiminy Cricket Ball, 8 to 12 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 24, in the Women's building.

The dance is a stag or drag affair, and is open to the entire student body.

Christian Science Lecture Planned

Mrs. Grace Jane Noee, prominent business woman, will speak under the auspices of the Christian Science organization at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow in the Chapel Colonial room.

"Christian Science: Its Premise and Its Practice" will be the subject of the talk open to students and faculty. Mrs. Noee, first president of the Altrusa club, international organization of professional and executive business women, withdrew from business life in 1927 to devote herself to the practice of Christian Science healing.

She served as head of a large food brokerage house in Chicago prior to that time. On the Christian Science board of lectureship, she will discuss the solving of individual and collective problems through the application of spiritual laws.

The Christian Science organization sponsors such a lecture each year for all University students and faculty members to attend.

Reading Program Head to Speak

Dr. William Sheldon, head of the University's reading laboratory, will deliver two addresses this week at the annual conference of the New England Reading Teachers association Friday and Saturday in Providence, R. I.

"The Administration of the College Reading Program is Dr. Sheldon's topic for Friday's meeting of reading program administrators. On Saturday, he will be one of three speakers discussing "What the Classroom Teacher Can Do to Solve Reading Problems".

University Will Give Grants to Journalists

Two full-tuition, four-year scholarships will be awarded by Syracuse university to contest winners at the 16th annual convention of the Empire State School Press association here Friday and Saturday. Approximately 1,000 high school students are expected to attend.

Frank P. Piskor, University vice-presidentn and dean of men, said the grants represent a gift by the University of a total of $5,600 at present tuition rates. Last year's scholarships amounted to one-quarter tuition.

DEAN OF JOURNALISM Wesley C. Clark said it has long been his hope that the University "would take congizance of the high calibre of students who attend the Empire State School Press conventions by awarding scholarships to the outstanding students."

Prof. Wesley C. Brewster, executive secretary of the organization, and Miss Marilyn E. Moore, president of ESSPA, predicted that the increased awards will strengthen the association considerably.

One award will be made to the winner of a newswriting contest and the other to the winner of a current events tests.

Trophies will be awarded to outstanding publications for editorials, cartoons, advertising and an award will be made to the staff of the best mimeographed publications.

AN AWARD for the outstanding photograph will be presented by ESSPA in honor of Dean Emeritus M. Lyle Spencer of the School of Journalism.

The Syracuse Herald-Journal will present a trophy for the best news story at the banquet Friday night in the Hotel Onondaga. Other trophies will be given by the School of Journalism, the University news bureau and the Syracuse Post-Standard.

As part of the convention, the delegates will attend short courses and panel meetings on various phases of scholastic journalism.

PRINCIPAL speaker at the convention's banquet will be Walt Kelly, creator of the comic strip "Pogo."

The delegates will be guests of the University at the Syracuse-Fordham clash Saturday afternoon at Archbold stadium.

Guest Physicist Speaks Tomorrow

Prof. L. Trainor of Queen's university, Kingston, Ontario, Canada will speak on "Symmetry Considerations in Nuclear Physics" tomorrow at the Physics Colloquium at Syracuse university.

Scheduled for 4 p.m. in Steele hall, the colloquium is the first of a series of weekly meetings designed to keep faculty and students informed on current research.

Professor Trainor, a theoretical physicist, is doing research on the internal structure of the atomic nucleus. His talk will be a report of some of his work in this field.

Home Ec Dean Meets Students

Freshmen and transfer students in the College of Home Economics had an opportunity to become acquainted with their dean and advisors this week.

As in past years, Dean M. Eunice Hilton and home economics freshman advisors Miss Mary Grimes, Miss Lois Simon and Mrs. Elizabeth Manwell have been meeting informally with the new students in Dean Hilton's office.

These informal chats, lasting from 4 to 5 p.m. began on Monday of this week and will contiue until tomorrow.

IFC Schedules First Meeting

The first meeting of the Interfraternity council for the 1953-54 academic year will be held at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, October 7, in 111 Maxwell. All houses are urged to attend, and also to send a list of house representatives and alternates to Richard Remnitz, 401 Comstock ave.,

'54 Exec Council Selects Members

Six new members of the senior executive council have been named by the class officers, according to John Beach, president of the class of 1954.

These new members complete the 12 member executive council. They are Constance Talbott, Alpha Phi Omega; Clifford Way, Delta Upsilon; Bernard Bregman, Beta Sigma Rho; Alberta Rosen, independent, Shaw; Nancy Jones, independent, Shaw; and Barbara Faust, Alpha Xi Delta.

The members elected in the spring semester were: John Beach, president; Barbara Suchy, vicepresident; Tom Hall, treasurer; Emily McPartland, secretary; and Larry O'Sullivan and Cynthia Faigle, the defeated candidates with the most votes.

The council will also meet at 4 p.m. today at Chi Omega, Beach stated.

Veterans Flood U. S. Universities

An estimated 200,000 ex-servicemen enrolled at American universities and colleges, under provisions of the G.I. Bill for Korean veterans, according to the New York Times.

These veterans will be the first substantial number since the flow of world war II vets began to slow down some years ago.

More than 25,000 additional servicemen are expected to enroll before the end of this academic year. Another 100,000 men and women will attend vocational or secondary schools under the bill. The cost to the government in tuition and maintenance grants will reach $3,000,000.

The new G.I. bill became effective August 1952. It will begin its second year this fall, but this will be the first year that veterans will return in sizable numbers.

Carnival Date Set

CARNIVAL-MINDED Syracusans will have a hey-day at the annual Campus Chest affair, slated for Oct. 31 on the new quadrangle formerly the Old Oval). Co-chairmen HAROLD STEINBERG and INGA LOEB are in charge of the festive event.

Fraternities, sororities, living centers and other organizations on campus will have a chance to show their ingenuity on Saturday, Oct. 31 when the Campus Chest Carnival will again be held on the main campus.

Applications for Carnival booths will be sent to the various organizations this Friday and should be turned in to co-chairman Inga Loeb or Harold Steinberg as soon as possible. Some of the ideas which have been used in the past are ferris wheels, tricycle races, kissing booths, basketball foul-shooting contests and fortune telling booths.

CHANCELLOR TOLLEY will give the opening address of the carnival which will run from 12 noon to 7 p.m. Admission tickets to the booths will be ten cents and also will be redeemable at the refreshment stand. In addition to the individual booths, there will also be an entertainment area with continuous activity.

All proceeds from the carnival go toward the overall Campus Chest drive which will take place later in the year. It is the only fund-soliciting drive held on campus. One new innovation

Time on your feet?

When classes were first scheduled for the new Women's building, many students praised the action. The building and classrooms are equipped with modern facilities and conveniences that have no counterpart elsewhere on campus.

However, it became obvious after the first class periods that the physical advantages of the building might be outweighed by its relative inaccessability.

The survey conducted by the Daily Orange proves that it takes more than the ten minutes alloted between classes to go from the west side of campus to the Women's building.

It is still more impossible to travel the distance between the Castle and the Women's building in much less than 15 minutes. And this is presupposing a brisk pace, ideal weather, and complete silence all the way.

The same is true for other buildings on and near campus where students have hourly courses. Third floors, long lines in corridors and stairs, and inclement weather increases the toll of class latecomers.

One of the major problems in this area which further complicates the picture is the professor who insists on keeping the class past the dismissal time. It is difficult enough to reach the next class on time without having to start five minutes later.

To alleviate the problem of interrupted classes, latecomers and material which must be repeated for their benefit may we suggest:

1. that teachers plan their material so that they will finish exactly at dismissal time.

2. that professors in rooms at the extremes of the campus, ie. the Women's building, the Castle, Special Education, etc. dismiss their class a few minutes earlier.

In this way students will have sufficient time to travel the greater distances between the buildings and classes could once more start without the present distractions.

Quo vadis air force?

Last summer, many Air Force ROTC cadets were told they would have to "fly or get out."

Virtually all the cadets are still enrolled in the corps and are still being deferred and paid.

And not all of them had signed up for flight training.

Obviously, the statement last summer was made in haste and it appears as if the policy is not being carried out. Rather it is steadily being modified to help the government fulful its "moral obligation" to the cadets.

There is every reason to believe that further modifications will be forthcoming from Washington. It is entirely conceivable that by June, the policy of "fly or get out" will be nothing more than a memory—a bad one for many.

The reasons are two-fold: the Air Force budget cut was passed before America learned that Russia had the H-bomb; and the Air Force seems to now realize that it is breaking its promise to men who acted in good faith.

A letter received recently from the Department of the Air Force to the Daily Orange stated that all senior cadets would eventually receive commissions. How soon they receive them depends on the requirements of the Air Force and the individual service records of the cadets.

Others in the corps will be commissioned in non-flying categories according to the needs of the service.

There is no limit to the number of basic students in AFROTC. The men selected for advanced corps will be chosen on the basis of military needs and individual records.

As for the seniors in AFROTC, it now seems certain that all students will eventually be commissioned. It is foolish to consider that the student will suddenly be dropped. If that was the case the Air Force could have done that when it announced its original hasty policy last summer.

If the Air Force had definitely intended to cut the size of the corps it would no longer defer and pay non-flying students. It seems almost certain that Congress will insist the Air Force budget be raised, after realizing how foolhardy it was to cut the nation's most important defense merely to lower taxes by an insignificant percentage.

It also seems somewhat doubtful that the Air Force will really let the cadets be drafted or serve as enlisted men before commissioning them.

Hill ROTC authorities report that not one Syracusan who was given the opportunity to resign from the corps at summer camp did so. These cadets apparently believe that the "Air Force takes care of its own."

An Evening at the Theatre

'Dinner' at Astor

By JOAN NADELHAFT

"The Man Who Came to Dinner" is a sheer delight.

Edward Everett Horton had the audience in the palm of his hand last night, and aided by an excellent cast, produced the funniest play we've seen in a long time.

Mr. Horton was magnificent as Sheridan Whiteside, whose acid nature and egomania turn the innocent Stanley household upside down with his impossible demands. His gestures and intonations were superb.

Vicki Cummings did a fine job as Whiteside's secretary, in speech and demeanor, a young, prettier carbon copy of her employer. She moved through the role with finesse and assurance.

George Kaufman and Moss Hart wrote some of the funniest lines in the theater for this play some 17 years ago. For this production, the old references have been shined up, and the fine acting makes those fabulous lines sound fresh and new. James Russo and Michael Ellis, the producers, can be congratulated for their first two choices of vehicles for the season.

John Dall bounded with energy as the editor who disrupts Whiteside's happy existence by falling in love with the secretary. He played the all-American newspaper to the teeth. His drunken scene was very loud, indeed.

There is an Actress in the play. In fact, she's a caricature, "darling's," sex life, and all. The much-touted Sherry Britton swayed through this one. Miss Britton's exaggerated gestures were fine for that type of part.

The smaller roles were gems. Gerry Stiller did a takeoff of a Marx Brother burlesquing a Marx Brother that was magnificent. If that sounds confusing, he plays the role Harpo Marx first did on Broadway. The part of "Banjo" was written as a poorly disguised Marx Brother.

"The Man" lampoons all the stereotypes of the theater world. Even the actor-producer-director-playwright-composer type genius is represented. Louis Edmonds turns in a very fine performance in this.

Equally commendable were Camilla Ashland, as the nurse, Ronald Telfer, as the head of the household, and Frances Greet as his "somewhat strange" sister. The other roles were all competent and provided a good background for the principals.

The director, Herbert Machiz should be given a large share of the credit for this tight, well-paced comedy. We suggest you go see it.

LETTERARY COMMENT

GO GREEK? --OR NOT DISCUSSION

October 5, 1953

To the editor:

I am a graduate student and have been both an independent and a member of a sorority. I read your Greek pro and con articles with interest and would like to suggest still a third alternative.

It may sound like fence-sitting, but I believe that something can be learned both from being independent and from joining a sorority or fraternity.

I believe that it takes some time—a week or a year, depending on the student—for a freshman to "find himself." During this process you become accustomed to managing your time, picking out your interests, and choosing friends from a greater variety of people than you have met before. In this adjustment process, I thing it is better for the average person to be an independent.

In your junior or senier years, although you are still some distance for senility, you have acquired some set ways and have gotten to know yourself better. Your life assumes more of a pattern and at this time I feel the student is better prepared for life in a Greek letter organization and can benefit more from it.

My suggestion to freshmen is try both. Look around for a while first. Then later you will be in a better position to decide whether you want to join and which sorority or fraternity is best for you.

Makin' a Monkey of TV

By DICK CASE

I have always held to the belief that television was to be accorded its place in the American day along with the washing, getting the kids off to school, the vacuum cleaner and Ma Perkins.

It was, then, very understandably upsetting when NBC television came along two years ago with an early, early, early morning show to go on just after the late, late, late movies had spun themselves into obscurity.

The show was called "Today."

Upstate New York was first treated to this attempt at a video timekeeper during the first week in September when Syracuse's WSYR-TV brought "Today" with all its sundry performers to local viewers.

These sundry performers include the star of "Today", easy-going Dave Garroway, news editor Frank Blair, announcer-boy Jack Lesgulie and very impertinent chimp named J. Fred Muggs.

"Today" is a loose-fitting sort of production built on the assumption that there be enough news, records, weather, baseball scores et al and that host Garraway will think of enough things to say to fill three hours each morning (in Syracuse, Channel 3 carries it from 7-9 a.m.). The time left over after these are dispersed with is consummed by guest stars, visiting firemen, commercials and the assorted antics of J. Fred Muggs.

During the musical portions, the "Today" cameras pry into the lives of the oogling passers-by standing outside the New York's RCA Victor building whose glass-sided interiors serve as the studio for Mr. Garroway and his friends each morning.

Basicly this type of venture depends upon the spontaneous element for the meat of production. Luckily it has been able to exist this way so far and it seems that the show will continue to do so for some time.

"Today" is smartly supervised. The staff knows its limits and makes a college try to stay within them. It sometimes approaches a radio show which you can listen to with one ear but it can suddenly emphasize the "vid" in video with decorative guests.

If "Today" has brought any good to the shabby television picture, it caused the return of Mr. Garroway's relaxed form of humor. Dave is somewhat of an authority on getting a show off on the right foot and he seems to have done surprisingly well with this one.

The show has also brought an animal star to the morning kilocycles. Midget chimp J. Fred Muggs rangs as one of the "most seen" of the various non-human attractions born of tv. The unassuming Mr. Muggs remains straight-faced through most of the morning while running through a series of acrobatics which include pulling fiercely on master Garroway's famous bowtie. His wide popularity indicates a definite trend in the medium toward actors who keep their mouths shut.

All in all, "Today" is a happy production of imagination and the day-to-day happenings of the world. It provides an enjoyable three hours each day for early birds at home and for the folks in front of the cameras.

Even J. Fred manages to crack a smile now and again.

Poetry

7:00 a.m. and Breakfast

Seven o'clock has just arrived,
I stir my stumps and look alive.
I grab my books, race out the door,
And down the streets to Sims once more.
At last I come to the dear ole' place
As I wipe the glow from off my face;
My hopes do not hold out for long,
For I find the line a mile long!
As I slide my tray along the rail,
My appetite grows steadily pale;
I spy those eggs that are half fried,
Then I think of all the students who died
From overeating or better still,
Who just plain ate or got quite ill.
Two cups of coffee, two slices of toast
Is just my speed . . . I frequently boast!
However, that's not how I feel,
My tummy's on a crazy keel!
I down the brew—'tis five of eight,
Must hurry quick or I'll be late!
They take my tray and slam the plates,
(Funny how one never breaks!)
Out of the door I streak and race
Wiping the crumbs from off my face.
Hurriedly I cover the grounds
For an eight o'clock clash with nouns and pronouns!

THRU the MUCK with MEYER

By ED MEYER, Associate Sports Editor

It's strange what can happen over a cup of coffee. Take last Friday afternoon, for instance. Me and a buddy of mine were down at the Dutch Haven discussing the number one topic around campus these days. And it wasn't the world series.

I guess you know how topics begin to change in a conversation. Well that's what happened here. We switched from girls to football. Some change, huh?

My friend and I were talking about ROTC summer camp which we both had attended over the summer. He started to talk about the many athletes that he was stationed with up at Camp Ethan Allen in Vermont. Different names begun to pop up in the conversation as he moved on with his summer experiences.

"Why I remember the time four other guys, all football players from various schools, took off for an evening at the officers club," he remarked. "They were just about the nicest guys you ever did meet. We talked for hours on end about everything you could think of, including football."

And on he went with the talk. He cited a couple of names in particular that he was friendly with. One was a fellow named Steve Dillon from California and another guy from Boston university. "Boy he said, those guys just love football. Day and night they would talk and eat anything about the game they could get a hold of. They really had it at heart."

He continued talking about his buddies. He talked about the time the other two first met. "It almost turned into a brawl," he said. The boys in Squadron B were having a sort of football scrimmage. My friend had gotten in on it but the other guys were all college players and he was a little over his head. As the game progressed Dillon and his other buddy began to rough each other up on successive plays until they started to swing. It was quickly broken up and both apologized. Oddly enough from then on in, they were the greatest of friends.

The waitress brought us our second cup of coffee and my buddy continued his talking. He remarked that he hoped to meet his summer camp pal after the game. Dillon was out on the coast in the fullback slot for California but they had all hoped to meet sometime during Christmas vacation. But since his other friend went to BU and was coming down he thought they could get together after the contest.

My friend went on to tell about his pal's other talents. He told how during the summer camp final show this guy decided to play in the jazz band organized among the ROTC cadets. "And he was pretty good too," my friend commented. "First he'd play on the trumpet and then double on the bass viol. He was some fella."

It was getting late by then and I had to leave for supper. I told my coffee tasting partner that I'd meet him after the game and the perhaps both of us could go down and meet his summer camp chum.

But he never got to see his buddy friend Friday night. You see, Johnny Pappas had another appointment. One which he did keep. Yeah, it's strange what happens over a cup of coffee.

* * * * *

Eddy Stanky, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals had a word for it last week. He called it the "intangibles." Our own Pete the Prophet had a word for it also last week. He used simpler language. Pete called it "money playing."

Charley Dressen must of had a word for it also but it undoubtedly wouldn't be published in any newspaper. Because it's something that these days is pretty hard to define in any language.

All these thoughts came around 4:15 in the afternoon on Monday. I was standing in the entrance to Lew Andreas office up at Archbold gymnasium. Inside were Mr. Andreas, our athletic director and Arnie Burdick, head athletic publicity man.

The usually conservative speaking Andreas had just run out into the hall following a circuit blast by Brooklyn's Carl Furillo to tie up the world series game at three all. It was the last of the ninth and the three of us stood there nervously listening to the radio.

Clem Labine was on he mound and Mr. Andreas, the only Brooklyn follower in the trio was set to bring his boys through. But the Yanks had different ideas and showed them immediately. With a man on and one down the best fielding third sacker in baseball and the fastest man on the basepaths came to grips. Mickey Mantle won out.

The next batter was Billy Martin and everybody by now knows what he did. But the final remark that summed up the six days of agony came from the lips of a "dyed in the wool" Brook follower, the same Mr. Andreas, "Well, from now on in they (the sportswriters) can start concentrating on football for a while," he remarked shutting the radio off in disgust.

And so they closed up house in Brooklyn on Monday. The television sets were turned to Arthur Godfrey once more but they took it all in much more of a gentlemanly stride tha ever before.

"And somewhere Durocher's laughing,
But in Brooklyn much ain't said,
Cause Dressen's mighty Dodgers 'is absolutely dead.'"

Ben Shuffles: Albright Groomed for Fullback Slot

Rams Spearheaded By Franz, Drake For Saturday Tilt

After two games in which their opponents stressed a running attack, Syracuse will have to move its passing defense in full gear this Saturday if they expect to stay the powered Fordham Rams.

Spearheaded by the two-platoon quarterbacking of seniors Roger Franz and Vinnie Drake, the New Yorkers are rated third in the country in passing offense. In their 21-7 victory over Detroit last Friday night, the passing duo completed 16 out of 28 heaves for 166 yards.

IN THIS DAY of the 60-minute man, the Rams have tried a new system in which Franz and Drake rotate the signal-calling position by quarter. Friday night Franz was in the lineup for the second quarter score while Drake directed the offense for the first and third period markers.

One preseason handicap to the Rams' passing attack was the graduation of star end Ed Brown, the nation's leading pass receiver last year. Nevertheless, 6 ft., 3 in. Joe Kaluzynski should prove trouble at the flanks along with junior Andy Nacrelli.

Kaluzynski is starting his third varsity year for the Rams and is rated by Coach Ed Danowski as a first rate all-American prospect.

Although passing is stressed by Danowski, the Rams will not be without a powerful running attack this season. Veterans will be back to man all the backfield spots and additional aid will be provided by the return of Co-Capt. Jack Hyatt.

HYATT, WHO starred in the 1951 Orange-Fordham clash, was sidelined by an attack of polio last season but is reported ready to go. He will probably team with Joe Palmieri at the halfbacks on Saturday.

John Griffin will again fill the fullback post and try to soften the center of the line with his powerful thrusts.

Despite last season's Orange victory, 26-13, the visitors may be a slight favorite in Saturday's contest. Their impressive victory over Detroit has moved them into a highly-rated spot in Eastern competition.

BIG MAN (6 ft., 3 in) on the receiving end of Fordham aerials is JOE KALUZYNSKI, Ram left winger. He will be one of the favorite targets of Fordham's double air-arm in Saturday's tussle with the Orange.

Intramural Grid Tilts Postponed

Last evening's opening round of Intramural touch football was postponed due to rain. The 1953 season will open tonight on Hendricks field, weather permitting.

A quartet of Intra swimming meets will also be held today in the Archbold gym pool.

Tonight's Games

7:00, Field 1, Delta Upsilon vs Alpha Tau Omega; Field 2, Acacia vs Sigma Nu.

7:45, Field 1, Skytop M-8 vs Washington Arms 2-3; Field 2, Skytop M-1 vs Grover Cleveland.

8:30, Field 1, Skytop M-5 vs Levi Morton; Field 2, Skytop M-9 vs Washington Arms 4-5.

9:15, Field 1, Beta Sigma Rho vs Omega Pi Alpha; Field 2, Tau Delta Phi vs Pi Lambda Phi.

DU, Phi Delt Capture Intra Swim Openers

Delta Upsilon and Phi Delta Theta splashed their way to wins in the openers of intramural swimming last night while Kappa Sigma and Alpha Chi Rho picked up forfeit victories.

Lead by Bob Aikman, the DU's took the 200-yard relay to upset Phi Kappa Psi 23-10. Aikman jumped off to a big lead in the event and although the Phi Psi's Ted Bronczyk made a brilliant anchorman effort, DU's Bob Kohnken managed to stave off his closing sprint.

INDIVIDUAL WINNERS included Bronczyk in the freestyle, Phi Psi's Kev Wilson in the breaststroke and Aikman in the backstroke.

Runner-ups for '52, the Phi Delts on the strength of two third-place finishes edged Theta Chi 10-8. Joe Martin got the winners off on the right foot by taking the freestyle. Ed Gozigan of Theta Chi captured the breaststroke with Cotton Daly of Phi Delt second.

Despite Vince Moore's place position in the freestyle for Theta Chi a third place finish by Harry Bogohsian and Jim Thompson clinched the issue. The backstroke and relay events were not run.

Last year's champions A Chi Rho forfeited to Phi Epsilon Pi and Delta Kappa Epsilon took a forfeit win from Kappa Sigma.

SWIMMING

When the first swimming tank was installed in the Men's gymnasium in 1909, all freshmen and sophomores were required to learn to swim.

Hill Sailors Meet Cornell, Colgate

Opening an eight-regatta slate which includes three home meets, the sailing team journeys to Cornell this Saturday to compete against the Big Red and Colgate in the annual Tri-ad Trophy series.

Racetime is scheduled for 12 noon with six races being held. Sailing the Ithacans' low slung Baby Narrasketucks, the three colleges will vie for the trophy which was donated by Syracuse in 1948 and is presently in the custody of Cornell.

The Cayuga Lake seamen, however, lost two of their topflight skippers, Norm Freeman and Pete Hallock via last spring's graduation. Syracuse team captain Jack Cummings hopes to field one of the Orange's strongest outfits on the other hand, and providing Colgate doesn't pull a sleeper, may start the season in victorious fashion.

Returning to their home waters at Lake Onondaga on Sunday, the hill sailors will scrimmage against racing skippers from the Onondaga Yacht Club.

Ex-Quarterback May Team With Carlson

Still behaving like a Mississippi gambler, Ben Schwartzwalder shuffled more names to try to find the winning hand. The latest name mentioned: Ed Albright. Albright, a quarterback until last week, has been groomed as a starting fullback.

Not only does Ben have a desperate fullback situation, but other decisions make it imperative to start Albright. Ed has come a long way since his conversion almost two weeks ago. In practice, Lyle Carlson has replaced Art Trollo as the wingback. Since Albright is rapidly learning the fullback plays and since fullback was a woeful spot in the Boston game, it seems that Ed, who punted for the frosh last year, will draw the kicking assignment.

IF CARLSON starts, and his name is on the program, Albright will have to combine with Lyle to supply the punting. With former quarterback Albright in the punting spot the chances of passing from punt formation are improved.

The whole backfield has taken on a new appearance. Bruce Yancey has replaced Pat Stark the starting mastermind post. But, as Ben says, the starting lineup means little, especially with his liberal substitution policy. Just because they don't start, doesn't mean that they won't see lots of action.

Other changes have taken place and the indications are that even they might not be permanent. Ben is making every player earn his name on the program. Pete Schwert has replaced Herb Steiger at end. At the beginning of the campaign Schwert was listed. Now with both a need and dearth of ends, Schwert has moved in.

If Syracuse intends to pass against Fordham, as they have done in the past, ends will play a vital part in the game. Dino Hadjis, who collected an arm injury in the Boston game, will be missed even more in this game. Hadjis was fast, and with the ends doing the tiring job of getting under long passes, starting Hadjis would have been the perfect filler.

CAL SMITH is slated to start at guard for the injured Sam Johnson. Johnson's injury is the only thing keeping him from his deserved spot on the starting lineup. Ben summed it up by claiming that Johnson and Jim George were the only linemen who did a good job against BU.

It was learned yesterday that Bob Leberman, the backfield workhorse in the Boston game, was elected to represent the team as one of Saturday's co-captains. The other choice has yet to be made.

In the drizzling practice yesterday, Ben drove the boys long and hard. Fordham's tactical air offense will give the Syracuse linemen a long run. Both Franz and Drake are prone to fade fantastic lengths in an attempt to find an open receiver. This means that some long chases are in store for the Orange linemen.

Each team went through their daily chores yesterday: the line played defense against a Fordham team, the backs defended against passes and then combined they took their turn on the offense against another "Fordham" team.

THE WAY the strings were running yesterday, Yancey will be backed up by Pat Stark and Don Laaksonen will back up Albright. Dick Darr was punting for the second outfit and pairing with Sam Alexander at the halves.

Against Fordham and its clock-stopping, tiring plays, Uncle Ben is going to have to dig deep and substitute freely. For the first time, Syracuse's pass defense will get a chance to prove that it has tightened up. The Hill pass defense of last year was poor, percentage-wise. Last season, however, the Orange faced some of the best passers in the country in Tony Rados, Charlie Maloy, Franz, Harry Agganis and Al Dorow.

Neither Temple, which couldn't pass, nor Boston, which didn't have to, gave the Orange problem of last year a real try. Thus the defense gets it first test of the year.

Harriers Prepare For Saturday Run With Red Raiders

Rain yesterday caused postponement of cross country practice thus giving Coach Bob Grieve only four more days to ready his harriers for their opening meet with the Colgate Red Raiders at 11 p.m. this Saturday at the Drumlins.

Colgate's runners got the jump on the Piety boys as they opened their season last Saturday against Cornell at Hamilton. The Red Raiders lost 23-38 on the small, flat Hamilton course.

THE VETERAN Orange hill and dalers of last season will be strengthened this year by sophomores Ed Alger, Les Vielbig, and Jim George. George has been finishing right behind Capt. Ray Osterhaut in most of the practice sessions.

Grieve plans to run 12 men against Colgate in an effort to determine which of his boys he will enter in some of the tougher runs later in the season.

Saturday's meet on the five-mile Drumlins course is the lone home event on the Orange x-country schedule. This will be the only chance for Syracuse cross country enthusiasts to see the Hill harriers in action on their home field.

Fans Forum Off; No Site Available

Fans' Forum has been called off for this week. The Daily Orange had difficulty securing a convenient and suitable site in which the movies could be shown.

Plans are now being made, however, to show the movies of Saturday's Fordham game sometime next week. The time and place of next week's movies will be announced as soon as they are known.

Last year, Fans' Forum had a home in the old Student Union, now Wilson hall. The Student Union has gone and Wilson has been reconverted into a living center. The Daily Orange hopes to be able to find a place to show the movies because the football team leaves Archbold stadium for its next four games. The movies will give the fans a chance to see Syracuse's away games.

New Column

A new type of sports column will be appearing in The Daily Orange once weekly, starting next Thursday. The column will be written each week by a member of the coaching staff, with boxing mentor Roy Simmons kicking off the new series with next week's article.

The coaches will write on any subject they please and say anything they want. We at The Daily Orange think you'll find the articles very interesting and lend an eye to the "coaches point of view."

NEW LIGHTS

Ornamental lamps on poles have been placed along the entrance road from Archbold gymnasium to the College of Forestry campus.

WSG Assembly Launches New Constitution Today

Women's student government assembly will hold its first meeting of the year at 7:15 p.m. today in the dance studios of the Women's building.

Today's sessions will officially mark the beginning of women's government under the new 1953 constitution.

The major change is in the legislative branch where house presidents and city representatives are replacing campus leaders as the formulators of WSG policy.

Patricia Fay, assembly speaker, will preside at the meeting after introductory remarks by Mary Anne Dalton, WSG president.

Panel chairmen will be introduced and panels assigned.

Chairmen for the coming year are Dorianne Bright, public relations; Mary Elizabeth Hazard, academics; Lois Clark, organization and internal structure, Patricia Mosher, student welfare; and Charlotte Easterbrook, house policy.

The by-laws of the new constitution will also be explained. Assembly membership, nominations and attendance will be discussed.

New Rifle Team Meets Tomorrow

All regularly enrolled students interested in joining the new all-University rifle team have been requested to meet tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. in 301 Machinery hall for an organizational session.

The athletic department has announced that letters will be awarded to those who qualify for them. Although the program is being sponsored by combined RO TC departments, it will be an all-University team and no student is excluded.

The indoor range in Archbold gym will be used and .22 calibre rifles are available to those who do not have their own.

Foster Appointed To New Position

Academic Coordinator Now Chairman

Dr. Eugene S. Foster, academic coordinator of Syracuse university's radio-television center, has been appointed academic chairman of the center, it was announced by Dean Kenneth G. Bartlett, vice-president of the university, and Dr. Eric H. Faigle, dean of the College of Liberal Arts.

The appointment of Dr. Foster, who is responsible for all graduate and undergraduate training programs of the center, is part of the general reorganization of the radio and television department, Dean Bartlett said.

UNDER THE new arrangement, Arthur Weld Jr. will handle all television programs, Edward Jones will be in charge of radio programs and the university's FM station WAER, and Lawrence Myers Jr., will conduct all research for the center.

A graduate of Syracuse university and Bates college, Dr. Foster joined the faculty of the radio-TV center in 1946. Since 1950 he has been academic coordinator of the center.

He has also served as executive secretary of the Empire State FM School of the Air, a Syracuse Board of Education group presenting in-school programs over 22 FM stations in New York, since 1947.

A former faculty member of the University of Maryland and University of Missouri, Dr. Foster was an instructor of speech at the Shrivenham American university and Biarritz American university while serving in the army during world war two.

this year will be the sale before and during the carnival of promotional buttons.

Chairman of the carnival committees according to Miss Loeb and Steinberg are Lawrence O'Sullivan, layout; Joan Vinikoff and Richard Zallen, booths; Eileen Brand and Robert Lefko, publicity; Melvin Klein and Shirley Citrenbaum, poster publicity.

Also Dorothy Bronin, entertainment; James Roach, trophies; Juliette Lobaenz, decorations; and Howard Page and Jane Feighley, tickets.

A meeting for all the committee chairmen will be held at 4:15 p.m. tomorrow at Sigma Delta Tau.

FORESTRY

Gov. Alfred E. Smith served as president of the board of trustees of the New York state College of Forestry in 1944.

Greek Invitations Available Today

Rushees Get Cards At Panhell Office

All Syracuse university women who are rushing may pick up their invitations from 12 noon to 5:30 p.m. today in the lobby of the Women's Building.

All invitations must be answered there and chairs will be set up in the lobby for that purpose. Panhellenic form card replies may be purchased for one cent each from the Panhell office when the invitations are received. No invitations are to be taken from the Women's building.

Each invitation from a sorority must be answered either accepted or rejected.

Rushing advisers will be available to answer questions and advise rushees.

Each girl's decisions should be her own. She should not be influenced by anything but the girls she met Saturday and Sunday at the sorority houses.

AEPi OFFICERS

Co-op Book Mart Tops Own Record In Sales of Texts

The student co-operative book mart had one of its most successful seasons this fall when it took in $4,823.60 for used textbooks, according to Jean Spencer, book mart president.

This amount almost matched last spring's record-breaking total of $4,896 and went over last fall's $3,500 sales. The book mart sold 1,432 books last week to total this amount.

THE TREMENDOUS rise in book prices resulted in the larger demand for second-hand texts than in other semesters, according to Miss Spencer.

The book mart was also located in a new location this semester, in the women's lounge of the men's gym. It previously had been located in the Student Union. This new location proved to be more convenient to reach from campus, particularly close to registration.

Students who have not claimed money for their textbooks should keep their tickets and claim the money next semester. Any money not claimed then will be put into the scholarship fund.

Textbooks which have not been claimed have been put into dead storage and it is planned that they will be given to the textbook lending library.

THE BOOK mart took in textbooks on Sept. 26, 27 and 28 and sold the books on Sept. 28, 29, 30 and Oct. 1. Money was returned Oct. 1, 2 and 3. The mart charges a fee of 10 cents per book for under $1.50 and 15 cents per book sold for more than that price.

Krasner Music Group Opens Fourth Season

DIRECTING THE Krasner Chamber Music ensemble in concert tomorrow night will be LOUIS KRASNER, professor of violin and chamber music on the Hill. The performance will open the series sponsored by the Syracuse Friends of Chamber Music.

The Krasner chamber music ensemble will open its fourth season with a concert at 8:30 p.m. tomorrow at the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts.

Under the direction of Louis Krasner, professor of violin and chamber music on the Hill, the concert will be highlighted by a performance of the Boccerini "Quintet in D for Guitar and String Guitar." Ray de la Torre, nationally known classical guitarist, will be featured soloist.

SPONSORED BY the Syracuse Friends of Chamber Music, the program will also include Samuel Barber's "String Quartet, Op 11" and Beethoven's "Quartet in A Minor, Op 132."

An unusual feature of this season's concert series will be two forums, designed to acquaint audiences with contemporary composers and their works.

Roger Sessions, modern American composer, will be guest speaker at the first of these forums, slated for 3 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 3, at the Hotel Syracuse. Selections from his work will be played and discussed.

A panel will discuss "Contemporary Music in Public Education" led by Norman L. Rice, director of the Lowe Art Center on the Hill.

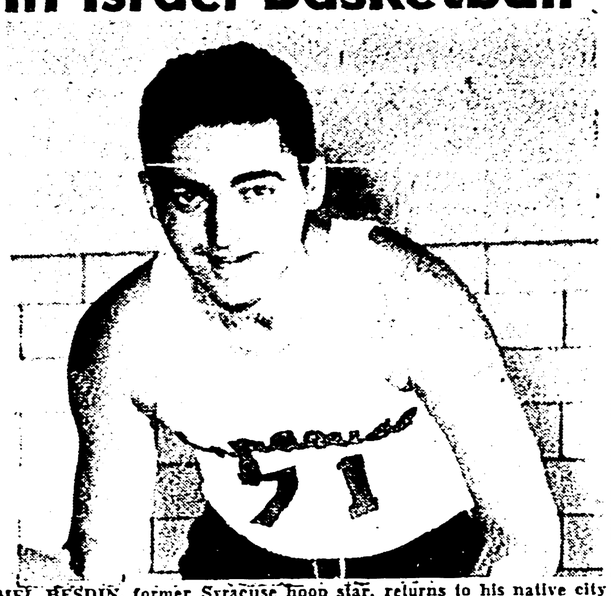
THE FORUM will be held in conjunction with the convention of the New York state School of Music association.

Compositions by composers of the Central New York area will be performed at the second forum, at 8:30 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 18, 1954, at the Lowe art center.

Dr. Alexander Capurso, School of Music director, will introduce the program, while a panel moderated by William P. Hotchkiss, professor of history, will discuss the music.

Student tickets for tomorrow night's concert or for the entire series are available at the Lowe art center, Olmsted's Victrola shop, Clark Music company and the Onondagan Music company.

Mel Besdin Appears In Israel Basketball



MEL BESDIN, former Syracuse hoop star, returns to his native city after touring Europe. Besdin played in the "Olympic" games recently held in Israel. He expressed satisfaction over the way the citizens of this faraway land greeted the American boys.

By ED MEYER

Orange basketball captain Mel Besdin returned home to Syracuse this past weekend following a two-week whirlwind tour across half the world—a tour highlighted by his participation in the annual Maccabee games in Israel.

The trip gave the Syracuse native a new slant on the "world across the seas." Besdin said the thing that impressed him the most was the unbeatable spirit of the people in Israel. "A young and growing nation, the Israelites seem to possess a new and exciting attitude on life which resembles this country in its early stages," Besdin said.

THE BID TO the games was accepted by Besdin this summer and a campaign was started locally to raise flight money. He and 13 other American ballplayers left from Idlewild Airport in New York for the two-week trip.

With their coach, Tubby Raskin of Brooklyn college, the team flew first to Gander in the Azores, to London and then to Israel. The games opened with a team parade before 70,000 rabid sports followers in David Ben Gurion Stadium, Tel Aviv.

American players easily beat out six other clubs in the basketball competition. With such stars like Boris Nichamkin of New York university and Bob Reiss, formerly of Columbia, the Americans had easy sailing to the title. According to Besdin, who averaged over seven points a game, Coach Raskin used the two platoon system excellently in his strategy.

Commenting on the other teams the Syracusan said, "Most of them were not too well trained in their fundamentals except for the team in Israel. They gave us our toughest fight in the finals. Eventually our overpowering height and experience paid off in the end. But watch out for the Israelis in the future."

PERHAPS THE funniest part of the whole excursion took place the opening day during the parade. Mel chuckled when he spoke of the lone representative that Ireland sent to the games. "He was all dressed in green with his manager walking alongside. It looked quite peculiar with the remaining teams all represented by many players."

Mel felt it a deep honor that he was chosen for the team. He said it wasn't actually the winning of the title or the gold medal he received that gave him his biggest thrill. Instead he viewed the young nation, vastly enthusiastic in athletics and anxious to better itself in the future, as much more important than winning a ballgame.

"The big cities are easily as modern as ours in the United States and they are continually building," he commented. "But the people are having a tough time of it. Every night an Arab band will strike some family coming across the border causing death and destruction. I've got a feeling they're going to be tough to defeat no matter what the Arabs do."

The United States team was a small one. Only 126 athletes made the trip, finishing second to Israel.

The only member not of the Jewish faith in the festivities was Harrison Dillard, the brilliant American hurdler who gave exhibitions throughout the games.

Who is This?

DO YOU KNOW who these two men are? The first student who brings the correct answer to The Daily Orange before 5 p.m. today will receive two passes to "All American", now showing at Schine's Paramount. Here's a clue: the photo was taken on campus.

Student Union Heads Probe Possibility of Old Functions

By MARY VIVIAN
Daily Orange Associate Editor

The possibility of continuing several additional services of last year's Student Union in the new Women's building is now being explored, James Carr, president of the former Union stated yesterday.

The travel bureau is being temporarily located in the building. One Friday night dance has been held and plans are now being made to continue them as part of a regular program.

ALTHOUGH THE Union does not exist as a separate entity this year, Chancellor William P. Tolley pointed out at last spring's campus leaders conference at Pinebrook that the functions of the Union would be carried out, possibly in the Women's building.

Two lounges and three classrooms in the Women's building are available for organizations to use. Part of the facilities of the information booth of the Union are being carried on through the general information booth in the Women's building.

Several other Union services have not been continued, however.

No plans as yet have been made concerning the dance classes, bridge lessons and chess lessons. The activities list has not been published because of a lack of a backer and money.

THE SILK SCREENING, pingpong, browsing library, television, juke box, radio and phonograph player have been put into storage at Ainsley dr. for lack of space. There are presently no facilities on campus for these services.

The textbook lending library has been temporarily located in in the Women's building library but will go into storage Monday.

The fate of the distribution service for circulating pamphlets, brochures, and posters to living centers and the talent bureau, cosponsored by the Red Cross has not been decided.

Among other things sponsored by the Union during last year were 21 vic and orchestra dances, 13 chess sessions, 14 bridge lessons, 11 bridge club meetings, 8 movies (at which 2,360 students attended), weekly classical music hour meetings, 4 open houses, the national election coverage and 20 dance classes.

Krasner to Lead Chamber Ensemble

Ray de la Torre classical guitarist, will be featured perfromer when the Krasner Chamber Music ensemble presents Boccherini's "Quintet in D for Guitar and String Quartet" at 8:30 p.m. today in the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts.

Prof. Louis Krasner, professor of violin and chamber music in Crouse college, will lead the group.

ALSO ON the program will be Samuel Barber's "String Quartet" and a Beethoven quartet.

The concert is the first in this year's series sponsored by the Syracuse Friends of Chamber Music.

Highlighting the series will be two forums devoted to contemporary music. Roger Sessions will be guest speaker at the Dec. 3 afternoon forum, when selections from his works will be played and a panel will discuss "Contemporary Music in Public Education."

Compositions by composers of the Central New York area will be featured at the Feb. 18 session. The composers will talk on each work after its performance, after which a panel will discuss the music.

Student tickets for tonight's concert and for the entire series are available at the Lowe art center, Olmsted's Victrola shop, Clark's Music company and Onondaga Music company.

ESSPA Meeting To Begin Friday

Nearly 1,000 high school journalism pupils from 200 New York State schools will be attending the 16th annual convention of the Empire State School Press Association here beginning Friday.

Scholarships will be awarded to the winners of a current events quiz and a news writing test slated for Friday morning.

Dr. Wesley C. Clark, Dean of the School of Jornalism, will welcome the pupils in the main session Friday morning. Featured speaker will be dean of Hendrick's chapel, Charles C. Noble.

The first day's activities will c[illegible]day night with a banquet and dance.

Tri-O Party Extends Petition Deadline

Tri-Orange party has extended its deadline to 2 p.m. tomorrow for applicants desiring its support in the freshman elections, Edwin Hochberg, co-chairman, announced yesterday.

The move followed the extension by civil service of the petition deadline to 5 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 14. Elections are scheduled for Oct. 28.

UNITED STUDENTS PARTY closed applications yesterday and reviewed prospective candidates last night. No extension of USP's deadline was made because of possible conflict with rushing, Chairman Robert Garver reported early yesterday.

The group will hold its nominating meeting at 8 p.m. tonight at the Sigma Chi house.

Tri-O will interview applicants tomorrow afternoon. The nominating meeting is set for Sunday evening. Party reps met last night at a reorganizational meeting.

Applications from those desiring to run under the Tri-O banner should be handed in to Hochberg, Phi Epsilon Pi or Patricia Carroll, Kappa Kappa Gamma. Name, address, phone number, high school activities, qualifications and any ideas for the frosh class must be included.

PETITIONS, AVAILABLE in the men's student government office, Building 30, must be returned by Oct. 14 with signatures of at least 25 members of the freshman class endorsing the candidate for office.

Party affiliations must be noted on petitions. Independent candidates may also run in the election. They are required only to submit petitions to civil service.

Eligibility will be checked by Oct. 21 and campaigning will begin that day, Stephen Reiss, chief of MSG civil service, said.

Campaign's On For Marshall St. Mayor's Post

It's almost mayor-electing time in Syracuse!

And two University students have tossed their porkpies into the campus ring.

VINCENT RIGOLOSI, Hill senior, had declared himself sole candidate for the title of "Mayor of Marshall st."

However, members of a class called "The Status and Responsibilities of Women in the Modern Society," taught by Dr. Marguerite Fisher and Dean Eunice Hilton, quickly decided that an uncontended candidacy was not entirely democratic. So Corrine Beecher was drafted to oppose the male nominee.

Campaigning for the coveted post opened last night, with spontaneous talks in front of the Varsity restaurant and the usual campaign promises of free coffee and bubble gum.

Voting officially opens at 9 a.m. Monday in the front hall of Maxwell and will continue until 5 p.m. Tuesday. The candidates will carry their own petitions, which may be signed by voters.

ELIGIBILITY RULES stipulate that each voter must be a regularly enrolled student at Syracuse university and must be considered a regular habitue of Marshall st. i.e., he must be seen regularly having coffee on Marshall st. at least four days out of six.

Marshall st. is defined as the area between the Varsity and the University branch of the post office.

Duplications on petitions shall be checked upon by a board including the candidates' campaign managers, Lawrence O'Sullivan and Jean Anne Brydon, and Chairman Mary Elizabeth (Liz) Brydon.

Art Classes Held For Youngsters

Art classes for young adults and children are in session in Smith 31. A charge of $5 for materials is required. Information and applications can be obtained by calling Miss Marie Bryan, art education department, extension 355.

Nursery school classes are held on Tuesdays from 2:15 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Classes for all other age groups meet from 4:15 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. Fridays, 9 a.m. to 10:15 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. to 11:45 a.m. Saturdays.

Students May Claim ID Cards

Students who have lost ID cards or football tickets may replace them by calling Mary Elizabeth (Liz) Brydon at 75-4191 or 76-5571 extension 264 or Steve Reiss at 75-0037.

Cards and tickets will be replaced from 1 to 5 p.m. Friday in the men's gym. However, written permission must be obtained from Miss Brydon or Reiss before that time.

Fordham Pep Rally Will Start at Sims

Coach to Address Student Paraders

"Slam that Ram!"

This cry will start off the Fordham pep rally at 8 p.m. tonight at Sims. Goon squaders will keep things peppy with their bunny-hopping alongside the marching students.

COACH FLOYD "BEN" Schwartzwalder will be the speaker. He hopes to instill students with the idea that, while the untimely death of John Pappas, Boston university player is not an incident soon to be forgotten, the Orange needs the student support shown in the past.

The cheerleaders and marching band will be on hand to whip up enthusiasm for the encounter with the Rams Saturday afternoon.

Greek houses carrying blazing torches plan to join the throng, while other students will cram as many as possible into their cars to ride near the front of the parade.

Sandwich boards advertising the rally will pop up around campus today. Some of the more sturdy members of the Goon Squad will be supporting these signs.

THE HILL will take on some aspect of Route 11 when Burma Shave signs appear boosting tonight's affair.

Last night a number of Goon Squaders stirred up a little prepep rally enthusiasm when they "serenaded" freshmen coed dorms. Donning gaily colored pajamas for the occasion, they used washboards, pots, pans and other forms of noisemakers to urge the frosh to attend the rally.

Large Attendance Greets First WSG Assembly Meeting

Procedural Code With Few Changes Approved by Prexies

Before a gathering of more than 90 house presidents and representatives, Speaker Patricia Fay called to order the initial meeting of the women's student government assembly last night in the dance studio of the women's building.

After introduction of junior officer panel chairmen and listing of panel members, the newly drawn-up procedural code of the assembly was read for approval by the prexies.

THE FIRST group vote of the revised WSG group altered the wording in the section which provides for assembly veto power over the president. It was moved and approved that the words "three-fourths of the full membership" be changed to "three-fourths of the full voting membership.

This makes provision for representatives from the executive and administrative WSG branches (WSG officers and junior officers) who serve only in an ex-officio capacity and have no assembly vote.

Miss Fay announced that members of all women's living centers will hear a special WSG program over campus radio station WAER at 10 p.m. Sunday. Those women who have no FM radios in their residences will be allowed to go to houses where there are such radio.s

Vice-president Mary E. (Liz) Brydon announced the granting of weeknight 12 o'clock permissions to graduating seniors and stated that these women must return four pink permission slips to their house presidents.

She also said that Standards council has voted to provide several petition blanks to each house president for girls who return after permission hours to their living centers because of emergencies.

These girls may fill out peti-

New Water Line Opens Next Week

A $90,000 water line that will cut across the Hill campus will be placed in operation some time next week, according to Potter W. Kelly, acting city engineer.

Kelly said yesterday that the line replaces an old main that ran under the north end of Archbold stadium where new classrooms have been constructed.

The line, built by the city, will be placed in operation as soon as tests have been made and the line has been chlorinated.

Mrs. Roosevelt to Speak For United Nations Week

By EILEEN CHAMBERLAIN
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has accepted an invitation to address Syracusans Wednesday, Oct. 21 in Lincoln auditorium.

The former first lady will speak here in connection with United Nations week, which has been proclaimed by Mayor Thomas Corcoran from Monday, Oct. 19 to Friday, Oct. 23.

After completing an afternoon engagement in Watertown, Mrs. Roosevelt will arrive in Syracuse about 5:30 p.m. and is scheduled to speak at 8:15 p.m.

Tentative plans have been made to honor her at a dinner for members of the United Nations at Syracuse University club. The banquet will probably be held at Shaw dormitory.

Prof. Donald G. Bishop of the Maxwell school announced yesterday that the Lincoln auditorium appearance will be admission free. He urges university representatives to attend the meeting since Mrs. Roosevelt enjoys talking to students.

During her husband's administraction Mrs. Roosevelt distinguished herself by visiting many nations and peoples to seek attitudes and opinions of foreign citizens and to act as a good will ambassador.

She traveled to several military outposts during World War II and was appointed United States delegate to the UN shortly after that organization was formed in 1945.

For many years she has written a column, "If You Ask Me", formerly published by the Ladies' Home Journal and now appearing in McCall's magazine.

The University UN club is organized to discuss current problems before the United Nations. It has an actual security council setup and sends delegates to meetings of various campus security councils in this area.

Citizenship Students Canvass Local Voters

One thousand and twenty freshmen enrolled in citizenship classes are conducting a survey in Syracuse this week on the number of citizens registered to vote for this year.

The project, jointly sponsored by the League of Women Voters and the citizenship program, is the sixth one of its kind in which Syracuse university frosh have participated.

IN THE non-partisan drive for vote registration, students are urging local residents to register by Friday or Saturday.

Students in each class are split into teams of four or five and team leaders are chosen to organize their groups. The participants must cover 166 polling places. Each team must visit one polling station during the first registration period and conduct their survey in the area that it covers.

Maps of the districts have been posted by the city officials near the polls and by citizenship instructors on office doors in Maxwell to guide the students.

Besides asking Syracusans if they have registered, the students are also telling them the time and place of registration. Teams are compiling summaries by districts and ward totals will be submitted to instructors.

IF PEOPLE are not at home, the freshmen leave slips of paper which have information about the qualifications for voting.

Starting Oct. 3, the citizenship program, which has been a success in past years, will end Saturday.

CITIZENSHIP STUDENTS are assisting in getting out the vote as part of their term projects. STUART GERRY BROWN heads the department.

Bus Ad Teachers To Hold Meeting

The Business Teachers' association of New York will hold its annual fall meeting in Oneida 6:30 p.m. today.

A panel discussion on "The Use of Job Instruction Sheets" headed by Clinton A. Reed, chief of the Department of Education's Bureau of Business Education, will be presented after dinner. Mrs. Jane Gammardella of the University's College of Business Administration is in charge of the program. Dr. O. R. Wessels, also of the College of Business Administration, is the chairman of the public relations committee.

University OK's Laundry Collection

Associated Laundries Granted Sanction

University approval has been granted to a local dry cleaning establishment to solicit business in all men's and women's living centers and in sororities, according to information released yesterday by Miss Dorothy Osborn of the dean of women's office.

Associated Laundries, inc. has exclusive University sanction to collect dry cleaning and laundry work through regular representatives in living centers. This was recently approved by Francis A. Wingate, Syracuse university comtroller, and goes into effect immediately.

There are still openings for representatives to collect clothing in living centers. The system will be run on a commission basis. Representatives will not have their dry cleaning done free of charge, but commission will be adequate to cover the cost of work they wish done for themselves.

THOSE WHO are interested in the jobs should contact Miss Osborn who is in charge of employing representatives for the company.

University officials approved solicitations for work by Associated Laundries for student convenience, to help some students earn a partial means of meeting college costs and to eliminate excessive interruption by competing businesses during study hours.

The plan covers all campus residences and dormitories with the exception of fraternities. Interfraternity Council Persident Frederick Briggs said yesterday that he has not been approached on the subject. He assumes that individual fraternity houses will decide whether or not to adopt the service. However the question may be brought up at a later IFC meeting.

Boar's Head Sets Student Sign-Ups

Registration for apprentices to Boar's Head, the dramatic honorary, will last throughout the week, as the society begins its 50th Anniversary year, according to Gil Katz, publicity chairman.

Last year's apprentices are urged to register at the Drama Building. New applicants for apprenticeship still have time to register the remainder of the week.

come to the Drama building during the hours of 3-4 p.m. today and tomorrow and between the hours of 10 a.m. to noon on Saturday.

New apprentices who have any questions or problems are advised to see Sheldon Weiner, apprentice chairman.

Dilemma Staffers Will Meet Today

Students interested in joining the staff of Dilemma, the campus literary magazine, will meet at 5 p.m. today in 104 HL. Workers are needed for the business, art and editorial staffs. Those who cannot attend the meeting may leave their names in the English office in HL.

Drama Honorary Plans New Season At First Meeting

Boar's Head, the campus dramatic society, held its first meeting of the year last Tuesday night.

Thespian and would-be-apprentices gathered in the Drama building to launch the society underway for the coming year.

JANE ESMAY, president of up as apprentices following the other members spoke to the gathered assembly explaining the functions and ideas lying behind the honorary. The purpose of the meeting was principally to acquaint future apprentices with the work connected with the society and to explain its overall purposes.

Boar's Head, which consists of approximately 17 members, is entering the year of its 50th Anniversary. Although no definite productions have been selected, there are quite a number under consideration to comprise the usual repetoire of five plays and one musical comedy.

Members who spoke to the future apprentices and who will be in charge of the various departments are: Gil Katz, publicity; Sam Baskin, art; Don Abramsky, house; Marlene Muller, props; Anna Lee Bornhoffen, costumes; and Marie Ubans, tickets. Shelly Weiner, apprentices chairman, explained the place of the apprentice in Boar's Head and the point system through which members for the honorary are chosen.

Jerry Leider, former president of Boar's Head and present faculty advisor for the group, stated that more than 100 students signed up a sapprentices following the meeting.

AF ROTC Cadets To Meet Today

Drill for AFROTC cadets will get underway today with a convocation for junior and senior cadets in Marshall auditorium at 12 noon. The convocation will be under the supervision of Cadet Col. John Forgette and Cadet Lt. Col. John Duddy. It is designed to orient the upperclassmen into the new organization and cadet leadership program, which will be entirely cadet run. The new program is believed to be the first of its kind throughout the country.

Tuesday, freshmen, cadets will assembly in Marshall auditorium for a mass convocation at 12 noon. Col. Robert Halloran will formally welcome the new cadets and introduce the new permanent and cadet officers. The draft status, and new Air Force regulations on flying will be discussed in a panel discussion.

Outdoor drill will start October 20. Freshmen will report to Hendricks field for organization and sophomores to Thornden park for organization and drill.

The new drill and leadership program is designed to provide the utmost proficiency in drill and opportunity of command.

Teachers' Exam Applications Due

The National Teacher Examinations will be given at 200 testing centers throughout the United States on Saturday, Feb. 13, 1954. Completed applications and examination fees will be accepted by the ETS office during Nov. and Dec. and must be in before Jan. 15th.

Application forms and a bulletin of information describing registration and containing sample test questions may be obtained from college officials or directly from the National Teacher Examinations, Educational Testing Service, P.O. Box 592, Princeton, New Jersey.

A candidate may take the Common Examinations, which include tests in professional information, general culture, English expression, and non-verbal reasoning; and one or two of nine optional exams on different subjects to prove mastery of the subject matter to be taught.

The college in which the candidate is enrolled will advise him which exams to take.

FROSH CLASS

A class for Daily Orange freshmen will be held at 4 p.m. today in 102 Castle. All sports and editorial staffers who did not attend Monday's session must be present at today's class.

Discount Cards Sold Nationally

More than 2,000 student discount cards have been sold this year in the nation-wide program sponsored by National Students' association.

Exact figures on the 2,000 addition cards that have been on sale since last Tuesday are not yet complete, according to Stephen Reiss, Chief Civil Service Commissioner of Men's Student Government, assisting in the project.

More stores are being contacted in order to provide a larger service for the students, states Commissioner Reiss. An up-to-date list of out-of-town stores is being prepared, including Detroit, Boston, New Rochelle, New Haven and others.

The 25-cent fee charged for the cards will be used by MSG and NSA to cover publicity expenses and administrative costs, and to provide an independent source of income for special projects.

Eight stores currently participating in the plan are: the Stadium Cleaners on Marshall st.; Nadine's Dress Shop and Rob Roy's Men's shop on Westcott st.; Mayflower Market, Ben Franklin store and Marie's Flower shop on E. Genesee st.; Service Lubricating co. at E. Fayette st. and Irving ave.; and Monroe's Appliance Center at 941 E. Genesee st.

Grad Student Wins DO Photo Contest

George Hamilton, grad student studying advertising, correctly identified the two persons in The Daily Orange picture contest yesterday.

Hamilton identified them as Lowell Thomas and University Vice-president Kenneth G. Bartlett. The photo was taken in 1947 on the occasion of the opening of WAER.

Hamilton won two tickets to "All-American" now playing at Schine's Paramount.

Open House Tea Scheduled Today

Chapel will hold its weekly open house from 3:30 p.m. to 5 p.m. today in the Chapel lounge.

Everyone is welcome to stop in for refreshments and relaxation, co-chairmen Gail Kepner and Harold Vine announced. At future open houses students will have the opportunity to meet the faculty and members of the Chapel board and staff.

Pogo's Papa to Come Back

By ART SIEGEL
Daily Orange Managing Editor

Pogo the Possum says that "a higher education is better than no education at all."

Walt Kelly, who visited Syracuse university last year and is scheduled to visit the city again on Friday, told an overflowing group of Syracusans at Spring Weekend festivities that it is appropriate that a university named Syracuse is located in the City of Syracuse. "They seem to go so well together."

AND WITH these sage words, Kelly opened his possum's "I Go Pogo" campaign—one which, it was hoped, would send the cute little comic strip character to the White House.

Alas, there seemed to be no place in politics for a possum—even though Pogo said he would definitely not "play possum" if elected. But the many Pogo rallies, the first of which was in Archbold stadium here, gave students throughout the United States the chance to have a good chuckle—a welcome thing these days.

The students drank "Pogo" Punch" at the Student Union, sang "Pogo for President" and sported little Pogo buttons that has been created by Dr. Hornblow Owl, one of Pogo's friends.

And when Kelly arrived to assist in judging the annual float parade, Sam Goekjian, then president of MSG, stepped aside, laid down the symbolic gavel and offered it to the lovable little candidate.

KELLY returns to Syracuse Friday to address the 16th annual convention of the Empire School Press association. He will discuss freedom of speech in the nation today before an expected 1,000 high school students.

He is also expected to explain what has made Pogo and the other residents of Okefenokee swamp so famous. The Daily Orange has received information that Pogo may again seek the nomination in 1956.

No comment was available from Albert the Alligator yesterday. He was reported still to be in the smoke-filled room in Possum party caucus.

The senior staff of The Daily Orange announced yesterday that the paper will again support the animal in 1956. Careful investigation last year revealed that there is nothing in the United States Constitution that prohibits Pogo from meeting the eligibility requirements.

Pogo, although born in 1941, has aged rapidly and now meets the 35-years-old requirements. Adlai E. Stevenson, a potential rival candidate in 1956 was unavailable for comment yesterday.

POGO'S PAPA, Walt Kelly, the chubby, friendly man who drew pictures of Pogo for many Syracusans when he was here last, says of Syracuse—and aptly so, "it has a central location—right near the wind and the rain."

Kelly, with an animal strip that might ordinarly be considered juvenile and mediocre, has injected a form of satire and

Time out for music

Prof. Louis Krasner will lead his chamber music ensemble in its first concert of the season tonight in the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts.

The sponsoring organization of the concert is the local Friends of the Chamber Music, an interesting name considering the type of music which is Professor Krasner's forte.

If a group were to be called "Friends of the Concerto," it might seem somewhate incongruous that an individual could be on familiar terms with so imposing a work. But, on the other hand, it is somehow conceivable that one can have a friendship with chamber music, for no other type has such intimate and personal qualities.

In the typical concert, composer and composition take a back seat in favor of the virtuoso; success depends on the musician's ability to impress the audience with brilliant showmanship.

In the performance of chamber music, however, the personality of the play is submerged into that of the composition. It is the form used by the composer to create music in its pure form, rather that a vehicle to display virtuosity.

And to better familiarize Syracusans with this form of music, Professor Krasner has planned, as the two final offerings of the series, forums at which his group will play modern chamber and their composers will discuss the works. In the words of the program notes to the series, "these forums are one way through which composers and their audience may meet to rediscover their dependence on each other and the pleasure of each other's company."

Tonight's session in the company of chamber music promises to be an extremely pleasant one. All this and special student tickets, too!

Time for a change

At least two glaring inadequacies of both the class elections law and the men's student government assembly law became obvious this past week.

First, there is no provision in either bill obligating civil service to announce several days in advance the date when petitions are due from those wishing to enter the eleections.

Previously the announcement had always been made more than a week before the deadline date. However, this action was never made a section of the bill. It was a consideration usually made by civil service.

Consequently, in the absence of such a provision, freshmen this week were given little more than three days in which to decide to run for office and enter applications to a political party.

The parties themselves had seven days in which to receive applications, set up review boards, examine applications and hold party meetings to hear and vote of candidates and all these had to be scheduled so as not to conflict with rushing dates.

After officials of both parties lodged a protest with civil service, student government personnel met to consider their objections. They decided to extend the deadline from Monday to Wednesday.

The action meant little, however, since Greek chapter meetings on Monday night and fraternity rushing on Tuesday eliminated the possibility of the parties meeting any later than originally scheduled.

A situation as confusing and complicated as this must never be permitted to occur again, in fairness to freshmen as well as political parties. A new provision would resolve this issue.

Second, the MSG law states that its elections for frosh assemblymen (and this year the entire assembly) must be held between Oct. 28 and Nov. 15. The class elections law governing the selection of frosh officers stipulates that these elections must be conducted between Oct. 1 and Oct. 20.

Since student government cannot afford to hold two fall elections, the only dates which can be legal under both laws are Oct. 28, 29 and 30.

These clauses, obviously overlooked during passage last spring, may well prove a trifle confining—especially if the dates ever fall on a weekend.

Civil service can well afford to examine both laws with an eye to revising these two points.

Claude Rains Touch In 'Famous Artists'

By DICK CASE

Syracuse's Famous Artists Series has again set its sights on an impressive schedule for the 1953-54 cultural season and the second event of that ambitious program will bring the distinguished actor Mr. Claude Rains to Lincoln auditorium Oct. 22 for an evening of "Words and Music."

Prof. Murray Bernthal, School of Music faculty member and director of the series, has disclosed that Mr. Rains' appearance will feature great moments in drama and literature. Special arrangements are already being formulated for the Hill English, Speech and Drama departments to attend the concert almost en masse and a possible campus appearance by the noted thespian is being arranged.

Claude Rains, the soft-voiced man of Hollywood vintage, will appear in a coming Fine Artists program. He will present his own series of readings.

For his performance in Syracuse, Mr. Rains has chosen to read excerpts from "The Journey of the Magi", "The Canterbury Tales", "Enoch Arden", a delightful comedy by Checkov, and two scenes from Julius Caesar.

Background sounds for the Rains program will be provided by Jack Maxim, concert artist who is slated to render a Brahms works as his solo portion of "Words and Music." The musical undertones will include numbers by Richard Strauss, Harl McDonald and Mariam Brinton.

The remainder of the Famous Artists series, which began on Oct. 2 with the local appearance of soprano Roberta Peters, will proceed as follows: Nov. 19, Rudloph Firkusny, noted young pianist; Dec. 2, De Paur Infantry Chorus, considered the finest group of its type on the concert stage; March 11, the Agnes De Mille Dance Theater, a unique experience in the world of dance; and March 30, highly rated Pittsburg Symphony orchestra.

Two special attractions have been added to the Famous artists line-up as extras. On Nov. 7, a production of "Carmen Jones" with 10 members of the original Broadway cast will be presented at the auditorium and on Feb. 4, Arthur Fiedler and his Boston Pops orchestra will make their second local appearances after attracting a hugh turn-away crowd last season.

Bernthal has made special student tickets available to all Hill residents. They will be available at the University Book Store starting this week.

A WORD WITH: EDWARD EVERETT HORTON

By MIKE BRAUN

Watching Edward Everett Horton in "The Man Who Came to Dinner" Tuesday evening, we wondered whether he really was the sarcastic monster that he portrays onstage.

Horton, in the role of Sheridan Whiteside had just spent the better part of three hours calling people such endearing names as "sex starved cobras."

It was with this in mind that we approached the door of his dressing room. Imagine our chagrin, when Mr. Horton opened the door and invited us in cordially. We were however still on our guard.

With pencil poised we prepared to record any bon mot that Mr. Horton might entrust to us. Not a word issued forth from the great man's lips. Perhaps he was tired. We took the initiative.

As he changed shorts Horton told us that he will receive a Doctor of Letters from Oberlin college later in the month.

Mr. Horton spennt the play in a wheelchair. "Did that limit his actions in any way," we wanted to know. "Not in any way I can think of except at the end of the play when I finally was permitted to get up I ripped my pants on the part that the wheelchair accomodates."

"Aside from that," he continued, "I thought the play went over very well. The audience loved the gags and I think that they got a kick out of all the local talent that we used in the cast."

I caught a glimpse of Mr. Horton being congratulated and being kissed on both cheeks. I turned and saw a yellow sweater running out the door. It could only be Jerry Stiller, who portrays Banjo the zany takeoff of Harpo Marx in the play.

"Smart young fellow," said Mr. Horton. "He'll go far." We couldn't help feeling proud because Jerry is a Hill alum.

"You know I did this play on television three years ago. It was terrible. Twenty minutes before we were scheduled to go on the air, Ford decided that his new station wagon wasn't getting enough publicity. So out went 6 pages of script. It was one of the most harrowing experiences I ever went through."

The door opened again, and Mr. Horton was in the arms of Sherry Britton who plays the part of the actress. "Darling, you were wonderful, she sighed. "We were all wonderful." Miss Britton too was clad in an outfit which unlike Mr. Horton showed her to best advantage.

We started to wonder. Horton had been in his dressing room clad only in his shorts for fifteen minutes and not one verbal barb was hurled. Surely he had mastered the actors' art.

Game Footnotes: No use crying over spilled beans so let's switch the conversation to another fizzler last Friday night. Alta Burg, one gal who doesn't get hurt playing with fire, really sparkled to the tune of "Over the Rainbow". The only thing missing was the rainbow illusion which Ken Fredericks and company had worked on for the preceding days. As planned, the fluorescent material atop the 100 men were to be illuminated by infra-red bulbs while the girl part of the act did her stuff. Wha' hoppened? Well, obviously the lights didn't light and one of many reasons could be cited. Loose connection, moisture, or the fact that the circuit was cut have all been deliberated upon by the people concerned. At any rate, a bright light will shine again this week as Miss Eunice Mellott and two other gals join Miss Burg on the home side. Anyone see my binoculars?

Startled Eardrums Div.: Many people braced for the shock were given a slight reprieve when the traditional ATO cannon also fizzled. The well deserved blast came at the game's conclusion and left a cloud to match that of the Orange's followers. Spokesmen for ATO say the fuse was jammed at the "touch hole" in the barrel and it took time to release it via tweezers. Many had thought the cannon wore itself out at the Temple encounter. Imagine us with the winning score at Miami.

And now if you'll excuse me, the two headed goon has just reminded me to submit my application for Goon Queen. It probably saw my legs when I was running for my class in the Women's building.

Orange Grid Prestige Falls After BU Draw

Last Friday night's tie with Boston university is still sending repercussions. As a result, the Orange prestige, both statistically and rating-wise, slipped.

In the October 8th Lambert Trophy ratings, Syracuse dropped well down the list: from second to seventh. Penn who handed their state rivals, Penn State, rate no. one. In sixth place, one above the Orange, is Fordham, just two points ahead. Clogging the front running teams are Syracuse opponents: Holy Cross, Cornell and Penn State.

THE NATIONAL statistics also pushed Syracuse down on some lists and completely off of one. Syracuse ranked eighth in the nation in total offense last week; this week they were dismissed from the ratings.

In forward passing offense Syracuse dropped from third to eighth. Who took over no. three spot? Fordham. Forward pass-ranking is based on the average yards-per-game passing. If ranked according to percentages, Syracuse with 45.5 per cent would move down to ninth. Fordham, however, with 57.1 per cent would be the best in the country.

Last week Syracuse monopolized both total offense and rushing defense, ranking no. 1 in both. This week Syracuse slid down to fourth in total defense and to eighth in rushing defense.

VINCE VERGARA, injured in a pre-season scrimmage, has fully recuperated and will be counted on by the Orange to bolster the weak fullback slot in Saturday's game against Fordham.

Although one game dislodged the Orange, they still rank high on the defense. The trouble is that it's the wrong kind of defense for Fordham. Against teams that did not try many forward passes, Syracuse should have attained high ranking in passing defense. They aren't in the first ten.

IN PRACTICE yesterday, Coach Ben Schwartzwalder gave his varsity a little taste of each: offense and defense. Accent, however is on conditioning. Ben capped off practice by making his team run almost two miles.

In the vote taken to decide co-captains Leberman was made one of the co-captains and a tie between Steigler and Yancey resulted for the other. A runoff will be held, but Yancey has the inside track for two reasons: 1) he's starting Saturday and 2) Steigler is injured.

As the game nears, Uncle Ben takes stock of his injured. Sam Johnson didn't don pads yesterday, Herb Steigler ails and the injuries to Hadjis and Wetzel are so bad that they didn't bother to dress for practice.

Fijis Edge Lambda Chi in Swim Intras; SAE, Zeta Psi Win

By BOB TATA

Intramural swimming went into full swing last night with four meets held in the Men's pool. Beta Theta Pi, Phi Gamma Delta, Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Zeta Psi all registered victories.

The Phi Gams eked out an 18-16 victory over Lambda Chi Alpha. Lambda Chi took an early lead with Liddle capturing the 50-yard freestyle and Elmschneddder winning the breaststroke. Koepke of the Phi Gams won the back stroke which tightened the score. The Phi Gam relay team of Love, Stetson, Koepke and Knopp cinched the victory by copping the relay.

IN THE second meet of the evening Sigma Alpha Epsilon beat Sigma Alpha Mu, 21-6. The SAE's were never headed after Dalton took the opening event, the 50-yard freestyle. Another SAE, Forester, copped the breaststroke to make the victory more convincing. Barnes of the victors took the back stroke, while SAM copped their points by placing in several events.

SAE had such a big lead at the time of the running of the relays that these events didn't have to be run to determine a victor. By mutual consent of both fraternities, the meet was ended without the relays.

In another rout, Zeta Psi topped Tau Epsilon Phi, 19-7. Opening the evening in grand style, Franklin won the 50-yard freestyle event for the Zetas. His teammates Coulter and Bickwell won the breaststroke and backstroke respectively. Coulter had an easy time of it, while Bickwell was pressed to the wire.

For the second time last evening the relays were not run since Zeta Psi could not lose the meet even if TEP took all points in these events. Few observers could remember ever seeing this occurance before in intramural aquatics.

IN THE final meet of the evening, Beta Theta Pi downed Delta Tau Delta, 20-14, in a very thrilling meet. Polak of Beta opened the festivities with a victory in the 50-yard freestyle. Pete Latham of DTD took the breaststroke, while his teammate Place captured the backstroke.

Beta won the meet by taking the relays; their team of Smith, Rice, Polak and Crowell splashing their way to victory in the 200-yard relay.

Along the Sidelines

By KEN LENT, DAILY ORANGE SPORTS EDITOR

Taking a fast swing along the Orange sports trail with the week's question: what will Syracuse do to Fordham (or vice versa)? . . . Picture of the Orange-Ram "Mud Bowl" classic of last year may be repeated if yesterday's weather holds.

Harriers open trotting season this Saturday here against Colgate . . . . The Raiders have not taken an Orange cross-country scalp since 28 and only three as against our 27.

Social note: Len Kissell and Bob Beaumont starting a "House of David" conspiracy among the swimmers by growing beards. Current query is will they outdo the Smith Brothers?

Cornell looked very impressive in losing to Rice with sophomore quarterback Bill De Graaf showing lots of class in passing . . . Bob Leberman is Syracuse's leading ground gainer by clicking off 112 yards in 25 carries . . . Pennsylvania still leading Lambert Trophy ratings despite Saturday's 13-7 scare over Penn State.

Marsh Johnson, assistant soccer coach, is a grad student from Rutgers. He was a center on the basketball team, fullback in soccer and doubles man on the tennis squad. Aside from this he wasn't busy at all. . . . Tom Schaffer, former Orange merman, is now in the Marines.

CARMINE CAMPISI

Biggest man in the Ram forward wall is stocky Carmine Campisi from Bayside, L. I. Bulwark of the Fordham line which boasts only one man under 200 lbs. Campisi tips the scales at a beefy 240. Rumor has it that the NCAA cross country championships might not be held at Michigan State after this year.

Saturday long shot: On the basis of Cornell's showing against Rice, we hesitatingly pick the Big Red over Navy this Saturday. Better late than never dept: Sigma Chi shutout Phi Kappa Tau Wednesday night 19-0.

Add comments during BU game: "First down, Temple."—public address announcer. Just wishful thinking . . . "If any man was covered by two, we'd pass to him."—Ben Schwartzwalder. Shades of Bernie Custis.

Seen around campus: Frosh crew men just getting over aching muscles after first days of practice. Frosh cross-country, ditto . . . Oodles of money changing hands—nothing to do with the Series of course.

Mississippi Southern, upset winner over Alabama, placed 20th in the nation in AP poll, with one first place vote yet! Orange not rated nationally, neither is Alabama . . . Rumor that Braves field, recently acquired by Boston University, might be called Pappas Field.

The first game against Fordham in 1905 ended in a 5-5 deadlock. Following this current campaign Coach Bob Grieve will be hard-pressed to keep Syracuse's high cross-country standards. His top five men will all be graduating in June.

Capt. Gary Chandler of Colgate is out of this Saturday's game against Harvard. It was Chandler who missed by inches of catching a dying-gasp Raider pass in last year's Syracuse game won by the Orange 20-14.

Coccari May Change Hill Soccer Positions

Two changes in the Orange's lineup are being contemplated by Coach Andy Coccari following the booters' 1-1 tie with Cornell last weekend.

Sig Wirth, who held down the left halfback position against Cornell might be switched to his old center forward line.

BUD GORMAN'S elevation to the first team at the left halfback in place of Wirth is the other change being contemplated by Coccari. This would leave Vic Obershal free for spot duty.

Gunnar Wirth, who forms one of soccer's strongest one-two punches with his brother, Sig, when they both play on the offensive line, will probably again hold down the goalie slot.

The younger Wirth has shown himself a cool and experienced goalie. Against Cornell last Saturday, he made a few hard saves while handling the routine shots with ease.

While the Orange offense has been characterized by spotty play with few concentrated attacks on the opposition goal, the Piety defense has been up to its task most of the times. A lot of credit for this goes to Capt. Don Moller.

THE LANKY, well-built senior, who was voted one of the top defensemen in the East by his teammates, has been the cohesive force around which the Orange defense has been built up.

Syracuse's frosh soccer season opens this Friday against the Red Raiders from Colgate. While the team has been practicing for a while, Coach Coccari has announced that positions are still open for freshmen who join.

AXEL SPOTS—Marshall Johnson, who assists Head Coach Coccari both with the frosh and varsity teams, is a graduate student at the Radio and Television school. Johnson did his undergraduate work at Rutgers.

Syracuse Harriers Prep For First Meet Saturday

Rain and cold weather failed to keep the Piety harriers from running through their paces yesterday at the Drumlins course. Despite the poor condition of the course, the Hill runners staged a short workout in order to keep in shape for Saturday's opener against Colgate.

Although Coach Bob Grieve cancelled Tuesday's practice session because of similar weather conditions, he decided that he would hold a workout yesterday in order to prevent his squad from showing up stiff once practice was resumed.

LITTLE IS KNOWN about the strength of the Colgate cross-country squad. Last year the Orange runners had little trouble in disposing of the Maroon harriers. Only Art Wallack and Russ Bradshaw, who made fine showings a year ago, have returned from the Colgate 1952 team.

Since this will be the only home meet of the season, it is hoped that a large following will be on hand at the Drumlins course to cheer the Syracuse runners to victory.

Although Colgate should offer little competition as compared with later meets, Grieve has stressed the fact that his boys should go all out to win by a decisive score. This meet should be an ideal tuneup for the race with St. John's and Navy a week from Saturday in New York City.

Sigma Nu, ATO, Tau Delt Gain Intra Football Wins

By BOB VIVIAN

Sigma Nu, Grover Cleveland, and Tau Delta Phi gained victories in last night's opening intramural football competition on Hendricks field no. 2. Skytop M-9 and Washington Arms battled to a scoreless deadlock.

Sigma Nu defeated Acacia, 13-0, with John Bathen romping to both touchdowns. The contest was scoreless until the second half when the Sigma Nu running attack came to life.

GROVER CLEVELAND whitewashed Skytop M-1, 14-0. Ed Marshall's passes to Bill Carruth and Benny Herman accounted for the scoring. The sophomore dorm's additional two points came on a safety.

Tau Delta Phi won by forfeit from Pi Lambda Phi. Skytop M-9 and Washington Arms 4-5 were strong on defense but weak on offense in their scorless deadlock.

By BOB TATA

A full schedule of intramural football games was played on rain-soaked Hendrick's field No. 1 last night. The first game turned out to be a fine defensive battle with Zeta Beta Tau and Sigma Phi Epsilon playing to a scoreless tie.

Tom Spina led Washington Arms 2-3 to an 18-0 trouncing of Skytop M-8. Spina scored two touchdowns on long runs and was outstanding on defense all night. Washington Arms' last touchdown came on a long pass from Gary Lashway to Loren Rhodes.

ALPHA TAU OMEGA defeated Delta Upsilon, 15-6, with Harry Radcliffe and Denis Donnegan scoring the two ATO six-pointers. Bill Kagler tallied for the losers.

In final games of the evening, Skytop M-5 bested Levi Morton House, 12-0, and Omega Pi Alpha rolled over Beta Sigma Rho, 25-6.

Frosh Gridders Slate Four Tilts

Bill Orange's freshman football squad is holding daily practices in preparation for a short but rugged four game slate.

The Tangerine gridders will open their season on October 23 when they engage the Army Plebes. The Kaydets, always a dangerous opponent, will be met on their home field at West Point.

Following the Army encounter, the Wyoming Seminary team will provide the opposition for Coach Les Dye's charges in the season's initial home game on October 31.

the haunt of the Baskervilles

ONCE there was a ghost named Leroy, who lived in a haunted cottage near a large Eastern university. Every Friday night, at exactly seven o'clock, he'd slide under the door of Baskerville Hall (the main dorm), and give the students all the answers to next week's quizzes.

This was quite a set up. No studying, no cramming . . . and straight A's all term long. But then, one Friday, the hour came and went. No Leroy! And the following week, all the Baskerville Boys got an F on every quiz!

The Friday after that, all of Baskerville Hall waited . . . and waited. But still no Leroy! In high dudgeon, they set out to find him. Creeping into Leroy's haunted cottage . . . the Baskerville Boys found him moaning and groaning. "What's the matter, Leroy?" they asked.

Leroy wiped a ghostly tear from his ghostly eye. "The weather's so hot, every time I put on a shirt the collar curls and wilts. I haven't been out for two weeks!"

In high glee, the Baskerville Boys hurried to the local Van Heusen dealer and bought a dozen Van Heusen Century Shirts with the revolutionary soft collar that won't wrinkle ever. Regular collars, spread collars. $3.95 for whites, $4.95 for colors. "A very good investment," they thought.

Leroy was delighted. He rewarded the boys with all the answers to the following week's quizzes. Two months later, all the boys from Baskerville Hall had flunked out. Leroy's good-looking Van Heusen Century Shirts made him so popular with the co-eds, that he didn't have time for quizzes or answers.

Piety Hill Alliance Party Organized by 12 Houses

By ED HARDY
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Dissatisfied politicians took things into their own hands last night.

Twelve houses broke former political ties and formed a third party—The Piety Hill Alliance—to compete with United Students and Tri-Orange parties.

LARRY O'SULLIVAN, chairman of the infant group, immediately announced that PHA would accept applications from freshmen desiring support in the Oct. 28 elections.

Included in the switch were seven Tri-O and five USP houses, several of them important powers political-wise.

Tri-O houses to move over were Phi Gamma Delta under John Beach and Philip Huttar; Psi Upsilon led by Walter Andrews; Kappa Sigma represented by James Messina and Howard Page; Phi Delta Theta with Robert McAllister; Alpha Gamma Delta led by Gail Brooks; Delta Gamma under Jackie Claridge; and Kappa Kappa Gamma represented by Patricia Carroll, former co-chairman of Tri-O.

Switching from USP were Phi Kappa Psi with O'Sullivan; Alpha Epsilon Pi under Jay Siegel; Theta Phi Alpha represented by Kay Horan; Pi Beta Phi led by Marian Giepel; and Alpha Phi sparked by Betsy Prior.

THE SCOREBOARD late last night thus read: USP, 21; Tri-O, 20; and PHA, 12. O'Sullivan, however, said he expects more houses to jump on the Piety Hill bandwagon before the end of next week.

Robert Garver, chairman of United Students party, stated that the birth of the new party came as a surprise to his group. Phi Psi and Pi Beta Phi representatives walked out of the USP nominating meeting last night after abstaining on balloting for frosh presidential candidates. Theta Phi Alpha left soon after.

Edwin Hochberg, Tri-O chairman, told The Daily Orange that the formation of PHA "will not make any difference in Tri-Orange's election plans." He requested that any freshmen who have submitted applications to Tri-O and are not notified to appear before its merit board should come to the party's nominating meeting at 7 p. m. Sunday at the Alpha Omicron Pi house.

O'Sullivan asked frosh wanting to run under PHA to submit applications to him or the party's officers immediately. The new group has scheduled its nominating meeting for 6 p.m. Sunday at the Phi Gamma Delta house, where each candidate will make a personal appearance.

THE MOVE to form a third party originated after elections

THE SCOREBOARD

This is how the Greeks stood after the formation of a third party last night:

USP—Sigma Phi Epsilon, Alpha Tau Omega, Lambda Chi Alpha, Zeta Psi, Omega Pi Alpha, Zeta Beta Tau, Sigma Chi, Pi Alpha Chi, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Alpha Epsilon Phi, Kappa Phi Delta, Tri-Delta, Alpha Delta Pi, Sigma Kappa, Zeta Tau Alpha, Delta Phi Epsilon, Alpha Xi Delta, Sigma Delta Tau, Alpha Sigma Phi, Chi Omega and Delta Zeta.

TRI-O—Alpha Chi Rho, Beta Sigma Rho, Beta Theta Pi, Delta Tau Delta, Delta Upsilon, Phi Kappa Tau, Phi Sigma Delta, Phi Epsilon Pi, Pi Kappa Alpha, Pi Lambda Phi, Sigma Alpha Mu, Tau Delta Phi, Tau Epsilon Phi, Theta Chi, Alpha Omicron Pi, Iota Alpha Pi, Kappa Delta, Phi Mu, Phi Sigma Sigma and Sigma Tau Delta.

DO to Print Saturday Issue

The Daily Orange will publish a special 8-page tabloid tomorrow. Papers will be distributed in campus buildings on Marshall st. and at Archbold stadium at game time. This edition will replace the regular Monday issue for this week only.

Senior to Preside At SCM Meeting

Conselors and Students To Attend Conference

Jane Dempsey, Syracuse senior, will preside at the fall conference of the New York State division of the Student Christian movement to be held at Cornell university this weekend.

SCM is an inter-collegiate coordinating group for Christian students. Any member of a fellowship group on a college campus gains automatic membership to the organization and it is also open to non-affiliated students.

Miss Dempsey, vice-president of the SCM New York State division, served as president of Westminster Fellowship here last year.

Seven Chapel counselors and 18 Syracuse students plan to attend the three-day conference. Rev. Arnold Nakajima, Presbyterian chaplain, will lead one of the five seminar groups oi literature and faith.

Dr. Nels F. S. Ferre, professor Nashville, Tenn., will be the feaof religion at Vanderbilt college, tured speaker of the convocation, delivering addresses on strengthening the spiritual life through Christian faith, prayer, and the church.

"One of SCM's main purposes," Miss Dempsey explained, "is to provide valuable inter-collegiate contacts to local fellowship groups. Through its staff and other contacts it can give small colleges the leadership they lack."

Conference headquarters will be at Annabel Taylor Hall on the Ithaca campus.

Forgette Releases ROTC Schedule

Cadet Col. John J. Forgette has announced the Air Force ROTC drill schedule for October.

On Oct. 13, freshmen will assemble in Marshall auditorium for a welcoming address by Col. Robert P. Halloran, professor of air science and tactics. New staffs will be announced and a discussion on flying will be held. The status of cadets will also be discussed. A briefing on military customs and discipline will end the session.

Juniors will meet in Maxwell auditorium for a briefing on the new leadership program and on cadet responsibilities. Capt. Joseph R. Peartree and Lt. Glen C. Tomb will lead the discussion.

On Oct. 15, sophs will be briefed on customs and discipline in Marshall auditorium. Seniors will meet in Maxwell auditorium for a discussion on the expected roles of seniors. The last part of the session will be devoted to introduction and a get-together of new cadet staffs.

Guides to Fete Foreign Students

Women foreign students on campus for the first time this year will be feted at a party given by members of the foreign student guide group from 2:30 to 5 p.m. Sunday at the ski lodge.

Guides have been assigned to each foreign student for the year to help her in adapting herself to American life and in understanding customs and people.

In becoming foreign student guides, Syracuse university coeds volunteer to assist their friends from abroad with language difficulties, problems in currency exchange and other aspects and details of living in a new atmosphere.

JSF HOLDS DANCE

United Student Fellowship will meet at 5:30 p.m. Sunday on the third floor lounge of the Women's building.

Tri-O Nominates Frosh Candidates

Tri-Orange party will hold its nominating meeting for freshman class candidates at 7 p.m. Sunday at Alpha Omicron Pi.

All applicants for frosh offices submitted forms yesterday to the party, which will hold interviews this afternoon, according to Edwin Hochberg, Tri-O co-chairman.

United Students party chose its candidates last night in a meeting at the Sigma Chi house. These and Tri-O's candidates will be announced in Tuesday's Daily Orange.

Tri-O extended its deadline for applications after civil service set back the petition deadline to 5 p.m. Wednesday. All freshmen desiring to run for office, regardless of party affiliation, must submit petitions to civil service by that time.

University Awards State Scholarships At ESSPA Convo

Syracuse university will award two full-tuition scholarships to two members of Empire State Scholastic Press association as more than 1,000 high school students arrive on campus for a two-day stay.

The 16th convention of the organization is held annually on the Hill. Tonight the students will attend a banquet in the Hotel Onondaga to hear an address by Walt Kelly, creator and illustrator of the syndicated comic strip, "Pogo."

KELLY WILL discuss "Free Speech in the United States Today," according to an announcement by C. Wesley Brewster, executive secretary of ESSPA and professor in the School of Jaurnalism.

News writing and current events tests to determine the two scholarships winners will be administered following a welcome in Hendricks chapel by Dean of the School of Journalism Wesley C. Clark.

Dean of Hendricks Chapel Charles C. Noble will present the main address. Miss Marilyn E. Moore, Rush-Henrietta Central school, president of ESSPA, will preside at the morning session.

Brewster said that several delegates will be guests of Kaye Russell on her Ladies' Day program at 2 p.m. today on WSYR-TV. This afternoon and tomorrow morning the delegates will participate in panel discussions sponsored by the School of Journalism.

LEADING THE sessions will be members of the faculty of the School of Journalism. They include Prof. Harold E. Addington, Prof. Robert Root, Dr. George L. Bird, Dr. Robert Murphy and Prof. Roland E. Wolseley.

---Trophies will be presented at tonight's banquet in the fields of sports, interviews, advertising, cartoons and excellence of mimeographed papers. The Lyle M. Spencer award will be presented for the best photograph. This award is made in honor of the dean emeritus of the School of Journalism.

Trophies and prizes awarded by the Syracuse University School of Journalism and the University news bureau will be presented. Two local newspapers, the Post-Standard and the Herald-Journal will also present awards. The Post-Standard trophy is given for excellence in editorial writing.

ESSPA advisors and officers will meet at noon today at Drumlins country club where officers for the following year will be elected, Brewster said.

The convention will conclude tomorrow afternoon when the delegates will be guests of the University at the Syracuse-Fordham clash in Archbold stadium.

WAA Applications Due Wednesday

Applications for freshman and junior representatives to WAA may be submitted to WAA officials from 1 to 4:30 p.m., Oct. 12 to 14, at the WAA Board Room in the Women's building. Forms may be obtained at the Board Room from WAA officials.

Interviews of candidates for the two posts will be scheduled within the next month. Applicants are urged to watch the DO for further information concerning interviews.

The junior class representative is chairman of awards, and publicity chairman. The rep also assists the vice-president and serves as presiding officer at lower house meetings in case of the vice-president's absence.

Duties of the freshman class representative include policy making and publicity promotion.

No previous WAA experience is necessary.

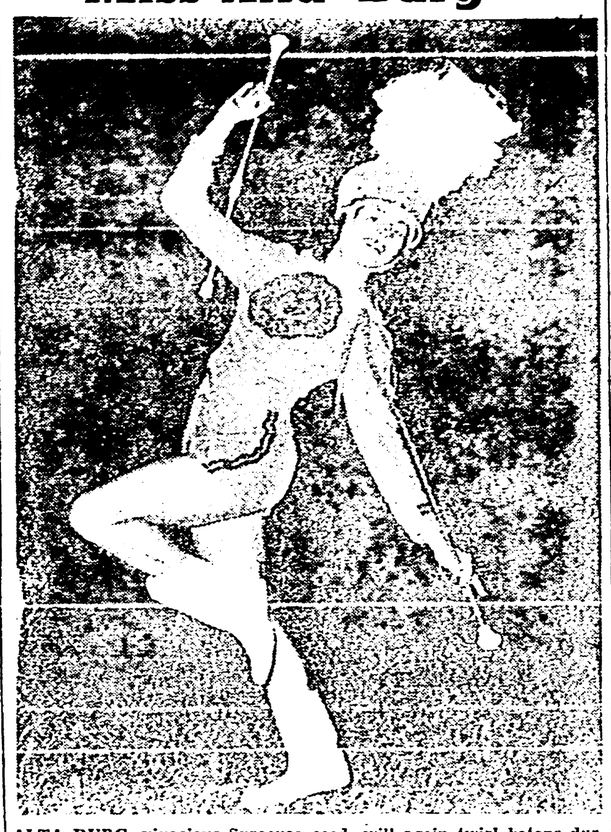
Rules, regulations and ratings will be on the agenda for WAA Officials' Club at their first meeting of the year, 4:30 p.m., Oct. 12 in Gym B of the Women's buiding.

Membership in the club is open to all classes, according to Kay Brown, manager of the group.

Coed members will officiate in the WAA intramural game program and will be able to obtain national ratings following service experiences.

Those planning to attend the meeting are requested to wear sneakers.

Miss Alta Burg



ALTA BURG, vivacious Syracuse coed, will again twirl batons during the halftime pageantry of the Syracuse-Fordham clash. The members of the Syracuse marching band will form in groups representing various band instruments.

Band Adds Routine For Fordham Clash

By POLLY REED

The trumpet, trombone, tuba and drum sections of the band will be featured at the half-time show during Saturday afternoon's game. As the band plays appropriate music, they will form the human instruments.

Two new twirlers will spark the show. Lynn Lundy from Solvay will twirl while the trombone is formed, and Katherine Springsteen of Rensselaer, N. Y., will be featured with the drum section.

OF COURSE, we'll have our two favorites, Eunice Mallott, who will twirl while the tuba men play, and drum major Alta Burg, who will be featured while the trumpet is formed. Alta and the trumpets will swing into the finale with the whole band playing.

As a pre-game feature, the band will salute the Community Chest by forming a red feather, traditional Chest symbol. After the men form the feather, they will drop red cloths and move away from the formation, leaving the red feather symbol.

To start off the half-time entertainment, the band will assemble behind the goalposts and march about one third of the way down the field. They'll form the word "R A M S", in honor of the Fordham ram, and march down to the opponents' cheering section, where the men will play the "Fordham Fight" song.

The traditional SU will be

J-School Elected To Editors Council

Three Faculty Members To Work in Program

Syracuse's School of Journalism has been elected to membership by the Upstate New York council of industrial editors, Mrs. Ellen Van Dusen, Crouse-Hinds editor and president of the council, announced yesterday.

She explained that the council's board of directors voted the membership "in recognition of the cooperation of the school and its staff with the council."

Prof. Laurance B. Siegfried lectured on graphic arts problems of industrial publications at the September meeting of the council.

At the November meeting, two faculty members who worked with editors of the council this summer will speak about their experiences and observations. They are Charles Bernhardt, who was with Revere Copper and Brass in Rome and Robert Root, who worked at the Crouse Hinds co. here.

The School of Journalism is also offering an appraisal service of industrial publications in cooperation with the American Association of industrial editors with which the upstate council is closely associateed.

ID Cards Not Required For Group Block Seating

Block seating will be available to organizations without presenting identification cards, David Krohn, co-director of reserved seating announced last night.

The decision to eliminate ID cards for securing large blocks of reserved seats for tomorrow's Fordham game was made by student government officials in an attempt to lessen the inconvenience caused fraternities.

— LATE BULLETIN —

The Associated Press reported last night that in a sudden and sweeping directive, the State University of New York gave the boot to all national social fraternities and sororities on its 33 campuses in a drive against racial and religious discrimination.

The order, issued b ythe Universities's board of trustees, at a meeting in New York city, requires that all affected Greek-letter groups break away from the national organization. Scholastic and religious groups are exempt from the ban.

A spokesman for the Syracuse university College of Medicine said last night that the men's Alpha Kappa Kappa, Nu Sigma Nu, and Phi Delta Epsilon and the women's Alpha Epsilon Iota probably would be affected here.

The Syracuse College of Forestry was said to be free from the ban.

MANY ORGANIZED groups on campus had opposed the reserved seating plan because of the necessity of bringing ID cards from every member of the group.

Krohn said that a letter from the house or fraternity president must be presented by a representative to the student government ticket booth from 2 to 5 p.m. today at Archbold gym.

The letter must list the number of tickets needed. The maximum will be the number in the house times two, providing for dates. Once a house has gotten its tickets no others will be issued to any member.

Freshmen will be concentrated in section 9, Krohn reported. Sections 9, 10 and 11 will be for placard cheering. Krohn also warned freshmen to wear their frosh lids.

ALL RESERVED seats will be held until game time, 2 p.m. Ushers—members of men's student government and Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity—have been instructed not to open reserved sections until then.

Students holding reserved seats have been asked by MSG to arrive at least 20 minutes before game time to avoid last minute rushes.

Individual students from all classes can also obtain seats by presenting ID cards at the booth.

Wednesday Date Set for Petitions For Legislature

Deadline for petitions for men's student government assemblyman has been moved from Monday to 5 p.m. Wednesday.

Chief of Civil Service Stephen Reiss sai dyesterday that no petitions have been turned in by members of the senior class. "Upperclass response in general is slow," according to Reiss.

ELECTIONS COMMISSIONER Willard Schop expects interest in running for the assembly to pick up early next week.

Slated for Oct. 28, balloting will be campus-wide under the revised assembly elections act passed last year by MSG. Formerly delegates were selected by individual houses.

Chosen on a non-political basis, the new assembly will be composed of nine members from each of the four classes. There will be at least three Greeks, three independents and one city student from each class.

Petitions are available in the MSG office, Building 30. They must be signed by 20 members of the candidate's class and returned to the office by Wednesday. Endorsement must be by members of the classification the candidates wishe to represent.

PROSPECTIVE CANDIDATES must be eligible for extra-curricular activities and be in good standing in accordance with the University roles and regulations.

Names of candidates will be released by civil service Oct. 2 and campaigning will start that day, Reiss said.

A candidate must indicate on his petition what classification he is runner under. One who accepts endorsement in a classification may not run or be elected under any other group.

If an assemblyman changes his status after election, he must resign, the act states. The class legislature will name a replacement.

Voters in the election will be allowed a maximum of nine votes. The three fraternity men, three independents and one city student in each class receiving the highest number of votes will be elected. The remainning two places will be filled by the two runners-up among the remaining candidates regardless of affiliation.

BLAZER SALE

Results of the WAA sponsored Syracuse blazer sale reveal that approximately 300 Hill coeds purchased jackets.

According to Joan Janecek, chairman of the sale, white blazers were most popular, as in previous years. Charcoal jackets also were in demand.

Members of WAA are investigating the possibility of a repeat sale in February.

IFC to Examine Reserved Seating

Committee to Present Amendments to MSG

Reserved seating will soon be under the scrutiny of the Intrafraternity Council.

At the first meeting of IFC, held Wednesday night, the members decided to appoint a committee to investigate the seating program.

This committee, headed by Aaron Miller, will study the history of the program, its defects, and possible methods of amending it to bring about smoother functioning.

ANY CHANGES made in the seating system will almost definitely have to wait until next year to be put into effect, since there is only one remaining home game on the schedule. It was pointed out that action on this would have to be taken through the men's student government assembly once this body has been organized.

Although many individual students have raised complaints on the reserved seating system, IFC is the first campus body to propose any action on the subject.

Fritz Briggs, president of IFC, cited the general inability of making the present system work, as the reason for the study. He said that people arriving before game-time would find their reserved seats already filled, and the ushers seemed to have no power to move these people who were sitting in reserved sections without tickets.

One objection brought up at the meeting referred to the difficulty of getting good seats for organizations wishing to sit in blocks. Block seating is not available until the day before the game. The IFC representative said that by that time the better seats have been taken.

Since a full committee has not yet been appointed, action will be delayed until next week. David Krohn, co-chairman of reserved seating, will defend the system at the next meeting of IFC, Oct. 21.

Psych Department Meets at Saranac

The Syracuse university psychology department will hold a faculty meeting this weekend at the University's Pinebrook lodge, Saranac lake.

Dr. Robert C. Pace, chairman of the psychology department, said that one of the important reasons for holding the three-day meeting, was the appointment of five new members to the faculty. In addition to planning policy for the coming year, the meeting will serve as an orientation for these new professors.

The twelve faculty members will discuss undergraduate and graduate program requirements, operation of the Psychological and Research center, counseling and clinical services to students and the promotion of research programs.

The new staff members are George G. Stern, associate professor of social psychology; Wallace R. McAllister, assistant professor of experimental psychology.

Mathew J. Wayner Jr., assistant professor of Physiology psychology; Joseph M. Masling, assistant professor of clinical psychology; and Francis J. DiVesta, associate professor of educational psychology.

Juniors May Apply For Orange Key

Applications for Orange Key, junior men's honorary, will be available in the dean of men's office starting Monday, Darwin Bolden, president, announced yesterday.

Requirements for membership in the organization, which recognizes outstanding junior men, are a 1.4 cumulative average, participation in at least one major extra-curricular activity and junior class standing.

Completed application forms should be returned to the dean of men's office by Oct. 23.

Among the events sponsored by the honorary are frosh lid sales, Block S banquet, Colgate weekend and the welcoming of visiting athletic teams. Twelve members were named at moving up exercises during Spring weekend last May.

Alumni Dinner to Honor Chancellor Tolley, Wife

A DINNER next Tuesday in the Corinthian club will honor CHANCELLOR and MRS. WILLIAM P. TOLLEY. Most Syracusans recall the reception given the Chancellor last year on the occasion of his tenth anniversary in the University's highest post.

Chancellor and Mrs. William P. Tolley will be the guests of honor at a dinner to be given at the Corinthian club Tuesday evening October 13. This is a second in a series of dinners called "Adventure in Cuisine."

The hostesses representing the faculty will be Mrs. Kenneth Bartlett, Dean Marjorie Smith, Mrs. Harry Ganderf and Mrs. Hugh Gregg.

Mrs. Paul H. Nelligan will be the presiding hostess at the Chancellor's table.

A reception will be held after the dinner in the Victorian room of the club. Orange banners, candles and movies of the campus will lend an SU atmosphere to the proceedings.

Members and friends may obtain tickets to the dinner by calling 74-3328.

Tolley was honored on the occasion of his tenth anniversary as Chancellor of Syracuse University last year when students gave him a silver platter engraved "Knowledge Crowns Those Who Seek Her."

Tolley, who graduated with honors from the University in the 1920's, was active in many activities on campus.

Jewish Sororities To Hold Services

Special Jewish services for sororities will take place at 7:15 tonight in the Chapel. Fraternity rushing prompted Phi Sigma Sigma, Iota Alpha Pi and Sigma Delta Tau sororities to sponsor the program.

Dr. Fred Krinsky of the Maxwell Citizenship department will be guest speaker. Paul Harrison Cantor and Henry Einhorn will be the readers of the service.

In addition to the sponsors, Alpha Epsilon Phi, Sigma Tau Delta and Delta Phi Epsilon sororities will attend in groups.

Club Sets Party For City Women

Syrcico will have a "Newcomer's Welcome" party at 7:30 p.m. October 13 on the 3rd floor lounge of the women's building.

It will be for all women students who live in the city, commute from surrounding areas, or work for room and board. The program will include a group recreation, introduction of officers and a short discussion of the organization and aims of Syrcico.

New officers for 1953-54 include Marilyn Dieterle, president; Martha Hillegas, vice-president and treasurer; and Carla Nye, secretary-historian.

Alumni to Meet At Drumlins Today

Presidents and officers of 41 regional alumni clubs of Syracuse university are convening at Drumlins today in the annual afternoon and evening meeting of the Alumni Association Advisory board.

Members will elect a three-man nominating committee to provide candidates for officer vacancies which will occur in June. George W. Lee, 548 Nottingham Rd., will preside at the session. A series of panel discussions on matters of club procedure are also being held.

To future journalists:

Syracusans have played host to many visitors—and today it is proud to extend a welcome to 1,000 high school students who are about to spend a weekend on the Hill.

The students are all members of the Empire State Scholastic Press association, which holds its 16th annual convention on campus today and tomorrow.

It is difficult to expose anyone to everything in an institution as large as Syracuse—not only in two days, but in four years.

But the delegates' program is mapped out so that the students will be given a panoramic view of some of our major activities, personalities and traditions. They will have the opportunity to visit with some of the professors, meet some of the students and see the Saltine Warriors trounce the opposition.

Many of the potential members of the fourth estate may find the field they will someday follow as a profession. And if they accomplish that, the Hill can rightly consider the weekend a success.

The students will participate in panel discussions with members of the School of Journalism faculty. Those who excell will be recognized at the banquet tonight in Hotel Onondaga.

Two of them will receive full tuition scholarships to Syracuse university. This is the first year that these grants have been for full tuition and Dean of the School of Journalism Wesley C. Clark commended the University this week for recognizing these superior students.

Tonight the students will be given the rare opportunity to hear one of the most famous humorists in America and one of Syracuse's best friends, Walt Kelly.

Kelly, in the comic strip "Pogo," offers us humans an amusing commentary on ourselves. Sometimes when we read the adventures of his lovable possum, we are apt to get somewhat pink, turn our heads and unwillingly admit to ourselves, "If I didn't know better I'd thing that critter was one of us."

His discussion tonight about free speech in America will leave the students with a lasting impression of this penetrating mind.

We are certain that the ESSPA delegation will be impressed with the customs and traditions of Syracuse university, with the men who make it what it is, and with the friendly smiles.

These may encourage them to try to return again sometime—to purchase their orange lids.

Room for the night?

A word to the wise:

Although Colgate weekend is still five weeks away, it's not too early to consider the situation that sometimes arises at that time.

Perhaps a boyfriend, or a mother, or just a friend is expecting to come up and enjoy the festivities. What happens?

Oft times the Syracusan forgets to place a reservation. The guests arrive, laden with luggage and fond hopes—only to have the latter dashed by the fact that there is no place to put the suitcases. Last minute confusion reigns.

Many of the downtown hotels are already filled to near capacity for this year's conflict but there are still some rooms available.

So if you have a guest coming, Nov. 14, why not go to the telephone now and place a reservation.

It's the early bird that catches the room.

Unfair to students

In answer to the first organized protests against the reserved seating plan, civil service commissioners have announced the first revision.

Fraternities and other groups can now obtain student reserve seats without being obliged to bring all the ID cards to the gym booth.

Although this will eliminate one confusion, IFC, the group bringing the first protests, will probably not be satisfied. Members have also asked for a study on the location of the block seating groups.

Perhaps IFC or even the student government assemblies will decide to further revise the structure for next year.

However, for tomorrow's game, the program as outlined today is the only one in effect.

Personal revisions by individuals are neither legitimate nor fair to fellow students.

MSG Innovation: An Observation

By ED HARDY

Men's student government assembly this year will be chosen by campus-wide election for the first time.

Formerly composed of representatives elected from each living center, fraternity and groups of city students, the legislature in the new form will get a chance to raise itself from the apathetic depths of recent years.

The old assembly had room for more than 80 students. It year, with almost that number. By the time spring arrived less than half the assemblymen were still on the roll and about one-third were regularly attending meetings. MSG has records of as few as 12 men showing up for a meeting.

Assembly revision was a major question last year. The legislature, although granted sweeping power, was not functional. Many were calling it a group that "impresses only itself." A few couldn't do the work planned for many.

Then the executive and civil service departments developed a plan where an equal number of delegates would be chosen from the four classes by the entire campus. It was felt that men elected in that way would have more interest in their position than house-named reps, who found MSG easy to get into but hard to find time to participate in.

A special committee headed by Alvin Applegate took up the question and submitted a plan to the assembly. After several revisions and heated controversy, the legislature finally gave its blessing to a revised 36-man organization, nine from each class. The Hill's male population approved the plan at a referendum during spring elections.

An elections act passed by MSG fixed the date of balloting for all class reps, for this fall only, at the same time as frosh elections. In future years upperclass assemblymen will be chosen in the spring elections.

Just how politics will work into the assembly election is the subject of debate. Although names on the ballot will not be identified with parties, it is likely that either or both of the parties on campus will endorse candidates.

Replacement of delegates will be done under a new plan, according to the act. The legislative body of the class the man represents will choose his replacement. Under the old system a substitute was obtained from his house.

The nine delegates will include a minimum of three Greeks, three independents and one city student. The remaining two could come from any of the classifications, depending on vote for runners-up.

With men in the assembly who are really interested in student government and what it means, MSG will be able to look for bigger and better things ahead.

We're never sure anyone is interested in "missing links," but for the record the following is the complete caption for the "Deuce" cartoon that ran yesterday:

AWOL Coed on Furlough

By PEARL BERNSTEIN

M. Sgt. Gordon L. Perlo . . . the gentleman from Corinth, N. Y., who spent two years and a day in a POW camp in Korea. When his ship came in, the young lady in the opposite column was on the pier.

A returning POW's dream came true last month when his fiance, a Hill senior, met him as he got off the boat.

Vera White, an education major from Corinth, has been engaged to M. Sgt. Gordon L. Petro, also from Corinth, for three years. He was taken prisoner in Sept. 1951, and gained his freedom the day before the exchange ended.

When the transport Gen. R. L. Howze docked in San Francisco on Sept. 23, Vera was there to welcome her fellow home. They flew back to New York the following day and Vera came to Syracuse to register for her classes.

She then went back to Corinth to accompany the sergeant on his rounds of Welcome Back dinners, testimonials and bits of home life again. This involved cutting classes for a week, a week Vera feels was well spent.

When interviewed at her sorority house, Vera said she and Gordon planned on being married "in about three months." Their plans, other than this, are uncertain. Gordon may reenlist, with hopes of getting stationed around Syracuse, and Vera still has that year of studying to go. Of this she says, "I guess I'll have to get down to work now. I must be in bad enough with my professors."

A radiant bride-to-be, Vera said she met her fiance six years ago, when she was cheerleading in high school and he was on the basketball team.

With a characteristic glow Vera told how she expects to go home to see Gordon every weekend "until we're married." Gordon spent the past week in Syracuse, and he and Vera went to Corinth yesterday afternoon after her last class of the week was over.

The sergeant, a veteran of the famous U. S. 3rd Division, had been a prisoner two years and one day when he crossed the line at Panmunjon. He is naturally reluctant to speak about his experiences, except to say "it was really nasty at the start but the Chinese treated us better later on."

Vera blushed when it was mentioned that she is something of a celebrity on campus, but the facts seem to speak for themselves. How many girls get a chance to make a dream come true?

Vera White, who is usually a Syracusan during the academic months, but who took a "furlough" to be on the dock at San Francisco when the sergeant came home. The relationship . . . fiance.

Sports on the House?

English male collegians have adopted "stegophilism" as their favorite pastime in preference to American interest in swallowing live goldfish and panty raids.

From Greek roots "stege", meaning "roof," and "philes", or "crazy about," stegophilism is "the state of being crazy about roofs."

ON K-VETS: STORIES TO COME

Housed at Collendale are the 97 Korean Veterans of the freshman class of Syracuse University. They are living in prefabricated type structures, use regulation US army blankets, sleep in government surplus bunks. At the dining hall is their only reasurance that they are not back in Uncle Sam's clutches—girls in the chow line.

The veterans are back in school for a variety of reasons. Some are determined not to go through another war as enlisted men, others have their eyes on good paying civilian jobs, and still more are only picking up where they left off when they were called at the outbreak of the Korean war.

These men are not planning to take the campus by storm as might be expected. They have no intentions of making a splash on the football field, the dance floor, or the academic standards of this university. Most are no different than many freshmen, they have troubles with math, go to an 8 o'clock class and are just trying to get through. The only difference seems to be in age and experience.

There are undoubtedly some very interesting histories behind these men, and if possible, this paper will get some of these stories and write them up for publication. Last Tuesday's article on Jim Packer was the first of this weekly series.

Most have their own automobiles with the permission of the Dean of Men. Having an automobile on the campus is almost a necessity and through the proven dependability of their records, they have earned the right to use them.

COED BIBLIOTHEQUE

There is a library in Paris, France, which contains only books written by women.

A Word on Pants in Short

"If I didn't know, I'd assume the manufacturers of pants were short of material," exclaimed one bewildered guest.

Never did the campus coeds think their Bermuda shorts would serve as topic for discussion. Bermuda shorts, to give a definition, are "knee length pants for people who are proud of what they call their "dimpled knees."

In the days when Mother was a campus cutie, she wore stockings, pixie hat, knee length skirt, in accordance with her beau's corduroy knickers, high socks and raccoon coat.

Yes, time changes, and custom seems to stride in accordingly. So far style has been altered from the ankle for skirts and trousers, to the knee itself. If this continues, who knows what to expect next ?????

It took a lot of engineering to make a better "grasshopper"

Engineers at Western Electric's St. Paul Shops are well pleased with their new-style "grasshopper" fuse—a small fuse used in Bell telephone central office equipment. The former model—in production for years—had been gradually refined 'til it seemed almost beyond further improvement. It was simple, inexpensive, efficient, came off the line fast. But . . .

It's an old Western Electric engineering custom to keep trying to make Bell telephone equipment still better, at still lower cost. The "grasshopper" was studied by a young engineer out of the University of Minnesota, Class of '40, who joined the Company in 1946. His studies indicated the most effective way to improve efficiency and cut costs further was to change the design.

Pursuing this lead the engineer and his group saw their opportunity to make an important contribution. They investigated the latest tooling techniques, new metals, finishing materials and methods, all of which are constantly under study by engineers at Western Electric plants. A simplified design, which permitted the use of the most modern tooling methods, resulted in a better fuse at lower cost that is saving thousands of dollars a year for Bell telephone companies.

There's an endless stream of such challenging assignments at Western Electric. Engineers of varied skills—mechanical, electrical, civil, chemical, metallurgical—find real satisfaction in working together on the important job of providing equipment for the best telephone service on earth.

How the grasshopper fuse works

Small fuses like this are used by the millions to protect certain telephone central office circuits against current overloads. Odd-in appearance, the fuse is called the "grasshopper" because of its spring which is released when the fuse blows, displaying an indicator "flag" in open view and tripping an alarm so the trouble can be spotted and corrected at once.

Fordham Arrives Today for Battle With Orange

Piety Gridmen Drill On Offensive Tactics

Ben Schwartzwalder has started tapering off in his drills. Yesterday he took his boys into Archbold stadium for a light practice as far as contact goes. Since they didn't bump Schwartzwalder took up the slack by having extensive offensive practices.

Because of the early darkness, Ben asked for the lights. Under the lights the Orange ran through some defensive kick-off patterns. Ben then called practice off, and the probability is that there will be a dress rehearsal today.

AFTER A week of bouncing around, the line-up seems to have settled in Ben's mind. Sophomores have cracked the predominately senior lineup. Pete Schwert, Cal Smith have come into the line while Lyle Carlson and Ed Albright are new to the starting backfield.

The game against Fordham should be a long affair. Not only does Fordham throw many passes—incompleted passes stop the clock, but they substitute by groups. Indications are that, as in past years, Syracuse will take to the air ways.

On the basis of past performance, the Orange have the better of the running backs. Fordham, although possessing good backs uses them mainly to keep the defense "honest."

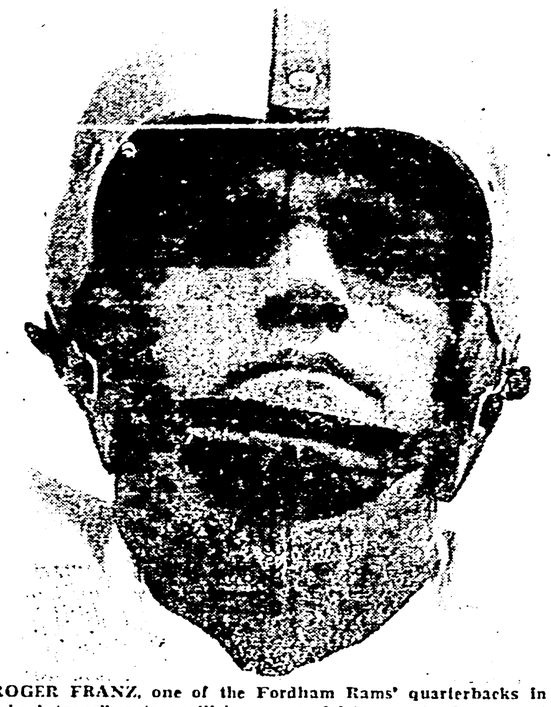
Since the long pass is the easiest way to score, an exciting duel of long passes is in the making.

SYRACUSE'S PASS defense is in the East ranks second only to Rutgers. Syracuse's opponents however, carried their passing feebleness to extremes when they played the Orange. Fordham has played only one game, against Detroit and passed a good three out of four times.

Like most avid passing teams Fordham has a backlog of surprise quarterbacking. They pull quick-kicks and pass from punt formation from their own goal line. An alert and agressive secondary is the only thing that can cope with the Rams' ideas.

A skull practice was held last night and Simmons went over the little indicators that might tip off a Fordham play.

Another light practice is scheduled for today behind the closed doors of Archbold stadium.



ROGER FRANZ, one of the Fordham Rams' quarterbacks in their "shock troop" system will be a powerful test to the Orange defensive backfield tomorrow with his expert passes. A senior from Norwood, Ohio, Franz will be opposing the Saltines for the third year.

Air-Minded Rams Practice in Stadium

Fordham's air-minded Rams come upstate today raring for their weekend shot at the Orange of Ben Schwartzwalder. The Maroon from New York, third among the nation's major colleges in passing, will probably work out on the Archbold turf this afternoon.

Ram Coach Ed Danowski, former Fordham and New York Giants' star back, openly acknowledged that the '53 Maroon team is the best in his eight years on Rose Hill. So deep is Danowski's squad that he employed the old "shock troop" system in last week's 21-7 win over Detroit.

ROGER FRANZ and Vinnie Drake, probably the East's best double air-arm, quarterback the Ram's alternating elevens.

Drake, 6 ft. 2 in., 205 pound senior, tossed two touchdown passes against Detroit and will run the starting Fordham team. Big Vinnie completed 29 of 55 aerials last year including seven scoring heaves.

The East's top punter in 1952, Franz will quarterback the "shock" eleven which usually plays the second and fourth quarters. Rog passed for nearly 1,400 yards and punted for an average 40.8 last season.

Although Ed Brown, the nation's leading pass receiver a year ago, has graduated, Danowski has a host of fine ends to keep the pressure on the Orange secondary.

TOPS AMONG the wingmen is Joe Kaluzynski, a converted tackle. Shifted to the flank position last season, Joe became an outstanding offensive end and blocker and the Fordham coaching staff thinks he could make a serious bid for all-American honors in 1953.

Other wings likely to see action tomorrow are lettermen George Murphy, Larry Pierce and Andy Nacrelli and soph McDevitt. Nacrelli and Kaluzynski start on Drake's eleven with the others alternating on Franz's outfit.

Co-Captain Chuck Danielczyk centers the Rams' starting line, which averages about 209 pounds. Big men on the forward wall are tackles Carmen Campisi and Phil Vincenzes, 240 and 235 respectively.

Even though the Fordhams rely primarily on their terrific aerial attack, Danowski has several fine running backs to keep the Piety defense honest.

Jack Hyatt, co-captain who missed the 1952 season due to an attack of polio, Joe Palmieri, Andy Romeo and Joe Yalch supply the outside speed while John Griffin and Chuck Dietlin divide the bucking duties.

Hill Seamen Vie For Tri-ad Honors On Lake Cayuga

The frost biting season goes into full swing tomorrow when the Orange sailors engage Conell and Colgate on Lake Cayuga in the Annual Tri-ad trophy regatta. The Ithacans Baby Narrasketuck fleet is scheduled to be launched at 12 noon with six races on the program.

Probable starting skippers for the Hill seamen are team captain Jack Dickerson and Jack Cummings. Cummings is theoretically the New York State Snipe champion while the latter has taken local lightning honors in the eastern Long Island area. They have two years of intercollegiate competition behind them.

PROVIDED A good breeze turns up on the usually choppy lake, Paul Frahm and Ken Resen, both over 150 lbs., will serve as crews. In case of light weather, Mary Lyn Miller and Anne McKenzie will handle the crewing chores. Resen and Frahm, both experienced racing skippers, may also alternate at the helm.

The Cornell sailors, last year's Tri-ad winners, lost three of their topflight skippers, through the graduation of Norm Freeman, Pete Hallock and George Lewis. However, they still have three pretty fair tiller men in Pete Eising, Gordon Morrison and Bob Downing. Eising was the big gun in Cornell's romp of the 20-race MAISA eliminations at Kings Point last spring.

Underdog Colgate will probably have veteran lightning skipper Joe Carpenter racing in the A division. The team captain is supported by two members of last year's squad, Dick Taylor and Paul Alexander. Only last year's captain, Charley Hayward, will be missing from the Red Raider team.

Saltine Thinclads Favored To Defeat Colgate Raiders

Yesterday's sunshine and warmer weather finally enabled the Piety harriers to practice in something resembling good running conditions for their Saturday opening meet with Colgate at the Drumlins.

Today, the boys will taper off a little and just hope they are in good enough shape to beat the under-manned Red Raiders. Colgate should field a well-conditioned team since they opened the '53 campaign a week ago against Cornell.

THE ORANGE harriers are at full strength and will enter the race as favorites because of past performances. However, two Colgate runners—Art Wallack and Russ Bradshaw—have improved since last season and might make a battle for first place interesting.

The 12-man team which Coach Bob Grieve plans to run against the Red Raiders, will be led by Capt. Ray Osterhout, a senior who also led the Orange runners last season.

Three Piety runners will be given their first test in varsity competition. Jim George, Les Viel-Marshall st. He claims backing of big and Ed Alger are up from last year's frosh squad and should prove a help to the Orange team, which is over-loaded with seniors.

JIM GEORGE is one of three sophomores whom Coach Bob Grieve plans to run against Colgate this Saturday at the Drumlins course.

X-COUNTRY BRIEFS: Tom Coulter has thrown his hat into the political race for mayor of the whole football team . . . Bob Grieve is a little worried over the shape of senior Frank Calzi. It seems Frank has put on a little weight around the middle . . . Chuck McGlynn probably won't run Saturday. The dashman on last year's Piety track team figures the five-mile distance might be too much for him so early in the season.

Sigma Chi Scores In Intra Swimming

M-14 Also Wins By Decisive Count

By ART STERNBERG

Sigma Chi and Skytop M-14 scored smashing victories in intramural swimming competition last night in the Archbold gymnasium pool. Two other scheduled meets were not held because of forfeits.

The well-rounded Sigma Chi squad spotted their Tau Delta Phi opponents an early lead but rallied to win easily, 23-9. Don Ingerman of Tau Delt won the freestyle event to give his team a temporary advantage but Sigma Chi's Ernie Schwab quickly evened matters with a breaststroke victory.

ORVIE WAMBOLD'S backstroke win and a victory in the relay race clinched the decision for the Sigma Chis. Members of the winning relay team were Joe Brooks, Ken Sparks, Schwab and Wambold.

Skytop M-14 beat their neighboring dorm M-1 in a nip-and-tuck contest. The losers took an early lead when Chuck Gallagher won the freestyle race by a comfortable margin. Don Checko of M-14 stroked to victory in the backstroke but Whitey Mueffelmann scored in the breaststroke race to give the M-1 mermen the advantage once more.

The meet was decided in the relay race when the M-14 squad splashed to a decisive victory. The victorious relay team was made up of Jack Brewster, Walt Hoover, Joe Zizzi and Checko.

Two scheduled races did not materialize when forfeits occurred. Alpha Epsilon Pi scored a win when the Phi Kappa Tau team forfeited, and the slated Pi Lambda Phi-Psi Upsilon match resulted in a double forfeit.

Yearling Booters Inaugurate Season

Maroon Freshmen Opponent in Opener

By STAN ROSENFELD

Daily Orange Junior Editor

Syracuse's frosh booters get their first taste of intercollegiate competition this afternoon as they tangle with a strong Colgate freshman team at Hamilton. Game time will be 3:30 p.m.

Coach Andy Coccari will field a good team that should give the Raiders a tough contest. In practice to date, many of the frosh have shown great promise. Coccari intends to get a good look at all of them.

MARSHALL LEWIS, Don Prebstein, Don Wall and Hal Lund should carry most of the offense for the Tangerine booters. Lewis is a graduate of Woolsten Academy, East Hampton, Mass., where he was an all around athlete.

Andy Ziroks, a Rochesterian and Ken Fulton will probably be at the wings. Hall Russell, Leon Suissi and Chuck Weingerter will fill the inside right, center forward and center half positions respectively.

Hill netminder will be Gary Clark. Clark, an aggressive youngster, has looked very good in scrimmage play. Goal figures to be one of the strongest positions for the range.

Cornell will be the next opponent of the frosh booters. The game which will be played the first week of November is scheduled at Itahaca. The final game is tentatively scheduled with Hobart on a date not yet chosen.

COCCARI'S VARSITY soccermen will not see further action until a week from tomorrow when they tangle with Cortland State Teachers. Cortland has spilt a pair of games so far this season. They beat Springfield in overtime 1-0, and lost by an identical score to Cornell.

The Hill mentor received a severe jolt when Gus Delfino, George Wolf and Orv Wombold were declared ineligible. These loss is somewhat compensated by the return of Steve Godayl. Godayl missed the Cornell game due to the illness of his father.

Delfino was a regular last year and Coccari was counting on him for at least spot play. Wambold was the regular goalie during the main part of last season and was counted upon to spell Wirth in the goal.

The return of Godayol, who gained honorable mention all-American honors, figures to strengthen the Orange tremendously. Godayol was given credit with the Wirth brothers, and Bill Nelson, for the Orange's fine 5-1 record last season. His fine footwork makes him one of the stylists of college soccer.

Al Smith, Steelers, M-4 Victorious at Hendricks

By BOB NEWMARK

On field No. 1 last night in their initial games, victories were scored by Phi Gamma Delta, Alfred Smith and the G. D. I.'s while Skytop M-2 played to a scoreless tie with Grover Cleveland "B" and the Whitman vs. Skytop M-10 game ended in a 6-6 deadlock.

A two point safety and two long runs by Stu Parker gave the Phi Gams a comfortable win over Kappa Phi Delta. Burt Rich's touchdown run ended the game making the final score 22-0.

Skytop M-7 found the well trained outfit from Alfred Smith a little too much as they went on to victory by the tune of 26-6. Gene Demarko and Bob Conlin with two touchdowns apiece clinched the victory. A close game was viewed as Jack Jacobs scored all G.D.I.'s points in a 13-7 win over Plant Sciences.

The highlight of last night's activities came when Whitman took the field against Skytop M-10 with only two men. Dean Comeau and Alden Fletcher were the brave souls who held the Frosh for ten minutes to a scoreless deadlock before reinforcements came. The final score was 6-6.

By HANK GREENWALD

Skytop grid squads dominated three of last night's battles at Hendricks field No. 2.

After a hard fought, fruitless first half, Skytop M-6 exploded for three quick scores to subdue Seward House, 13-6. Jim Cromwell tallied twice for the winners and was backed up by another score by Tony Cypriano.

IN THE evening's most interesting contest, Syracuse Men's Co-op and the 'Toppers of M-3 fought to an 18-18 standoff. Trailing 12-0 at the half, the Co-op boys rallied strongly in the final chapter.

In the defensive struggle of the evening, the Hill climbers from M-4 blanked Thomas Dewey, 6-0. Jensen Finn registered the lone marker late in the second half.

Another shutout was chalked up in the 18-0 defeat of City Men by the Steelers. Tom Hinchey, Dick Harvey and Dick Neufang each scored once for the winners.

One outstanding feature of the night's activities on field No. 2 was the absence of an extra point in each contest.

'The Robe' Opens On CinemaScope

A PANORAMIC motion picture that many have hailed as the greatest cinema innovation since sound-on-films opens Tuesday evening at Schine's Paramount. First production in CinemaScope, "The Robe" is an adaptation of the novel by Lloyd C. Douglas. Victor Mature stars in the role of Demetrius, bonded slave.

The best-selling novel of all time, "The Robe," will be seen on a Syracuse screen Tuesday in a new medium that is claimed to be the greatest innovation in the cinema since sound-on-film motion pictures—CinemaScope. The third New York state engagement of the film opens Tuesday night at Schine's Paramount.

The effect of the new medium is said to give the viewer the illusion of three dimensions—depth—without the use of special glasses.

THE FILM, adapted from the book by Lloyd C. Douglas, stars Victor Mature as Demetrius, the slave who is bonded to Marcellus, played by Richard Burton. Michael Rennie portrays the role of the man Christ called Peter. Jean Simmons is also starred.

A year and a half in production, "The Robe" is filmed in technicolor, according to Harry Unterfort, regional director of Schine's theaters. Unterfort said the film cost more than $5 million to produce. There are 105 speaking roles.

The screen is a curved surface with a horizontal aspect ratio of 2.55-1. Thus, the screen is approximately two and a half times wider than the ordinary screen. Unterfort said that extensive alterations must be done on every theater that shows a film in the new process.

The film is photographed through an "anamorphic" lens which compresses the scene on ordinary 35 mm film. The film is then projected through a compensating lens that restores the true scene upon the wide curved screen.

FOUR SOUND tracks, in contrast with the usual single sound track, are contained on the same film. Each sound track corresponds to a different portion of the screen. By placing loudspeakers strategically throughout the theater, the effect of hearing each sound from the corresponding part of the screen is obtained. The term given to this sound system is "stereophonic," Unterfort continued.

The process was invented by a French optician, Prof. Henri Chretien. Many who have seen the preview scenes of CinemaScope claim that the scene "engulfs" them. Before the first film was put into actual production, test scenes of everything from midget auto races to panoramic shots of New York city were taken.

The novel "The Robe" although a fictional work, was known to give many readers the impression that the story was not fiction at all, according to Unterfort.

Lost ID Cards Replaced Today

Students who have lost ID cards or football tickets may replace them by calling Mary E. (Liz) Brydon, 75-4191 or 76-5571, ext. 264 or Steve Reiss, 75-0037.

Cards and tickets will be replaced from 1 to 5 p.m. today in Archbold gym. Written permission must be obtained from Miss Brydon or Reiss before that time.

last spring, O'Sullivan explained. The 12 houses involved were dissatisfied with the administration in the two parties and planned the break this fall.

"We feel we can win the frosh elections," the chairman confidently asserted. "We have the biggest political houses on campus."

Temporary officers of PHA are Anita Chappa, KKG, vice-president; Miss Claridge, secretary; and Clyde Owens, Psi U, treasurer.

The split was the first in campus politics since the Stern faction of United Students party divorced itself in March, 1952 and formed the FITE party.

Mrs. Shohat came to the United States from Haifa Israel and is studying rehabilitation of mentally retarded children, in the special education department.

She arrived in Syracuse two weeks ago and will be a supervisor in schools for handicapped children when she returns to Israel in a year. She formerly was petogogical director in an institution for the handicapped children in Israel.

Coulter Joins Race For 'Mayor' Title Of Marshall St.

Orange Football Team Backs 125 Lb. Boxer As 1st Political Effort

Another campus political hopeful has tossed his skimmer into the local mayoralty race.

Thomas Coulter, senior boxing star, has declared himself available for the position of mayor of Marshall st. It has been confirmed that his candidacy is backed by the Orange football team. This marks the first official entrance of the grid squad into the arena of campus politics.

COULTER IS a boxer in the 125-pound division, a fact which has led political speculators to predict that he will lose to the original candidate in the race, Vincent Rigolosi, who boxes for the Orange in the 165-pound class.

Also in the race is Corrine Beecher, nominated by a classful of women to oppose Rigolosi. The class, "Status and Responsibility of Women in the Modern Society," is taught by Dr. Marguerite Fisher and Dean M. Eunice Hilton.

Campaigning will continue throughout the week, with voting slated to open at 9 a.m. Monday in the front hall of Maxwell. Each candidate will have his own petitionn, which must be signed by voters. Balloting ends at 5 p.m. Tuesday.

Voters must be regularly enrolled studennts and must be considered Marshall st. inhabitants—that is, they must be seen having coffee on Marshall st. at least four out of every six days.

The official definition of Marshall st. is the area between the Varsity restaurant and the Post office.

ROC Coeds Train At Summer Camp

Eighty coeds returned to their campuses after six weeks of military training at the Navy's summer school for Women Reserve Officer Candidates at USNTC, Bainbridge, Maryland.

These coeds were transformed from casual collegiates into able and efficient military women. The ROCs' reveille blew at 5:45 a.m. and taps sounded at 9:30 p.m. except on weekends. The hours in between were tightly scheduled.

THE GIRLS MARCHED to classes and to mess in platoon formation. They attended four classes daily, taking such subjects as naval orientation and administration, communications, naval weapons and navigations. Periods of softball and swimming instruction were also scheduled.

An ROC could meet members of other platoons and companies by working on the exchange dance committees, the water show and the yearbook. There were station reviews and traditional ROC ceremonies in which the embryo officers learned what it mean to be an active working member of a battalion.

The ROC's toured nearby military installations, watched rockets launched at army proving grounds, visited a submarine based in Baltimore and saw jet bombers take off at an air base.

After two summer sessions at the Navy training school, a coed is qualified for a commission in the Naval Reserve, if she is over 21 and has a college degree.

IF ANY SOPHOMORE or junior between 18 and 21 wants more information about the ROCs, she may write to the Bureau of Naval Personnel, Navy Department, Washington 25, D. C.

THE FIRST person who identifies the persons pictured on the left and in the center of this photo will receive two theater tickets. Both persons must be identified correctly to one of the senior editors by 5 p.m. today. Yesterday's awards were given to INEZ and CHARLES McMILLAN because both called the DO on different phone numbers at approximately the same time. It was the Colgate chapel.

Outing club—IOCA canoe trip to Lake George leaving by bus and cars, 6 p.m. from the Men's gym.

All applications for Goon Squad sweetheart must be turned in to dorm reps by Monday. Any person or organization may sponsor a freshman for Goon Squad sweetheart.

Young Republicans club—Exec committee meeting, 4 p.m., Delta Gamma house. All members must attend.

Outing Club—horseback riding for all interested persons. Meet at 1 p.m. tomorrow in front of library. Instructions included in special price for Club members.

Lutheran communion service, 8 a.m. in Hendricks Chapel.

LSA—meeting, 5:30 p.m., in Chapel lounge.

Two More Houses Join New Party; Third Expected

By ED HARDY
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Two more houses joined the new Piety Hill Alliance party last night and another is expected to join, bringing its enrollment to 15, Larry O'Sullivan, chairman said.

At the same time rumors were flying that a fourth political party would make an appearance on the campus soon.

PI ALPHA CHI from United Students party and Tau Delta Phi from Tri-Orange switched to the infant organization, leaving both Tri-O and USP with 19 houses apiece. Alpha Epsilon Phi, Tri-O member, is expected to switch. Seven Tri-O members and four USP houses jumped Thursday night.

O'Sullivan said that PHA is still open for membership, but will probably stay at 15 until after freshman elections on Oct. 28.

Tau Delta Phi brought men's student government president Stanley Leff with them in the switch.

All of the senior class officers are now members of PHA. John Beach of Phi Gamma Delta, Barbara Suchy of Delta Gamma, and Emily McPartland of Kappa Kappa Gamma had belonged to Tri-O. Independent Thomas Hali had been with USP, but moved over to Piety Hill.

ONLY LOWERCLASS changes were in the sophomore class, where AEPhi Harriet Erlich changes from USP to PHA.

Chief of Civil Service Stephen Reiss stated yesterday that the third party has not been approved by student government yet. PHA is drawing up a constitution, which is expected to get temporary executive approval until government legislatures meet.

Piety Hill forces will meet at 6 p.m. Sunday at Phi Delta Theta to nominate frosh candidates. Tri-O has scheduled its nominations at 7 p.m. Sunday at Alpha Omicron Pi. Its merit board will meet an hour earlier.

Both groups will take applications until their meetings. Freshmen wanting backing should submit qualifications for Tri-O to Arthur Koeppel, Tau Epsilon Phi or for PHA to O'Sullivan at Phi Kappa Psi.

Foreign Students Invited to Party

All foreign students on Syracuse university campus are invited to attend a party as guests of foreign student guides from 2:30 to 5 p.m. tomorrow at the Ski lodge.

Skytop buses leaving from Sims will take attendants to the lodge where refreshments and entertainment will be provided.

Although the foreign student guides are assigned to only foreign women in their first year here, all students from other nations are urged to attend tomorrow's affair.

KEY BANQUET

University Vice-president Frank Piskor and Dean of the College of Liberal Arts Eric H. Faigle will be special guests at the annual Orange Key banquet at 6:30 p.m. Sunday at Tubbert's.

Darwin Bolden, president of the junior men's honorary, will welcome present members and those from last year.

ESSPA Convention Ends With Game

Approximately 1,000 high school students are on campus for the 16th annual convention of the Empire State Scholastic Press association. The convention ends today with the Syracuse-Fordham clash. The students will be guests of the University for the game.

Yesterday the students were welcomed by Dean of the School of Journalism, Wesley C. Clark and Dean of Hendricks Chapel Charles C. Noble.

They participated in newswriting and current events contests for two Syracuse university full-tuition scholarships.

Last night the students heard Walt Kelly, creator and artist of "Pogo" discuss free speech in America, at a banquet in Hotel Onondaga. Kelly also discussed the comic strip which has brought him world-wide fame.

University departments, local newspapers and ESSPA awarded superior students and papers trophies and other prizes.

Yancey, Leberman Captain Orange In Fordham Fray

By LEE KIKLIER
Daily Orange Managing Editor

Syracuse university closes out its current home stand with a game against Fordham at 2 p.m. in Archbold stadium. After the game, the Orange play four successive weeks of away games.

Two backfield men for this, the fifth game in the Fordham series. Yancey is one of Ben Schwartzwalder's "new look" boys as the quarterback starts his first game of this season. Leberman was the halfback who did such a reliable job in the Boston game.

IT WILL BE a rehashed lineup that Ben sicks against the Ram. After the 14-14 tie with Boston, Coach Ben has decided to start several sophomores thus initiating his "new faces of 1953." Syracuse has been established a six point favorite.

Blond, 5 ft. 10, 150 lbs., Lyle Carlson from Bedford, Mass., will be a new face at wingback. Carlson, very fast, scored twice against Temple in the opener.

Cal Smith is a 6 ft. 190 pound guard from Torrington, Conn., who will start instead of Sam Johnson. Johnson, although injured in the last game, appears to be in good enough shape to see some action against the Ram.

Pete Schwert, 6 ft. 4, 210 lbs., from Dunkirk, N. Y., is another one of the sophs who will be starting. Schwert will see action on the weak-side-end of Ben's unbalanced line.

A STARTLING starter at full is Eddie Albright. He's 5 ft. 11, 175 lbs., from Reading, Penna. Albright switched from quarterback two weeks ago. He has looked good and only the problem of learning the plays kept him from the starting eleven.

From the bench to the field is not a new maneuver for ambitious Ed. On last year's frosh team he was second string quarterback for the first game. Eddie will call on his punting ability, which he used on the frosh team.

The fifth and last new starter: Bruce Yancey. A senior, he is the comparative old man of the newcomers. Yancey, 5 ft. 10, 170 lbs., from Bellerose, L. I., will start his first game at offensive quarterback for the first time in two years.

Remaining: six players who started against Boston. Ray Perkins at right end, Les McClelland

Miss Bank, Le Doux Picked As Soph Hop Managers

Joseph LeDouk

Merle Sue Bank and Joe LeDoux have been selected by the executive council of the sophomore class to head this year's Soph hop, scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 14.

Miss Bank and LeDoux have already planned meetings for Monday and Tuesday nights at 8:30 in 204 HL.

A MEMBER of Alpha Epsilon Phi sorority, Miss Bank is president of her section in Shaw and is in women's student government assembly. She works on the Goon Squad and is political representative from AEPhi.

LeDoux, a member of Zeta Psi fraternity, is also a sophomore senate representative. He was selected for Goon Squad and he worked last year on Frosh weekend.

Fraternities Hold Rushing Tomorrow

Informal fraternity rushing continues tomorrow with an open house at all fraternity houses at 2-5 p.m.

An addition to this year's rushing schedule is a convocation scheduled for 7:30 p.m., Monday, at Hendricks chapel. This convo is for freshmen and transfer students who are interested in going through formal rushing.

THE RULES and processes of formal rushing will be explained and the convo will be thrown open to questions on any vague or misunderstood points.

Informal rushing ends Tuesday Oct. 13 with a final open house at 7:30-9:30 p.m. The formal rushing procedure will begin Wednesday, Oct. 14, when students should file bids and pay the rushing fee from 1-6 p.m. in the Trophy room of Archbold gymnasium.

Pages four and five of today's Daily Orange are designed to shock you.

Have you ever asked yourself what would happen to the Daily Orange if a dictator should take over the country and the University? What would your newspaper be like printed by a board of state-approved editors who adhere to a party line?

This special feature—prepared in observance of National Newspaper Week—attempts to answer these questions.

The right of the people to know the truth is one of the many freedoms enjoyed by Americans and usually taken for granted. Newspapers, without government control and censorship are thought of as a natural part of the American scene—to be accepted as a matter of course.

But other publishers in other lands are not as fortunate. Freedom of the press has no meaning where a dictator governs. The newspaper is not an organ that prints objective news. No longer can it advocate policies that do not directly parallel those of the government. Lies become truth and must be published as such.

In free countries, the press has always played a historic role in the fight for democracy. In recognition of this fact, the slogan of this year's National Newspaper Week is "An informed press means an informed people." The theme of the year's observance is freedom of information.

Without a free press, and free access to the news, democratic institutions could not exist. Only when the people konw the facts, and understand their meaning can they act intelligently in a democratic system.

Although the fourth estate keeps the importance of the issue of freedom of the press before the public, it is not blind to its corresponding responsibility. The newspaper presents the news fully and fairly and as objectively as possible. It refrains from spreading lies and hatred, the exact opposite of its counterpart in dictator-controlled countries.

It can't happen here, you say—this counterpart will never be moved into the American scene—the type of story that is featured on page five is an impossibility.

Yet in recent years the cries against freedom of the press have not decreased. There are still some who would not grant free access to the news or who would seek to censor some of the information to all papers. This is the type of thing that the papers are ever fighting and which every citizen must also be ready to combat.

Otherwise, the stories on page five may not be so impossible. Should the press be stifled, the cause of democracy may also suffer.

It was in 1735 that an obscure printer and pamphleteer held his ground against the attempts of the British to suppress the rights of the colonists. Tried for seditious libel and acquitted, John Peter Zenger has become a symbol of the struggle for a free press.

Speaking at the dedication ceremonies of the John Peter Zenger Memorial, the president of the New York Times summarized the current problem of freedom of the press by warning the citizens to be vigilant against any encroachment of that freedom, since democracy itself might be threatened.

"Eternal vigilance, steadfast courage and full recognition of the responsibility of freedom are the price we must pay for our liberties. John Peter Zenger's example should inspire us to that end."

If these words be heeded, page five will become what it is meant to be—a reminder of what could happen if all are not watchful—not a prediction of the future.

CREATING A SKETCH? USE A BAND

By POLLY REED

When "100 men and girl" sparkle during half time on the Archbold field every football game, hundreds of man-hours have gone into the conception and perfection of the routine and formations.

Anyone connected with the band may get a bright idea, pass it along to the band staff, and they in turn pick it apart, work on music and formations, and perfect it. Two nights a week the entire band assembles to perform the intricate patterns which are worked out on a scale model of the football field.

Sounds simple, doesn't it? But just try to think of something sparkling and original every week for four, five, or six weeks. Then try to figure out music that would fit the theme, and then where 100 men and two baton twirlers would fit into it, always remembering that you have a field 100 yards yards long to work in. It's got to be complicated enough to be interesting to the fans, yet simple enough so that the band can learn it in only two practice periods.

Formations are worked out so that the band moves as little as possible. Unforunately, at the Fordham game in New York City last year, the mud in the field was ankle deep. When the band attempted to do its famous "to the winds" drill, it looked more like a dead calf. "We tried to step crisply, but it looked more like a funeral march," said Ken Fredericks, now in his second year directing the marching band.

The band has had some bad moments, like when the Sampson aggregation took all 15 minutes of half time last year, leaving the Orangemen lined up behind the goalposts with no time to sound off.

There was also the freshman clarinet player who, at the first band rehearsal, played along just fine the first time. "Now," said Fredericks, "let's take it up to tempo," and the band swung into its familiar quick step style. Whereupon, the freshman picked up his clarinet and case, and walked out. "Just can't play that fast," he said.

In two weeks, two entirely different shows have been dreamed up, worked out and performed, and the band has a third show all ready for today's fans. The collegiate dark blue jackets, gray flannel trousers and white bucks and straw hats will be in evidence for quite a while, as the familiar ski suits have been stored away—many fans hope permanently. Our band may be one of the best equipped, for in case of rain, the bandsmen will be issued plastic rain coats and plastic boots. "The show must go on."

'Frantic' Notes On A 'Crazy' Game

By BOP

The other night I fell asleep listening to a Jazzbo Collins side and as the veil of serenity passed slowly over the world about, I dreamed a dream.

It was a real nervous dream, to say the most. I found myself standing just to the left of the end zone popcorn stand in Archbold and it appeared to be Saturday afternoon. In fact, a football session of some sort was in progress out on the field.

Scampering thru the muck along the sidelines, I came upon the Daily Orange sporting staff. When I questioned them as to the nature of the athletic event, the lads bleached very pale and cried, "Man, you're out of it . . . this is the Fordham game!"

"Crazy," I replied.

Just then, the Syracuse cheerleaders hopped to it and in a bit of frantic choreography, convinced the local partisans of Su in the stands to rise and give praise to the Saltine Warriors.

About that time, the referee tooted three progressive chords on his Selmer whistle and the laddies on the field cut out for the locker rooms. I surmised that the first half was gone.

Out of an Orange Colored Sky dropped the Syracuse Marching Band onto the gridiron, diminished now to 80 men and a chick because a few of the boys had forgotten their tickets and weren't allowed into the stadium.

Suddenly things began to pop faster than a 33 1-3 running on 78. The men of Syracuse skipped back onto the field and acted like a team that had never heard of "Moon Over Miami." They got the old Fordham goat by the horns and proceeded to drag the stunned New Yorkers from goal line to goal line until the visitors looked somewhat like Peggy Lee when she finished recording "Lover."

It was the wildest.

Eventually the set came to an end and I decided that this was the most frantic dream I had been accorded in some time.

Just then, the Chancellor made it to a PA mike and invited all the cats assembled to a victory session at his place.

And as suddenly as it had begun, it was done. I woke to find the moon just making it over the mountain in the room where people come and go, talking of Michelangelo.

It was the end.

Matching Ideas On the Film, 'The Juggler'

Kirk Douglas shares one of the few happy moments in the juggler's life with Joey Walsh. The film was taken in Israel.

When versatility is mentioned in connection with the movies, the tendency to think of Stanley Kramer is not surprising.

"The Juggler" is a psychological drama dealing with the tremendous effect that war, concentration camps and all of devastation's consequences may have on a human being. The juggler, a celebrated European entertainer before the second World War, becomes another number in a concentration camp in Germany. His wife and children are among the many murdered in the oven atrocities.

The factor of living in a small cubicle with ten other men soon overcomes him with a terrible fear and hatred of authority.

Fear motivates this man to flee to the promised land of his ancestors, the new-born Israel; to exist in past glories rather than cope with present conditions, and to shun psychiatric aid.

Escaping from an immigration camp without papers, the juggler nearly slays a passport officer in a frantic attempt to escape any kind of imprisonment. A long flight follows during which he meets the people who save him from insanity. The first is a boy who helps restore the juggler's confidence in his artistic abilities, and the second is a woman who by her love and understanding helps him regain his will to live.

Kirk Douglas wastes none of a very meaty part. Also extraordinarily versatile, he is the brutal fear-crazed savage, the sensitive artist, the happy-go-lucky clown, and the tender lover. His portrayal runs the gamut of emotions from a delicate scene with a wide-eyed child to a final hysterical outburst as he reaches his mental crisis.

Walls Near Shaw Tumblin' Down

By DICK CASE

"Something there is that doesn't love a wall, that wants it down."
Robert Frost

In the wake of progress, several dozens strong hands are tumbling down the walls at Number 229 Euclid ave. where once the home of Mrs. Isabelle L. Miller stood proud against the Syracuse skyine.

The demolition of the two-story Victorian structure comes after nearly three years of tireless bickering on the part of Syracuse university. It comes upon the death of a strong-willed old lady who stood off the pecunius advances of campus officials much the same way her ancestors must have guarded their early American estates from the Indians.

Instead of a musket though; this white-haired apostle of the imminent domain aimed the wrath of her tongue at the oncoming foe.

In August, 1951, University spokesmen approached the 80-year-old Mrs. Miller regarding the purchase of her home to make way for a new Euclid ave. women's dormitory. Under the Hill's extensive building and expansion program, it was planned that the house would be torn down to complete a block-long space on the site which has since become Shaw dorm. The University made the kindly lady what they considered a generous offer.

But Mrs. Isabelle Miller would have none of it.

"I will not sell," she said. "The University has not made any attractive offer and it is a disgraceful thing to try to make me move. There are plenty of wide open spaces for the University to build on . . . I'm sick and have no intention of making a change!"

Naturally the mighty men of Orange were quite set back by Mrs. Miller's stand. They pleaded. The lady stood firm, however, adding that she had paid off the mortgage herself and would not stand for demolition.

The University was faced with a decision. They had no right to evict Mrs. Miller, who it was apparent had no intention of budging from her home of 30 years, but, on the other hand, the dorm must be built.

They finally decreed that construction be started and shortly afterward sawdust and mortar dust filled the air around upper Euclid ave.

When the upperclass coeds returned to the Syracuse campus last fall, they found a smart brick building rising out of the earth across from Greek row. They found too that it was minus one wing and that a shabby brown house stood proudly on the eastern corner of the Frederick J. Shaw grounds.

Now it would seem that the tale of 229 Euclid ave. has come to a close. Some 328 coeds have a fine new home and the progress of the University's wide building plan is one more notch along the road to completion.

There will be those, perhaps, who will pause as they watch the belligerent tufts of green grass pushing their way through the soil in that Eastern corner of the Shaw grounds. They will think of a firm, kindly old lady peering at the world through the soiled white curtains of her brown house and wonder if progress can't hurt sometimes.

LETTERARY COMMENT

Apology on Pep Rally

Letter to the Editor:

We would like to make an apology to all the houses we bypassed in the Pep rally Thursday night.

The band had a rehearsal scheduled for seven o'clock and therefore had to leave the rally early. It was felt that if the Pep rally continued along the regular route we would lose some of the crowd. Consequently, it was decided that the route be cut short.

We promise to continue the regular route at the two remaining rallies—Cornell, Nov. 5 and Colgate, Nov. 13. Save your spirit and yelling for them as they promise to be the best yet.

Sincerely,

Lois Cohn

Tolley Speaks at Frosh Convo

Campus Enhanced By Landscaping

Landscape engineers have been beautifying the campus of Syracuse university in a $50 thousand project. The recent excavations have been done for the welfare of the students i eliminating traffic hazards, also giving symmetry to the center of the University.

The principle change involves the laying of new sidewalks in eight foot wide concrete sections. The geometrical criss-cross pattern makes transportation across the new quad more efficient. The old center road having been eliminated, there is no danger of traffic, particularly during the congestion of class changes.

Trees have been planted at intervals to break up the broad expanse of the quadrangle. In future years their shade may prove a boon to students studying in the spring air.

A large concrete expanse has been laid in front of Hendricks chapel for Sunday crowds. The nearby parking facilities created behind the administration building provide both adequate parking and parking free of pedestrian congestion.

A more practical part of the landscaping in the recent ditch dug to lay the heating pipes to the new men's dormitories. Construction of the buildings surrounding a "new quad" of the future has also been begun. The foundation for the law school building was excavated over the summer and the basement walls have already been poured.

Maguire to Leave For Europe Tour

Prof. Robert T. Maguire of the Hill's History department left yesterday by plane for a sabbatical in Czecholsolvakia, and he will spend 14 months there studying West European history.

Maguire said Wednesday that he will visit historical and political institutions in Prague in an attempt to gain insight into the lack of liberalism he says charactereizes the slovak and teutonic peoples.

He recently completed a volume concerning the desirability of ideals for the average man. He has named it "No Need for Sleep" and publication is scheduled by Prentice-Hall for June.

Maguire's tour of Europe has been called off several times because of the large number of students who want to take one of his graduate courses. History 243, "Study of Man's Ideas in Modern Day."

Colonel Announces Large Enrollment

More than 1,000 students are now enrolled in the Hill ROTC program according to announcement by Col. Robert P. Halloran, joint commander of the Hill ROTC detachments. Because Syracuse is not a land grant school, ROTC is strictly a voluntary program, he said.

Halloran stressed that he feels the Syracuse program is one of the finest in the nation because only those persons who have a sincere interest in the work are in the program. "You cannot enforce leadership training," he said.

Senior, Living Out, Ordered to Come In

Men's Student Court Imposes Decision

Robert S. Mullay, a senior in the College of Liberal Arts, was ordered to move into University-approved housing as a result of yesterday's men's student government court case.

The defendant had been living in an apartment, located in the campus neighborhood but not listed among University-approved housing. Mullay had given this address during registration. This violation of University regulations which require that all undergraduate men live in approved housing or fraternities, was noted by members of the dean of men's staff and referred to the court for action.

THE COURT'S decision mentioned that a minimum penalty was being enforced since the defendant had not attempted to falsify his address. Such action would be liable to expulsion from the University.

Mullay must find approved housing within ten days.

The defendant was represented by Jerome Winesteen of the MSG defense attorney's staff; Barton Sheer acted as prosecuting attorney.

Publication of the court procedure and decision was made possible by the defendant's request for an open trial, to which representatives of the press would be admitted.

CHANCELLOR WILLIAM P. TOLLEY receives a frosh class button from one of the members of the new class. The Chancellor stressed importance of liberal thinking in America when he addressed a convocation of frosh last night. He also commented on the need for worthwhile "dreams."

Pious Work Stressed

Rev. John Allen spoke to Chapel board members last night urging them to further the work of God through special social action services.

A prominent New York minister, Rev. Allen made a special appearance at the meeting, leaving immediately after for a Buffalo conference.

A question and answer period followed his talk. The Board committee members queried the speaker on how his message could be translated into action by their particular committee.

Refreshments were served in the lounge after the program. A skit was also presented by some of the Board members.

The next meeting of the Chapel group will be held at 7:15 p.m. Wednesday in Hendricks colonial room. Dr. James Conway, pastor of the North Congregational church, will speak on "God, His Power and His Love."

The Chapel Board is a group of leaders heading various Chapel committees. The members meet weekly to integrate programs, coordinate ideas and plan activities for these special groups. Some of the committees are: worship, Syracuse-in-Thailand, skeptics corner, Chapel service and public relations.

Democracy Radio Discussion Topic:

A panel discussion on "American Democracy—Pro and Con" will be broadcast this afternoon by WAER, the student radio station. The group will be composed of undergraduates majoring in political theory.

This is the first of a series that will attempt to explain, through discussion, the advantages of various types of government. Next week's program will be on the pro and con points of the British form of democracy.

The discussion will compare English parliamentary government and the American form of representative democracy.

Chancellor Lauds College Founders At Convocation

Chancellor William P. Tolley told freshmen to "make no small plans or dream no small dreams" at a spring convocation yesterday in Hendricks chapel.

He cited the dreams that have contributed to the growth of Syracuse university and commented that "the progress was never sensed by its founders, whose dreams were too small."

"But no dream is too great for you or for the University," the Chancellor added.

Dr. Tolley warned the audience against the drift away from liberal thinking in America. He maintained that the curtain of silence or the lessening of freedom of thought should be recognized for what it is—a form of slavery.

The Chancellor concluded his discussion by reciting the inscription arond the chapel walls: "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free,"

Earlier last night, Dr. Tolley addressed a meeting of Interfraternity Council.

He said that fraternities have no fear of hostility on the part of the Administration leaders but they must be aware of the major headaches that are a part of long range problems.

The Chancellor cited the important part that fraternities have played in the last 30 years. He stressed that fraternities should concentrate more on religious and allied interests in life.

Niarb Perfects Electron Device

Prof. Irving Niarb of the Electrical Engineering faculty revealed yesterday the development of a revolutionary electron tube. This sub-miniature device will make possible the mass production of radios as small as the average wrist watch.

Niarb has been a member of the faculty at Syracuse for fifteen years. During this time he has made many contributions in the field of electronics. He has assisted in the development of the transistor, varistor and synthetic crystal diode.

Prof. Niarb has worked on this particular project for the past five years in building C at the Thompson rd. campus. The technical data on the tube is available in the "Electrical Engineering News Record."

Magazine Prints Student's Article

Edward B. Alvin, a graduate student in the School of Journalism, has had an article published in the "Commonweal." The article, "Religion in the Free World," was the result of an extensive study of the principles of religious freedom in many countries.

When interviewed, Alvin said, "I felt that an article such as this should be presented to the public in order to further the interests of religious tolerance."

Stivers Rockets Sampson To Win Over Piety Nine

Manager CHARLES DREW, plus two of his players, DICK NOLE and BOB MARKMAN discuss strategy during the Syracuse-Sampson game.

Sampson Air Force base sent a rocket launcher to Lew Carr field yesterday, but his name was Jack Stivers. At least that's the way he looked to the Orange nine as he blazed his way to a two-hit 6-1 win. Stivers launched away to his heart's content and was effective enough to fan six and walk three.

Elmer (Zeke) Golden was about as good a substantiater as any hurler would need. Zeke not only covered three-fourths of his side of the infield but also collected 4 for 5 at the plate.

Syracuse's Walt Craddock started walking them early and it led to his downfall. Sampson had two runs in the first inning and consistently, if slowly, added to their total. Craddock was lifted in the seventh but Gordie Smith's two innings of shutout ball came too late to plug the flood.

Don Crowley, who came in to bat for Craddock, was also too late. In his two appearances at the plate, Crowley crashed two hits and that was all that Syracuse was to get.

Coach Ed Manion, a captain in the regular Air Force, takes his Sabre team down to play Bolling Field in Washington.

Coach Kleinhans stays home to entertain the Nittany Lions of Penn State.

Glorious New Regime Outlined

Dire Plot Revealed In Dug-up Campus

Exploitation of college students' funds has been displayed in the recent destruction of the once beautiful Syracuse campus. An opportunistic administration usurped the tuition funds to excavate the campus in search of valuable minerals, the profits of which would have gone to enrich the pockets of the capitalistic administrators.

The fraud of laying supposedly new sidewalks had been perpetrated to cover the deep exploratory ditches which were dug. The plot to take advantage of the deceived masses of college students was discovered by investigators of the glorious new government.

The valuable road for vehicular transportation has been lost due to the greed displayed by former members of the University administration. Observers will notice that the trees recently planted follow a surveyor's line and mark the spots where test holes were dug.

The large concrete pavilion laid before Hendricks Assembly hall had been planned by the now disposed leaders for large gatherings to incite the emotions and confuse the college students with hysterical propaganda.

The useless foundation above Irving avenue will be converted into a meeting room for the new Students for Socialism club. A secret tunnel connecting the administration headquarters with subversive services in the new dormatory was discovered through its fortunate collapse due to rainy weather weakening the structure.

Maguire Deported For Rehabilitation

Prof. Robert T. Maguire, formerly a graduate assistant in the hierarchy of government finance, has been assigned to a rehabilitation institution in Czechoslovakia.

Maguire will engage in construtive farmwork so that he may emerge in a few years with the right political concepts and take his place in society.

He will never be permitted to enter any of the Party's main territories because of liberalistic tendencies that the Party feels have been placed permanently in his mind by insincere educators.

His duties teaching graduate courses will be taken over by Rudolph Heiso, famed political analyst who was recently released from a local prison when it was discovered he had been "framed."

Military Training Made Compulsory

Military training will become a part of every student's curriculum beginning tomorrow, according to an announcement by Vice-commandant Ernest T. Wiln, organizer of the Common Volunteers program.

Each student will attend three hours of classes a day. Infiltration maneuvers will be held Saturday mornings and afternoons on the campus of the Party Medical College. The organization will make its headquarters in the former "Maxwell School" and also in the basement of Hendricks Assembly hall. All Volunteers will be allowed to enter the armed service upon graduation.

LA Senior Evicted By Student Court

200 Hour Work Penalty Imposed On Culprit

Robert S. Mullay, senior in the Colege of Liberal Arts, pleaded guilty to violations of major University regulations yesterday during a College People's Republic court trial.

The accused admitted living in non-approved housing and planning to disregard other important rulings.

The admission of guilt was read by the court clerk to those attending, including representatives of the campus press. The confession had been signed in a closed court sesion preceding the formal trial.

The tribunal's decision stated that Mullay must move into cooperative living quarters before 2 p.m. today.He must also donate 200 hours of work in the CPR office at the northern end of campus. The matter will be noted on his official record.

Mullay was apprehended late Thursday night after he had been spotted entering his unapproved housing by a CPR agent, who reported him to the campus police.

The People's Republic was represented by a staff of four attorneys.

In the directive last night, the court warned that other violators of University regulations will be dealt with in similar manner.

THE CHANCELLOR of the University has been dismissed because of unwillingness to join the COMMON PARTY. The new head of the University has been appointed by the Central Party. He advised freshmen last night to forget idle reverie.

Subversive Arrested

The National Security police, guardians and protectors of the people, last night arrested John Allen, a New York subversive, for advocating defiance of state beliefs.

A long-sought enemy of the people, Allen was captured attempting to flee the city after speaking before the Youth Service conference in Hendricks assembly hall.

He was charged with preaching false doctrines and encouraging a subversive discussion about an imaginary "super-being". Several leaders who sponsored Allen's appearance are being held for quesquestioning.

A special reorganization meeting of the group has been called for :15 p.m. Wednesday in Hendricks patriot room. Major James Conway, director of Syracuse youth activities, will speak on "Youth and Its Duty to the State."

Several new committees will be formed to help integrate programs and plan activities for students of the nUiversity. Some of these committees will be: youth rallies, aid for comrades, party education, state service and community cooperation.

Foreign Powers Exposed on Air

Students will be required to listen to a speech about "The Deficiencies of Foreign Governments" which will be broadcast this afternoon over the administration radio station WAER.

This is th efirst of a series that will reveal the corrupt decadence of scheming foreign powers. Presented by the members of the Socialist club, the speeches will be made by members of the faculty. Next week's program will pinpoint the failings and corruption of the British government.

New Hill Leader Will Encourage End of Chaos

Idle daydreams have plunged this territory and this university into chaos, a mass rally of students was told last night. The new University Leader, recently appointed to rehabilitate the stagnating minds found here, said the founders of Syracuse university set education back 500 years by their attention to unreality and impossibility.

The broad-shouldered Leader addressed more than 14,000 Hill students, most of whom thronged around Hendricks Assembly hall where he was speaking.

"Your dreams must end now. The professors here will teach you efficiency, and democracy." the Leader continued. "The outmoded idea that freedom of opportunity can be found in a laissez faire economy and a similar political environment died long ago with fools who had nothing better to do than build rambling philosophies," he added.

The aristocracy and discrimination of social fraternities is at an end. Their presidents have been expelled. "Spate that can be put to better use should not be devoted to the few rich among you."

These organizations have been turned into communal clubs for you—the new Party members.

"A world of efficiency and equality await you, the struggling college students and professors."

"This is the beginning—of a life too wonderful to ever have appeared in your idle dreams."

State Triumphs With New Device

Prof. Irving Niarb of the State Electrical Engineering staff at Syracuse has once more added fresh laurels to the history of the State Engineering Bureau. The inventor has produced a sub-miniature electron tube which makes possible the mass production of the ne wPeoples' radio.

Niarb has been an ardent worker for the advancement of the State. He has labored tirelessly for the illustrious government by assisting in the development of the most recent electronic devices: television and radar.

The technical data is being withheld to safeguard the interests of the people ,according the latest rules from the eCntral News Bureau.

State-Run Nine Outscores Sloppy Capitalist Players

Glorious STATE players frown on sloppy capitalist tactics during the game won gloriously by the SAMPSON FLYERS 6-1.

Sampson's Flyers, representing the glorious republic rattled a people's-owned Syracuse university team yesterday 6-1 on new Memorial field. Jack Stivers, a typical Comrade example of the Air Force might, flipped his way to a six-strikeout, two-walk, two-hit, win.

Elmer (Zeke) Golden slashed out with 3 hits for 4 times at bat. Zeke also made several fine stops at his third base post.

Although the score was high, the Orange playing against a team in its class would undoubtedly have won. The fine drill-like precision and snappy playing of the Sabres proved too much.

The Flyers displayed expertness in all types of play. Stivers exhibited pin-point control while the batters following Golden's stirring example hit the ball with authority.

Before the University was taken over for the good of the masses, there would have been a different result. Under the old self-interest policy, the University would have dug deep into their endowment—formerly donated by several wealthy capitalistic manufacturers and would have purchased several players.

Under the state-controlled sport, this "professionalism" is liquidated. The sport now retains its true, untarnished amateur rating.

State Cites Alvin For 'Basis' Story

Edward B. Alvin, a student in the school of pulic guidance and information, has been cited by the government for his article published in the "International Commune." The article, "Basic Causes of the Democratic Downfall," was written with the advice and cooperation of party public instruction officials.

Comrade Alvin cited the need for universal knowldege of the basic decadence of capitalism as the motivation for the article.

Fordham Air Circus at Archbold; Franz, Drake Key Performers

By LOWELL TOENNIESSEN
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Ed Danowski moves his Bronx aerial-circus, commonly known as the Fordham Rams, into Archbold stadium this afternoon for the first matinee performance of the current season. Starting time is 2 p.m.

Ringmaster Ed will send veteran Roger Franz into the opening spotlight as he seeks his first victory over Syracuse since 1950. The Orange whipped the Rams 33-20 two years ago in the local oval and 26-13 last year in New York.

FRANZ DRAWS the opening quarterback assignment in a late change because of his greater experience and punting ability while Vinnie Drake, the scheduled starter, leads the second of Danowski's alternating backfields.

Big Roger finished second among the East's passers last year with 105 completions, good for 1,392 yards. He also punted an average 40.8 yards, best in this section of the country. The 6 ft. 2 in. senior is in his third season as Maroon field general.

Mal Stafford and Joe Yalch, a pair of 170-pounders run from the halves in Franz's quartet while John Griffin, 190-pound senior, goes at full. Stafford replaces Andy Romeo, regular left half who suffered a shoulder injury earlier this week.

Co-captain Jack Hyatt, sidelined all of 1952 by an attack of polio, returns to lead the runners in Drake's backfield. Jack scored twice against the Orange in 1951 when he topped the Rose Hill scorers with 42 points. Joe Palmieri and Chuck Dietlin complete the quartet.

Colgate Booters Drop Piety Frosh 5-1, at Hamilton

By ALEX STRASSER
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Four penalty shots was all that the Colgate yearlings needed yesterday as they downed a game but outclassed Orange squad, 5-1, at Hamilton.

The Colgate aggregation took command at the beginning and then was never headed. The first of the Red Raider goals was scored in the first quarter. Syracuse then knotted the count only to have Colgate score again and take a 2-1 lead which they retained till halftime.

Three more goals were recorded by the Raiders during the second half as they put the game on ice.

Two Orange yearlings who, on the basis of yesterday's performance, should figure prominently in future Orange plans are halfback Lewis Marshall and wingman Andy Zieraks. Zieraks scored Syracuse's lone goal on a penalty shot while Marshall played a stellar game on the defensive line.

Other booters who turned in good performances were Donald Wall, Charlie Wingertes and Harold Lund. All three will see plenty of action in the yearling's next game.

Three of Syracuse's top varsity booters will graduate this June. They are all-Americans Sig Wirth, Bill Nelson and Capt. Don Moller. Coccari is hoping to find replacements for them from his yearling soccer squad.

Coccari is still trying to figure out ways to mitigate the effects that the loss of Gus Delfinno, Orv Wambold and George Wolfe will have on the varsity team. All three were declared ineligible due to scholastic difficulties. Although not regulars, they were counted upon for spot duty and they will be difficult to replace.

Axel Spots—Despite the loss, Coccari was satisfied with his team's showing. The frosh booters previously had only practiced a few times as a unit.

Along the Sidelines

By KEN LENT, DAILY ORANGE SPORTS EDITOR

"I hope it's as pleasant as this tomorrow, and not like the mudhole we played in last last year." It was Ed Danowski, Fordham's genial head coach, who was looking up at the blue October sky and making his comment in reference to the rain-splattered Syracuse win over the Rams in New York last year.

It's easy to see why they call him "Big" Ed Danowski. The Ram mentor, a former Fordham and New York Giant star back, is a stockily built, pleasant man whose firm handshake and easy-going manner makes one like him instantly.

Big Ed chuckled thinking about the weather in previous Orange-Rams contests. "I remember when we were here last," he reminisced, "two years ago. The day before the game was just like today, good weather for football. But the day of the game was overcast and cold."

His eyes swept over the Archbold gridiron where his maroon and gold clad warriors were engaged in their final limbering-up session before today's game. " We'll probably start the Franz backfield and come in with Vinnie Drake's boys later."

He was referring to the miniature two-platoon system he uses by alternating two complete backfields with the same line. "We have to have two backfields," he explained, "Because all the boys are about the same in ability."

Jack Hyatt

The backfield headed by Vinnie Drake and Jack Hyatt, swept by in a fast, snappy signal drill with the entire squad calling the signals, "One . . two . . three . . hike," i nshort staccato tones foltones following the ball's center.

Someone came by and asked Danowski if he was going to see Ben Schwartzwalder's boys work out. "I don't know if I want to see him," he laughed, "after what he did to us last year."

We introduced ourselves to Bob O'Connor, the Rams' publicity director, who gave us the dope on Fordham's new lease in the football world. Last year, the Rams played their home games before ushers, peanut vendors and a handful of spectators in out-of-the-way Triborough stadium.

This year, Fordham sent out letters to its alumni asking for their financial support in case the Rams went into the red as they did last season. The response was overwhelmingly affirmative. "It's hard to tell what kind of crowds we'll draw," said O'Connor, "but we should do better than last year."

Fordham finished its short practice and the entire team ran the length of the field off the gridiron. Outside the Orange starting eleven was getting its picture taken for the papers. One of the players looking at the motley practice uniforms commented, "Tomorrow they'll put under the picture, this is the crew that swept the stadium." Swept Fordham too, we hope.

BILL ORANGE SAYS: Bob Grieve's fine cross country squad opens its schedule this morning at 11 a.m. at Drumlins. It's a crying shame that this is their only home meet of the year because the Orange should have another one of its excellent sasons.

CRYSTAL BALL DEPT: Going out on the proverbial limb, this section is taking Harvard over Colgate, Cornell upsetting Navy in a squeaker, Holy Cross romping by Bucknell, Michigan State past Texas Christian and Ohio State winning from Illinois in coming-opponents-of-Syracuse games.

Chiefs Nine Sold; Phils Major Tieup

The Syracuse Chiefs, entry of the Salt City in the International League, have signed a working agreement with a major league club as well as acquiring a new ownership, according to an announcement late yesterday.

Marty Haske was believed to be the new owner of the club and the Philadelphia Phillies were the major league tieup. The Syracuse organization was an affiliate of the New York Yankees during the past year.

and Jim George at tackles, Bob Fleck—guard, and Ted Kukowski at the pivot. Co-Captain Bob Leberman lingers as the only back left over from last week.

THE ORANGE squad is a shaky six point favorite. If the theory is Syracuse's running backs are better, this falters when considered in the light of three new backs for this game. If, on the other hand, the reasoning is that Syracuse's defense is better, remember that it has yet to be tested against a passing team of good caliber.

Many, many passes are expected from both sides. Fordham passed to excess in their first game against Detroit, but some of the blame can be placed on the seven and eight man line defense that Detroit refused to change. Both teams can lean on a pair of strong arms apiece. Fordham has Roger Franz and Vinnie Drake, Syracuse counters with Yancey and Pat Stark.

Because the long pass is the easiest way to score the most Schwartzwalder will probably go to the theory that a best defense is a good offense.

Syracuse plops a 12 game streak on the line. The Orange haven't lost to an Eastern team in the last dozen tilts.

After this weekend, transportation costs will have to be added to the budgets of those who want to see Syracuse play. Coming up: Penn State, Illinois, Holy Cross and Cornell on consecutive weekends, all away. They return to the Bowl to greet Colgate on the big weekend and then ship out to Philly to meet the Villanova Wildcats.

Syracuse Thinclads Clash With Raiders In Opener

By AL GEFEN
Daily Orange Junior Editor

The 1953 Cross-Country season will officially open at 11 a.m. today for Bill Orange's harriers as Colgate's Red Raiders will be in town for the only home meet of the year on the Drumlins course.

Piety Hill Coach Bob Grieve has drilled his charges for three weeks now and believes that the boys are ready for the opening test.

The Orange will be led by Ray Osterhout who ran second in the IC4A's and the NCAA's last year. Once again great things are expected of the Syracuse captain who will be competing in his last home meet of his varsity career.

OTHER SENIORS who will run for the Hillmen are Tom Coulter, Don Fryer, Frank Calzi and Gene Parker. On the basis of previous performances this quartet should come in among the early finishers in the Colgate meet.

Steve Armstrong, a holdover from last year, and Jack Hubbard, a member of the track squad who has never competed in varsity Cross-Country for the Orangemen, are the juniors on the team. Last year Armstrong was a steady performer for Coach Bob Grieve's thinclads.

Les Vielbig, Ed Alger, and Jim George have moved up from the 1952 undefeated frosh team. George has been especially impressive in pre-season workouts, giving Osterhout quite a run for his money for the best time in clocked practice drills.

Maroon coach Jack Rourke who is commencing his 41st season as mentor at the Hamilton school will bring a squad to Syracuse which should not give the Saltine runners too much trouble.

IT IS QUITE possible that the battle for first place will be highly contested. Les Wallack and Russ Bradshaw will probably fight it out with Osterhout for first place.

Wallack is one of the better half-milers in the nation. Bradshaw, who set the Archbold Stadium record with a 4:26.1 mile last year, broke a Colgate University record for the same event last spring with a time of 4:15.7.

Other Maroon lettermen returning are Jack Warner, Alan Mare and Joe Borduik. It will probably be the performances of this trio which will decide the closeness of the meet.

The two top sophomore prospects competing for the Raiders are Dave Perry and George Mahr. The other probable starter for Colgate is Don Jackson, a junior.

This will be the second outing for the Maroon thinclads. Last week they lost to Cornell by 23-28.

The closeness of the meet indicates an improved Raider squad.

State University Abolishes Social Fraternities, Sororities

By JACK REILLY

The State university of New York has banned all national social fraternities and sororities on its 33 campuses in a drive against racial and religious discrimination.

The University's board of trustees, meeting in New York Thursday, ordered all Greek organizations to break away from national fraternities and sororities.

SOCIAL ORGANIZATIONS affected at Syracuse were caught off guard although it had not been completely unexpected. Alpha Kappa Kappa, Nu Sigma Nu, Phi Delta Epsilon for men and Alpha Epsilon Iota for women are the organizations involved at the College of Medicine.

Alpha Kappa Kappa officer Richard Barr, stated that there was no discrimination practiced at the AKK house. He also said that the national organization deleted the restriction of the white-gentile clause last summer.

Charles Putnam, president of Nu Sigma Nu fraternity, stated that members were "somewhat shocked" at the decree, but that they have "no discrimination here at this fraternity." Putnam also indicated that there was no discriminatory clause in the national charter.

Phi Delta Epsilon house officer Ronald Spiro informed the Daily Orange yesterday that there is absolutely no restriction concerning race or creed in either the national or local charters.

ALPHA EPSILON IOTA sorority was unable to be contacted for statement for publication.

The Forestry College at Syracuse will not be affected, since the college has no fraternities of its own, but the students belong to fraternities on the Syracuse university campus.

State university President William Carlson said that fraternities and sororities might all claim a "clean bill of health and declare that the organization does not discriminate and that anyone is eligible for membership. Unfortunately we cannot take these assurances at face value."

The legality of the claim of the State over the organization has been raised in some sources. Dean Frank Piskor states that, when the medical college was connected with Syracuse, these social organizations were more or less a separate entity and not directly connected with the college or the university.

Advertising Staff Will Meet Today

All Daily Orange advertising salesmen must attend a staff meeting today at 4 p.m. in the Hellbox. All prospective salesmen are urged to attend today's meeting, according to Robert Goldstein, business manager.

Lecture Sign-Ups Slated for Chapel

Discussion Series Set During Seven Weeks

Sign-ups for the social hygiene lecture series will be held from 10 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 4 p.m. today and tomorrow in the Chapel.

The seven-week series will be limited to 60 people and include discussion periods as well as lectures, chairman Patricia Miller announced.

The first talk entitled "The Doctor Looks at Marriage" will be held at 4:15 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 20 in 110 Maxwell.

Other topics scheduled include "Choosing a Mate," "Can Two Live as Cheaply as One," "Marry Now or Later," and "Romance After The Honeymoon."

The series is sponsored by the Social Hygiene committee of Chapel. Committee members include Patricia Miller, chairman; John Fanning, Veronica Bartholic, planning; Jean Mantel, Marilyn Persse, Coleen Gamon, contacts, and Barbara Watson, secretary.

Debate Coaches Select Officers

Jerome G. Kovalcik, publicity director at the State University College of Forestry, was recently elected president of the New York State Debate Coaches at their annual meeting at Colgate.

Dean Edwin McEvoy, of the School of Speech and Dramatic Art, was also elected secretary-treasurer of the group. Professor Erwin von Schlichten, of the psychology department at Union college, was chosen vice-president.

The 22-college group will conduct the spring New York State intercollegiate legislative assembly at Albany.

Broad areas to be discussed at this time are "Security of the Aged," "Apportionment of Legislative New York State Representative," and "State University of New York."

An extra-curricular speech club has been formed at the College of Forestry and will meet Tuesday at 7 p.m. in Marshall lounge, stated Kovalcik.

Kovalcik has headed the debate group previously in 1949 and was chosen secretary-treasurer of the debate coaches in 1948.

Orange Publishing Employee Dead

Joseph Delaney, foreman at the Orange Publishing company, died of a heart condition yesterday morning in Memorial hospital. He had been ill for more than a month.

He was employed at the plant since 1947, during which time he worked closely with Daily Orange staff workers. A native of Binghamton, Delaney came to Syracuse 27 years ago to work on the old Syracuse Herald, predecessor of the present-day Herald-Journal.

Graduate Student Critically Injured

Coed's Condition Serious Following Accident

Miss Ann Robinson Ziegler, 24, a Syracuse university graduate student, was critically injured Sunday night in an automobile accident near Pulaski. She remains in serious condition with a fractured skull at Oswego hospital.

Miss Ziegler, who lives at 905 Walnut ave., and is a native of Greencastle, Pa., was a passenger in a car driven by David Otis Nicodemus, 23, a chemical engineer at Bristol Laboratories, inc., in Syracuse. He suffered a broken collar-bone and is in good condition.

TROOPER George Loomis of the Pulaski State Police substation said that Nicodemus was driving south on US route 11 and is believed to have fallen asleep. The car left the pavement and crashed into a tree.

Dr. Hugh McChesney of Pulaski was at the scene. The injured were taken by ambulance to Oswego hospital, where Miss Ziegler was placed under oxygen.

US Marine Band To Perform Here

The 155-year-old United States Marine band, the oldest military symphonic musical organization in the country, will visit Syracuse Oct. 19 with a special matinee "students' performance."

The afternoon program will be staged in the Onondaga War Memorial at 2:15 p.m. in addition to the matinee, the Band will stage a second show at 8:15 the same evening.

Lt. Col. William F. Santedmann is conductor of the famed Marine band. The Syracuse Optimist club is sponsoring the Band's Syracuse visit.

Tickets for the performance may be obtained at the University Book store or the Corner store.

Air Force Groups Will Meet Today

Air Force ROTC freshmen will meet in Marshall auditorium at noon today for a welcoming address by Col. Robert P. Halloran, professor of air science and tactics. Status of cadets and the flying program will be discussed.

AFROTC juniors will meet at noon today in Maxwell auditorium for a briefing on the new leadership in program and cadet responsibilities. Capt. Joseph R. Peartree and Lt. Glen C. Tomb will lead the discussion.

Sophomores and seniors will meet at noon Thursday in Marshall and Maxwell auditorium respectively.

Members of Band Lose White Hats After Grid Contest

Tuba Players Plagued By Lid-Snatchers While Marching

Two major crises have rocked the band department in the past week.

The first occurred Saturday after the Fordham game as the band marched down Irving ave. Six tuba players in the last row were peacefully oompa-ing, when one felt his white cap whisked off his head. He turned around to see the hat-thief disappearing in the post-football game crowd.

THE BAND continued down Irving ave., and the tuba players continued oompa-ing. Another man, who apparently didn't like tubas either, followed the aggregation, and another tuba man lost his hat.

This was too much.

The second man who had his hat stolen slipped the tuba from his shoulder, laid it in the street, and took off after the thief who liked band hats.

He caught up with him a few blocks later, recovered the white cap, and returned for his tuba.

ONLY A HALF empty street marked the place where the band and his tuba had been.

Farther on he caught up with the band and spotted the tuba-thief. Three bandsmen sprinted after the man with the tuba, and captured him. When they recovered the instrument, however, the mouthpiece was missing. Now the tuba player has been billed $7.50 for a new mouthpiece.

That's why the band asks anyone who knows the whereabouts of the mouthpiece to report it to the band office in Crouse college, or return it to the band office.

The second crises involves hats, also. The band and band officers want to wear straw hats at the games, but the hats were given to the individual members after the Syracuse-Alabama tilt in Miami. About 50 hats belonging to seniors and ex-band members are missing, and cannot be replaced with current funds.

SO, UNLESS somebody's rich uncle dies and leaves the band 50 straw hats, they'll continue to be seen in white caps with an orange seal on the front.

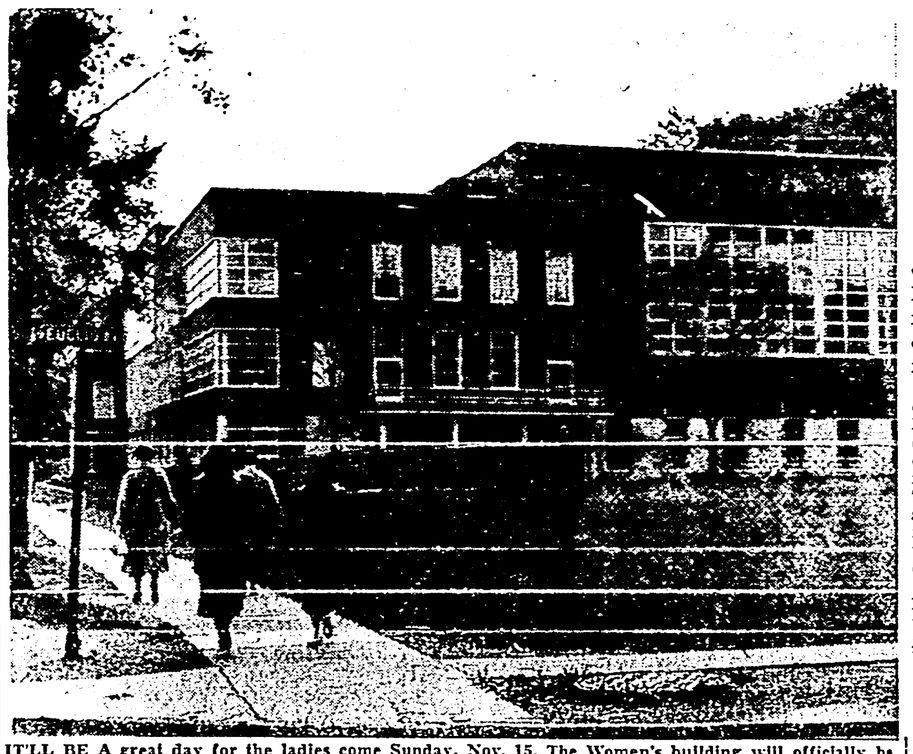
Positions Open In Civil Service

The United States Civil Service Commission has announced openings in the field of management. Through the junior management training program outstanding young men and women are developed into future federal executives.

There are also openings as junior agricultural assistants. The entrance salaries for the agricultural positions is $3,410 a year and for the management positions $3,410 and $4,205.

Applications for junior management must be filed by Nov. 12 and for agricultural assistant by Dec. 1. Send them to United States Civil Service Commissioner, Washington, D. C.

New Building Dedication Set for Colgate Weekend



IT'LL BE A great day for the ladies come Sunday, Nov. 15. The Women's building will officially be dedicated and the $2.35 million structure will be formally opened. Students, alums and other interested persons will be able to tour the buildings from Friday evening through Sunday afternoon of Colgate weekend. In addition to the gym facilities, many administrative and student organizations are now located within the structure at Comstock and Euclid avenues.

Bartlett Announces Program Series For This Year

By EILEEN CHAMBERLAIN
Daily Orange Junior Editor

A committee of University officials and two student leaders will make final plans for the Colgate weekend dedication of the women's building at a meeting tomorrow.

Formal dedication and ribbon-cutting has been set for Sunday, Nov. 15. This will climax a weekend of open house at the recently-completed $2.35 million structure for women at Syracuse university. The building will be open for inspection of students, alumni and friends from Friday evening through Sunday of Colgate weekend.

VICE PRESIDENT Kenneth G. Bartlett yesterday released tentative plans for a series of programs in connection with the Women's building during the year.

Plans include a meeting of high school counselors in December, a special program for physical education majors in late winter and a conference in spring concerning women's education.

Miss Winifred Hughes of the Alumni house, chairman of the committee for the Women's building open house, will meet with Bartlett, Social Director Miss Margaret Parker, Registrar Keith J. Kennedy and Director of Public Information William Ehling.

Also at tomorrow's meeting will be Mary Ann Dalton, women's student government president, and Irene Purdy, president of Eta Pi Upsilon. Dean of Women Marjorie C. Smith and Vice President Frank P. Piskor will attend the meeting in an ex-officio capacity.

GROUND-BREAKING ceremonies for the Women's building were held in November, 1950, when Miss Katherine Sibley turned the first spadeful of earth near the corner of Comstock and Euclid avenues.

Completed in the fall, the building houses the dean of women and staff, Panhellenic, city women and WSG in addition to the offices and rooms of the women's physical education department.

Designed by University architects Lorimer Rich and Robbins Kahn of Brooklyn, the building is of modern functional structure with an emphasis on light obtained by extensive window space.

Features of the building are a pool 35 by 75 feet, six bowling alleys with automatic pin-setting machines, two large gymnasiums and a dance studio complete with a mirrow along one wall.

THE POOL RANGES from 4 to 14 feet in depth and is equipped with two diving boards, a canoe and other safety devices. An underwater observation window is located in the basement and a gallery along the pool's length may be entered from the second floor.

One of the spacious gymasiums is to be used for physical education classes and university functions. Folding bleachers are installed on one side wall and there is a balcony which may be entered from the third floor.

The other gymnasium is planned for professional students' classes and the instruction - program classes. A storage closet off the floor holds heavy equipment.

Piety Hill Alliance Numbers 14 Houses

AEPhi Votes to Stay In United Students

Alpha Epsilon Phi voted Sunday to stay in United Students party, setting the new Piety Hill Alliance group's membership at 14 houses.

Also during the weekend, Delta Kappa Epsilon, which had been politically inactive last year, joined Tri-Orange party, Edwin Hochberg, party chairman, said yesterday. Delta Upsilon, one of the founders of Tri-O, decided to become inactive last night, leaving Tri-O with 19 houses. USP has 20.

PHA RECEIVED recognition from student government Sunday with the release of the following statement from Presidents Mary Ann Dalton and Stanley Leff:

"This is to serve notice that the campus political party named Piety Hill Alliance is officially recognized as a student organization which can function at Syracuse university.

"This recognition is given by executive agreement and is to be considered temporary pending action of the two student government assemblies." Men's Student Government President Leff and all of the senior class officers are now members of PHA. There are no changes in lowerclass officers.

It was erroneously stated in Saturday's Daily Orange that Harriet Erlich, sophomore secretary, was in AEPhi and had changed from USP to PHA. Miss Erlich is a member of Sigma Delta Tau and USP.

MSG Petitions Due Tomorrow

The deadline for petitions for men's student government assemblyman is 5 p.m. tomorrow.

Balloting for all four classes will be held concurrently with freshman elections, Oct. 28.

Petitions are available in the MSG office, Building 30, and must be returned signed by at least 20 members of the candidate's class. Endorsement must be by those in the classification the candidate wishes to represent.

Chosen on a non-political basis, the new assembly will be made up of nine members from each of the four classes. Included will be at least three fraternity men, three independents and one city student.

Names of candidates will be released by civil service on Oct. 21 and campaigning will begin that day. MSG assembly candidates, although their names will not be associated with any political parties on the ballots, may be supported by parties in campaigning.

NAMED CONSULTANT

Professor Aubrey MacAndrews, head of the forestry entymology department, was recently named consultant on insect control by Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Benson.

Hill Political Parties Choose Candidates

Three Hill political parties have announced their candidates for the Oct. 28 elections for freshman offices.

All freshmen running for office on an independent basis will be announced by civil service Thursday, Oct. 22.

UNITED STUDENTS party held its nominating meeting last Wednesday. Its candidate for president of the frosh class is Warren L. Kimble.

Other USP nominees are Arlene Plotkin, vice-president; Daphne Burke, secretary and Donald Fulsom, treasurer.

Tri-Orange candidates are Richard Green, president; Betty Bartlett, vice-president; Barbara Solomon, secretary and Jeffrey Wenig, treasurer. They were nominated Sunday at a meeting at Alpha Omicron Pi.

With 14 Greek houses supporting the new Piety Hill Alliance, frosh candidates were selected Sunday when members met at Phi Delta Theta.

PHA CANDIDATE for president is William Brown. The slate includes Dorris Lemp for vice-president, Alta Burg for secretary and Norman Butterfield for treasurer.

Kimble, the USP presidential candidate is an art major in the fine arts college. He lives in Skytop M-1 and is from Belleville, N. J. In high school he received the Elks youth award and was named outstanding senior at Belleville High school.

USP veep nominee Arlene Plotkin hails from Yonkers. She was a member of her high school student leaders honorary and was recently elected president of Sims V.

A former president of his high school senior class and vice president of a student body numbering 6,500, Richard Green, the Tri-O choice for frosh president, lives in Skytop M-8 and comes from Brooklyn.

MISS BARTLETT, who is running for Tri-O vice-president, is a city student residing in Sims IV. She is graduate of Nottingham high school and was president of the Nottingham Girls' league.

Chosen by Piety Hill Alliance to vie for president, Brown resides in Yorktown Heights. President of his high school class for four years, he played varsity football, basketball and baseball. At Syracuse he is a member of the frosh football squad and lives at Collendale A-8.

Miss Lemp is also a city student. She was president of Lyceum, her sorority at Nottingham high school, and an active member of the Young Women's Christian association, for which she attended two national planning meetings.

McIsaac Appointed Economics Head

Dr. Archibald M. Isaac, professor of economics at Syracuse university, has been appointed chairman of the economics department, Dean Eric H. Faigle of the College of Liberal Arts announced today.

Dr. McIsaac succeeds Dr. Carl R. Bye, who has assumed the deanship of the graduate school.

Joining the staff of the economics department in 1947, Dr. McIsaac had been at Princeton university in the economics department since 1926.

A graduate of the University of Michigan and Princeton university, Dr. McIsaac is the author of several books and articles in the field of economic analysis, industrial organization and public policy.

He has served at various times as a consultant or in a staff capacity with the Federal Trade commission, the national and New York offices of the Office of Price Administration, and the national office of the Office of Price Stabilization.

Dr. McIsaac holds membership in the American Economic association, the Central New York Economic conference and the Commission on Economics in Teacher Education.

ROTC Announces New Cadet Staff

Cadet colonels and staffs for army and air ROTC have been appointed for the current semester.

Army Cadet Col. Peter Seevers, a Liberal Arts senior majoring in English, announced his staff yesterday as follows: Harold Ratcliff, executive officer; John Craig, personnel officer; Lorenzo Lopez, intelligence officer, Anthony Ponturiero, operations officers and Donald Dulude, supply.

John J. Forgette, air force cadet colonel, has announced the following staff: John H. Duddy, executive officer; Charles E. Eager, material officer; John N. Gordon, personnel and administration; Richard Hollander, provost marshall; Frederick Hopmeier, operations and training officer and Theodore Kukowski, adjutant and air inspector.

Lt. Col. George R. Stevens yesterday announced that Maj. Milton Falk and Lt. Col. Ernest L. Meggs will join the Army ROTC staff this week.

JOB INTERVIEWS

Interviews for junior engineering positions at North American Aviation inc. will be held Tuesday, Oct. 20. The placement secretary of the College of Engineering has further details on the interviews and company requirements.

Reserved Seating Reaches New High

Reserved seats reached a new high for the year, with 3,159 students getting advance places for Saturday's game with Fordham, David Krohn, co-director of the student government reserved seating committee, has announced.

Krohn credited the popularity of the plan to the revision in block seating and general change in student attitude. For the first time under the program, organized groups desiring block seating were not required to use identification cards for all the members, but merely present a letter from the president of the group requesting tickets for all.

About 2,500 seats were reserved at the Temple game, while there were 200 less at the clash with Boston university.

Block seating at Saturday's contest numbered 1,181 seats. Twenty-one fraternities plus several other organizations took advantage of the revised procedure, Krohn said.

Reserved seating for the Colgate football game will be available starting Nov. 9.

Rev. Konrad Leads Episcopalians

By LIZ GODDARD
Daily Orange Junior Editor

A stint in the Air Force and a post-war sojourn in the Philippines helped direct Rev. W. Wesley Konrad to the ministry.

The new Episcopal chaplain became interested in the church and its missionary work while piloting B-29s with the 20th Air Force on the Philippine island of Luzon.

AFTER SERVICE he continued his education, as a junior at Rutgers university. There he was senior manager of the glee club and as a member of the swimming team qualified to counsel at children's carpps in successive summers.

After graduation in 1948, Rev. Konrad entered General Theological seminary in New York city. In May 1951 he was ordained to the deaconate and to the priesthood later that year. His first curate was St. Matthews Episcopal church in Paramus, N. J., where he had served as student pastor.

The Rev. Konrad served there until he and his family came to Syracuse this fall. He became associate Episcopal chaplain on campus and associate pastor of Grace Church with the Rev. Walter M. Welsh.

In his first venture at collegiate work, Rev. Konrad says he will aim primarily to meet the students' spiritual, physical and mental needs.

"I WANT TO be for them on campus what their parish priest is at home," he said earnestly.

He hopes to promote better student-faculty relationshis by bringing the two groups together on an informal basis. The chaplain plans to hold weekly open houses at his home.

Rev. Konrad, a native of Newark, N. J., married Helen Marjorie Mead before going overseas in 1944. They have three daughters: Karen, 6; Deborah, 4; and Jane, 14 months.

The new chaplain will serve along with Rev. Konrad as advisor to the Canterbury Club, Episcopal group on campus. With an office in the Colonial room in Hendricks chapel, the Canterbury Club holds Sunday night suppers as part of its program.

REV. W. WESLEY KONRAD is the new associate Episcopal chaplain of Hendricks chapel. He is also associate pastor of Grace church with Rev. Walter M. Welsh. Rev. Konrad was ordained in 1951, after studying at Rutgers and at General Theological seminary, New York.

Marshall Mayoralty Race Ends Today

Voting ends at 5 p.m. today in the race to elect a "mayor of Marshall st.

Corrine Beecher and Vincent Rigolosi are the only two candidates in the race. Thomas Coulter and Beverly Barr, rumored hopefuls, were disqualified for failing to file official petitions with Chairman of Election Elizabeth Brydon.

The candidates campaigned vigorously yesterday in Hill buildings, sorority and fraternity houses and among coffee drinkers on Marshall st.

Unofficial totals at the end of yesterday's balloting numbered each candidate's votes at 150.

Misdirected bombshell?

The board of trustees of the State university of New York dropped a bombshell last week.

A resolution by the board, adopted on recommendation of State university President William Carlson, stated that no national social groups would be permitted to exist on State university campuses. This action would ban national fraternities and sororities at state teachers' colleges and at all other state campuses in an effort to end discrimination.

At Syracuse three medical fraternities and one sorority fall under this classification: Alpha Kappa Pappa, Nu Sigma Nu, Phi Delta Epsilon and Alpha Epsilon Iota.

It comes as no surprise to learn that the medical fraternities were shocked over the news. The state's drastic and to us, unjustified action would be expected to raise more than a few eyebrows.

To issue a blanket condemnation of all national social groups without first finding out what their charters provide for is as senseless as tearing out all the flowers in a garden because one finds a weed or two.

If these charters are no guides, as some contend, let these critics look at the actual practices of the individual houses. At Syracuse, the charters of the three male medical fraternities have no discriminatory clauses. Proof positive is offered by the fact that each has Jewish, Catholic and Protestant men enrolled in the chapter at the present time.

Another reason for opposing the board of trustees' ban is that a dictatorial announcement from the state legislating against discrimination will not change the feelings in men's mind. It is a common truism that you may legislate against discrimination but it takes education to wage war on prejudice, the basic problem.

Pure legislation which only stirs trouble, where in most cases there was none existing, will serve no good purpose. The informal method of administration-student discussions on the subject has proven its worth right on this campus.

Several fraternities and sororities eliminated local discriminating clauses after the setting up of an informal student-administration committee to discuss the issue. The fight even went to many national conventions with a result that a few fraternities eliminated the national clauses.

Assuredly, education is a slow process. So is changing men's attitudes and beliefs. To cut down the tree rather than have it repair itself and grow anew seems to be an action of complete pessimism and lost faith in human integrity.

The legal aspects of the State university ban are also confused in reference to the Syracuse groups. Whether the state actually has any jurisdiction over these fraternities is to be questioned since they are in no way related to the state college and are separate entities units themselves.

Even when the medical school was a part of the Syracuse family, the medical fraternities were not considered a part of either the Syracuse fraternity system or the medical college system.

In demanding that all social groups disaffiliate with their parent organizations, the state is asking them to give up one of the main reasons for their existence. To belong to, socialize and meet with members of the same profession, classmates as well as men established in the profession is an opportunity that needs no explanation.

To make a blanket policy banning all groups, even those which have already complied; to forsake informal methods of eliminating discrimination for violent action; to push aside one of the fundamental ideas behind the fraternity system; to kill the patient rather than attempt a cure—for these things we oppose the resolution of the state board of trustees and protest its enforcement.

In Memoriam

We didn't know Joe Delaney very well.

He did most of his work in the afternoon; we did our work at night.

When we saw him, his head was usually bowed. He was constantly leaning over a chase or checking an ad or fixing a machine.

Joe was a printer. We also knew him as the warm-hearted foreman of the Orange Publishing company.

Yesterday the Great Printer locked up the chase and put Joe "to bed."

We join the entire journalistic and printing community of Syracuse in mourning the sudden passing of Joseph Delaney, a printer's printer.

THERE'S A HAPPY TIME AT ASTOR

Of such stuff Kinsey Reports are made. The story of a boy's awakening to the wonders of the world and the opposite sex is the theme of "The Happy Time," opening at the Astor theater tonight.

Third in a series of plays that have brought Broadway to Salina st., "Happy Time" stars Lisa Ferraday and Hurd Hatfield. Alan Jay Schnapier is featured in the role of the boy.

Miss Ferraday, who has the part that Eva Gabor created in the original production, has already achieved considerable fame.

She is probably the only person in Syracuse today who can truly lay claim to royal blood. The same actress who will play the part of a maid in tonight's production was born Lisa de Mezey, baroness of Transylvania.

She served as official translator at the Nuremburg war crime trials. Miss Ferraday has also been called a "dark haired Marilyn Monroe."

Hurd Hatfield is best remembered for his striking portrayal of the title role in the film "The Picture of Dorian Gray." He also appeared in "Dragon Seed" and "The Unsuspected." New York theater-goers saw him last season in a featured part in Tennessee Williams controversial "Camino Real".

The next attraction at the Astor will be "Mr. Roberts," which ran on Broadway for three years. It is expected to be one of the highlights of the current Syracuse season.

Audiences have already seen "Born Yesterday" and "The Man Who Came to Dinner." Both were rollicking comedies, and both were received with enthusiastic applause.

Vicki Cummings, Edward Everett Horton, Sherry Britton have already trod the Astor boards and such other luminaries as Joe E. Brown, Marlon Brando, and Paul Muni are scheduled to appear.

Muni will appear in "Home at Seven." This play will have its premiere engagement in Syracuse prior to a Broadway run. It is scheduled to open in New York two weeks after local audiences have viewed it here.

The plays at the Astor constitute a new idea in theater. The series is based on the premise that New York is not the only city which can financially support legitimate shows. Many national pulications, including "The New York Times" and Theater Arts magazine have devoted editorial space to the project.

Local theater-goers indicate that if the choice of future productions and casts is of the same caliber as the past two productions, the Astor idea will become a Syracuse institution.

LETTERARY COMMENT

Reverence for the J-school?

October 8 or 9, 1953
To: David M. Norton
c-o: The Daily Orange
Subject: The Old Women's gym

Wish to take issue with yours of the 7th, in which you state that a certain four walls etc on campus is "neither the Women's old gym or the Old Women's gym," but "the Journalism building."

If we had a copy of Hamlet on hand we'd quote "That it should come to this! But two months dead!" We of the Castle will never acknowledge the Old Gym for Old Women as the School of Journalism.

It may be that a journalism class or lab or two are held there, that the dean's office is located there, and that the resounding hums of the Fairchild engraving machine now echo from newly painted composition and wood walls there.

As walls do not a prison make nor iron bars a cage, so too the above do not a School of Journalism building make. We still have a small hope in our hearts that the Castle will not die. In spirit it will never die.

Let it be the Old Women's gym!

'Long haul to exams,' Don't talk a good game

By CHARLES C. NOBLE
Dean of Hendricks Chapel

NOTES ON SERMON ON SUNDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1953

It's a long haul from now to exams; in fact, it's a long haul to any goal worth striving for. Whether we are working for a winning football season or a world from which war has been banished, the sooner we get into a winning stride, the stronger we shall finish in the race.

If we set out toward the high aims of maturity, we had better wake up to the fact that we run in the presence of a well-filled grandstand. When we sing the alma mater, ten thousand Syracuse alumni stand with us. Few of us take football as seriously as Coach Tad Jones did when he said to the Yale team before they went out on the field to play Harvard: "You have a lifetime to exult or repent for what you do in the next 60 minutes." We can not, however, escape that principal. Over forty centuries look down upon us: there is no escaping the verdict from the grandstand of history.

No first-rate athlete would think of carrying excess weight into the game. But, we make that mistake all the time. We know that certain physical habits deplete our energies, yet we indulge in them. We clutter up our lives until we become bottlenecks of disorderliness.

If we are to arrive at our goals, we can not afford the luxuries of self-indulgence, snobbishness, prejudice and immorality. The millstone of guilt must be dropped from our necks, through our realization of the mercy of God. Sin is moral fatness. All of us need a measure of austerity. Now and then we should take a hard look at our moral profiles to be sure we are not suffering from obesity.

Too many people talk a good game, but forget that sweat and discipline are necessary. Modern university life is not for playboys. There is no substitute for the peril, toil, and pain by which man has always had to climb the steep ascent to achievement.

No long-distance struggle can well be endured and won without patience. We tend to become over-anxious and forget our timing. We need a long-term faith that even the stars in their courses fight on the side of righteousness, beauty, and truth. The disciplined man who has such a faith, like the skilled runner, knows when to sprint; he still has the extra spark at the end of the course.

RCA Victor offers the ultimate in High Fidelity Sound . . .
the ultimate in "Deluxe Edition" Albums

Thanks to RCA Victor and "New Orthophonic" High Fidelity recording, you can now enjoy, as never before, these two famous tone-poems by Respighi. For the first time, the colors and brilliance of these works are fully reproduced in this magnificent true-to-life sound.

Every delicate tonal shading—from the shimmering cascade of the Fountains to the blazing glow of The Pines of the Appian Way—is faithfully caught and delivered in this superb recording.

The combination of composer and conductor is ideal. Nobody plays Respighi like Toscanini. The two men were closely associated for many years. And Toscanini conducted the debut performance of The Fountains and the first American playing of The Pines.

And look what's added—14 gorgeous duo-tone photographs of the pines and fountains of Rome, also an accompanying text specially written by novelist Vincent Sheean.

All for the same price as a regular Red Seal album on 33⅓—only $5.72.

Price suggested list, including Federal Excise Tax. Add local tax.

HEARING AIDS

By DICK CASE

From way out in left field this past summer came the cry of the hunted. It moaned weakly on the West coast and rose to healthly gurgle in the Manhattan towers.

It was the sound of a very progressive new orchestra from the City College of Los Angeles.

It was a voice from the wilderness. A wilderness which had lain unconquered for over a decade: the college campuses. The same area which had given birth to the bands of Les Brown and Sonny Burke among others and which had nurtured the great groups of Benny Goodman, Glenn Miller and Woody Herman in their prime.

The area which, for more years than we would care to list, has lapsed into a distressing cult of jazz taste.

But, let's go back on this somewhat.

During December 1952, Metonome magazine inaugurated a nation-wide contest designed to sweep the college campuses in search of what the musical publication termed "new blood for the band business." As an incentive, collegiate musicians were offered a recording date with the Capitol company if their organization should be chosen the best college band in the country.

As things went, the judges (Stan Kenton, Billy May, Ray Anthony and the Metronome editors) looked upon the City College of Los Angeles Dance Band as the best. There were many other enthusiastic and encouraging entries including Andy Balent's group from Syracuse but the West Coast men showed the most promise.

Late last summer, the City College crew released the first of two platters made at the Capitol factory. The disbelievers, including yours truly, were frankly amazed.

This group made it plain, with some very emphatic chords, that there was some fertile talent to be cultivated among college musicians. The band's version of "September in the Rain" is very suggestive of something Shearing or Brubeck might do with a piano while the flip side, an original instrumental called "Cream Puff," sets out upon a swinging kick sparkling with originality.

I am rather quietly excited over this record by the fine group out of Los Angeles and what it may do for campus dance bands. In time, we may look back and note that this recording has opened the pearly portals once more for the talent hidden away among the ivy halls and that it will truly be a sound in the wilderness.

A few swing-loving partisans of good music have purchased this recording by the City College of Los Angeles Dance Band. I have. Just about 90 cents will do it. Then join me in prayer that happy days are here again.

Twice to Korea: 'First Trip Worst'

By FRANK McGUIRE

Two trips to Korea, six campaigns, several wounds, malaria, dysentery, frostbite and seven years of service (although only 22 birthdays) add up to Bill Westerfield of Collendale A-9.

Enlisting as an army private in July, 1950 after four years in the New York national guard, Bill was sent to Korea in December of that year. Assigned to the 23rd Infantry regiment, he was with them at the battles of Twin Tunnels, Chipyong-ni, the May Massacre and Heartbreak Ridge.

As he described the battle of Chipyong-ni—"We were surrounded for five days by several Chinese corps. We held out in weather that was always below zero until some tanks of the First Calvalry Division got to us. Then in a couple more months we were with the Second infantry division when they were caught in the famous May Massacre and almost wiped out. All this was in 1951."

The Third Battalion of the 23rd infantry was awarded three Distinguished Unit Citations for these engagements. Bill was a platoon leader of the mortar platoon of M company, 23rd infantry until he was sent home as a master sergeant after contracting malaria, dysentery, frostbite and wounds of several different origins.

For a reason unknown even to himself, Bill volunteered to go back to Korea in July, 1952 having been home only seven months. The request was granted and he rejoined the Second division in July. This time he received the job of division operations sergeant, not a small job.

While on this trip, he was in the battles for Old Baldy, a group of hills known as "The "T" Bone and Gibraltar. He picked up two more campaign stars on this trip and was sent home again in July, 1953, only three months ago.

Between trips Bill was first sergeant for a chemical mortar battalion during Operation Longhorn, the largest army maneuvers in history, held in Texas. Then he volunteered for his second Korean tour of duty, but according to Bill, "The first trip is always the worst."

A resident of Patchogue, Long Island, Bill is presently enrolled in the College of Business Administration. He holds the Bronze Star for Valor; his other decorations include the Combat Infantry Badge, the Purple Heart, Korean campaign ribbon with six battle stars, the UN service medal and the Distinguished Unit Citation with two Oak Leaf Clusters.

Along the Sidelines

By KEN LENT, DAILY ORANGE SPORTS EDITOR

Repercussions, some serious and some humerous, have been popping up all over the place after the Orangemen's 20-13 pulse-pounding win over Fordham and where the fun will stop nobody knows.

Primarily, discussion has centered around the "sleeper" play—a formation which most coaches have relegated to football's Limbo along with the mothball Statue of Liberty oldy—which Pat Stark pulled out of Syracuse's bag of tricks, dusted it off and exploited it to the tune of 79 yards.

Ed Danowski, the Rams' usually easy-going coach, had quite a bit to say about the play. According to an Associated Press release, Big Ed charged that the game officials were caught napping themselves just before the "sleeper."

You'll remember that Syracuse had just taken the ball over after a Ram drvie to the Orange 1-yard line. Stark lined up the team without a huddle and pulled off the play of the year.

Says Danowski, "They (the refs) didn't ask our co-captain, Jack Hyatt, whether we were set . . . we thought we still had possession until they said the foul occurred after the ball was dead. One official was still talking to Hyatt when Syracuse started the pass play."

Personally, although we admit being a mite prejudiced, we saw nothing wrong with the way the officials handled the situation. Stark told one of them while the Rams had the ball that Syracuse was going to pull the "sleeper" on the Orange's play from scrimmage.

The official okayed the move providing, as specifically stated in the rules, that no substitutions were made immediately beforehand. None was made. Incidentally, Al Michaels scouting for Penn State, called the play, ". . . one of the year's best calls."

Another circumstance occurring after the game concerned a typographical error which appeared in the acme of all newspapers, The New York Times. It seems that in the "official" statistics, Fordham's total yardage was reported as 454 yards. The actual total was 229.

By Monday's paper the error had not been caught by Arthur Daley, the Times' sports columnist, reported, "Fordham, anxious to stay unbeaten for its home opening at the Polo Grounds against Boston College on Friday night, gained 454 yards against Syracuse but bowed anyway, 20 to 13."

To quote the old proverb, "It's only human to make mistakes." We make a "few" on the DO too.

ORANGE SLICES: Gary (Rip) Coleman, rookie southpaw for the American Association's Kansas City Blues, is now enrolled in the School of Journalism. He just finished pitching in the Little World Series against the Montreal Royals . . . Syracuse will stay at the Penn-Belle Hotel in Bellefonte, Pa. for the first time since 1934 when it won its last game at Penn State.

Pat Stark who wasn't exactly a ball-of-fire in his first two games showed up well statistically. Pat complete six out of nine passes for 162 yards or almost half of the Syracuse total yardage . . Don Laaksonen did well also by averaging 8.4 yards in 11 carries.

BILL ORANGE SAYS: Pete Schwert's glue-fingered grab of a pass with two Ram defenders literally hanging on him was one of the outstanding performances of the game . . . It would be nice to see once again those snappy straw hats that the band wore in Miami. Man, were they cool!

Rejuvenated Rados Sparks Nittany Lion Grid Offense

By BOB LEFKO
Daily Orange Junior Editor

What was formerly a puzzle to Penn State has turned into a problem for the Nittany Lions' football opponents in the short space of one month. The character in this change is the Pennsylvanian's star quarterback, Tony Rados, who has dispelled any worries about his deficiencies during his squad's opening clashes.

Prior to the season's opener against Wisconsin, State coach Rip Engle was not too sure whether his star passer of 1952 was going to be good enough to even fill the far end of the bench. Two reasons were uppermost in Engle's mind as he took this gloomy view and either one was sufficient to make a coach's hair turn a bit whiter.

PASS-HAPPY TONY RADOS, co-captain of Penn State's Nittany Lions, is the man the Orange will have to stop in Saturday's battle at State College.

FIRST, THE 188-pound senior had undergone surgery on his damaged right knee and it was unknown whether he would be able to stand the football grind. In addition, the switch to one-platoon football was a big problem for Rados since he hadn't played on defense since high school.

As if this wasn't enough to make the Lions search for another field-general, the Steelton, Penna. slingshot reported to practice with a great surplus of weight, making the picture even gloomier.

In his search for a replacemen for Rados, Engle found little success and decided he had to go along with what had formerly been his best. It was a wise decision.

In the Lions' opening clash with Wisconsin, the Badgers controlled the ball throughout most of the game but Rados nevertheless managed to complete seven of 16 heaves, a respectable percentage.

THE FOLLOWING week against Penn, Rados filled the air with the pigskin, State completing 10 of 26 heaves for 156 yards and the lone State touchdown. In addition, many of his more accurate flips were dropped by over-anxious ends.

By now any fears that Rados was through had vanished and it became even more decisive last Saturday when he directed his teammates to a 35-13 win over Boston U., the same squad that sprung a major upset the week before by tying Syracuse.

Reports from Boston indicate that Rados was the whole difference in the game. The usually conservative Beantown writers really went overboard on the tall star as he fired three touchdown passes and directed two other scores. He finished the day with 11 completions in 16 attempts for 136 yards.

Last season a bad knee kept Rados out of pre-season practices but he came through during the season to lead the Nittanies to one of their most successful seasons. From all indications, he will again be a problem to Penn State opponents. He no longer has the status of a puzzle.

Phi Tau Defeats Dekes in Intras

By ART STERNBERG

Heading a full program of fraternity intramural football last night on soggy Hendricks field was the startling upset victory of Phi Kappa Tau over Delta Kappa Epsilon, 12-8. The defeat marked the second time in six years that the Dekes have lost to any opponent in regular season competition.

Other teams borrowed a page from Pat Stark's notebook by successfully using "sleeper" plays in each of the five games. However, most of the games were won by lopsided scores.

ZETA PSI, Kappa Phi Delta and Alpha Chi Rho showed overwhelming strength in beating their opponents, Lambda Chi Alpha, 26-0, Acacia, 29-0 and Alpha Tau Omega, 23-6, respectively. Defending intra champion Phi Delta Theta thrashed Sigma Phi Epsilon, 18-0.

The play of the evening was Pete Mutscheller's 60-yard run-back of a quick kick to aid in Sigma Chi's 15-0 victory over Delta Tau Delta.

In more closely fought games, Zeta Beta Tau beat Beta Theta Pi, 14-12, thanks to a safety and Phi Kappa Psi edged Delta Upsilon, 7-0, on a Bill Shaughnessy-to-Gayl Worstell-pass in the last 20 seconds.

Sigma Alpha Mu beat Alpha Epsilon Pi, 12-0, and Theta Chi squeaked by Kappa Sigma, 6-0, in the remaining contests.

Triangular Run Next For Orange Harriers

Fresh from a 21-40 victory over the Colgate cross-country team, the Orange thinclads have begun to prepare for the meeting this Saturday with Navy and St. John's in New York city.

Coach Bob Grieve was fairly well satisfied with his team's showing in its opening meet of the season, but has stressed the fact that beginning this weekend the competition will be much keener.

AS EXPECTED, Ray Osterhout paced the Piety harriers. Ray led all the way and wasn't even pressed for the lead once the meet stretched into the midway point. His finishing time of 27:00 indicates that he once again will be a contender for the national title.

The big surprise in the Colgate meet was the excellent showing of veteran Gene Parker. Parker outdistanced both of the Raider aces, Les Wallack and Russ Bradshaw, in finishing a strong second to the Hill captain.

Ed Alger, Les Vielbig, and Jim George, the three highly rated sophomores on the squad, came through with good showings in the initial varsity cross-country run. The first two placed sixth and seventh, respectively, with times of 28:40.1 and 29:09, while the 5 ft. 6 in. George came in tenth on the basis of a 31:01.8 time.

An ankle injury to Tom Coulter, Piety ace for the past two seasons, prevented him from finishing among the top ten. The injury, sustained before the race, hampered Coulter considerable throughout the five-mile course and he ended up in thirteenth place, five minutes, six and eight-tenths seconds behind the winning time.

COULTER LIKELY will have to take it easy for the next few days, in order to strengthen his ankle for the Saturday meet. The Orangemen would be considerably weakened if he could not run against Navy and St. John's.

HARIER BITS: In defeating the Red Raiders last Saturday, the Saltine runners stretched their undefeated streak to ten straight . . . This weekend's trip to New York will be the first of three for the Hill thinclads this season . . . They also meet Fordham and Iona there Nov. 7 and will compete in the IC4A meeting in the metropolis Nov. 16.

Fans' Forum Set For Maxwell Aud.

Fordham Grid Films Highlight '53 Opening

After one false start and a three-week delay, Fans' Forum will finally get its feet off the ground. The movies will be shown in Maxwell auditorium at 7:15 p.m. Wednesday.

It will be the movies of the Syracuse-Fordham game, flashed on the screen with one of the varsity coaches narrating. All those who wish to attend should show their ID cards. The Daily Orange has started these movies in the interest of the fans. It will give them a chance to see all of Syracuse's away games.

The Orange now take to the road for its next four games. In order to continue showing these movies the fan's support is needed.

Before the movies are shown, one of the coaches will answer questions. Not only can fans ask pertinent questions concerning last week's game but they can probe into the dark secrets of the Penn State team.

Then the movies will be shown.

Piety Sailors Win Tri-ad Trophy

Led by Jack Dickerson, the Syracuse university sailors won the Tri-ad trophy by outpointing both Colgate and Cornell in a series of six races held on Cayuga lake last Saturday.

The final score was Syracuse 19, Cornell 17 and Colgate 14. The Orange shippers won the title from defending champions Cornell.

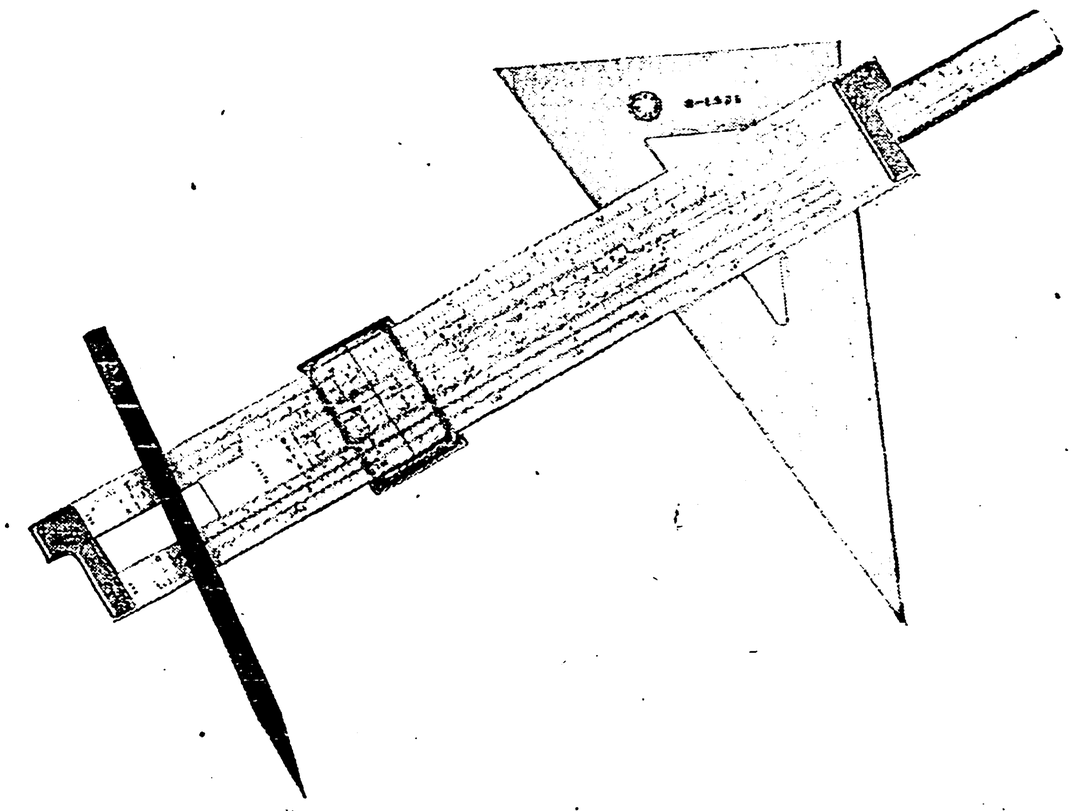
ENGINEERING SENIORS...

North American Aviation
Los Angeles
will interview here

OCTOBER 20



You'll find classmates—and a future—at Boeing!

Men from more than 120 top engineering schools are building rewarding careers at Boeing. So chances are, you'd be working with some of your classmates here. And in addition you'd be a member of an Engineering Division renowned for its trail-blazing contributions to both military and civil aviation.

If that's the kind of engineering prestige you'd like to enjoy, look into Boeing opportunities. This company has been growing steadily for 37 years.

It provides the finest research facilities in the industry. It offers you work on such exciting projects as guided missiles and the fastest known bomber in the world: the B-47 six-jet medium bomber, as well as the still-classified B-52 eight-jet heavy bomber.

You can work in Seattle, in the Pacific Northwest, or in Wichita, Kansas. Boeing provides a generous moving and travel allowance, gives you special training, and pays a good salary that grows with you.

Plan now to build your career as a member of Boeing's distinguished Engineering personnel after graduation. Boeing has present and future openings for experienced and junior engineers in aircraft

Scholarship Awards Given to Journalists

David Greenstone and Ruth Smith, both members of the Empire State School Press association, have been awarded four-year full tuition scolarships by Syracuse university.

The two students are winners of two contests held last week at the 16th annual convention of ESSPA, which met on the Hill.

GREENSTONE, MONROE High school, Rochester, was top man in the current events quiz and Miss Smith won honors in the news writing exam.

Both prizes were made at the banquet in Hotel Onondaga Friday night. Other awards were made to outstanding high school publications.

The convention was addressed at the banquet by Walt Kelly, creator and artist of the syndicated comic strip "Pogo." Kelly discussed the status of free speech in America.

The ESSPA convention ended with the students attending the Syracuse-Fordham clash as guests of the University.

Positions Available On MSG Staff

Positions on the attorney general's staff of men's student government are now open, according to Howard Osofsky, attorney general.

All men interested in joining the staff should call Osofsky at Sigma Alpha Mu, 75-9970, or 72-8302.

The staff prosecutes all disciplinary cases in men's student court against violators of University regulations, defends MSG and prosecutes cases involving disputes among students.

ORANGE KEY

Orange Key applications are now available in the office of the dean of men.

The Professor Who Couldn't Say "No"

OR . . . What to do when you can't afford to flunk

Once there was a Professor who was reluctant to Flunk the Team's Top Muscle-Man . . . a fullback named Printwhistle, of impressive Physical Proportions but intellectually a Lump. The Professor sought a Loophole. "Printwhistle," he said, "I am no pedant who believes that the sole purpose of education is to cram the Mind with Facts. Rather is its aim to broaden the Mind and make it more Productive. If you can come to me within 24 hours with one — just one — original and worthwhile Idea, I shall not Flunk you."

The dejected Printwhistle explained his Dilemma to his roommate. "Relax," said the latter. "Simplest thing in the world" . . . and he expounded a Stratagem.

Next morning the evidence was in. Telegrams . . . hundreds of 'em . . . on the Professor's desk, from practically everybody on the Campus. All bearing the same message: "Printwhistle must not Flunk. Old Black-trap needs him. This Approach is his Idea."

Did it work? Well, there's a certain All-American named Printwhistle whose voice shakes with grateful Emotion when anyone mentions Western Union in his Presence.

When you want to Swing a Deal . . . Telegrams work wonders. They're grade-A Date Bait, great for coaxing cash from home, practical for arranging anything from a Weekend to a Job Interview. When you want to get inside the Opponent's ten-yard line . . . let Western Union carry the ball.

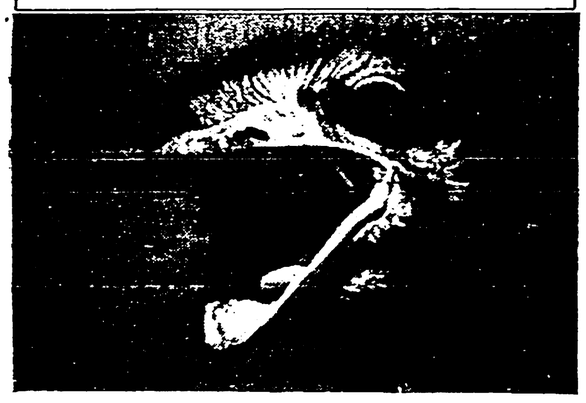
J. Paul Sheedy* Switched to Wildroot Cream-Oil Because He Flunked The Finger-Nail Test



"Go bury your head in the sand," shrieked Sheedy's chick. You'll never put a wing on my finger until you start using Wildroot Cream-Oil on that messy hair. It's America's favorite hair tonic. Keeps hair combed without any trace of greasiness. Removes goose, ugly dandruff. Relieves annoying dryness. Helps you pass the Finger-Nail Test." Paul looked so good the very fuzz time he used Wildroot Cream-Oil, his pigeon egged him on until he proposed. So why don't you buy a bottle or tube today at any toilet goods counter. And necks time you have a haircut, ask for Wildroot Cream-Oil on your hair. Then no gal will ever give you the bird.

Orange Substitute

RAMMY—NOT THE Fordham ram, however, but merely a reasonable substitute of the Central New York variety—got a look at last Saturday's Fordham-Syracuse game in Archbold stadium. From all appearances, though, what he's really eyeing up from his "pen" behind the Orange bench is the policeman.

Local Sheep Replaces Fordham Grid Ram

That "ram" tied behind the Syracuse bench at last Saturday's football game with Fordham university had a lot of the visiting fans from down New York way worried.

But it really wasn't the prized mascot of the Fordham team. It was only a sheep of the Central New York variety borrowed from a farmer.

A group of men from Sigma Alpha Mu went to New York Thursday night in an attempt to steal the real ram, but were foiled by an alert keeper at the animal's Bronx zoo quarters.

While returning on route 20 the men spied the substitute in a field and talked the farmer into lending it to them in return for tickets to the Cornell-Syracuse contest.

The "ram" grazed peacefully behind the bench during the game. Knicknamed "Rammy" he wore on his back an orange and blue Syracuse banner and appeared to pay more attention to a policeman that stood near him than at the play on the gridiron.

Sunday Hours Set For Library Use

Skeleton Staff to Stay On Afternoon Duty

The Main library will be open from 2 to 5:30 p.m. on Sunday for study and research beginning this week.

Both art and open shelf rooms will remain closed during the Sunday hours, however. A skeleton staff will be available to answer reference questions, circulate books from the stacks and provide special reference books for students.

Although all types of books will be available for use in the reading room, no books will be charged out during the Sunday hours under any circumstances. Special penalties will be invoked for any students breaking this rule.

The library will be closed on Sunday afternoons during vacation periods and a special two-week period at the opening of the second semester.

Sundays during which the library will be closed include. Nov. 29, Dec. 20 through Jan. 3, Jan. 31 through Feb. 7 and April 18. In addition to the vacation closing, the library will not be open on Feb. 14 and 21.

As the reading room is opening two months earlier this year, students are urged to cooperate with library personnel by obeying rulings which have been posted in the reading room so that the maximum number of students can use the facilities during the Sunday hours.

Chapel Continues Training Program

An explanation of the Chapel board program and the programs of the 16 associated committees will be featured at the meetings of the Chapel training program.

Co-chairmen of the Chapel board, Deane Lavender and Patricia (Rusty) Roden will lead the discussion.

A question and answer period will follow the discussion. The co-chairmen of the various committees will answer any questions that might arise concerning their respective committees.

The program, now in its first year, aims to familiarize the campus with the entire Chapel program.

Vice-president Frank Piskor and Dean Eunice Hilton of the College of Home Economics will speak to the group in the future. Dean Hilton will address a confined group of members of Chapel and TTK Nov. 3 in the Chapel Sanctuary.

Bids to Open Tomorrow for Construction of Engineering Building

Better Public Relations, Paint Job Spotlight Student Infirmary Work

By PEARL BERNSTEIN

A red and gray face-lifting job and a new drive for better public relations spotlight the studennt infirmary this year.

No longer will aesthetically inclined patients groan at the sight of the wooden frame building on Waverly ave. The outside walls are getting a coat of gray paint, with the doors bright red, and the inside is being repainted too.

Inconvenniences caused by daily shifting of the "entrance" sign from door to door of the building will soon be ended and business will go on as usual.

Keeping this "usual business" at an unusually high level is the particular concern of Dr. C. Arnold Cronk, the infirmary director. He feels that this can be best accomplished by better student-staff relations. To this end this freshman physical examinations will be eliminated starting next year.

No more will bewildered freshmen have to stand on hopelessly long lines to get physical "OK's". From now on the family doctor will do the examining and the frosh will only have to get chest x-rays, hearing and speech tests. These will be done by appointment.

Details have not yet been worked out, but it is felt that the new policy will do much to counteract the present "I never want to see that place again" attitude expressed by so many frosh after taking their physicals.

To further improve student staff relations, Barbara Burg and Joan Adelman, co-chairmen of the infirmary services committee, have proposed setting up an infirmary rep council.

This council would include reps from all campus living centers who would meet, probably monthly to discuss "gripes" suggestions and general infirmary policy and procedure. The staff is particularly interested in hearing student criticism and suggestions for improvements in service.

In answer to such a student demand, the visiting hours this year have been extended to include the hours from 2-8:30 p.m. An interesting sidelight is that the patients themselves obected to the influx of visitors. Thus limit of two visitors at a time had to be effected.

The new infirmary program is a long-range plan, and can only be accomplished with student support. Last year's senior class recognized this, and left the infirmary $332 for the purchase of a badly needed pressure suction pump and an ultra-violet lamp. Similar support by other student groups can do much to improve the entire infirmary set-up.

Publications Search for Coed Editors

Mademoiselle, Vogue Offer Jobs, Paris

Mademoiselle and Vogue magazines have begun their annual search for college girls who show talent in the journalistic field.

Mademoiselle's College Board contest is open to all coeds. To enter, the contestant must purchase a copy of the August 953 College issue and criticize it in about 1,500 words. The candidate must first write a general discussion of the issue and then prepare a detailed criticism of a special section. The deadline is November 30.

EARLY IN DECEMBER, some of the contestants will be selected to become members of College Board. They will then be given three assignments as a MLLE reporter on campus. Outstanding campus reporters will be selected to become guest editors. As a guest editor the coed will win a round trip to New York and have a salaried job on Mademoiselle for the month of June. Guest editors will cover parties, the theater and interview celebrities in their field of interest.

Only seniors are eligible for Vogue's Prix de Paris. A year on Vogue as a junior editor with six months in its Paris office is the first prize. Transportation and salary are paid by The Conde Nast Publications Inc. Second prize is six months as a junior editor in Vogue's New York office.

Even if the contestant does not win, Vogue has top-ranking jobs and opportunities. Interviews will be arranged by Vogue. Using the magazine as a text book, the coed will complete two quizzes on actual editorial problems. She may then be eligible to write a 1,500 word paper to finish the contest. The first quiz is in the August issue. All competitors must be enrolled by Thursday, October 15.

Any further details may be obtained in the Dean of Women's office.

SAI Will Sponsor Musical Program

Sigma Alpha Iota will sponsor a music competition contest, Sally Alger, president of the local chapter announced.

Vocal, instrumental and ensemble numbers will be accepted. The winning compositions will be performed at the Sigma Alpha Iota—Phi Mu Alpha program in the School of Music's concert and recital series.

The contest deadline is October 31. Applications for entrants are available at the Music Office of Crouse college.

Candidates Must Return Petitions

Deadline for petitions for freshman class officers and men's student government assemblymen is 5 p.m. today.

Petition forms are still available in the MSG office, Building 30. They must be returned to civil service.

ASSEMBLYMEN petitions must be signed by at least 20 members of the group the candidate desires to represent, while forms for class officer must have 25 signatures from freshmen.

Political parties have already selected their candidates for the Class of 1957 president, vice president, secretary and treasurer. Independents may run for these positions by submitting petitions to civil service.

Under the revised assembly elections act passed last year, members of the MSG legislature will be selected in campus-wide balloting running concurrently with frosh elections Oct. 28. The 36-man assembly will include at least three Greeks, three independents and one city student.

Voters for assemblymen will be allowed a maximum of nine choices.

Lists of candidates for both MSG and class offices will be released by civil service Oct. 21 and campaigning will begin that day. Parties may make both assembly and class candidates, but names on the MSG ballots will not be associated with parties.

KEY APPLICATIONS

Applications for Orange Key, junior men's honorary, are available in the dean of men's office. They must be returned by Oct. 20.

Kaffeine Kids Elect Mayor of Koffee

Rigolosi, Miss Beecher Vie in Hot Kontest

Frenzied balloting ended yesterday in the hotly contested race for the title of "Mayor of Marshall St."

Vote-counting continued late into the night, with Election Commissioner Eliabzeth Brydon promising final results sometime today.

Vieing for the post were Corrine Beecher and iVncent Rigolosi.

THE CANDIDATES have campaigned vigorously since Friday, buttonholding coffee-drinkers in Marshall st. establishments and residents of campus living centers.

The usual campaign pledges were made, with the emphasis on promise of free bubble gum and coffee. Voting opened at 9 a.m. Monday, with each candidate soliciting his own votes.

Those eligible to vote included all regularly enrolled students who are seen drinking coffe on Marshall st. at least four out of every six days. Marshall st. was officially defined as the area between the Varsity restaurant and the University branch of the post office.

The winner of the contest must answer all complaints concerning Marshall st. establishments or service. The loser must carry the winner piggy-back down the length of the Marshall st. area.

CANADIAN STUDENTS

Although Canadian students on Syracuse university campus are citizens of a nation on the North American continent, they are considered foreign students by customs and university officials.

Immigration laws are the same for them as for students from other foreign lands and visa troubles soemtimes identical or similar to those of their Asian or European brothers.

Tickets Available For Cornell Game

Student and public tickets for the Cornell-Syracuse football game at Ithaca Nov. 7 are on sale at the Athletic Office in the Men's gymnasium.

Student organizations desiring block seating must act promptly. The deadline for this type of seating will be Oct. 31, Harold Michaels, ticket manager, announced.

Representatives seeking block seating must present the following: list of persons in the group; student exchange tickets; I.D. cards, and $1.80 for each ticket. This half-price of $1.80 applies only to Syracuse undergraduates.

Individual sales will be made directly over the counter, Mr. Michaels said. Public tickets are priced at $3.60.

Counter sales and block seating will be made on the basis of "first come, first served".

Guild Announces Operetta Tryouts

All persons interested in operetta participation have been urged to audition for roles in "HMS Pinafore," which will be presented by the Syracuse Operetta Guild early next spring.

Frank Massoth, director of the guild, said yesterday that auditions for lead roles at 8 p.m, will be held Oct. 19 and Oct. 26 in Clark Music bldg., 4th floor. General singing auditions will also be held at that time for persons interested in joining the chorus for the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta.

The organization is a non-profit community organization. Persons interested in other phases of the production of the operettas are also welcome, according to Mas-

Popular Forces Demand Pogo to Seek Presidency

Pogo for president.

After a year of pulling an Adlai Stevenson, Pogo the possum has finally given in to overwhelming popular demand and will seek the presidency of the United States in 1956. The statement was released Friday to The Daily Orange by Pogo's papa, cartoonist Walt Kelly.

WITH DEMANDS for "I Go Pogo" buttons nearing the three-quarter of a million mark, the possum has decided to make plain his position beresulteede in a moral victory for the newly-formed party and its candidate. Kelly noting several reasons for failure in ultimate achievement stated: "In a campaign of so much hair-splitting between candidates, our standard-bearer had too much hair to split to be able to last the whole campaign."

The 1952 campaign swept U. S. campuses and cause of ugly rumors of a "draft."

Observers noted that Albert the alligator, who has recently emerged from the smoke-filled room, will probably again be Pogo's campaign manager. The possum is titular head of the Swamp Roots party.

Okeefeenokee Swamp's first citizen has been reluctant to run because of the heavy responsibilities of office. However, because of the great need for funds to keep the conservation department out of the swamps, the possum can not afford to pass up the graf—(oops!), political patronage.

Part Scheduled For Construction Within Weeks

Bids for construction of the basement and sub-basement of engineering building two, to be located south of Machinery hall and west of Slocum hall, will be opened at 2:15 p.m. tomorrow in room 111 Maxwell.

Part of the $3.5 million engineering and research construction program will start in several weeks if a satisfactory bid is received.

A SMALL portion of the rear of Machinery hall and the greenhouse will be removed to make way for the building. The two floors of the proposed structure will contain a gross area of 20,160 feet.

Provision will be made for a future addition of four more floors and a southerly extension to be built at a cost of approximately $1 million.

Bids for construction of engineering building one, slated to be built south of Smith hall, will be opened on Nov. 4, Clark D. Ahlberg, assistant dean of the College of Engineering, told The Daily Orange yesterday.

Building one will be a four-story structure housing chemical, civil, industrial and electrical engineering laboratories. It will have a gross area of 58,482 square feet.

Building two will house mechanical, electrical and aeronautical engineering labs, the engineering library, administration offices, drafting rooms, and the Institute of Industrial Research.

TARGET DATE for completion of building two is the period from December 1954 to September 1955. Exteriors will follow the current architectural style of the University, brick facing with limestone trim.

Construction of the two buildings will be a step in the development of the east quadrangle to be devoted largely to science and engineering. Additional classroom buildings on southerly and northern sides of the quad are planned.

The engineering campus, located at Thompson rd. since the purchase of that property from the government following world war II, is in a state of flux at the present, with all engineering labs expected back on the main campus by next September.

Sale of the Thompson rd, campus to Carrier corporation a year ago started the move. Dean of Engineering Ralph Galbraith and his staff have been working with the University Design board since that time on plans for the new buildings.

Bus Ad Will Hold Placement Convo

First job placement convocation for business administration and non-technical male students will be held at 2:15 p.m. tomorrow in 117 Lyman.

The purpose, according to the placement officials is to introduce seniors to the function of the placement office. Representatives will explain the scope and types of positions available and they will review current company listings.

tor of the bus ad placement servtor of the bus ad placement sercice, said yesterday that the job market at present is good.

Even though some seniors have already made post-graduate plans, Phipps said, they are requested to participate in the placement program so that the placement office can follow their progress and maintain students records.

This will be the first of a series of three convocations.

Hygiene Sign-ups Slated for Chapel

Sign-ups for the social hygienne lecture series will be held from 10 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 4 today in the Chapel.

Discussion periods and lectures by outside speakers will be included in the seven-week series which is limited to 60 people.

"The Doctor Looks at Marriage" the first lecture, will be held at 4:15 p.m. Tuesday Oct. 20 in 110 Maxwell.

Military Honorary Will Meet Today

Scabbard and Blade, national military honorary, will hold its first meeting at 7:30 p.m. today in 301 Machinery hall. Uniforms will not be required, according to Eugene Seymour, president of the local organization.

First Night A-Bomb Raid Slated for Campus Corner

By TOM LONG

Syracuse university will be the site of the first night A-bomb attack in New York state. The mock bombing is scheduled for 4:15 a.m. on November 21.

The corner of University ave. and College pl. is ground zero for the attack. The bombing will involve the entire city which will be divided into four zones of activity.

REPRESENTATIVES from the state civil defense commission will meet with officials from Onondaga county and six surrounding counties on Nov. 19 and 20 in the War Memorial to complete plans for the test.

State Civil Defense Director General C. R., Huedner will arrive in Syracuse today to discuss preliminary details with local officials.

Civil Defense classes were conducted during the summer in preparation for the event. Dr. Benjamin P. Burtt, civil defense radiology chief and a professor on the Hill instructed members in the locating and measuring the intensity of radio active particles.

The state ordered training exercises will be under the local direction of Thomas P. Ballantyne, civil defense director for Onondaga county.

LAST NOVEMBER a similar test was conducted with Clinton Square in downtown Syracuse as ground zero. At that time Archbold gymnasium was one of the field hospitals set up for the emergency and university students took part in the event.

The six counties surrounding Syracuse, Seneca, Cayuga, Jefferson, Oneoneta, Cortland, and Oswego will be involved in the attack according to Richard F. Torrey public information officer for Onondaga county.

Sitte Sheds Light On Electron Origin

Research Conducted During Summer

Prof Kurt Sitte, Syracuse physics professor has shed new light on the origin of electrons found in cosmic ray showers.

The cosmic ray expert who will leave for Brazil tomorrow announced that studies made at altitudes of 10,000 to 14,000 feet show that scientists must search further if they want to explain the existence of some of the electrons in the atmosphere.

"UNKNOWN PARTICLES or unknown processes must be involved in the creation of many electrons," he said. "Too many electrons are produced at high altitudes to be explained by present theories."

The research was conducted this summer at Echo Lake and Mt. Evans, Col., by Prof Sitte and his group of four doctoral students and a Syracuse graduate. It was part of a more extensive project on cosmic ray interaction at high energies sponsored by the Atomic Energy commission.

Prof. Sitte is going to South America as a visiting professor at the University of Sao Paulo in Brazil. His work here will be continued by Assistant Prof. Paul Barrett during his absence.

Those graduate students who participated in the three-month project in Colorado are Joseph Askowith, Fritz Froelick, Irving Nadelhaft and Donald Stierwalt. Irving Kofsky, a former student of Prof. Sitte and a Syracuse graduate now on the faculty of Smith college, Northampton, Mass., also took part in the summer project.

Photos on Dance On Display Now

A photographic exhibit on dance is now on display in the dance studio of the Women's building. Loaned by the San Francisco Museum of Art, the display may be viewed today and tomorrow between 4:30 and 5 p.m., and between 1:30 and 4:30 p.m. on Friday.

The photographs explaining basic dance techniques were posed for by members of the Halprin-Lathrop Studio of San Francisco. Second-year photographers of the California School of Fine Arts took the pictures.

The main theme of the display emphasizes how, through participation of the child, family, layman and professional, the dance speaks to the community.

Burton Plans Trip For NY Meeting

Philip W. Burton, chairman of the advertising department, will attend the annual meeting of the board of directors of the Advertising Federation of America on Friday at the New York Advertising club in New York city.

Prof. Burton is also the national president of Alpha Delta Sigma, professional advertising fraternity.

The federation represents advertising clubs throughout the United States and promotes cooperative activities between the clubs and their communities.

Syracusans Chosen For Model Panel

Students to Attend National Meeting

A team of five Syracuse students has been selected to act as a model panel at the first meeting of Panel of Americans, inc., on Nov. 24 at the Savoy Plaza hotel in New York City.

Panel of Americans, a nationwide organization only recentiy incorporated, sends out teams of students to speak to service, church, and school organizations.

EACH PANEL consists of a moderator plus a Protestant, Catholic, Jew, Negro, and second generation American student. They speak on their beliefs and attitudes toward America.

The movement was organized on the University of California campus and soon spread throughout the country. Its purpose is to counteract prejudice and discrimination based on racial, religious, national or ethnic group membership, creating interest in the problem in local community groups.

The panel organized at Syracuse last year was so successful that it was chosen to serve as a model at a meeting of selected professional, educational and clerical group leaders in New York City.

Any students interested in joining such a panel should contact the co-chairmen Rev. Arnold Nakijima and Miss Elizabeth Evans, Dean Noble's executive secretary, in the Chapel.

Panel of Americans is not a Chapel group but leaders there assumed the responsibility for its organization at Syracuse.

Group to Sponsor Secretarial Exam

The third annual certified professional secretary examination will be held here Friday and Saturday, Miss Dorothea Chandler, assistant professor of secretarial science in the College of Business Administration announced.

The 12-hour certifying examination covering skills, techniques, and basic knowledge of the various phases of secretaryship is sponsored by the National Secretaries association. Secretaries passing all parts of the exam will be notified and receive CSP certificates.

The first day of testing, which covers human relations and business law, is scheduled to begin at 8:30 a.m., Friday, in University College. Saturday tests are planned in 102 B Slocum.

Sophs to Convene Hutton Announces

The initial meeting of the sophomore senate will be held this week, Jim Hutton, sophomore class vice-president has announced.

Announcement of time and place will be made later in the week.

All fraternity, sorority and independent living center presidents have been asked to elect or appoint their representative to the senate before the first meeting.

Rushing Scheduled For Fraternities

Registration Slated For Men's Gym

Campus fraternities swing into formal rushing this weekend, with three series of rushing sessions scheduled.

Freshmen and transfer students, to be eligible for the formal rushing, must register at the Men's gymnasium, 1:00-6:00 p.m. today. They also must pay the $2.00 rushing fee at this time.

At registration, the rushees will indicate which houses they want to visit during formal rushing. Fraternity representatives will pick up the names of rushees interested in their houses, at 9 a.m. tomorrow in room 309 H.L.

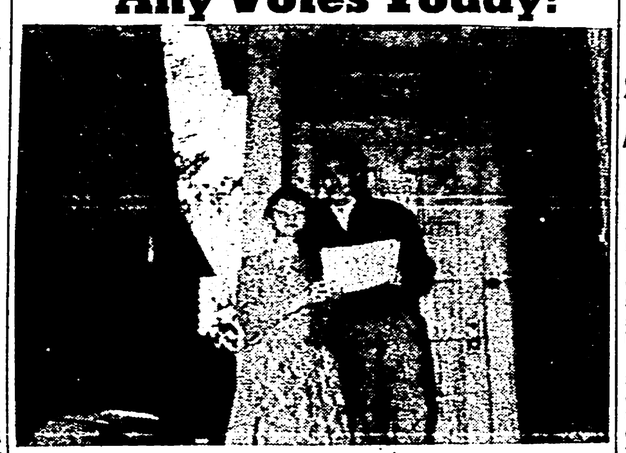
Invitations may be given to these rushees between 7 and 10 p.m. Thursday night, and must be given in person. Upon contacting the rushees, the fraternity representatives should designate which series (A, B, or C) of rushing sessions they are to attend.

Times for the sessions are: Friday, Oct. 16, 5:45-7:15 p.m., 7:30-8:45 p.m., 9-10:15 p.m.; Saturday, Oct. 17, 12:30-2 p.m., 2:15-3:30 p.m., 3:45-5 p.m.; Sunday, Oct. 18, 12:30-2 p.m., 2:15-3:30 p.m., 3:45-5 p.m. Each series will be matched with its letter designation (A, B, or C) in the Friday edition of the Daily Orange.

Rushees should file their preference cards for pledging from 1-6 p.m. in the Men's gym, listing three houses in order of choice, and fraternities should submit their bids at the gym between 5 and 6 p.m. the same day.

Formal rushing will be concluded on Tuesday, Oct. 20, when the rushees pick up their designation cards at the Men's gym from 1-6 p.m. The acceptance of the designation card obligates the rusheee to pledge the accepted house, and he should report to that house immediately to insure against the possibility of any error.

Any Votes Today?



TWO CITIZENSHIP 1a students are seen as they canvass one of the voting districts in Syracuse. The students tried to visit every home in the city to remind the citizens of their duty to register for the November elections. However, in spite of the students' hard work, the registration in this city was below last year's total.

Senior Assembly Meets Tomorrow

The first senior assembly meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow in Maxwell auditorium, according to Barbara Suchy, vice-president of the senior class.

Thomas Beckett, editor of the Onondagan, will speak to the assembly and request the aid of the seniors in supporting the yearbook.

The executive council will be introduced by John Beach, president of the senior class. In addition, nominations of the assembly officers will be held. Elections will be held at the next meeting.

Each upperclass house is requested to send one representative to the meeting. This representative is to be elected by the seniors in the house.

Seat on the 50

Tonight, Syracuse students will have a seat on the 50-yard line at one of the Orangemen's most exciting games in recent years, last Saturday's breath-taking win over Fordham. The time: 7:15 p.m. today. The place: Maxwell auditorium. The event: the first Daily Orange Fans' Forum of the year.

The price of admission for the Forum is one ID card complete with student. See for yourself once again the controversial "sleeper" play, Pete Schwert's impossible catch, Ted Kukowski's outstanding line play and the pull-together team spirit of one of Bill Orange's proudest elevens.

You will get a chance to chat with Ted Dailey of the Syracuse coaching staff. You can ask him questions about the team, last week's game or the coming Penn State test. If you've ever wanted to get the "inside dope" on Syracuse football, tonight provides your chance. See you at the Forum.

Footprints in the mud?

Yesterday's Daily Orange cartoon showed what happened to one young man who walked across the new quadrangle. His roommate was left to chisel the thick mud tracks from the floor.

This cartoon depicted one of the problems created by the present campus landscaping project. The student had probably been in a hurry to get to a class and had taken the shortest distance between two points—right through the middle.

True, some of the walking time between the eastern and western ends of the area has been slightly increased because of the new paths. However, the few extra seconds that it might take to square the corners are certainly not enough to compensate for all the troubles caused.

First there's the possibility of leaving foot prints in the ground for posterity. Neither the architect nor the student body would care to see small hills and valleys where there should be plains.

Next, the workmen do not appreciate the opportunity to do their work a second time.

Then there's always the chance that corner-cutting and jay-walking will become a habit. And then what will happen to the grass when it begins to grow? No chance for survival.

Lastly, when you're tempted to make a "straight through the middle play" just think of your poor roommate. He or she might not have a chisel available.

Almost post-time

In one week's time the bell will sound and the campus political race will be on!

This became more than evident during the week when the freshmen candidates for class office were announced. Tomorrow the names of the students running for the men's student government assembly will also be released.

Forty posts will have to be filled in the joint frosh-MSG elections on Oct. 28. Twice or three times that number of candidates will be running.

This means that campaigning will have to be more intense and widespread than ever before. A larger number of candidates will have to reach a larger number of students—all in the one week preceding the election, the only legal time for campaigning.

There will be speeches, posters, car parades, flyers, sound trucks, and electioneering. To some students this intense activity will prove of little interest. These are the same students who take no part in any government: campus, local, state or national These are also the people who have no right to complain when their own ideas are not tried or when the elected officers do not carry out plans as they would like.

So within the next two weeks, familiarize yourself with the names and records of the candidates for whom you will have the opportunity to vote. After campaigning begins, make an effort to meet as many of these candidates as possible. Learn their platform and thier ideas.

This, then, will be the process of democracy in action, class and student government can begin to function with the knowledge that they have student support, and the individual voter will have guaranteed himself the right of thoughtful criticism.

Read . . . listen . . . think . . . vote.

An Evening at the Paramount

The Cinemascope

By ART SIEGEL

Managing Editor

CinemaScope Hollywood's newest—and soundest—attempt at creating a new medium for motion pictures, made a favorable impression on Schine's Paramount's packed house last night. The audience saw the premiere of "The Robe."

The most significant part of the whole evening was the realization that for the first time in the long Hollywood history of inventing new "gimmicks" for the screen, the producers attempted to experiment initially with a film that could also be termed "good" according to conventional standards.

While the film did not live up totally to the expectations that scenario critics might expect, it was a notable motion picture and made for an enjoyable two and one-half hours.

The story adapted from Lloyd C. Douglas' novel, "The Robe," was ideally suited to the new panoramic medium. Whether musical comedies and straight drama will be equally at home in CinemaScope remains to be seen.

It was a difficult picture to bring to any screen. The novel deals with a fictional plot in a real background. It centers on the conflict in the early days of Christianity—of the difficulty in changing beliefs when the beliefs were completely foreign to contemporaries and their ancestors. While the directing was not good, according to ordinary standards, Henry Koster deserves credit for a good passable job in the initial attempt at filling a screen two and one-half times wider than the conventional screen.

As often happens, the supporting players were far superior to the principal actors. Tall, articulate Michael Rennie as Simon - called - Peter virtually stood alone on that gigantic screen as he spoke the word of his Lord.

Jay Robinson probably enjoyed playing the conceited and raving Emperor Caligula. We enjoyed his portrayal as much as he did—he would make a cruel, but effective lord and master of Rome any day of the week.

Victor Mature was not too effective as the slave, Demetrius, who found Christ's robe and began to aid in his followers' search for understanding among the Romans. Perhaps his stilted acting and lack of notice to the emotions called for by the story, were due to neglect of that important role by the scenario writer.

Richard Burton, not a bad actor, seemed to miss the feeling of the story, too. He was confused over what kind of man Marcellus, the unbeliever, was really supposed to be—a lost man, not a raving madman. Tiberius — and Mr. Burton — thought the character should have been mad. Lloyd Douglas didn't.

Jean Simmons was wonderful as Diana because she didn't inject depth into a role that required none.

The color was the picture's worst feature. At times presenting panoramic views that looked like authentic biblical paintings, at other times the color was obscured by solid hues that crept over the whole screen.

Music was excellent. Although at times, the music made each scene appear too anticlimatic, the use of several sound tracks and compensative speakers for the first time made the sound a vital part of the overall effect.

A CENTURY OF PIANOS, STEINWAY

Steinway the man of Steinway the piano will be dropping into Syracuse shortly as part of an international salute to the centennial of the company who's name has become as synonamous with the piano as that of Stradivarius with the violin.

The music-warmed walls of Carnegie hall will give way next Monday for the 100th anniversary celebration of Steinway & sons piano corporation in the presentation of a unique concert.

Thirty-four well-known pianists will perform in this program which will feature the New York Philharmonic-Symphony under the direction of Dimitri Mitropoulos. The artists, appearing in groups of ten, will number Alexander Brailowsky, Casadesus, Novaea and Ania Dorfman among others.

The First Quartet and the Symphony will premier Morton Gould's "Inventions" composed for the occasion. The pianists will perform Josef Hoffmann's arrangement of "The Star-Spangled Banner," Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" and Chopin's "Polonaise" in A major.

The Steinway celebration will get a nation-wide send-off Sunday when Ed Sullivan's Toast of the Town" will preview the Centennial Concert on the CBS-TV network. Ten pianists will stage a concert dress rehearsal before the television cameras and Mr. Sullivan will interview Theodore E. Steinway from the stage of Carnegie hall.

The centennial gaiety, to which this concert will be the opening salute, will feature comparable musical events in over 200 American cities and 57 foreign countries. The Clark music company of Syracuse is currently formulating plans for their part in the celebration which will include the visit by Mr. Steinway.

It will continue throughout the 1953-54 musical season.

Technique Of 'Robe' Screen

By ROGER HERZ

The premiere of CinemaScope leaves this reviewer with the following thoughts:

Cinerama puts YOU, the seeing-eye audience, in the picture.

3-D puts the picture, in the form of flaming arrows, leaping lions and flung bodies in YOU.

CinemaScope allows YOU to take a look at the picture in question.

The screen is a "Magic Mirror." This allows a view of light-colored scenes on nine, count them, nine vertical strips instead of one surface. It's a diversion.

Sound is stereophonic. This entails four sound tracks with matching loudspeakers. It adds little in overall effect, as any dimensional character it provides is cancelled out by an echo quality when an actor's voice is heard from two sources.

An admirable step taken in "The Robe" was the occasional use of sustained loud sound. Sound in quantity can sometimes be impressive.

Opinion: This is the most successful of the devices introduced within the past year to bolster the motion picture industry. Devices alone will become insignificant and once again the plot photography and acting will interest the public and mean lucre at the B. O.

Opinion: CinemaScope will probably be used in a limited number of films after time grants perspective. Such cinema will be largely films in which panoramic views play a part. Good process. Ain't a panacea.

Lines on Impression

By HUGH O. MUIR

"Bustling Bop in the fullness of Baroque Seeks for an answer buried in smoke."

The Age of Bop
John Williams '50

Poets have been labled as dreamy men. A man of the class of '50 and English Lit has turned out a book of poetry that would label him quite well, if nothing was known about him but the printed lines.

John Williams graduated from Syracuse three years ago. He now is on the thesis that may bring him a Master's to add to the BA. His thin gray volume of 23 poems is a study in descriptive observation.

As a reader, if you will join us we found most of Mr. Williams' lines to be apt and very visual descriptions: to wit:

"The streetlights blink out making weird
tinny sounds on the still, expressionless face of morning . .
In the distance a train whistle blows, and then as if hearing itself, dies away to an apologetic whine out among the dull, black hills."

Prelude to an autumn day: 1946

Seven years have been the envelope collecting the poems for this publication. To keep the mind of dreams physically sustained, Mr. Williams, at 28, is a correspondent for Jet and Ebony magazines.

Some of the non-rhyming lines have been printed in Poetry Book magazine, Experiment and our Dilemma. A born native of Jackson, Mississippi, he is a 27-year-old man of the city of Syracuse.

Jackson writes of familiar non-entities. We curl the page to the fourth leaf:

"His back slouched, and excellently casual,
The Cool One, finely draped, swings practiced
Eyes disdainfully, walks apart from the Epidemic crowds of summer
New York."

The Cool One

Or:

". . . while the bop-glassed
kitty plays is real cool in the corner with darting eyes noting the working girls and prospects who un-ryth-mic-'ly beat their feet under the beer-bottled tables . . ."

Impression

Philosophy is the frame with which to make the satirical line. The Iconoclast that is Jackson also makes an appearance:

"Children spawned on cherry trees,
Children bashed with honest
Abe . . .
Children nursed on Nathan Hale,
Children doped on John Paul
Jones . . ."

The Myth

There is the cursing of war, both Civil and I & II. Three of the poems are radio script style but their vitality is lost to the reader due to the obvious necessity for sound.

Mr. Jackson is a man of interest, a young Negro whose gods are Emily Dickenson, Carl Sandburg or Walt Whitman, but whose idols are none. His freedom is stated in his own words . . . that:

"Man has dictated his every mood, sin,
Action and thought in the history of the Mind . . ."

An Evening at the Theatre

At 'Happy Time'

By JOAN NADELHAFT

Daily Orange Drama Critic

When a young French boy becomes a man, it is not good for him to have an uncle who drinks wine from a water cooler or a grandfather and another uncle famous for their amorous prowess. Or so the mother in "The Happy Time" at the Astor theater believes.

These men, however, are individuals of rare philosophy, who neither steal, lie or cheat, and manage to tell the youngster the facts of life in charming, original fashion.

The play gets off to a slow start, but picks up in the second act, and trots merrily along to an amusing finish. The acting is good. Some of the characters are notable, but all are more than adequate.

Alan J. Shnapier, who we are told, is really the twelve-year-old he portrays was fine. His timing was good for a youngster that age, and he had a feeling for the lines. We noticed a slight New York accent, which did not sit too well with the French tone but it was a minor thing and did not detract from the play.

Hurd Hatfield, as the handsome, roving uncle displayed tremendous verve. He was dashing, debonair and very very French. He was thoroughly at home in the part.

Lisa Ferraday was charming as the love interest, but the part is a strictly ingenue role, and does not give her talents any range, except to look pretty, which she does with excellent grace.

The uncle who drinks wine from a water cooler, more often than others drink water, was one of the high spots in the play. His lines were gems, and Jacques Aubuchon's deep voice was perfect to deliver them. This uncle is a little slower than the rest of the family.

In fact, he wistfully notes the theme of the comedy when he looks around at the comfortable Bonnard living room and says "there is a lot of love here." The play emphasizes that different kinds of love are important to living-filial, brotherly and sexual.

As in many comedies, there are many underplayed lines, which when examined denounce tyranny, hypocrisy and misguided moralists.

The tyrant is our own Ken Bowles, who at last, is on stage for more than five minutes. In his most regal Richard III manner, he tries to withstand the forces of love and decency as personified by the Bonnard brothers en masse when they march to save their son and nephew's honor.

Frank Wilcox plays his best role in the Astor series to date as the grandfather who simply will not stop wooing, even though it endangers his life. "If anyone knows a better way to die, let him step forward," he says.

Maman, played by Ann Summers, was a well-defined protrait. Miss Summers showed a fine grasp of technique. She was the ideal mother, loving, and exceptionally understanding.

The audience, unresponsive at first, warmed up as the play did, and by Act III were completely engrossed. Another one we do not hesitate to recommend.

Along the Sidelines

By KEN LENT, DAILY ORANGE SPORTS EDITOR

Every so often a story comes over the wires which gives the average fan a jolt shaking his faith in the human race and in the world of sports in particular. Such a story is one which was datelined Philadelphia following Villanova's victory over Boston College last Sunday.

The item, released by United Press, told of a fourth-period "skirmish" between a Villanova and a Boston College player. Briefly the story was this. It seems that the home team Wildcats recovered a Boston fumble and a brief flurry of fists followed the play. An action not considered unusual for a college football game.

One of the players involved in the scramble was Jim Coghlin, a BC guard. He was taken out of the game at that point and while walking away from the field, he was struck by Joe Faragalli, the Villanova captain.

The story described Faragalli as hitting the Eagle lineman in the back "with what appeared to be a forearm blow." Coughlin dropped to the ground and officials separated the two before any more punches could be thrown.

That is the story in brief, but get this. For Faragalli's obviously illegal action, the referees did nothing—absolutely nothing. Faragalli was allowed to remain in for the rest of the game!

Assuming that the release has all the facts straight, it seems that a major sport such as football would do something about a situation such as this. It is significant that the paper in which the item appeared chose to put it in double-column, bold-faced type thus emphasizing the importance of the action.

Almost the same occurrance happened two years ago in a mid-west contest between Drake university and Oklahoma A & M in which pictures clearly showed one defender slugging Johnny Bright, Drake's star halfback who was then leading ground gainer in the nation.

Drake withdrew from the Missouri Valley conference in protest at the action. What will be done about the most recent occurence, we don't know. At least we have yet to see anything on it aside from the story itself.

Some could argue that it's easy to lose one's temper in a football game. So that when there are such "skirmishes" that they should be forgotten because "it's bad publicity for the school."

It's true that such action is bad publicity, but this action should not go unpunished. The officials should not let such a game get out of hand. If fights occur, the least which could be done is the removal of the offenders from the game.

It will be interesting to see what is the outcome of the Villanova-BC incident. Football is for the people. And what the people want to see is football. When they want to see fights, they'll pay their way to the fight arena.

FIGURE FILBERTS: Latest statistics show that the Orangemen have gained over twice as much ground as their rivals in the first three games (1,620 yards to 474.) The passing department has also done exceptionally well by completing 23 out of 44 for a 52.3 average.

Individually, Bob Leberman is the team's leading ground gainer with 152 yards in 33 tries. He's closely followed by Don Laaksonen's 138 for 35, Bruce Yancey's 100 yards in 7 attempts and Sam Alexander with 79 chalked up in 11 carries.

Dailey Directs Fans' Forum in Maxwell Tonight

Ted Dailey, Syracuse's line coach, will be the speaker at the first Fans' Forum, tonight, 7:15 at Maxwell auditorium. The Daily Orange had finally managed to find a place to hold the movies. Last week's Fordham-Syracuse game will be shown and Ted Dailey will narrate as the film runs. Fans are asked to bring their ID cards.

Dailey hails from Phillipsburgh, N. J. He graduated from Pitt where he was an all-American end under Jock Sutherland. He came here after holding coaching positions at Boston college and Lafayette.

LINE COACH TED DAILEY will be on hand to kick-off the first Fan's Forum of the season tonight in Maxwell auditorium.

THE DAILY ORANGE has sponsored annually Fans' Forum. Fans' participation is needed if the Daily Orange is to continue showing the films.

Coach Ted Dailey will hold a question and answer period before the showing of the films. The audience will be able to ask questions about the Syracuse team or even Penn State's, since Dailey has heard the scouting report.

During the progress of the film, Dailey will narrate the plays and go over some of the fine points that the average fan, not knowing Syracuse's plays would miss. One of the highlights of the film should be the spur-of-the momen "sleeper" play that Pat Stark called to pull Syracuse out of a hole.

The pictures are taken from the press box and therefore probably afford a better view of the game than the spectators had.

THE DAILY ORANGE had trouble getting Fans' Forum started this year because the former site—the Student Union was slipped out from under them. Fans' Forum preceding the Colgate game.

Although the coaches don't mind showing the films, it does put them at an inconvenience. For example, Ted Dailey is skipping a movie session for the Orange team to come and show the movies.

These movies are the ones that the coaches use to study every Monday morning. They supply the biggest part of shaping the plans for the Orange team. Mistakes are quickly pointed out for they are preserved on film. Thus the coaches can correct any glaring error.

Students who wish to get in to see the show, are reminded that they must bring their ID cards or some other identification that will prove that they are students of the University. This was necessitated by an occurrence several years ago. It seems that several people from nearby universities were not even students at their respective

The coaches do not mind taking the time to show the films if there is a crowd to appreciate them.

Plane Chartered For Nittany Trip; Passengers Needed

A plane has been chartered to make the trip down to Penn State for the Lion-Syracuse game. Chartered from the Mohawk air line the plane will make the trip down to Penn State and return on Saturday. In order for the plane to be able to make the trip more passengers are needed.

The plane will leave Saturday morning at 9 a.m. and return at 6 p.m. The plane will fly directly to State college. The price of the round trip, exclusive of the game tickets will be $16.08.

Before it becomes expedient for the plane to make the trip it must book at least 26 passengers. There are reservations for nine.

Those who wish to go or to learn more about the trip should contact Lionel O. Grossman at 3-2136. Dick Grossman of radio station WHEN will also supply information about the trip. He can be reached at 74-5711.

The idea of a chartered plane has been forwarded by Lionel O. Grossman. It is not sponsored by the University but rather by football fans in the city of Syracuse who thought that it would be a good way to support the team. The price of $16.08 is cheap when compared to the standard rate charged by the airlines.

Lions Attempt to Extend Mastery Over Pietymen

LENNY MOORE Penn State tailback is a rapidly improving sophomore who alternates at the halfback post with Dick Jones. MOORE scored two touchdowns in State's game against Boston last week, and set up another with a 48-yard punt return.

Penn State's Lions, ranked fifth in last week's Lambert Trophy poll, will seek to extend a 19-year skein when they entertain the Orange gridders Saturday at State College. Syracuse hasn't won at Beaver field since 1934 when it shutout the Nittanies, 16-0.

Rip Engle's Pennsylvanians scored their initial victory of the season last Saturday, a 35-13 conquest of Boston university, behind the unerring arm of Tony Rados. The 6 ft. 1 in. quarterback was the big difference as he completed 11 of 16 aerials for 136 yards and three touchdowns.

REMAINING GAME statistics were nearly even. Boston ground out 11 first downs to nine for the Lions but State rolled up a 30-yard rushing advantage.

Saturday's terrific performance moved Rados into the ninth spot among the nations' passers. He has completed 28 tosses for 356 yards and four TD's according to statistics released today.

Despite his team's fine showing against the Beantowners, a club Syracuse could only tie, 14-14, in an earlier contest, Engle recognizes that the coming battle may be State's toughest of the season thus far. A year ago, the Orange virtually eliminated Rados as a passing threat and went on to out-gain the Keystoners by over 400 yards for a 25-6 Archbold win.

Baring mishap during the week's practice sessions, State should be at full strength for its first home appearance of the season. Guards Keith Horn and Earl Shumaker, both out since the Penn game, and halfback Keith Vesling, who suffered a dislocated elbow in the Wisconsin opener, will all return to action Saturday.

Strongest positions on the Nittany squad appear to be the end slots where lettermen Don Malinak, Jesse Arnelle, Jack Sherry, and Jim Garrity hold forth.

Ben Commences Search for Punter

Intensified practice began yesterday afternoon at Hendricks field for the Syracuse football team in preparation for the first away game on Saturday against Penn State in the Lions' den—State college.

Coach Ben Schwartwalder and his aides will undoubtedly put emphasis on certain weaknesses that cropped up in the thrilling victory over Fordham last Saturday.

AN ALMOST lethargic first half performance by the Rams helped insure the Orange victory in the final analysis, but things won't be as easy against the Nittany Lions, especially if they play 60 minutes of heads-up football.

Punting is rapidly turning out to be a sore spot in the Orange operations. Ed Albright showed in the Ram encounter that a more experienced kicker under game conditions was needed.

Art Troilo seems to fit this bill, and undoubtedly Schwartzwalder will endeavor to work Troilo back into Lyle Carlson's right-halfback slot. There is also a chance that Don Laaksonen will take over for Albright at fullback, since Eddie, a converted quarterback, has not yet acclimated himself to the new position.

All is not dismal in the Orange camp, however. The passing of Pat Stark, plus the running of Bob Leberman and Laaksonen, as shown against Fordham, give the Piety Hill team strong ammunition to use against Penn State.

THE ORANGE line remains one of the most formidable in the country after limiting the pass-happy Rams to a mere 24 yards on the ground. Schwartzwalder was satisfied with the work of his line in rushing the Fordham passers, Rog Franz and Vinnie Drake, and will surely employ this strategy to a certain exten on Saturday, Penn State passer, Tony Rados, has a bad knee and isn't too maneuverable now while fading back to spot receivers for his passes.

The entire team appears in good physical shape for Saturday's encounter with the exception of Bill Wetzel and Dino Hadjis, who are still out with injuries. It is hoped they will be ready for the Holy Cross game, two weeks hence.

Several boys were shaken up in the Ram encounter and have not worn pads in the practice sessions the past two days. These boys are expected to start scrimmaging today and should be in good condition for the Penn State fray.

GRID BITS—Penn State was the last Eastern school to defeat the Orange, winning the 1951 game, 32-13. Since then Syracuse has defeated twelve straight Eastern rivals, though tied by Boston university two weeks ago. The Orange have not won a game at State College since 1934. Piety Hill supporters are hoping that the 19-year famine will end this Saturday.

FROSH SPORTS MEETING

All members of the freshman sports staff of The Daily Orange will attend a meeting today at 4:15 p.m.

Hill Student Plays Professional Baseball

By AL GEFEN
Daily Orange Junior Editor

It will be close to six months before the cry of "Play Ball" will be heard once again. For Wally Habel it will be an anxious six months of waiting.

Wally divides his years between playing baseball and attending classes here on the Hill. He plays professional ball in the farm system of the Philadelphia Phillies from March to October each year and studies at Syracuse from October until January.

HABEL ENTERED Syracuse in September 1949 after signing with the Phillies for a $4,500 bonus. Upon completion of his first semester on the Hill, he joined the Philadelphia farm system and was assigned to Carbondale of the Class D North Atlantic League. At Carbondale Wally played shortstop and was named to the league's all-star team.

WALLY HABEL, Philly farmhand who played second base for Schenectady last year, has enrolled for his fifth term on the Hill.

In Class D ball he hit .273. Among his base knocks were 11 doubles, four triples, and seven homers. A good fielder, Habel was one of the bright spots in the Carbondale defense.

The following year Wally was advanced to Salina, Kansas, of the Class C Western Association. There he batted .265 with 16 doubles, four triples, and three home runs to his credit. Once again he was named his league's all-star shortstop, succeeding Mickey Mantle who had gained the honor at Joplin the preceding year.

In 1952 Habel was assigned to Terre Haute, Indiana, the Philly farm in the Class B Three-I League. At Terre Haute his average dropped to .260, but his extra base output increased. Wally stroked out 21 doubles, three triples, and four homers and batted 54 tallies across the plate.

HE FINISHED third this time in the voting for the league's all-star squad. At Terre Haute, Habel was managed by Skeeter Newsome, former Boston Red Sox and Phillie shortfielder.

His fine season at Terre Haute earned him a trial with the Baltimore Orioles of the International League. Competition from Ted Kazanski, who finished the season as the Philadelphia regular shortstop, proved too great for Wally and he was assigned to Schenectady of the Class A Eastern League.

At Schenectady Wally was reunited with Newsome who had been advanced to the post of manager of the Blue Jays. Habel was switched to second base, a position he played throughout most of the team's 154 games.

In Class A ball Wally batted .264 during the regular season. As Schenectady lost to Reading in the semi-finals of the playoffs, he led the team in hitting with a .316 average.

HABEL WAS born in Schenectady, New York in 1932. He attended Geneva High and played varsity basketball and baseball there. On the baseball team he doubled as a pitcher and a shortstop.

One of his teammates at Geneva was Al Antinelli, ex-Colgate pitcher and basketball player who played the past season with Roanoke and Albany in the Red Sox chain. Habel batted against Antinelli once this year, when Albany and Schenectady met, and flied out.

Another famous game for Wally in his high school career came when he was called up to pitch against Johnny Antonelli, presently with the Milwaukee Braves of the National League. Habel reached the southpaw for three base hits during the course of the game and defeated him 9-8.

Wally has also played against Billy Loes. This took place in a Kiwanis national championship game in Ebbitts field in Brooklyn. Habel, representing the Geneva Kiwanis, knocked in a run with a single, but Loes' team, the Astoria Cubs won the game 7-3.

THE YOUNG BALLPLAYER spurned several scholarships to sign a pro contract. Going to school one semester a year, he hopes to graduate in January 1957. On the Hill Wally is a religion major.

Several days ago Wally learned that the Phillies had sold his contract outright to Schenectady. This leaves his contract open to the draft and he might will be grabbed by some major or top minor league team.

Phi Psi Garners Intra Swim Win

By PAUL RIPP

Phi Epsilon Pi, Phi Kappa Psi, Theta Chi and Phi Delta Theta splashed their way to victory in intramural swimming contests in the Archbold tank yesterday.

Phi Ep's relay strength enabled them to defeat Delta Upsilon, 23-11. Phi Ep was led by Bruce Odza who copped the freestyle event and anchored the winning relay team.

LARRY GOLDSTEIN picked up a first place in the breaststroke while Marty Miller added second place in the freestyle to aid the winners.

Goldstein, Neff, Miller and Odza swam in the deciding relay race for Phi Ep. This event was close until Miller forged ahead into a lead which was maintained by Odza.

Bob Aikman was outstanding in a losing cause by winning the backstroke event for the losing DU mermen.

Phi Kappa Psi ducked the Alpha Chi Rho aquamen 21-6. Branczyk paced Phi Psi with easy victories in the freestyle and backstroke events.

THE THETA CHI natators stroked their way to a 23-10 victory over the Kappa Sigma swimmers. Phi Delta Theta swept past Delta Kappa Epsilon 23-11. Martin showed the way against the Deke tankmen.

Sigma Chi clipped Zeta Beta Tau 11-6. The Zeta Beta Tau splashers were leading Sigma Chi 6-3 when they were forced to forfeit because of a lack of manpower.

Skytop M-9 advanced in the swimming competition with a forfeit victory over Skytop M-8.

INTRA MANAGERS

There will be an important meeting of all intramural managers today at 7 p.m. in the Trophy room of Archbold gymnasium. The intra managers will elect members for the intramural council.

Brand-new national survey shows college students prefer Luckies

Last year a survey was made in leading colleges throughout the country which showed that smokers in those colleges preferred Luckies to any other cigarette. This year another nation-wide survey was made—a representative survey of all students in regular colleges coast to coast. Based on thousands of actual student interviews—this survey shows that, as last year, Luckies lead again—lead over all other brands, regular or king-size—and by a wide margin! The reason: Luckies taste better.

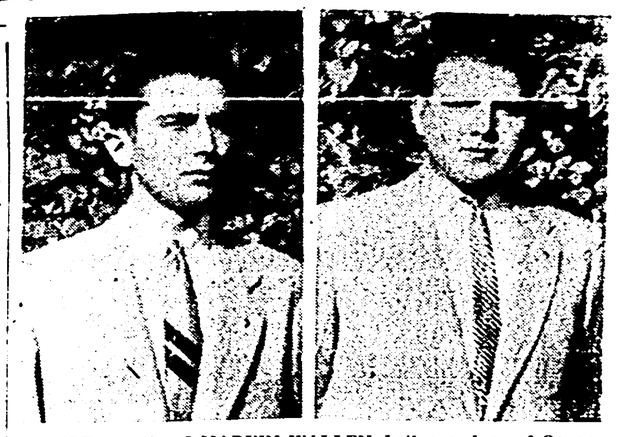
Katz and Wallen Named Co-chairmen For Colgate Weekend Festive Events



GILBERT KATZ and MARVIN WALLEN, both members of Orange Key, junior men's honorary, have been selected as co-chairmen of Colgate weekend, Nov. 13-15. The honorary annually oversees the preparations and "production" of the Hill's biggest weekend.

Gilbert Katz and Marven Wallen have been named overall co-chairmen of Colgate weekend, Darwin Bolden, president of Orange Key, announced yesterday.

Sponsored annually by the junior men's honorary, the weekend this year is scheduled for Nov. 13-15. Featured will be the traditional poster contest in conjunction with Tau Sigma Delta, architecture and allied arts honorary, the Soph hop sponsored by the Class of 1956, football queen judging, parade, pep rally and powder bowl game.

The highlight of the weekend will be the annual gridiron clash between the Orange of Syracuse and the Red Raiders from Colgate on Saturday, Nov. 14.

The second football contest of the weekend will be the annual game betweeen members of Pi Beta Phi and Alpha Xi Delta.

Committee chairmen named by Katz and Wallen are: Samuel Shawhan, pep rally; Edward Hardy, publicity; James Fellows, alumni reception; Bolden and Stuart Parker, tapping; Howard Osofsky, prizes; Malcolm Foster, powder bowl; and Katz and Wallen, football game and halftime ceremonies.

New members for Orange Key will be tapped during intermission at the Soph hop, Bolden said.

Booths to Dot Quad For Chest Carnival Scheduled Oct. 31

Fraternities, Sororities, Independents Sponsor Fun Facilities

Gaily decorated booths, flashily dressed barkers, hot dogs and fun for all will be the bill of fare on Saturday, Oct. 31 when the 4th annual Campus Chest carnival will be held on the main campus.

As in past years, fraternities, sororities, living centers and other campus organizations will be sponsoring booths for the affair which is scheduled to start at 12 noon. Chancellor Tolley will give the opening address.

Some organizations have already entered their booth applications. Those who have not yet entered are requested to submit applications immediately to either Richard Zallen, Phi Epsilon Pi, or Joan Zinicoff, Sigma Delta Tau.

One innovation to the carnival will be th esale of promotional buttons. The bright red and yellow buttons will be sold the week prior to the carnival and priced at 15 cents. They will be inscribed with either "Dig that Carnival" or "Dig that Crazy Carnival" depicting the present construction work on the campus.

The organization whose booth shows the greatest profits will be given a trophy by the Carnival committee. Profits from the carnival will go toward the funds of Campus Chest week which will be held during the second semester.

Library Exhibition Features Campus Growth Since 1873

By GRACE SOFLEISS

Syracuse university, past, present and future is on exhibit . . . until Nov. 1.

A special collection of over 30 photographs and some 15 charts and architectural plans is now on exhibit during library hours in the main lobby and west corridor bulletin board of the main library.

THE EXHIBIT, co-sponsored by the library and N. A. Rotunno, university landscape architect, traces the physical growth of the University from the erection of the first building, now the Hall of Languages, in 1873.

Starting on the bulletin boards in the west corridor are five charts of building evolution from the single structure in 1873, to five in 1891 and then to the present number. Included on the charts which run by dates, are several structures, including the old crafts building, which are no longer on campus.

The sixth chart on the bulletin board shows graphically the academic growth and building needs from 1914 to 1947.

The exhibit then continues to the west side of the main lobby where several earlier blueprints of the main campus and buildings are on display. The earliest, from the library archives was drawn in 1906 and the second in 1911.

THE PROPOSED, unaccepted plan for the construction of HL along with the original accepted floor plan drawn by H. N. White in 1870 are also part of the display of early maps.

Plans of HL are supplemented by pictures of the building when it was first opened in May, 1873 and later ones as the clock and third tower were added.

The oval from its small beginning to the present $50,000 face lifting is also shown in graphs, pictures and newspaper clippings.

A topography working chart used in planning new buildings and ground arrangement from Rotunno's office and a book with a short history of the library building complete the west case exhibit.

THE EAST showcase exhibit takes a look into the future of the campus with plans showing the new organization of the campus including new dorms and engineering buildings. Plans for rearrangement of the campus to form the main, west, and north quads and the science zone are also on display.

Pictures of the building "youngsters" including the Lowe Art center, Special Education, Women's building and Shaw dorm are contrasted with the evolution of most of the campus building in the final grouping. The Castle bridge and other structures which originally stood on the sites of some of the present buildings are also pictured.

Master plans of the recreational area including the ski lodge are placed with the time study plan showing the number of minutes required to transverse the campus, at the rear section of the case.

Throughout the exhibit are short captions taken from information in the library archives and architects' files which explain various maps, diagrams and pictures.

SEVERAL CLASSES have made special trips to see the exhibit and others are planning visits. But for the general student body, anytime during library hours is the time to see our university . . . past, present and future.

Pogo . . .

THE CARTOONIST added that the possum's health held up beautifully under the rigors of '52. His feet didn't bother him at all because he wasn't sure he was running.

A slogan for the '56 campaign will be: "Vote for Pogo, the only candidate who can be swept out as easily as he is swept in." Kelly reminded Hill supporters that Pogo has a Marsupial look and suggested that all campus Marsupial factions begin an immediate active campaign.

There is no immediate danger of a McCarthy investigation of the candidate, according to a Washington spokesman. Kelly reserved comment on McCarthy to "he has sent no fan mail."

In semi-retirement since last November, Pogo had planned to play shortstop for the New York Giants on their forthcoming tour in Japan. However, he has been forced to cancel the engagement: Laraine Day isn't going.

KELLY'S VISIT to Syracuse to speak before the 16th convention of Empire State Scholastic Press association was his first since Spring weekend of 1952. The man who calls himself "the oldest boy cartoonist in the country" discussed the condition of the American press today and stated, "The press is as free as the writer makes it. Material that is for the enlightenment, entertainment and benefit of the readers will not be denied publication."

The 1952 "Cartoonist of the Year" explained the characters as he drew them for the more than 1,000 delegates from all parts of New York. The many residents of Okeefeenokee Swamp represent characteristics in the individual, rather than individual persons.

Kelly's highly successful comic strip is the culmination of 20 years in the newspaper business and Hollywood. He first wrote for the Bridgeport, Conn. Post and also did political cartoons. After working for five years with Walt Disney, Kelly went on his own with Pogo in 1941. The strip is now one of the top ten in the country.

"Anything is right for humor, anything can be satirized," declares the artist. Getting ideas is a continual process, but the actual execution takes about two or three days. Among other humor strips, he likes to think such comics as L'il Abner and Blondie complement rather than compete.

Horton Honored By Phi Kappa Psi

Edward Everett Horton, veteran stage and screen actor, recently paid a visit to the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity house here. He was honored by that group at an alumni banquet, attended by members of the fraternity and several university officials.

Horton, a Phi Kappa Psi member from Brooklyn Polytechnic institute, was in Syracuse last week for the opening of "The Man Who Came to Dinner" at the Astor theater. He portrayed Sheridan Whiteside in the play.

AT THE PHI PSI banquet, Horton related his experiences in show business, from his college years to the present. He mentioned earliest impressions of stage work, when after college, he started out in what would be called the "chorus line" of musical comedies.

Horton recalled particularly one especially "ungainly fellow" standing right next to him in the chorus line, who Horton thought would never make a dancer.

The would-be dancer confessed to Horton one day that he had yearnings to be an actor. Horton thought this extremely unlikely. The "ungainly fellow" turned out to be Wallace Beery.

Piskor to Address A Phi O Rusher

Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity, will hold its annual fall rusher tonight in the Founder's room Maxwell.

The program will feature an address by Dean Piskor of the advisory committee. George Kepner, former president, will also speak to the group, concerning the history of the organization.

Membership requirements include previous training in scouting and a desire to render services to others. Those students who may be interested are urged to attend.

Evans and Reiss Explain Revisal

Madge Evans and Stephen Reiss, chiefs of civil service of student government, will explain the revised class governing act and its interpretations to class officers and their executive councils tonight.

The junior class group will meet at 7 p.m. in the dance studio of the Women's building, while the senior and sophomore officers and councils will discuss the act at 8 p.m. in 111 Maxwell.

Penn State Begins Honors Curriculum

Twenty-two State College, Pa., students have been named for enrollment in the new honors curriculum of engineering science.

This precedence-setting step was introduced in order that brilliant students will not be held up by average ones.

As Dr. Eric A. Walker, dean of the school of engineering explained, "too often a faculty spends its time on marginal students and lets the brilliant man waste much of his energy on standard curricula which do not challenge him."

What is This?

HERE'S A PICTURE that should give no trouble to most Syracusans. This is a drawing of a Hill building. We are not at liberty to say whether or not the building has been constructed yet. The first person to call the Hellbox after 2 p.m. today with the correct identification will win an orchid corsage from J. Allen Deal, Marshall st. florist shop.

COMMUNIST DOORS

To add a bit of color and cheer, doors on prefabs 29, 30 and 31 have been painted red. Maybe this is for the psychological effect.

THE DU PONT DIGEST

Research

provides broad opportunities for chemists, physicists and engineers cooperating on many problems.

For one thing, much Du Pont research is fundamental, aimed at advancing scientific knowledge regardless of specific commercial objectives. However, such research often suggests new products . . . each with its own challenging technical problems which must be solved before commercial production can begin. Solving these problems offers another great field of work for teams of engineers and scientists.

"Teflon" tetrafluoroethylene resin is an example of this well integrated teamwork.

Doing chemical engineering research on a plate in a distillation tower are: C. M. Gamel, Jr., S.M.Ch.E., M.I.T. '48; and J. B. Jones, M.S.Ch.E., Univ. of Mich. '46.

During research on refrigerants, the polymer was discovered and work was begun to make it useful. The new plastic had a remarkable combination of properties; temperature resistance beyond the range of any previous plastic, excellent electrical characteristics, and the highest degree of chemical inertness of any commercial plastic.

In fact, "Teflon" was almost too unusual. Although it melts, it is too viscous to flow like other plastics. It does not dissolve—even in aqua regia. There was no method for molding it or for making it into thin coatings.

The problem of molding was solved with the help of techniques used in powder metallurgy. "Teflon" is now molded by cold pressing, followed by sintering or "fusing" at about 360°C.

Research workers have available modern apparatus, such as the infrared spectrometer being used here by Vaughan C. Chambers, Ph.D. Org. Chem., M.I.T. '50.

For coatings, previous research suggested dispersions—minute particles suspended in a liquid. After much study, a team of technical men learned how to suspend particles of "Teflon" about 1/125,000 of an inch in diameter. Then a commercial scale process was devised. This development made possible thin coatings of "Teflon" and also a process for extruding the material.

Meanwhile, another group discovered how to successfully formulate the new plastic into "Teflon" tetrafluoroethylene resin finishes and wire enamels.

The development of "Teflon" illustrates the close teamwork that is the basis of research at Du Pont. But this teamwork doesn't end with research. Bringing the product to commercial reality requires development and design work by chemists and both chemical and mechanical engineers. Next month's Digest will feature information on the opportunities Du Pont offers men interested in this phase of making "better things for better living . . . through chemistry."

Korean Ambassador Will Visit Hill to Lecture on Asian Problems

Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt Accepts Invitation to Campus Dinner

By EILEEN CHAMBERLAIN
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt has accepted an invitation to attend a banquet in her honor at Syracuse university.

In a telegram received yesterday by Ethel Falkin, president of United Nations at Syracuse university club, Mrs. Roosevelt said she will be present at a dinner in Shaw dormitory Wednesday, Oct. 21 as the guest of the UN group.

Time for the affair will be set after a consultation with Shaw director Miss Janet Brackenridge.

THE BANQUET will precede a talk by the former UN delegate at Lincoln auditorium in connection with United Nations week, proclaimed in Syracuse for the week of Oct. 19 by Mayor Thomas Corcoran.

Tickets for the affair will be sold to paid members of the campus UN group only. Forty tickets at $2 each will be on sale from 2 to 4 p.m. Friday, Oct. 16 in the lobby of Maxwell. Because of the small number, the ducats will go on a first-come, first-served basis.

Representatives of the city UN organization and of the university administration will also be present at the banquet.

The former first lady of the United States has long been active in educational, sociological and political affairs. During her husband's administration she visited many nations as an unofficial good will ambassador. During World War II she made several trips to battle areas and military hospitals.

MRS. ROOSEVELT was associated with the UN for several years, after being appointed US delegate to the first part of the first regular session of the General Assembly in London.

A member of the committee on social, humanitarian and cultural questions, she also represented this country on the commission on human rights. From its inception until 1951 she served as chairman of the commission.

She is now devoting much time to the expansion of the field work of the American Association for the United Nations.

During Franklin D. Roosevelt's career, his wife was also active in state and national politics. She was finance chairman of the women's division of the New York Democratic State committee from 1924 to 1928.

IN 1928 SHE worked with the Democratic National Campaign committee as a mebber of the advisory committee in charge of women's activities.

During the early part of the war she served as an assistant director of the Office of Civilian Defense.

Mrs. Roosevelt is the author of several books and writes a daily column.

She also conducts a monthly question and answer page in McCall's magazine.

MRS. ELEANOR ROOSEVELT will address Syracusans Oct. 21 in Lincoln auditorium. She will also be the guest of honor at a dinner given on the Hill by members of the United Nations at Syracuse University organization.

Frosh Applicants Sought by NSA

National student association, the largest representative organization of students in the United States, recently began autumn activities on campuses from Florida to Oregon.

The Syracuse university branch of NSA will accept applications from freshmen and others iterested in working in the organization until Wednesday, Oct. 21. Freshman women who become active in the association are expected to complete the women's student government training program "Through the Keyhole" which begins at the end of this month.

Applications containing name, address, telephone, high school activities (for freshmen) and reason for wanting to join should be submitted to Marcia Michelbacher at 1003 Walnut ave.

NSA is designed to promote the welfare of the studentns throughout the United States. Members of the organization work closely with student governments on college and university campuses. They also take an active art in promoting student opinion in national government.

Chapel Welcomes Students Today

A campus open house will be held from 3:30 p.m. to 5 p.m. today in the Chapel lounge. The board's members will discuss the Chapel's relations to the campus.

Co-chairmen Gail Kepner, Harold Vine, Deane Lavender, and Patricia Roden will be present along with the committee chairmen.

All students are invited to attend. Refreshments will be served.

MSG Petitions Deadline Extended

Friday Final Date For Applications

Civil service has extended the deadline for petitions for men's student government assemblymen to 5 p.m. tomorrow, it was announced yesterday by civil service Chief Stephen Reiss.

The move was forced by apathy on the part of juniors and seniors in returning petitions, Elections Commissioner Willard Schop, said.

He urged males from all classes interested in becoming assemblymen to secure petitions at the MSG office, building 30. They must be returned signed by at least 20 members of the group and class the candidate wishes to represent.

Scheduled to run concurrently with freshmen balloting on Oct. 28, the assembly elections will be held under the new plan approved by last year's legislature. The 36-man assembly will include at least three Greeks, three independents and one city student.

Parties may back candidates, but no party affilitation will be mentioned on the ballot.

ROWING CLUB

There will be a meeting of the Rowing club at 9 p.m. Thursday. The oarsmen will meet at the Lambda Chi Alpha house, 809 Walnut ave.

Leff to Address DO Frosh Class

Stanley Leff, president of men's student government, will address the Daily Orange freshmen class at 4 p.m. today in 102 Castle.

All editorial and sports staff freshmen who did not attend Monday's class must be present at today's session.

Bus Ad to Hold Job Convocation

All business administration seniors and graduate students and non-technical male seniors and grads enrolled in the University are urged to attend a placement convocation at 2:15 p.m. today in 117 Lyman.

According to William K. Phipps, associate director of placement, the convo will acquaint seniors and grads with the function of the placement office. Scope and types of vailable positions will be discussed and current company listings reviewed.

Those seniors who have already obtained positions or plan graduate study or armed forces service are requested to participate in the placement program so that the office can keep complete records and follow the students' progress.

Today's convo will be the first in a series of three sessions.

Dean Appleby Will Highlight Meeting Events

His Excellency Dr. You Chang Yang, Korean ambassador to the United States, will be in Syracuse on Friday and Saturday, Oct. 30-31. He will participate in the Annual Conference on Eastern Asia informally sponsored by Colgate, Cornell and Syracuse universities.

Dr. Yang will start the conference at 8 p.m. on Friday with a lecture in Maxwell auditorium. Following the lecture there will be an informal coffee hour for all participants in the Founders room in Maxwell.

PAUL H. APPLEBY, Dean of the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs, will highlight Saturday's events with a speech on "Government Problems in the New Asia" following a luncheon in Sims dining hall. Dean Appleby recently returned from a mission to India for the Ford Foundation.

The program for Saturday morning from 9 a.m. to noon is divided into two sections. The first, Section A, will discuss "Asiatic Content Material for Secondary School Social Study" in 102 Maxwell.

Section B will consider "Current Developments in Eastern Asia," in the Founders Room. This will include discussion of conditions in Communist China, recognition of Peking government, Japan's post-Korean prospects and Philippine export markets.

"Communism on the Fringe of Asia" will be the subject of the Saturday afternoon meeting, from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. The status of communism, country by country, to what extent it represents nationalism or Soviet penetration, and what can be done to stop it will be dealt with.

ALL THESE discussions will be led by a number of out-of-town participants. These include Professors Knight Biggerstaff and Lauristan Sharp of Cornell, recently returned from Thailand, and Prof. Charles S. Blackton from Colgate.

Dr. Donald Bishop, Dr. George B. Cressey, and Douglas Haring of the Maxwell School of Citiship are in charge of the two-day meeting.

Miss Loretta Klee, superintendent of social studies in Ithaca, will lead the discussion for teachers. Discussion leaders from New York city include William L. Hollan and Antonio de Grassi of the Institute of Pacific Relations, and Miss Miriam Farley.

It is also expected that several government officials from Washington will be in attendance.

These central New York conferences have continued for many years, providing an opportunity to study current developments. The meetings are planned for teachers, advanced students, business men, newspaper and radio people and the general public.

Students to Take Deferred Exams

Deferred final examinations in French 1, 2 and 10 and Spanish 1 and 10 will be given from 1 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. Saturday in 309 HL.

Students who have not yet taken the final examination in one of these courses are to see Dr. Frederick Jackson in 408 HL immediately.

Late Permissions Granted To Coeds for Benefit Ball

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY students will hold an all-University benefit dance for HUBERT (HU) HARSHBERGER from 8-11:30 p.m. Oct. 27 in the Women's building. Hub, a former member of the football squad and boxing team, lost his leg in an a ccident last summer. All services will be donated and the Hill's athletes will present the entertainme nt.

Coeds who have tickets for the Hu Harshburger benefit dance on October 27, will get special late permission slips, according to a joint statement by Dean of Women Marjorie Smith and Mary Elizabeth (Liz) Brydon, vice-president of Womens Student Government.

The dance will be held from 8-11:30 p.m. in the dance studio of the Women's building. Ray Caldiero and his band will supply the music and refreshments will be available. All services are being donated and money received will be given to Hubert Harshburger, former Hill gridder and boxer.

HARSHBURGER, who graduated from Syracuse in June, was injured in a motorcycle accident on his way home from school last summer. His leg was amputated above the knee.

He is now in the Somerset, Pa. hospital.

Noting medical expenses that must be paid, a group of students led by Richard Beyer, formulated plans for the dance.

All entertainment will be supplied by members of Hill athletic teams. The captains of the various teams will also sell tickets, costing $1 per person. A patron's ticket which is priced at $5 entitles the holder to have his name included in the printed program.

DEAN SMITH recalled that since she has been at Syracuse this is the first all-University dance that has been given as a benefit for a particular person. She emphasized that in honor of the occasion all coeds would be given the special permissions.

To obtain special permission slips, all women should bring their dance tickets to the WSG office during office hours, weekdays from 12-1 p.m. and 4-5 p.m. Tickets may be brought in until 5 p.m. on the day of the dance. Miss Brydon stressed the fact that coeds do not have to use their special pink slips.

In a statement o The Daily Orange, Frank Piskor, University vice-president stated, "The cause is most worthwhile. The boy deserves all the help we can give him. I hope that all Syracuse men will support the affair."

Both Dean Smith and Dean Piskor plan to attend the dance.

STORES IN THE Marshall st. area are cooperating by having posters in their windows announcing the event. They will emphasize that the dance is on a week-night, so that it can be stag or drag.

Lawrence O'Sullivan and Robert Fleck have been appointed overall ticket chairmen. Pat Carroll is in charge of all tickets for sororities.

The late permissions are valid until midnight and must be handed in on the night of the dance only.

Miss Brydon and Miss Carroll emphasized the fact that the dress for the dance would be informal.

If there are any large requests for tickets contact O'Sullivan or Fleck.

Frosh Exempted From English I

Only 29 Pass Special Test

Of 219 frosh who spent two hours in a freshman English exemption test, only 29 passed.

They poured over a selection from Whitehead's "Modern World" which they not only had to read, but to understand and evaluate.

Another hurdle was a summary of the main ideas of the selection. The student first had to find the central theme of the essay and then reorganize it in order to formulate the summary.

IN ANY SORT of composition, writing is a test of all the English skills: grammar, spelling, vocabulary, sentence structure, organization, according to the English department.

Anyone passing the exam has shown enough proficiency in the subject to bypass freshman English and begin advanced courses. In this way talented students will be able to further their education more rapidly.

Dr. Sanford Beech, of the English department, said that the exam tests the "intellectual maturity of the individual when he is able to understand the writing,

Woman Brought Up In Engineering World

By MAXINE WENTERS

"Hi, engineer," is a common expression here on the Hill. But more than a few heads turn when this greeting is directed at one engineer in particular.

Zella Conner is that engineer.

She is the only female engineering student in the University. Her fellow students are 480 males.

Born and bred near Ossining, N. Y., Zella was brought up in an environment of men and engineering.

Both her father and her tw older brothers are college trained engineers. So. little Zella was quickly yanked from the cradle, had a blueprint of a jet plane thrust into her clammy little fist and was told to take it from there.

From that time hence, Zella was for the jets.

Zella, nicknamed Susie, acquired her "tomboy-itis" and love for athletics quite naturally because she was the only girl in the whole neighborhood. To prove her worth to the gang, she learned to hunt, fish, swim, ride horseback and "spit" farther than any kid in the whole neighborhood.

At 14, Zella would journey to the Adirondacks to scale wood with the Canadian lumberjacks.

While other adolescents were practicing smiles and piano, Zella was winning the trophy for participating in the championship softball team of Westchester county.

Scorning the somewhat dull occupations of secretary or saleslady, Zella—Susie—blissfully idled away her summers by papering the plaster moulds for jet gas tanks.

At present the greatest fear of this prospective engineer is, not as you might suppose, miscalculating on her slide rule or (heaven forbid) losing her T-square, but merely walking into class late.

Despite the encouragement afforded her by Mrs. Billing, her engineering drawing instructor, Susie is still amused and embarrassed when, as recently happened the professor forgot he was addressing 250 boys and one girl and started to use rather forceful language.

An even more amusing incident occurred when she was asked at registration to choose between a gym class or ROTC. The decision was obvious.

Although Susie keeps in mind her objective of being an aeronautical engineer and obtaining a pilot's license, her social life is not at all impaired by her somewhat uncommon vocation.

Moreover, her popularity with girls is unusually high, for her dormmates at Phillips cottage realize she's the only link to the most desirable and frequently unattainable engineering students.

Yes, Zella (Susie) Connor seems to have quite a future ahead of her in her chosen field.

Final ROTC Convo Slated for Maxwell

The convocation section of the Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corp leadership program enters its final phase at noon today with a meeting for all sophomores in Marshall auditorium and a conclave of seniors in Maxwell.

These final indoor meetings are designed to give students a better understanding of AFROTC and its leadership program.

After the sophomores have been briefed on their role in the new program, they will be given an opportunity to question members of an Air Force officers' panel on matters pertaining to the program.

Seniors will hear a short talk on discipline, demerits and leadership before meeting with their staffs.

Grads Will Meet In Chapel Today

Graduate students will hold an informal talk from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. today in the Chapel. This is a new venture and is under the sponsorship of Prof. Phillips Bradley.

The aim of this venture is to give graduate students a chance to meet fellow students and to get together informally for discussions, chess and bridge.

The purpose of this organization is to make the graduate body a stimulating and coherent group.

Penn-Bound Plane May Be Cancelled

More passengers are needed for the chartered plane which is Penn 6 p.m. the same night, however, unless more passengers are procured, the trip will be cancelled.

The price of the round trip, exclusive of the game tickets, is $16.08, which is low-priced in comparison to the standard airline rates.

Those wishing to gain more information on the subect can contact Lionel O. Grossman at 3-2136 or Dick Grossman at 74-5711.

WAER FOOTBALL

Radio station WAER will carry the Nottingham vs. Central football game from Roosevelt field at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow. This game will be the fourth in a series by WAER covering high school football.

'Rigger' Edges Coed for Marshall Street Title

By JAN CARO
Executive Editor

Vincent Rigolosi, a liberal arts senior, narrowly won a margin of victory yesterday to capture the coveted title of "Mayor of Marshall st."

More than 600 votes were cast in the hotly contested battle between Rigolosi and Corrine Beecher, another LA senior.

THE NEWLY elected mayor will be installed in solemn ceremonies at 2 p.m. tomorrow in the Varsity restaurant.

Jerry Leider, drama instructor and director of last year's "White Bucks and Tales," will be in charge of the production.

Rigolosi is well known as a member of the Orange boxing team. He is a brother of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity.

The mayor's official duties will include listening to complaints voiced by Hill students concerning Marshall st. establishments and service.

THE 600 ballots were cast by those students who qualified as regular habitues of Marshall st.; each voter pledged that he indulged in extended coffee hours on Marshall st. at least four out of every six days.

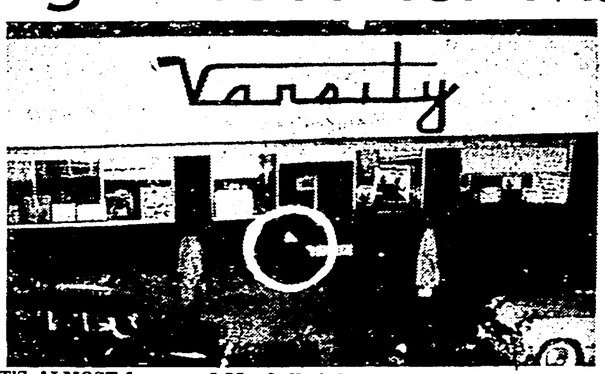
The official definition of Marshall st. was "that area between the Varsity restaurant and the University branch of the post office."

Campaigning opened Friday, with grandiose promises on the part of both candidates of free coffee and bubble gum. Political plums were extravagantly offered in extemporaneous speeches made in front of Marshall st. establishments.

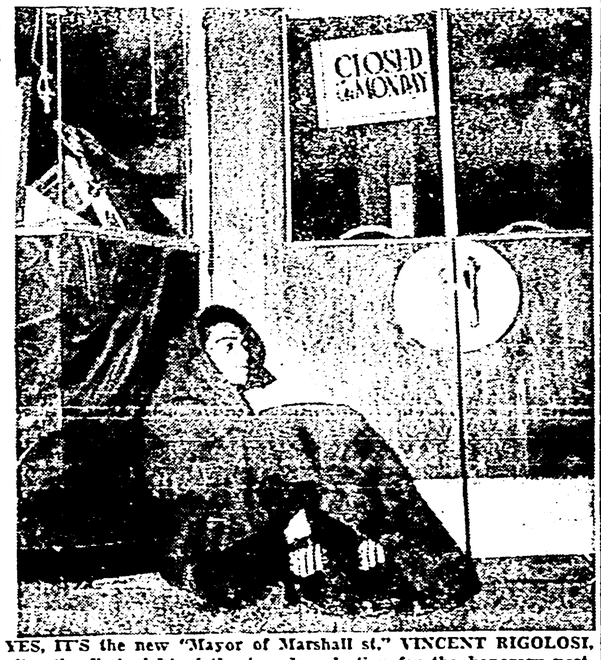
Campaign manager for Rigolosi was Lawrence O'Sullivan, while Miss Beecher's forces were marshaled by Jean Anne Brydon. In charge of official petitions and the actual election was Mary Elizabeth Brydon.

COMMENTING ON the results, the election commissioner stated that while several fraudulent names were found on the winner's petition, the election would not be contested.

In accordance with the terms of the race, Miss Beecher will carry Rigolosi piggy-back down Marshall st. The exact time will be announced at a later date.



IT'S ALMOST 1 a.m. and Marshall st. has gone to bed. All that is, except a few passerbys who seem curious about the gentleman huddled in the doorway of the Varsity. He doesn't seem to be curious about the snoopers, however . . . he's asleep.



YES, IT'S the new "Mayor of Marshall st." VINCENT RIGOLOSI, after the first night of the two-day election for the honorary post. Vince is shown waiting for the Varsity to open. Judging by the sign in the door, he has a long stay ahead before he can join the Maxwell House club's daily confab. Those Marshall st. mayors sure can hold their coffee.

One extra chance

Student government is what you make it.

The story is on page one—deadline for petitions for the men's student government assembly has been extended to 5 p.m. Friday.

The reason in official terms? "Lack of enthusiasm." In plain English, it's apathy. No one seems to care. You've heard it said: "It's only a debating group. Couple of guys want to play big shot."

Let's take another look. Do you remember what student government did last year? It worked toward intramural insurance, which was introduced this fall. It passed a class governing act, which gives class assemblies more power and may make class governments stronger organizations.

Student discount service was instituted. Reserved seating also goes on this list. A uniform cut system was proposed and arrangements were made to keep the library open on Sundays.

This summary is far from complete; one important factor is missing. The MSG assembly, working toward a more efficient governmental system last year, spent a great deal of time on the question of an assembly revision.

An amendment was passed placing election of assemblymen on a classwide basis. Proponents thought the new organization would be a more efficient and representative group. A referendum of undergraduate male students last Spring actually effected the new legislative body.

Now, however, we see that the number of petitions received is incredibly small. If there is no competition in the upcoming election, the class assemblies will by law elect the remaining representatives.

Our remarks are not aimed solely at those prominent in campus life. We are serving notice to all male students on the Syracuse campus. If you value self-government you had better act immediately. Representative governments require popular nomination and election.

If assembly seats are not to go by default, you had better start the petitions circulating. The necessary information is available on page one.

Perhaps you were misinformed. Maybe you hadn't heard. There's been an extension until Friday. Let's hope tragedy is averted.

On loyalty, security risks

Two days ago a University of Michigan student was ordered discharged from the Air Force Reserve as a "doubtful security risk" by a three-man Air Force board.

The case against the 27-year old physics student was not open to the public so that practically all the reports eminating from the hearings were given by the defense.

Lt. Milo Radulovich's lawyer contended that the case had been largely based on allegations that his father and sister had engaged in certain activities which some people had labeled questionable.

This statement was then followed by charges that the board of officers who had recommended the discharge were personally hostile to the defendant. Comparisons between the board's decision and those of the Nazi army were also made.

One point to be said for the student is that both the Air Force and defense counsel agree that there was no question of Radulovich's personal loyalty.

The case actually boils down to the distinction made between a "good security risk" and loyalty. All officers must have both characteristics. Air Force rulings point out that no officer will be retained if there is reasonable doubt as to his status under "security risk," even though his loyalty, per se, is not under question.

This is because all officers, at one time or another, are in contact with secret or confidential material. Information can also be passed from one officer to another.

It is the opinion of the Air Force that people who have close relatives with interests sympathetic to those of the Communists should not remain. This stand is defendable since family pressure and pressure from outside groups may well break down even the strongest of ideals.

We are glad, however, that Radulovich's case will be carried to higher Air Force groups on appeal. A new board will be able to consider the complete file and hearings against the student (which still remain secret) without the taint of "personal malice" charges.

We agree that under the Air Force rules, there might very well be "reasonable doubt" as to Radulovich's status as a "security risk." We also remember that his peresonal loyalty was not questioned.

Therefore, we do not feel that he should be eligible for the draft or other military service because of his discharge. Since he had formally taken an oath of allegiance to the Constitution and had been accepted as an officer, he certainly should not in the future be put into any position inferior to that held at the time of his discharge.

A Word With The Mlle. Ferraday

By MIKE BRAUN

One doesn't get to meet royalty every day. And it is rare indeed when the royalty turns out to be as gracious, charming and lovely as Lisa Ferraday.

Miss Ferraday is appearing this week at the Astor theater in "The Happy Time." She plays the part of, of all things, a maid. This is surprising when one considers that the gal was born Lisa de Mezey, Baroness of Transylvania.

A DATE WITH LISA?

Hey fellas, doing anything this Saturday night? How would you like a date with the gal in the picture above.

All you have to do is write a letter in twenty-five words or less on "Why I Would like to go on a Date with Lisa Ferraday". Entries must be summitted to a senior editor at the Hellbox before 6 p.m. tomorrow evening.

We found it difficult to concentrate on the play when Miss Ferraday was on the stage. She not only is an effective actress, but she also possesses characteristics that would make Marilyn Monroe envious.

She doesn't stop there. If at some distant time her talents and pulchritude are no longer demanded she has other atributes. Proficient in "virtually all foreign languages" she was official translator at the Nuremburg War crime trials.

We were told that Lisa was a past master of that hardest of all remarks, thex malapropism. So when we went backstage we were prepared.

Never has ten minutes been so hectic. Miss Ferraday's schedule is all booked up. As soon as "Happy Times" closes she will rturn to New York to star in her own television program. She is also working on her autobiography. Should make interesting reading. Quite a gal, quite a gal.

Coming out of the lovely baroness dressing room we wondered what it would be like to go on a date with her. So we reversed our direction and sat down again with her. "I was past college age when I came to the states so I never have gone out with an American college boy," she said. "However, I always like to try anything once."

So, you enterprising lotharios, get out your quills and start writing love letters. The male student who writes the best letter on why he would like to go on a date with Lisa Ferraday, will get his desire.

Letters should not be more than twenty-five words in length and should be submitted to any senior editor at the Hellbox before 6 p.m. tomorrow evening. Decisions of the editors are final and notice is hereby given that the winning letters will be published in Monday's DO. Get to it all you Romeos.

How Come? Don't Ask Us!

On the heels of Scrabble and voluminous other time-killers, we have been informed of a new bit.

The game, appropriately enough, is called "How Come?" No one knows who devised it, but the game is here and we're faced with it.

Someone tells a story. But he leaves out an essential point that would make the tale understandable. The other players try to discover what's missing from the story by asking questions. They can ask any number of questions as long as the questions require only a "yes", "no", or "immaterial" answer.

Sound goofy? That's exactly what we are thinking. But it's a cheap way to spend an evening. If you're confused but still interested there's a book out titled the same way the game is, by Agnes Rogers (Doubleday, 1953).

And don't ask us, "how come?"

J-School Hunts for Home

By JOY YUNKER

The students of the fourth estate have taken possession of the Women's Old Gym and with the aid of major renovations have settled down to call it "home" or the School of Journalism.

There are those to whom "home" will always mean the Castle, but the School has moved to new quarters. This move has literally placed the School on campus. When "old man Winter" comes howling around the corner the long walk on University ave. will not be staring at those with 8 o'clock classes.

Dean Wesley C. Clark has an excellent view of all events taking place in Archbold stadium. If he ust looks out the window of his office he will be able to see the Colgate game. The office of the dean is straight before the person who enters by the main door.

If one does not read the numbers over the door the offices of the Dean and faculty are now on the first floor. The numbers, however, designate the first floor as the second.

The move has brought the School an enlarged library. The library occupies one half what in former years was the large gym. The track has been removed giving the room the height of two full stories. Two sets of windows in addition to fluorescent lights make the room one of the brightest in the building.

The graphic arts lab and photography lab have been placed in the basement. Those who think of the basement as one large room will be surprised to find walls now stare a person in the face at every turn.

The photography lab, which will boast a studio in addition to dark rooms will be one of the finest in the country according to Dean Clark.

The building has only one lecture classroom. Lecture classes are therefore forced into pre-fabs and other campus buildings. There is also a seminar room on the first floor which has not seen much use as yet.

The offices of the Empire State School Press association are located on the second floor. In fact the office of the ESSPA is built on part of the old track over the big gym. This gives the floor an interesting tilt toward the center of the building.

The typing labs will be the last of the Journalism School to leave the Castle. They will be moved into pre-fab 7, but the date for their moving is infinite.

The building which gives an appearance of being larger than the Castle actually affords less classroom space. The rooms are larger giving the students more space in which to work.

The entire building has been repainted. Instead of the brown and yellow of its former days, the walls are now a greyish-green, similar to that seen in most other University buildings.

The "new" J-school photographed from the east eve of Steele roof. In the upper right hand corner blinks a bit of the stadium which the building overlooks. The view from the dean's office affords a clear look at the field and action thereon. The brick structure did not always have such a proximity. Before the middle '20's, the old gym was where Hendricks chapel now stands.

A reversed negative produced the strange building above. For this the photographer hung from the west eve of Steele. The ivied walls which housed women for nearly half a century have turned in their middle life to take on a co-educational aspect. T othe School of Journalism it could be termed a "new" building since its old home, Yates Castle, has been standing for a century.

JACK AND BEANSTALK IN 1954

Down in New York City these days, a modern Jack is gazing skyward and dreaming of a beanstalk of piano wire which may one day extend a man-made finger into the clouds.

The ambitious gentleman is Morris Berman, a consulting engineer and president of the New York Society of Engineers. His beanstalk is a steel tower seven miles high, topped by an airport for the launching of jet crafts.

The tower will be the tallest structure on earth—twenty-five times the height of the Empire State building and a mile or so loftier than Mount Everest.

The Syracuse engineering department was questioned on this point. "We do not doubt that such a tower could be built," the source stated, "but there are many things to be considered."

If ever erected, the Berman beanstalk would rise on four tubular legs, cross-braced all the way to the top. The legs would be a mile apart at the base and would meet at the summit to support three airstrips. The material used would be of the same type of steel which goes into piano wire.

It would weigh in at 1,600,000 tons and cost a staggering $500,000,000.

The designer has claimed that the tower would sway 1,000 feet in the stiffest breeze and the men of the drawing boards doubt the indurance of the steel under such tremendous pressure.

It remains now only to wait and watch the sky if that particular pink elephant ever does materialize.

SIGHTS ON SYRACUSE

High Cost of Tradition

By MILT SHEFTER

High Cost dept.: While attending a party last fortnight we witnessed a quaint ceremony "splintering." Seems the boys had been fortunate in obtaining a goodly sized piece of the goal post at Saturday's game and were in the process of dividing it with their guests. We investigated the costs of this procedure which is repeated at each game, and arrived at an approximate cost of 20 dollars per cross-bar. Last year's gaiety cost us about 250 dollars. And that ain't hay brother, it's the high cost of tradition. Supporters of this tradition can argue that their share which is a splinter is only worth 1.851851 cents.

Red Face Div.: We heard about a Frosh fine artist who walked into her class with a good coat. Not wanting to get it spotted, she looked for a closet to hang it in. She found one in the back covered with curtains and stepped inside. The next day she was about to repeat the procedure when she noticed a bare foot sticking out under the curtain. Yep, it was the model's dressing room—male side, too.

* * *

Hats off, hats on: Grab happy fans have been plaguing bandmen by lifting their chapeaus after the games. It brings to mind the question of the Frosh lids which are supposed to be worn at every game. Could it be that the Hat Bandits have struck our innocent frosh too? To cite the classic phrase inaugurated by the financially pressed yearbook, this is a case of on again, off again.

* * *

And now if you'll excuse us, we must stock up on cotton for the Colgate game. The ATO cannon is working as well as ever again.

Orange Rushing Defense Rated Tops Among Nation's Colleges

After holding the Fordham Rams to a scant 24 yards on the ground last Saturday, the Orange football team has again regained the top spot in rushing defense in the latest NCAA statistics. In total defense the Syracuse eleven has climbed up to sixth place on the collegiate scene.

In the three games played thus far, the Piety line has held opponents to an average of slightly over 59 yards on the ground per game. The play of the forward wall seems to be the outstanding factor in the success of the undefeated Orange.

ADDED HONORS came to the Syracuse football camp yesterday when the weekly Lambert trophy ratings placed the Orange in sixth position. Syracuse, defending winner of the trophy which is symbolic of Eastern football supremecy, stands right behind Penn State, their opponent this weekend at State College, Pa.

Aware of the prowess of the Orange forward wall and led by the magnetic arm of Tony Rados, the Nittany Lions are, expected to fill the air with passes. In practice sessions this week, Coach Ben Schwartzwalder and his aides are readying the Orange for the air attack.

In these practice sessions, Ben Schwartzwalder has been alternating his quarterbacks, Bruce Yancey and Pat Stark, with the regular backfield, Don Laaksonen and Eddie Albright have been sharing duty at fullback also.

The line remains intact with Bob Fleck, Jim George, Ted Kubowski and their mates expected to start against the perennially-strong Pennsylvanians.

The squad leaves the Hill on Friday morning and will spend the night near the Penn State campus in order to be rested for the game.

ONE OF THE main reasons the Syracuse forward wall is leading the nation in rushing defense is Big BOB FLECK, gigantic guard.

ALTHOUGH THE big game of the year against Illinois, one of the best teams in the country, is next Saturday, the coaches and players are only thinking of the Nittany Lion fray and hoping to get through this game without marring the undefeated record before concentrating on the Illini.

Soccer Squad Preps For Cortland Match

The Orange booters went through another stiff practice session yesterday in preparation for Saturday's game against Cortland State Teacher's college.

Saturday's match figures to be a close one if comparative scores mean much. Cortland State lost a tough 1-0 heartbreaker against Cornell while the Saltine booters were tied with the Big Red after two periods of overtime, all that collegiate rules allow.

A FEW CHANGES in the Orange's line-up appear likely for Saturday's contest.

George Hertz, Bob Kelly and Mike Newcomb are the candidates for starting positions at the left inside slot. Hertz, who started against Cornell, appears to have the inside track for the starting post. In any case, all three will see plenty of action.

Another possible position change is the replacement of Bill Ayres at the inside right position by Steve Godayol.

Godayol missed the first game due to the illness of his father and he has not attended many practice sessions. Should Godayol be able to return to last year's form, however, he would greatly strengthen the forward wall

If Godayol isn't able to attain last year's form, Ayres, who played well against Cornell, will again take over at the inside right slot.

A sophomore who will see his first major action in varsity competition this Saturday is Joe Milliron. Milliron will spell Nick Razos and Chuck Mayhood at the fullback positions.

Two other changes that Coccari might effect against Cortland are the return of Sig Wirth to his old centerforward position, and the elevation of Bud Gorman to the first team at the left halfback position.

Gorman didn't see much action last year and this would be his first starting position in collegiate soccer. For Wirth, the centerforward position is like home. Wirth plays all positions so well, however, that he has seen action in both the offensive and defensive line.

AXEL SPOTS—Cortland state teachers college brings a 2-1 record into Saturday's fray. Cortland beat Hamilton and Springfield, while bowing to Cornell. Last year, the teachers had a 7-1 won and lost record.

Harriers Run in Triangular Meet Saturday With Navy, St. John's

While Tom Coulter's ankle should be sufficiently healed to enable him to run in Saturday's triangular cross country meet with St. John's and Navy at New York, Les Vielbig is unlikely to make the trip because of a similar injury suffered in Monday's practice session.

The lanky sophomore who finished seventh in the Colgate meet last week would undoubtedly have been one of Coach Bob Grieve's nine starters in the Saturday race.

GRIEVE EXPECTS plenty of trouble from both Navy and St. John's and is glad to have a veteran like Coulter back in top running form.

Although Grieve has not selected the men he will take to New York this weekend, it is probable that the showing of the Piety harriers in the Colgate meet last week will influence his final decision.

Off their performances last weekend, the following boys should run this triangular race: seniors Ray Osterhout, Frank Calzi, Gene Parker, Tom Coulter and Don Fryer; junior Steve Armstrong, and sophomores Jim George and Ed Alger.

The Piety harriers will leave for New York City this Friday afternoon.

ED ALGER, one of the steller sophs on the Orange cross-country team, is counted on by Coach Bob Grieve to turn in a good performance in Saturday's triangle meet with St. John's and Navy in New York city.

GYM NOTICE

Locker and shower rooms in the men's gymnasium will now be open from 6 to 10 p.m. each evening, Monday through Friday. All men who have obtained basket locker privileges are free to use these rooms.

Five 19-0 Contests Head Shutout Night In Intra Grid Action

By ED MUNCH and T. HANSON

Shutouts featured last night's intramural action at Hendrick's field. In fraternity competition Pi Lambda Phi edged Beta Sigma Rho 6-0 with Dick Zausner scoring the lone TD.

Phi Gam and Psi U registered like 19-0 victories over Pi Kapa Alpha and Tau Delt. For the boys from Phi Gam speedy little Tom Goins put on a great one-man show scoring all 19 points before leaving in the second half.

SKYTOP TEAMS, M-5, M-2, and M-1 all recorded victories. M-5 knocked off Washington Arms 4 & 5 by a 13-0 count. M-2 belted Seward House 19-0. With Ron Howard leading the way Skytop M-1 walloped Levi Morton 26-7.

Employing an effective passing game Grover Cleveland A chalked up two six-pointers in the last half to dump M-9 19-0. An Ed Marshall to Don Mish sleeper play gave the winners their last score.

A FORTY-YARD pass play from Al Fletcher to Dick France gave Charles Whitman a close 12-6 triumph over M-6. All tallies were made in the final half.

In the other contest of the night Grover Cleveland B ran over an outnumbered M-10 team 19-0. The victory was made easy by the fact that the M-10ers were able to gather only five men for the game.

The other scheduled game was forfeited by Collendale A-4 to Men's Co-op.

The Coach Says:

Presenting Roy Simmons

(This article by Roy Simmons, Syracuse lacrosse, boxing and backfield football coach, is the first in a new series of weekly articles by the various Orange coaches. The next coach to give a little insight on the coaching end of the Hill sports will be track and cross-country mentor Bob Grieves.)

The majority of the conversation during rushing parties at fraternity houses, at the Greeks and on campus in general these days concerns football and Syracuse's chances in the coming game, Saturday afternoon.

That's the way it should be, for football is in season, and the present Bill Orange array is turning in a brand of ball that's been giving us all our share of thrills week after week.

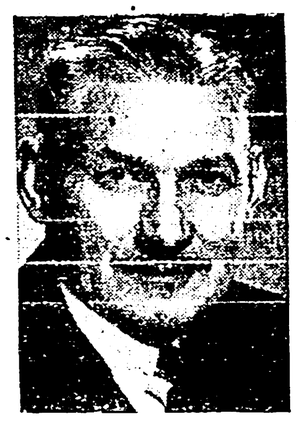
But the one nice thing about the sports program here at Syracuse is the fact that as the weather changes, so does the sports calendar. In the winter, it's boxing, basketball, wrestling, swimming and gymnastics, while in the spring it's lacrosse, baseball, track and crew. Therefore, we always have something fresh and new to discuss.

Naturally, I'm most concerned about boxing and lacrosse, for these are the teams that I've coached for more than two decades here at Syracuse.

Perhaps, one of the things that has held my interest in them is the fact that boxing is an individual sport, while lacrosse is a team sport. How individual students react under these different conditions has been fascinating and intriguing.

The upperclassman here on the Hill, of course, know that Syracuse has been very lucky in boxing. For the last five years, the team has won the Eastern championship title, and year in and year out several of our boys capture individual honors.

In fact, co-captains Vin Rigolosi and Johnny Granger won Eastern championships last winter and will be back to lead the team this year. Larry O'Sullivan and Bruce Yancey were runnersup last March and will be back on duty again this year, while Artie Nelson, champ two years ago, will be out to re-win his crown.



Roy Simmons

The student body also knows that the majority of the team has never been in a boxing ring before they came to college. However, the desire to learn how to box, to be able to defend one's self under all sorts of conditions, and to get in perfect physical condition are the guiding reasons in back of so many individuals stepping out of the classrooms and becoming proficient college boxers.

Every year, we welcome all students to come out for boxing and participate in our program. We always get a tremendous thrill out of watching these neophytes turn out, master some of the more basic fundamentals, and then climb through the ropes for the first time.

Lacrosse, an old Indian game, has been popular at Syracuse for over 30 years. It's a speedy game which develops individual responsibility and co-ordination, but which also demands unusual team play and cooperation as well.

Syracuse will be led on the lacrosse field next spring by co-captain-elect Bruce Yancey, two-time all-American, and one of the classiest competitors and mid-fielders to ever play for me, and Leo Pollack, outstanding Defense man.

Pug Smith, Bob Tucher, Bill Moller, Preem Belluz, Al Duff, and Tommy Havill are among the veterans who will be on deck when the first call is issued March 1.

One of the interesting things about lacrosse is that almost 90 per cent of the players who win letters yearly are individuals who not only didn't play the sport before they came to college, but who never even saw the game played.

Hard work, a desire to learn the game, average physical ability and some self-sacrifice can make a good lacrosse player out of the average college student.

We're always happy to see new faces report for boxing and lacrosse and we hope to make their stay a long and happy one, to give them a feeling of accomplishment and to make them better Syracusans.

Prospective Gymnasts to Report To Coach Romeo This Afternoon

Prospects interested in becoming members of the Syracuse university gymnastic team are requested to reort to Archbold gym between 2 and 4 p.m. tomorrow afternoon.

Coach Paul Romeo has expressed the desire to obtain a line on the newcomers, so that he may be able to formulate his plans for the 1953-54 season as soon as possible. Tryouts will be held tomorrow afternoon and Romeo hopes that a good number of candidates will attend this session.

ANYONE WHO cannot be at this tryout session should contact Coach Romeo as soon as possible in his office in the gym. An appointment will then be arranged for a tryout to be conducted at the convenience of both Roemo and the prospective gymnast.

The veterans from last year's squad have already been working out informally. All members of the 1952-53 team have returned to school and Romeo hopes that this factor will point to an improved record for the coming campaign.

Big Tangerine Squad Readying for Opener

By DON HENRY

With only a week remaining before the freshman football team journeys to West Point to open the frosh grid season, Coach Les Dye is putting his big, rangy squad through an intensified workout on offensive plays.

The Tangerines have been handicapped somewhat by a few minor injuries but other than that, Coach Dye's charges are rebounding into top shape for the initial encounter against the Army Plebes. Dye has several good men at each position and probably will not pick a starting lineup until late next week.

At left end Bob Musgrave and Jim Ridlon are engaged in a nip-and-tuck battle for the starting post. Musgrave, a native of Huntington, W. Va., has the better all-around ability, but Ridlon of S. Nyack, N. Y., is tough on defense and a better pass receiver.

JACK KIVIAT of Brooklyn, and Mike Minko, a Connellsville, Pa., boy, are battling for the inside tackle slot. Both boys have equal ability. At right tackle, Dye has Jim Podraza, Stan Leonik and Milt Flaume. Podraza has the inside track at present, but Leonik is coming fast. Flaume is a city student, Loonik hails from Brooklyn and Podraza comes from Reading, Pa.

Joe Krivak of Central City, Pa. has the inside track on the left guard position but Jim Leutze of Salisbury, Md., and Ted Warnolak of Scranton, Pa., are giving Krivak a battle. Warnolak has been bothered with a bad shoulder lately, however.

Steve Ringo, who comes from Phillipsburg, N. J., and Joe Rose of Seymour, Conn., are the top centers on the Tangerine squad. Ringo's brother, Jim, was the starting center on last year's Orange grid team. The New Jerseyite has progressed further than Rose, who has been handicapped by an arm injury, and will probably start against the Plebes.

At right guard, Warren Watrell and Ralph Farmer are playing with equal ability. Watrell, whose brother, Al, played for Syracuse several years ago, comes from Hasbouch Heights, N. J., while Farmer hails from N. Plainfield, N. J. Another guard, Dick McGuire, of Ford City, Pa., has been slowed down a bit by a heavy schedule of classes.

THE RIGHT end spot is one of the strongest positions on the team. Dye has three top-flight men, Jerry Cashman, Ed Bailey and Vern Howell at that post. Bailey of St. Albans, Vt., and Howell of Huntington, W. Va., are strong on defense, but Cashman, a native of Brooklyn has the all-around ability.

The Tangerine backfield is loaded with hard-running speedy boys. At quarter, Lou Iannicello, a Syracusan, seems to have the edge over John Pannucci, of Seneca Falls, N. Y., and Dick Bach of Shickshinny, Pa. Bach is being hindered by late classes.

Ed Ackley of Norwich, N. Y. and Nick Baccile of Elmira, head the list of left halfbacks. Ackley, a highly touted high school back and Baccile, a hard-runner, are backed up by Jim Brown of Manhassett, N. Y., and Al Rowe of Syracuse.

At the other half, Al Cann of Ehrenfeld, Pa., easily will capture the starting spot. Cann is the hardest running back on the entire team. Speedy Ron Tyler of Norwich will back up Cann. Dick Barstow of Dexter, Maine and Bryant Malcolm of Grand View, N. Y. are reserve halfbacks.

Bill Brown, who appeared on the "Voice of America" radio show will probably make the starting lineup at fullback. Brown, who is a native of Yorktown, N. Y., is the hardest tackler on the team. He will be backed up by Frank Capelletti of Syracuse, Ernie Lee of Briarcliff, N. Y. and Gus Zaso of Mt. Morris, N. Y.

Zetes, Betas Win Intramural Swims

Two swim-offs and three forfeits highlighted last evening's all-fraternity swim in Archbold pool. Zeta Psi and Beta Theta Pi won their contests from Phi Gamma Delta and Sigma Alpha Epsilon, while Delta Tau Delta, Sigma Alpha Mu, and Psi Upsilon picked up forfeit wins over Lambda Chi Alpha, Tau Epsilon Phi and Pi Lambda Phi respectively.

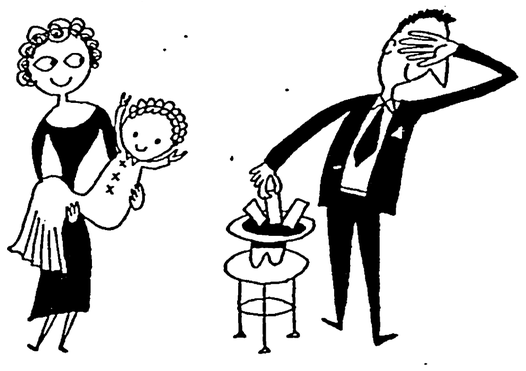
Oops, Wrong Number!



A college student decided to add several new shirts to his wardrobe. So one Saturday afternoon, he strolled into the local haberdashery store. "Let me see a few of those Van Heusen Pan-Am Pique Shirts the whole campus is raving about," he said.

"No wonder everyone is raving about Pan-Am Piques," said the clerk, laying several on the counter. "They're smart, comfortable, and come in Van Heusen's sensational new short collar styles. What's more, I have a complete line of smart new collegiate colors—as well as white. And they're only $3.95."

"I've never seen a smarter shirt," admitted the student. "I'll take one in each color. And can I open a charge account?"

"Certainly," replied the clerk. "What is your name?"

"Size Six-and-Seven-Eighths Jones," replied the student.

"Size Six-and-Seven-Eighths Jones? What kind of a name is that?", asked the puzzled clerk.

"Well, when I was born my folks didn't know what to call me," he explained. "So they put a lot of names in a hat, and by mistake my near-sighted father pulled out the size ticket!"

Instructors Survey Language Studies

Two Syracuse professors may have the answer to millions of language problems.

For years high school and college instructors, Army officers and language institutes has been wondering why some people learn to speak a foreign language easily, while others equally bright people fail to make the grade.

THE FRUSTRATION of hundreds of thousands of people and a tremendous waste of time and money have resulted from the lack of any good method of predicting success in a foreign language.

Dr. Albert J. George, head of the romance languages department at Syracuse and his colleague, Dr. M. DiCarlo, executive director of the hearing and speech center, are now conducting a pilot project which indicates that a variety of special abilities may be involved in learning to speak a foreign language. They think they can find ways of helping those with language difficulties by discovering which of these qualities are most important.

One hundred American language students—50 from Syracuse and 50 from Colgate—are taking part in the experiment this fall.

This summer when Dr. George had the job of teaching 40 foreign students from 26 countries to speak English in six weeks, as part of an orineation program, he decided to look for new methods.

DR. GEORGE and Dr DiCarlo, an expert in remedial speech speech work, asked themselves what factors were involved in producing speech and Dr. DiCarlo suggested rhythm and pitch variation, which are always stressed in remedial work with handicapped children who have speech problems. Auditory memory, phetic discrimination, and several other factors might also be important.

The two men divided the foreign students into two equal groups, one for experimental purposes and the other for a control. All the students could read English and some knew a great deal of grammar. However, none could speak the language so that it could be understood and all had difficulty in understanding English when it was spoken.

To check the factors that might be important they gave the students a series of tests. The students all took two other tests. One checked the students' ability to distinguish between the sound of similar words, and the other tested their ability to reproduce English sounds on a tape recording.

Students in the experimental group who rated low in the variabilities were given special work to improve these skills. The control group was taught by the imitative method that is currently used and received help along customary lines.

At the end of the orientation period the differences between the two groups was apparent. This indicated that the two Syracuse professors are on the right track.

The two professors are already taking a second step with the experiment they are carrying on this fall—testing American students who will be studying a foreign language. Scores on the tests will be checked against the students' grades at the end of the semester.

Key Will Choose Weekend Queen

Applications Open Until Nov. 2

The prettiest gals on campus will vie for the title of Colgate weekend queen under the sponsorship of Orange Key, junior men's honorary.

Gilbert Katz and Marvin Wallen, co-chairmen of the annual weekend, announced yesterday that applications will be accepted from coeds until Nov. 2. Forms printed in the Daily Orange should be mailed to Katz at Tau Delta Phi, 747 Comstock ave. or Wallen at Phi Epsilon Pi, 423 Euclid ave.

THERE ARE no limit to the number of applications from a house. Entry fees are $1 for each contestant.

The queen will be chosen from a court of five, following two eliminations.

Usually presented at the weekend's Friday night pep rally, Her Majesty in past years has lighted the huge bonfire on Hendricks field.

She will reign over the football game Nov. 14 and be guest of honor at the Soph hop that

LAST YEAR'S queen was Jane Gates of Sigma Kappa, now a junior. She went to the Orange Bowl on New Year's Day as the Syracuse football queen.

Only judge selected for this year's competition is Darwin Bolden, president of Orange Key. Other judges and prizes will be announced later.

Applications should include name, living center, address, telephone number and class.

Intra Swim Meet Scheduled Today

Women's Intramural competitive swimming will hold a meeting at 6:45 p.m. today in 305 Women's building.

Each interested sorority, upperclass and freshman dorm must send at least one representative to get the information for organizing a team. Each house that wishes to have a team must be represented.

Those wishing to gain more information on the subject can contact Lionel O. Grossman at 3-2136 or Dick Grossman at 74-5711.

Board to Decide Fate of Onondagan

The fate of the Onondagan is still undecided. Whether or not there will be a yearbook will not definitely be known until the publications board meets Oct. 21 according to Thomas Beckett, editor of the ON.

Approximately 1,000 ballots in favor of the book have been received. To insure publication of the annual, 1,500 subscriptions are needed, Beckett said.

The editor addressed the senior executive council yesterday and will speak to the senior assembly today to urge support for the ON.

Underclass subscriptions usually account for 25 per cent of the circulation.

Freshman Faces Physical Facts

Leave it to a frosh!

After completing most of the rat race known as the frosh physical, one of the male newcomers (who shall go nameless) was informed by one other bewildered frosh to go out a certain door for the utter and complete final check. However, second bewildered frosh forgot to inform his friend to don his clothes which had been doffed for the final exam.

Hence first frosh was seen hastily retreating back into the dressing room after almost crashing a line of completely dressed coeds.

Was his face red . . .

Krinsky to Speak At JSF Service

The Jewish Student fellowship Sabbath evening service will be held in Hendricks chapel at 7:15 p.m. tomorrow. Graduate and independent students are especially invited along with the general public.

Dr. Frederick Krinscky of Maxwell will be the speaker for this week's worship; Robert Hecht, sophomore class treasurer, will be reader; Paul Harrison will be Cantor; and Barbara Levine will recite the blessings for the Sabbath candles.

Journalism School Officially Moved To Campus Building

Photography Department Gets Enlarged Quarters

By JOY YUNKER

The School of Journalism has officially moved into its new quarters in the "Women's old gym." Wesley C. Clark, dean of the School of Journalism, said today that the moving is finished, but will not be completely settled until Colgate weekend.

The date for evacuating the typing labs from the Castle is still indefinite. The labs, which will be in pre-fab 7, will be the last to leave the old building.

THE MOVE has enabled the school to enlarge its photography department. The lab includes several darkrooms in addition to a studio. When the equipment for this facility has been completely installed, Syracuse will have one of the finest photography departments in the country, Dean Clark said today.

The new building provides only one lecture classroom. This lack of space has forced many lecture classes to be held in prefabs and other campus buildings.

The school now has a larger library. The room is equipped with recessed newspaper cases, which allows more shelf room for bound volumes. There is hope that more tables will be provided; this would allow more room for students using large volumes and newspapers.

The graphic arts lab has also been enlarged. The lab not only is larger than that in the Castle but admits more light.

FACULTY OFFICERS are on the main floor of the building in addition to a seminar room. Offices of the Empire State School Press association as well as the offices of the New York State Press association are located on the second floor of the building.

The School of Journalism made a hasty move from Yates Castle, when New York state announced that the building would be razed in June 1953. For those who wish to see the building that has been transformed from a private home to a teachers college and then into a School of Journalism the building still stands.

The Castle opened in 1852 by Augustus B. Longstreet was scheduled for destruction in 1936. Protests by alumni gave the school the Castle until last year when New York state said the Castle definitely must go. Now almost five months after destruction was supposed to begin the Castle still stands.

Cosmetic Expert To Visit Home Ec

Miss Weiss, of the Revlon College Bureau in New York city, will visit the College of Home Economics today and tomorrow. She will consult with students about make-up, application, skin care and proper grooming.

Arrangements have been made for Miss Weiss to interview interested students between 7 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. today, and from 3 to 4 p.m. tomorrow. Coeds are invited to meet with her in 305 Women's building at these times.

Students Invited To Informal Tea

Dean of Women's offices will sponsor an informal tea for students and faculty members. Beginning today, the teas will be held every Thursday from 4 p.m. to 5 p.m. in the alumnae lounge of the Women's building.

The program's purpose is to bring faculty, students and administration together. All students and faculty members are invited.

evaluate it, reorganize it and express the idea of the theme."

One student remarked after the test that the essay material was "impossible to understand, hard to read, and the most boring piece of literature I ever read." There were other varied reactions from participanting students.

SIXTY FROSH lovelies competed Tuesday night in the preliminary judging in the Goon Squad's first Sweetheart contest. Twenty coeds will be returning to face the judges again tonight for the semi-finals. The winner will reign as queen of the Jiminy Cricket ball from 8-12 p.m., Oct. 24 in the Women's building.

Frosh Beauties Compete Tonight In Ball Sweetheart Semi-Finals

By POLLY REED

Twenty-four frosh beauties will again parade before judges tonight in the semi-finals of the Goon squad sweetheart contest. These girls were picked from 60 entrants in the preliminary judging Tuesday night.

The Goon squad sweetheart will reign as queen over the Goon squad Jiminy Cricket ball on Saturday, Oct. 24. She will be awarded prizes, and her picture will be taken for the Daily Orange.

THE JIMINY CRICKET Ball will feature the music of the "Saltines," new 14 piece all-student dance band. Lanny O'Kun is in charge of entertainment. Ticket booths will be stationed at Sims dining hall, Maxwell, and Slocum for three days before the dance, and Goon Squad dorm reps are pushing ticket sales in frosh dorms. The informal affair is open to the student body.

Frosh lovelies who are returning for the semi-final judging are: Eleanor Beig, Dee Burke, Jean Cole, Joan Davey, Barbara Felck, Jean Grube, Joan Handleman, Joyce Kash, Mimi Leinwand, Eunice Mallott, Dale Mueller, Janel Pinckney, Jane Roseman, Randy Rosenthall, Marlene Seme, Kay Sanderowitz, twins Delys and Perri Zolnick, Marcia West, Nancy Wilson, Greta Wolff, and Dolo Wysocki.

Because they were not present at the preliminary judging, Marilyn Levy and Toni McClellan are also appearing in the semi-finals.

Out of these 24 girls, ten will be chosen tonight to return for the final judging on Monday.

TONIGHT'S JUDGES include Earle Clifford, assistant dean of men; Clifford Krathwohl, dean of men; Miss Margaret Parker, University social director; and Mrs. Margaret Bonisteel, assistant social director.

Judges in the preliminary eliminations were Deans Krathwohl and Clifford, Miss Parker, and Frank Pickor, dean of students.

Judges in the final eliminations will be announced Monday.

All candidates for the semi-finals should be at the Women's building in dresses and high heels by 6:45 p.m. Judging begins at 7 p.m.

Council Sponsors New Essay Contest

"The Meaning of Academic Freedom" can mean $2,500 to some lucky and talented senior.

The National Council of Jewish Women is sponsoring an essay contest open to all members of the class of '54. The topic is "The Meaning of Academic Freedom" with the first prize as $2,500.

The length of the essay is not to exceed 2,500 words, and may be submitted between September 15 and December 21., the closing date for entries.

The committee of judges will be headed by Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas and will include Dr. Ralph Bunche, Judge Thurman W. Arnold, Dr. Abram L. Sachar and Mrs. Douglas Horton.

Further information can be obtained by writing to Essay Contest, National Council of Jewish Women, One West 47th Street, New York 36, New York.

Marilyn Murtha New WSG Officer

Miss Marilyn Murtha, a junior in special education, was recently named a women's student government junior officer. She will be chairman of the WSG ways and means panel during the year.

Appointed to the WSG court and the joint student court last spring, she has resigned those positions to accept the junior officership. She succeeds Jean Anne Brydon, who recently relinquished the post.

House president of Chi Omega sorority, Miss Murtha lives in Baldwin, L.I. She is a junior guide, a member of Lambda Sigma Sigma, junior women's honorary, and a junior editor of the Onondagan.

Last year she represented her house on the sophomore executive council and was on the Goon Squad. She is also co-chairman of the sorority division of Campus Chest.

Construction Bids Opened For Engineering Building

Sealed bids for construction contracts for the basement and sub-basement of engineering building two were opened and read yesterday.

Bids for the general construction contract ranged from $265,129, by the Byrne Construction co., to $332,332 by Consolidated Constructors. Length of time to complete the contract varied from 180 calendar days by Byrne, to 365 days by the Dygert Construction co.

BIDS WERE received on six alternatives in general construction, such as not painting walls and ceilings. These factors will be considered in awarding contracts.

Bids for electrical construction were broken down into two figures; inside and outside the building walls. Low figure on the sum of the two bids was $87,192, submitted by Krause and Hell inc. Top combined figure in this classification was $124,957, by the Freeman Electric co.

Only three plumbing bids were received. Low bid was $39,788, submitted by Burns Bros. Plumbers, inc., and high was Edward Joy co.'s bid of $52,750.

Low bid for the heating and ventilation contract of $38,251 was entered by Kenneth A. Taylor, inc. The Bobkin co., inc. submitted top bid of $45,133.

PRESENT AT THE opening of bids were F. Gordon Smith, vice president and executive secretary, William Johnson, University attorney, and Carl Wooss, of Robson and Woese, consulting engineers. Bids were read by Harry King of King and King, who designed the new engineering building.

Specifications were given to contractors on September 22. Bids for construction of building one, to be built south of Smith hall, will be opened Nov. 4.

Engineering building two will be built south of Machinery hall and west of Slocum. The present proposed construction will make provision for future addition of four more floors and a southerly extension.

A small part of the rear of Machinery hall will be removed to leave area between the two buildstanding until the second phase of construction, involving the extenings. The greenhouse will remain sion, is undertaken.

'Mr. Penn State' Selection Slated

The Belle-Hop ball, annual dance at Penn State college will be the scene of the crowning of "Mr. Penn State," by Mrs. Milton S. Eisenhower tomorrow night. Guests at this affair will also include President and Mrs. Eisenhower.

The winner of the "Mr. Penn State" title will be an outstanding male undergraduate who, in the opinion of the judges, has done the most to further and better the name of Penn State. He will be selected on the basis of promotion of Penn State off campus, service ot the college, popularity, participation in activities and promotion of student unity and character.

The five finalists will appear at the ball and the winner will be chosen by audience applause.

Art Students Give McLaren Films

Art students association presented hand-painted color films at its opening program of the semester yesterday evening in the Lowe basement lecture room.

The films painted directly on the celluloid by the artist Norman McLaren, explore new fields in cinema color and sound. They have earned international acclaim and awards.

Anyone interested in art study and enjoyment is invited to become a member-sponsor of the ASA for one dollar per semester. Signups will be held at the opening and close of the program. Future events and activities will be discussed.

National SAM Drops Clause On Restriction

A restricted membership clause in the national charter of social fraternity Sigma Alpha Mu has been eliminated according to the Minnesota Daily. Under the new charter "any student" may join the fraternity. Previously, the charter had stated that "any Jewish student" might enroll.

At a meeting of the national fraternity, held August 30 to September 4, a resolution was passed declaring "any student of good moral character who is sympathetic with the ideals and purpose of the fraternity is welcome."

OFFICIALS OF the local SAM fraternity disclosed that no official word of the withdrawal has been received yet so that there is no present change in the fraternity's policy. As soon as the decree goes into effect, they indicated that they would follow the national charter.

The Minnesota Daily also reported that the vote to eliminate the clause at the convention was "virtually without opposition." It was passed on the convention floor by a vote of 126-14.

The general consensus of opinion at the convention was that they "might just as well get rid of the clause, now", since they would have to do it in a "few years, anyhow."

The Daily stated that the amendment removing the bias clause at the SAM convention was partly a result of the Columbia university ultimatum of withdrawing recognition from all the groups which deny membership because of race, color or religion. Also involved was the 1949 Minnesota university policy on human relations and a senate committee resolution to eliminate membership selection in Greek letter societies.

Luccock to Speak In Chapel Sunday

Rev. Emory Luccock, dean of chapel at the University of Pittsburgh, will be guest minister at Sunday's Protestant services. He will preach at 10:50 a.m. in Hendricks chapel on "Our Prodigal God."

Born in Bloomington, Ind., he received his A.B. from Wabash college in 1916 and his B.D. from McCormick theological seminary in 1921.

AS A PRESBYTERIAN minister he has received doctor of divinity degrees from Union Theological seminary, Wooster, Northwestern and Wabash colleges.

Rev. Luccock has served as pastor of churches in China, Illinois and Kansas. He was a naval pilot during world war I.

Design Students Hold Conference

A three-day conference of the National Association of Schools of Design, attended by representatives of 27 member schools, will begin at the school of art here tomorrow afternoon.

Fraternity Rushing To Finish Sunday

Fraternity rushing continues today with the first of formal rushing sessions. This last phase of rushing will extend through the weekend.

Four hundred and sixteen freshmen signed up for these sessions last night. This indicates a favorable comparison of total pledges with last year's first semester pledge total of 281.

Freshmen should attend series A today at 5:45-7:15 p.m., tomorrow at 2:15-3:30 p.m., and Sunday at 3:45-5 p.m.; series B today at 7:30-8:45 p.m., tomorrow at 3:45-5 p.m., and Sunday at 12:30-2 p.m.; series C today at 9-10 p.m., tomorrow at 12:30-2 p.m. and Sunday at 2:15-3 p.m.

Rushees must file their preference cards for pledging at 1-6 p.m. Monday, Oct. 19, at the Men's gymnasium. The fraternity houses will file their preference lists the same day at 5-6 p.m. in the Gym.

Final rushing action will be on Tuesday when rushees pick up their designation cards at the Gym at 1-6 p.m. All rushees should report to the house that accepted them, as soon as possible to complete the pledging process.

BIOLOGY TALK

Professor Henry Quastler of the Control systems laboratory, University of Illinois, will present a talk on "Information Theory in Biology" at 3:30 p.m. today in Steele hall.

Petitions for MSG Due at Prefab 30

Assembly Aspirants Need 20 Signers

Petitions for posts in the men's student government assembly are due at 5 p.m. today in the MSG office, Building 30.

Forms must be returned with signatures of at least 20 members of the group and class the candidate wishes to represent.

CIVIL SERVICE has extended the deadline to today because of apathy on the part of juniors and seniors in returning petitions, according to Elections Commissioner Willard Schop.

Schop has urged men from all classes interested in becoming assemblymen to secure petitions at the MSG office.

Assembly elections will run concurrently with frosh balloting Oct. 28 and will be held under the new plan approved by last year's legislature.

The 36-man assembly will include at least three fraternity men, three independents and one city student. Parties may back candidates, but no party affiliation will be mentioned on ballots.

Junior Assembly To Poll on Dance

Class Will Choose Band for Sno-ball

All juniors will be polled next week on their preference of a national or a local band to play at their annual Sno-Ball Dance, scheduled for Winter Weekend.

Gregg Dougherty, class treasurer, announced plans for the poll to be conducted through house assembly representatives, at the Junior Assembly's first meeting of the year last Wednesday.

DOUGHERTY EMPHASIZED that the cost of a national band is $800 to $900 more than the price of a local outfit, and that increased attendance due to the "name" band seldom has made up the difference in past experience.

He also reported a balance of $835.41 in the class treasury.

The meeting was opened by president Sam Shawhan, who introduced Madge Evans and Stephen Reiss of civil service. Reiss and Miss Evans read and explained the new joint MSG-WSG Class Governing Act.

Vice-President Leonard Eisen, as speaker of the Assembly, said he expected the reps to function as a truly active body, and not merely a "figurehead," as assembly groups have done previously.

The Assembly will meet again Wednesday in the dance studio at the Women's Building. At that time, it will elect a speaker protem, a steering committee and a class newspaper staff.

Coeds Must Obtain Dance Permissions At WSG Office

Green blanket permissions allowing coeds to take 12 o'clock permissions the night of the Hubert Harshburger benefit dance will be granted to women who bring their dance tickets to the women's student government office during regular hours before the night of the dance.

Unless coeds pick up green permission slips before the night of Tuesday, Oct. 27, when the dance is scheduled, they will be forced to use one of the ten pick special permissions granted for use during the semester.

THE DAILY ORANGE was misinformed yesterday that all coeds who have tickets to the dance will receive special late permission slips.

Women students will not receive blanket or special permissions on purchase of tickets to the Harshburger benefit affair. Green blanket permissions will be granted only by WSG officers on presentation of dance tickets at the WSG office during office hours.

The WSG office is located on the third floor of the Women's building and office hours are from 12 to 1 p.m. and 4 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The benefit dance is scheduled from 8 to 11:30 p.m. in the dance studio of the Women's building. Ray Caldiero and his band will provide music. Refreshments will also be served.

All services are being donated and money received will be given to Hubert Harsburger, former University football player and boxer.

Hu, who was graduated from Syracuse university in June, was injured in a motorcycle accident last summer on his way home from school. His leg was amputated above the knee.

The former gridman is now in the Somerset, Pa. hospital. Anticipating high medical expenses to be paid by Harshburger and his family, a group of students led by Richard Beyer planned the benefit dance.

All entertainment will be supplied by members of the Hill athletic department. Captains of the various teams will also sell tickets, which are priced at $1 per person.

Patrons' tickets, on sale for $5 each, entitles purchasers to have their names included in the printed program.

"The cause is most worthwhile," said University Vice President Frank Piskor. "The boy deserves all the help we can give him. I hope that all Syracusans will support the affair."

WAER Program Will Air ON's Fate

A discussion program on the future of the Onondagan will be broadcast by campus radio station WAER from 10 to 10:15 p.m. Sunday.

The program will spotlight the result of the three polls taken to determine the fate of the On. Titled "Your Show," it will feature Tom Beckett, editor of the On, and Arlene Lambert, editor-in-chief of the Daily Orange. Joyce Grossman will be moderator.

JIM GEORGE, besides kicking all extra-points for the Syracuse football team, is considered one of the ablest men on the Orange forward wall, top team in the country in rushing defense. And Jim is just raring to tear into the Nittany Lions.

Banned Groups Plan No Immediate Action

Dean William R. Willard, of the College of Medicine at Syracuse, and presidents of the medical fraternities and sororities affected by the State university social organization ban, plan no action on the resolution at the moment.

The decree will not go into effect for approximately five years and does not concern the groups immediately, states Al Boeck, publiiity direitor of the College of Medicine.

No official word has yet been received from the State University about the decree.

Clifford H. Searl, former Supreme Court justice and attorney for the National Inter-fraternity conference, told The Daily Orange yesterday that he is waiting for a licity director of the College of copy of the resolution, adopted on recommendation of State university President William Carlson.

It stated that no student social group would be permitted to exist on state university campuses if it has any national or other organization outside its particular institution.

SEARL ALSO stated that the National Inter-fraternity conferance is now meeting to decide what, if anything, it will do about the decree.

After the decision of this group is announced at the end of this week, fraternities nationwide are going to organize to oppose the action of the state. Searl will also plan his campaign and will work in conjunction with Alpha Kappa Kappa, Phi Delta Epsilon, Nu Sigma Nu and Alpha Epsilon Iota, local chapters involved.

Searl called this the destruction of the fraternity system and mentioned that thousands of dollars invested in fraternity and sorority houses are involved. At least 61 fraternities and a large number of sororities are affected by the directive.

No hasty action will be taken, however, declared Judge Searl. The importance of the decision on this case will mean a thorough and careful check of all available facts. Before the decree becomes effective there will also be ample time for study of the problem.

In banning national fraternities the university trustees exempted only societies whose membership is based on scholastic achievement or religion.

First India Meeting Slated for Sunday

Project India will hold its first general meeting at 2:30 p.m. Sunday in the Colonial room of Hendricks chapel. Project India and Syracuse-in-Thailand are both functions of Syracuse-in-Asia, an all-University organization concerned with developing creative interests and enlightened attitudes toward Asia.

Project India, in addition to promoting better understanding of India and her problems, sends student "ambassadors" to that nation.

The group will hold a series of Sunday meetings and welcomes any students who are interested in working on the project. Prominent experts on India will address the meetings.

Deferred Language Exams Scheduled

Deferred final examinations in French 1, 2 and 10 and Spanish 1 and 10 will be given Saturday, Oct. 31, instead of tomorrow, as announced earlier. The test will be given from 1 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. in 309 HL.

Students who have not taken the final examination in one of these courses should contact Dr. Frederick Jackson, 408 HL.

Illinois Professor Will Speak Today

Prof. Henry Quastler, of the control systems laboratory at the University of Illinois will give a lecture at 3:30 p.m. today in 106 Steele Hall. His topic is "Information Theory in Biology."

Yesterday, Dr. Eugene P. Gross, research physicist at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, addressed the physics colloquium here on "A New Approach to Kinetic Theory."

Dr. Gross has been associated with the insulation research laboratory at MIT for several years. He has been studying the structure of solids and liquids as it affects their mechanical and electrical properties.

Top Hill Defense Gets Tough Test In State Game

By JOEL FEIDELMAN
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Syracuse university's rushing defense, first in the country in latest National Collegiate Athletic Association statistics, will be given its sternest test of the season at 2 p.m. tomorrow afternoon at State College, Pa., when the perenially strong Nittany Lions play host to the Orange gridders.

Penn State, rated just above Syracuse in the race for Lambert Trophy honors, is a 7-point favorite over the Piety lads in most quarters. The experienced Pennsylvania team, after a slow start this season, has finally begun to live up to expectations and should give the undefeated Orange plenty of trouble.

THE ORANGE, fighting to retain the Lambert Trophy and keep its record unblemished, has added incentive for a victory. Syracuse has not beaten Penn State in the Lions' home lair since 1934, when the Orange won, 16-0.

Penn State also has ulterior motives for winning. Last year, the Nittany Lions were in the running for a post-season bowl bid until the Orange trounced them convincingly, 25-7, in Archbold stadium.

In Orange practice and skull sessions this week, the emphasis has been on an improvement of pass defense and the best way to combat the ace Penn State passer, Tony Rados. The rushing tactics of the Syracuse forward wall cut down the efficiency of Fordham passers Rog Franz and Vinnie Drake last week, and the Orange coaching staff is hoping that similiar tactics will stop the Rados magic arm, Penn State's best offensive weapon.

The same tactics of rushing the passer stopped Rados in last year's game; the Nittany Lion passer completing only two passes in the Penn State defeat. This year, too, Rados has a knee injury and will not be highly maneuverable in dodging Orange linemen.

THE ORANGE varsity left of State College at 8 a.m. today. All men are in good physical shape with the exception of Bill Wetzel and Dino Hadjis, who won't return to action till the Holy Cross game.

The only change in the line-

New Instructors Assigned to ROTC

Seven new instructors have been assigned to the Army and Air Force ROTC units at Syracuse university. The five officers and two enlisted men have already begun work on this year's program.

The recent Army arrivals are Captain Thomas A. Callagy, Master Sergeant Ollie B. Atchison and Master Sergeant Clifford Clarry.

CAPT. CALLAGY served nine months with the 31st infantry, 7th division in Korea prior to his assignment here. A graduate of the University of New Hampshire, Callagy received his commission in 1944.

M. Sgt. Atchison was stationed in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, for one year on the staff of the military attache. He has been in service 17½ years and will serve in the operations section.

M. Sgt. Clarry has been in service for 13 years. His last assignment was recreational supervisor at Camp Kilauea, Hawaii. He is now serving as Sergeant Major and will begin teaching next term.

The officers assigned to the AF ROTC detachment are Major Robert E. Wood, Captain Henry Bladergroen, First Lieutenant Robert B. Monier and First Lieutenant Glen C. Tomb.

MAJOR WOOD was on active duty from June 1942 to July 1946, as a reserve officer. He served as bombardier-navigator on a B-24 in the Pacific theater in 1944 and returned to the University of New Hampshire in 1946 to receive his MA degree. In 1949 he was recalled to active duty as a regular Air Force officer.

Since then Major Wood has served in Korea and more recently in the operations and personnel departments of the Japan Air Defense Force. While at the University of New Hampshire he was a classmate of Army Lt. Colonel George R. Stevens who is now PMS&T at Syracuse.

Capt. Bladergroen was stationed previously at Dharan, Saudi Arabia as transport control officer. He received his commission through aviation cadet training in May, 1944 at Blytheville, Arkansas.

Rigolosi Inaugural Set for Today

By JAN CARO
Exccutive Editor

The mayor will entertain his constituency today.

Vincent Rigolosi, newly elected "Mayor of Marshall st.," will be inaugurated in solemn ceremonies at 2 p.m. today in the Varsity restaurant.

FREE ICE cream will be served to all those attending ,according to the new official —"even those who didn't vote for me."

"Rigger," as he is known to his friends will be borne in state to the site of inauguration by his opponent in the mayoralty race, Corrine Beecher. According to the terms of the election Miss Beecher will carry him piggy-back down the length of Marshall st. to the Varsity.

An appropriate orange ribbon will be cut, signifying the beginning of the mayor's tenure in office, as Stanley Leff and Mary Ann Dalton, presidents of women and men's student government respectively, swear him in. He will be presented with a "key to Marshall st," symbolizing his high position.

PREPARING FOR his inauguration as Marshall st. mayor today, VINCENT RIGOLOSI, election winner, sits placidly in the door of a Marshall st. eaterie. The mayor is surrounded by eager constituents gathered to congratulate their honorary chief.

THE NEW mayor unofficially carried out the duties of his office Wednesday night, as he heard complaints and suggestions concerning Marshall st. in one of the local establishments.

He comments that although the job entails tremendous responsibility, he hopes he can carry out the responsibilities entrusted to him by his constituency.

To facilitate the hearing of such complaint, Rigolosi has set up office hours. The mayor will be available from 7 to 8 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays in the Varsity and from 3 to 4 Tuesdays and Thursdays in the Dutch Haven. He will also be available at other times by appointment.

He assures his constituents that

Will MSG strike out?

A young man waits at the plate, a bat poised on one shoulder.

Strike one . . .

The batter thinks: "There's plenty of time. That didn't mean anything."

Strike two . . .

"I'm not worried yet. I've got other chances."

The pitcher hurls and the ball sails through the air toward the batter . . .

You can finish the story.

There's a similar drama being enacted on the Syracuse campus; only the characters are different.

The man at the plate is a Hill male. He, too, is trying to get to first base—the men's student government assembly.

This male thinks that there's plenty of time. Actually, there isn't but since many other players think the same way, the petition deadline has to be changed from Oct. 12 to Oct. 14. Strike one.

It's now Oct. 14 and our male "batter" still hasn't made up his mind when he wants to get to first base. He continues to ignore the deadline with the philosophy that there's lots of time left. Again he is not alone in his decision and the deadline is changed to Oct. 16. Strike two.

Today is Oct. 16. Petitions must be returned to the MGS office by 5 p.m. The player's opposing team—Apathy—is watching his every move.

The audience is waiting for the next pitch. Many in this group are thinking that if the batter strikes out now they will hesitate to count on him again, for he will have lost the game.

Years ago men's student government was not an exceptionally strong group. But during the past few years it's members have gone into more important fields and have exhibited more authority. Even the administration felt that the body was truly representative of the students.

Then a different method of representation was invoked. Proponents claimed that by having elected representatives the assembly would become a more vital group. It would be an honor to win a seat in the assembly and students would work earnestly to win that honor.

However it looks now as though the team of Apathy is beginning to win. If a great many petitions are not returned by deadline today, there might not be any election. The MSG assembly would then be chosen by the class legislatures.

Our batter has two strikes against him and the pitcher winds up. The ball sails toward the batter.

You can finish the story.

Fraternity, 1 — State, 0

Discrimination hit the headlines once more today when it was revealed that Sigma Alpha Mu in its national convention had removed a clause which limited membership to Jewish students only.

This announcement of further progress in the elimination of discriminatory clauses could have come at no more ironic a time. For it was only a few days ago that the board of trustees of the State university of New York banned all national fraternities on state campuses in an effort to remove just such clauses.

The board obviously felt that national organizations could not do exactly what the Sammies accomplished.

The entire fraternity world throughout the country was stunned at the action of New York state. For the first time in history a government has, in effect, taken a step toward control of social fraternities.

President William Carlson of the State university admitted that the action mean that fraternities and sororities "could be policed more easily."

It is unfortunate when a government seeks to regulate and "police" such groups. If extended, where does such a principle end?

Every state could seek to abolish the fraternity system if the ban is permitted to continue here. Also, would the state stop with fraternities of this type?

Are there not other groups which could come under the same "police" action should they be even remotely connected with the government or its aid? Could not the state say that all its employees shall not belong to any social organization which carries any type of restrictive clauses?

Is this trend the proper attitude of government in the light of the action exemplified by Sigma Alpha Mu?

Iceland - Hotdogs

By ANDRA KADILIS

Everybody has probably heard the story about the tower of Babal. If you want to get a real impression of what it was like there, then you just have to go to the foreign students meeting at the Chapel, where 42 nations are represented.

It is impossible to decide with whom to talk first, because everybody's story is as important and interesting and everybody's land the most beautiful.

So, why not start from the very beginning—from the farthest north. And there he is, the tall, blond, blue-eyed boy from Iceland, Sveinn Ellerts. Sveinn is a typical representative of the people, that you meet in the works of the northern authors like Lagerlof, Hamsun and others. Not only by his outer looks but also in his movements, thoughts and speech, he is very slow and calm.

Sveinn has been in Syracuse only a month and thinks that it is a great achievement to already be able to go downtown and find the right bus back. Of course, you have to consider the fact, that in the whole of Iceland, 39,758 square miles of ice and snow on the outside, and geysers and hot springs on the inside, there are less inhabitants than in the city of Syracuse.

Business administration is his field of studies, and he plans to work in an airport or a personnel office when he returns in Iceland.

About Syracuse university, Sveinn heard from his American friends and they praised it so much, that Sveinn decided to come and see. "And as yet I have not been disappointed," says Sveinn.

One of the greatest thrills for Sveinn when he first came to the U. S. A. was his first ride on a train. "There are no trains in Iceland," he says, "and I felt quite dizzy watching the telephones poles and houses swishing by in such a speed." Also television seemed like a miracle to Sveinn, and the first time he sat watching for a whole afternoon not even daring to move, so as not to miss something.

The whole new world of mechanism fascinated him, and he wondered how much of the work was done here by machines, and how easy it made life for people here compared to his country. However, he noted that the Americans are doing a great deal lately to modernize their country and to introduce new ways and methods. "Even hot dogs are invading Iceland!" remarks Sveinn.

Sveinn is a good skier, since that is one of the main sports of Iceland. He likes American girls because of their friendliness and personalities, but has not yet decided whether he likes dungarees, even though they seem very economical, as he puts it.

Sveinn likes Syracuse university very much and thinks, that no one could be lonely here because of all the activity that goes on. Also the United States, the more he sees of it, the more he likes it. Nevertheless he thinks that in comparison, Iceland is as great as the U. S. A.

"I am looking forward to a very interesting year at the University!" concludes Sveinn.

Hello to Our 300 Neighbors Of 38 Lands

The American translation of such phrases as "Buenas tardes", "Bonjour" and "Strasvicha" may well be the key to what many visitors from other nations are seeking here.

Syracuse university this year is the host and the home of students whose birthplaces are in 38 different parts of the world and who have come here to concentrate in fields about which little is taught abroad. As well as studying, though, there is a highly human side to these people which many Americans seem to overlook.

Included in the more than 300 students from other lands who registered for courses last month are men and women whose home countries are Brazil, China, Germany, India, Belgium, Uganda and the Philippines. From the nation of Naguib and Farouk two men are enrolled as students here. And one coed whose home and family are in Moscow studies English in preparation for the time when she will enter a local nursing school.

Foreign students are at Syracuse for a variety of curriculum reasons. Mostly they study in areas of knowledge not well developed in their home countries. A number of women come here for advanced work in education techniques and nursing, while many male students concentrate on journalism, medicine or business administration.

Almost all of them have earnestly learned our language. But not much is accomplished if, after learning how to say hello, no one is at hand to whom it may be said.

IN THE HALLWAY

Revision to Zero?

By ED HARDY

In practice the revised men's student government assembly elections act doesn't seem to be working out as well as it looked on paper last year.

In fact in its brief life this fall it has caused student government nothing but headaches.

Latest development appears to be trouble in getting enough men interested in joining the assembly. Deadline for petitions for candidates was originally last Friday. Then to please political leaders it was extended to Wednesday afternoon. When 5 p.m. rolled around civil service officials took a long look on their desk and apparently weren't particularly happy about the small pile of signed petitions that had been returned.

In order to allow all those interested time to get petitions and have 20 classmates sign them, the deadline was once again extended to this afternoon.

Yet it seems unlikely that two days will make much difference as far increasing enthusiasm goes. Right now not too many of the men on campus seem to care what happens to their assembly.

Even many of the men who were active in the assembly last year have failed to show an interest in the new legislature they helped to create.

The new assembly should be composed of 36 men— nine from each class, including at least three fraternity men, three independents and one city student.

The new assembly setup on paper does not have the dead weight that past "locally elected" legislatures had. One big reason is the rule that replacements for any assemblyman will be made by the legislative body of the class he was from.

Speculation now is that the class assemblies might have to choose assemblymen if not enough want to run. If such action is necessary—and the answer may be known soon—a campus-wide election for assemblymen with less than nine men on the ballot would certainly be out of place.

The plan to allow the entnire campus to choose assemblymen instead of each house naming one will be defeated if class legislatures choose them. And if there's no competition for those who have handed in petitions already, the candidates will actually be electing themselves. Is this representative government?

It might be wise for the assembly—when 36 interested men are found—to explore the elections act again with an eye for more improvement.

'Frantic' Red Notes

By BOP

I got to wondering the other night. Do cats in the Bolshevik state find themselves becoming real nervous over the newer forms of musical expression? Or as the Frenchman would say, "Do they dug le jazz hot?"

Feeling out the nearest Jazzbo Collins record, I began to rub it in great haste and almost before you could say "Sugar Ray Robinson," the never-ever land was upon me.

I found myself standing just to the left of the Kremlin and it appeared to be Saturday night. From yonder square came the marching of marching feet and edging closer to the sound, I saw it was Fred Vasseli and his Yugoslavians in town to play a one-nighter.

About that time, a rather natily bedecked member of the party ambled by and flagging him down, I inquired as to the location of a suitable spot to sit in on a session.

"Dad," screamed the party member, "You're not in touch. Jazz is off the books around here. You'll have to get your kicks in some other manner if you wish to keep the head bone connected to the neck bone!"

Get my kicks on Route 66? "But, son, that's the least," I replied.

The fellow seemed to be approaching deep meditation and suddenly he said, "If you're really cool and will be cut three ways if you don't dig some sounds real soon, I know a place."

And laying a finger aside of his nose, he whispered, "Follow me."

Well, it was the wildest. The place was one of those holes in the wall that looks like a hole in the wall, if you dig what I mean. Jamming that night was a very progressive group headed by Dizzy Beria, a cat who had been booted from the Central Music bureau several years ago for trying to peddle Woody Herman records in Red Square. Since that time, he had been on the lamb, occasionally cutting a few LP's for the State label.

It was the swingingest. The boys jumped through "None But the Lonely Heart," "Red Sails in the Sunset" and "Opus After the Fifth Five Year Plan." Intermittent polity was provided by the blonde vocalist, Sarah Bush.

All at once, as if beset by Joe McCarthy, Dizzy and his crew began to become real nutty. Obviously greatly stimulated by their music, they shouted anti-Red slogans, waved Brooklyn pennants and even gave out with a blues version of "God Save the King." And Dizzy was the most frantic of all.

Of course, the though police eventually made it to the spot and let it be known that this nonsense was to cease. Permanently.

And I heard Dizzy exclaim as he was dragged out of sight, "But dad, does Stan Kenton ever get to play Siberia?"

Animals Dead or Alive: Jane Gates' Odd Hobby

Roasted chickens and turkies are not the only animals Jane Gates can stuff.

She has also done a filling job on woodchucks, toads, pheasants and three alligators. Not for eating purposes, but all part of a day's work for this gal who calls taxidermy her hobby.

Though some people feel this an odd occupation for a girl, Jane doesn't think so in the least. She has always loved animals animals; big, small, thin, fat, alive and frisky or dead and stuffed.

A JUNIOR in art education, Jane is taking her third semester of Museum Techniques 100, alias taxidermy. A member of Sigma Kappa she hails from the wilds of that New York suburb, White Plains where she acquired her intense animal adoration.

Selected football queen of Colgate Weekend last year, Jane is full of pep, likes to be where there is lots of fun and preferably lots of stuffed animals.

Taxidermy, the art of keeping for posterity the fish that didn't get away, requires a knowledge of anatomy, surgery, sewing and a distinct love for the perfumed odor of formaldehyde.

The basic steps are simple if one has a strong constitution to take the bloody facts along with the nice finished product on the mantlepiece.

FIRST STEP, according to Jane, is to get a gun and go out hunting. Make sure of three things: the animal you are hunting is in season, that you have a license and that you know how to shoot.

When a prize animal is acquired it is hurried off to the laboratory where it is skinned and the skin is pickled in an acid, water and salt solution for hours or days depending upon the size of the animal.

After the pickling step comes stuffing. Sawdust or cotton is used for the body depending upon the type of animal. Excelsior, hemp and tow are wrapped around the extremities.

While the stuffing job goes on it is a race to finish before the solution dries before the animal will be stiff in his last position and might be a very queer one.

RIGHT NOW Jane is working on an Arizona Ground squirrel and is teaching taxidermy at the Syracuse Boys' club and helping care for the museum.

The pretty coed is also very adept at training animals. Last year she trained a wounded crow by sitting with him hour after hour every night on the top floor of Lyman. She wore heavy gloves and kept the crow on her hand so he would grow used to her.

One day Jane and Edgar, as the crow was named, boarded a train for New York. Edgar was in a little box with only a hole for him to see through and breathe. During the ride it became very stuffy and Jane was forced to take the crow out of the box. Just then the conductor started down the aisle collecting tickets . . . Down went the cover on Edgar's head and Jane tried to look as innocent as possible.

But Edgar resented the sudden return to captivity. He squeaked and naturally the conductor heard He stopped by Jane's seat and inquired what was in the box.

"JUST A crow," said Jane, trying to sound very nonchalant.

"A crow?" exclaimed the conductor and Jane was obliged to take the cover off the box and reveal the squawking Edgar.

"He's thirsty," said Jane to distract the conductor from the fact that Edgar was not exactly the kind of passenger usually found occupying a reserved seat on a train.

The conductor must have been a nice guy. He went down to the water cooler and brought the thirsty Edgar back some water. But, this amount proved insufficient. So the conductor made three trips to satisfy the thirsty crew.

Besides taxidermy, Jane likes to tell fortunes with a pack of cards. She said the secret is handed down by each generation in her family.

IF YOU don't think taxidermy, fortune telling and taming wild crows are rather rare diversions for a girl here is a last one that ought to surprise you.

Jane has never tasted beer or any other kind of intoxicating beverage in her life. It's coke, ginger ale and especially lemonade for this really different kind of gal.

Aren't you glad you have a daughter in college (instead of under your feet at home).

VERY HUSH-HUSH

Dear Mother,

Thought I better write to you first. Mysterious circumstances have arisen . . .

NO NEWS IS GOOD NEWS

Dear Dad,

Just realized I haven't written in over a month—please forgive me, I had nothing to say. But now I do . . . . .

A LA INTELLIGESTIA

Dear Dad,

My history teacher says we should get 20 identical pictures of George Washington. Can think of only one place where he always looks the same.

IN THE FUTURE

Dear Dad,

Remember the bet you made with me about passing Chemistry? Can I have an advance on it now?

NEVER, NEVER

Dear Dad,

About my allowance for this week, don't bother sending it. I've got plenty left over.

Fashion Wise — Or Foolish?

There is a great deal of difference between style and fashion. The latter is defined as the latest drapes and hemlines just off the models in Parisien salons. Style is the line and color of clothes that are particularly becoming to the individual.

Dressing in style then, would not include following the dictates of the fashion world on every new idea they marketed.

THERE ARE some women who put their noses to the fashion wheel as soon as they are of age to understand the meaning of "high courtour" and never lift their eyes to make a critical appraisal of themselves in the mirror.

If boxey jackets are "the thing" this winter then with all certainty they will add a boxey jacket to their wardrobe, ignoring the fact that they might be too short or fat for such a fashion. Consequently they may have the satisfaction of knowing their clothes are up to the minute but their appearance is usually something that will stop a clock.

Remember last year the charming fad of stockings encrusted with stones around the ankle. Remember also the girls who wore them, regardless whether they had them, regardless of whether they had legs they could afford to call attention to or whether the occasion was appropriate for such glitter. Usually the affirmative answer could be applied in neither case.

This year M. Dior has raised the hemline till it is at the peculiar length, or perhaps height would be more appropo, where if a women's legs are anything less appealing than Marlene Dietrich's she will look out of proportion if she just follows the trend and ups her skirts.

IT IS WISE TO REMEMBER that calling attention to defects or imperfections accomplishes nothing but some unflattering remarks passed between other people. Better to wear what is becoming to your individual figure and personality which will shroud any imperfections, than to flaunt them.

If you are the type of person who looks good in dresses with bells don't feel you will be outside the pall of fashion if you don't buy one of those princess style dresses currently being sold.

Tight toreador pants are now popular—with those that can wear them. If you have what is politely called "stenographer's spread" then such pants, in your case, are taboo. There are other things that can be worn that will look just as nice. It may not cause people to say "How very fashionable you look, my dear" but it will stop them from snickering when you turn around.

If you have the habit of slouching don't buy clothes that depend for their beauty and correctness of fit upon perfect posture.

STANDING BEFORE THE store's mirror and telling yourself that everytime you wear the dress you will stand up tall will do you no good. After an hour of wearing you'll be right back in the caved-in position and the dress will look like something on a camel's back. Better that you buy clothes that won't look that way or else acquire correct posture first.

Reminder: don't keep your nose to the fashion grindstone. Look up and see where you are going. You might be headed right into a nudist colony.

What Do Campus Men Think of Miss Monroe?

"WHY MARILYN, WHAT big eyes you have!" CHARLIE McCARTHY apparently doesn't see eye to eye with the majority of Syracusans quoted in the adjoining column. Perhaps if they were in the little dummy's place they would change their minds.

By FLIP SIROTA
Coeds Corner Editor

Is sex a hex?

Concerning the tempestuous Miss Marilyn Monroe of movie, television and calendar fame who was critically eyed by some prominent male students and faculty members on this campus the answer is:

There is nothing so hexed
As someone so sexed
As Miss Monroe
In her low-cut show

Marilyn's rise from exemplifying what a well-dressed calendar girl should wear to what a well-dressed and publicity smart movie star should wear has been meteoric.

A FEW YEARS ago Monroe meant Vaughn and "Racing With the Moon." Today the same name recalls a near-panic in the lingerie industry and an almost unbelievable publicity campaign.

Marilyn figures prominently in both national and international news. But no one ever asked what the Syracuse males think.

So a little opinion survey was conducted to find out if gentlemen really do prefer blondes and if so, do they prefer the Monroe type.

A few choice quotes are printed below:

Stan Leff, MSG president, said concisely "short and dumpy."

Ray Guenther, Chief Justice Men's Student Court, said (to which is added atmospheric music "The Thrill is Gone") that he just traded in two of Marilyn's calendars for a landscape oil painting.

Daily Orange Junior Editor Ed Hardy championed the gal on the Hill by saying "She's nothing compared to Syracuse women."

Dr. Malcolm MacLaren, professor of Greek and Roman mythology, said he had never seen a picture of Miss Monroe but that he had heard much about her. When shown the photograph at the left Dr. MacLaren studied it carefully and said "I hope she isn't as immoral as the Greek goddesses were."

Ken Fredericks, leader of the University Marching Band, didn't think too much of her and further explained that he "had seen better." Could he mean Dottie by any chance?

Corky Sebbo, collegiate tumbling champion, went along with the above opinions. "She's all sex and no personality," he said, "I wouldn't give a tumble for her."

Bob Fleck, football's right guard, said only "No comment for publication."

Professor Theodore Denise, of the philosophy department, said in metaphysical terms becoming a philosophy prof that he was "not impulsed or repulsed."

The few opinions gathered that were on the affirmative side of the fence were:

Deane Lavender, co-chairman of Chapel Board, was of the opinion that if Marilyn were on campus she would certainly "be a leader—of men."

Professor Robert Rayback, of the history department, carried the banner for all affirmatively-minded faculty members by saying that though he had never seen any of Marilyn's movies he had seen photographs and calendars and his opinion was "Nice—nice."

Well, that's both sides of the Monroe issue, from the male point of view. Women of Syracuse, what do you think?

What?
Really?
Not for publication.

Open Letter to Ostrom Cottage: Some Notes on Cynthia Emerson

By LIZ GODDARD
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Open Letter to the Girls of Ostrom Cottage:

Four weeks have passed since you first arrived on the Syracuse scene. So you think you know the girls in your house very well. Do you?

What do you know about the quiet brunette in Room 32—the girl with the blue eyes and freckles. You know her name is Cynthia Emerson and she is entering a pre-law sequence of study and she has a Vermont twang to her New England accent.

Cynthia is quite a celebrity in Vermont. Her father, Lee Earl Emerson, is governor of the state. She didn't tell you that because she wanted to meet you on her own merits.

YOU PROBABLY are not aware of the record she must uphold here. Her father graduated from Syracuse in 1921. At the University's 97th commencement in 1952 he was named Syracuse's "most distinguished graduate" for the year 1951 and given an honorary LL.D.

Cynthia was graduated with a class of 12 from Barton Academy in her home town of Barton. She has worked four summers as a life guard and swimming instructor to save toward college expenses. This year she was the only life guard at a nearby lake, on duty seven days a week from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Cynthia says she has always wanted to be a lawyer like her father. "Ever since I was a little girl I can remember seeing his clients come into the house looking troubled and diswrought," she recalls. "When they went out they were relieved and unburdened. Everybody has confidence in him."

She mentions wanting "to help others" and gaining a "personal satisfaction" as reasons for her decision.

GOV. EMERSON was an English major at Syracuse working days and attending classes at night. After graduating in 1921, he taught school to help finance his sister's education.

He received his LL.B from George Washington university law school and was admitted to the bar in 1937, practicing law in his home town, Barton, Vt.

His political career began as a member of the lower chamber of the state legislature in 1938 and grew as he became speaker of the house in 1941, member of the Straighten Your Seams!

For shame you 44.6 of the female population. You are guilty of wearing one or both nylon stocking with uneven seams.

Research by Fact Finders Associates disclose that only airline stewardesses and members of the women's armed forces have a perfect score in keeping their stocking seams centered.

Nurses and office workers also come in for a good share of straight-seam percentage and students too, when they are not wearing bobby socks.

Factory workers and housewives were found to have the crookedest seams of all women.

The survey found that age is an influencing factor. Two out of three women under 25 have a good seam record but once they hit the upper-age bracket of 45 and over less than three out of every ten women can boast that her nylons don't wobble up the back of her leg.

But a boon to sloppy stocking wearers is now on the market. Called "Self-straightening" stockings, this new type of hosiery has three shadowed triangles knitted into the stocking tops to be used as guide sin adjusting seams.

SHORT SKIRTS

Lament: wind and snort skirts are wonderful things. But the wind that whips a girls skirt high is the same wind that drops a piece of dust in a guy's eyes just as she is about to climb on a bus.

Along the Sidelines

By KEN LENT, DAILY ORANGE SPORTS EDITOR

The attitude of football practice this week was one of seriousness. There was no laskadzisical play, no half-hearted blocking, no horseplay. The boys all realize how big this one is.

Most sources are picking Penn State as one touchdown favorites mainly on comparative performances against the common opponent, Boston University. We tied them 14-all. The Lions won with ease, 35-13.

The Penn Staters will have the advantage of playing before their home-town folks. As Ted Dailey has said, "You can ask the basketball team what it means to play Penn State at their place."

Fans can expect a tense, exciting struggle. Passing should be the order of the day with the Lions' Tony Rados competing against our own Pat Stark and Bruce Yancey. Incidentally, Ram Coach Ed Danowski had quite a bit to say about Pat after the local lad helped to defeat Fordham.

Pat Stark

Danowski told a New York reporter that he would love to have Stark on his own squad. In his opinion, Pat combines imagination and courage with his passing-running ability.

According to all reports, the Penn State campus is all emotionally fired up for this one. Right now the Lions are in sixth place just one point ahead of Syracuse for the coveted Lambert trophy. A win for the home squad would definitely put the Lions high in the ratings.

That the Nittany coaches are ready for a tough game is evidenced by a remark printed in the campus paper. Coaches Al Michaels and Jim O'Hora said, "In a traditional contest such as this one, it promises to be a good, fast-running, hard-fought game."

There's no doubt that Syracuse is in fine physical as well as in mental condition. The boys know they are in for a tough battle and are confident in their own ability. Physically, everyone should be ready for the game except for Bill Wetzel, Vinnie Vergara and Dino Hadjis.

The weather should be clear and the field fast. We're hoping that the vaulted Syracuse passing attack and rushing defense holds true to form. If so, the Lions could have its tail twisted.

* * * * *

Cross-country and soccer, will also take the Orange show on the road. Both have an excellent chance to ring down the Saturday curtain on a winning performance.

Coach Bob Grieve expects tomorrow's meet against St. John's and Navy to be one of the year's toughest. The Redmen reportedly do not have too much except for two men, but the Middie boast top-notch starting five.

The booters engage Cortland State Teachers in its second test. Cortland has already lost to Cornell 1-0 while Syracuse tied the Big Red two Saturdays ago. If the Orange offense can show to better advantage than last time, the Pietymen should come away with a win.

* * * * *

We certainly didn't stand the football prediction world on its ear last week by hitting four winners out of six games, but having the facility for putting ourselves on a limb, we'd like to try again.

As we see it, Illinois on the strength of its startling upset over Ohio State should squeeze by Minnesota. Holy Cross will edge out a tough Quantico Marines team and Yale continues on its unbeaten way by squeaking past Cornell.

Colgate will gain its first win of the year over Dartmouth in the battle of the beaten and Villanova gets its second at the expense of Detroit tonight.

We'll now let the teams saw off the limb.

Hill Booters Face Cortland Teachers In Road Battle

By ALEX STRASSER
Daily Orange Junior Editor

The Syracuse booters will be looking for their first win of the current campaign when they travel to Cortland this Saturday to meet the Cortland state teachers.

In their only previous start, the Saltines tied the Big Red of Cornell 1-1, in a contest which went to two overtime periods before it was officially declared a tie.

THE ORANGE will be facing no push-over in Cortland state. The Teachers beat both Hamilton and Springfield, while their only loss occured at the hands of Cornell. If comparative scores were to be taken at face value, Syracuse would be a slight favorite, as the teacher's losing score against Cornell was 1-0.

Coach Andy Coccari plans to make a few changes in his starting team in order to strengthen his sagging offensive line against Cortland.

In one of his major moves, Coccari plans to put Siggy Wirth back in his old center forward position. Wirth, along with his younger brother Gunnar, made one of the strongest one-two scoring combinations in collegiate soccer. Bud Gorman will take over Wirth's old left halfback position, leaving Vic Oberschal in reserve for spot duty.

A heartening factor for the Orange booters has been the return of Steve Godayol to the team. Godayol missed the opening game on account of a seriousness illness to his father.

LAST YEAR, GODAYOL was one of the main reasons for the Orange's 5-1 won and lost record. A tricky ball handler who is noted for his stylish game, Godayol will do much to strength the forward wall if he can regain last year's form.

Should Godayol not be ready yet, Coccari will go along with Bill Ayres, who started against Cornell in the season's opener.

Once again, Gunnar Wirth will start in the goal slot. Goal was a constant problem for the Orange until the versatile Wirth filled the spot. Against Cornell, Wirth accredited himself well and coupled with the Orange's strong defensive Syracuse promises to give the line headed by Capt. Don Moller. Cortland forward wall a rough time.

The only starting position not yet filled is the left wing slot. The three booters who are in the running for the starting berth are George Hertz, Bob Kelly and Mike Newcomb.

ON THE BASIS of his performance against Cornell, Hertz appears to have the inside track. However, Coccari has not yet made up his mind and probably will use all three extensively regardless who starts.

The rest of the starting lineup will parallel the one Coccari fielded against Cornell.

One miner change will see sophomore Joe Milliron in one of the fullback positions during great lengths of the game. Milliron has showed so well in practice, that Coccari plans to use him often in order to rest starting fullbacks Nick Razos and Chuck Mayhood.

AXEL SPOTS—Coccari is still looking for replacements for George Wolfe, Orv Wambold and Gus Delfino. All three were declared ineligible for scholastic reasons . . . Of the three, Delfino, who was a regular last year, will probably be missed the most.

Forfeits, Low Scoring Feature Intra Action

By HANK GREENWALD

A combined total of five shutouts, three of which ended in deadlocks, highlighted last night's activity at Hendricks field.

Skytop M-7, coached by Bill Rosengren, won by the widest margin as they defeated their neighbors from M-14, 20-0. The strong right arm of quarterback Merko Tonon and the bull-like rushing of Jerry "Moose" Riggi were the dominant factors in the contest.

M-7 JUMPED off to a 14-0 half-time advantage as Tonon hit Riggi with a 40-yard payoff aerial. Tonon again connected, this time with end Dick Hovancik to notch the winners' second score. Riggi then broke through center and raced 45 yards to round out the scoring for M-7.

With Bob Conklin providing the offensive punch, Alfred Smith blanked Skytop M-3, 12-0. Conklin raced 40 yards with an interception to give the victors their initial six points. He also tallied later in the ball game to terminate the scoring for Alfred Smith.

Washington Arms 2-3 and the Toppers of M-4 fought to no avail as the contest ended, 0-0. Staunch defensive work by Steve Hartman of Washington Arms, was a feature of the hard-fought game.

In a contest that closely paralled its predecessor, Skytop M-8 and Collendale A-9 failed to produce a score. Both outfits possessed numerous scoring opportunities only to see them go by the boards.

A HEART-STOPPING goal line stand in the final 30 seconds aided the City Men in their 0-0 deadlock with Livingstone. The Livingstone boys drove to the one-yard stripe before losing the ball on downs.

Victorious in their last outing by an 18-0 margin, the Steelers found the going a little tougher this week as they succumbed to GDI, 13-6. There was little to choose between the first half play. At intermission time the scoreboard read, 0-0.

However, the tussle did a complete turnabout in the final chapter, offensively speaking. The Steelers broke the scoring ice as Dick Neufang dropped a 35 yard pass into the waiting arms of Tom Hinchey.

Minutes later, GDI sprang to life as Frank Smith evened matters with a broken-field scoring run of 25 yards. A Neufang to Smith pass put the winners ahead 7-6. Further demonstrating his running ability, Smith registered his second six pointer of the evening as he broke into the clear from 40 yards out.

AS SEEMS to be the case in recent intramural swimming meets forfeit walked off as the big winner again last night. Of the scheduled five meets on the card, four of them resulted in no opposition for the winners.

Gaining easy decisions were Skytop M-14, M-1, M-10 and Washington Arms. Those squads which failed to make an appearance were Collendale A-9, Skytop M-2, M-3 and M-6, respectively.

In the one meet that took place, Grover Cleveland submerged Skytop M-4, 16-6. Pacing the Clevelanders' attack were John Brockman in the 50-yard freestyle and Ed Palmer in the 50-yard breaststroke. Larry Knight outdistanced the field to capture the losers' lone first place with a win in the 50-yard backstroke.

As the awarding of seven points for a relay win would have no bearing on the final outcome, the event did not take place. This is the usual procedure when one team trails the other by a lopsided margin.

Point awards are made on the basis of five points for a first place finish, three points for second place and one point for third place.

By BOB LEFKO
Daily Orange Junior Editor

In the Orange's first two games, they were challenged by strong running attacks. Last week against the Fordham Rams, the main problem was the New Yorker's masterful passing attack. Tomorrow afternoon for the first time this season, the Orangemen will have to show both a strong passing and rushing defense since Penn State is efficient in both departments.

With versatile Tony Rados handling the ball-throwing chores, the Nittany Lions are known as a strong squad through the air. Proof of this is the statistics for their first three games in which they completed 30 of 68 heaves for 368 yards and four TD's.

RADOS WAS responsible for 28 of these completions in 60 attempts and all the touchdowns. He also set up two other scores with his flips.

Partly responsible for the passing effectiveness has been the Pennsylvanian's strong end crew which is undoubtedly one of the best in the east.

Easiest proof of the Staters strength at the flanks is that Jesse Arnelle and Jack Sherry have been relegated to second-string berths. Both were stars of the 1952 football squad and in preseason ratings Arnelle was generally considered one of the 10 best ends in the country.

Nevertheless, senior Don Malinak and junior Jim Garrity have shown enough to oust him. In the opening games, Malinak caught five flips for 55 yards and one score. Garrity was really the big threat with 13 receptions for 174 yards and a solo marker.

LEADING RUNNER for the Lions is halfback Lenny Moore, a sophomore from Reading, Pa. The flashy speedster is already a legend in Pennsylvania sport annals as he garnered 22 touchdowns in senior year for Reading High School. So far this year he has carried the ball 37 times for 102 yards.

Rotating at the left half spot with Moore is senior veteran Dick Jones. Although he hasn't carried the ball too frequently, he has still managed to gain 111 yards in his nine carries for a 12.2 average per carry.

Junior Ron Younker will probably fill the right half spot. Standing only 5 feet 8 inches, the veteran is rated as a good, steady ballplayer. Backing up Younker at right half will be last year's starter Keith Vesling. Vesling has been out of the lineup since the opening clash with Wisconsin due to a dislocated elbow but is said to be ready for part-time duty.

Weakest spot in the backfield is at fullback where Bill Straub fills the plunging duties. Playing his first varsity year, Straub has averaged 4.7 yards per carry thus far.

MOVING TO THE line, Coach Rip Engle is expected to field Dante DeFalco and Otto Kneidinger at tackle. DeFalco, a veteran from New Castle, Pa., is the biggest man on the Nittany's starting squad weighing 210-pounds. Kneidinger, who switched from end, is a 205-pound sophomore from Bellwood, Pa.

The center part of the line will probably be filled with Sam Green and Keith Horn at the guards and Don Balthaser at center. Horn suffered a dislocated left elbow against Penn two weeks ago but should be ready again tomorrow.

The Lions have shown improvement in each game so far this year and should be ready for their best battle tomorrow.

They opened their season by falling to the Big 10 champs, Wisconsin, 20-0. In their next clash they started quickly but couldn't hold an early lead against archrival Penn, losing 13-7.

Last week, they proved that they still will be hard to beat this year by running all over the same Boston U. team which defeated Syracuse, 13-13.

LEFTOVERS: Rados has thrown passes to nine different receivers in the season's first three games . . . Last year's clash found the Orange on the long end, 26-6 . . . Saturday's game will be the first home clash for the Lions and the first contest away from Archbold stadium for the Saltines.

Harriers Face Middies, Redmen

By AL GEFEN
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Syracuse university's cross-country team will leave this afternoon for New York city for the running of a triangular race with Navy and St. John's Saturday morning on the Van Courtlandt Park course.

The Saltine runners will enter the meet as slight favorites to capture team honors. This will be the second race of the young season for the Orangemen. Last Saturday the Piety thinclads easily outclassed the Raiders from Colgate 21-40.

DON FREYER, one of the veterans of Bob Grieve's thinclads is counted on to garner some valuable points in tomorrow's triangular meet with Nav yand St. oJhn's. Photo by Oscar Kruker

A YEAR ago, Syracuse faced Navy and St. John's along with Manhattan in a quadrangular meet in the metropolis. The Hillmen won the competition with a team score of 25. St. John's was second with 56 points, Navy third with 67 points and Manhattan brought up the rear with a total of 93 points.

Little is known about the Middies and the Redmen. If last year's race is any indication as to what will happen Saturday, the Pietymen should have little trouble in coming off with their second victory of the season.

Most of the boys who competed for Navy and St. John's a year ago were sophomores and juniors and have returned this season to their respective schools. With an added year of experience they could prove more troublesome than they were a year ago at this time.

Several of the Saltine runners went through brief workouts in anticipation of the coming meet. The drills were limited chiefly to warming up exercises and short jogs over a small portion of the course.

IT STILL has not been determined if sophomore Les Vielbig will make the trip to New York. The promising young runner hurt his ankle early this week in practice and has not participated in any drills since his injury. Vielbig finished seventh last week in the race with Colgate.

The other Syracusan who suffered an ankle anjury will definitely make the trip. Tom Coulter, who was hurt just prior to the Colgate encounter, has been working out most of the week and has looked fairly well in practice time trials. Tom ran in last week's race, but finished a dismal 13th.

The regular Hill runners will make the trip to the world's largest city. In addition to Coulter, Coach Bob Grieve will take along with him Captain Ray Osterhout, Don Fryer, Ed Alger, Frank Calzi, Steve Armstrong, Gene Parker, Jim George and Jack Hubbard.

Hubbard did quite well in his first cross-country race. He placed 12th in the Colgate encounter. Bob Grieve expects to turn Jack into a half-miler, once the track season begins. Last year he competed in the 220 and quarter mile events.

THE EXCELLENT showing of Gene Parker against the Maroon surprised Grieve last weekend and the latter hopes that this is a sign that the Orange mentor can count on the fleet-footed veteran for several more good races this season.

Grieve is somewhat disappointed at the showings of the veterans on the squad. Last year at this time these boys were coming through with better times. He hopes, however, that with another race or two under their belts these competitors will show up much better.

HARRIER BITS: It will be quite a disappointment for Les Vielbig if he is unable to make the trip. His home is on Long Island . . . The Orangemen have been favored with good weather this week for workouts. A week ago, rain and cold weather hampered practice drills Wednesday and Thursday .

Orange Grid . . .

up from that which opened the Fordham game is at fullback, where soph Don Laaksonen has again been promoted to a starting roll. He had originally filled in for the injured Wetzel, but was replaced in the Fordham encounter by soph Ed Allbright.

The Orange end positions will be manned by Ray Perkins, who stood out in the Fordham fray, and soph Pete Schwert. Les McClelland and Jim George, one of the most improved players on the squad, will open at the tackle slots.

Sam Johnson or soph Cal Smith will start at left guard, and Bob Fleck will open at the opposite guard slot. The center and linebacker par excellent continues to be tenacious Ted Kukowski, the great Orange hope for all-East honors.

EITHER BRUCE YANCEY or Pat Stark will lead the team from the quarterback position. Both are good ball handlers and passers and much of the Syracuse offense revolves around them. Bob Leberman, hardest runner on the team, will again be the workhorse from the left half slot and soph Lyle Carlson should get the starting nod at right half over veteran Art Troilo. Fullback Laaksonen completes the starting team.

This is the first Orange away game after three straight tilts in Archbold stadium. The Piety eleven does not reurn home again unil Colgate weekend on November 14. Syracuse will face Penn State, Illinois, Holy Cross and Cornell on foreign soil. After the traditional Colgate clash, the Orange will close the season in Philadelphia by meeting Villanova for the first time on the gridiron.

Inside Intras

Intramural Highlights On Grid, Swimming.

By DAVE BENNETT

Syracuse's intramural program has been under way for about one week, long enough for trends to develop but not long enough to get a definite evaluation of the teams which will lead their flights and battle it out in the playoffs in both swimming or football.

Touch football, with its six fraternity flights, four living center divisions, and an independent flight, presents the most muddled picture.

Teams with two victories in as many starts in the grid divisions are Phi Delt, a perennial intra athletic power, in Flight I; Sigma Chi, Flight II; Zeta Psi, Flight III; and Alpha Chi Rho in Flight IV.

Delta Kappa Epsilon's hopes for an undefeated season were ruined on Monday night when a surprising Phi Tau team sent the Dekes to their second loss in six years in regular season football play.

The two loss elimination rule makes any prediction concerning the power teams in intra swimming impossible. The mermen compete from 5 to 6 p.m. Monday through Thursday in the Archbold pool.

All races are over a 50 yard distance with freestyle, back stroke and breast stroke events contested. If one team is not leading by a sufficient score, a relay race is added over a 200 yard course.

This season has been marked by a change in some of the football rules. Kickoffs this year are to be treated the same as punts. The ball is not a free ball because it travels 20 yards and the onside kick is forbidden.

Failure of the kicking team to abide by the rule will result in the loss of the ball plus a 15 yard penalty. The reason for the new rule is to prevent pile-ups.

INTRA BITS: The annual cross-country race will be run on October 31. The harriers will race over a 2.9 mile course at Drumlins. Intramural Director Milt Howard states that all teams wishing to enter the run should be in training now.

Syracuse Sailors Seek Second Seasonal Win

By JACK DICKERSON
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Pointing towards their second consecutive victory, the Orange sailors will engage Cornell, Colgate and RPI in their opening regatta tomorrow on Onondaga lake. Race time is scheduled for 2 p.m.

Eight races will be sailed in all on the choppy lake with its ever-shifting winds. The Hillmen will out to test the experience of practice sessions in their own Tech dinghies over the last two weeks.

Probable skippers for Syracuse are Jack Cummings, Ken Resen and Jack Dickerson. Resen showed very well in his initial varsity meet last Saturday, winning his only two starts by wide margins.

Mary Jean Perry and Mary Lyn Miller are scheduled as light weather crews and Dick Hollander and Paul Frahm will do the crewing if a strong breeze is encountered. Definite skippering and crew assignments will not be made by Team Captain Jack Cummings until after today's practice.

On Sunday the frosh seamen will open their 1953-'54 season with the Mid-Atlantic division B freshman elimination. The regatta will be held on Onondaga lake, starting at 10 a.m. Cornell, RPI, St. Lawrence and Hobart will be on hand for the meet which will determine the two qualifiers for the mid-Atlantic Freshman championships at Navy two weeks later.

Leading the Orange sailors are Lee Short and Artie Arnold, a pair of Snipe sailors from the local area. Short has twelve years experience racing at the Sodus Bay Yacht club and Arnold is an ex-Coast Guardsman, rated one of the best skippers in the Onondaga Yacht club.

WRESTLING TEAM

All aspirants for the varsity wrestling team should report to Coach Joe McDaniel at Archbold gym, Monday afternoon at 3 p.m.

In March, 1953, the Department of Defense disclosed the existence of the Chance Vought guided missile, the Regulus, designed under the sponsorship of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics for launching from submarines, surface ships and shore bases. In May, 1953, the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics announced that Chance Vought had won a design competition for a new Navy Day Fighter, it being selected as the design best suited for Navy requirements from designs submitted by eight aircraft manufacturers. This engineering work was added to the current Chance Vought projects, the F7U-3 Cutlass and the attack airplane, the A2U-1. Moreover, other research and development programs which will shape the aircraft designs of the future are being carried out at the present time.

These engineering projects offer excellent long range employment opportunities in many fields of engineering and science as Chance Vought enters its thirty-seventh year designing and building military aircraft. Newly graduated engineers and scientists from the Bachelor to the Doctor's level will find interesting futures awaiting them in the design and production of these aircraft.

Annual Geographers Meeting Scheduled

The annual meeting of the New York-Ontario Division of the Association of American Geographers will take place here this weekend. Dr. Preston E. James, department chairman, will receive more than 100 delegates. Conference registration will begin at 9 a.m. tomorrow in the geography department office, Lyman Hall.

"Resource Utilization in New York State" will be the topic of the morning session, with Dr. James presiding. Gladys Gilbert, Oneonta State Teachers' College, will discuss "Conflicting Interests in the Mt. Upton Dam Proposal." Howard E. Conklin, Cornell University, will present "Problems of Soil Management in New York State," and Ralph T. King, New York State College of Forestry, will speak on "Values of the Wild Life Resource."

FOLLOWING THE MEETING, Robert E. Dickinson, of the geography department, will moderate a discussion on "Geography in New York State and Ontario." Robert T. Redden, Buffalo State Teachers College, and Carol Northrup and Ruth Parker, both of Fayetteville-Manlius Central School, will discuss "Geography in Elementary and Secondary School Curricula in New York State."

Donald Reznowski, New York State Department of Commerce, will speak on "Geography and the New York State Department of Commerce." Donald F. Putnam, University of Toronto, will discuss "Review of Geographic Studies at Toronto," while Eleanor E. Hanlon, Syracuse university, will present a "Review of Geographic Studies at Syracuse university.

Following this discussion a tea will take place at 4:15 p.m. in the Founders Room, Maxwell Hall.

There will be a conference banquet at Drumlins at 7:00 p.m. with Joseph E. Van Riper, Harpur College, as toastmaster. J. Wreford Watson, director of the geographical branch, Department of Mines and Technical Surveys, Ottawa, Canada, will be guest speaker. He will speak on "Resource Developments in Northern Canada."

The delegates, headed by Professor Hibberd B. Kline Jr., will embark on a field trip at 9:30 a.m. Sunday to visit the county salt areas.

CinemaScope Spectacle

DEMETRIUS, played by VICTOR MATURE, watches in disappointment as Roman soldiers gamble on the site of the Crucifixion. The scene is from "THE ROBE," an adaptation of Lloyd C. Douglas' best-selling novel. The film is produced in the CinemaScope process, termed revolutionary by cinema critics. It is currently playing at Schine's Paramount and stars RICHARD BURTON, JEAN SIMMONS and MATURE.

Faculty Women Invited to Swim

Recreational Dips Open to Students

Women faculty members and women employed by the University are invited to a recreational dip between 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. Monday in the Women's building pool.

Required special privilege cards, costing $3 per semester, will be available in the locker room. Following Monday evening, privilege cards may be secured between 9 a.m. and 12 noon and from 1:15 to 4:30 p.m. in room 202, Women's building.

Undergraduate and graduate women with special or regular privilege cards may attend recreational dips throughout the week. The pool will be open Mondays, Tuesdays, and Fridays from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Wednesday evenings.

Tank suits are available in sizes 32 and 34. Women wearing other sizes are requested to bring their own bathing suits until the tank suit shipment is completed. Bathing caps are required in the pool.

state senate in 1943, and lieutenant governor in 1945.

"If you want a feeling of excited confusion, get right in the middle of politics," Cynthia exclaimed recalling election night, 1952.

HER FATHER won by a narrow margin. Vermont is traditionally Republican but last year Gov. Emerson had competition from another Republican who ran on an independent ticket.

"We started listening to returns in the early evening and didn't get to bed until 5 a.m. when the other candidates had conceded," Cynthia said. "Then I got up at seven to go to school."

The family (there is also 9-year-old Nancy Lee) spent election night in their home and phone calls came continually from campaign headquarters in Rutland.

Vermont lacks a governor's mansion so the Emersons spend weekdays in a 3-room apartment in the capital, Montpelier. Weekends they live 50 miles away at their home in Barton.

BARTON IS A small town and Cynthia was worried about living in a city as large as Syracuse. "I was afraid I wouldn't know what to do," she said. "But everyone has been so friendly. Syracuse doesn't seem any bigger than Barton now."

You girls in Cynthia's cottage will recall the political discussions you had with her. She is kept busy defending the Republican party against a Democratic majority in house bull sessions. Vermont has never had a Democratic administration in all its history.

Cynthia, although proud of her father's record, does not seem impressed by his position. "In Barton where he still practices law people never call him Governor. It's just plain Lee."

"THERE'S NOTHING like picking up a newspaper to see what critics have to say about you," she said. "It's wonderful the way my father never lets it bother him. At least he doesn't show it."

Although Gov. Emerson has received honorary degrees from the University of Vermont, the state agricultural college at Burlington, and Norwich university, Cynthia says he is proudest of his 1952 degree from Syracuse and keeps it framed in a prominent place in their home.

"If I could be half as good a woman as my father is a man, I'd be very satisfied," Cynthia concluded earnestly.

Engineering Building Construction Will Start Immediately on Quad

By ROGER J. HERZ
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Four building contracts totaling $424,457 have been awarded for construction of the basement and sub-basement of engineering building two, F. Gordon Smith, University vice-president and executive secretary, announced Friday.

Work will start immediately, he said, and will be completed in 180 calendar days. Building two will be erected south of Machinery hall and west of Slocum.

GENERAL CONSTRUCTION contract was given to the Byrne Construction co., inc. at $260,877.

Plumbing will be done by Burns Bros. Plumbers, Inc., at a cost of $39,788. The heating and ventilating contract was awarded to Kenneth A. Taylor, inc. at $38,000. Electrical work will be done by Krause and Heil, inc., for $85,792.

The contracts were awarded to the low bidders in each of the four construction divisions. A public opening and reading of the bids was held last Thursday in Maxwell.

Specifications and plans for the new building had been released to contractors on September 26.

A SMALL PART of the rear of Machinery hall will be removed to leave room between the two buildings. Provision has been made for the future addition of four more floors and a southerly extension, at a cost of approximately $1 million. The greenhouse will be dismantled during this second phase of construction.

Building two, as yet unnamed, will house mechanical, electrical and aeronautical engineering laboratories, the engineering library, administration offices, drafting rooms, and the Institute of Industrial Research.

Structure exterior will follow the current University style of brick facing with limestone trim. Building architects are Harry A. and F. Curtis King.

Smith told The Daily Orange that specifications for engineering building one, which will be located south of Smith hall, will tentatively be given to contractors on Oct. 26. Bids will be due approximately one month later.

BUILDING ONE will be a four-story structure housing chemical, civil, industrial and electrical engineering labs.

Clark D. Ahlberg, assistant dean of the College of Engineering, says that elevation difference between ground level on the east and west sides of building two will be about 21 feet, about one foot less than the height of the basement and sub-basement.

The western wall will be raised another three feet to the window sill level at the close of the present construction, he said, so as not to leave the structure with an unfinished appearance.

Completion of the two buildings will complete the return of the College of Engineering to the main campus and will be a major step in turning the east quadrangle into a science and engineering campus.

After purchase of the Thompson rd. campus from the government after world war II, the College was centered there until sale of the property in September 1953 to Carrier corporation. Planning of the new buildings has been in progress since that time.

Three for the Vote

THREE MEN will vie for the post of freshman class presidenin in the October 28 elections. They are WILLIAM BROWN of Piety Hill Alliance, RICHARD GREEN, Tri-Orange, and WARREN L. KIMBLE, United Students Party. Names of independent candidates will be released by civil service Wednesday. Staff Photos by Art Winslow, Fred and John

Schedules Given For Music Group Activities; Auditions

Meeting times for musical organizations have been announced by the music school.

University chorus directed by Prof. Hakanson will meet in 307 HL on Tuesday at 7 p.m. Catholic choir, Mr. McGrath, director, will meet at 7:30 p.m., Thursday in 205 Crouse; Men's glee club, Prof. Hakanson, director, Wednesday, 7:15 p.m., in 205 Crouse and University Madrigal singers, directed by Prof. Bacon, Tuesday, 7:15 p. m. in 307 Crouse. Try-outs for Chapel choir can be arranged with Prof. Poister, director, in Room 202 Crouse.

University orchestra directed by Dr. Capurso, will meet Wednesday in Crouse auditorium, String section, 6:30 p.m.; full orchestra, 7:30 p.m. Chamber music ensemble, Prof. Krasner, director, will meet Tuesday at 4:15 p.m.

University bands directed by Dr. Simmons will meet at the following times: Marching band, Tuesday and Thursday at 7 p.m. in Crouse auditorium; Concert band, for sight reading, Monday, 4 p.m. in Crouse auditorium.

Auditions for Symphonic band will be held at noon Tuesday and Thursday in 303 Crouse. Students interested in trying out for the basketball season Pep band, brass or woodwind ensembles, should see Dr. Simmons on Tuesdays or Thursdays at noon in 303 Crouse.

Dean Noble to Toll Crouse Chimes

Dean Charles C. Noble will toll Big Ben on Crouse college chimes at noon today, heralding Chapel's midday meditational service.

The Dekes will step aside when the dean rings the big bells today but will take over tomorrow tolling the chimes at 11:58 a.m. as a reminder of the daily service.

Formerly known as daily chapel, the 15-minute services include organ music with some directed meditational thought. They are planned by chairman Jane Scheckells.

Policy Chairmen Application Due

Applications for the position of plenary chairman of the foreign policy conference scheduled for March, may be turned in before Monday, Oct. 26, to Marcia Michelbacher, Chi Omega.

Registrar Announces Grading Regulations

Grades of F will no longer count as minus one grade point per credit hour, effective this semester, Keith J. Kennedy, University registrar, told The Daily Orange Friday.

Thus a student receiving an F will gain credit hours toward graduation but receive no honor points. The course, if it is a required one must then be retaken. If the course is not required, petition may be made to substitute another one.

The action was taken because members of the University Senate felt that the minus points were penalizing studentns in double, Kennedy said.

Many years ago class standings was tabulated by dividing grade points earned by credit hours passed. This was replaced by the method used until this semester, by which grade points were divided by credits taken. An A counted three points, B two, C one, D ero and F minus one.

The only change has been to change the minus one to a zero. all former grades standing with The action will not be retroactive the same number of honor points.

Requirements for graduation are 120 credit hours and a 1.0 average, based on number of honor points divided by number of credit hours. One hundred twenty credit hours of C's would earn 120 honor points —a 1.0 cumulative average.

Wilson, Miss Bury Named Chairmen

Janice Bury and Kevin Wilson have been named over-all co-chairmen of the St. Thomas More Halloween costume party, scheduled from 8-12 p.m., Friday, Oct. 23, 1953, in the lounge of the St. Thomas More chapel.

Tickets for the dance priced at 50 cents, are now on sale from all committee co-chairmen.

Shirley Lemax and Norma Iacovelli have been selected to head the food committee for the party. Decorations chairman is Rosemarie Vryi, while publicity heads are Marie Basil and Jack Reilly. Lorraine Chanatry and Robert Hoban will take care of reservations.

Prizes for the most original and best costumes at the dance will be awarded.

Numerous Colleges Initiate New Plan

Universities Adopt European System

An "old world" system of higher learning is soon to be established at several leading U. S. universities.

As reported in the New York Times recently, the method will bring about "drastic changes not only with the present course of studies but with the entire concept of undergraduate study in American colleges and universities."

The new program "stresses the students' own initiative and ability." While attending classes will be compulsory, no minimum of attendance will be required for the lectures.

The Cambridge and Oxford arrangement of giving a general examination every two years will be incorporated, thus obliging the scholars to "sustain their knowledge over a period of time long enough to absorb it as part of their intellectual experience." Progress tests however, which will serve as indicators to measure achievements, will be given.

THE COMMITTEE working on the new plan has also revised the school calendar. The result will

Finalists Compete for Goon Queen

ELEVEN HILL "dolls" have been selected for the finals in the Goon Squad's Sweetheart Contest. The kids will put their best feet forward tonight in the finals elimination. The winning coed will reign supreme at the Jiminy Cricket ball scheduled for Saturday night in the Women's Building. Staff Photo by Pete Preston

The sweetheart of the Goon Squad Jiminy Cricket ball will be chosen at 7 p.m. tonight when 11 frosh beauties appear before judges in the finals of the sweetheart contest.

The 11 beauties were picked from 24 semi-finalists last Thursday. Competing for the sweetheart title are Eleanor Beig, Joan Davey, Barbara Feick, Jane Roseman, twins Delys and Perri Skolnick, Marlene Sime, Janet Travis, Greta Wolff, Dolo Wysocki, and Marilyn Levy.

The sweetheart will be crowned at the Jiminy Cricket ball, 8 to 12 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 24 in the Women's building. She will be awarded prizes and her picture will appear in The Daily Orange.

A new all-campus band, the Saltines, under the baton of Ken Fredericks, will provide mood music for dancing.

Someplace to Go

When the old Student Union closed last spring, University officials said the services and many of the facilities offered by the Union would be made available to students this year.

The University specified, however, that in all probability the services would not be offered in one central location or all completely under one organization. The Women's Building was mentioned as the probable scene of this year's activities.

Since then, some of the services have been made available in the Women's building. Several lounges have been made available for organizational use and the travel bureau and information services are available. Friday night dances may possibly be held in the Women's building.

But no plans have been made concerning the fate of the talent bureau, mimeo service, pamphlet distribution service, rec hall, snack bar, textbook lending library, television room, Sunday movies, games and other activities.

No doubt the University will soon reinstitute many of the services. The campus is in the throes of reconstruction and physical change, the Women's building has only recently been put to use and the University is hamstrung for space.

But such important functions as those performed by a Union should not be subjected even for one day.

Even though most of the facilities will again be available, it is ridiculous to decentralize the activities and deny the students some common meeting place.

Educators often discuss lines of communication and student morale. And yet American colleges and universities are notorious for directing their action only toward textbook education and athletic programs. We tend to ignore the activities that make us well-rounded individuals.

Foreign students, independents, transfers and activities members have no campus building or organibation that offers all the recreation activities that might satisfy wide interest ranges. These students are merely numbers punched in IBM cards and they must fare for themselves —either in the movies, in a coffee shop or in some bar.

The city does offer many things for the students to do in their leisure time. But how many can afford to take advantage of them?

We suggest the University not only speed up its efforts at reinstituting the services in question, but that it also take a second look to see if there is some central location available—in the Women's building or elsewhere.

University of Minnesota recently spent $7 million for a Student Union; Williams, a smaller college, spent $3 million. Willard Straight hall at Cornell is familiar to most Syracusans.

We are not naive enough to suggest that Syracuse—not in as good a financial position as these other schools—follow suit. But we do think that even the basement of some building or a big prefab would suffice for a service organization, no matter who administered it.

If the University thinks the name "Student Union" is tainted, it is right in abandoning the term.

We certainly hope they will not abandon the services.

Unless these services are reinstituted—under one roof —the feelings of loneliness and boredom resulting will breed more enmity than all the educational facilities and new campus sidewalks can counteract.

If the services are all to be in the Women's building, okay. If the University doesn't want to call it the Student Union, okay again. But do create one place to go.

A Slow Boat to the Roof

By MARY VIVIAN

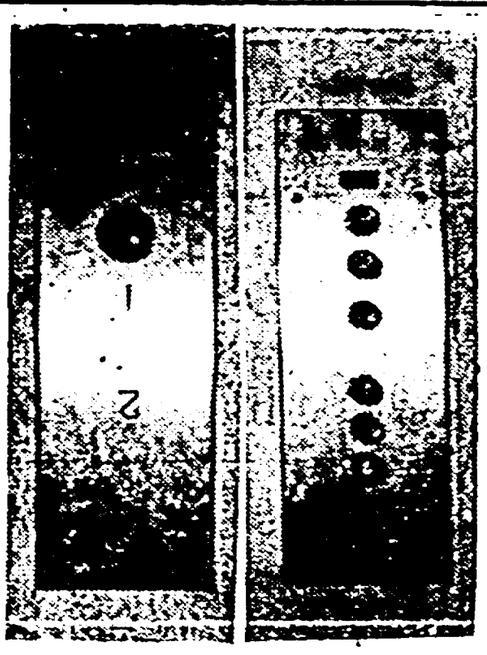
This is the story of an elevator.

On this large campus of ours there is only one elevator which is available for use of the student body. There are freight elevators in most of the campus buildings and elevators for faculty members. Lyman hall even has an elevator for which each of its graduate students owns a key.

But there is only one elevator which any student can step into and operate by himself. This is located in the Women's building.

As one enters the main entrance on the ground floor of the building, the elevator can be found as the reason for the large crowd standing in the hall to the right.

This elevator has the tendency to be very slow. In fact, it takes longer to take the elevator from the first floor to the third floor, stopping at the second floor, than it takes to walk the two flights of stairs.



To the observer, the panel on the wall for the elevator seems simple: floors 1, 2 and 3. But not so when the passenger boards the lift. He is faced with a panel that reads: G, 1 and 2. It takes reflection to figure it . . . by then one may be in the basement.

A very confusing thing about this elevator is that the control panel in the hall is labeled 1, 2 and 3 while that inside the elevator is labeled G, 1 and 2. This control panel inside the elevator not only provides one with the buttons to get one to the floor to which one desires, but also provides buttons to ring an alarm in case of an emergency, to open the door if neccessary (although it automatically opens as it stops at each floor), and also to stop the elevator in an emergency.

It takes the elevator 17 seconds to go from the first floor to the second floor and another 17 seconds to go from the second floor to the third floor. It stops at the second floor to discharge or picks up passengers for 12 and a half seconds. However, if one wishes to go straight from the first to the third floor the trip takes 24 seconds.

When walking up, it takes 15 seconds to walk from the first floor to the second floor with 12 seconds between floors. It takes 17 seconds to walk to the third floor from there. When added up, this comes to 44 seconds, two seconds less than it takes to go from the first to the third floor by elevator stopping at the second floor.

When coming down, the elevator takes 14 seconds to go from the third to the second floor and 17 seconds to go to the first floor. The stop between floors also is 12 and a half seconds. But the journey straight down without the stop takes 35 seconds.

When walking do...., it takes one 15 seconds to go from the third to the second floor with an addition 12 seconds on the landing, and 15 seconds to go to the first floor. This, in all, totals 42 seconds walking. This is another two seconds less than the elevator takes, stopping at the second floor.

If the elevator is going up and stops to let a passenger out and someone pushes the control button on the first floor hall, the elevator will go back down to the first floor again regardless of whether someone inside wants to go to the third floor first.

The elevator has a capacity for carrying 26 persons or 4,000 pounds. However, those 26 persons would probably have to be very, very thin to all fit inside. And each person would have to weigh 153 pounds to meet the maximum weight capacity.

BAREFOOT BOY WITH CHEEK by Max Schulman. Garden City, N. Y.; Garden City Books, 1943. The Hill Bookstall.

To review a book written a decade ago is unconventional; but so is this book. Actually, I have just had the fortune of discovering Max Schulman's outrageous expose of American college life, and am addressing this review to those readers who've been so busy with the "heavy stuff" that they've had little time for contemporary satire.

Barefoot Boy With Cheek wittily relates the story of Asa Hearthrug, an innocent and gullible youth from Whistlestop, U.S.A. who leaves his family and his unaffected sweetheart, Lodestone La Toole, to go to the University of Minnesota (an imaginary institution). Asa's first expirence with the strange, new life is a meeting with Mr. Ingerbrestvold, a strange, pretentious character and the University's freshman adviser.

The University of Minnesota not only builds minds; it also builds bodies, and Asa's is no exception. His next experience takes the form of a purposeless physical examination given by medics who all occupy themselves with such irrevelant play as reading "Film Fun," building bo... in bottles, blowing harps and dropping water-filled paper bags on pedestrians below. The youth is considered physically worthy. The adventure which is to come, however, changes all that.

While strolling down fraternity row with the proud feeling that these men were to be his associates, Asa hurdles into a sidewalk trap which is cunningly laid just outside the Alpha Cholera frat house. He is seized. The events that follow would make even the fanatic Greek roar with laughter. Asa is auxiously introduced to Roger Hail fe-llow, the smiling president; to Eino Ffliikkiinnen, the B.M.O.C. football player who constantly threatens to go Mu Beta Fistula if his reverent brothers don't increase the pay; and to Shylock Fiscal, Alpha Cholrea's arm-twisting treasurer. He is fed grits, told a better-than Aesop's story about the glorious organization's history (founded: 500 B.C.) and fined $470 dues.

All is not play at U. of M., so on the following day, Asa embarks upon his career in learning. At his first class, Introduction to Sociology, he is given a list of eight text books to buy (written by the instructing professor during the summer) and is cited a "typical" case history of "a certain Mildred W."

Our hero finally starts to class. It is here that the hero meets Yetta Samovar, a thinly moustached Russian girl who entreats him to fight for the cause of the working masses. Asa falls in love and pins her with the AC pledge symbol. It takes only a single meeting with Yetta's "revolutionary" associates to move Asa to action. He prepares to leave Alpha Cholera for life with the "proletariat." But this is only momentary. A few well-chosen words on democracy and the fraternal system by the influential Roger convince shameful Asa to renounce Yetta's movement and to date Noblesse Oblige, an approved Beta Thigh.

This introduces the triangle. Asa must not take his pin from Yetta, for it is through her contacts that his articles get published in the campus literary magazine. But he must pin petite, sophisticated Noblesse, for what Beta Thigh girl would date a man without his pin? Asa buys two.

Barefoot Boy With Cheek has a humorous vein that carries a story from preface to end. Its easy, flowing style is uncopied and unequalled; its exaggeration of tale and incident is of such subtlety that the reader loves an author whom he would otherwise curse.

Schulman, the creator, is as qualified to give this tale as is any writer. He was a popular and "successful" student at the same University from which the book gets its setting. It is with understanding, therefore, that Barefoot Boy With Cheek laughs with college campus life and at the travesty of American liberal education.

A SWIM IN 'THE SEA AROUND US'

By CHARLES SAMUELS
Daily Orange Movie Reviewer

The producers of "The Sea Around Us" have seen fit to outfit it with an insipid commentary and a cheap ending, thinking this would help it to "sell." Bu such acts of misguided showmanship they sold short and came close to ruining a highly commendable film. Luckily, their slick showmanship did not obscure its value and the sea literally emerged triumphant.

For the sea is still the sea; it's still as mysterious, still as fascinating and still as full of marvellous opportunities for camera work. And the technicians of this film are nothing loathe to take advantage of these opportunities and they have done a fine job.

Everything is ... better here. The waves are higher, the water is clearer and the fish are more bizarre, and they easily s... away with top acting honors. The film has a tendency to drag and when it needs a shot in its watery arm an octopus and a shark come on to perform a duel which makes a human brawl look like a kaffe klatch. And very exciting stuff it is too.

The cheap theatricalism of the ending consists of the ominous warning that the melting of the sea's glaciers could half drown the earth. This was presumably aimed at sending you out of the theater to turn off your wa...

TV Night With Bolger

By DICK CASE

That dancing scarecrow man is back on television; hopping gayly about through 30-minutes of the sponsor's cash.

It was only through a noteable amount of convicing that Ray Bolger was beckoned back into the video scene following his rather exciting debut last Christmas on the Colgate Hour.

Now Mr. Tap Toe has his own weekly show called "Where's Raymond?" (channel 3, Thursday, 7 p.m.), the second chapter of which was knocycled up to Syracuse last Thursday evening.

"Where's Raymond?" is one of those extremely happy conglomerations built around Ray's capacity for lightness and his general good humor.

The story-line of the series concerns Raymond, a carefree sort, who, while starring in a very successful show, causes his family great concern with a train of impish adventures. There's an elder brother and an old-maid aunt thrown in, along with various show folk, and the easy thread winds its way through a half-hour with minimum effort.

I find it difficult to picture Ray cast as anything but an entertainer. This particular role gives him ample room to dash off a few dance routines now and then and to oogle his rubberish helplessly at the camera.

It's pretty funny stuff.

In this second show, Raymond was bothered by his overanxious brother who would have him fire a kindly old, (and that is used advisedly) wardrob mistress with his show. How Raymond ducked the dreaded deed was the meat of the plot. He was wisely allowed to covort about as much as possible within the limits of the camera.

Maybe it's because I have always been secretly in love with Ray Bolger that I can find so much comfort in the easy fare of "Where's Raymond?"

It brings reverie to the ceaseless smile of Oz's happy Scarecrow fella and of a amazingly loose-jointed guy who's been away much too long.

I must frankly harbor some admiration for Mr. Jack Webb, creator and star of the "Dragnet" series.

Although Joe Friday has been subjected to a whole rush of assortedly silly parodies of late, he manages to keep a very straight face throughout the entire 30-minutes. Mr. Webb's fine drama, I suspect, will emerge not the least bit tarnished when this craze has faded from whence it came.

Personally, I'm all for forgetting that there ever was a chord like "dum-dee, dum dum."

Claude Rains Readings On Thursday

On Thursday evening of this week, Claude Rains, well-known stage and screen personality, will apply his wide knowledge of things theatrical to a series of dramatic readings in the downtown Lincoln auditorium.

Titled "Words and Music", the program is the second attraction of the Famous Artists' 1953-54 season.

The lineup for the evening consists of great moments from drama and literature as interpreted by the noted actor. Among the pieces selected by Mr. Rains for his Syracuse appearance are "Journey of the Magi" by T. S. Eliot, two scenes from "Julius Caesar," "Richard II", "Enoch Arden" by Alfred Lord Tennyson, excerpts from the "Canterbury Tales" by Chaucer and a delightful comedy by Chechov.

In his last Broadway appearance, Mr. Rains starred in the powerful Arthur L. Koestler drama "Darkness at Noon" for which he received six awards. Among these were the Antoinette Perry Award of the American Theater Wing, the Delia Austrian medal from the Drama League of New York and the New York Drama Critic's award for the best actor of the 1950-51 season.

Mr. Rains will also be remembered for his brilliant interpretation of Shaw's Caesar in Hollywood's "Caesar and Cleopatra." as well as his success on the legitimate stage in varied Shakespearean roles.

Musical background for the Rains' readings will be provided by concert artist Jack Maixim who will turn to the works of Richard Strauss, Karl McDonald and Mariam Brinton for his material. He will also perform a Brahms work in solo.

Ross Dates Lisa

Best Letters Printed

There they were. Sitting at a table in the Onondaga Travel room, and staring into each others eyes. People who had just come from the evening performance of "The Happy Time" at the Astor knew Lisa Ferraday who was the star of the show. But who was the man she was with?

The gentleman in question was none other than Syracuses own Ross Myers. Just as DO promised last Thursday, he was on a date with Miss Ferraday. Ross had written the best letter on why he wanted the date. (See right).

The evening had started when our hero had front row seats to see the "Happy Time." After the show he went backstage to see his dream gal. We next find them in the Travel room. The was playing sweet music, the food was delicious, but our boy didn't notice. His eyes were for Lisa alone.

After two of the most pleasant hours he has spent since he came to Syracuse Ross asked to take Miss Ferraday home. She agreed. As they left the Onondaga we could hear her telling the love smitten Romeo, "don't forget to see me on television October 27." Ain't love grand?

What's buzzin', Cousin?

A sophomore at a midwestern college was bothered by buzzing in his ears and headaches. He went to doctor after doctor ...had his appendix and tonsils removed...his teeth pulled. But nothing helped. Finally, the doctors gave up and told him he had only 6 months to live.

The young fellow decided to "live it up" for his last 6 months. First, he went to his college sportswear shop for the smartest sport shirts money could buy. Naturally, he chose Van Heusen's VAN GAB.

"VAN GAB is completely washable," beamed the salesman. "See the saddle-stitched trim about the collar and pockets. Feel the silky texture of the fabric. And only $5.95. With a 15 neck like yours, I suggest a Medium size."

"Don't waste my time," snapped the fellow. "Give me one of each of the 18 smart solid colors. Size 14."

"But sir," gasped the salesman, "your neck is much larger than a 14. You need at least a 15."

"I've worn a 14 all my life, and I don't feel like changing now," replied the youngster, greatly annoyed.

"Okay," muttered the salesman. "But I warn you, that tight collar will give you buzzing in the ears and headaches!"

Student Union as it was: and as it is today

Woman's Building Houses Some Services: Photographs Recall University Avenue Site

By MARY VIVIAN
Daily Orange Associate Editor

The lives of many of the 8,000 students of Syracuse university have been greatly affected by the lack of the Student Union.

Grads, independents and city and foreign students, who make up more than two-thirds of the University's student population frequented the Union, because it was a good place to spend an evening, or an hour between classes.

The Union offered many services, which taken separately might seem trifling, but when added up, constituted a large part of the social life of most of the students.

For instance, there is no spot on campus where students can go and just sit, or perhaps play cards or chess during a class break. City students, who don't have rooms close by, have no adequate place to study if they have a long break between classes.

And where, besides Coke and Caper, which gets extremely crowded, can a student buy coffee or a snack? For many, Marshall st. is too far to go between classes.

Many of the activities of the Union have been discontinued, although several are still in existence in the Women's building. For example, there is a possibility that the Friday night dances once sponsored by the Union might be held in the dance studio.

The travel bureau is also located in the new building. A file is kept on hand in the receptionists' desk at the information booth of the lobby on the ground floor. The proctoring service and the tutoring service may also be kept there, but no definite decision has been made yet.

There are two lounges in the Women's building which are available for organizations to use. The alumni lounge, located on the second floor, and the city women's lounge on the third floor may be obtained for organizations' use by inquiring at the information desk.

No plans have been made yet concerning the dance, bridge or chess lessons. The activities list will not be published this year because of a lack of backing and money. This list mentioned all campus activities with their officers.

The activities center has also been discontinued. This service furnished organizations with a space in which to use a typewriter, phone, desk and other office work.

There are three classrooms in the Women's building which clubs and activities may use for meetings whenever they are not in use for classes.

The textbook lending library was located temporarily in the library on the third floor. However, it is being stored in one of the Ainsley dr. warehouses because of the lack of suitable storage space on campus.

The distribution service for circulating pamphlets, brochures and posters to living centers is still in a state of limbo.

The fate of the talent bureau, co-sponsored by Red Cross, has not been decided either. This group held auditions for campus and civic organizations who wanted talent for a specific occasion, in addition to producing their own musical show.

The silk screening process which was available for organizations to produce their own posters at little cost, has also been put into storage because of the lack of space in which it could be operated. Last year 1,655 posters were made by 17 non-Student Union activities.

The Union activities center also had a post card duplicator which it rented to campus activities. Again, for lack of space, this service has been discontinued.

The Student Union was located last year in the first floor of Wilson hall at 917 So. Crouse ave. after being evicted from its former home at 405 University pl. for the building of the new men's dorm.

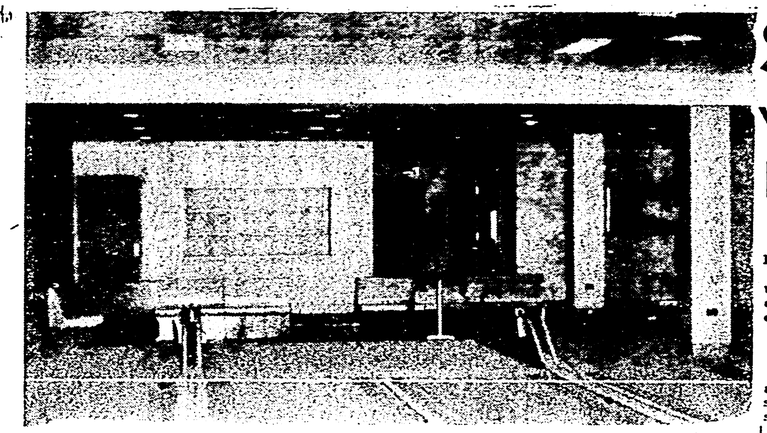
Last May the Union was evicted again, this time by the Chemistry department. The Union was temporarily located until the end of the semester in Prefab 8 behind Crouse. However, most of its facilities have been put into the Ainsley dr. warehouse.

Among other things which the Union sponsored last year were 21 vic and orchestra dances, 13 chess sessions, 14 bridge lessons and 11 bridge club meetings.

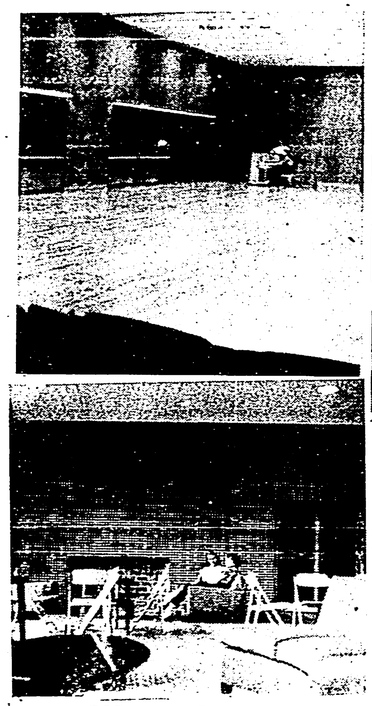
Throughout the year the Union showed a series of 8 movie pictures which 2,360 students attended. The Union also gave free open houses in addition to both national and election coverage.

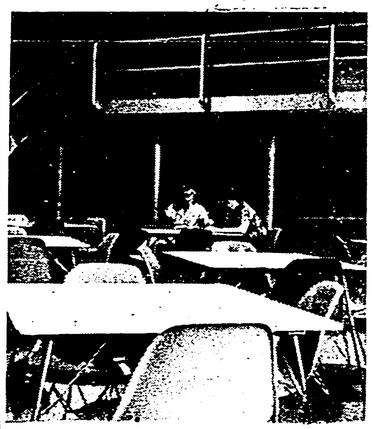
University officials promised that equal facilities to the old Union would be provided. They stressed that they would no longer go under the name Student Union and that they would be decentralized.

To date, those mentioned have been provided, but many still lacking.



ONE OF THE features the Women's building offers the Union did not, are the up-to-date bowling alleys, which are expected to be available for use after class hours. There are six regulation alleys, with all equipment.





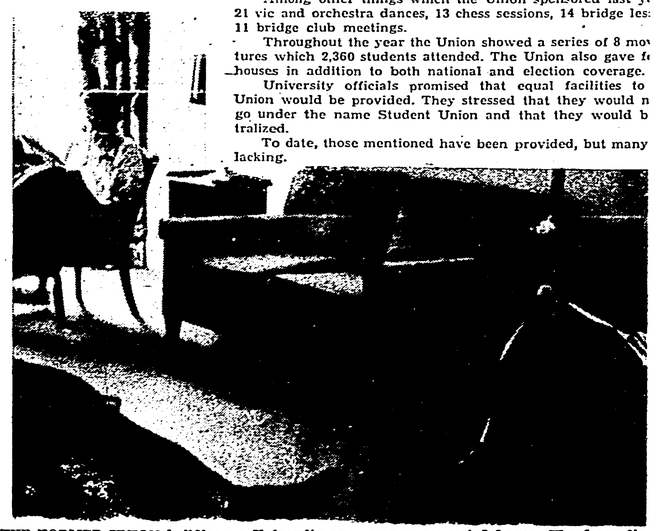
CLOCKWISE FROM LOWER LEFT, lounge space in the Women's building for use by city, foreign and grad students, and those who do not feel like going to their rooms to study or just sit and talk to friends.

DANCING SPACE for proposed resumption of the former Friday night dances, which were held in the Union last year, is available at the Women's building. No mention has been made about resuming the dance classes which occupied the old Union auditorium one night a week.

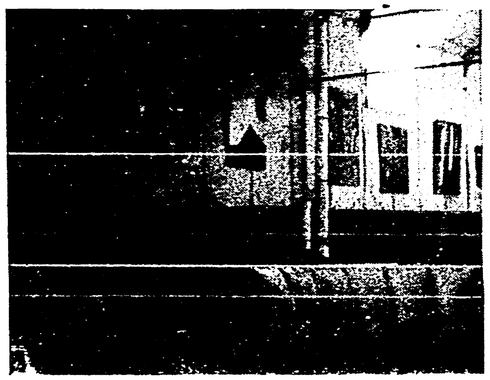
THE PHYSICAL EDUCATION library will, when finished, house books of general interest for other students, in addition to supplementary texts for phys ed majors. The stacks will be ranged along the wall, behind the students.

Women's Building Pictures
By Lee Jones

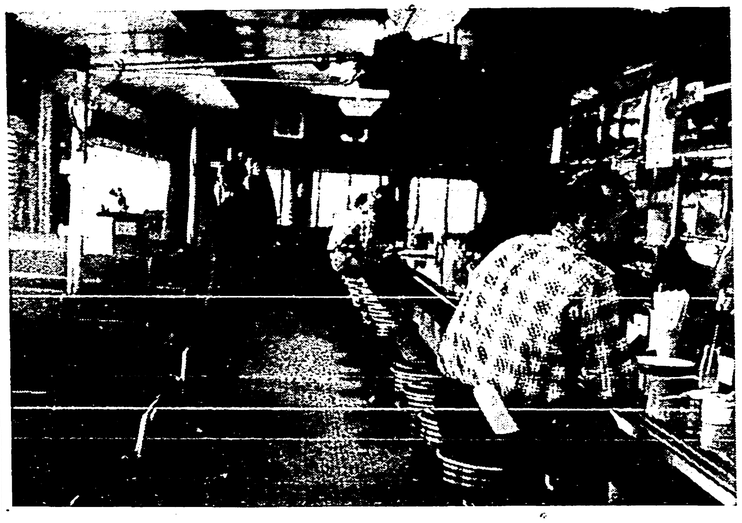
LOUNGE FACILITIES ARE available in the Women's building for those who wish to make use of them. However, the relative inaccessibility of the structure to those who need its space most, makes it inconvenient for small between-class periods.



THE FORMER UNION building on University ave. was a converted house. The large living room served as a student lounge. Copies of the Syracuse and New York newspapers and current issues of national magazines were also placed around the room a spart of the Union's Browsing library. The building was torn down to make room for Watson hall.



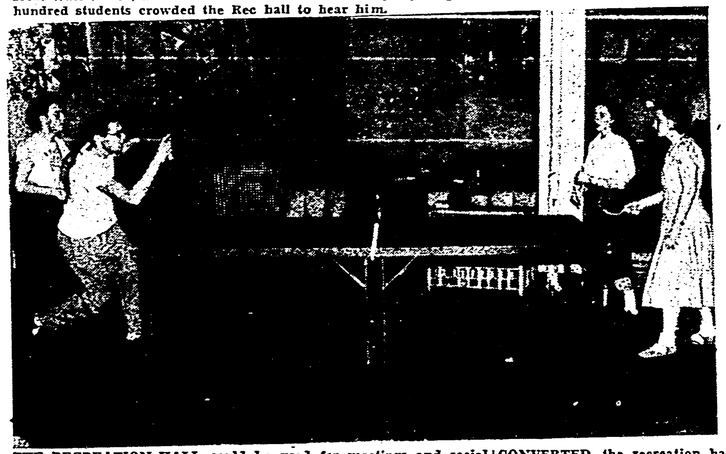
AN ALL-UNIVERSITY art show was one of the high spots of the Union's career in the University ave. building. Examples for paintings, sculpture, fabric design and jewelry were shown during the run of the exhibit.



FOOD WAS THE big topic of the Snack bar, where short orders and snacks were served throughout the day. Not only was some of the Commons and Marshall st. congestion relieved, but the central location made it convenient for those short breaks during the day. When the Union moved to Crouse ave., most of the Snack Bar's facilities moved with it.

THE IMPROMPTU "I Go Pogo" rally, feautring Walt Kelly, the possum's creator, was due in large part to the efforts of the Union's staff, and the Open House, they sponsored after Spring Weekend, 1952. Walt talked, and drew characters from the strip by request of the students present. Several hundred students crowded the Rec hall to hear him.

THE STUDENT UNION slowly diminished in size last year, as it moved from Wilson Hall, above, to one room in Prefab 8, below. At the end of May, the Union and most of its belongings were moved into storage at the University warehouse.



THE RECREATION HALL could be used for meetings and social gatherings, and there were facilities for serving informal refreshments inexpensively and with little effort to the studnts. As a movie hall, it was very popular.

CONVERTED, the recreation hall was used for ping pong, both just-for-fun, and University-wide tournaments. The Union sponsored the competitions, which included classes for singles, mixed doubles and faculty members. Above, JOSEPH BROWNSTEIN and RICHARD MILLER con the title for mixed doubles from JUDY GORDON and KATHERINE STEDELI, in 1952.

Orange Opponents Prove Puzzling, Disappoint Experts

By DAVE BENNETT

Syracuse's future football opponents present a puzzling picture in view of pre-season grid predictions. The teams picked by the experts to be powerful have proven disappointments so far this season, while the squads which were overlooked in the pigskin polls have surprised the experts.

The Orange opponent for next week, Illinois, has proven itself a contender for the Big 10 title despite the prognosticators who placed the Illini far down in the conference race.

MOST NOTABLE achievement of the westerners this season has been their 41-20 upset of previously undefeated Ohio State. This was the game which propelled the Fighting Illini into the national spotlight.

Another upcoming foe of the Orange, Holy Cross, has proven a pleasant surprise to its followers. The Crusaders, unranked because of large graduation loses, were undefeated after their first three games.

The Purple from Worcester, Mass. easily whipped traditional rival Dartmouth, 28-6, in their opener. Dr. Eddie Anderson's charges continued on their winning ways by romping over Colgate, 19-6, and Bucknell, 40 to 0. All this, despite the loss of their stellar quarterback of a season ago, Chuck Maloy, and two outstanding linemen, Chet Millett and Vic Rimkus.

Cornell's Big Red have also proved somewhat of a surprise. Although they dropped two of their first three games, the Ithacans gave notice that they would be in the thick of the fight for the Ivy League championship.

AFTER OPENING with an impressive 27-7 win over Colgate, a team which had beaten them in 1952, the Redmen lost to Rice Institute, 28-7, and Navy, 26-6.

These loses, however, were in no way humiliating. Rice, a national power, is rated one of the top teams in the rugged Southwest Conference, and Navy is ranked near the top in the east.

Two other opponents of the Orangemen, Colgate and Villanova, have disappointed their supporters. The Red Raiders lost their first three games and the Wildcats dropped two of their first three encounters.

Colgate was beaten by Cornell in its opener and lost to Holy Cross on the following weekend. The Raiders improved somewhat in their next outing, but lost to Harvard, 28-26, despite a final period rally.

A POSSIBLE REASON for the early season losing streak of the Hamiltonians is the loss of their star halfback, Gary Chandler, for the first part of their schedule.

Chandler, who excelled against the Orange in a losing cause last season, was disabled before the opening game of the Colgate schedule and has not recovered sufficiently to enter the Raider lineup.

Villanova, a recent addition to the Syracuse schedule, was rated at the top of the eastern independent teams before the season started. The record compiled by the Main Liners during their early games, however, has far from justified their pre-season ranking.

Overscheduled in its first two games, Villanova was soundly trounced by two intersectional rivals. Playing before 97,000 home town fans in Philadelphia, the Wildcats were whipped 41 to 19 by an underdog Georgia team.

The following week, the Pennsylvanians traveled into the southwest and were beaten 347- by Texas. Wake Forest upset Villanova in its next game, 18 to 6, before the Main Liners registered their first victory of the season, 15-7, at the expense of Boston College.

Illini Gridders Improve; Sophs Spearhead Drive

LLSLE CARLSON, speedy Orange halfback, has won a starting position on the Orange varsity. Only a sophomore, Carlson can expect to see plenty of action when the Hill gridders play Illinois on Saturday.

When Bill Orange ventures into Illinois' mammouth Memorial Stadium Saturday, he'll be facing an Illini grid machine which seems to have found itself after a slow start this season.

The Fighting Illini opened their season with a home game against an underrated Nebraska eleven on September 26. A heavy favorite, the Big 10 squad could not untrack itself for three quarters and at the end of the third stanza trailed the Cornhuskers, 21 to 7.

IN THE FOURTH period, the Illini rallied. They tallied twice and managed to salvage a tie from a game which had been expected to end in an easy victory.

Stanford's west coast invaders provided the opposition in the Orange and Blue's next encounter. This was a nip-and-tuck affair for three periods with the score tied at 21-21 when the teams opened the fourth quarter. Once again Illinois came to life in the final period and triumphed, 33-21.

But it was not until their next game that Coach Ray Eliot's men proved that they would be a power to reckon with in Big 10 football this year.

Playing Ohio State before 78,000 rabid Buckeye fans in Columbus, Ohio, the Fighting Illini pulled one of the biggest upsets of the 1953 season.

A DECIDED underdog against the unbeaten State squad, Illinois stunned the huge crowd by roaring to a 21 to 0 lead after only one period of play.

Ohio State, co-favorite in the Big 10 race, rallied in the second stanza and registered three touchdowns to enter the itermission trailing only 21-20.

But on this afternoon the Illini were not to be denied. Playing like they did in the first period, Illinois controlled play in the second half and won easily, 41-20.

The victory over the highly ranked Buckeyes not only sent State's rating spiralling downward, but raised the Fighting Illini into the national spotlight. The week following their Ohio State win, the Associated Press ranked Illinois in the top twenty teams of the nation.

ONE OF THE MAJOR reasons for the spectacular comeback staged by the Orange and Blue squad this year is the performance of two of its sophomore backs.

Melvin "Mickey" Bates and J. C. Caroline were the gridders who sparkled for the Illini in the Ohio State victory. Bates, a Kewanee, Illinois all-state prep school selection, is a speedy hard-running halfback.

Rubenstein Joins Hill Fencing Staff

Fencing is one of the few varsity sports that has two coaches. This unusual situation was brought about by the addition of Dan Rubenstein to the coaching staff this fall.

Rubenstein joins Dr. Benjamin Burtt as co-fencing coach. Burtt has been fencing mentor since the elevation to varsity status of the sport in 1949.

BURTT is given credit for interesting the first Orange captain, Dean Demopolous, in fencing. Burtt mentioned fencing during one of his chemistry lectures and called for volunteers. Chemistry student Demopolous responded and became one of Syracuse's finest fencers.

In his brief intercollegiate career, the Orange captain won three-fourths of his matches and was recognized as the best epeeman in upstato New York.

Things weren't easy for Burtt all the time. Demopolous was the only bright spot in that first varsity season and the fencers could win only one against four losses and a tie.

With the graduation of Demopolous in June, 1949, foil star Carl Linden took over the Orange leadership. Burtt also saw two of Syracuse's top fencers launch their careers that year as foiler Len Rubin and saber man Mel Weiss competed in their first intercollegiate matches.

THE BIGGEST year for Burtt was 1951. In that year, Syracuse not only had its first winning season with an 8-7 record, but more important to fencing at Syracuse, the North Atlantic Intercollegiate Fencing classic was held in Archbold gym for the first time.

Rubin, rated by Burtt as the best foiler in Orange history, captained the '51-52 team. Other standouts of that first winning season were epeeman Dave Wassertheil and Fred Gross.

Last year was another successful year for Syracuse fencing and prospects look good again this season. Much credit for this goes to Burtt.

Organizing fencing teams is nothing new for Burtt. In his collegiate days, Burtt organized a fencing team at Ohio State. He received national ranking as a fencer in 1938. Two years previous, he was a member of the United States Olympic team.

NOW AN associate professor of chemistry, Burtt hasn't lost any of his fencing skill. In recent AFLA upstate epee championships, Burtt has consistently finished in the No. 1 position, while maintaining his invincibility aganst all Orange epee men.

Rubenstein learned his fencing under Costello, one of America's top fencers. In 1947 and 1948, he was captain of the Columbia fencing team while also its No. 1 saber man.

Both of those years, Columbia finished first in national team composition. Much credit to this goes to Rubenstein who at times displayed invincible skill.

Gifted with quick reflexes and with precision footwork, Rubenstein has won one saber tournament after another. Ever since his collegiate years, Rubenstein has maintained a national rating in saber.

ONLY A few weeks back, Rubenstein won first place saber honors in the AFLA saber championships at Buffalo. Rubenstein had to beat several top men to gain first place honors.

Another talented swordsman, who will be helping the Orange fencers is Professor Rice of the Fine Arts department at Crouse. Rice also was one of the better college fencers in his collegiate days and the Orangemen figure to benefit greatly from his experience.

During the brief span of four years of varsity competition, the Saltine fencers have become a winning team. But more important they have won the admiration of countless fans. The road to success has been rocky for the Orangemen but they have never swerved from their goals.

AXEL SPOTS—Capt. John Goldstein, and saber star Al Peck are the only returning lettermen. Capt. Bill Robinson graduated, epee man Hugh Muir quit to devote his time more fully to The Daily Orange while No. 1 foiler Sam Stornelli has been laid low by an automobile accident and won't be able to fence for a while. Muir is editorial director on the D.O.

Dressen Named New Oakland Chief In Coast League

"It can only happen in Brooklyn." After becoming the first two Brooklyn manager to win two pennants in a row last September Chuck Dressen was dismissed from his position. Dressen's new job is manager of Oakland in the Pacific coast league.

Dressen's decision to stick to his demand for a two-year contract cost him his job. At first, the Dodgers left the door open for Charley to crawl back into. On Friday, however, they slammed the door shut and Chuck's demotion was complete.

Dressen tried to get the Baltimore post but the owners, already stuck to an extent of 60,000 in back salaries, weren't interested in getting Charlie at 40,000 to $50,000 per year.

Mentioned as possible successors to Dressen are Peewee Reese, Bobby Bragan and Walt Alston. Of the three, Reese is considered to have the inside track.

This is an about face by the Dodger captain. Previously, Reese has said he wouldn't consider a managerial job till his playing days are over. Now 34-years-old, Reese might feel his playing days are near an end and thus, the managerial possibility take on a new light.

Nelson, Wirth, Moller Spark Orange Booters

By ALEX STRASSER
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Soccer, the team sport with the greatest international following, has had its share of ups and downs at the Syracuse campus. Syracuse soccer has also has its share of good soccer players.

Like in so many sports, good players have come in cycles for the Orange booters. From 1936 to 1938, the Orange soccer squad was loaded with standouts.

COMPILING AN unbeaten record of seven wins against two ties, the '36 booters were acclaimed as one of the best in the nation. Two records were established in that banner year: 49 team goals in a nine-game season and Gitto Semino's 23 goals. The following year, Semino equaled his record, but he never could surpass it.

Although Semino was not the only standout on the team, he outshone his teammates by so great a margin that is hard to make any comparisons.

In the late twenties, the Orange's outstanding player was John McEwan. McEwan, who held down the inside right position, had an uncanny sense enabling him to be where the important plays were to be made. In addition to his high scoring abilities, McEwan was also a standout on defense.

They say all good things come in three. That statement holds true in the discussion of Orange soccer cycles.

THE THIRD GROUP of soccer standouts appeared before the public spotlight first in 1950 and again last season. This group includes Sig Wirth, Bill Nelson and Don Moller.

Nelson and Sig Wirth won all-American honors last year. Both excell on offense, but also can play defense. So far this season, Wirth played one game on offense and one on defense.

Rated by retired soccer mentor Art Horrocks as his No. 2 all-time player in the twenty-six years he has coached Orange teams, Wirth has again and again shown that he deserves that honor. Against Cornell two weeks ago, he turned in a stellar performance at an unfamiliar halfback defensive position.

Nelson has played almost exclusively on the offensive and has been always one of the leading scorers.

Moller is a player who seldom gets into the headlines but is more vital to the team than many who do. One of the outstanding defensemen in the nation, Moller has been one of the reasons for the Orange's tough defense.

Wirth, Moller and Nelson are all seniors and will graduate this June. The third cycle of soccer greats is about to come to its end. How about some volunteers to get a fourth cycle started?

DON MOLLER, defensive ace for the Piety soccer squad, was in the Syracuse lineup when the Orangemen engaged the Cortland State Teachers team last Saturday.

Roe, Cox, Walker Deal Proves Rickey Master of His Trade

When Branch Rickey traded Dixie Walker to the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1948 for Preacher Roe and Billy Cox, the Brooklyn fans were up in arms in almost solid condemnation of the trade. Dixie Walker was a long-time Brooklyn favorite.

Five years later, the deal is still having its repercussions. Both Roe and Cox have been key performers in the Dodgers' last three pennants and in all their pennant drives.

Roe has won eighty games for the Dodgers in a five year span. His victory totals range from 11 to 22 games.

Education . . .

be an earlier start in September but a greatly enlarged Christmas vacation. In line with the innovations will be the extending of college credit to some advanced high school courses and the giving of competence tests in literature, mathematics to all entering freshAmerican history, science and in men.

"Ability alone will be the major criterion in deciding the speed with which a student will be graduated from one level of difficulty to another." The unlimited elective system now in practice will be abolished in favor of a basic curriculum or pattern of studies to be required of all students.

The universities, some of which are soon to initiate and some of which are already practicing the program are Yale, Harvard, Columbia and Chicago.

Seniors, Graduates May Obtain Data On Naval School

Lt. Magrath to Explain Applications, Eligibility To Interested Students

Information for those interested in Naval Officers Candidate school will be available from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. tomorrow and Thursday in the lobby of Maxwell.

Lt. A. G. Magrath of Naval Officer procurement in Albany will explain applications and eligibility to seniors and graduate students. January graduates are eligible to apply for the school now and the June grads may apply as early as December.

Graduates selected for this program receive an intensive instruction in naval subjects at the U. S. Naval Schools Command, Newport, R. I. When they complete the training, candidates are commissioned as Ensigns in the U. S. Naval Reserve.

Marine ROTC will also be available to Syracuse students this year. Capt. James S. Hecker, US MC, will interview those interested on Oct. 26 and 27 in the lobby of Maxwell.

One program will be offered for freshmen, sophomores and juniors. Another will include only seniors.

Both programs will provide a draft deferment, but no training is required during the academic year. Graduates of the program will be commissioned as Second Lieutenants and must serve two years as officers.

Captain Hecker pointed out that officer quotas in all the services have taken a sharp reduction this year due to budget and appropriation cuts.

"It is necessary that the student look about early in the academic year if he wishes to serve his period of obligated service as a commissioned officer," he stated.

Management Exam Offered by USCSC

Seniors and graduate students who have had a minimum amount of course work in the social sciences, public or business administration may take the junior management examination offered by the U.S. civil service commission.

Successful candidates may follow a career in the federal government either as a staff assistant manager or professional assistant engaged in economics, history, political science, international relations, intelligence or other social science fields.

The requirements for a senior consist of four years of a college course leading to bachelor's degree and 30 hours in one of the social science fields.

Graduate students must, in addition to the above, have completed one year of graduate study in the social science field.

The exam will cover general abilities and knowledge of administrative problems or public affairs.

Further information may be obtained in 212 Maxwell hall.

The exam will be given December 5 in Syracuse.

Office Available For March Parley

Applications are now being accepted for the position of plenary chairman of the foreign policy conference scheduled for March on the campus.

Those interested should indicate name, address, phone, experience in chairing such meetings, year and school.

Applications may be turned in before Monday, Oct. 26, to Marcia Michelbacher, Chi Omega, 1003 Walnut ave.

Physics Library Asks Suggestions

Physics students with suggestions for purchases of new books or magazine subscriptions for the physics library, are requested to leave them in writing with Miss Henes, the librarian.

This is the last chance, since the book order will be completed today. Handling of requests will be facilitated if they are submitted on 3x5 filing cards, but this is not necessary.

ROCHESTER SPEAKER

Dr. Kin Nee Tong, assistant professor of mechanical engineering, will be one of the speakers at the annual conference of the upper New York section of the American Society for Engineering Education being held Thursday and Friday in Rochester.

Ready for the Visit

COMPLETING PLANS for a visit by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt tomorrow night, ETHEL FALKIN, ROMA YELLON, members of United Nations at Syracuse university and JOHN DEBES, Syracuse Civic chapter, read some background material about the former first lady. Mrs. Roosevelt will be honored at a dinner in Shaw dining hall before an add ress at Lincoln auditorium.

Eleanor Roosevelt Speaks Tomorrow

A dinner in honor of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt has been set for 8:15 p.m. tomorrow in Shaw dormitory, according to Ethel Falkin, president of the campus United Nations club.

Mrs. Roosevelt will be in Syracuse for an address on the occasion of UN week, proclaimed recently by Mayor Thomas Corcoran. She will speak at 8:15 p.m. in Lincoln auditorium.

In a telegram received last week by Miss Falkin, the former first lady accepted the UNASU invitation to be guest of honor at the banquet.

Forty members of the hill club, two administration officials and four Daily Orange representatives will attend the dinner. All those who are attending are asked to use the Ostrom ave. entrance to Shaw by Director Miss Janet Brackenridge.

Mrs. Roosevelt will journey to Syracuse after an afternoon engagement in Watertown. Arriving here at about 5:30 p.m. tomorrow she will conduct a press conference at 5:45 p.m. in the Hotel Syracuse.

She has been associated with the United Nations since its inception in 1945 and has served as chairman of the commission on human rights.

Her time is now devoted extensively to expansion of field work of the American Association for the United Nations.

During President Roosevelt's political career, his wife was active in state and national Democratic circles. In 1928 she worked with the Democratic National committee as a member of the advisory committee in charge of women's activities.

In the early part of world war II she served as assistant director of the Office of Civilian Defense.

Burrows Winner In Football Contest

William Burrows proved last week for a second time that he "knows the score" of the Syracuse football clashes.

He scored again in the Wells and Coverly weekly contest, by guessing the Orange-Penn State score, 13-20.

Burrows, a member of Phi Delta Phi, law honorary, won a $10 hat and a $10 vest this week. His previous week's prize was $20 worth of Manhattan shirts.

Wells and Coverly has announced that the award for the closest Illinois tilt guess will be a pair of $20 Kenroyd slacks. Predictions should be left in the Wells and Coverly shoe department.

Northrup Slates Talk on Insurance

A talk on "Insurance programs for the young man of today" will be given by Frederick B. Northrup Jr. at 8 p.m. today in the founders room of Maxwell.

Northrup, who is a member of the "Million Dollar Round Table", national honorary organization, will speak at the meeting of Alpha Kappa Psi, Syracuse university business fraternity.

Lowell W. Atkinson, president of Alpha Kappa Psi, has announced that alumni as well as undergraduates are invited to attend the meeting. A social hour with refreshments will follow the meeeting.

ROTC Announces Student Honors

Six Hill army ROTC students have been designated as Distinguished Military students, Lt. Colonel George R. Stevens III announced yesterday.

Glenn Kohler, John F. Holzwarth, Harold D. Ratcliffe, Donald M. Rorke, Peter B. Seevers and George S. Kepner were selected for the honor after having completed the first year of their advanced courses.

LT. COL. Stevens, Professor of Military Science and Tactics for the army here said the decision was made with the concurrence of Chancellor Tolley.

To be eligible for the honor, the student, in addition to having high grades in military subjects, must possess outstanding qualities of leadership, high moral character and a definite aptitude for military service.

Academically, he must stand in the upper-half of his class, by his achievements while participating in campus activities, have demonstrated his leadership abilities.

Members of the Army ROTC who are appointed Distinguished Military Students may apply for and, upon graduation, be appointed as commissioned officers in th regular army.

Chaplain to Talk At Sex Lecture

Rev. Arthur Hopkinson Jr., Methodist chaplain, will talk on "Sex—How to Live With It" at 4:15 p.m. today in 110 Maxwell.

This is the first in a series of seven lectures sponsored by the social hygiene committee of Chapel.

Rev. Hopkinson was educated at Boston university and served as a Lieutenant Colonel in the army chaplains corps. He has spent 15 years counseling students and soldiers in their personal and sosocial problems.

Patricia Miller is chairman of the group.

Uticans Will Get Free Grid Ducats

Dean Ralph F. Strebel, Utica college, has announced that full-time students at Utica college will be able to share in the traditional football game between Colgate and Syracuse at no additional personal expense.

Previously, Hill students received their tickets free of charge, while those in Utica college were afforded priority in purchasing them. Although no system of ticket distribution has been announced, the free tickets are expected to arrive at Utica approximately two weeks before the Nov. 14 game.

Seniors to Make Check of Credits

Liberal arts seniors planning to graduate in January should check their requirements with Miss Dawn M. Case in 210 Hall of Languages as soon as possible.

Checking credits now may help to avoid situations that could delay graduation, the LA office said.

Rushees to Receive Party Invitations

Sorority rushees must call for their invitations and return replies for thier costume parties from 12-5:30 p.m. tomorrow in the Panhell office in the Women's building.

Rushees will accept invitations to four parties. Each party will last one hour. Dress will be sweaters and skirts.

The first party will be held Oct. 25 from 1:30-2:30 p.m.; the second party, 2:40-3:40; the third party, 3:50-4:50; and the fourth party, 5-6 p.m.

Committee Named For Dinner Dance

Clifford Way and Patricia Fay have been named co-chairmen of the annual St. Thomas More students' dinner dance, scheduled for Nov. 21.

Chosen as chairmen of dinner dance sub-committees were William Healy and Elizabeth Hueber, arrangements; Mary Kearney and Anthony Ponturiero, reservations; and Carmela Curreri and Edward Hardy, publicity.

Geography Studies At Syracuse Topic Of Convo Speech

Miss Hanlon Reviews Work of Department For Association

"A Review of Geographic Studies at Syracuse University" was the topic of a talk by Eleanor E. Hanlon of the geography department at the meeting of the New York-Ontario division of the Association of American Geographers held here over the weekend.

Since 1931, when the combined department of geography and geology was established, there have been a total of 84 theses studies concluded by students of geography. Thirty-two of these have been on topics relating to the New York State area. At present 17 these are in preparation of which nine relate to New York State.

Miss Hanlon directed attention to a map showing the distribution and type of thesis study in the state. The various types of study include regional historical, economic, and political studies; studies of land use and transportation; and population and settlement surveys.

The greatest amount of study was devoted to the Syracuse area with Onondaga county the locale for 15 theses. In addition, a technique study of the Syracuse milk shed and a classification of settlements in the county have been completed.

Urban studies on Liverpool, Oneida, Oswego, Syracuse, Baldwinsville and Cortland have been concluded. One on Rome is now being done by Robert Layton.

The thesis studies currently in progress include a water resource problem by Erich Bordne on the "Relationship of Water Use to Water Supply in the Genesee Basin and Ridge Country." Another is a study using five counties in central New York as a test area in the "Methods of Mapping Population by Dots and Densitometer Derived by Isopleths" by William Byron.

A transportation study of Lewis county by Maung Htoo, a land use study in Cayuga county conducted by Pe Thaung and a survey by Robert T. Redden for a Doctorate of Social Studies on the Buffalo milk shed are among the other current theses problems.

Key Applications Due on Friday

Applications for membership in Orange Key, junior men's honorary, close Friday, Darwin Bolden, president, announced yesterday.

Forms are available in the dean of men's office. Requirements in the organization, which recognizes outstanding junior men, are a 1.4 cumulative average, participation in at least one major extra-curricular activity and junior class standing.

Yearbook Question Goes To Board of Publications For Final Consideration

By ARLENE LAMBERT
Editor-in-chief

The 1954 Onondagan goes on the block tomorrow.

Thomas Beckett, editor of the yearbook, revealed that the ON board of publications will meet tomorrow to decide the fate of the 70-year-old publication.

RESULTS OF polls taken by the Onondagan staff indicate that the necessary number of pledges has not been reached. Beckett is confident, however, that the total will be raised to the needed number by estimating the support of male students who have not yet been contacted.

THOMAS BECKETT, editor of the Onondagan. The yearbook's case goes before the board of publications tomorrow.

The first poll was undertaken at registration. Seniors only were asked to sign a distributed questionnaire. Approximately 500 members of the class of '54 replied. Because this number was less than half of the senior class, ON editors conducted another survey through The Daily Orange.

This poll brought the total number of pledges to 600, still far short of the estimated minimum of 1,500 subscriptions. A third survey was taken through women's living centers. Subtracting possible duplications, Beckett estimated that at least 1,000 Syracusans had pledged support.

Although the men's living centers and fraternity houses have not yet been reached, ON editors believe that at least 500 more subscribers can be found.

THE SENIOR executive council and the class assembly have also indicated their support should the board of publications approve a '54 yearbook.

The present ON crisis came about when the Administration disclosed that it would no longer require seniors to purchase a book. Denied the guaranteed revenue, ON editors learned they would have to depend on voluntary subscriptions.

Before plans for publication could begin, Beckett stated that 1,500 students would have to pledge to support the book. Since in the past, three-quarters of the subscriptions came from seniors the first of the series of polls was begun at registration.

The dean of women, dean of men, registrar, ON faculty advisor, financial advisor, dean of the School of Journalism, presidents of men's and women's student government and the ON editors comprise the Onondagan board of publications.

Hill Library Staffers To Attend Meeting

60th Annual Conference Scheduled in Albany

Five members of the University library staff will attend the 60th annual conference of the New York Library association in Albany Thursday through Saturday.

Carl H. Melinate, associate professor of library science and vice president of the association, will be general chairman of the conference and preside at the business meeting. He will be inaugurated as president at the final general session.

DEAN WHARTON MILLER will preside at the Syracuse university School of Library Science Alumni association dinner Friday. Miss Fern L. Allen, who is in charge of the University's branch libraries, will moderate a staff organizations round table. Also attending the conference will be Miss Elizabeth M. Henes and Mrs. Ann W. French.

Governor Thomas E. Dewey will give the keynote address on Thursday evening at the first general session speaking on "Major Issues of Government in New York State." Other speakers include John P. Myers, chancellor of the board of regents of the University of the State of New York, and Dr. Mark Van Doren professor of English at Columbia university.

LA Council Elects New Co-chairmen

Jean Brydon and Sidney Weinstein were elected co-chairmen of the Liberal Arts Advisory council Wednesday at the first meeting of the year.

Miss Brydon, a psychology major in Liberal Arts, is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta. She has been active in women's student government and Traditions commission.

Weinstein, a city student affiliated with Alpha Epsilon Pi, is in charge of the Student Discount Service for MSG.

The new secretary of the council is Arlene Blum, Alpha Epsilon Phi, a resident of Shaw dormitory. Directing last year's council were Elizabeth Brydon and John Beech.

The council, which functions as an advisory board to Dean Eric H. Faigle, deals with such problems as the cut system, the advisory system, pre-registration, gifted students, and the honor system.

ROTC Schedules Senior Convocation

AS Cadet Officers, Sergeants to Meet

Air Force ROTC will hold indoor drill for all seniors and for those juniors who are first sergeants on squadron or flight level at 12 noon today in Maxwell auditorium. Only the seniors and specified juniors should attend There will be no drill today for the rest of the corps, according to Cadet Col. Jack Forgette.

Uniforms will not be required, he said.

Assignments in the wing organization for all AFROTC cadets have been posted on the main bulletin board in Machinery hall and they will be posted until Thursday..

Today's session will consist of a briefing on the drill period on Thursday at Thornden park. All cadets must be present at Thursday's drill and uniforms will be worn then, Col. Forgette added.

Drama Apprentices To Meet Tomorrow

All apprentices must attend the Boar's Head meeting at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 21, to receive committee assignments. Publicity, art, technical, business and costume departments will offer opportunities to those interested.

Prof. Sawyer Falk will give the necessary information for acting auditions.

The apprentice system is designed to aid beginners to adjust their particular talents in the theater. In this way, they may earn credits toward becoming members of the drama honorary.

Boar's Head is about to launch its first production and to integrate apprenticeship activities with it.

Rushees to Claim Designation OK's

Fraternity rushees will pick up designation cards from 1-6 p.m. today in Archbold gym.

Preference cards were filed by the fraternities and the rushees yesterday. These cards have been matched and those rushees who have been pledged will be informed through the preference cards.

Rushees who have been pledged should report to the fraternities as soon as possible in order that confusion and misunderstanding can be avoided. There is a 30-day quiet period following these rushing periods. Those persons who rushed formally and ended the rushing procedure before its normal termination in pledging, may again rush after the 30-day period.

Dilemma Accepts Literary Work

Dilemma, Syracuse university's literary magazine, is accepting contributions for its fall issue. Poetry, prose, and fiction works will be considered.

Contributions should be placed in the Dilemma folder in the English department of the Hall of Languages. The deadline is Nov. 15 for this issue which will be published the second week in December.

Winter Carnival Chairmen Sought

Applications will be accepted for chairmanships of 1954 Winter Carnival weekend, slated for Feb. 12-14, according to Co-chairmen Irene Purdy and Peter Rose.

Those interested must turn in applications by Sunday, Nov. 1 to Miss Purdy, Theta Phi Alpha, 756 Comstock ave. They should include name, address, phone number, committee in which interested, class, college, past experience in weekend committees and ideas for the Carnival.

Two co-chairmen will have charge of the traditional Stockingfoot dance; others will plan promotion work connected with the weekend, working on publicity and program committees.

Chairmen are needed to head skiing and skating committees, while others will have charge of the snow sculpture contest, the annual ice show and the queen contest.

A chairman is also needed to head the sale of buttons, sold in conjunction with the weekend.

A secretary to the over-all committee will also be appointed.

Adele Cohen Star Of WAER Show

"A Date With Adele," the WAER program featuring singer Adele Cohen, will continue Thursday at 6:45 p.m. with the third of the present series.

Among the selections to be included in the program of Oct. 22 are "The End Of A Perfect Day" by Bond, "All The Things You Are" by Kern, and "Lover Come Back To Me" by Romberg. Elliot Spiro produces the show which is announced by James Fellows. Janet Gardner is accompanist.

Miss Cohen, a junior, is accompanist for the choir during Crouse concerts and is a member of the Chapel Choir.

NEW INSTRUCTOR

Major James W. Davis, instructor in current affairs department of the armed forces information school in Fort Slocum, N. Y., has been released from active duty. He will now assume a faculty position in the School of Education here.

Dean Noble Tolls Chimes

Dean Charles C. Noble abandoned his accordian yesterday to ring the chimes in Crouse college.

To announce the start of midday meditation in Chapel, the Dean pealed out "Trinity Chimes" on the big bells, finishing the job with twelve long strokes.

Three Deke bell ringers, Michael Brodine, William Chapman and Harold Kyff, president of the fraternity, were on hand to give instructions and advice.

The chimes are rung by pushing down on handles attached to the bell ropes.

The Dean arrived in the tower room a few minutes early and was advised to get the tune set in his mind first.

The walls of Room 4,000 are covered with names and classes of bell ringers of past years, some dating as far back as 1890. During world war II members of Alpha Phi sorority took over the job.

The Dekes set up the music and pointed out the notes for "Dragnet." "You don't want to play that," they said.

The time for Dean Noble's try at the bells was set at 11:58 p.m. With three minutes to go he remarked that he would feel a lot more comfortable with a accordian.

After the Dean had played "Trinity Chimes," he followed it with 12 long strokes. The three Dekes seemed to enjoy the performance as much as the Dean.

Kyff followed with a demonstration of his own, "Abide With Me," annd "Faith of Our Fathers" while Dean Noble caught his breath.

The Dekes will continue the practice of ringing the chimes each day at noon to herald the 15-minute meditational service.

The genial dean is famed for his "pep prayer," delivered at the annual Colgate weekend pep rally. The dean usually asks that "If You won't help Syracuse at the game, please don't help Colgate."

Final switch: ON or off

It's all up to the board of publications.

The publications board is the student-faculty-administration body which will meet tomorrow to decide the final fate of the 1954 Onondagan.

The yearbook crisis has been fomenting since September when the Administration revealed it would no longer require graduating seniors to purchase the books. Without a guaranteed minimum of subscriptions, ON editors could not begin to formulate production plans.

A minimum of 1,500 voluntary subscriptions was needed before the 1954 ON could advance to the planning stage. Three polls of the student body were then conducted in an attempt to determine support.

The polls revealed a total of 1,000 pledges of support for a '54 book. However, the bulk of the male population was not canvassed in any of these attempts. ON editor, Thomas Beckett believes that the remaining 500 subscriptions can be obtained from this group.

Armed with the results of the polls and the promised support of the senior assembly, Beckett will tomorrow face the final judges.

We believe that the evidence in favor of the continuation of a yearbook far outweighs any argument against it.

The ON editor already has a sufficient amount of pledges to begin production plans. Although the minimum number has not been absolutely guaranteed, it is very probable that the remaining subscriptions will come from those students who have been polled. With a full-scale subscription drive, with the wholehearted support of the senior class organization and with the backing of other campus groups, it is inconceivable that the minimum number cannot be reached.

If the board of publications abolishes the yearbook, it is writing "finis" to a 70-year old tradition. Syracuse would then become the only school of its size to go without a yearbook.

Ironically, it was "public relations" which caused the Administration to take its original step against the compulsory senior fee. Many students passed up their diploma rather than pay the bill, thus creating a situation which did nothing but breed ill will.

Once more the University is faced with a "public relations" problem. Syracuse is certainly large enough and has sufficient activities, sports and students to justify a yearbook. The publicity arising from the abolition of the publication would certainly not enhance the University's prestige.

The board must make the decision tomorrow. Another series of delays would make production almost impossible. This is one case which cannot wait for another month's investigation.

For these reasons we urge the Onondagan board of publications to announce tomorrow its decision to permit publication of a 1954 Onondagan.

Spiritual vitamin pill

Previous to yesterday the Crouse chimes were normally scheduled for 8 a.m. and 1:15 p.m. performances. Yesterday, however, the chimes rang at 11:28 a.m. If they had a slightly different tone, it could be attributed to the new "bell-ringer," Dean Charles C. Noble of Hendricks chapel.

The chimes were sounded at that time to officially inaugurate the new "Midday Meditation" services to be held in Chapel every noon.

The new program is a successor to the "Daily Chapel" of last year. The services are no longer liturgical but a meditational program with organ music. The speaker-oriented service has given way to a student leader program which will provide "directed meditational thought."

Here is an opportunity for students of the Jewish as well as Protestant faith to "get away from it all" and find a haven of silence for a few moments during a busy, often hectic day.

Here is the chance to turn from the thoughts of this world and its confused affairs to thoughts of another World of eternal peace.

Here is the place for meditation and prayer to the God we love, serve and worship. And for the lonely, there is offered the word of Another to remind him he is never completely alone.

Those students wishing spiritual rejuvenation will no doubt find this in the short inspirational message and the individual meditations.

The Dekes have promised to participate in the program by ringing "Trinity Chimes" each day at 11:28 a.m. to remind students of the service.

The bells will be ringing . . . should we not respond to their message?

LETTERARY COMMENT

ON THE FRATERNITY EDITORIAL

Assumed:

To the Editor-in-Chief, the Daily Orange:

Your editorial concerning fraternity discrimination (Friday, October 16) raised two points: 1) that the N. Y. State University Board Of Trustees believes national fraternities incapable of removing discriminatory clauses in their national charters. 2) that the principle of control of social organizations by the state could be extended to other groups.

The first argument is plainly an assumption: most likely the board acted as it did in the belief that national fraternities would have no desire to change their charters unless prompted by some administrative action. The action of SAM itself bears this out; according to your front page story, ". . . the amendment removing this bias clause . . . was partly a result of the Columbia university ultimatum of withdrawing recognition from all groups which deny membership because of race, color, or religion." Certainly this is a more reasonable interpretation of the reasons for the ban than the belief that "national organizations could not . . ." remove restrictions. It's a matter of "would", and not could.

Your second argument is based again on an assumption: that fraternities on universities (and in particular on universities supported and maintained by the state) are the same in all respects to the organizations which state employees may belong to. Obviously they are not. Organizations to which state employees may belong to are not given official recognition by the state; these organizations do not have the aid of the state in recruiting members; they include far more than just members who are at the same time state employees; they are not intimately tied up with the state's functioning, and in fact are not even associated with it. Fraternities on the other hand exist only for university students, are aided by the university, and—because of this—are regulated by it. Certainly privileged organziations of this sort may be expected to conform to one more regulation, inasmuch as they have already come under controls of other sorts.

A point analogous to his situation may be raised with the question of communist activities. Any state employee at the present time may be fired or suspended simply on the basis of his associations; (these associations can conceivably involve mothers who read the Daily Worker or fathers who voted for Wallace.) On the state university campus, a student who belongs to a pro-communist organization can be suspended if the authorities consider his presence there dangerous. And in a good many private universities, the same holds; social organization (and all organizations) are being controled to a greater extent than before . . . and all for the same reason: their position is in some way privileged; and that if they do not live up to the demands of that priviledged position, they have no right to continue in it.

Robert Newman

Confused:

October 6, 1953

To the Editor-in-Chief:

In your editorial in today's Daily Orange I'm afraid you made an important error—you confused a government with an university. Yes, it would seem you rather misunderstood the step taken by the University of New York in dis-affiliating social fraternities on its campus from their national organizations, for an overt move by a police state to stamp out one of our great institutions.

There have been similar instances of such action taken by a university; there are other universities where nationally-affiliated fraternities, whose interests naturally tend to lie outside the particular university, whose prime loyalty is to an outside organization rather than to the university, have been replaced by purely local organizations.

I hope that liberty-loving youth will not be aroused too greatly by an erroneous statement. Certainly there is no need for the barricades to be stormed. It is purely the affair of the students and administration of the University of the State of New York.

Sincerely,
Mal Foster

Error of 'They'

By ROGER J. HERZ

Title of this diatribe is "Oops, Uh-huh and the Little 'h' on the Train Timetable."

"Oops" is what people say when they bump into one another. It sounds stupid.

We say "uh-huh" meaning yes. Everyone thinks we're saying "huh?" and repeats.

Little "h" signifies "does not stop to discharge passengers." Some blasted train with an "h" doesn't stop in Syracuse.

These are our gripes against the fellow students, inhabitants of the outside world and universe that comprise life. We lay the blame at the feet of "people," "everyone," and an inanimate object.

Thus we commit the error of "they." We've always insisted in the past that "they" doesn't exist; that the world is nothing but you, me, us and we.

Maybe we're wrong.

Could be, we figure, that there is a "they." It's the teeming masses. The plebians. The proletariat. The commoners, peasants, hicks, yokels, rubes, bumpkins. The vulgar multitudes.

But we're a part of it, of them, of "they."

A world damned to idiocy. But the classification includes us, if we recognize the "they." We can't be cowards at the critical moment.

In other words, we must stand up and declare what we believe in. Arise and be counted. One nose per person.

Can't be cowardly. We must avoid dying the thousand deaths of the coward. Can't be dogmatic either. After all, we might not be right.

We ought to listen to the other fellow, take his evidence and compare it to our own. Whichever view best fits our personal philosophy ought to be adopted.

Insert in here the quote about disagreeing with what you have to say but will defend to the death your right to say it.

Let us not merely go round reciting quotes for the sake of sounding profound. Many quotes are quoted because of significance. Tis the thought behind and not the rote of recitation that we ought to pay attention to.

In line with this, we ought to try to create our own thoughts. Man, being us at this moment of history, can create. The crude material is present. The resultant product is up to the first person plural.

Our world goes around its philosophical axis because of ideas, not just from the chosen few, but from all. Be it "they" or "we" in terminology, it's us. YOU have as much say in the debate as anyone else if you'll use your assigned brain-wave time.

Dateless?

Comment from the non-coeducational midwest:

An unattended coed from Michigan was squired around the East Lansing campus for the game a couple of weeks ago by 21 of the visiting Texans from TCU.

Remarked one of the stalwarts from TCU's predominantly male campus:

"This is the closest I've come to having a date with a girl in a year!"

'Mr. Roberts' Hoves to At the Astor

It seems that in addition to bringing live theater to central New York, the current play series at the Astor is also giving Syracusans professional experience. Three will be featured in this week's production of "Mr. Roberts," which opens tonight.

In the four weeks the series has been running, students have been given a chance to act, and work backstage. For many, this is their first professional work.

This week, Robert Fass, Alfred Gross, and Sidney Kalcheim will walk the boards with the star, Robert Wark. Fass is a junior in radio-tv, and appeared in several Boar's Head productions last year, including "Night Must Fall," in which he played the judge. In "Mr. Roberts," he appears as the Shoe Patrolman Alfred Gross, a sophomore in drama, plays the MP in the Navy comedy, and Sidney Kacheim, also a sophomore in drama, appears as Reber.

Wark, who plays the lead, has appeared on Broadway with Katherine Cornell, Paulette Goddard, and Elizabeth Bergner, in the past, and has played the role of Roberts for quite some time in stock.

"Mr. Roberts" ran for several years on Broadway, and has been acclaimed by many critics as the best war play to come out of World War II. As "What Price Glory" exemplified the humor of World War I, "Mr. Roberts has stood for the laughs in the last global conflict.

Stage Door Can Eaters

Goats were auditioned Saturday at the Astor theater. The beasts were being considered for one of the leading parts in "Mr. Roberts," the wacky comedy which opens at the Astor theater tonight.

The portion of South Salina street which houses the Astor reeked of an odor which was distinctly untheatrical. In order to get in the stage door we had to step over three or four of the can eaters.

In an ad circulated among the goat lovers of Syracuse the management asked for a "young, talented, tractable goat." However they emphasized that any goat that could handle the part would be treated with the greatest respect.

After much deliberation a winner was chosen. When we approached him for an interview all he said was "Baaa." As a result you will have to see the show in order to determine his theatrical abilities for yourself.

Rescue in Korean Sea; Around the World

By FRANK McGUIRE

An American destroyer, the USS Brush, struck a mine off the coast of Manchuria while on patrol in 1950. One hundred miles away in the Sea of Japan was an American cruiser, the USS Worcester. Aboard the Worcester was Liberal Arts student Phil Terpening, a radar man.

Phil was in the mess hall drinking coffee when he felt the ship pick up speed and head for the Brush's position. After three hours of plowing through the sea at 32 knots, the Worcester reached the Brush, who had made it 200 miles out to sea under her own power.

It was close to nine o'clock at night and the Brush had about forty dead and wounded aboard. Most of these casualties had been standing in the chow line on the main deck of the destroyer when the mine struck the starboard bow.

Not being able to handle all the casualties in her own sick bay, the Brush began to transfer them to the Worcester. In a medium heavy sea, the transfer was begun under the glare of floodlights. Some of the destroyer's crew were so badly hurt that the cruiser's doctor went aboard to decide how to handle these men.

After emergency repairs were finished, the ships headed for Japan to get the wounded to a hospital and the Brush to a shipyard.

Phil was aboard the Worcester when she served as flagship for the U. S. fleet blockading Formosa, and later when she was one of the ships that bombarded and blockaded such North Korean ports as Wonsan longest naval blockade in history), Chongjin and Sonjin. As Phil puts it, "The Reds did a lot of shooting at us, but never even came close."

During this period, the UN ground forces captured the Chief of North Korean Naval operations and sent him by helicopter to the Worcester to be interrogated by U. S. intelligence officers. He was later turned over to the UN command as a prisoner of war.

Phil was with the Worcester when she was one of the few U. S. ships to sail completely around the world. The cruiser made the trip between April and November of 1950. He also made three round trips between the United States and the U. S. Mediterranean Fleet.

Now enrolled in the College of Liberal Arts, Phil is twenty-two years old and lives in Fulton, New York.

Along the Sidelines

By KEN LENT, DAILY ORANGE SPORTS EDITOR

"If we had Wetzel, we'd be undefeated today." Thus mused a thoughtful Ben Schwartzwalder following his club's first loss to Eastern competition in two years—a defeat made bitter by the realization that it was Penn State who turned the trick both times.

There is no doubt that Syracuse could have used the services of the husky fullback who has been out since the Temple game. Without Wetzel, Orange opponents have been able to concentrate more upon Leberman and Stark or Yancey and not have to worry that Bomber Bill would bull through the line for his usual five-to-six-yard carry.

Bill's leg cast was removed briefly yesterday for some physical therapy but was right back on. No one expects him to be ready much before the Cornell game. Half-kidding, half-serious, Ben commented, "Every night I dream he's out there playing, then I wake up and realize he isn't." We wish he was too, Ben.

The old optimist, Roy Simmons, had quite a bit to say about the coming Illinois game and some of it was surprisingly bright from the Syracuse side of the picture. Said Roy, "We've got a great opportunity to go out and dump the apple cart. Don't think that they'll be running wild."

Roy, who along with Rocco Pirro, has been scouting the Illini, feels that the Midwesterners will make a lot of mistakes this Saturday. With a lot of sophomores in the lineup, including Illinois' "Gold Dust Twins", J. C. Caroline and Melvin (Mickey) Bates, the Illini might not be as invincible as they appear at first glance.

Roy reports, however, that the Illini ground game is so sound that only 24 passes have been thrown in four games. Elry Falkenstein is labeled by Simmie as a "good thrower" and capable of doing a good job with the passing game.

Another Illinois terror is 190-pound end, Johnny (Rocky) Ryan, who was fourth in pass receiving in the nation last year. Rocky has been called Illinois' surest bet for all-American so, with such a passing combination of Falkenstein and Ryan available, it's not inconceivable that Saturday's tilt could turn into an air duel.

Concerning the Penn State test, Ben had one comment to make. Too many of the team were not physically up to par. Bob Leberman was literally run into the ground after recovering from an injury the previous week.

The plucky left halfback had to carry the ball five consecutive times in the second Orange touchdown drive because there was just no one else capable of carrying the mail. Besides Leb, Ted Kukowski, Jim George and Sam Johnson all had been ailing previous to the game.

Ben didn't offer this as an alibi, but like Sgt. Joe Friday, just a statement of the facts. He felt that both Art Troilo and Bob Fleck gave their best efforts of the year and also had praise for linemen Kukowski, George and Ray Perkins.

Said Ben, "The boys gave the best they had. But to beat Illinois we'll have to come up with a perfect day without making a lot of mistakes." Someone asked, "Were the boys thinking of Illinois after the game Saturday?"

"It's like it was in Europe during the World War," answered Ben. "After you meet the Germans, you don't think right away of meeting the Japs."

Ben Begins Practice for Illinois Game

Nittany Whammy Haunts Hillmen's Eastern Record

Looking to the future after an exasperating last-second, 20-14 loss to Penn State, Ben Schwartzder sees the awful form of mighty Illinois. The Penn State loss was a double tragedy: not only was Syracuse ahead 14-0 with 17 minutes to play, but Syracuse also out-statisticed the State team.

The Penn State loss was the first for Syracuse to an Eastern team in thirteen games. Syracuse still is dogged by the jinx that hasn't let them win down in State College since 1934, but that is for the team two years from now to contend with.

UPON ARRIVING back from State College, Ben counted his injured. On the list: end Ray Perkins and halfback Sam Alexander. Perkins hasn't picked his left foot off the ground since he injured his leg and Alexander has a temporary metal brace encasing his neck. The seriousness of the injuries has not yet been determined.

Yesterday, most of the varsity watched a dummy practice of Illinois' plays, while getting their preliminary defense set up.

After looking at the Penn State it becomes obvious that Ben has an oddity. He has what is sometimes called a "cup-of-coffee" or "pipe mixture" team—i. e. half and half. Syracuse seems doomed to play two completely different games: a first half and a second half, entirely different.

No one can be singled out for the blame. It is not lack of conditioning for Syracuse second half's against Temple and Boston were their best. As against Fordham, Syracuse racked up a terrific first half against the Nittany Lions. At the end of the first half Syracuse had outrushed State 58-15, outpassed them 61-30 for a total of 119 yards-gained to State's 45. Penn State's passing in the first half was all but eliminated by the Orange. They tried twice as many passes: 18 and completed the same number as Syracuse—4.

EVEN IN the second half, Syracuse outdid every Penn State effort; every one, that is, except scoring. At the end of the game, Syracuse still led in every department, statistic-wise.

After the halftime show, Penn State changed their attack and began running and pitching-out more often. Schwartzwalder says that his boys tired in the 67 degree temperature—they called many timeouts, and Rados began feeding tireless Lenny Moore. Again the Orange missed a fullback. Had Automatic Bill Wetzel been playing, there were several times he could have been called on for vital yards.

All in all, about the only good thing that happened was another step taken by Bob Leberman for a berth on an all-Eastern eleven. Bob played another driving game averaging over nine yards per carry.

Thirteen games ago, it Penn State who was the last Eastern team to beat the Orange. Since that game late in 1951, Syracuse lost only three games: Bolling Field, Michigan State and Alabama, none of them eastern teams. The closest any Eastern team came was Boston's tie this year, 14-14.

The One That Got Away!!

KEITH VESLING of Penn State manages to juggle a ass intended for Syracuse's RAY PERKINS. VESLING finally came down with the pass for an interception late in the third quarter. PERKINS, who suffered a leg injury in the fourth quarter, tackled VESLING in the end zone for a touchback.

Piety Thinclads Seek Third Win Saturday

By BOB GROGAN

Victorious in their first two starts this season, the Orange harriers will be seeking win number three this Saturday when they face the Cornell runners in a 1:30 p.m. meet at Ithaca.

The Piety boys decisively defeated Navy and St. John's in a triangular meet over the five mile Van Cortland Park course in the Bronx last Saturday. The scores were: Syracuse 29, Navy 49 and St. John's 54.

RAY OSTERHOUT continued his winning ways as he legged it to victory over the rest of the field. His time was 25:46.8—13 seconds faster than Jim Byrne of St. John's.

Osterhout led from start to finish and covered the first two miles of the race in record-breaking time.

Cornell will enter Saturday's race with a record of two victories and one loss. The Big Red bea tboth Colgate and Yale but lost to Penn State.

The course at Cornell has been changed since last season and Coach Bob Grieve's runners will be competing on it for the first time. Osterhout held the record on the old course and will be out to establish one for the new site.

MOST OF THE races on the new Cornell course have been won with times of around 27 minutes. Grieve feels that about five of his boys should be able to better that time.

Les Vielbig, who missed the triangular race because of an ankle injury, is not expected to be ready for the Saturday meet. He tried the leg out yesterday but was forced to quite when it began to bother him.

Otherwise, the team is in top form. The hill and dalers went through a fairly vigorous workout yesterday to ready themselves for the always dangerous Big Red harriers.

A freshmen race between Syracuse and Cornell will precede the varsity engagement. It is scheduled to begin at 1 p.m.

The order of finish in Saturday's race:

Osterhout, Syracuse	25:46.8
Byrne, St. John's	25:57.2
Townsend, St. John's	26:38
Armstrong, Syracuse	27:15.5
Harper and Hurt, Navy	27:33
Parker, Syracuse	27:55
George, Syracuse	28:00
Alger, Syracuse	28:13
Calzi, Syracuse	28:15

Gymnast Notice

All freshmen and varsity candidates for the Syracuse university gymnast team should report to Coach Paul Romeo at 2 p.m. in Archbold gym.

Frosh Sailors Win Ten Race Regatta

Jay Short and Artie Arnold, a pair of Snipe sailors from the upper New York state area, paced the frosh seamen to victory in the Area C eliminations for the Mid-Atlantic Freshman Championships Sunday at Onondaga lake. Pressing the Orangemen all the way was Colgate, which took second and qualified with Syracuse for the championship which will be held at Navy on November 1.

The Hillmen racked up 59 points in the ten race regatta, while the Red Raiders garnered 55. Rensselaer notched third with 52 while Cornell had 48. Capturing top individual honors was Charley Barrington of Colgate who scored 32 points in the five A division races. Arnold led the Orange with 30.

With a better showing in the B division, Colgate would have undoubtedly taken the regatta. Barrington, a frostbitten veteran from Manhasset Bay on Long Island, was far and away the outstanding sailor on the one mile triangular course, but lack of a top B division skipper took the wind out of Colgate's sails.

Hill Booters Prep for Battle Against Sampson Airmen

Still aiming for their first win, the Syracuse booters resumed practice sessions yesterday in preparation for Saturday's tilt against the Sampson Flyers.

Syracuse was denied its second victory bid last Saturday when it was beaten by an aggressive minded Cortland State Teacher's squad.

THE TEACHERS started off fast but didn't score until the seven minute mark in the second quarter. Cortland scored again to give them a 2-0 lead which they held at halftime.

In the third quarter, Syracuse tallied twice while Cortland put another ball through the twines.

Both Orange markers were scored by Bill Nelson. The all-American offensive ace netted the first goal on a solo shot from the field at the 0:23 mark. Seven minutes later, Nelson scored again on a penalty shot.

At this point, the Teachers sent in their first line. As he did throughout the game, Coach Fred Holloway rotated his players in soccer's answer to the two platoon system. Altogether, Holloway used 28 players while the Orange coach, Andy Coccari, used 14.

SYRACUSE, WHICH had been playing well following a sluggish first half, started to press the Teachers in the third quarter. When the Orange goalie, Gunnar Wirth, was thrown out of the game however, the Orange attack faded as Coccari was forced to withdraw Sig Wirth from the forward wall and put him in the goal position.

Good performances were turned in by Joe Milliran, Bud Gormon and Bill Nelson of the Orange.

Saturday was Gormon's first starting performance and he accredited himself well. Milliron, a sophomore, also played well while Bill Nelson, who scored Syracuse's only two goals, displayed his usual offensive prowess.

Nick Razos and Chuck Mayhood were two defensemen who thwarted Holloway's offensive hoardes for most of the game.

AXEL SPOTS—Cortland State brought a 4-1 record into Saturday's contest. Hamilton, RPI, Springfield and Colgate were the four victims while Cornell gave the Teachers their only setback. To show that comparative score doesn't mean too much, Syracuse tied Cornell 1-1 while the Big Red nipped the Teachers, 1-0.

GRID GRADS

Two graduates of Syracuse university and its 1953 Eastern champs, are now playing professional football. Jim Ringo, an offensive center while at Syracuse, is now listed in the offensive starting lineup for the Green Bay Packers.

Sigma Chi Defeats AEPi in Intra Swim

By RON DEUTSCH

Delta Upsilon, Sigma Chi, Psi Upsilon, Beta Theta Pi, Phi Delta Theta and Phi Kappa Psi splashed to fraternities to victory as the second week of the '53 intramural swimming program began at the Archbold pool yesterday afternoon.

Brooks, Harding and Schwab paced Sigma Chi in the relays to cop their 21-13 win while Polek and Smith added their strength as the Betamen notched a 19-6 win over Zeta Psi.

In other meets the Phi Delts swept all events to rip Phi Ep, 18-9, and Delta Upsilon won a 16-10 decision over Theta Chi. Psi Up and Phi Kappa won forfeits.

Intra Grid in Third Week

By ERNIE ETOLL

Intramural grid action entered it's third week of competition with eight games played last night. One game was forfeited but the other ones were run off without a hitch. Major games last night were fought between Washington Arms and Skytop M-1; Skytop M-2 and Charles Whitman.

In the opening game last night, Washington Arms defeated Skytop M-1, 20 to 7. Leading Washington Arms was Dave Driscoll who scored three touchdowns, two of them on passes from Mort Golinsky. Ron Howard, a fleet halfback, scored the TD and extra point both on sweeping end runs for M-1. Levi Morton forfeited the second game to Cleveland A.

The third game found Jim Cromwell, Bruce Bevridge and Tony Cipriano who scored on a long run , lead Skytop M-6 over Skytop M-10, 15 to 7. Outstanding for M-10 were Pat Prabha who scored a TD and Tom Hallett who led the passing attack.

In the final game of the night on Field 1, Skytop M-3 bowed to Skytop M-7, 8-0. Jerry Riggi scored on a handoff from his brother Gene early in the second half. The remaining two points weare garnered on a safety early in the game.

Skytop M-9 and Skytop M-5 opened the action on Field 2 with M-9 winning out in a hard-fought game 12-0. Leading M-9 was Rocque Dameo who scored both TD's on passes. In the second game Skytop M-2 outlasted Charles Whitman 19 to 14. For one of the winner's scores Doyle Roberts intercepted a pass and ran 45 yards for a touchdown and scored 6 more on a run. Charles Whitman's Dean Comeau and Dick France scored a touchdown apiece.

Move over, Famous Towers

But in America, the tower-come-lately (extreme right) may rapidly become as familiar as the old landmarks of Europe. It is one of the Bell System's radio-relay stations which speed telephone calls and television programs coast to coast.

In May, 1948, these towers connected only five Eastern cities. Five years later the TV network included 95 towns and more are being added all the time.

Being the first network of its kind in the world, the planning, research, engineering and construction requirements are providing real opportunities for the kind of people who like to pioneer.

If working on new developments appeals to you, check with your Placement Officer for the details on employment with the Bell System. There are positions open for electrical, mechanical and civil engineers, as well as business administration and arts and science graduates.

The Story of an Inauguration

"DEAR MOM. Your son, RIGGER, has been elected mayor of the gayest, prettiest, most wonderful twp blocks in Syracuse. That's right —Mayor of Marshall st. And MARY ANNE DALTON gave a speech for me . . . .

. . . . Then handsome STAN LEFF, president of the government here, gave me the oath of office. I waswonderful as I swore to protect Marshall st. against all enemies, foreign and domestic. And did Liz Brydon feel happy . . . .

. . . . I cut the ribbon that stretched across the clean scrubbed gutter. JULES TOMCHIN, who directed choreography for the inauguration, helped me split the orange hand and everyone grabbed pieces of it for souvenirs. Don't I look handsome . . . .

. . . . My loyal constituents shook the sidewalks with praise for their new mayor. DEE MORIARITY fed me goodies and BOB DISHY made pretty faces. I got an oak leaf and key and mace. Now I must prepare to defend my title against the Sheriff of Waverly ave. Love, RIG".

Pageantry Marks Rigolosi Inaugural

By JAN CARO
Executive Editor

In solemn ceremonies Friday, Vincent Paul Rigolosi was inaugurated as mayor of Marshall st.

Hordes of campus constituents gathered in front of the Varsity restaurant, applauding their mayor as he was borne to the place of of investiture in an open convertible.

THE NEWLY ELECTED official was attired in a tuxedo with slightly baggy trousers and a derby hat and puffed on a cigar.

The mayor was carried piggyback from the Cosmo to the platform in front of the Varsity by the defeated candidate, Corrine Beecher.

Sworn in by men's student government President Stanley Leff, Rigolosi took the following oath on the local telephone book:

"I VINCENT Paul Rigolosi, do hereby swear to uphold the dignity of my office as Mayor of Marshall st.; to protect the vested interests of my fellow denizens; to promote the general welfare of the donut-dunkers and hamburger-hounds; to insist upon proper lighting facilities in all establishments and in all pin-ball machines; to act as official host to all individuals and groups entering my domain, whether domestic or foreign; and to officially represent my constituents in all matters of state."

Mary Ann Dalton, women's student government president, presented the official symbols of his office: a yellow badge, a key to Marshall st., a laurel wreath and the mace of honor—a lollipop.

A ribbon was stretched between the Varsity and the Cosmo, halting all traffic; Rigolosi cut it to symbolize the opening of his term of office.

Members of the executive committee who will assist the mayor in his duties were introduced. They include Ralph Ellis, Elizabeth Brydon, Corrine Beecher and Lawrence O'Sullivan.

A VICE SQUAD "who will promote more and better vice on Marshall st." is made up of Kostantinos (Gus) Salonika, Jean Anne Brydon, Charles (Skippy) Thaw and Martin Glassman.

The losing candidate, Miss Beecher, presented a token of her esteem to the mayor—a record of "Eh Cumpari."

Telegrams from prominent campus, city and national figures, congratulated Rigolosi on his inauguration.

In his inaugural address, the mayor stressed that he realizes the importance of his position and will carry out his responsibilities with solemn attention to all problems.

FREE ICE cream was served by the Varsity restaurant in honor of the occasion.

Jerry Leider directed the production, while Julius Tomchin was in charge of choreography.

No January Commencement, Says Tolley

The Squared Oval on Our Hilltop High

OLD OVAL has become the new Quadrangle and the photograph above is possibly the first printed picture anywhere of the new campus arrangement. In the center, the main campus and new sidewalks are clearly visible. The photograph was taken by Lee Jones, a Daily Orange photographer, in a plane from Nedrow air park. Syracuse university's new Quadrangle is part of the master University plan being administered by Noredo Rotunno, University landscape architect. The Quad was constructed at a cost of $50,000.

Booth Applications For Campus Chest Due on Friday

Friday is the deadline for Campus Chest booth applications.

All organizations planning to sponsor booths for the 4th annual Campus Chest Carnival on Saturday, Oct. 31 must submit their applications to Richard Zallen, Phi Epsilon Pi or Joan Vinicoff, Sigma Delta Tau, by Oct. 22.

CO-CHAIRMEN Inga Loeb and Harold Steinberg have requested the applications be submitted as soon as possible to avoid duplication. Booths are awarded on a first-come first-served basis. The committee desires that an alternate choice be given, Steinberg said yesterday.

Application forms have been sent to all organizations but the information may be submitted on any form. Included in the application should be name, address and phone number of the organization, booth chairman, name and description of booth.

Entrants have been advised that imagination is an important factor because two trophies will be awarded. In addition to the regular prize for the booth that has the largest income, an additional prize will be awarded for the most original booth. A meeting of booth chairman to decide locations will be held next week.

Approximately 2,500 students are expected to be present for the affair which will be held on the Quadrangle. Chancellor William P. Tolley will give the opening address from the library steps at noon.

TICKETS FOR THE various booths will cost 10 cents and be sold at central locations. The only booth which will accept money will be the refreshment stand sponsored by Tau Epsilon Phi.

A new innovation this year will be the sale of carnival buttons. The buttons will be bright red on a yellow background with the inscription, "Dig That Carnival" depicting both the carnival and the present condition of the main campus. The buttons will be sold for 10 cents the week preceding the affair and also on the day of the carnival.

Last year's carnival was held during the second semester. Approximately 60 groups had booths and the net profit, which is put in the Campus Chest fund was $600.

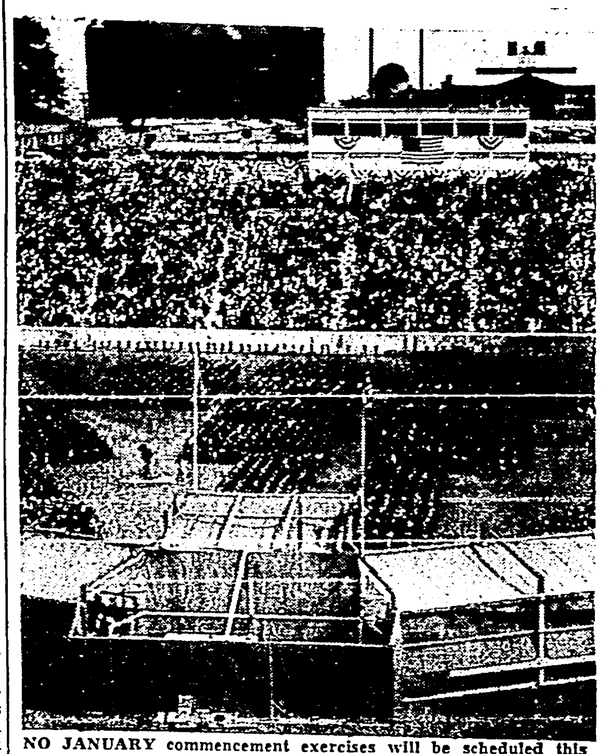
The trophy winning attraction was a ferris wheel sponsored jointly by Sigma Alpha Mu and Beta Theta Pi. The runner-up was a hat toss booth under the direction of Alpha Epsilon Pi and Sigma Delta Tau.

So far this year, approximately 15 booths have been assigned including Iota Alpha Pi's roulette wheel, "It's On The House". Alpha Xi Delta and Delta Kappa Epsilon will sponsor "Dunk The Witch", and Sigma Delta Tau will be in charge of "Break The Bustle."

FOURTH MEETING

When Syracuse and Illinois meet on the Champain-Urbana gridiron Saturday, it will mark the fourth renewal of a rivalry begun in 1908. The Illini have been victorious in each of the three contests to date.

Where the Vale...



NO JANUARY commencement exercises will be scheduled this year, according to University officials. The January graduation ceremony had been in a question mark status for many months. June's commencement exercises will be the 100th in the University's history.

Centennial Event Planned for June By Administration

The University's 100th commencement will take place in June 1954.

This was announced by Chancellor William P. Tolley yesterday when he told the Daily Orange that formal January commencement ceremonies will be eliminated.

THE ACTION was taken by the University administration after consultation with various student leaders.

The Chancellor also revealed that the Administration has already begun plans to secure a prominent speaker for the occasion. Recipients of honorary degrees are also being discussed.

The abolition of the January ceremony will not only apply to 1954 but to all future years. The exercises would be reinstated only if the number of mid-year graduates shows a sizable increase.

Since 1950 the number of seniors receiving January diplomas has steadily decreased. Almost 900 students were graduated in January of that year while in 1953 only 426 students were eligible. Figures from the registrar's office show that less than 300 actually took part in the ceremony.

ESTIMATED FIGURES for a January 1954 commencement indicated that less than 250 students would have participated.

The Chancellor had disclosed earlier in the month that some officials preferred to hold only the June ceremony. These people felt that the concentration of effort and finances in one commencement would increase the effectiveness of that program.

Dean Kenneth Bartlett, University vice-president, had estimated the cost of a January exercise at $8,000. He stated that Syracuse was one of the last colleges in the nation still observing a mid-year ceremony.

In voicing approval of the abolition, Bartlett said that there was room for only one such large public enterprise.

Government Course Set for Tonight

MSG Program Required For Office, Assembly

All class or assembly office seekers must attend the opening session of the seven-week MSG training course at 7:15 tonight in 207 HL, according to Steve Reiss, chief of civil service.

Director of Education Ken Brown, will open the series of lectures with an orientation talk, designed to show the aims and objectives of the course. Reiss will also speak on "The Relation of MSG to the University."

THE TRAINING program is open to anyone with an interest in government, whether or not he signed up. The 244 Freshmen and upperclass office seekers who signed up for the course are required to attend all lectures.

The seven lectures, most of which will be held on Wednesdays, will be followed by a final exam on all the material covered.

Two faculty speakers have been procured for the series: Dr. Alfred Cope of the citizenship department, and Professor J. Calvin Callaghan of the speech department, who will lecture on parliamentary procedure.

A number of prominent students have been selected to speak to the government trainees on the relation of government to their particular fields. These include Mary Ann Dalton, president of WSG; Al Anderson, president of Traditions commission; Nancy Knapp, president of Panhell; Fritz Briggs, IFC president.

STAN LEFF, president of MSG; Ray Geunter, chief justice of student court; Darwin Bolden, head of NSA; and Reiss, chief of civil service.

Syracusan to Go On Sale Oct. 28

Syracusan, the campus monthly humor magazine, will go on sale Oct. 28. The first issue of the 1953-54 year will feature an article on football by Ed Myer, associate sports editor, as well as a plan for reserve seating and plans for renovation of the campus.

Members of the frosh staff are asked to report at 3:30 p.m. today to the Syracusan office in the Hellbox. This is the first in a series of classes designed to acquaint the freshmen with the physical make-up of the magazine.

Plans for the November issue will also be discussed at this meeting and assignments will be made.

LA Seniors Asked To Check Credits

In order to prevent a delay of graduation, liberal arts seniors planning to graduate in January should check their graduations requirements.

Checking should be done as soon as possible with Miss Dawn M. Case in 210 Hall of Languages.

Fitting Place of Sex Explained at Lecture

By LIZ GODDARD
Daily Orange Junior Editor

When there is love, sex takes its rightful place, Rev. Arthur Hopkinson, Jr., told students yesterday in the first of this year's social hygiene lectures.

Speaking on "Sex—How to Live With It," the minister explained that love is not something you get, but rather something you give and have the capacity for receiving.

"THE PROBLEM of sex is to take this instinct and use it in the right way, learning to live with it, to sublinate it, and to use it," he said.

Rev. Hopkinson, who has 15 years counseling experience, urged students to think in terms of the specific because each problem is individual and no two people are alike.

Commenting on the controversial Kinsey reports, the Methodist chaplain said that Dr. Kinsey has done individuals a favor by proving that it is possible to find common denominators in this field.

"Although Kinsey covered a controlled situation, he will have a great influence on education, counseling, and writing," he predicted. "It is helpful to know that there might be a way to chart such things."

A COEDUCATIONAL college is one of the best places to choose a mate, Rev. Hopkinson said, because you can see the person in so many different phases of life.

He commended the living supervisions at Syracuse for making it easier to live a normal life and to make the right choices.

"Never make the mistake of thinking that you know a person before marriage," he warned. "You always marry a stranger."

With marriage the individuals take on a new status as husband and wife, he explained, and you are completely new persons.

"Sex is with us to stay," he concluded, "not as a stumbling block, but for happiness and joy."

"Drinking, its customs and practice," will be the subject of next Tuesday's lecture in the series sponsored by the social hygiene committee of Chapel.

Miss Camp to Give Concert in Crouse

Miss Analee Camp, well known cellist on the School of Music faculty, will give a concert of contemporary European music at 4 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 25 in Crouse auditorium.

To open the program, Miss Camp will play the "Prelude Opus 123" by Emanuel Moor, inventor of the double keyboard piano.

This will be followed by "Sonata" written by Frances Poulenc in 1948. She will also present Swiss composer Hans Vogt's "Sonata" and Florent Schmitt's "Concerto" for cello and orchestra. Schmitt and Poulenc are considered France's leading composers.

Vermont Governor Here for Briefing

Vermont Gov. Lee E. Emerson will attend an air defense briefing here tomorrow and visit his daughter, Cynthia, a coed here.

Gov. Emerson will tour the 32nd air division control tower at Hancock field and will attend a briefing on the theme, "Defense of the Skies."

Accompanied by Mrs. Emerson, his civil defense staff and state representatives, he will arrive at 10:30 a.m. The governor will be met by Mayor Thomas Corcoran, the city commissioners, Col. Robert S. Israel, Jr. of the 32nd air division, and Col. Michael D. Maione of the 107th Fighter group, New York national guard.

A graduate of Syracuse university and the George Washington law school, Gov. Emerson was awarded the "Most Distinguished Graduate of the Year" award from Syracuse several years ago.

NAACP to Hold Maxwell Meeting

National Association for the Advaancement of Colored People will hold an organizational meeting at 8:15 p.m. today in Maxwell auditorium.

Clifton Moore, chapter president, will report on the national NAACP convention, and plans will be formulated for the coming year.

Photographer Gets Air View of Quad

A short flight from Nedrow Air park last week netted Daily Orange Photographer Lee Jones a sharp photograph of the new quadrangle. For the first time Hill students can now see the culmination of this major campus rearrangement—the new Quad.

Jones was taken up by "Flying Red" Lyons, who donated his services so that Jones could snap the photo. Lyons is a professional pilot recently out of the Navy. He has more than 10,000 hours of flying time in his log book and currently conducts flying lessons and "chartered hops" at the Nedrow field.

One of the photographer's many hobbies is snapping pictures from the wild blue yonder. He has to his credit a large number of local pictures taken from the air. Jones also frequently takes photograph trips with Robert Sahakian, a Hill student and pilot.

Applications Due For Top Position

Applications for the plenary chairmanship of the March foreign policy conference may be turned in until Monday to Marcia Michelbacher, Chi Omega.

The conference will include panel discussions on various aspects of our foreign policy and speeches by prominent national leaders in the field.

'54 Execs Endorse Harshburger Dance

By KEN LENT
Daily Orange Sports Editor

The senior class executive council has endorsed the Hubert Harshburger benefit dance, John Beach, senior class president, announced yesterday. Tickets for the dance, from 8-11:30 p.m., are now on sale in all Greek houses and in the Women's building and from varsity sport athletes.

The official announcement to The Daily Orange from the senior class follows:

The members of the executive council of '54 collectively endorse and shall personally support the all-University Benefit dance for Hubert Harshbarger on October 27. While the dance is not primarily a senior class function, we should like to urge all seniors to join this worthy cause. Each of the 12 members of the council already has a ticket—see you there.

John Beach
President Class of '54

Music at the dance will be provided by Ray Caldiero's orchestra which is donating the services of the entire orchestra for the benefit. Caldiero plays regularly Friday and Saturday nights at the Clover club.

The food service committee, headed by Jerry Hill and Henry DeMers, is also offering its services free of charge for the evening. Six food service customers have already donated food for the dance.

THESE INCLUDE General Ice Cream, Forget-Me-Not potato chips, NBC bread, Coca-Cola and Pepsi-Cola Bottling companies and Pilgrim Meat Packing companies.

Coeds attending the dance will be able to obtain green blanket permissions from 12 o'clock permissions from the WSG office on the third floor of the Women's building anytime before the dance. The office is open from 12-1 p.m. and 4-5 p.m.

Co-chairman Dick Beyer reports that tickets have been going well. The varsity athletes are planning to provide the entertainment headed by Thomas "Ed Sullivan" Coulter.

Committee chairmen include Beyer and Bruce Yancey as co-chairmen of the entire dance: Lawrence O'Sullivan and Robert Fleck head the ticket committee; Michael Skop, Joseph Orzehowski, Paul Slick and Paul Kernaklian are on the decoration committee.

George Olenik is chairman of arrangements, Pat Stark will head the band committee and Patricia Carroll is in charge of sorority ticket sales.

Beyer said yesterday that Hu is now in St. Mary's hospital at Huntington, W. Va., several miles from his home. The dance chairman added that it would be a welcome gesture if Syracuse football fans could drop a line to Hu at Room 357 of the hospital.

A Hill graduate, class of '53, Hu was injured in a motorcycle accident in late August on the way to his home. Gangrene set in and his leg had to be amputated. Olenik reports that Hu went outdoors for the first time last week and seems to be doing well.

Claude Rains Sets Appearance Here

Stage and screen personality Claude Rains will give dramatic readings Thursday evening on the stage of Lincoln auditorium under the auspices of the Famous Artists series.

Student tickets for Rains' program, "Words and Music" will be the English office, the speech and available today and tomorrow at drama office and the University bookstore.

Rains received the New York drama critics award for the 1950-51 season as well as the Antoinette Perry Award of the American Theater Wing and the Delia Austrian medal from the Drama League of New York.

Included in the program will be scenes from "Julius Caesar" and "Richard II". Rains is remembered for his success on the legitimate theater in varied Shakespearean roles.

Eleanor Roosevelt Dines Here Tonight

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will be guest of honor at 6:15 p.m. today at a dinner given by United Nations at Syracuse university.

Scheduled to be held in Shaw dormitory, the banquet will be attended by members of UNASU, Daily Orange editors and representatives of the downtown UN organization.

FOLLOWING THE banquet, Mrs. Roosevelt will go to Lincoln auditorium, where she will address Syracuse residents. She is expected to comment on her recent trip to the Far East.

Mrs. Roosevelt has completed a book entitled "India and the Awakening East."

Her Syracuse appearance is a part of a nationwide tour in which she has been meeting with presidents of local chapters of the American Association for the United Nations.

She is now devoting her time to extensive work in expanding the AAUN throughout the United States. During this tour she plans to aid the local presidents by explaining organization and other problems to them.

Mrs. Roosevelt's offices are located in the Carnegie Endowment building across the street from the UN building in New York city. The Carnegie building houses offices of all non-governmental organizations concerned with international affairs.

WAER Broadcasts Past Musical Hits

Song hits of the past fifty years are being presented on the "Fred Gresinger Show" at 6:45 each Wednesday on WAER. In addition to Gresinger, the present series of shows will include singer Bobbie Berger, and guest singers Audrey Hazlitt, Jane Williams and Ken Sparks. Richard Ballentine is host of the program. It is produced by Edward Rasch.

Underwriting Company Rejects Proposed Intramural Insurance

By ROGER HERZ
Daily Orange Junior Editor

The proposed intramural insurance program has been turned down for this semester by the casualty underwriting company which had offered it, Carleton L. Krathwohl, associate dean of men, told The Daily Orange yesterday.

Reason for failure of the program to be enacted was an insufficient percentage of signups. Out of 1,606 male students who signed up for intramurals, 717, or just over 44 per cent, expressed a desire to purchase the coverage.

Krahtwohl said that the University is quite willing to work out an insurance program with the underwriting company at any time a sufficient number of students are willing to contract for it.

"The administration regards intramural insurance as an immediate need," he said, and disclosed that individuals in the administration and athletic department had expressed "considerable surprise" over the small number of signups.

The casualty underwriting company had originally expressed expectation of a compulsory plan, but stated that it might be possible to underwrite the insurance if 50 per cent or more of the intramural participants were willing to purchase the insurance.

Although they figured anything less than 70 per cent not a sound venture, Krathwohl said, they were willing to undertake the program if such a minimum was met.

Other problems expressed by the company were the collection of individual premiums and certification of participants, problems not encountered where all have subscribed.

The survey of student interest in the plan was secured through the intramural managers, representing each living center and fraternity, who met Sept. 30 with Milton Howard, director of intramural athletics.

Krathwohl said "Although over 50 per cent did not indicate an opinion about taking it or refusing to participate in the intramural program if the insurance was made compulsory, Mr. Howard and I are both surprised at the indifference shown by the students."

He noted particular surprise in light of the extensive work done by men's student government and the fact that the administration and certain vocal interests in the student body feel that the need exists for some protection.

"Our only hope for the future," the dean said, "is that the problem can be further studied and that interested student groups will be desirous of promoting a plan for intramural insurance or a more comprehensive plan of accident and sickness insurance available to the entire student body."

He said that the administration will continue to work on the problem, especially through the University personnel committee, which is chaired at present by Dean of Women Marjorie Smith.

Other members of the committee are Vice-president and Dean of Student Services Frank Piskor; Dean Krathwohl; Raymond F. Crossman, Forestry registrar; University Registrar Keith Kennedy; Dean of Admissions John Hafer; Dr. C. Robert Pace, director of the Psychological center; Dr. G. Arnold Kronk, director of the Student Health service; and Dean of Hendricks Chapel Charles C. Noble.

Representatives of the Colleges of Liberal Arts and Business Administration also it on the personnel committee.

The proposed plan would have been available at 50 cents per semester or $1 per year. It carried provision for up to $500 protection per accident over and above what the student health service provides.

Actual notice of the non-acceptance was received by the University's insurance counselor, who was informed by the underwriting company that it did not feel it appropriate to extend coverage for the intramural program.

The modern age in June

Seniors can now rejoice in the fact that their graduation exercises in June will be the 100th of Syracuse University.

It is fitting that the Administration has eliminated January graduation ceremonies. This last vestige of the post-war college days and an $8,000 relic, had long outserved its usefulness.

Only 250 students would have attended the graduation ceremony had it been held in January. To spend $8,000 for this small percentage of students, would have been very foolish, especially in these days of the shrinking budget.

It has long been an "open secret" that illegal rushing few universities in the nation to continue the wartime antique. It is obviously more sensible to concentrate all efforts and finances on one large public ceremony in June.

The January graduates will not be forgotten since they have the University's invitation to return for the June ceremonies and participate in the formal program.

We now hope that Syracuse officials can obtain a speaker of exceptional caliber to match the importance of the occasion.

Crime and Punishment

The Alumni Interfraternity Council has taken action against illegal rushing on the Syracuse campus.

The fact that a move in the right direction was made is to be commended. However, one would not need a medium or prophet to predict that this action will be the last that the Council or its rushing committee will take.

It has long been an "open secret" that ellegal rushing is a commonplace on the Hill. To this paper, the abuses this semester have seemed more flagrant.

Rushing of prospective freshmen began with parties during the summer months. Fraternity men officially opened the season during orientation week when they visited Washington Arms and the Skytop dorms in an effort to enlist pledges.

Parties, in the houses and out, and invitations to visit the houses at any time were also part of the undercover rushing activity. The "pocket-pinned pledge" was not a rarity, nor has he ever been.

How many of the fraternity students observed the silence period? And how many could be seen in the men's gym talking to freshmen and instructing them on their choices?

The fraternity which was caught engaging in one of these practices received its just punishment.

But how many other fraternities were guilty of the same or similar charges? Few, if any of the Greek men, could be "the first to cast a stone."

Is there not a more effective manner in uncovering the illegal rushing of all fraternities? Is there not some method to guarantee a freshman his right of free choice in accordance with the rules laid down by the IFC?

Now we are 8 . . .

This week has been proclaimed as "United Nations Week" in Syracuse in recognition of the organization's 8th birthday.

Discussions on the effectiveness of the world organization have ranged pro and con ever since its inception. However this is one week when we can well afford to examine its achievement.

The United Nations forms one last point of contact with the Russians. It was in informal discussions at the UN that the means for ending the Berlin blockade were found. The announcement that the Communists would be willing to talk peace in Korea was also made at the UN.

A settlement in the tension between India and Pakistan averted bloodshed. Progress was made in the problems between Israel and the Arab countries.

The United Nations provides a vehicle to gain support of other nations in the "cold war" against Communism. If the US advances programs designed to aid political, economic and religious independence, we help win lasting friendships.

The UN is a public relations forum, an organization saving lives in the field of death and disease, and a body which once took up the principle of collective security.

Imperfect as it may be, the United Nations remains as one of the best avenues to "peace in our time."

Light Pulse to Image: SEE What Eye Mean?

By JOHN JOHNSRUD

Man & Machine

Ever wondered how you are able to see? How light is turned into impulses that produce an image on the brain?

In the basement of Lyman, in one of the zoology laboratories, studies are being made to determine the chemistry of the process. Dr. Verner J. Wulff, chairman of the zoology department, is attempting to define the chemical reactions necessary to enable the eye to change light into nerve impulses.

It is generally known that a light sensitive pigment, the so-called visual purple, absorbs light of varying intensity and color. Then by chemical reactions as yet unknown this pigment transforms the light energy into nerve impulses. The problem is to determine just exactly what these reactions are and the part each play in the transformation.

Dr. Wulff has been working on this problem ever since his college days when he attended Wayne. He then spent several years at Northwestern for an MA and Iowa State for a PhD, punctuated by two years in the army, before coming here in 1951. Both his MA and PhD were earned with work related to the present problem.

Another of Dr. Wulff's investigations is also concerned with nerve impulses. This one, however, deals with the source of energy for nerve impulses and how this energy is available for the use of the nerves. The problem lies in determining the substances necessary for the synthsis of certain substance which is the instrumental agent in enabling the nerves to generate impulses.

DR. VERNER J. WULFF, chairman of the zoology department, is presently engaged in research on the chemistry involved in the phenomenon of vision. Here is is demonstrating the equipment used in the investigation as he explains the problem and his attempt at its solution.

The 'Whole Foot' for 'Best Foot Forward'

Artemio R. Guillermo of the Phillippines
Student School of Journalism

The news-feature about foreign students carried in the Oct. 16 issue was particularly interesting to me, being a foreign student myself. I like that short paragraph which seem to wrap the whole purpose of this article.

"Almost all of them earnestly learned our language. But not much is accomplished if, after learning how to say hello, no one is at hand to whom it may be said."

Yes, we have learned your language, and, to some of us, quite well too. We may not speak it with a snap but we do try to communicate. And that is the point.

Our stay is so brief and fleeting. It is so short to gain a reliable perspective of the great American way of life. There are so many conflicting patterns which perplex us. Impressions can be easily formed, if we try the easy way out. But generally we are a curious lot. We do not like impressions to sink readily without proper interpretation from our American friends.

Many of us have more or less pre-conceived ideas even from the day we landed on your shores. Whatever these ideas, one has only to ask a foreign student.

Viewing America at close range have, of course, dispelled a great deal of our pre-conceived notions. But there are some more, which may be cleared through casual conversations, individual talks, and weekend visits with American friends in less formal atmospheres.

I was in a mid-western university last year where I discovered that the average American college student was so engrossed in his "extra-curricular activities" that he had no time for meeting other people outside his own fraternity. There were parties given to foreign students but it was all a stiff affair. So foreign students tend to associate more with each other because there was a mutuality of feelings. We were all strangers floating anonymously, caught in the vortex of campus activity.

A Pakistan friend said: "If an American student will stick half of his best foot forward, I'll be willing to put out my whole foot."

As foreign students we are not only interested in our academic pursuits. In fact, we learned more in our contacts with those who show a real interest in us and who put their best foot forward.

White is Black

Once upon a college campus everyone powdered white bucks. That was the era when "the whiter the buck, the prouder the wearer." But since "time marches on," ideas march on also. Now the trend is to keep the white bucks from staying white. Sound complicated?? Actually it's rather simple. If a white buck gets dirty, you don't have to polish it, and it dons that, "I've been around appearance." The main objective—how to get the bucks to appear naturally dirty.

Many methods were tried; spreading ashes on evenly, stepping in mud puddles, or sitting with one foot on top of the other. Well, since shoe polish was taboo, and white buck buyers no longer liked whiteness, able minds had to find a way to solve the situation.

Finally, the solution arose—why not produce a white buck that is already dity, namely, a "dirty white buck". Now it's all done for you, no more worrying how to make them dirty, because that's the way you can buy them in shoe stores today. White bucks, a thing of the past!!!!

LETTERARY COMMENT

SIDEWALKS AND TWIRLERS

Appreciate

October 16, 1953

Miss Arlene Lambert
Editor, Daily Orange
Syracuse University
Syracuse, New York
Dear Arlene:

I would like to take this opportunity to express my deep appreciation to the students at Syracuse university through the medium of your paper.

I was quite apprehensive when at registration time thousands of students were milling about aimlessly across the campus and with good reason since the main quadrangle was all broken up. As our new walks and walk paths began to take form, I noticed that students began to follow them religiously. Last Wednesday at the ten o'clock hour when hundreds of students were on their way to and from class, I stood at the Chapel plaza and did not see a single student cutting across our newly seeded areas. Always in the past I, at times, wondered whether we would have to provide individual paths for each student; it seems with our new development scheme that we have hit upon a good balance. This, in spite of the fact that the new concrete walks are laid for future plan of the university development, must serve for some years to come for the existing buildings. I sincerely hope that our students will continue to show respect and pride in the new campus development as they have in the past few days.

If they do, I am sure that the students, faculty, and the administration will be able to boast of one of the loveliest campuses in the making in the country.

Sincerely yours,
N. A. Rotunno

A Chance

October 18, 1953

Editor
Syracuse's D. O.
Dear Sir:

It appears to us, as interested observers of the halftime entertainment at Syracuse university's football games, that Eunice Mallot has not been given a proper chance to demonstrate all of her baton twirling abilities. Certainly anyone who has the skill to win an Eastern Baton Twirling championship ought to be given a chance to display her entire repertoire.

It also seems that Alta Burg has been given a disproportionate amount of the publicity and an equally disproportionate share of the spotlight during the halftime exhibitions. For instance, at night games the stadium was darkened while Alta twirling fire batons, but not Eunice did the same stunt! We feel certain that Eunice could easily handle all of the routines that Alta has thus far performed.

A school that is fortunate enough to have two of the best twirlers in the country is missing a bet by not having them twirl together, as a team! Imagine (as an example) how much more impressive the fire baton routine would be if the girls were twirling simultaneously. In any case, Eunice should be given an opportunity to perform to the full extent of her ability and that Syracusans should be able to witness this performance.

The latest word from Michigan State:

The other day an English professor called on six students in a row without getting an answer to his question.

Finally he glared at the room in general and snarled "All I want is the facts, m'am, all I want is the facts!"

An Evening at the Theatre

'Mr. Roberts'

By JOAN NADELHAFT
Daily Orange Drama Critic

The plays at the Astor are getting better every week.

In fact, "Mr. Roberts" is a gem. An unpolished one, to be sure, but a gem anyway.

The play is a natural, and the actors responded. They looked as good as if they enjoyed every line—the audience did, at any rate. No one stood out; they were all excellent.

"Mr. Roberts" is presented in two acts, as a series of short scenes, which are supposed to flow together with a minimum of time between each one. The setting shifts back and forth from the upper deck to the captain's quarters, to Roberts' quarters etc., making rapid changes difficult. These are handled well, for an opening night, but were rough. Practice will take care of that.

More technical difficulties were encountered with the sound and lighting. Lighting is another problem in a play of this type. Blackouts are used to speed some of the scene changes, where the action takes place in the same setting. The timing there has to be good, and in this case, definitely, needs more practice.

These technical problems are ironed out, as a rule, by the second or third performance, and would not have occurred had the Astor's schedule called for longer rehearsal time.

The play has an intense patriotic flavor underneath the cursing and rowdiness. It is not expressed, and there is no message, as such. However, it stands as a testimonial to the average American who fought the war of boredom with laughs.

Many fine plays and books have been written about the same theme—the indomitable American enlisted man who had to win the war or else, etc.

These include "What Price Glory," and "Dere Mabel," for World War I. In the last global fight, there were "See Here Private Hargrove," "Stalag 17" and many others.

In "Mr. Roberts", the sailors are these same kind. Most sentences are punctuated with invective and the general IQ is not the highest in the world.

But, that big feeling comes through and the audience gets to love the sailors on the ship, and care deeply what happens to them. This, is, of course, the mark of a great play. And the actors did everything that was needed to bring these men from the playright's mind to life on the stage.

Robert Wark, in the lead; Ray Parker, as a weak officer; Frank Schofield as Doc; and Daniel F. Keyes, as the Captain were the principals, but the play would have gotten nowhere without the rest of the cast.

Mr. Roberts is an idealistic officer who wants to get into the combat area. His personal conflict comes between his feeling for the crew and his hatred for the captain, who is a blood brother to Captains Queeg and Bligh.

Much of the action centers around Roberts' attempts to get transferred from the cargo ship into a battle area. Several minor conflicts are brought in, but the charm in the play comes from the zany crew members, and the conspiracy of the officers to act as buffers between the men and the captain.

The pace is excellent, after a slow start, and the directors, Wark (Mr. Roberts) and Parker (Ensign Pulver) are to be congratulated.

Ghost of Shakespeare

We have the following report from the Minnesota Daily that the ghost of Shakespeare haunts the tiniest detail of a student's life, to whit as follows:

Studying in the library: "More light, you knaves; and turn the tables up, and quench the fire, the room as grown too hot!" (Romeo and Juliet)

Cramming at 3 a.m.: "How weary, stale, flat and unprofitable seem to me all the uses of this world." (Hamlet)

Cramming at 7 a.m.: "It is not for your health thus to commit your weak condition to the raw cold morning." (Julius Caesar)

Remember, it's less than 30 days to mid-terms.

SIGHTS ON SYRACUSE

FRIENDLY FOES & A GOAT

By MILT SHEFTER

P.S. on Penn State: Happened to visit the old homestead over the past weekend, and was interested in the bi-partisan following of the game at State college. Both Ed Albright and Len Moore played on the same high school team and the outcome of their path's parting was of common interest. Moore was All-State and Ed received second team rating for the same honor. The feelings of fans of each boy were clearly expressed when Len ran up to Ed and shook his hand after the game, and after which, you may remember, Moore had been slightly handled by other Syracuse players. A great feat of sportsmanship by two great guys.

P.S.S. to P.S.: Radio listeners were quite disillusioned by the announcer who kept referring to the Orange's lucky breaks and barely tripping up the State runners. On the other hand, when a Syracuse man was tackled, no less than TWELVE State men were in on the play. Not wishing to mention names, may we say, "Mr. D.P., how could you be so swayed? Could our eliminating you from the Orange bowl consideration last year still annoy you?"

• • •

Mr. Roberts and Schatzi: Theatre goers who have or will enjoy the current show at the Astor might be interested in some vital staistics about the star of the show furnished by Miss Nancy Edwards of the press and promotion Edwards. Schatzi is an eight month old Tonnenberg doe who desides at Windridge Farm in Casanovia. She won the contest Saturday afternoon winning over two other contestants with her gentle, sweet disposition. She feels on cigarets, lit or otherwise, celery, and drinks water from a battle helmet. She made her debut with the current cast and was also on the radio for publicity purposes. In the 10-15 minutes she appears on stage, she is made a junior member of the Equity, quite an honor for so young a goat.

WESTWARD HO!

--(A sequel to an earlier production entitled "Moon Over Miami")--

The Setting: Champaign-Urbana, Ill., and Syracuse, N. Y. Pro-Mickey Bates, two football teams and loads of memories from Jan. 1, 1953.

The Setting: Champaign Urbana, Ill., and Syracuse, N. Y. Produced and directed by Mr. Muck Meyer.

Introduction (announcer speaks)—This is a second in a two-set series sponsored by the "How to Win Football Games and Influence Opponents Club." This is Syracuse university's second television appearance and we feel that it has learned quite a bit since its earlier debut last year. Now on with the production. (Saltine Warrior music is heard in the background as the voice fades away).

Grieve—Going to be quite a game Saturday?

Mystery Man—Think we got a chance Bob? And by the way who are you going to be rooting for?

Grieve—Well son, that's a pretty touchy question with me. I'd really rather talk about cross country. You know that Ray Osterhout has . . . .

Mystery Man (interrupting)—Come on Bob, fire with the dope. You don't have to be afraid. I won't tell Lew Andreas or Jim Decker.

Grieve—Okay, but I'm just playing a hunch, see. Somedays hunches pay off and somedays they don't. I'm just playing a hunch.

Mystery Man (surprised)—You mean to tell me Bob that you're just playing a hunch? (Grieve nods.) Well, what's the scoop?

Grieve—I'm pulling for the Orange, of course. Well, have to be off now. See you again.

Mystery Man—And down deep, Bob?

Grieve (leaving)—The fighting Illini, but keep it on the QT. Have to keep up my respectability.

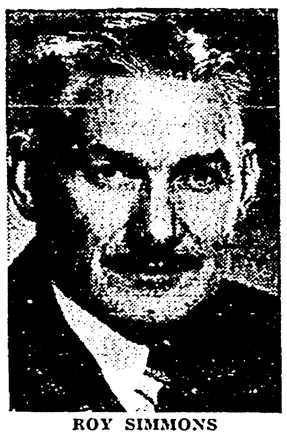
* * * * *

ACT II—(Champaign-Urbana is the setting. J. C. Caroline and Mickey Bates, the fine two sophomore backs of Illinois, have just come into the dressing room after a practice session prior to the game against Syracuse. Both are dressed appropriately.)

Caroline—Well Mick, how do you feel today?

Bates—Fine, J. C., just fine.

Caroline—Think we got a chance this Saturday. According to what our coaches say Syracuse is a real powerhouse. Coach Eliot told me yesterday that we would be lucky to win by one touchdown. The guy really looked worried.



ROY SIMMONS

Bates—That's the way they all feel. But still wasn't he the same way when we played Nebraska, Stanford, Ohio State and Minnesota. And they said we were lucky to nip the Buckeyes 41-20. Yeah, they also said the 27-7 victory over the Gophers was a break too.

Caroline (showing immaturity, being a soph)—Gee, we may lose on Saturday. Those Eastern teams are really loaded this season. Didn't Coach Eliot tell us that the other day? We'd really better hustle to win that game. It's going to be a real toughy.

Bates (showing the same immaturity)—Yup, this is going to be the big one. As big as the last four. They say Syracuse has a quarterback who runs the 100 in 9.5 and a fullback who could put Doc Blanchard in his hip pocket. The line is over 225 pounds and really big. Well, this is it I guess. Come J. C. let's hit the shower and get some rest for the game. (Both exit with towels.)

* * * * *

ACT III—(Mr. Burdick's office once more. The mysterious figure is still pounding away at the typewriter. Entering from the left is Roy Simmons, chief Syracuse scout and jack-of-all-trades.)

Simmie—Arnie (Burdick) in yet?

Mystery Man—No, he left for Illinois this morning. I'll be taking over for the week. By the way, Simmie, how is this Illinois club. You've seen them in three games haven't you?

Simmie—Yes I have. And what a ball club. Somebody had the nerve to call them green until those two soph halfbacks got going against Ohio State and Minnesota. Brother, watch out.

Mystery Man—You must mean Caroline and Bates. I hear they are pretty good.

Simmie—They run like deer, two of the real potential greats in college football. The whole club is a fine one. Now if we just catch them overconfident. They should be, you know, after what they did the past two weeks. I doubt if Eliot is counting this as a rough one. That is our main weapon now, overconfidence.

Mystery Man—Thanks Simmie you may have hit the nail on the head.

Simmie—Well, have to be going now. Remember, overconfidence. (He exits.)

ACT IV—(Champaign-Urbana, Saturday afternoon, around 4:30.) THIS ACT WILL BE FILLED IN AT A LATER DATE.

Perkins May Miss Illinois Tilt; Brenneman to Play

Pietymen 15th In Offense, Sophs Lead Illini Team

When Syracuse travels out to Champaign-Urbana, Illinois they can show press clippings that rate them 15 in the nation in total offense. According to statistics released yesterday by the National Collegiate Athletic bureau, Syracuse also rates tenth in the nation in forward passing offense.

While Syracuse is 15 in total offense they face a drawback in that Illinois is fourth.

INJURIES HAVE TAKEN their toll. In all probability Ray Perkins will miss the Illinois game. Neil Brenneman has replaced Perkins at end. Although Bob Leberman and Sam Johnson came out of the game with aggravated injuries they are in top shape and will play.

This is all small assurance to the Orange coaching staff. Of prime importance: conditioning. At the end of practice last night head coach Ben Schwartzwalder told his gang about the Illinois team that has to run up the steps of their home stadium every night. The stadium holds some 70,000 and has, according to latest scouting reports, 77 steps.

"Every night," said Ben, "they run up the steps in their stocking feet. They are the best conditioned team you'll face all year. Remember in their last game against us, they didn't even take a deep breath."

Ben was referring to the 41-20 defeat the Orange suffered in 1951. Although that was the most points scored against the Illini all year, it was small consolation to realize that Illinois led 41-7 at one time.

SYRACUSE HAS A rather disheartening habit: scheduling one of the strongest Midwest teams every year. Although these schedules are made years in advance, it never seems to fail. Last year when Illinois had only a fair team the Orange scheduled Michigan State, they eventually became No. 1 in the nation. Two years ago the Orange played Illinois, they eventually went to the Rose Bowl. All of these games were scheduled years in advance. This year, Illinois seems to have arrived one year ahead of schedule and their sophomores mold a team that is one of the strongest in the midwest.

As usual, the Illini will present a great running game. Two years ago the Orange had to stop Johnny Karras, the team's leading scorer and ground gainer, who was being compared to "Red" Grange. This year they are comparing J. C. Caroline to "Red" Grange.

Two years ago, Johnny Karras was held effectively in check but the other halfback, Don Stevens easily took up the slack. This year the other halfback is Mickey Bates and he leads the team in scoring.

The Syracuse coaches are not giving up on the Orange. Illinois, Schwartzwalder feels, is one year ahead of schedule. With a majority of sophomores Illinois was expected to be in a building year. Instead they are in a budding year. "Maybe we can put them a year behind schedule" mused Schwartzwalder.

Both team and coaches will fly out to Illinois on Friday morning. Syracuse will have one workout in Illinois, just to get the feel of the grass.

NOT SINCE '41

Not since 1941, when Syracuse whipped Wisconsin ,has an Orange eleven licked a Big Ten team. Northwestern, Illinois and Michigan State have beaten the Saltines since that time.

SAM JOHNSON, starling left guard for the Piety Gridders, has been a key man in the Syracuse forward wall. A year ago, he doubled as second-string center and left guard on the offensive team before winning his present position as a regular.

Booters Lose Moller For Indefinite Time

The injuries sustained by Don Moller, star defenseman of the Hill soccer team, in an auto accident, added further to the woes of Coach Andy Coccari with the Sampson tilt coming up in but three more days.

Moller suffered facial cuts and stitches were required to close them. It is not known as yet, how long the booting captain will be lost to the team.

THE LOSS of Moller would necessitate a change in the Hill defensive line. Coach Coccari has not yet decided on a replacement for the big fellow and an adequate sub will be tough to find.

Syracuse's lack of reserve strength was pointed up in the booters loss to Cortland State Teachers. Coccari not having the strength that the Teachers had on the bench, had to play with but two or three substitutions. The Teachers, on the other hand, were able to use a two platoon system.

Hill defense was good but it wore down under the relentless attack of Cortland. Outstanding performances were turned in by Nick Razos, Chuck Mayhood and Bud Gorman.

The return to form of all-American Bill Nelson brought renewed hope to the Saltine camp. Nelson drove home two goals and was constantly on the drive against Cortland.

JOE MILLIRON and Don Shupe excelled on the offense for Coccari's charges. Milliron, the booting pride of Sigma Chi and Shupe, a trackman in the off-season should be in the starting lineup against the Flyers.

Sampson's hard charging Sabres walloped the Orange booters in a scrimmage session two weeks back, 9-2. The Airmen showed one of the finest attacks seen around here in several years as their ex-collegians pounded the nets.

Syracuse beat the Sabres in last year's tilt, but the boys from Sampson have improved considerably since that meeting. They are especially strong in the net and on the offense.

Sig Wirth, who started at goal in the Cortland game probably will be at the same position for the Sampson game. This weakens the offensive line considerably, but is a necessary move due to usual Hill weakness in the net.

Fans' Forum Moved To Thursday Night; Simmons Speaks

Fan's Forum has moved back a night. The movies of the Penn State game will be shown Thursday night in Maxwell auditorium at 7:30. The delay of one night is for the benefit of the coaches, who have trouble breaking away from the Wednesday night skull practice.

Coach Roy Simmons will be on hand to run the film. Simmons, who also scouted Illinois in their last game will be able to narrate the films and show the highlights of the game.

The Penn State game was a close game and some circles say that the Orange played their best game of the year.

From a spectator stand point the game was highly interesting. Most of the scores came on "breaks". Many of the features of the game will be worth seeing. Syracuse's line play, according to Ben Schwartzwalder, was good throughout the game. After watching the film one can discern a decided change in State's offensive pattern. Bob Leberman ran for some good dashes which look very good on film.

Roy Simmons will answer any questions put to him by the fans. Fans may ask any questions concerning the team, last week's game or Illinois. Simmons was the scout that watched the Illini in their last game against Wisconsin.

A student need only show his ID card to be allowed admittance to Fans' Forum. Once admitted, he has a seat on the 50-yard line of one of the past week's most thrilling games.

If attendance is good at this week's showing of the films, it is expected that Thursday will be kept as the regular night for Fans' Forum.

In order to continue sponsoring the films The Daily Orange needs your support.

Illini Soph Halfbacks Compared to Grange

By BOB LEFKO
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Illinois has always been known for its dearth of halfback material. From the immortal Red Grange to the more recent Buddy Young and John Karras, the Orange and Blue has always been loaded in the backfield and this year is no exception.

The midwesterners' 1953 squad not only has one good runner, but instead, two and either is liable to make the name of Grange sound like high praise for two sophomores but J. C. Caroline and Mickey Bates have shown in their opening performance that they are not over-ranked.

IN ADDITION TO their individual ability, the two work as a pair as if they were made for each other. Caroline; the man with no first name, is the speedster of the duo, capable of doing the 100 in :09:9. Bates, the power runner, is also a hard man to catch when out in the open. He runs the century in 10:2.

Caroline and Bates first came into national prominence two weeks ago when they led the Illini to a surprise 41-20 victory over the highly-rated Ohio State Buckeyes. The two were responsible for all the Orange and Blue's TD's with Bates crossing the goal four times and Caroline twice.

All in all, Bates gained 147 yards in 23 carries while Caroline racked up 192 yards in 24 attempts.

The story was the same last Saturday as the Negro twosome completely outplayed all-American Paul Giel and the Minnesota Gophers, 27-7.

BATES AGAIN was the top scorer with two markers but Caroline was the outstanding performer on the field as he racked up 211 yards rushing. He was only 10 yards short of the Big Ten single-game record when he left the contest late in the last stanza.

Bob Zuppe, the old veteran of Illinois football has already jumped out on the limb and stated "that they would be great." He wasn't sure how quickly they would improve but it looks that they are now near perfection.

Caroline is a six-footer from Columbia, S. C., where he first gained national recognition as a high school gridder. Playing at Booker T. Washington High school, he was elected to the all-American prep school squad.

His first fame at the Big Ten school came in last spring's intra-squad clash when he carried 15 times for 4.9 yards per try although competing for the losing squad.

BATES ALSO STANDS six foot and at 190 weighs six more pounds than Caroline. He played his high school ball for Kewanee (Ill.) High school and made the all-state squad. One of his teammates on the 1951 Northwest conference champions was Em Lindbeck, one of the Illini's present quarterbacks.

Actually, the sophomore pair has already been favorably compared with the outstanding Army duo of a decade ago, Glenn Davis and Doc Blanchard. With Caroline on the outside and Bates on the inside, opposing defenses can't load up one position for fear that the other will be vulnerable. This is one more reason for their effectiveness as a duo.

Both are within possible reach of new records in their first varsity season. Bates has chalked up eight TD's in his first four games and needs only six more in the remaining five contests to break the record of 13 held jointly by Grange, Young and Karras.

Caroline has made his biggest achievement in rushing yardage with 403 yards in four games. This puts him within challenging distance of Grange's record of 1,260 yards for a single season.

Orange fans will get a chance to see these outstanding backs in action on Saturday when the Orange-Illinois clash is on the television panorama. The action may be discouraging to Syracusans but they will know they are seeing two of the best in action.

Undefeated Piety Harriers Invade Ithaca Saturday

Cornell will provide the opposition for Bob Grieve's undefeated cross-country team at Ithaca Saturday afternoon. Syracuse will be gunning for its third consecutive victory in as many weeks.

The Big Red has won two of its initial three starts. The Ithacans defeated Colgate in the first encounter of the season, dropped the next one to the Nittany Lions of Penn State at State College, and came back to the winning trail with a win over Yale last Saturday on their home grounds.

THREE OUTSTANDING veterans lead the sophomore-studded squad. Captain Charles Trayford, a senior from Huntington, N. Y., David Pratt, and Jim Klein are the top Cornell harriers who have faced the Orange thinclads the past two years.

GENE PARKER, one of the leading runners on this year's cross-country team, has a top scholastic average in school.

John Rosenbaum, a 19-year-old sophomore from Brigantine, N. Y., is the outstanding runner to advance to the Big Red varsity from the 1952 freshman team. Rosenbaum, who garnered first place in the Colgate meet, has run well in all three meets to date.

Bill Orange, undoubtedly, will be placed in the role of favorite for the third time this season. As in the past, this is not an unusual factor for Bob Grieve's boys.

The last time the Piety thinclads ran at Ithaca, a slightly different course. Coach Grieve does not expect the altered course to greatly affect the performances of his cross-country men.

TIME TRIALS were held yesterday on the Drumlins course. They will probably be held once again today in preparation for the Cornell encounter.

With Les Vielbig as an unlikely starter, Grieve will once again have to count upon his veteran performers. Boys like Frank Calzi and Don Fryer must show improvement to help Captain Ray Osterhout, winner of both Hill meets.

Several upstate New York fans are expected to flock to Ithaca Saturday to see the meet. This will probably be the last chance for Syracuse fans to see their team in action, as the remaining road trips will take the team to West Point, New York City and East Lansing, Michigan, site of the NCAA meet.

Three Contests End in Forfeit As SAE Wins in Swim Intras

Three swim-offs and three forfeits highlighted the intramural swimming contests held at the Archbold pool last night. Sigma Alpha Mu, Skytop M-10, and Washington Arms lost via the forfeit route to Phi Gamma Delta, Skytop M-2, and Skytop M-8, respectively.

Chuck Gallagher, who took a first in the 50 yard freestyle, John Stallmen, who won the 50 yard backstroke, and Dick Muffelmann, who tallied for five points in the 50 yard breaststroke, combined in the 200 yard relay to give Skytop M-1 a 23-11 victory over Skytop M-4.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON used two men, Barnes and Forester, to their full extent by placing them in all the possible events in order to prevent a forfeit. But Evans and Dailey of Delta Tau Delta helped pull their team to a 20-7 victory over SAE.

In the last event of the night, Wally Hoover scored in the backstroke and breaststroke, totaling eight points in Skytop M-14's 16-11 victory over Grover Cleveland A.

Only two meets will take place in the Archbold tank tonight. At 5 p.m. Skytop M-7 will tackle Skytop M-9 and Alfred Smith tangles with Washington Arms 2-3.

Intramural football enjoyed a night free from action. A full slate, however is slated for tonight with a total of eight games being scheduled. The initial two encounters will get underway promptly at 7 p.m.

Nats Play Royals In Sunday Game

The Syracuse Nationals will make their only exhibition appearance at home before the commencement of the '53-'54 National basketball season Sunday evening in the War memorial against the Rochester Royals.

This exhibition will give the fans a pre-season opportunity to see Bob Davies and company in action.

Zebes Lose Pledge Right In Illegal Rushing Action

By AL BARTKEVICIUS

Zeta Beta Tau has been adjudged guilty of illegal rushing.

This decision of the Alumni Interfraternity Council Rushing committee was made known to The Daily Orange last night. As a penalty, the ZBT house will not have the privilege of pledging any freshmen until March 1, 1954. Charges were brought because of noncompliance with the laws concerning silence periods as set up by the alumni group.

THE RULE which covers the infraction reads: "Any fraternity whose member, active, alumni or pledge, violates either silence period shall be denied the privilege of pledging any freshmen until March 1, second semester."

This is the only infraction of rushing rules to come to the official attention of the Rushing committee. The alumni group was granted the power of administrating fraternity rushing matters through agreement of the University administration and the undergraduate fraternities.

The group bringing up the charge has not been identified, but informed sources indicated that it was not one of the fraternity houses on the Hill.

Announcement of the decision and penalty came on the last day of fraternity rushing and was without any earlier indication of the situation. Earle W. Clifford, administrator of fraternity affairs and Theodore C. Denise, fraternity advisor, explained the charge and the decision to the Zeta Beta Tau house.

Forestry Barbecue Scheduled Today

Six hundred and thirty-five students of the State university of New York college of forestry will be hosts for the faculty at the college's 41st annual barbecue today at Green Lakes park. Richard Silliman is chairman of the social committee which has planned the dinner.

Sponsored by the Forestry club cabinet, forestry's student government body, the all-day affair will feature 18 competitive sports events.

Among the events are the 100-yard and 400-yard dashes, touch football, volleyball, relays, horseshoes contests and the wheelbarrow race.

The first barbecue in the history of the college was held in 1913, also at the Green Lakes park. The first dean of the College Hugh B. Baker, and William L. Bray, often called the father of the college, played in the faculty-student baseball game.

Sorority Rushees To Get Bids Today

Women rushees must pick up their sorority bids between 12 and 5:30 p.m. today in the first floor cloakroom of the Women's building.

All invitations must be answered, either accepted or rejected. Today rushees will narrow their houses to four.

Rushing advisors will be present to answer questions about the houses and will give financial information.

Rushees will wear sweaters and skirts. The first party will be from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Sunday Oct. 25. The second party will be 2:30-3:30 p.m., the third, 3:50-4:50 and the fourth 5-6 p.m.

Sign-ups Scheduled For Hygiene Talk

Dean Noble to Give First Lecture

Your and Your Emotions, a weekly lecture series has been organized by the Chapel Mental Hygiene committee. Leaders in the fields of psychology and sociology will speak on problems arising from campus living.

Sign-ups for the series will be held tomorrow and Friday in the Chapel Board room. The lecture group will be limited to 40 people.

DEAN NOBLE will give the first lecture next Wednesday, Oct. 28, presenting an overall view of the part emotions play in everyday living.

Future lecture topics include Frustrations in Campus Living, Parents and What to do with Them, Military Service and You, How to Win Grades and Influence Deans. The program will feature discussion groups and movies as well as lectures.

Everett Gertner is chairman of the committee which was organized this year. Its purposes are to provide information to students and suggest solutions to problems of campus living; to present referral agencies that are available on campus for guidance on specific problems; and to fulfill the need for guidance work.

GUIDANCE IS offered only to those students requesting the service and is a function separated from the lecture series.

Other committee members include Beverly Darrow, Alfred Brogeman, Patricia Miller, Nancy Blodgett, Barbara Elwood, and Amy Pifer.

Class Assemblies to Select 10 Men for MSG Positions

By ED HARDY
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Class assemblies will have to elect 10 of the 36 men for the men's student government assembly, Chief of Civil Service Stephen Reiss said yesterday.

Elections will be held in half of the 12 classifications on Oct. 28, according to Reiss. These are the fraternity division in all four classes and the city group in senior and sophomore classes.

A TOTAL of 37 petitions were received by civil service with one invalidated. Only three independent petitions were received.

Prospective candidates must petition their class assemblies in the following categories: senior independent; junior independent and city; sophomore and freshman independent.

No specific method has been set for the class legislatures to choose assemblymen, Reiss said. He expressed hope that the 10 men could be chosen by Nov. 4, scheduled date of the first MSG meeting of the year.

Candidates whose names will appear on ballots are:

Senior class—Fraternity: William Levine, Edwin Hochberg, Karl Katcher, Eugene Sandler, City: Joseph Rizzo, Alan Kosoff, Carmen Malagisi, Robert Garver.

JUNIOR CLASS — Fraternity: Paul Frahm, Lloyd Dunsker, Jack Hennessy, Michael Newcomb, Arthur Kinney, Curtis Ford.

Freshman class — Fraternity: Ronald Sloan, Carl Steinhoff, Ronald Miller, Paul Condon, Edward Cowen, Jeffrey Wenig and Richard Dolinsky.

REISS EXPLAINED that elections will be held in those classifications since petitions were received for more than the required number of assemblymen.

Under the revised assembly elections act, there must be at least three Greeks, three independents and one city student from each class in the assembly. The other two men to make up each class' nine representatives may come from any classification according to highest runners-up.

Any person whose name is in the wrong category in the above list should contact civil service by tonight, Reiss said.

All candidates must sign the MSG assembly elections act no later than 4 p.m. Friday, he stated. He requested them to stop at the civil service offices in Building 30 immediately.

Men elected to the assembly must have taken the Future Student Leaders training course of MSG, according to Reiss. Those who have not completed it must enroll in the current session by contacting Kenneth Brown, director of education.

Campaigning officially began last night and will continue until noon Tuesday. No campaigning will be allowed on campus except in Sims hall. Reiss also warned that the anti-noise act of student government limits the use of loudspeakers to certain hours.

DO to Hold Special Meeting

A special meeting of the Daily Orange editorial staff will be held at 4 p.m. today in the Castle. Members of the freshman staff must also attend. Details of the Colgate Weekend edition will be explained.

Deans to Attend State Conference

Nine Faculty Members Travel to Buffalo

Nine university faculty members will attend the 27th annual conference of New York state association of deans and guidance personnel in Buffalo this week at the Hotel Statler,

Attending from Syracuse will be Dr. Frank P. Piskor, vice-president and dean of student services; Miss Marjorie C. Smith, dean of women; John S. Hafer, dean of admissions; Miss Eunice Hilton, dean of the college of home economics; Carlton L. Krathwohl, associate dean of men; Earle W. Clifford ,assistant dean of men; Miss Ruth Haddock, assistant dean of women; Miss Margaret Parker, director of social activities and Jack C. Buckle, director of men's counseling and residence.

Holding committee positions are Dean Smith, nominating and membership committees; Dr. Clifford, chairman of publicity and public relations and Dean Hilton, chairman of a discussion group on "Students in Personnel courses." In charge of student deans attending the convo is Miss Haddock.

Mrs. Tolley Host To Women's Club

Mrs. William P. Tolley will inaugurate the new season of the Syracuse university's women's club by entertaining faculty wives and women teachers from 3 to 5 p.m. Friday at her home.

Casowasco Site Of Chapel Convo

Orientation Program Scheduled for Reps

Chapel house representatives will leave tomorrow for a two-day conference at Casowasco.

The purpose of the conference is to orientate house reps to the Chapel program, according to co-chairmen Marcia Heath and James Carr.

House representatives have been organized to act as an information group for living centers about religious activities on campus.

The meeting will be attended by 75 reps and staff members of the Chapel board.

Dean Eric Faigle, of the College of Liberal arts, is scheduled to give the main address on Friday night, talking on Chapel's relationship to the campus. Jewish Sabbath eve services will also be held Friday.

Campus chaplains will conduct a session about Chapel faith groups on Saturday and Dean Eunice Hilton, of the College of Home Economics, will speak on the potential of house reps as an effective information and communication group.

The conference will end with dinner at 5 p.m. Saturday, and delegates will take buses and cars back to campus.

Any house reps who have not already registered should contact Marcia Heath at 76-3249 or James Carr at 4-0678.

To Meet Today Modern Dancers

Students interested in modern dance are requested to meet at 7:30 p.m. today in the Dance Studio of the Women's Building.

Membership in the group is open to all classes, and experience is not necessary, according to Joan Huff, dance director.

Club members will practice routines for performances to be presented in the Dance Studio during the semester.

Interested students unable to attend the meeting may contact Joan Huff at 4-9290.

Topsy-turvy World

SHOWN IN mid-air doing a flip is CORKY SEBBO, who won the NCAA junior tumbling championship last year. He is the force behind the gymnasts who work in forming the new pep squad, the "Zip Team."

Gymnasts 'Zip Team' Will Join Pep Scene

Someone is rewriting the tragedy of school spirit into a comedy.

A new squad is being formed, the Zip team, the members of which are from the University gymnastics squad. Corky Sebbo, junior NCAA tumbling champion, is heading the embryo team in preparation for an action backdrop for cheering at both the Cornell game and Colgate.

WORKING OUT on their own in the afternoon, the squad will present a new twist to the somewhat mundane past of spirit at the gridiron games.

In addition to the mid-air backflips and precision routines, the boys will have a timed musical background from the marching band.

The motivation behind this movement has come from a grad student who spent his undergraduate days at Brown university as cheerleader. Head cheerleader in his senior year, Chris Chrisfield, graduate in English education, has organized this new spark with the advice and backing of various faculty members.

A series of statements will be printed with the articles that will run in the coming weeks. The following is from the director of athletics:

There must be a community of interest by the students if there is to be the whole-hearted enthusiasm commonly known as "school spirit". This community of interest may be in the football game, in the band, in the appearance of the campus, in the new dormitories, in the chapel, in a great teacher—but it must be there! Without a vital interest by a large number of students in a University project, there will be no enthusiastic demonstration. This interest should come from within as an evidence of pride in the team or in any other project representing the University. But it should be stimulated also by campus leaders.

I speak not only for football, but for the fifteen intercollegiate teams and a hundred University projects that need the kind of enthusiastic backing a live student body can give.

Debate Tryouts Scheduled Today

Tryouts for the junior varsity debate team are scheduled for 2:30-5:30 p.m. today and from 4-6 p.m. tomorrow in 415 HL.

Fifteen new members have been accepted for the team. They are: Ruth Anderson, Myrna Brodsky, Susan Cassll, Mary Cole, Diane Dahlman, Marilyn Head, Doris Hertelendy and Marilyn Levy.

Also Joan Manouse, Mary Alice Skahen, Richard Walrath and George Winston. Sophomores Robert Kniffin, Donald Frederickson and Sandra Shanen were also selected.

AFROTC Will Drill At Thornden Today

Outdoor drill for all AFROTC cadets starts today, according to an announcement by Cadet Colonel Jack Forgette.

Cadets will drill on the Thornden park football field. In order to compensate for the added distance drill will begin at 12:05 p.m., five minutes later than usual.

All cadet assignments are listed on the main bulletin board of Machinery hall. Cadets are required to know their positions prior to reporting to Thornden.

POET AND SONG

Professor A. E. Johnson of the English department is currently featured in a series of WAER programs titled "Poet and His Song." Professor Johnson reads his own poetry at 7:30 every Wednesday evening. The program on tonight will consist of humorous readings about well-known places, about Syracuse university and about Syracuse. Phyllis Perkins produces the show. It is announced by Will Lape, jr.

Hill Directory Sellout Forseen

By FLIP SIROTA
Daily Orange Associate Editor

A great book will be published for Syracuse university in the next few weeks. Though there will be no review in the New York Times or any sensational advertising campaign, this the publishers are quite sure there will be a sellout-sale.

There is no reason to think otherwise. The quality and usefulness of the University Directory has been proven year after year.

STILL ONLY $1, this melting-pot of students' names, faculty member's names and student organizations will become a well-thumbed reference manual as the school year goes on.

Mrs. Dorothy Sickels, who is compiling this year's directory, is now in the process of proofreading the alphabetical listing as they come back from the Orange Publishing co. where the directory is being printed.

Mrs. Sickels said that the directory could have been out earlier than the expected date this year except that students forgot to put their telephone numbers on the IBM directory cards and these numbers had to be ascertained before the name could be put into the campus who's who.

Out of 100 cards selected at random, Mrs. Sickle said that more than 1-3 of the students had forgotten their phone numbers.

TYPOGRAPHICALLY the directory will be easier to read this year. In previous directories there was a long blank space between the name of a sorority, fraternity or living center and its phone number. A person's eye invariably drops as it traverses the white expanse and hence instead of Shaw dormitory answering the call, one got Willy's meat market on W. Fayette.

This year there will be a guide line across the page so such errors will be eliminated, unless of course Willy's meat market is the number one really wants.

Another improvement according to Mrs. Sickle will be a more logical listing of various university offices and services. If there is a prowler outside a coed's window and she wants to phone the campus police she would never think to look under Business Administration for the number where it was listed last year. This time the police will be named as a separate agency, alphabetically.

Student Health Service will be listed as Infirmary and the Good Shephard or University hospital number is a new addition to the book.

THE 1953-54 ORANGE directory cover will be more eye-appealing since Dr. Lawrence Siegfried, head of the Graphic Arts department of the School of Journalism, has designed the cover.

Probably most students are wondering what happened to those directory IBM cards they so laboriously filled out during registration. According to Mrs. Sickles, after names, addresses and phone numbers are copied from the cards they are just thrown away, which leads to the question of yhy in "Sam Hill" couldn't the University get the same information off a million duplicated cards instead of insisting on a card for that information all by itself.

But that's getting away from the purpose of this story which is that the University's "where's who" will soon be available around the campus for $1.

Buy it. See your name in print.

Pi Sigma to Hold Science Lecture

All interested students are invited to attend a lecture by Donald Lundgren, instructor of Industrial Microbiology.

Sponsored by Pi Sigma, plant science honorary, the subject of Homologous Antibodies on the the talk will be "The Effect of Process of Sporulation in a Nesophillic Organism." The lecture will be held at 8 p.m. in the Museum Lecture Hall.

Fine Arts Museum Features Exhibition

The work of leading American artists of today is on exhibition at the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts through November 8.

Assembled by Andrew C. Ritchie, the exhibit includes a one-man show of paintings by Gordon Steele of Syracuse and sculpture by Henry Di Spirito of Utica. Both men were top prize winners in the large Regional Art Exhibition held in the museum last March.

A third gallery is filled with prize sculpture and pottery from the Ceramic Nationals.

Student groups are admitted in the morning, as well as during the regular hour of 12-5:30 p.m. daily, and 2-5:30 on Sundays. Admission is free.

Onondagan Needs 1500 Subscriptions

By JOY YUNKER

It is up to the students now.

The Onondagan staff must secure 1,500 subscriptions by Nov. 7 or the 1954 issue of the yearbook will not be published. This decision was made yesterday by the board of publications.

THE BOARD, which indorsed the subscription drive, passed the motion that if the drive was not successful, the 70-year-old publication would be discontinued.

Charlene Velon, business manager of the ON, announced that all fraternities, sororities and independennt living centers must choose representatives to handle yearbook subscriptions.

These reps will meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Pi Beta Phi house, 210 Walnut pl. At the meeting reps will receive instructions and subscription blanks.

Miss Velon announced that this year payment can be made in three parts. The first payment of $3 will be due Nov. 7; another $3 will be payable the week of Jan. 4. The final $2 will be due the week of April 1.

THOMAS BECKETT, editor of the annual, estimated that 1,000 Syracusans had already pledged support of the yearbook in the three polls that were taken. ON editors believe that when the men's living centers and fraternity houses are polled 500 more subscribers can be found.

The 70-year-old yearbook reached its present crisis when the Administration revealed that seniors would no longer be required to purchase a book. In the past yeirs seniors have accounted for three-fourths of the yearbooks sold.

Beckett expressed confidence that the 1954 Onondagan, if printed, could be in the hands of the students by May 15. This year deadlines will be closely supervised by the student publications board, he said.

Reading Program By Claude Rains Set for Tonight

The works of some of literature's finest artists will be transformed into a program of dramatic reading tonight at 8:15 p.m. when Claude Rains brings his evening of "Words and Music" to Lincoln auditorium.

The noted actor, whose appearance here is sponsored by Famous Artists as the second attraction of its current season, will interpret a series of great moments from literature with a piano.

ACCORDING TO Famous Artists director Murray Bernthal, a large number of students from the Hill English, Speech and Dramatic arts departments will be present for the Rains performance. Prof. Bernthal also indicated that Mr. Rains will make a visit to campus, although the time of arrival is not certain.

For his apearance in Syracuse, some of the selections Mr. Rains will interpret are two scenes from "Julius Caesar," parts of "Richard II," "Enoch Arden" by Alfred Lord Tennyson, "Journey of the Magi" by T. S. Eliot, excerpts from "Canterbury Tales" by Chaucer and a delightful comedy by Checkhov.

Noted as one of the top Shakespearan actors, Mr. Rains has appeared in a variety of stage and screen roles including his prize-winning interpretation of Shaw's Caesar in the motion picture version of "Caesar and Cleopatra."

In his last Broadway appearance, he starred in Arthur L. Koestler's powerful anti-Communist drama, "Darkness at Noon", for which he received six awards including the New York Drama Critic's award for the best actor of the 1950-51 season.

MR. RAINS presented a program similar to "Words and Music" on CBS-TV's "Omnibus" program last Spring.

Musical background for the program will be provided by concert pianist Jack Maxim who will turn to the works of Richard Strauss, Karl McDonald, and Marlam Brinton for his material. He will also perform a Brahms work in solo.

Special student tickets for "Words and Music" will be available today in the English office, the speech and dramatic arts office and the University bookstore.

The third event of the Famous Artists series will be a special production of the opera "Carmen Jones" on Nov. 7.

Assembly Resolves To Help Yearbook

Presidents Vote Support for ON

Women's student government, in a resolution last night, announced its support of the Onondagan editors in their struggle to secure a '54 yearbook.

The unanimous resolution read: "It is resolved that women's student government assembly, the legislative body of women's student government, goes on record in support of the Onondagan staff in their efforts to publish a 1954 yearbook.

"HOUSE PRESIDENTS realize that the traditions of publication should not be broken and that it is a service of great importance to all students.

"House presidents shall make members of their house aware of the subscription drive sponsored by the Onondagan staff and will do what ever is in their power to support it."

Mary Ann Dalton, president of WSG, read the resolution before its unanimous adoption. She emphasized that if there is no Onondagan this year it will become increasingly hard for students to publish one.

House presidents will again be urged to inform thair houses about the ON situation in the house presidentn's tralning program on Tuesday.

SOCIAL CHAIRMEN and head residents will have the problem explained to them in their meetings this week.

Through later WSG panel meetings women will learn about the Onondagan financial situation and how they can help.

"Informing women students through their representatives is WSG's way of cooperating with the subscription drive," Miss Dalton explained.

The public relations panel of WSG will try to find a way for all students to eat lunch and not go from morning until late afternoon without eating.

The student welfare panel will investigate the problem of innadequate lighting on campus at night. The ways and means panel is looking into the possibilities of a more efficient lost and found department with a small charge for each article returned.

The organizations panel is investigating, wit hmen's student government the possibility of revitalizing the joinnt student court. The elections bill is also under discussion for possible revamping.

Dr. James to Speak To Delaware Convo

Dr. Preston E. James, chairman of the geography department will represent Syracuse university at the fourth conference on World Economic Development Friday and Saturday at the University of Delaware.

The two-day meeting will be attended by more than 300 educators and members of governmental agencies. The conference is particularly concerned with the various social science and humanities of economic development.

The University of Delaware has also invited Dr. James to attend the meeting on Friday of the Northeast Council of Latin American Studies and agency of the Pan-American Union. Problems of teaching and research will be considered at this meeting.

Great Toleration in United Nations Cited by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt

By EILEEN CHAMBERLAIN
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Tolerance marked the explanation of United Nations activities presented by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt last night at UN ceremonies in Lincoln auditorium.

The wife of the late president spoke at the climax of UN week celebrations in Syracuse under the auspices of the city chapter of the American Association for the United Nations.

BY NOTING the objectives and achievements of the UN in the eight years since its inception, Mrs. Roosevelt clearly emphasized the tolerance necessary in keeping such an organization alive.

"The first step toward world understanding," she said "was the creation of the UN, writing of the charter and ratification." However the charter gave us only the machinery. Infinite patience and understanding was required to learn to work together with people of different backgrounds, different religions and different races.

Complaints that UN meetings begin without prayer were answered by the president of the AAUN. "If anyone serves in an international meeting there is no question but that he goes into the meetings with a prayer in his heart."

Mrs. Roosevelt related an experience in a conference with the foreign minister of Pakistan in which he walked out on her. She asked a fellow countryman if she had offender the minister and he replied that he had gone off to pray alone. "This is the time of day when we are busy doing our mundane affairs. We must go alone to be reminded of temptations we have and to overcome them."

A NOTE of tolerance was also evident in Mrs. Roosevelt's report on progress made by the various organizations of the UN. She said that since America was virtually the only strong nation not damaged by war, the United States is forced to take the lead in world restoration.

She illustrated this point by mentioning United States service in raising agricultural standards in India through the World Agriculture organization.

"Americans learned by living with the people what they did and how they did it, then persuaded them to try experiments." This led to greater production in one village and spread so that now hundreds of villages have come together, she said.

"You can see that the people know just what has come to them from UN work or from our Point 4 and our Colombo plan. This is vitally important to the people in the United States."

MANY ON the side of the United States wish to expel Russia from the UN. Mrs. Roosevelt replied to this, "We can't get rid of the Soviet Union since it was one of the founders of the UN.

"We (Americans) can't be put out because we have a veto and

Ex-First Lady Holds Press Meet

In a smoky, crowded parlor in the Onondaga hotel, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt greeted representatives of the press yesterday, shortly before a dinner given at Shaw dining hall in her honor by Syracuse university members of the United Nations club.

Showing no strain from a schedule which would be exhausting to a person much younger, answered questions of gathered reporters who included four members of The Daily Orange staff.

The former first lady of the United States wore a black lace dress, gold shoes and a large white orchid. After personally greeting all those present, she posed for press photographers, and motion picture cameras. Later she was photographed with Daily Orange representatives.

"It will take a long time to form a pact with Russia that would be agreeable to us," she stated when queried on her views of the outcome of the recent Big Four conference in London.

"We are dealing with people who are partially oriental and with orientals time moves in centuries, not years."

However, progress is being made, she reassured reporters. "Mr. Vishinsky goes to all the parties, which is something he has never done before. Mr. Vishinsky practically coos wherever he goes."

Szwarc Receives Chemistry Grant

Dr. Michael M. Szwarc, professor of polymer and plastics chemistry at the State university of New York Forestry college, has been awarded a $16,000 grant to study the chemical bond that holds matter together.

The grant was announced by the National Science Foundation in Washington, D. C., as one of 123 awards totaling about $1,332,000 to support work in the biological and the physical sciences.

Prof. Szwarc and his associates are engaged in studying the strength of the chemical bond that holds atoms together in molecules, and the amount of energy required to break this bond.

Dr. Szwarc was born in Bedzin, Poland, and completed his undergraduate work at Warsaw Polytechnic College in 1932.

He received doctorate degrees from the Hebrew university in Jerusalem and from the University of Manchester in England.

Among the posts held by Dr. Szwarc before coming to the forestry faculty in 1952 was a position on the Scientific Advisory Committee to the War Supply Board in the Middle East from 1941 to 1945.

Watch that zip

The Word, at last, has become action.

This editorial is not to preach but to state facts and allow the student body to react accordingly. Something positive is being done to carbonate a spiritual intoxicant for spectators at athletic events.

As stated on the front page of this paper, a Zip team is going into action to give the stands at coming football games an inner reason to cheer . . . to cheer for the fun of it.

The composition of the Zip team is the crew of the back-flip, flying trapeze, high bar fellows that are the University gymnastics squad. These men are going to try to give a completely new shot in the emaciated arm of that harrowed entity: the student body.

We make no demands for you to "get out and support the boys." To the contrary, we would like opinion held in abeyance until they make their appearance on the field. The Zip team is out to do its best to make the full-throated roar and the stinging handclap a natural reflex.

This paper will keep the reader informed on the progress of all the persons involved in this attempt to revive a faltering victim of "rah-rah anemia."

Editorial Director

Only 17 days . . .

The board of publications tossed the ball right back into the laps of the students yesterday when it announced that a 1954 Onondagan could be printed if 1,500 subscriptions (plus deposit) could be obtained by Nov. 7.

This means an extensive and intensive subscription drive starting as soon as possible.

The time has come to discover if the returns of the three Onondagan polls were actual pledges or merely well-meaning but lightly-given promises.

The time has come to find out if the students at Syracuse university will continue to sit on their collective inertias and let the Onondagan go the way of other student programs which have ended up on a casualty list headed "apathy."

The time has come for students to do a bit of realistic thinking and evaluate the reasons for having a yearbook:

Syracuse would be the only University of its size to be without an annual . . . Once discontinued, future publication is doomed . . . The need for a permanent summarized account of the year's activities and student groups is met by no other publication . . . Some students look upon the yearbook as a storehouse of memories which can be reopened for pleasant reminiscing in the future . . . The opportunity to obtain pictures of classmates and friends one might never see again is unequaled . . . High-school (prospective college) students are impressed with the quality of our yearbooks . . .

Each fraternity, sorority and living center group must select an Onondagan representative to collect the subscriptions. The rep must attend a meeting Tuesday to receive instructions.

Women's student government assembly has supported the efforts of the ON editors in their drive. The senior executive council and senior assembly have also agreed to back the publication and do all they can to secure the subscriptions.

Fifteen hundred subscriptions must be obtained by Nov. 7.

Enough said.

No intramural insurance

"Our only hope for the future is that the problem can be further studied and that some interested student groups will be desirous of promoting a plan for intramural insurance . . ."

These were the words of Associate Dean of Men Carleton Krathwohl as he told The Daily Orange that there would be no intra-mural insurance program on the Hill this semester.

The reason for the withdrawal of the proposed insurance lies not with the casualty underwriting company or the dean of men's office but with the male students who did not express an interest in the program.

For 50 cents any participant in intramural activity could insure against accident costs up to $500 over the provisions made by the student health service.

For 50 cents any worry over possible hospital expenses incurred through accidents could have been alleviated.

But the students weren't interested.

Perhaps some group on campus, (even MSG which worked for years to get the insurance) can find the means of promoting the interest.

The company's offer still stands for the spring semester.

HEARING AIDS
UNIQUE ORCHESTRA 'ARRIVES'

By DICK CASE

At this point, I think that it is reasonably safe to say that the unique orchestra headed by Eddie Sauter and Bill Finegan has arrived.

This unqualified statement is presented with a minor amount of instance due to the fact that it is definitely one man's word as opposed to a considerable number of ideas in the opposite direction.

I first came to know these two gentlemen of music in the summer of 1952 when a recording titled "Doodletown Fifers" was meekly pushed onto the market by the boys at RCA Victor who, at that time, were not a little skeptical as to the initial public reaction.

As far as the over-all picture was concerned, the record men were justified in their fears. That was just about the time that Rosie Clooney was inviting folks up to her house and the nickel-dropping populus unintentionally overlooked the offering by a then unknown combination, Sauter-Finegan.

There were, however, a happy few who were bolted to the realization that here was an organization to be recokened with. Sauter-Finegan were not to be taken lightly. Their particular form of musical expression was, and still is, compounded of the freshest ideas to wander into the band picture since Stan Kenton blew his first meager chords.

In time, it was not only the people in the business who dropped into the S-F cheering section. Through a series of progressingly popular recordings, Bill and Eddie saw the band grow into a group which commanded a sizable hunk of the record sales and was to be heard in the many places where folks gathered to listen to good band music.

As a way of a biographical note, Eddie Sauter and Bill Finegan were very sucessful arrangers for such bands as Goodman's, Miller's, and Dorsey's before they considered an organization of their own. And this came only at middle age, when the pair decided that the only way they could adequately express their ideas would be in something personal.

For over a year, Bill and Eddie limited the band to a recording studio and only after much debate, did they venture into the hinterlands with a full-fledged road company. This happened last July when the Sauter-Finegan band gave its first public demonstration at Frank Daley's Meadowbrook club to the tune of several dozen rave reviews.

Since that time, the team has been able to claim a very prosperous fame.

I sinferely hope that I am not alone in venturing to say that Eddie Sauter and Bill Finegan have definitely arrived. I hope too, that there are those who share my enthusiasm for such recordings as "Nina Never Knew," "Midnight Sleighride," "Foggy Day," "Time to Dream" and the others born of the Sauter-Finegan fertile arranging genius.

If not, I fear that this current collegiate generation is hopelessly lost to Teresa Brewer, Jimmy Boyd and the assorted other 1953 style silliness.

Fans Get Squeeze

From now on the end-zone fans at Michigan State will have to look farther and sit tighter. The seats have been shrunk.

By repainting the stripes on the bleachers, a crew managed to add 736 more places, raising the capacity from last year's 50,009 to 50,745.

Previously, end-zone seats were the widest in the stadium. Now they are all the same — 18 inches.

But the prices haven't been changed. End-zone spectators will squeeze in tighter but the squeeze on the pocketbook will be the same.

WITH 'MR. ROBERTS'

From Officer to Star; Hill Receptionist Acts

By LIZ GODDARD

Despite a demotion in rank from Lt. Commander Robert Wark in world war 2 to Lt. (jg) Doug Roberts on the Astor stage, the star of the local production calls Mr. Roberts his favorite role.

Serving as a lieutenant commander in the Navy for six years, Wark led a squadron of PT boats participating in every major landing during the last year.

"Mr. Roberts" may not be typical of the Navy as a whole, but it is very true to life," he said in his dressing room opening night.

Wark spent the summer working with a stock company in Norwich, Conn. There the management lauded him in a paid advertisement for "bringing more people into the Norwich Summer theater than any of the Hollywood names we have presented in our six year history."

"There is no reason why road shows can't be as good as Broadway's productions," he argued. "The calibre of the play depends on the producer, provided he has sufficient financial backing for casts and sets. People have seen too many good things to accept second best."

Wark will appear at the Astor theater until Sunday, nightly tossing the Captain's beloved palm tree overboard.

Miss Bette Neejer, only woman in the Astor's "Mr. Roberts" cast, is leading a double life.

Although currently acting the role of the nurse with a red birthmark, she can be found on the Hill during the rest of the year, serving as receptionist to Dean Frank Piskor.

The producer of the local play phoned Miss Neejer on Saturday, asking her to audition for the part. She read the lines so well that she opened in the play Tuesday with one rehearsal.

After graduation from high school the actress-receptionnist worked in summer stock and attended drama school. She made a two-night stand on Broadway as the grandmother in "He Ain't Done Right By Me."

Miss Neejer has worked in the Dean of Men's office for two years, studying creative writing at University college. She will graduate in January.

Knighthood? Chivalry Is For the Birds

By FLIP SIROTA

Knighthood is no longer in flower on the Syracuse campus and chivalry—well, that's something for the birds.

Mr. Syracuse, the supposedly staunch, upright, future citizen leader of America, is sorely in need of a few elementary lessons in the fine care of being a gentleman.

As soon as class is over he races out of the room, bounds down the steps, flings open the door and breathes the clean free air once again.

And once again he has left in his wake girls pushed rudely aside, girls flattened against the walls to get out of his way and sometimes an unsuspecting victim hanging precariously from the bannisters because she didn't seek shelter quickly enough when the stampede started.

The forfeiture of the few seconds required to allow a coed to proceed him through the door almost never happens.

Occasionally he will hold open one of the doors to a building after he is safely inside. Such sights deserve a mention in "believe it or not."

When icy weather comes and cautious coeds are inching down slippery paths or Maxwell steps —watch out! Here comes mountain boy, fleet as the wind, surefooted, bowling down everyone in his way.

Being a gentleman is one of those requisites for success in the world. Good manners are those that have become an inextricable part of a person, not something to be flourished at odd times.

On Saturday night, Mr. Syracuse will undoubtedly become a shinning gentlemanly example. He will open the door, let ladies proceed him, not bowl anyone down. But come Monday morning-oops!

It might be wise for Mr. Syracuse to remember that just as one good dress doesn't make a lady, so one night good manners doesn't make a gentleman.

There is an old saying "behind the success of every man is a woman." Watch out, boys. You might look behind someday and find out you've been forsaken.

To the Ends of HL Time

By HOWARD VanKIRK

Daily Orange Photos by Lee Jones

How many times have you, in passing by, looked up at the HL clock? Do you know how big it is? What is the date on its face? What is it made of? Continue, gentle readers, and we'll answer these and many more questions about the time keeper on the front of the campus' oldest building.

How can we make these claims? It all began when the director wanted a story.

"Go up and talk to the HL clock," we were told. "Do I look like a monkey?" we asked. "Now that you mention it . . ." "Okay, I'm on my way," we replied. What else could we say?

With a photographer along to snap a picture as we hit the sidewalk, we left for the heights.

When we arrived at the fourth floor of HL, we ran into an IBM service man who was on his way up to repair The Clock, which by chance had stopped over the weekend. This gentleman was able to give us considerable information, both technical and historical, about the venerable time piece.

Combining his information with a little research we had done, we come up with the following:

HL, first campus building, was begun in 1871 and completed in 1873, without benefit of the central tower. The Clock, a gift to the University by the Class of '75, was installed in 1886. In 1887 the central tower, beneath which the old wooden dial is located, was erected.

The Clock's original escapement was run by weights and a pendulum, in much the same way as the old grandaddy clock works. The difference was that the weights in the HL loft had to be cranked up by means of a cable and winch.

Maybe it was the work of cranking it up, or maybe it was progress, but in 1908 this system was given up in favor of a wet cell or "hot-shot" battery-operated affair. Eventually the wet cells were replaced by dry cells, and when the works wore out beyond repair in 1949, an IBM electrical mechanism was installed.

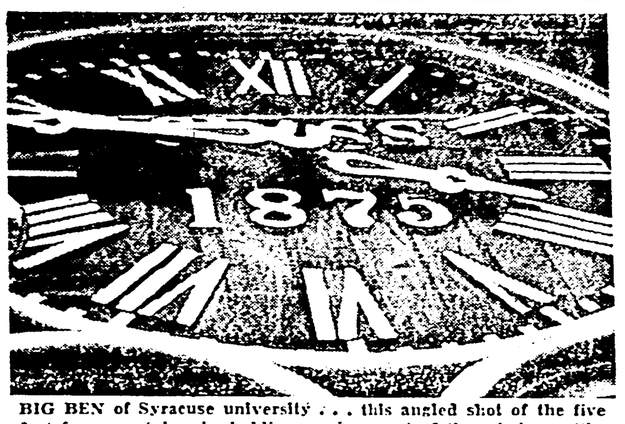
Being fortified by all this knowledge, and hoping we'd live long enough to use it, we proceeded up the 27 narrow winding steps to the HL loft, climbed out on the ledge below The Clock and began to take some measurements.

The face of the Syracuse Big Ben measures five feet across. Doesn't look that big from down below, but down below doesn't look so big from up there either. The minute hand is 29 inches long and the hour indicator is 18½.

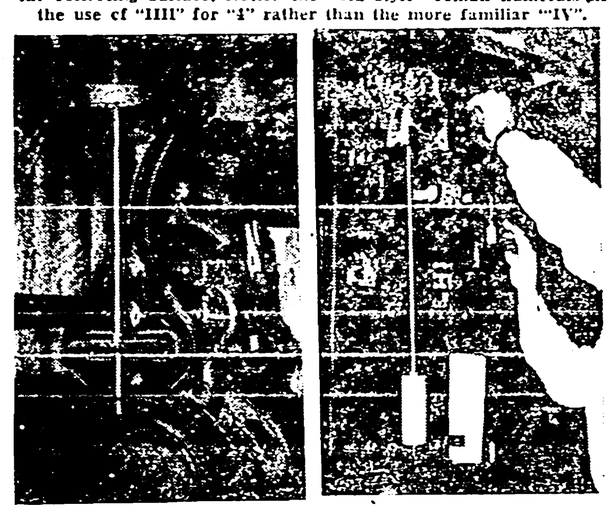
The hour numerals are nine inches high, and the numbers and letters in "Class 1875" measure six and one half inches from top to bottom.

Each minute marker is one and one half by one inches, and each five minute terminal is two and one quarter by one.

Now that we've made good on our original claims, we feel free to say that we hope the wrinkled, weathered face of the Clock will look down benevolently on Syracusans passing by for many years to come. We also hope that Syracusans passing by and looking up at The Clock now know a little more about what makes it tick.



BIG BEN of Syracuse university . . . this angled shot of the five foot face was taken by holding a mirror out of the windows, (the tops of which show at the bottom), and aiming the camera into the reflecting surface. Notice the "old style" roman numerals in the use of "IIII" for "4" rather than the more familiar "IV".



OLD AND NEW style clock ticking . . . the picture at the left is of the original works of the HL clock. The antique gears are 67 years old but were only functioning for 22 years. Working on the pondrous process of weights and a pendulum, it was entirely a manual labor affair. At the right is shown the latest innovation in time-keeping for the University's first building. An IBM apparatus with the tiny gears and slim pendulum shown now turn the hands, which span four feet. The modern mechanism has only been in operation for four years. In the time between the machinery shown, "wet" and "dry" batteries ran the clock.

Coccari Searches Sub for Moller

Coach Andy Coccari continued his search yesterday for a replacement for soccer Capt Don Moller. Moller was injured in an automobile accident over the week-end.

George Hertz, Bob Kelly and Mike Newcomb are among the men being considered for Moller's position. Hertz started at the inside left position against Cornell while Newcomb has been in and out of the starting line-up ever since his sophomore year.

Godayol's play was ragged against Cortland while Ayres has stood out in recent practice sessions. Thus, Ayres promises to figure prominently in Coccari's plans for Sampson.

The Coach Says:

Presenting Bob Grieve

(This article by Bob Grieve, Syracuse cross country and track coach, is the second in a series of weekly articles by the various Orange coaches.)

The green hillsides start to turn to many vivid colors and the smell of burning leaves remind us that once again fall is with us. The usual back to school parade is on! It seems that I have been going back to school for as long as I can remember, but always with anticipation of what the new year will have in store. The fall sports, football, cross-country, soccer, all hold promise of equalling or bettering the records of the previous year.

The usual problems come up and the same age-old questions are asked, but somehow, teams come on the fields of competition and perform—some good, some fair. Always there are the spectator coaches of all sports to lend a little spice to the broth.

This year my cross-country team is made up of mostly seniors. The natural assumption is that they will be good, having had three years experience behind them. Ray Osterhout is captain and in my opinion, the best distance man Syracuse has ever had. He has lost but one dual meet race in college and that was his first race as a varsity man against Army's Dick Shea. Ray was second in the IC4A and NCAA last year. Perhaps this is his year—we hope so.

Gene Parker, brilliant student and good distance man, Don Fryer, always reliable, Frank Calzi, hard worker and Tom Coulter are all seniors. The above boys were IC4A champions their freshmen year and NCAA champions their sophomore year.

One junior, Steve Armstrong, is our present hope to replace Ray on graduation. Steve is a finne boy and a hard runner. The boys and I have great hopes for him.

Three sophomores are the backbone of our team this fall—Les Vielbig, Jim George and Ed Alger. They are determined and should someday make their mark in this particular hall of fame.

Our cross-country team has a great record to date. Since I have come here in 1946, our teams have won 32 out of 35 dual meets, two National championships and one IC4A championship. At the present time, we are working on a string of eleven straight dual-meet wins made against the best in the country.

Track and cross-country are the oldest sports known to man. It is the athlete himself who can prove his worth. It takes self-sacrifice, hard work and heart break, but it is well worth the effort. Records were made to be broken. The athlete today has his sight set on one of two goals—to win or break a record. If he is content just to place in a contest that may be the way he willgo through life.

We are always looking for cross-country and track men. If you are so inclined, I invite you to contact me and perhaps together we can produce a champion.

Simmons Moderates Fans Forum

Backfield coach Roy Simmons will be the moderator for Fans' Forum tonight at 7:30 in Maxwell auditorium. All those who wish to attend should bring their ID cards.

Simmons is a Syracuse graduate and is the senior member of the Orange coaching staff. Simmie also has charge of the lacrosse and boxing teams on the Hill, thus giving him no off-season.

THE YEAR AFTER Simmons graduated he was signed as a backfield coach. In his playing days under Chick Meehan, he was a teammate of Lyn (Pappy) Waldorf, present University of California grid coach. Besides all of Simmie's duties at the University he is also a member of the Syracuse City council.

Simmons will narrate the show and answer any pertinent questions that the fans might have. Simmie scouted Illinois and will be able to answer any questions about the Fighting Illini.

The impartial film will show the Penn State game to the exacting football fan. Simmons can slow the film down and re-run it for the benefit of the fans.

There are several interesting plays for the fans to notice: Bob Leberman's thrilling dashes, the Orange line play, the change in State's tactics. All these will be shown and pointed out to the fan by expert Simmie.

WITH THE TEAM playing away, The Daily Orange is sponsoring these films to give Orange rooters a chance to see the road games on film.

The pictures are taken from the 50-yard line and every play of the game is included. These are the same films that the coaches use to make studies of the team and point out mistakes.

Every player, as a matter of fact, is given a grade on how he behaves. The film is run over and over so that the coaches get a chance to see every player.

Strong Illini Running Attack Overshadows Pass Game

With all the publicity concerning Illinois' terrific running attack, its chief offensive weapon to date, there is a tendency to disregard the forward pass as an item of the midwesterners' attack. The fact remains, however, that Ray Eliot's Illini can throw the ball if necessary.

Although two-thirds of last year's potent aerial attack, quarterback Tom O'Connell and end Rex Smith, graduated last June, the Illini still possess a dangerous airarm. But with the grounnd attack averaging 322 yards per game, tops among the nation's major colleges, there has been little need for an over-head barrage to date.

ELRY FALKENSTEIN, although not an O'Connell, is a good quarterback and adequate passer when called upon. He completed five of 14 passes for 85 yards in brief appearances last season.

A 5 ft. 10, 175 pound senior, Falkenstein is noted primarily as a long passer. He played defense, as well as offense, in high school and consequently is well suited for the present platoonless game.

Chief aerial target is the veteran end John (Rocky) Ryan. Fourth in the nation in pass-snatching a year ago with 45 interceptions for 714 yards and five touchdowns, the senior wingman received many post-season awards including honorable mention on the Associated Press all-American eleven.

At 6 ft. 1 and 190 pounds, Ryan has the physical assets required of a good defensive player and, at one time, was considered an outstanding defensive halfback prospect by Coach Eliot.

The other flank is manned by Cliff Waldbeser, a defensive specialist in 1952. A senior from Morton, Ill., Waldbeser played both offense and defense in prep school where he built a reputation as a top-notch pass-receiver and blocker.

JOHN RYAN
Illinois End

Steve Nosek and Dean Willman are other veterans who figure in the Illini end picture.

The National Broadcasting System will televise parts of Saturday's game on their game-to-game roundup.

Frosh Pigskinners Leave for Point

Bill Orange's frosh football squad will leave early this afternoon for West Point where they battle the Army Plebe 11 tomorrow in the initial contest of the 1953 campaign.

The Tangerines and the Kaydets will meet at 3:30 p.m. as the Syracusans begin a rugged four game schedule which includes games with the Wyoming Seminary of Pennsylvania, Cornell and Colgate.

Phi Delts, Dekes Capture Intramural Football Contests

Undefeated Phi Delta Theta continued on its winning ways last night while Beta Theta Pi, Sigma Alpha Mu and Alpha Chi Rho all were victorious in intramural football action. The Delta Kappa Epsilon-Sigma Chi and Delta Tau Delta-Phi Epsilon Pi tilts ended in 6-all deadlocks.

The Phi Delts took their third straight win in Flight 1 by downing Zeta Beta Tau, 20-6. Dick Effmay scored for the winners in the first half, and after ZBT roared back to score in the second half, Bob McCallister and a Bob Beatty to John Kerr pass iced the issue for the hi Delts.
the Phi Delts.

BETA AND the Sammies remained in a second-place tie in Flight 1 as the Betas shut out Alpha Epsilon Pi 12-0. Both touchdowns came in the first half as Ike Bennett swept left end for the first and a pass from Skip Thaw to Bennett netted the second.

The Sammies also whitewashed their foes, Sigma Phi Epsilon, 25-0 by breaking the game wide open in the second half. Mel Klein was the scoring star for the winners with three tallies.

A Chi Rho took its third straight at the expense of Delta Upsilon, 18-6 in Flight 4. Chi Rho's Bill Stevens passed for all three scores. DU's Marsh Johnson tallied for the losers on a pass from Bullet Ed Thompson.

A second half pass from Al Harding to Orv Wambold enabled Sigma Chi to tie the Dekes 6-6 after Phil Young had intercepted a Sig throw in the first half and gone 40 yards for the score. The Delts' Bob Jordan also ran 40 yards but a last minute Phi Ep score on a Fred Robbins to Jerry Rudolph also tied that game 6-all.

INTRA BITS: The Sigma Chi's tie with the Dekes last night insures the Sigs of at least a tie for the championship in Flight 2 . . . The race in Flight 4 is almost decided with only the A Chi Rhos having to win only 1 game to clinch the flag. Zeta Psi and Theta Chi are battling it out in Flight 3, each undefeated in two attempts.

The standings:

FRATERNITY FLIGHT ONE	W	L	T
Phi Delta Theta	3	0	0
Sigma Alpha Mu	2	1	0
Beta Theta Pi	2	1	0
Zeta Beta Tau	1	1	1
Alpha Epsilon Pi	0	3	0
Sigma Phi Epsilon	0	2	1

FRATERNITY FLIGHT TWO	W	L	T
Sigma Chi	2	0	1
Phi Kappa Tau	1	1	0
Deke	1	1	1
Delta Tau Delta	0	1	1
Phi Epsilon Pi	0	1	1

Olsen Wins Title; Decisions Turpin

Carl (Bobo) Olsen of Honolulu, pounded out an unanimous decision over England's Randy Turpin last night in Madison Square Garden to capture the world's middleweight championship title.

Olsen, the American middle weight champ, and Turpin, the European middleweight king, fought to decide the successor to the title vacated by Sugar Ray Robinson last year.

Turpin started fast in the early rounds, and the match was fairly even until the seventh. At that point, Turpin appeared to tire and Olsen floored him at the end of the ninth. He was down for a count of five as the bell sounded.

Hill Sailors Seek Nevins Trophy

Sink or sail, the Syracuse sailors will come up against some of the toughest competition in the country this weekend when they compete in the Fourth Annual New York Invitation Regatta for the Nevins Trophy. Defending titlist Kings Point will head a ten college fleet on their Long Island Sound home waters, perpetual site of this intercollegiate sailing classic.

Among the colleges entered are Georgetown, Haverford, Kings Point, NYSMC, Princeton, and Rutgers. The two New England and one Mid West entrants have not been announced as yet.

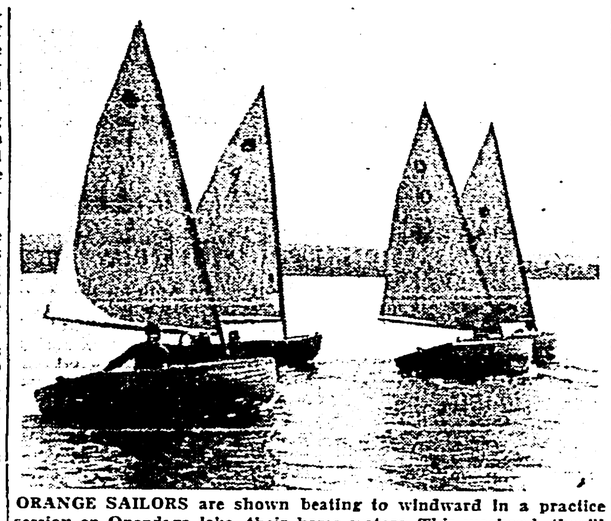
THE FIRST OF twenty races will start Saturday morning at 9 in the Academy's Interclub, molded plywood dinghies. Best known for their flexibility and touchiness, the dinks have been seemingly mastered by the Kings Pointers who are seldom beaten in their own frostbiting haven.

However, the Maritime boys may suffer the consequences this year of losing last year's team captain and dinghy wizard, Bob O'Connor. If the King Pointers don't come through in their usual fashion, Princeton, led by John Van Dusen, and Georgetown, with Pete McCarthy, have good chances of copping the trophy.

Syracuse will have to improve on previous Kings Point visits to top the strong fleet. With impressive showings a frist and second in their two regattas this fall, the Orangemen may be set this year to enter the illustrious list of Nevins winners.

Jack Cummings, Jack Dickerson, Ken Resen and Mary Jean Perry form the Hill team in this regatta, with the first two slated as starting skippers. Resen will undoubtedly see plenty of helmsman action in the two day meet.

Tomorrow afternoon, the frosh Tiller-wielders will scrimmage on Lake Onondaga in preparation for the Mid-Atlantic Freshman championships on Nov. 1. Jay Short and Artic Arnold are the starting skippers for the 10-college regatta at Annapolis.



ORANGE SAILORS are shown beating to windward in a practice session on Onondaga lake, their home waters. This weekend, they'll meet their first major test in the Nevins Trophy regatta at Kings Point, Long Island.

In Intramural Swimming Contest Phi Psi Routs Delta Upsilon, 19-8,

By ART STERNBERG

The Phi Kappa Psi rout of Delta Upsilon in the swimming intramurals in Archbold gym headlined a program filled with many forfeits. Spearheaded by Ed Rooney, Whitey Wilson and Ted Bronczyk who won the freestyle, breaststroke and backstroke respectively. The Phi Psis were able to cop each match, thus winning handily 19 to 8.

Because of the gamble which failed to work successfully Skytop M-1 lost to Skytop M-2. Chuck Gallagher, and Whitey Muffelmann gave M-1 an early lead of 10-4, but after having lost the backstroke match to Dick Napoli of M-2, they were not able to place anyone in hietfanl place anyone in the final race, a team relay.

Since only four men represented M-1, each having already entered two races, none were eligible for the relay. M-1 thus lost 17 to 10.

In the only other race on record Skytop M-9 defeated M-7 by 5 to zero, each team representing one man.

The other events which were scheduled ended in forfeits. Delta Tau Delta beat Phi Gamma Delta and Psi Upsilon beat Zeta Beta Tau by forfeit victories, while Al Smith and Grover Cleveland lost on a double forfeit.

Big Red Harriers May Surprise

The Cornell cross-country team which plays host to Bob Grieve's thinclads Saturday, are regarded as a strong threat to upend the unbeaten Orangemen.

Although the Ithacans droped a close decision to Penn State, they sport victories over Colgate and Yale. Charles Traford, Dave Pratt and Jim Klein, all veterans lead the Big Red aggregation.

'Call of the Wild' Heard; Johnsons Leave for Africa

By MARIA HEITZ
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Syracuse is a far cry from Africa and you rarely hear of anyone going there except to hunt game. Even these adventurous people are usually limited to within the dimensions of a movie screen.

However, two familiar figures around campus will be missing in a very short while, when Lowell Johnson and his wife Edith set sail for Africa. Mrs. Johnson will no longer greet students from behind the main desk of the library and Mr. Johnson will be leaving the halls of Maxwell to go out "into the field".

THE JOHNSONS can be found amid boxes and trunks in their third floor apartment getting ready to sail by the 30th of the month. The trip will take approximately four weeks to their new home in Johannesburg.

"It's like this," Mrs. Johnson remarked. "We keep telling people and ourselves that a broader world view is necessary these days, so we've decided to get our own horizons widened. We think Africa is a good place to do it.

Actually, Mr. Johnson has chosen the Union as an area in which to write his dissertation for the Dostor of Social Science. He considers Africa as a particularly good spot to see the problems involved in integrating Eastern and Western ideas.

The Johnsons expect to remain in Africa for 5 or 6 years, and after becoming acquainted with the language and culture may decide to travel into the interior of the continent.

MR. JOHNSON is a graduate of Northwestern university where he received his MA in speech. For four years he was an instructor in radio speech and writing at Syracuse university radio and TV center, leaving there in 1950 to pursue work on a doctorate in Maxwell School of Citizenship.

Mr. Johnson who has had lot of experience in the fi. served as advisor to Alpha P silon Rho, national radio h orary and for one year ser as National Executive Secreta of the organization.

Before coming to Syracuse he neered TV script writing for RGB, Schenectady. His major erest is in international non-ernmental organizations and lic information.

At the present time and undoubtedly so, the thing uppermost in the minds of this couple is their ensuing trip. As Mr. Johnson said, "this is something we've been dreaming about for quite some time and we've only begun to realize it's actually happening. Africa is a rising continent and very few Americans know anything authentic about it." Why by the time they get back they'll be experts in the field.

EDITH AND LOWELL Johnson were married in Hendrick's chapel on October 20, 1951. Two years and ten days later they sail for a new home.

LOWELL JOHNSON, Maxwell, and his wife, EDITH, main desk librarian, study a wall map of Africa prior to departing for their new home in Johannesburg. The couple will leave Syracuse near the end of October.

What is it?

DO YOU KNOW the occasion on which this photograph was taken? If you do, you can win 100 king-size Chesterfield cigarettes, awarded by Chesterfields on campus. The first two persons calling the Hellbox after 2 p.m. today will win if they have the correct identification. The winner of last week's prize, an orchid, was Melvin Smith, who telegraphed it to his girl.

Flood of Orders At Steel Mills Caused Delay

Construction of the Ernest I. White hall, future home of the College of Law, is expected to be resumed "within a week's time," F. Gordon Smith, vice-president and executive secretary of the University, told The Daily Orange late yesterday.

Work has stopped on the building, which will be located between Crouse college and Archbold stadium, for about six weeks because local steel mills have been flooded with orders, causing a delay in the schedule for fabrication of steel for the construction.

"TWO-THIRDS of the steel is now in Syracuse and is being fabricated," Smith said, "and it is hoped that within a week's time we'll be able to start erecting the steel for the building."

He noted that the University further hoped that the balance of the steel will arrive shortly and be fabricated so that "the job will progress without delay."

Smith said that some of the necessary columns have not been fabricated yet, and are a factor preventing resumption of construction.

The building will be four stories high on the Irving ave. side and three stories on campus side. Plans call for three main classrooms, seminar rooms, 14 faculty offices, a reading room and administration offices.

ALSO INCLUDED will be a practice courtroom, a 50,000 volume library, student club meeting rooms and a snack bar.

Decision to call the building E. I. White hall, after the prominent Syracuse businessman and attorney, was made in 1947, when a resolution to such effect was passed by the executive committee of the University board of trustees and the board of visitors of the College of Law.

White is the former publisher of the Post-Standard and provided a large portion of the funds for the structure.

Miss Camp to Give Concert in Crouse

Miss Analee Camp, well known cellist will give a concert of contemporary European music Sunday Oct. 25 at 4 p.m. in Crouse auditorium.

Miss Camp will play "Prelude to Opus 123" by Emanuel Moor, inventor of the double keyboard. This will be followed by "Sonata" by Polenc. Also on the program are Concerto by Schmitt and Vogt's "Sonata."

Miss Camp is solo cellist of the Buffalo Philharmonic orchestra and is a faculty member of the University of Buffalo. She has given many concerts in Europe where she has been received with much critical acclaim. At present she is teaching at Syracuse university.

Quad Nears Finish; Old Oval Goes

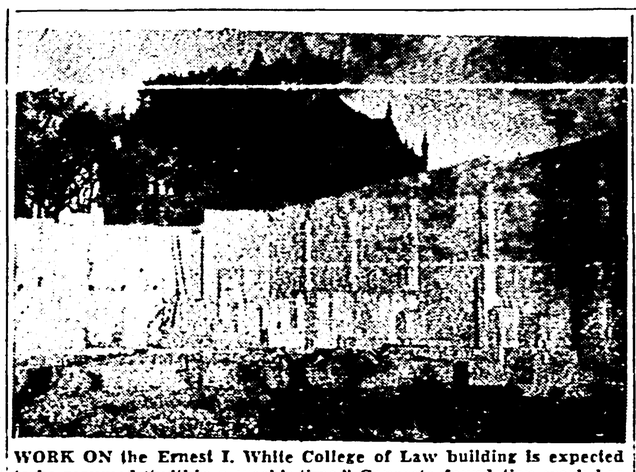
Most of the work on the Main Quadrangle, formerly the Old Oval, will be completed by the end of this week, according to Prof. Noreda A. Rotunno, professor of landscape and architecture at Syracuse university.

Stripping of the top soil for the construction of the Engineering building, beginning immediately, is currently underway, states Prof. Rotunno.

More work is planned on the men's gymnasium, Shaw dormitory, and the new Women's building in order to finish the minor details for the completion of the buildings.

By the end of this fall, the greater part of the landscape work currently under construction will be completed, said Rotunno.

A new road is also planned from University Place, running between the L. C. Smith building and Lyman Hall. The road will be of service to the buildings in the area, including the proposed engineering buildings.



WORK ON the Ernest I. White College of Law building is expected to be resumed "within a week's time." Concrete foundation work has been completed, and construction has ceased for about six weeks.

Frosh Commence Presidential Race

Four freshmen began campaigning yesterday for the presidency of the Class of '57.

Announced yesterday by Men's Student Government civil service, one independent candidate will be vying for the post.

Francis Procopio of Skytop M-3, a resident of Fulton, received the Elks award for outstanding senior of the 1953 graduating class at Fulton high school.

The independent candidate was student council treasurer of his high school. He was active in dramatics and on the debate team.

Other presidential candidates are William Brown of Piety Hill Alliance, Warren Kimble of United Students party and Richard Green of Tri-Orange.

USP candidates for other positions are Arlene Plotkin, vice president; Daphne Burke, secretary; and Donald Fulsom, treasurer.

Candidates on the Tri-O ticket are Elizabeth Bartlett, vice president; Barbara Solomon, secretary; and Jeffrey Wenig, treasurer.

Vying in the frosh race from PHA are Dorris Lemp, vice president; Alta Burg, secretary; and Norman Butterfield, treasurer.

All candidates must stop in at student government civil service offices immediately to sign the class elections act, it was announced yesterday.

FRANCIS PROCOPIO, Skytop M-3, will run for frosh class president as an independent. He is one of four candidates in the race.

would veto any motion to put us out. I am quite sure Russia feel the same way."

She pointed out the UN is a deterrent to the Soviets beginning a third world war. "All UN votes go back to their government. On almost every issue there are five votes on their side and the rest of the world on the other.

"It is important for Russia to stay in the UN because its representatives feel the impact of an overwhelming majority against them."

Mrs. Roosevelt stressed that "faith, vision, courage and charity are necessary so we may learn to love our neighbors and to understand peoples of the world."

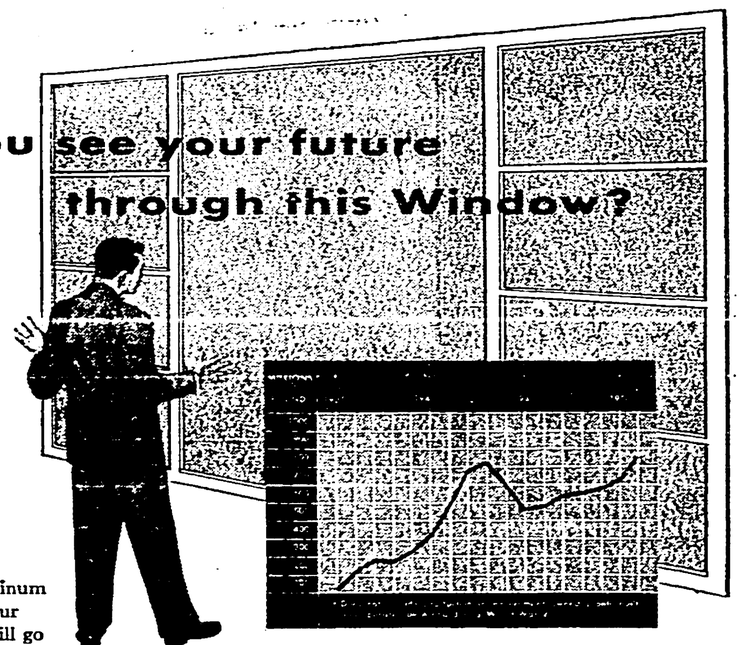
Can you see your future through this Window?



This is an aluminum window, one of four million that will go into buildings in 1953. Twenty years ago, it was just an idea in the mind of an Alcoa development engineer. Ten years ago, only a few thousand were made annually.

Now, production is increasing at the rate of over half a million a year. This is just one of a torrent of new uses for aluminum which means that Alcoa must continue to expand. Consider the opportunities for you if you choose to grow with us.

What can this mean as a career for you?

This is a production chart : : : shows the millions of pounds of aluminum produced by Alcoa each year between 1935 and 1951. Good men did good work to create this record. You can work with these same men, learn from them and qualify yourself for continually developing opportunities. And that production curve—is still rising, we're still expanding, and opportunities for young men joining us now are almost limitless.

Ever-expanding Alcoa needs engineers, metallurgists, and technically minded "laymen" for production, research and sales positions. If you graduate soon, if you want to be with a dynamic company that's "going places," get in touch with us. Benefits are many, stability is a matter of proud record, opportunities are unlimited.

For more facts, consult your Placement Director.

Bowling Returns to Campus As New Alleys Open Today

Bowling alleys in the new Women's building will open today, marking the first time facilities for the sport have been available on campus since the Men's gymnasium fire in December, 1947.

First preference for the use of the six alleys will go to the women's instructional classes, with the Women's Athletic association having second choice, and the men's intramural program receiving third preference. University faculty and non-academic university personnel will get fourth and fifth choices.

MIKE HICKOCK, former Orange bowling coach and present head of the Archbold gym locker room staff, will manage the alleys. Mike Bello, golf pro at Tecumseh, will be the day manager.

Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights have been made available for the men's intramural program which will get under way the week after next. Tentative time for intra-bowling has been set for 6-10:30 .m.

Intramural teams wishing to practice next week may do so at the open bowling sessions, set for noon through 10 p.m., Monday through Friday. The price for the use of the alleys is 30 cents per line.

Saturday will be the best day for open bowling after the intra program and the league schedules begin. The faculty league will take over the lanes on Monday nights and the maintenance personnel will bowl on Friday evenings.

The policy for the use of the alleys was drawn up by a subcommittee of the policy board of the Women's building. Miss Lucille Verhulst, director of women's physical education; Mary Ann Dalton, women's student government president; and Stanley Leff, president of men's student government, made up the sub-committee.

Faigle Will Speak To 70 Convo Reps

Dean Eric C. Faigle of Liberal Arts, will address Chapel house representatives tonight at Casowasco in the opening session of a two-day conference. He will speak on Chapel's relationship to the campus.

Home economics dean Eunice Hilton, will talk tomorrow on the potential of house reps as an effective information and communication group.

THE PROGRAM for the convocation will also include a session on Chapel faith groups led by campus chaplains.

More than 70 representatives will leave campus this afternoon by bus and car for the camp on Owasco lake near Auburn. The conference has been scheduled to help acquaint house reps with the Chapel program.

The group consists of delegates from every fraternity, sorority and living center. It was organized to serve as an information body about religious atcivities on campus.

Jewish Sabbath eve services will also be held tonight at the camp. The conference will end with dinner tomorrow night when representatives will return to the campus.

WAA Sponsors Coed Sportsday

WAA will play host tomorrow to five area colleges in a fall sports day program. Cazenovia, Cornell, LeMoyne, St. Lawrence and Wells athletic associations will send coeds to participate in hockey, tennis and golf competition.

Following registration and luncheon, the sports schedule will be introduced at 1 p.m. Golfers will tee off at Tecumseh, with tennis matches slated for Skytop and hockey games scheduled for the Women's building athletic field.

Refreshments and a recreational dip will be the final sportsday activities.

Grads Will Hold Ball In Women's Building

Grad students and ghost will frolic at the "Graduate Goblin's Gallop," an informal affair slated from 8:30 to 12 p.m. tomorrow in the dance studio of the Women's building.

Fay Paulson, student dean at Geneva cottage, and Stanley Guild, resident advisor in Skytop M-11, are co-chairmen of the affair.

All graduate students are invited to attend stag or drag. An identification card and a 35-cent refreshment charge will be the price of admission. Informal attire will be worn.

Under Dorothy Smith and Harry Vander, Graduate Commission co-chairmen, an expanding program has been planned for Hill grad students. Overall social chairmen are Joy Lines and Ross Rathie. Other officers are Margot Kalberman, publicity chairman; Ruth Tolman, secretary; and Pearl Ing, treasurer.

"Graduate Gatherings", slated from 8 to 10 p.m. each Thursday in Chapel, will include informal sessions of card-playing or discussions. A coffee hour will be included, and all grad students are invited to drop in. Co-chairmen of the weekly affair are Helen Spencer and David Cross.

A "Fun and Game" night is scheduled for November 21 in the Women's building, while a Christmas dance is planned December 12 at the Ski lodge.

ACTIVITIES CHAIRMEN of the the commission include Chris Khandewahl and Doris Groff, bridge; Yolanda DiOrio, singing; James Tucker, Jayne VanDeusen and Barbara Garey, athletics; Aldene Cole and Peter Kindar, revision and orientation committee.

Members of the steering committee are Nancy Johnson, Mary Joe Clark, Georgia Blackwell, Miss VanDeusen, Chris Khandewahl and William Allen.

Working on the social committee are Frances Scholenberger, Russ Watson, Myrna Weinert, Stanley Dodds, Diana Smith, John Giunda, Irene Sayly, Tucker, Marion Waterman, John Beyerly and Lindar.

Hill GOP Asks Wicks to Resign

A resolution asking Lt.-Gov. Wicks to resign from his post was unanimously passed last night by the Young Republican Club.

In his talk on the resolution, Philip Huttar, president stated that because of the numerous visits made to Sing-Sing to confer with convicted labor extortionist Joseph S. Fay, Wicks had "demonstrated either a shocking ignorance of acceptable public ethics or else a set of ethical standards far below what the public is entitled to expect from her officials in leadership positions."

Chairmen Named For Soph Dance

Chairmen for Soph Hop committees have been named by Merle Sue Bank and Joe LeDoux, over-all chairmen.

They are Annette Manzella and Betty Jane Seligman, decorations; Martin Baron and Sue Taylor, tickets; Joan Popae and Eileen Brand, programs; Turbi Blum and Leslie Ruben, publicity; Jane Warner and Mari Ann Jordan, entertainment; Sandra Straufman and Nora Hutton, date bureau; Helen O'Brien and Nancy Pulco, checking; Jacqueline Claridge and Norman Churchill, refreshments.

All who are interested in working on a committee should contact the chairmen of that committee.

New Help Week Planned by IFC

The Interfraternity Council will institute a new "help week" policy next month. On Nov. 12, every pledge on the Hill, and as many brothers as possible, will join in one mass work detail. The work will be done for some needy cause.

Under the system all pledges must attend the work detail, and brothers may attend if they wish. A fine of $2 will be put on every pledge absent.

Howard Osofsky, head of the social action committee, will work with downtown welfare agencies to choose the project. The work on this committee received notice in the September edition of the Ladies' Home Journal.

Parking Prohibited Due toConstruction

Parking in the rear of the greenhouse will be prohibited beginning Monday, campus police announced yesterday. Construction work on the engineering building has necessitated this move.

The specific area to be fenced off includes all territory behind the greenhouse and back of Slocum, Lyman and Smith. Those presently parking there are requested to find a new location. Special walks will be constructed for pedestrians.

The University is installing a new road from University pl. to Lyman and Smith, to be used by contractors and university workers only

Fraternity to Hold Memorial Service

Special student memorial services will be held in Hendrick's chapel tonight for Irwin Ginsburg.

Ginsburg, a Hill student from Newton, Mass., was killed when a Boston-to-Chicago airliner crashed a few miles outside of Albany on Sept. 16. He was enroute to Syracuse to take a law school examination on the following day.

The service, starting at 7:15 p.m., is being conducted by Tau Epsilon Phi, of which Ginsburg was a member.

Ginsburg graduated from the liberal arts college in 1952 and had completed one year of law school. Surviving him is his brother, Arnold Ginsburg, graduated from Syracuse university last June.

While on the Hill, Ginsburg was active in pre-law groups and was an officer of Pershing Rifles, military honorary.

WAER Presents Panhellenic Talk

The third chapter of a new broadcast aimed at introducing the Syracuse campus to many of its lesser-known aspects will be heard Sunday evening on WAER.

Participating in the talk will be Nancy Knapp, president of Panhell, and Joyce Grossman, producer and moderator of the show.

"Your Show" is designed to better acquaint Syracusans with the various organizations and extra-curricular activities on campus by devoting an entire broadcast to a particular group.

Sunday's airing will feature an informal discussion between Miss Knapp and Miss Grossman which is slated to include an explanation of preferential bidding, problems of formal and informal rushing as well as the history and functions of Panhell.

Illegal Campaigning Claimed by USP, Tri-O

By ED HARDY
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Tri-Orange and United Students parties last night filed a joint protest with student government against Piey Hill Alliance, charging the infant party with campaigning for the coming freshman elections before the official opening date of last Wednesday.

The complaint was received by men's student government Elections Commissioner George Kepner and Chief of Civil Service Stephen Reiss, who announced that the government protest board will meet this afternoon to consider the Tri-O-USP action.

SITTING ON the board besides Reiss and Kepner will be women's student government President Mary Ann Dalton and WSG Elections Commissioner Elaine Greenberg.

Reiss and Miss Dalton stressed that "until the protest board meets, it would be unfair to charge the candidates as well as the party with these violations."

Tri-O and USP included the following statements in their protest to back up charges:

"1. On Monday, Oct. 19, at 11:30 p.m. pictures were taken of a large outdoor poster erected in front of the Pi Alpha Chi fraternity. This house is a member of PHA. This poster listed PHA candidates and the name of the party.

"2. Posters were placed by PHA in the University Administration building.

"3. A poster was also erected by Alpha Phi sorority, also in violation of the election law. This was placed in front of the sorority on Tuesday, Oct. 20.

"4. Posters were also placed in Skytop dorms before the opening of the campaign."

THE PROTEST was signed by Jack Hennessey, co-chairman of Tri-Orange and Robert Garver, chairman of United Students.

Under the revised class elections act of March, 1953, "in a case brought against any candidate, slate of candidates or political party, if the indictment is found to be valid the protest board and-or the joint student court shall have the power to penalize any one or combination of the following: fine up to and not exceeding $25; disqualify any candidate from running for election. . . .; call for a new election."

The act states also that the penalties "should be used . . . merely as a guide."

Deadline Today For NSA Blanks

Student applications for National Student association must be submitted to Marchia Michelbacher, 1003 Walnut ave., or to Darwin Bolden, 120 Circle rd. by today.

Freshmen are especially urged to apply for the organization. All frosh women who are accepted will be expected to complete Through the Keyhole, women's student government training program.

City Coed Classes To Begin Monday

Classes for freshman city women begin Monday in 309 women's building. Each women is urged to attend one session.

Classes are set for 12 noon and 1 p.m. Monday, 1 p.m. Tuesday and 10 a.m. and 12 noon Wednesday.

The classes will be conducted by members of the city guide program under Marilyn Mawson, chairman. They replace the house meetings which women living on campus must attend.

The sessions will acquaint city women with University activities and traditions and will open the way to social functions with men's groups on campus.

Those attending the classes are urged to bring their lunches to be eaten during the sessions.

Syracuse Gridders In Underdog Role

By LEE KIKLIER
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Syracuse university's football squad left this morning for its annual midwest battle and its first TV performance of the season. The opponent: Illinois. The hookup: NBC. The betting: Illinois by 20.

The yawning sides of gigantic Memorial stadium will house the Orange for their game against the Illini Saturday at 2:30 (EST). NBC is using the Illinois-Syracuse as part of an experiment for TV football. Four games will be partially covered by a classy system of monitoring.

COACH BEN SCHWARTZWALDER won't take quite a complete team out to Illinois with him. Every week, the sick list slowly and methodically grows. Perkins and Cappadona are among the missing from last week's game against Penn State.

Neil (Whitey) Brenneman will plug the gap left by Perkins. Brenneman is 5 ft. 11, 175 lb. a senior from Syracuse. Brenneman has seen duty as a halfback and last year assisted in backing up the line in bi-platoon football.

Some of the team has slight injuries but will probably play. Bob Leberman, Ted Kukowski, Art Troilo, and Sam Alexander all have old injuries that make playing football uncomfortable. Leberman and Kukowski will probably play, but Troilo and Alexander will see limited action, if at all.

The rest of the team is, as was: Pete Schwert at left end, Sam Johnson and Bob Fleck at guards, Les McClelland and Jim George will start at fullback and draw most of the punting assignments now at tackle. The backfield looms as: Lyle Carlson at wing back, Pat Stark at quarterback and official starting passer while Ed Albright that Troilo is hurt.

DURING THE PAST WEEK several of the boys stayed away from bumping. Bob Leberman, whose tender foot causes some anxious moments for the Orange coaching staff, stayed out of scrimmages. Troilo and Alexander also shunned scrimmage duties.

Small consolation to the Orange is the fact that they appear in more statistic classifications than the Illini. The Illinois defense is not rated at all. Syracuse is ninth in the nation in total defense and third in the nation in rushing defense. An interesting clash: Illinois averages 322 yards a game on the ground while Syracuse's defense has given up only 982 yards per game rushing.

After the late loss to Penn State, the Orange rating in the East dropped two notches: from sixth to eighth. A loss to Illinois will have a limited affect on Syracuse's standing in the Lambert Trophy race. Why? After Villanova's 27-0 loss to Detroit, a midwestern team, they dropped only one place.

The Syracuse-Illinois series started back in 1909. Illinois won that year, 17-8 and the next year, 3-0. Fifty years later they decided to play again and Illinois won 41-20. The 1951 game was the first of a three game series. After this year's game, one more remains—out in Illinois next year.

SYRACUSE'S HABIT of accidentally scheduling the power out in the midwest has remained true. Illinois this year looms as a candidate for rthe Rose Bowl.

Most Orange fans are awaiting a deluge of points out in Champaign-Urbana unequaled since the disastrous Orange Bowl. The coaching staff, however, is of another opinion. Syracuse's biggest hopes, admittedly, rest on the chance of Illinois being overconfident.

According to the newspaper reports out of Champaign, Illinois is relaxing. Coach Eliot scrimmaged his third and fourth strings, because "he expects them to see a lot of action." Eliot rested his first liners because of injuries. Illinois regards Syracuse as a breather in their tough Big Ten schedule. Illinois' attitude is ripe and the time is now, if the Orange can cash in on it.

J-School Will Establish New Research Center

A research center has been organized by the School of Journalism, Wesley C. Clark, dean of the school announced today. The center has been established to study newspaper, magazine, radio and other means of mass communication.

Readership and advertising surveys, typographical analyses, public opinion polls, reader interest studies and readability surveys are among the studies the center is equipped to make.

The founding of the research center will lend organized support to a number of research activities which are now being conducted by the School of Journalism.

Dr. Clark pointed out that although the center is particularly well adapted to give research to upstate New York publication, advertising agencies and radio stations, its clients include the American Weekly in New York City and firms as far distant as Seattle, Wash.

Dr. Clark said that for the present he would act as director of the center. The research, as in the past will be conducted by members of the faculty of the School of Journalism. Graduate students in the school will assist when extra man power is needed, as in the case of opinion surveys, Dr. Clark said.

Headquarters for the organization will be in the Journalism center, formerly known as the Women's old gym.

Outing Club Slates Weekend Activities

The Outing club has planned a full weekend of events which include horseback riding, rock climbing, folk singing, a canoe trip, and an intercollegiate weekend in Pennsylvania.

Those going on the canoe trip will leave Friday evening for Racquette Lake. Any interested persons should call Ted Budrow at 4-0678.

The traditional "Danby" weekend sponsored by the Cornell Outing club will be held at Camp Arrowhead in Pennsylvania. This group will leave Friday at 6 p.m. from in front of the library.

Those interested in horseback riding will leave for Velasko stables at 12:30 p.m. on Saturday from in front of the library. Outing club members receive special rates.

Don LeBeau will take out a group of rock-climbers on Saturday afternoon. Those interested should meet at the Ski lodge at 1 p.m.

Sunday, the folk-singing group will hold forth in the third floor lounge of the Women's building from 8-10 p.m. Anyone interested in participating is invited to come.

Lozner Speaks At Med School

Dr. Eugene L. Lozner, associate professor of medicine at the State University College of Medicine, will review research done on blood disorders at the college before the 26th annual graduate fortnight of the medical school tonight.

Graduate fortnight is a two-week period devoted to panels, hospital clinics, exhibits and talks to further the education of practicing physicians. Each fortnight centers on a single subject and strives to present the latest research findings on various parts of the subject.

PSI CHI APPLICATIONS

Applications are now being accepted for membership in Psi Chi, national psychology honorary.

Any student who has completed 12 hours of psychology, including elementary psychology, is eligible. Applicants must now be taking six hours of psych, and have a 1.8 accumulative average and a 2. in psych courses.

Syracuse university's Orangemen will make their second appearance on television tomorrow afternoon when they meet the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana, Ill.

The game will be one of four to be telecast in a panoramic coverage of football by the National Broadcasting co. Locally the contests will be seen over WSYR-TV, channel 3, starting at 2:45 p.m. according to the station.

IN ADDITION to the Syracuse Illinois game, the National Collegiate Athletic association games of the week will feature Princeton-Cornell from Princeton, N. J., Mississippi-Arkansas from Memphis, Tenn., and Indiana-Iowa from Iowa City, Iowa.

Officials at WSYR-TV said yesterday that the best action from each game would be flashed on screens coast to coast in the unprecedented pickup.

Bill Martin will broadcast tomorrow's Hill game over WSYR-AM-FM starting at 2:15 p.m.

WSG Permissions Needed for Dance

Women students who are attending the Harshburger benefit dance on Tuesday, Oct. 27, must bring their tickets to the WSG office during regular hours for a blanket permission.

WSG office hours are 12-1 p.m. and 4-5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Women who do not get blanket permissions must use a pink special 12 permission for the dance and will not be given a green blanket permission after the dance.

Applications Due For Orange Key

Deadline for applications to Orange Key, junior men's honorary, is this afternoon.

Forms available in the dean of men's office must be returned there by 5 p.m., Darwin Bolden, Key president, has announced.

Requirements for membership in the group, which recognizes outstanding junior men, is a 1.4 cumulative average and participation in at least one major extra-curricular activity.

A dance for Hu

Hill students will have the opportunity to show "what stuff Syracusans are made of" Tuesday night in the Women's building.

For Tuesday night is the Hubert Harshburger benefit dance.

Present members of the faculty can remember no previous University benefit dance for one particular person. It is a tribute to the organizers that they would attempt to undertake such a herculean task.

The person for whom the dance is being given, a four-year member of the Orange football squad, is now in a hospital in Huntington, West Virginia. Injured in a motorcycle accident in late August, the well-liked former player had his leg amputated below the knee. There is a possibility that a further amputation will be necessary.

Learning that Hu will be in the hospital another three months, various Hill athletes headed by Dick Beyer planned and organized the benefit.

Support from both student and administration groups was almost instantaneous. Ray Caldiero offered the services of his band.

The food service committee donated its help for the evening. Six food customers are planning to give refreshments for the dance.

Women's student government has granted green blanket permission slips to those coeds attending the benefit who take their tickets to the WSG office before the event.

The varsity athletes will provide the evening's entertainment with Tom Coulter slated for the MC position.

Tickets for the stag-or-drag affair can be purchased at any fraternity or sorority house, from a varsity athlete or at the Women's building. All ticket money and other donations will be sent to Harshburger to cover his medical expenses.

Dean of Women Marjorie Smith has stated that she will attend. Frank Piskor, University vice-president, has urged all Syracuse men go to the benefit. He, too, will attend. Members of the senior class executive council will be on hand.

Will you?

From industry to college

A Hill student was awarded a scholarship from General Electric yesterday. His was one of 100 such gifts given by the company's education committee.

If all American industry took to heart the example set by GE in yesterday's action, the plight of the universities in the United States would be much less acute.

Collectively, industry sets up immense budgets for research, exploration and development. Synthetic materials and discoveries of new mineral-mining areas are but two of the results of such programs. This typifies the American initiative.

However, industry is not doing such a brilliant job when it comes to the men who will do the research, make the explorations and assist in the discoveries. A growing shortage of experts is evident.

In 1953 alone, America needed 240,000 scientists to meet the demand of industrial research laboratories, governmental research agencies, agricultural and medical research.

These needed experts are the college-trained youth. Yet how many high school students are unable to attend a university because of the high financial burden involved? How many college students are unable to continue past the bachelor of arts level for the same reason?

The wealthy institution of learning is now almost an oddity. Large endowments and private gifts have been on the wane. Help must come from some outside source, both for the universities and for students capable of doing college or graduate work.

Unless the private schools receive this aid, they will eventually turn to the government as the only source of financial assistance. It is here that industry can render its support, accept a further civic responsibility and aid in the developing of the expert.

It is a bewildering fact that industries spend billions on material resources and yet fail to recognize any duty to develop potential human resources.

Some industries still consider any grant to students or a private institution a charity. They turn their back on the thousands of bright minds ready to fill the shortages of experts if they had the necessary financial support.

America is full of the potential scinetists, engineers, dentists, doctors, lawyers and teachers. But unless aid is forthcoming from a group such as industry, this potential may well be lost.

Aid to universities and students is not charity, it's good business.

Independent Men Fail

By ED HARDY
Daily Orange Columnist

The Independent male has failed again.

And, we might add—as usual.

Too much of the blame for the deterioration of men's student government even before it has gotten started this year falls squarely on his shoulders. For it is this group that seems to do little and care even less. One trite word describes the overall attitude: Apathy.

Take a look at the figures for petitions turned in for candidacy in the MSG assembly elections. A total of 37 were received by civil service. Twenty-six of them were from Greeks, eight from city students and only three from Independents. It's likely too that most of these city students are fraternity men.

When the MSG assembly last spring set out to devise the method of selecting its members, the Independent was remembered. The new assembly elections act provides that the minimum number of Greeks and Independents shall be the same—three.

Yet when it comes down to finding candidates, there are four to eight Greeks in every class that want to get into the assembly, but only a total of three Independents in the entire undergraduate male body of about 4,500.

These three Independents—who obviously do not typify their classification since they DO care about things—have in reality elected themselves to the MSG legislature by virtue of a petition with 20 names on it.

You have to think twice about this. Is this representative government? One of the reasons for the revision was to make the assembly more representative by campus-wide selection of delegates instead of election by each house. It looks like this year's assembly will be less representative than in the past.

Eelections are planned for all but 10 men. A total of nine Independents will be named to the MSG legislature by class assemblies. One city student will also have to be selected.

The authority for such action is the section of the act which deals with change of classification of delegates. The act says class legislatures shall elect replacements to the MSG group.

Apathy has marked too many worthwhile projects already this year. The intramural insurance plan was dropped because of lack of demand. Reserved seating hasn't received the reception it should. There are other things too—things that were demanded by the students, but brushed aside when government instituted them.

The independent is not the only person who has fallen victim to this apathy. He's the obvious fall guy, though, to the type of attitude against student government that is spreading across this campus.

Lincoln has oft been quoted about "government of the people, by the people and for the people." Students—Independents and Greeks—remember that this applies to student government as well.

WEEKEND RELIGIOUS PROGRAM

TODAY: JSF Sabbath eve services, memorial service for student Irwin Ginsburg, killed in air crash.

Th' Retreat Of Science

The world's only national antivivisection law, adopted early in the Hitler regime, is still in effect in Germany.

It has been noted that the law's effect was to ban all use of animals in medical school teaching and in the training of surgeons. Also, it placed German scientific research under stringent political control.

Since the law's enactment in 1933 over Hitler's signature, Germany has dropped from a leading position almost to the bottom of the world list in biological research, according to the National Society for Medical research.

Take Heart: Chivalry's Nae Dead!

By ART SIEGEL

It appears that no semester is complete without the gals' attack on the stronger sex. Flip Sirota handled the job well yesterday—at least grammatically.

We don't think that Syracuse men are as rude as she would have us believe. In fact we're sure they're not. The men do open doors for ladies. They do walk on the outside of the walk.

Perhaps they don't throw their coats over mud puddles for the gals anymore. But the cost of dry cleaning, fair damsels, has risen.

If Miss Sirota would have the gentlemen dress formally each day and address the coeds as "Miss", maybe she yearns for a Princeton man. But without the Syracuse men, the coeds would actually crave being proctor on Saturday night—for lack of something more interesting to do.

The Sir Walter Raleighs may have gone. But the Syracuse men are here!

The high point of any conversation about courtesy toward the opposite sex is, we think, the opposite sex itself. If some of the men aren't as polite as they should be, we put the blame squarely on the pretty coeds themselves.

The way some of the girls dress these days, it's difficult to tell them apart from some males who went astray. Maybe the denim lobbyist—if they exist—have spread the good word about blue jeans.

There is no good word about blue jeans, except for the rare occasion that a coed plays lacrosse or squats down in front of Crouse to paint a canvas.

Look at it this way, gals. Pity the poor professor who goes to the movies and sees the college films. The ladies in the classes wear skirts—really!—and they are not sporting men's shirts, baggy eyes or dangling cigarettes.

Comes the next morning at 8 a.m. and poor prof walks into class ready for culture, only to find 30 females in jeans and their brothers' old shirts. Have a heart, girls.

We haven't seen too many impolite males. And if there are any, they don't hold the door open because they're afraid that if they do the gals will respond with that beware-of-wolf sneer.

Let's face it, women. You don't have to look like china dolls. But leave that invincible look to the men on campus.

Pyramids & Cadillacs

By ANDRA KADILIS

Kids in school have much trouble memorizing when pyramids were built, and what sphinxes and obelisks look like. So, they get the impression of Egypt as being like a big museum covered with the dust of thousands of years. Also I saw this land of the Nile only through the mummies and scarcofags crowded in the Metropolitan museum. Therefore you can imagine my big surprise, when I ment Mohammed Monib Ahmed Ali (but these are only the very first of his names, his family holds the book with the rest), and he did not look five thousand years old! In fact Monib is twenty-five, and has been in Syracuse for seven weeks.

Monib is a very busy boy. He spends most of his time at Maxwell studying political science. I felt delighted to hear that Monib had been admitted to twenty-two universities, and had chosen Syracuse, having heard about Maxwell already in Egypt.

Monib got his B.A. in Egypt, and wanted to continue his studies in some foreign country. His dream was Paris, but his father put a big veto on this, thinking, that once in Paris, his son would be lost in the "vie en rose"! And there was another thing that kind of pushed Monib into U.S. This was an examination given by the state department of Egypt. Hundreds applied for a job, but only eighteen were chosen, and one of them—Monib. "But it was not easy at all," says Monib, "they not only looked at your knowledge, but also at the way you stood, sat, smiled, the kind of clothes you wore, and what your grand grand father had done!" Then later the state department sent Monib on a scholarship to U.S.

Monib has visited many of the large cities in U.S. and has been most impressed by New York city, with its liveliness and most of all the skyscrapers. Otherwise Monib finds the U.S. not much different from Egypt. "Oh, but yes," he adds, "I was very surprised seeing all the wooden houses, namely in Egypt these are very rare. And there are no less Cadillacs in Cairo than in New York city!"

I asked him what he thought about theatre and acting. And then it came out—Monib is an actor. He has studied acting and worked with the professional theatre for two years. And right away Monib does a scene from Moliere in Arabic!

"Oh, and about love. There is no greater love than that which lives on the shores of Nile!" At this point forgetting my role as an interviewer, I tried to protest vaguely, but in vain. Monib was already far off with his story about the sacrifices people make for love . . .

Well, then what about girls? No, not for Monib. He is much too busy in his work, which he puts above all.

Monib is very enthusiastic about Syracuse and his professors (as he seems to be about everything he likes).

Back in Egypt Monib is going to work in the state deartment. So, maybe one day we shall meet Monib as the ambassador of Egypt to United States. He does the job very well now in a student capacity.

Music Hurts Rains' Show; Minus Variety

By DICK CASE
Editorial Page Writer

Claude Rains poked an inquisitive finger into some of the more heavyweight works of literature last night in Lincoln auditorium providing a lukewarm program of "Words and Music."

The Famous Artists show was an entirely new adventure for Syracuse audiences and seemingly, an entirely new experience for Mr. Rains. In fact, he made a rather confusing night of it.

"Words and Music" presented a series of five dramatic readings as interrupted by Mr. Rains with piano background by Jack Maxim. The evening opened with a short Brahms solo by Mr. Maxim followed by the star's vivid hour-long reading of Alfred Lord Tennyson's love tale, "Enoch Arden". Musical background by Richard Strauss.

Part two of the program consisted of an assortment of works performed, for the most part, without the aid of Mr. Maxim's dull piano. This included a stimulating interruption of Chekov's comedy monologue concerning the harmful effects of tobacco, a bristling scene from "Richard II", "Journey of the Magi" from the pen of T. S. Eliot, and the lively prologue to the old wive's tale from Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales."

Intermittently ill-at-ease Claude Rains, if last night is any indication, has yet to find a suitable showcase for his brilliant stage ability.

His poor choice of material and the general slowness of the whole program keep it from being all-American fare.

The choppy ingrediant provided by the piano background and its awkward introduction into the scheme of things, led us to one conclusion; "Words and Music" would have been a yard better without the music.

Astor Goat Kidnapped

Shatzi, the 8-months-old goat in the cast of "Mr. Roberts", was stolen from the Astor theater late yesterday afternoon. A general police alarm was sent out by the management who offered a reward of two tickets to the show and half a bale of hay.

She was replaced by Snowball, male goat from a Jamesville farm, who had appeared in the play in summer stock at Fayetteville this year.

Illinois' Offense Rated Tops

By LOWELL TOENNIESSEN
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Illinois' unbeaten Big Ten contenders, surprise of the collegiate grid season, will send its magnificent offense against the Pietymen of Syracuse tomorrow afternoon before an expected 35,000 fans in Memorial stadium, Champaign-Urbana. Millions more will teleview the battle as part of the National Broadcasting co.'s four-game panorama of collegiate football.

Boasting the nation's top running attack and fourth-best overall offense, the Midwesterners have been installed a three-touchdown favorite to record their fourth straight win over the Orange. Ray Eliot's Illini whipped the Saltines, 41-20 two years ago in their last meeting.

A PAIR of sophomores, J. C. Caroline and Melvin (Mickey) Bates, have not only answered what was Illinois' "only pre-season question" but caused the greatest stir among arm-chair quarterbacks since the days of Glenn Davis, Doc Blanchard and the thundering Knights of West Point.

The speedy halfback duo has rolled up 983 yards in four contests, an average of 246 per game, in pacing the Illini to its nation-leading, 322-yard rushing average. Caroline has picked up 668 yards, tops in the country, while his running mate has added 315. "Jaycee" has also handled the punting duties at a 42-yard clip.

Seniors Elry Falkenstein and Stan Wallace, other members of the Orange and Blue backfield, have been credited with much of the success of their heralded teammates.

Falkenstein, backbone of Eliot's seldom-used air-arm, is a superb signal-caller and ball-handler while Wallace, hard-plugging 193 pound fullback, opens many holes in opposing defenses.

THE ILLINI forward wall, which averages only 193 pounds compared to Syracuse's 208, is also built on speed. Captain Bob Lenzini and Don (Bucky) Tate are the heaviest of the linemen at 200 pounds.

Lenzini, only experienced two-way tackle on the roster, is a tower of strength on defense and won "Lineman of the Week" honors last year for his performance against Michigan.

Tate, converted from tackle to guard last spring to take advantage of his speed and blocking potential, has been a standout lineman for two seasons. In 1951 he was named to the United Press all-American freshman team after receiving all-American prep school honors at New Castle, Pa.

BOB LENZINI, captain and tackle will lead Illinois' power-packed eleven against the Orange tomorrow at Champaign-Urbana.

Jan Smid and Don Ernst, a pair of excellent blockers, man the other guard and tackle spots. Smid, 196-pound junior, teams with Tate while Ernst, 190-pound senior goes at tackle.

The line is centered by Herb Borman, a regular linebacker last year. A 185-pound senior, Borman played offense in 1951 and is a solid, two-way performer.

Phi Gam Records Top Intra Score

By EV MURCH

Biggest news in intramurals last night was the record score piled up by Phi Gamma Delta. The Phi Gams ran roughshod over Acacia, 33-0, racking up the season's highest score with the help of three intercepted passes. Tom Goins lead the attack, tallying two of the five TDs.

In other games on Field 1, Zeta Psi nosed out Theta Chi, 6-0, Tau Delta Phi overcame Beta Sigma Rho, 11-6 and Kappa Sigma and Pi Alpha Chi battled to a 0-0 tie.

THE TAU DELT-BETA SIG game was marred when little Lou Grossman, sparkplug of Tau Delt, received an injury late in the contest. Although he was removed to the infirmary, the injury wasn't regarded as serious.

The action on Field 2 was limited to three games when Plant Science forfeited their game to Livingston. In the games played, Phi Kappa Psi took Sigma Alpha Epsilon, 21-7, Sigma Nu eked out a 12-6 decision over Pi Kappa Alapha and Psi Upsilon trampled Omega Pi Alpha 24-6.

The big scorer for the night was Al Plate of Psi U who romped over the goal line three times. Gyl Worstell of PiKA with 13 was the other top point-getter.

As a result of last night's proceedings, Theta Chi holds top spot in flight 3 and Phi Gamma Delta heads flight 5.

Booters Seek Win At Sampson Today

Return of Moller Raises Hill Hopes

Andy Coccari's booting charges will be looking for their first win of the year tomorrow afternoon as they tangle with the powerful Sampson Sabres at the Airmen's home field.

With the probable return to action of Capt. Don Moller, the Hill chances look very bright. Moller who was injured in an auto accident, worked out with the team yesterday and despite a bad leg, he will give his best come tomorrow.

GUNNAR WIRTH will be the starting goalie for the Syracusans. In the Cortland game, he was ejected early and his absence was costly.

Bill Nelson and Duncan Robb will be at the starting wing positions. Nelson, an All-American selection last year netted the Hillmen's only goals against Cortland.

Sampson presents a veteran array which lost to the Orange last year, 5-3. Their leading pointmaker is Al Johnson who netted four goals against the Hillmen in a recent scrimmage.

Tangerine Gridders Invade West Point; Clash With Plebes

By DAVE BENNETT

Syracuse's freshman football forces will open their season at 3:30 p.m. when they engage the rugged Army plebe squad at West Point.

In the Kaydets, Coach Les Dye's Tangerines will be facing an outfit which has already proven its ability. In its initial contest, Army routed the University of Pennsylvania frosh, 22-0.

FIVE STARTING positions in the yearling line are set, but the backfield posts and two slots in the cub forward wall are undecided.

Bob Musgrave and Ed Bailey will start at the end positions for the frosh. Musgrave, from Huntington, W. Va., will man the left flank spot and Bailey, a St. Albans, Vt. native, will handle the right end duties.

Joe Krivak of Central City, Pa., will open at left guard and Jerry Cashman, a Brooklyn Prep product, will go at right tackle.

Steve Ringo will start at center for the Tangerines. Ringo comes from Phillipsburg, N. J., and will be playing the same position his brother Jim handled for the Orange varsity last year.

THE LEFT TACKLE and right guard posts are undecided. Jack Kiviat of Brooklyn, and Mike Minko, a native of Connellsville, Pa., will fill the tackle position. Warren Watrell or Rudy Farmer will rotate at the guard spot.

Watrell and Farmer are both New Jersey products. Watrell hails from Hasbouch Heights while Farmer comes from N. Plainfield.

At quarterback, the yearlings will use two men, Lou Iannicello and John Pannucci. Iannicello is a local boy while Panucci comes from Seneca Falls, N. Y.

The halfback posts are both undecided. At the left half slot, Al Rowe and Ed Ackley will vie for the starting position. Rowe is a Syracusan while Ackley hails from Norwich, N. Y. Al Cann of Ehrenfeld, Pa. and Ronnie Taylor of Norwich will handle the right half duties.

BILL BROWN, Yorktown, N. Y., and Gus Zaso of Mt. Morris, N. Y., will combine to carry the load at fullback in today's season opener.

Following the Army clash, the Orange cubs will return to Syracuse to prepare for their home opener against Wyoming Seminary of Pennsylvania on Saturday, October 31.

Hill Harriers to Meet Big Red Tomorrow

Cornell provides the opposition as Syracuse university's harriers journey to Ithaca to engage the Big Red in a 1:30 p.m. meet tomorrow.

The undefeated Hill runners will be seeking their third victory of the season when they oppose the Ithacans who have lost to Penn State but beaten both Colgate and Yale.

Ray Osterhout will also be trying for his third win in this race. His greatest opposition will probably come from Cornell's captain, Charles Trayford, and soph John Rosenbaum.

A freshman run will pit the Tangerines against the Cornell yearlings. It is scheduled to begin at 1 p.m.

GE Presents Award To Bus Ad Student

A Syracuse senior, Eugene L. Parker of Lyndhurst, N. J., was awarded a $500 General Electric scholarship yesterday at the College of Business Administration.

The grant is one of 100 awards given by the education committee of GE on a nationwide basis to students majoring in engineering, accounting, marketing, manufacturing and employe relations. Selection of the recipient is made on the basis of academic aptitude, vocational promise, character and leadership.

The award was presented by George L. Chamberlin, manager of finance of the GE electronics division in Syracuse. Also attending the presentation were: Norris E. Hurley, acting dean of the College of Business Administration; Walter Kell, chairman of the accounting department; William K. Phipps, associate director of placement, and James H. Creamer, manager of internal auditing and measurements at GE.

An acocunting major, Parker is a member of the varsity track and cross country teams, Kappa Sigma, Beta Gamma Sigma, business administration honorary, and Beta Alpha Psi, accounting honorary.

Protest Board Suspends PHA

Orange Key Plans Colgate Weekend

Tentative plans for Colgate weekend have been announced by Orange Key, junior men's honorary.

Scheduled for Nov. 13-15, the annual weekend will once again feature traditional events, highlighted by the Syracuse-Colgate football game Saturday afternoon.

GILBERT KATZ and Marven Wallen are co-chairmen. They will be aided by Orange Key members.

Colorful "Beat Colgate" posters will make an appearance in front of fraternities, sororities and independent living centers again this year as houses vie for top honors in the contest sponsored in conjunction with Tau Sigma Delta, architecture and allied arts honorary.

Also planned for the days just before the big weekend is the Colgate queen contest. The loveliest gals on campus will compete for the coveted monarchy. Applications for the competition should be submitted to Katz at 747 Comstock ave. or Wallen at 423 Euclid ave. by Monday. A $1 entry fee must be enclosed. There is no limit to the number of girls who may enter from a house.

The weekend will officially open at 6:30 p.m. Friday, Nov. 13 with the firing of the Alpha Tau Omega cannon. Cheerleaders will lead a parade through University-area streets to Hendricks field, where a pep rally is scheduled.

DEAN OF HENDRICKS Chapel Charles C. Noble will M.C. the affair and introduce special guest Charles Steinke, 1915 cheerleader and owner of the "golden horseshoe." The Hill alum is expected to relate the legend of his possession.

The queen of Colgate weekend and her court will also be presented at the ceremonies.

A huge pile of wood gathered by Kappa Phi Delta members will be ignited by the queen.

Starting off Saturday's schedule of events will be the Bill Orange breakfast. Special halftime ceremonies are on tap at the football game that afternoon.

THE ANNUAL Soph Hop, sponsored by the Class of 1956, will be held Saturday night. New members of Orange Key will be tapped at intermission.

Monier to Attend Air Force Convo

First Lt. Robert B. Monier of the AFROTC detachment here will attend the Air Force Socio-Economic Research Projects conference in Washington, D. C. today through Thursday.

Lt. Monier, a graduate of Syracuse university, was formerly associated with the Human Resources Research Institute. He served as social science research officer at Maxwell Air Force base, Ala., before being assigned here this year.

ANNIVERSARY

The Syracuse university College of Fine Arts celebrates the 80th anniversary of its opening this semester. Classes were first taught in September 1873.

Lights Will Relieve Traffic Situation

Student Government Works for Signals

Due to the heavy traffic in the area surrounding campus, traffic lights have been put up on College, University and Walnut pl. intersections. This latest effort to eliminate traffic congestion come as a culmination of the efforts of student government, according to Elizabeth Brydon, vice-president of women's student government.

Student government members have been working on the project for the past three and one-half years. Much of the credit for the installation of traffic lights at these street corners goes to F. Gordon Smith, University vice-president and Frank Cavanaugh, traffic engineer of the City of Syracuse.

It was finally decided that due to the large congestion of traffic at these corners and the possibility of danger, lights would permit a safer flow of traffic, especially during the afternoon hours when people are returning home.

Dance-Going Coeds Can Get Blankets

Women students who will attend the Hu Harshburger benefit dance tomorrow must bring their tickets to the WSG office during regular hours for a blanket permission.

WSG office hours are 12-1 p.m. and 4-5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Women who do not get blanket permissions must use a pink special 12 permission for the dance.

Try Browsing Around At Lost and Found

Have you noticed your eyesight failing? Maybe it's because you've lost your glasses. If you have you can probably pick them up at the lost and found department in prefab 24.

How about a green toothbrush? One was found by the janitor on the first floor of Lyman (although I can't imagine anyone wanting to clean their teeth there). However, since the brush was not claimed, it has been presented to Francis A. Wingate, University comptroller, for the purpose of cleaning his typewriter (without chlorophyll).

IF YOU'VE lost something more practical than a toothbrush, such as a jacket or ring, you may find that at L and F too. A box full of sorority and fraternity pins, bracelets and the like can also be found there.

It's not quite the weather for it yet, but a fur coat has been turned in to Mrs. Polly Brown, receptionist for the department. If you've lost the skin, come in. Pads, pencils and fountain pens of various sizes and colors are also in stock.

So if you have lost one of these or something else, even a weekend drop in and browse around. If you've found an article, Mrs. Brown will be glad to accept it.

One last warning: should you lose your way, the lost and found department is located in the business office prefab on University pl. right across from Maxwell.

Harshburger Dance Slated Tomorrow

Syracuse university students and faculty members will pay tribute to Hu Harshburger, '52 at the benefit dance from 8-11:30 p.m. in the Women's building tomorrow.

Ray Caldiero's band has donated its services for the evening and the intermission entertainment will be provided by the Varsity athletes with Tom Coulter as the master of ceremonies. Six food services have donated the refreshments. All profits will be sent to Hu and his parents to defray his hospital bills.

Harshburger, for four years a member of Syracuse football and boxing teams, was injured in a motorcycle accident in late August, en route home. As a result his leg was amputated above the knee and he is now in St. Mary's hospital, Huntington, W. Va.

Joint Complaint By Tri-O, USP Leads to Action

— LATE BULLETIN —

Piety Hill Alliance refuses to accept the decision of the protest board, according to Robert S. Yallum, PHA spokesman.

Party leaders will protest the ruling, Yallum stated late Friday night, because they have learned that a member of the board had spoken to one of the complaintants previous to the filing of the protest.

He reportedly assured the complaintant that if the protest was entered, he would see that PHA was punished. Since the board member was biased concerning the case, Yallum stated, the party feels that a mistrial has been committed.

By ED HARDY
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Piety Hill Alliance was suspended from all political activities for four months Friday by the student government elections protest board.

The action supported joint charges by Tri-Orange and United Students parties that PHA had campaign for the coming freshman elections before the official opening date of last Wednesday.

THE FOUR PHA candidates will be allowed to run in the Oct. 28 elections without political party backing, the four-man protest board ruled.

Affected are the following PHA candidates: William Brown for president, Dorris Lemp for vice president, Alta Burg for secretary and Norman Butterfield for treasurer.

Acting under power granted by the revised class elections act of March, 1953, the board found the infant Piety Hill party responsible for campaign posters in front of Pi Alpha Chi and Alpha Phi before Wednesday and for a poster in the Administration building in violation of the elections act.

The suspension lasts until Feb. 23, 1954.

ALL TYPES of campaign material, including posters and badges, bearing the name of Piety Hill Alliance, have been banned until that date.

Sitting on the protest board were Stephen Reiss, chief of civil service of men's student government; Mary Ann Dalton, president of women's student government; George Kepner, elections commissioner; and Elaine Greenberg, WSG elections commissioner.

Piety Hill's membership went to 16 houses Thursday when Iota Alpha Pi and Phi Sigma Sigma joined. Under the chairmanship of Larry O'Sullivan of Phi Kappa Psi, PHA was formed by 12 houses on Oct. 8.

Goon Sweetheart Named

Barbara Feick, 18-year-old blonde from Pittsburgh, Pa., was crowned sweetheart of the Goon Squad at the Jiminy Cricket ball Saturday night.

Miss Feick reigned over the ball after her coronation during the intermission festivities. Her co-sweethearts were Joan Davey from Parker cottage, and Eleanor Beig from Haven.

The three sweethearts were chosen from 60 candidates in a four-part elemination contest.

Miss Feick, a liberal arts student, lives in Wilson hall. At her "coronation" she wore a black faile suit and carried white flowers. Her attendants, Miss Beig and Miss Davey, carried fall-colored mums.

At Syracuse Miss Feick does modeling for the University. At Brentwood high school in Pittsburgh she was a member of the student council, yearbook, newspaper, fashion board, ushers club, Y teens, and Girl's Athletic League.

Sororities, Rushees Observe Silence

Sorority rushing silence period began yesterday following the costume parties held from 1:30 to 6 p.m. Nancy Knapp, president of Panhellenic association, warned that during silence period, which lasts until formal pledging Nov. 4, sorority members and rushees will not converse except for "hellos" on campus.

The final sorority rushing convocation will be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 28 in the dance studio of the Women's building.

For fun and funds

There'll be ducks, witches, mice and flying saucers abounding on the new Quad next Saturday.

Passers-by, unfamiliar with the scene, will probably think they have at last discovered the meaning of the "crazy college kid" expression. Should they stop and ask, however, they will find a "carnival with a purpose."

The annual Campus Chest carnival, with more than 60 houses participating, is one of the most entertaining and worthwhile events conducted by any Hill organization during the year. Even the Chancellor will be on hand to open the first booth.

Many students, however, do not understand the purpose behind the carnival or where the money goes after they have traded it for a pie or popcorn.

The carnival is just one phase of the entire Campus Chest drive. The time for contributions will be in February. The carnival supplements this phase of activity with a project that is fun for both participants and players.

Eight organizations receive all the money given to the Campus Chest. And all are designed to help needy students on this campus, in the nation and throughout the world.

A large share of the collections will be sent to the Syracuse-in-Thailand program. This group sends representatives to that Asian country to teach, and in so doing make friends for the United States and democracy.

Another sizable portion of the money goes into the Students' Emergency Loan fund for Syracusans. Should something unexpected arise, students are able to receive a loan without interest for at least 30 days.

The Foreign Student Loan fund is somewhat similar to this. The latter is, of course, for the use of all University foreign students. Both programs have offices in Chapel.

On the national scene, some of the Campus Chest contributions will go to the American Friends' service committee. This organization sponsors scholarships for American students wishing to enter college.

The fund for Negro students also permits scholarships combined with individual counseling for prospective college students.

Aid in the form of supplies to needy students in every country is given by the World Student Service fund, another group which receives the support of the Campus Chest.

The Japanese International Christian university is another recipient of Syracuse dollars. In appreciation for earlier help, the Japanese students are sending a cherry tree to the Hill student body.

Of course, the parent organization, the Community Chest, also receives some financial support from the campus drive.

The Campus Chest drive is the only solicitation that students see during the course of the entire year. It is several drives rolled into one. The major solicitation will come second semester, but the one with the most fun and spirit comes this Saturday.

We'll meet you on the Quad.

NSA: Largest Student Organization

By EILEEN CHAMBERLAIN

(Editor's Note: With the beginning of National Students association activities, we feel prompted to explain what NSA is and does, both locally and on a national basis. This is the first of two articles which will explain its functions and objectives.)

The largest reresentative organization of students in the United States, National Students association stands for student welfare in all pertinent roles.

NSA has brought such issues as academic freedom and ROTC regulations to national attention through governmental organs. It has advocated a student discount service and other changes and conveniences for the college student.

A non-partisan, non-sectarian organization, NSA consists of student body membership from each institution of higher learning which complies with membership requirements as stated in the NSA constitution.

To be affiliated with the national organization a local student body must adopt the NSA constitution, accept by-laws of the association and pay national and regional dues for the current year.

Membership implies that representatives from each campus affiliate will attend a national, regional and local convention during the summer. At these conventions programs are discussed and planned concerning student government development on local campuses, relation of the student to the administration and curricula of his college, relations among students in foreign lands and other pertinent problems.

Certain basic policy declarations are included in the constitution of NSA. Topping the list is the declaration stating that NSA will seek to secure and maintain equal rights and opportunities for education for all people regardless of race, national origin, sex, creed or political beliefs.

Segregation and discrimination is subject to attack and investigation by NSA. The organization is pledged to investigate this problem throughout the United States in order to help secure elimination of segregation.

Basic policy declarations also include a student bill of rights which is set up for the adoption of these rights on campuses where they do not exist and to insure continuation where they are presently in effect.

Members of the NSA steering group at Syracuse university introduced the bill of rights for women's student government and men's student government approval last spring. However, since student government activities were nearing a close for the semester, no decision was made as to acceptance of the bill.

The most recent action of the natioanl organization was in the issue of dismissal of all third-year Air Force ROTC cadets unable to serve in flight training after graduation. This was ordered by the Department of Defense in July, 1953.

As a result of action by NSA and Congress the proposal to dismiss the third-year cadets was dropped by the Department of Defense.

(In the concluding article, achievements and plans of the Syracuse chapter of NSA will be discussed.)

Life in a Freeze? Keep Up to Date

By CHARLES C. NOBLE
Dean of Hendricks Chapel

Excerpts from sermon on "How Far Ahead Are You Dated?" at Hendricks Chapel, Sunday morning, October 25, 1953.

It is not necessary to talk to Syracuse students about the dating processes between men and women. They know how to handle that without my help. I am concerned this morning with the frantic effort of so many people to keep up to date superficially when they are actually behind the times in the areas of life which count.

There is almost an obsession for some to keep abreast of the most recent trend in clothes, music, slang and gadgets.

If I hear another juke box playing "St. George and the Dragon Net," I shall probably throw a chair at the proprietor.

And as for clothes, eight years ago we had the old look, then the new look and now everybody looks.

A legitimate effort to keep up to date involves a sane extension of the eternal principles of growth; so, in love one goes through marriage to an ever larger family experience and avoids the mistake of remaining in love with love forever.

In education one finds wisdom only through a constant expansion of the growing edge of one's brain.

In developing personality, anything that fixates the growth in a mediocre level stultifies potentialities; maturity requires a steady growth in unselfishness. The person who tries to freeze the normal process of life is badly dated.

The logic of modern life forces us to push ahead, ridding ourselves of our anachronisms and availing ourselves of truly up-to-date methods. It is hopelessly behind the times now to think of civilization in compartmentalized terms.

Our interdependent world forces us to get up to date and realize that the only answer to a split atom is a united world.

Among our outmoded attitudes is that of disillusionment. The world-wide ferment among cultures and nations will never be solved by people who withdraw and pout; it can only be mastered by a persistent attempt to utilize man's genius and spirit in creating a juridicial world government equal to our modern need.

The man who thinks he needs no moral code is equally old-fashioned, although he tends to think he is ahead of his times.

By now we know that this is a law-abiding universe, physically and spiritually. The person who would retrogress to any type of dictatorship is flying in the face of the plain logic of history. Looking back will never do; being slaves of the present will make us stagnant; projecting eternal principles into the future will guarantee our growth.

Nowhere are we more dated than in religion.

Too many of us think of the Bible as a discredited book, of prayer as a mere psychological fight talk, of the church as a smug vested interest . . . of Christ as a disillusioned idealist . . . of God as a fussy old man who has outlived his day.

But our modern knowledge, and an enlightened faith demand a realization that the Bible is the greatest source book of moral and spiritual light that we have, that prayer can open the channels of power better than any psychological workings can do, that the church with all its faults has through the centuries empowered men for superlative living.

And finally that modern man needs not less of God but simply a greater realization of God in the light of this expanding universe.

Ol' College Bands Get It Rough

To borrow a leaf from a book of thoughts by the noted philosopher, Mr. Casey Stengel of Bronx, N. Y., . . . things is tough all over.

It is some sort of tradition of the Harvard university band to give out with a serenade around the witching hour each time the band visits an opponent's home grounds for a gridiron encounter.

That motley group found itself down in New York last weekend for some reason or other and tradition prevailing, the Harvard men swung into their a.m. concert. We hasten to usually well-received on the vaadd that this sort of thing was rious campses which Harvard visited.

Up until last Saturday morning.

Apparently there was a considerable number of Gothamites who cherish their sleep above a sunrise serenade. The band was escorted by six patrol cars to leased on bail so that the band jail where its leaders were recould keep an engagement at Baker Field.

The case comes up next month.

Although the Harvard band had endured ink, water and assorted fruit on previous poorly received occasions, they doubtless considered this the meanist cut of all.

This fracus birngs to mind an incident which occurred in Syracuse a few weeks back when a number of ruffians made off with a half dozen toppers and tubas of the Orange marching group. It was never determined who was responsible for that particular bit of felony but it is possible that it was part of the same conspiracy that would have college bands in the clink and hatless instead of doing their job.

Now, Syracuse does not have a great band but it is a good band. It is not subject to such whims as practice in the wee hours save, perhaps, the event of an Orange bowl or a colgate haircut.

We have a band to be considerably proud of . . . it has the most marvelous rhythm and baton gals this side of Ringling brothers and it stays out of jail.

Ladies Get the 'Last Word' on Chivalry

By FLIP SIROTA

Mr. Arthur Siegel is to be commended.

He has made a desarate attempt, as standard bearer of his wilted chevaliers, to revive their crumbling ranks. Unfortunately, he has failed—miserably.

To cite dungarees on coeds as an excuse for why the manners of the men on this campus have "gone with the wind" was a rather sorry thing for him to do. He leaves the male populace concerned in this mannerless saga open to some more uncomplimentary observations.

First, for every dungaree-clad gal on campus there are at least three guys in dirty, creased and crumbled shirts which look like the V-cut neckline style for women has skipped over to their side. Let's face it guys, at least dungarees have some appeal on women, but there is no physical attribute you can claim for the plunging necklines.

Also Mr. Siegel, how many men look as if they never went to bed the night before. That may be why they make a mad dash for freedom at the end of the hour. They need a reviving breath of cold air or they will collapse completely.

In view of such desparate circumstances maybe it would be better for coeds to submit to shoving and pushing and let them make a break for it. This would be better than watching them collapse to the floor.

AT THE FLICKERS

LITTLE CROSBY LOST?

By CHARLES SAMUELS
Daily Orange Movie Critic

"Little Boy Lost" is a picture of such limited depth, perception and importance that one wonders why it was ever made. You have seen it many times before; often handled by more competent people. This tale of a father searching for his little lost son is as familiar to us as the boy meets girl theme and this film throws no new light on the subject. It it is not sentimental it is due to the superhuman efforts of the producers to strip it of sentimentality. For this, they deserve praise, for it could conceivably have been the slushiest exhibit since East Lynne. But their efforts were in vain.

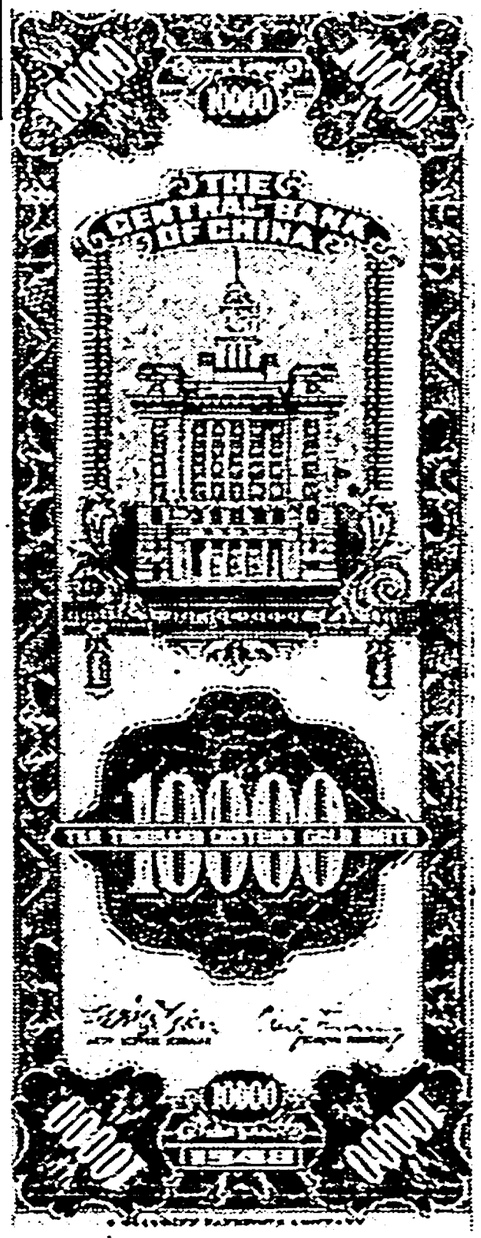
Had the producers exercised sufficient good judgment to employ an actor for the lead, that would have fared better. They have instead, elected to turn the part of to Mr. Bing Crosby, an admittedly execellent entertainer, but an actor of extremely limited dramatic resources. He employs throughout the film one facial expression obviously intended to indicate grief but more properly suited to a portrayal of indigestion. For Mr. Crosby is hopelessly miscast and he undoubtedly knows it. The little boy is quite another matter. Christiane Fourcade is quite an accomplished little actor and as is usual in such cases he walks away with the film. Nicole Maurey, a comely Madmoiselle admirably decorates the scene and the rest of the cast performs competently.

Please Mr. Crosby, sing "White Christmas".

"The Royal African Rifles" completes the bill and it is just about as good as you would expect it to be.

$3,000,000 Kaput

Bogus



Part of a fortune that nobody can spend. This is one of the 10,000 gold unit bills that our poverty stricken student can count greedily by candle light but not even the whole kaboddle could get him into the movies.

The following story is absolutely true.

A Syracuse University student, who prefers to remain unidentified, has obtained possession of three million dollars. The money is of American manufacture, is legal tender, and is in bills of $10,000 denomination.

Part of the money, printed to serve as customs notes for international trade, was brought to the Daily Orange office to validate the story. A question and answer session brought out the facts that the money was originally aboard a ship in the port of Philadelphia. How it was removed from the ship is unknown, or at least was not revealed.

The student, a freshman in the College of Liberal Arts, received the fortune about a year ago and has been trying to determine what to do with it. An evaluation by the Chase National Bank of New York City indicates that the money is of 1948 issue. The crisp, new bills apparently have never been used.

Since an evaluation was made by the bank with no hesitation, it can be assumed that no illegal means were used to transfer the money to private hands. It would certainly be noticed if part of a missing three million dollar fortune were turned up. Since the student was asked no questions, he is apparently free to dispose of the money at his discretion.

In the official notice received from the Chase National Bank was the only possible flaw in the whole beautiful situation. The bank says, "We are in recepit of your letter . . . enclosing one . . . Customs Note . . . dated 1938 . . . and are obliged to return these items for this reason . . no market." It seems that the money was issued by Nationalist China, and that government is in no position to redeem three million dollars in customs notes.

LETTERARY COMMENT

MONEY BELT TOO TIGHT?

To the editor:

It would appear as if the University is trying a bit too hard to tighten its money belt.

This startling bit of news about the dropping of January graduation comes to me as a shocking surprise. Although I have no intention of disowning my alma mater, I shall have a great deal of trouble facing those January finishers, who never will get the chance to graduate.

We are told that such a mid-year commencement would cost $8,000. This may very well be true. And it may also be true that Syracuse does not like to do things half way.

But don't you think the Chancellor could utter the words for $4,000 if it would make 250 students (500 parents) happy?

Without the lest bit of doubt in my mind—and with no intention of being persuaded to change my opinion—I would unhesitatingly and most assuredly say that the dropping of January graduation is a very bad move on the part of the University.

The case of the Unapproachable Alumnus

OR . . . How do you get that gift horse to open his mouth?

Once there was a Wealthy Alumnus who was also a Soft Touch. Tie an Old School Tie around your neck and he'd give you his shirt to go with it.

One day he realized that this habit of always saying "Yes" to the Big Question was costing him a Pretty Penny. So he became a Hard Man to Get To. Letters, phone calls and personal visits all encountered a secretary with a face like a flint and a 4-word vocabulary. ("He's out of town.")

This was Rough on the Old School, but nobody had a solution—until the football coach, a Brain in his own right, came up with a Magnificent but Simple Idea. He dashed down to the Western Union office and dispatched a Telegram saturated with Old School Spirit and dedicated to the theme that unless some Noble Soul came through pronto, the eleven would be playing barefoot and jerseyless.

The ice jam was broken. A Fat Check arrived the next day. Today things are back on a Normal Financial Basis.

There's nothing more practical than using Telegrams to Hurdle Barriers and get to the Guy (or the Gal) you want to talk to. When you want something . . . Cash from Home, a Date with a Dreamboat, an Interview with the Man who does the Hiring . . . it pays to Make your Bid via Western Union.

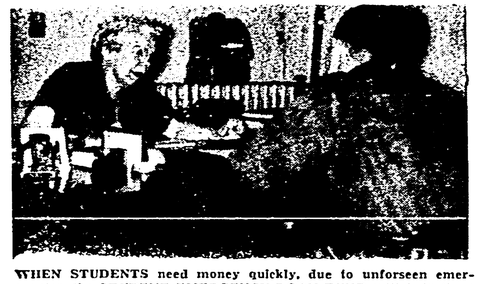
Campus Carnival Aids World, Local Organizations

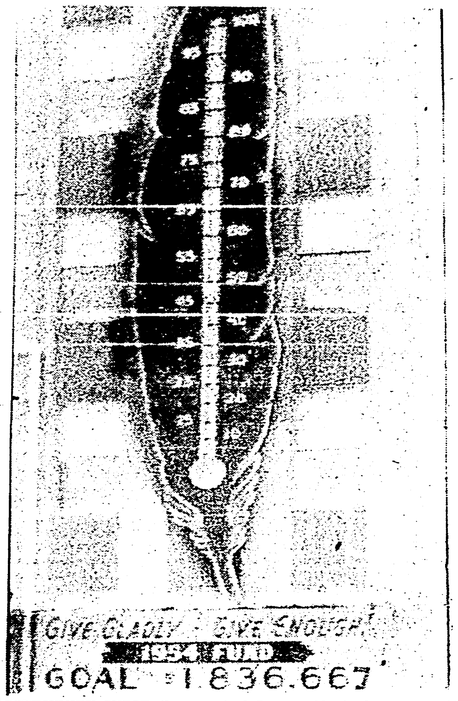
Annual Affair Helps Students

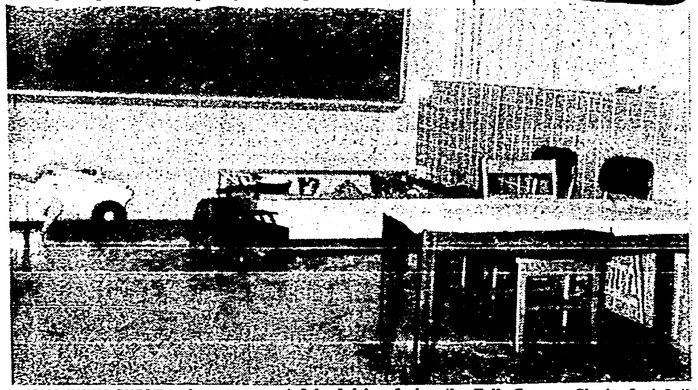
IT'S A LONG WAY DOWN, but that's part of the fun at a carnival. This brave soul is about to start the long plunge to help Campus Chest. The annual event will be held next Saturday. Proceeds go to the eight organizations helped by the campus fund drive.

THE NEW QUAD, formerly the Old Oval, will be the site of Saturday's annual Carnival for the benefit of Campus Chest.



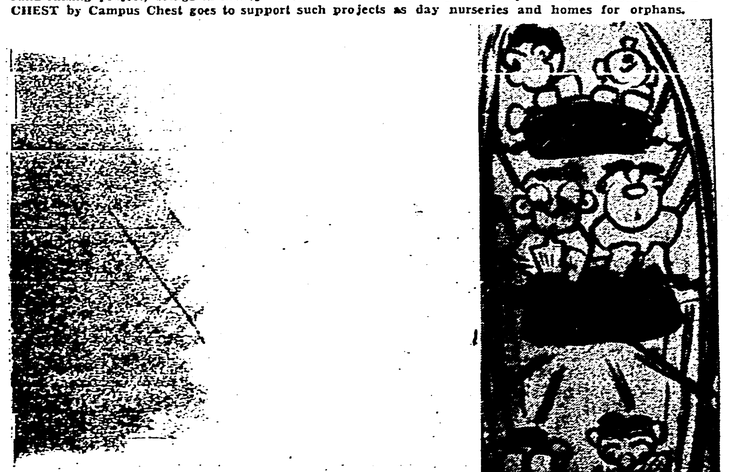
WHEN STUDENTS need money quickly, due to unforseen emergencies, the STUDENT EMERGENCY LOAN FUND will help them over the difficult period. Mrs. Kinnon in Hendricks chapel administers the fund. Campus Chest carnival money goes to this service.





COMMUNITY CHEST makes one concerted fund drive during the Fall. Campus Chest adopted the idea, and stages its drive in the Spring. However, the Carnival, which is a fun-making, as well as a fund-raising project, brings in money when it is needed in the Fall. Money donated to COMMUNITY CHEST by Campus Chest goes to support such projects as day nurseries and homes for orphans.

SYRACUSE STUDENTS have fine accomodations, and have the opportunity to use the best academic equipment available. The WORLD STUDENT SERVICE FUND supported by Campus Chest gives money to students throughout the world who do not have the same advantages. These girls from Sims V are representatives of American students.



THE DELTS told fortunes and lifted the veil of the future for Syra- the site of the Campus Chest carnival. Booths will sprout around the campus focal point, and crowds will add to the gaiety. Fraternities, sororities and living centers are sponsoring the midway attractions.

"RIGHT THIS WAY, FOLKS, RIGHT THIS WAY. See the most fabulous campus attraction ever presented. Only ten cents, the tenth part of a dollar to help Campus Chest support worthy causes, and have the best time of your life." Barkers, with the traditional straw hat and cane will spiel the Midway attractions to the spectators at Saturday's annual affair.

Midway Attracti

By POLLY REED

It's that time again.

It's bafker time and midway time. It's the time for hot dogs an popcorn, pretty girls and ferris wheel rides.

Naturally, it's carnival time. Campus Chest carnival, to be specific.

Next Saturday the new quads (the old oval)(will blossom with the creations of 60 organizations all vieing with each other to come up with the winner—the creation that will take in the mos money fo Campus Chest.

For the romantic, there's a tunnel of love sponsored by Frenc cottage. And, for those couple who find the tunnel inspiring, there' a mock marriage both sponsored by Marshall cottage.

For the sadistic at heart, there's a little item called "dunk the witch." The idea is to throw a ball at a cat. If the cat is hit, a torrent of water pours on an Alpha Xi Delta girl. Delta Kappa Epsilon is the sponsor with AZD.

If that doesn't interest you, there's always Thornden cottag M-3's booth. There you can either squash a pie in someone's face, o if you trust you raim, you can throw it at him or her.

Walker cottage girls are donating their heads for the occasio Their booth is appropriately named "Splat." The object is to h their heads, which are stuck through holes in canvas, with a w sponge.

Phi Delta Theta and Delta Gamma have a damp idea, too, tille "Drown the DG". If a Phi Delt, who is standing on a platform, h hit above the waist, he steps aside and dunks the unfortunate DG

For animal lovers, Chi Omega and Zeta Psi have inaugurated mouse race. In a roped off tent mouse raceways will be set up ar the race is on.

Kappa Sigma and Kappa Kappa Gamma have arraigned for Parisian can can straight from the rue de la Paix. The mademoisell come equipped with a 4-piece band.

Sims 5 girls are running a competing can can show. Thei booth is a "ring toss on can can girls." Take it from there, men!

After such exertion, food is in order. The Tau Epsilon Phi's a sponsoring their annual refreshment booth, and Winchell has a nov "slay the salami and have a slice." Three salami slices will be hur from the ceiling and if a dart is thrown in one salami, the luck person gets a slice. If all three darts hit a salami, Winchell girls mal a salami sandwich.

For gamblers there's Iota Alpha Pi's roulette wheel "It's on t house." Just place a bet on your lucky fraternity or sorority.

n Due Saturday

Alpha Epsilon Phi and Zeta Beta Tau give you a ride for your money. Their "flying saucer" is in lieu of last year's ferris wheel, which was run by Sigma Alpha Mu and Beta Theta Pi. ast year he Sammies and Betas took in more money than any other organzation, copping first prize.

This year two prizes will be given, one for the Campus Chest rnival booth which takes in the most money, and one prize for the ost original booth.

The Sigma Nu's will be guessing weight and the Delta Tau Del- 's have turned gypsy with their fortune telling booth.

For hunters or duck lovers there's Acacia's "duck or buck ooth." If a ring is tossed around a duck, the winner gets his hoice of the duck or a buck. (Dollar, that is.)

Chancellor William P. Tolley will officially open the carnival. uart Parker, co-chairman of Campus Chest will introduce him.

Each organization in the carnival pays its expenses with all oney going to the organizations served by Campus Chest. Every oth but TEP's refreshment booth will take tickets which will be ld around the quads. Tickets are 10 cents apiece.

Refreshments however, will be dispensed for cash.

Eight organizations were helped by the proceeds from Campus hest carnival last year, and will probably receive its aid again his year.

On campus, the student emergency loan fund, which helps stunts financially when emergencies arise, will be helped through e carnival. The foreign student loan fund, a similar organization foreign students will also receive the benefits of Campus Chest.

Syracuse-in-Thailand, which last year aipd part expenses for an nerican student to study in Thailand, will receive a portion of the oceeds from the carnival.

The nation-wide Negro Student fund will receive money from yracuse, and the National Scholarship service will get funds om our Campus Chest.

American Friends Service committee and the parent organizan, Community Chest, are the other two groups being aided by racuse students when they attend the carnival.

Every 10-cent ticket a Syracusan buys for the carnival helps at st one of these organizations. And every organization helps at st one Syracusan.

Carnival time is here.

Barker and hot dog time. But even more than that, it's the time Syracusans to realize as they have their carnival fun, that they're ping other students less fortunate than they.

THESE FOREIGN STUDENTS are representatives of the students attending Syracuse, who have access to the FOREIGN STUDENT LOAN FUND, which is set up to help them in emergencies. Administered through Chapel, the fund is helped by Campus Chest through the carnival proceeds, and the annual fund-raising campaign in the spring.

AOPi PLAYED at ring toss as their contribution to the fund raising affair last year. Skill games o fall kinds will dot the Midway Saturday. The "Flying Saucer" supplanter of last year's ferris wheel, will be on hand to give the customers a thrill ride.

COMMUNITY CHEST, the parent of Campus Chest, gives money to organizations on both the local and national level. The annual Campus Chest drive is patterned after the "big brother" organization and has adopted the feather symbol as its mark.

Along the Sidelines

By KEN LENT, DAILY ORANGE SPORTS EDITOR

We were thumbing through some out-of-town newspapers the other day and happened upon a rather interesting article by a Worcester, Mass. writer. The article itself would not mean much to Syracuse fans, but it did point out the fierce pride which Holy Cross fans have in their coach, Dr. Eddie Anderson.

The good doctor, who incidentally is a honest-to-goodness bonified physician, is one of those fabulous few who has that spark of football genius which turns a mediocre grid squad into a national powerhouse. Coach Anderson has proven this not once but three times. As they say, "the man must have something."

This is the second swing for the veteran Crusader mentor at Holy Cross. Both times he has taken so-so Purple teams and within two years had them up in the national spotlight. In the last two years, his teams have compiled 8-2 records each season, the first above .500 campaigns since 1945.

Statistics, however, don't tell the entire story of the doctor. To his players, he is known as a methodical worker who strives for perfection without pushing his athletes too much. He is one of those who is able to get the most out of his men at the right moment.

In the manner of experience, Dr. Anderson rates fourth in the nation. This is his 28th year at the helm and judging from what his associates say, he has never regretted a minute of it.

In a recent survey conducted by the University of Missouri, Coach Frank Leahy of Notre Dame and Dr. Eddie Anderson were the only two major football coaches who had won at least 80% of their games at a single college. While at Holy Cross, Anderson's teams won an even 70 games, lost 17 and tied 5 for an .801 percentage.

The Crusader mentor has been in the football spotlight ever since he entered Notre Dame in 1918 and became the immortal Knute Rockne's regular end for the next three years. In 1921, he was named to the coveted all-American team and upon graduation he signed up with the Chicago Cardinals.

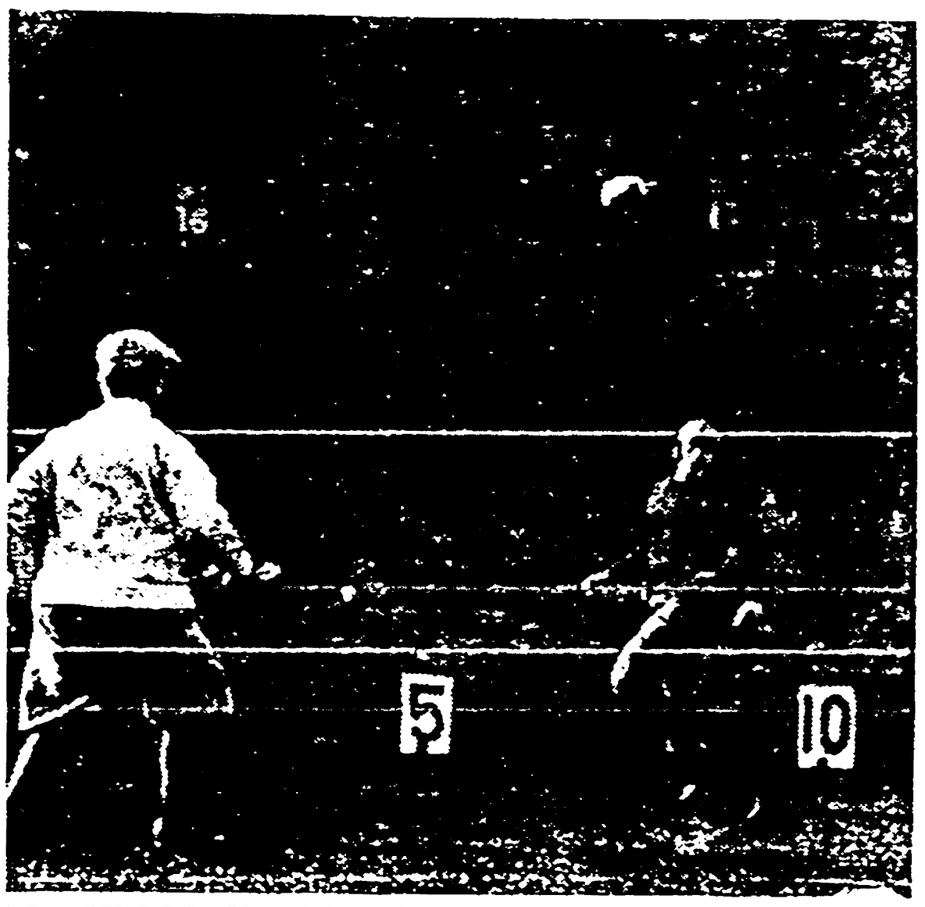
After coaching at two smaller colleges, Anderson came to Holy Cross in 1933 and compiled the nation's top five-year record from '33-'38. Wooed away by Iowa, he brought the Buckeyes from football oblivion to a Big Ten power. It was in his first year that he was named "Coach of the Year."

While at Iowa, he was named as the College All-Star coach twice (1940 and 1950) for the collegians annual game against the professional football winner. His '50 club upset the vaunted Philadelphia Eagles, 17-7.

Upon returning to Worcester in 1951, Anderson started in on his third grid miracle by taking a team which had won only one game in the previous year and molding it into a unit which set up the 8-2 clubs of the following two seasons.

This is the type of coaching which the Orange meet this Saturday. You can be sure that the current Crusader edition is well-drilled and well-organized. The good doctor's still smarting from last year's one-point loss to Syracuse and a team doesn't usually do that to Anderson two years in a row.

Orange Gridders of '23 Shown in 'Coronet' Pix



DO YOU RECOGNIZE the players? If you don't, it's because they are members of the 1923 Orange football squad. The day the picture was taken, Syracuse beat Pittsburgh 3-0 at Yankee stadium.

By DAVE BENNETT

Wondering what game is being played and what teams are playing it in the picture run alongside? To allay your curiosity we offer this explanation: The game is football—1923 vintage. The teams are Syracuse and Pittsburgh playing in New York's Yankee Stadium and the final score was 3 to 0 in favor of the Orange.

Through the courtesy of Coronet magazine, The Daily Orange is able to picture one of the big moments in Syracuse's football history.

The victory over Pitt before a large crowd on a neutral field in New York City established the Orangemen of '23 as one of the nation's grid powerhouses.

Before playing the Panthers, the Saltines had easily beaten three opponents. In their opener, the Hillmen had romped over Hobart, 33-0. The next game resulted in a 61-3 rout victory over William and Mary College of Williamsburg, Va.

Next, Syracuse had blanked Alabama, 23-0. Then came the conquest of the highly-ranked Pitt eleven. And the Piety squad continued on its winning ways. The next victim was Springfield college to the tune of 44-0.

At this point in the campaign, eastern grid experts took notice of the Syracusans and began booming the locals for a Rose Bowl bid.

The Orange fulfilled its supporters claims as it rolled over Penn State and Boston University on successive weekends.

The Nittany Lions succumbed 10-0 and the Terriers from Beantown absorbed a 49-0 beating. And so the stage was set. Syracuse, playing a rugged intersectional schedule, had won its first six games. It had, in fact, allowed its opposition only three points.

The Hill team was a heavy favorite as it prepared for the annual Colgate game. But the Red Raiders were primed for an upset. Playing a Piety team which had thoughts of a bowl bid as the season pulled to a close, the men from Colgate pulled one of the upsets of the year and nipped the Orangemen, 16-7.

Coach Burtt Orders Early Start As Fencers Prepare for Season

The fencers believe in getting an early start. While the fall sports have only reached the halfway mark the Saltine foilers have already been practicing for more than two weeks.

Coach Ben Burtt has only two returning lettermen around which to build his team. The returning lettermen are John Goldstein at epee, and Al Peck at saber.

Other swordsmen who promise to figure prominently in Burtt's plans are sabermen Willie Schop and Ed Wang. Schop is a junior who has previously fenced only foil. However, he has been sharp in practice sessions.

Wang was the No. 1 saber man of last year's frosh team. He has shown strong potentialities and will fight Schop for the No. 2 saber position.

Goldstein will once again hold forth from the No. 1 epee spot. Last year, Goldstein had the highest personal winning percentage on the team.

AXEL SPOTS—Coach Burtt is still looking for more freshmen and upperclassmen. Those interested in trying out for the fencing team should contact Burtt at Bowne Hall or in the fencing room at Archbold gymnasium.

Johnson New Hill Coach, Assists Booting Mentor

By ALEX STRASSER
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Syracuse has an assistant soccer coach. For many Orange soccer fans, this will come as a revelation.

Marshall Johnson is one of those guys who doesn't get his name in the headlines but who is more valuable than many who do. Since September, Johnson has been assisting soccer coach Andy Coccari with both the varsity and freshman teams.

To those who had no high school soccer, Johnson is an example that college soccer can be mastered.

In high school, Johnson was a two letter man. Besides tennis and basketball, the sports in which he won his letters, he was a member of the varsity football team for one year. Like so many high schools, Johnson's had no soccer.

Johnson did his undergraduate work at Rutgers university. There he came under the influence of George Dochat, who Johnson credits with teaching him all that he now knows about soccer.

Dochat taught Johnson the rudiments of the game. Two years later, Johnson showed that he had learned his lesson well when he was named to the all-Middle-Atlantic team at one of the fullback positions.

Johnson played on one Middle Atlantic winner and on one team that tied for the honors.

At college, Johnson also won letters in tennis and basketball. Of the three sports, however, soccer was his favorite. Tennis, it appeared, was always getting rained out while basketball lacked the advantages inherent an outdoor sport such as soccer.

Concerning the ancient fight between soccer and football adherents over which sport offers the athlete more, Johnson sides with the soccer supporters. While football is a great game to play, it requires more conditioning than soccer does. One practices most of the time and only plays once a week. In soccer, however, a premium is placed on scrimmages while leg work and conditioning is relegated to second spot in the training grind.

Upon graduation from Rutgers, Johnson went into the United States Air Force as a second lieutenant. He was assigned to Special service because of his proficiency in the field of magic.

As special service officer at Bolling field Washington, Johnson was in charge of a service club, golf club, movie theater and library.

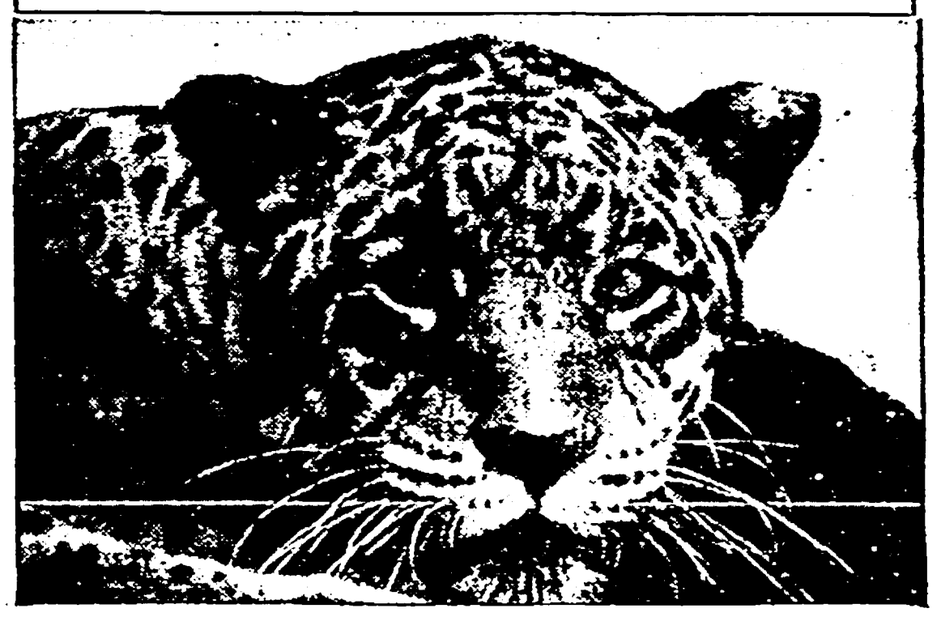
After five months, Johnson was transferred to Anderson field. At Anderson field, he held down the starting center position on the basketball team for five months while being the only officer on the team.

Johnson then served a nine months stretch in Korea before being released. While in Korea, Johnson won three air medals.

Johnson is now enrolled in the graduate school of radio and television at Syracuse. Only the future will tell what impact he will have on those mediums. However, if Johnson does as well in television as he has as coach and one-time player then his television future looks bright.

MARSHALL JOHNSON, the asisstant soccer coach, who has been assisting Coach Andy Coccari with both the freshman and varsity soccer, teams.

J. Paul Sheedy* Switched to Wildroot Cream-Oil Because He Flunked The Finger-Nail Test



"Safari as I'm concerned" said Sheedy's gal, "your hair looks like something the cat dragged in. Purrhaps you better spring for some Wildroot Cream-Oil, America's favorite hair tonic. Keeps hair combed without greasiness. Removes loose, ugly dandruff. Relieves annoying dryness. Contains Lanolin. Non-alcoholic." So Sheedy roared down to his druggist for Wildroot Cream-Oil, and now he's feline mighty fine. All the girls paws and stare when he passes. So you better leopard on the bandwagon and try Wildroot Cream-Oil right meow. Scratch up 29¢ for a bottle or handy tube at any toilet goods counter. And ask your barber for some Wildroot Cream-Oil on your hair. Then you'll be the cat's whiskers!

WSG Sophomore Training Program Begins Wednesday

Address by Dr. Bye Will Highlight First Meeting

With an address by Dr. Carl Bye, Through the Keyhole will begin its training program activities for this year at 4 p.m. Wednesday in Maxwell auditorium.

Organized for instruction to coeds who seek positions in women's student government, TTK classes are taught by senior officers of WSG assisted by junior officers.

THE COURSE is primarily designed for sophomore women but may be taken by other upperclass women. House presidents are urged to sign up for TTK but it is not compulsory. Freshmen may not take the course, with the exception of those who are members of National Student association.

Associate dean of the Maxwell graduate school, Dr. Bye will speak on the relation of Syracuse university to the community, state and nation. Following the session an informal tea is planned in the Founders' room of Maxwell. At the tea coeds may sign up for TTK and meet junior and senior officers.

This year the TTK program, which will probably continue through March, will place more emphasis on Syracuse university as a whole and on its traditions. Classes will also cover material on leadership, parliamentary procedure and functions of various campus organizations, especially student government.

Two projects will be required of those taking the non-credit course. The first is based on an observation of campus organizations and will probably be due before Christmas vacation. The second and final project will be connected with some area of campus life.

COEDS WHO complete the course are eligible for positions in WSG, NSA, campus and foreign student guides, student court and other related fields.

Times of classes will be announced at Wednesday's meeting.

Red Cross Course Offered Students

A first aid course, sponsored by the Red Cross, will be available to all Syracuse university students who wish to take it. It will begin at 7 p.m. Tuesday in room 112 of the Women's building.

Conducting the seven week program is Barney Meltzer, head of the first aid program in Syracuse. Students who take the 18 hour course and pass it successfully will receive certificates from the Red Cross.

Chancellor Opens Bowling Season

Professors Organize Intramural Teams

Chancellor William P. Tolley rolled the first ball last night, starting the first faculty bowling game of the year.

The professors have been organized into 12 teams which will meet at 7 and 9 p.m. Recreation will continue until 11:30 p.m.

The alleys will be open for practice bowling for the rest of the week. Intramural bowling will begin on Oct. 2.

The Women's building will be officially dedicated Sunday, Nov. 15 as hundreds of Hill alumni return for Colgate Weekend and Homecoming festivities. The construction of the building was financed through contributions of women alumnae over a period of 40 years.

ROTC Will Drill In Thornden Park

Air force ROTC will be held at 12:05 p.m. today in the Thornden park football field.

Army ROTC will drill at noon in two groups on Hendricks field, freshmen marching separately.

Harold De Augustine has been appointed regimental sergeant-major of army ROTC. Cadet first sergeants are John Bright, Richard Curran, John Fowler, James Franklin, Nicholas Grzymkowski, Fred Priore, Gerald Shira and Richard Wolff. Uniforms will be worn.

Hu Harshbarger Fans To Attend Benefit Ball

Friends and fans of Hu Harshbarger will gather tonight in the dance studio of the Women's building for a benefit caper to help pay the former football player's hospital expenses.

Harshbarger, whose leg was amputated this summer as a result of a motorcycle accident, is now in St. Mary's hospital at Huntington, W. Va., a few miles from his home in Barbersville.

A JUNE GRADUATE, Hu was a tackle with the Orange varsity squad. Noting high medical expenses for the former player, a group of students led by Richard Beyer formulated plans for the dance.

Scheduled from 8:30 to 11:30 p.m. today, the dance will be completely for the Harshbarger fund. All entertainment will be supplied by members of the team and money from sale of refreshments will go for hospital expenses also.

Ttickets are available in the women's student government office and from Miss Margaret Parker, dean of women's office.

According to Beyer, all hill fraternities but one have purchased patron's tickets which are being sold at $5. These tickets entitle the holders to have their names printed in the program.

Forty brothers of Zeta Psi fraternity, 100 per cent membership, have bought tickets to the dance and Beyer has reported that all members of Nu Gamma Phi, physical education honorary, hold ducats for the affair.

THE DANCE chairman also stated that probably most hill sororities have purchased patron's tickets.

Dr. Straus to Talk On Drinking Today

Dr. Robert Straus, of the College of medicine faculty, will speak at 4:15 p.m. today in 110 Maxwell on "Drinking—the Customs and the Problems."

Dr. Straus, formerly of Yale university, is the co-author of "Drinking in College," a survey of the attitudes of men and women in 27 American colleges toward alcohol. It was published this year.

At Yale he served for six years as a sociologist with the Yale Center of Alcohol studies. He is also the author of "Medical Care for Seamen" and "Alcoholism and Social Responsibility."

Last year he was administrative head of the Connecticut Child Study and Treatment home.

Piskor to Speak To Training Class

Dean Frank P. Piskor will speak to the Chapel training class at 7:15 p.m. today in the Chapel lounge on "The Place of Hendricks Chapel at Syracuse University."

He will explain where the Chapel fits into the administration program and tell how the faculty regards Chapel as an activity.

The proposed interfaith building will also be discussed.

This is the fourth session of the training program designed to acquaint future Chapel leaders with its organization and scope.

Dr. Cruickshank To Speak in West

Dr. William M. Cruickshank, director of special education here, will leave tomorrow for a series of speaking engagements in the midwest and west.

He will travel through Nebraska, Oregon, and Iowa speaking on child education. His topics will be on exceptional children and general education, the problems of education of retarded children and gifted children, the blind child in the regular classroom, and mental health and the exceptional child.

JMA EXAM

Seniors and graduate students who are interested in federal government positions may secure applications for the junior management assistant program examination in 212 Maxwell.

ON Representatives To Meet Tonight At Pi Phi House

Onondagan representatives from all living centers will meet at 7:30 p.m. today at the Pi Beta Phi house, 210 Walnut pl., Charlene Velon, ON business manager stated yesterday.

Any independent house, fraternity or sorority who has not yet elected its representative must do so today, she emphasized.

ON REPS collect the down-payments for the yearbook and return the money to the ON office. They must receive at least 1,500 subscriptions by Nov. 7 or the annual cannot be published.

The decision on the number of minimum subscriptions was made by the board of publications last Wednesday. Board members decided that the 1954 yearbook could be printed only if 1,500 students guaranteed their financial support.

House representatives and Onondagan staffers now have twelve days remaining in which to receive the necessary pledges and downpayments.

The ON crisis came about last month when it was revealed that the Administration would no longer require seniors to purchase a book. In the past three-fourths of the students buying the book were seniors.

THREE POLLS were conducted by the Onondagan to determine student support. The poll at registration netted 500 Syracusans willing to support a '54 book. A later poll in The Daily Orange and a house-to-house canvass brought the total to more than 1,000.

Since the majority of male students had not been reached, Thomas Beckett, ON editor, felt confident that the total number of students interested in the book could be raised to the needed minimum.

Pledges Kidnap Male Cheerleader

Five Sigma Chi pledges turned the tables on Dick Bancroft, one of their senior members, Saturday night when they kidnapped him and took him for an all-night ride to the Seawain golf course in Hewitt, Long Island.

The pranksters, headed by Peter DeMayo, said they spirited Dick away from the fraternity house about 11 p.m., just before he was scheduled to appear at Hancock Field to lead a pep rally in honor of the returning Orange gridders. From there they took Dick for an all night ride ending up at 6 a.m. Sunday on the Long Island golf course. There Dick was stranded in a cheer-leading sweater and grey flannel trousers with no money in the pockets.

LUCKILY, DICK'S grandmother lives near Hewitt, and he telephoned her to explain his plight. "Gram" saved the day by treating him to a good breakfast and buying him a plane ticket to Syracuse.

Aiding DeMayo in the joke were Richard Booth, Albert Harding, Dick Anderson, and Don Stewart.

Campus Greenhouse Site of Plant Research

By JOHN JOHNSRUD

Who, outside of students of botany and plant science courses, have more than a vague remembrance of a greenhouse on the campus?

Next to Slocum along the entrance road is such a building. It is the home of unusual plants and trees and is the site of several research projects.

ORCHIDS, A LEMON tree, pineapple and banana plants, a fig tree, date and fan palms, and an insect-eating venus fly trap ar among the many varieties of plant life found in the campus greenhouse, along with the more well known rubber, century, and poinsetta plants.

A study in soil fertility is one of the experimental projects being done in the greenhouse. Its object is to determine any increase or decrease in soil capacity resulting from the farming practice of plowing under the grass cover.

In one of the tables holding soil, four separated rows of the same soil are set up. In each of the rows rye seeds were planted and at the end of the first week of growth each row was plowed under.

The first row was then replanted with the second to be reseeded at the end of the second week and the third row at the end of the fourth week. Then after each have had a week's growing time, they will again be plowed under and the whole process repeated.

THIS RESEARCH is being done in connection with the plant physiology course. This same investigation has been carried on in previous years. The results then showed that the row having the most frequent turning under of grass will have the worst production.

The amount of water used by a plant in its growth is the subject of another study. In this experiment, plants grown in closed containers with a fixed amount of water added, are measured after a certain length of time to show how much water was used by the plants in its growth.

Another investigation involves Indian corn and how it is affected when grown in soil left unused for a year.

The greenhouse is more than just a home for plants and trees. It also houses useful plant research and experimentation.

Korea Ambassador To Speak Friday

Dr. You Chan Yang To Open Convo

Dr. You Chan Yang, Korean ambassador to the United States, will speak at 8 p.m. Friday, in Maxwell auditorium to open a two-day conference on Eastern Asia.

The annual event is sponsored jointly by Colgate, Cornell and Syracuse universities.

A GRADUATE of Boston university's medical school, Dr. Yang practiced medicine for 30 years in Honolulu before his appointment as ambassador in March, 1951.

Vice-president of the Pan-Pacific union and honorary chairman of American Relief for Korea, he holds membership in the American Medical association, Territorial and Honolulu medical socities, and Academy of General Practictioners.

Two sessions of the conference will be held Saturday at 9 a.m. in Maxwell, one on "Asiatic Content Material for Secondary School Social Studies," and the other on "Current Developments in Eastern Asia.

Dean Paul H. Appleby of the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship will be the speaker at the luncheon in Sims dining hall.

Alpha Kappa Delta Schedules Rushing

Alpha Kappa Delta, national sociology honorary society, will have informal rushing at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the founder's room of Maxwell.

Requirements include:

1. 2. grade average
2. 12 complete hours of sociology with B average for sociology majors only. (Soc. 1a and 1b excepted)
3. 15 complete hours for non-majors
4. Transfer student grades will be accepted in tact.

Court Will Convene To Debate Injunction

By ED HARDY
Daily Orange Junior Editor

Freshman elections have been postponed until the joint student court can determine the status of Piety Hill Alliance.

The delay in the date of balloting, scheduled for tomorrow, was declared yesterday by the government elections commission following weekend developments in which:

1. The Piety Hill party was suspended for four months by the student government protest board Friday in support of charges by Tri-O and United Students parties that PHA had campaigned before the official opening date.
2. PHA subsequently went to Winona Brierley, chief justice of the joint student court and obtained an injunction to override the protest board's decision until the court could convene to consider the case;
3. The legality of the injunction was questioned by the judicial commissioner of the men's court.

THE 12-MAN court is expected to meet tomorrow evening to consider the legality of the injunction and then decide if the protest board acted illegally in making its decision Friday.

Mary Ann Dalton, president of women's student government and Stephen Reiss, chief of civil service of men's student government, said last night that the freshman election would probably be held Friday or Monday.

PHA Chairman Larry O'Sullivan asked Miss Brierley for the injunction Saturday on charges that one of the members of the protest board had contacted the co-chairman of Tri-O about alleged violations of campaigning by PHA and urged him to file a protest.

Piety Hill also told Miss Brierley that it felt the penalty called for was "unprecedented" and there was no adequate proof presented by the board in affixing responsibility for the alleged infractions against the party.

THE STUDENT court justice granted the injunction, reinstating PHA as a political party able to campaign until the court meets to review the case.

Jerome Rudolph, judicial commissioner of the men's student court yesterday, however, challenged Miss Brierley's right to grant the order.

He said the appeal was made to the chief justice of the court, who has no power in such a case to grant an injunction and there was no written fact presented as evidence by PHA to support its charges agains the protest board.

Civil Service Chief Reiss said Rudolph questioned her right "in order to try to establish a precedent so that the protest board's decision couldn't be appealed in the future."

Miss Brierley said that the court would rule on the case against the protest board even if it is decided that the injunction is invalid.

Seven men and five women make up the court. There are, however, only ten votes among the group.

First Aid Classes Will Begin Today

Intramural Department Sponsors Session

The intramural department of Syracuse university is sponsoring a series of first aid courses, beginning with the standard first aid course. The first session will be held at 7 p.m. today in 112 Women's building.

The 18-hour course, which will be completed in seven sessions, will be taught by Barney Meltzer, chief of first aid instruction in the Syracuse area. Later classes will be taught in 209 Women's building.

The program will be an adjunct to the proposed civil defense program on the Hill. The course is compulsory for ski patrolmen, ski instructors, counselors in many summer camps, and civil defense personnel. Many business firms are requiring engineers to take the course. If it is taken now, Meltzer said, it will fulfill requirements.

Any person holding a standard first aid card that is more than two years old must renew the card by taking the revised course. In the new course, changes are made in the method of treatment of aliments like frostbite, application of tourniquets and artificifial respiration.

This series of courses will be continued with the advanced first aid course and mid-winter supplement.

Coeds Injured In Car Mishap

Three Syracuse university women studying nursing suffered minor injuries Friday when their car plunged down an enbankment and turned over on the thruway near Montezuma Friday evening.

The women were identified as Shirley Stratton of Schenectady, Rhoda Sung of Syracuse and Mary Jane Shearer of Chittenango. They were treated by a Port Byron physician.

According to the sheriff's report, the car was headed west on the thruway about 7 p.m. The driver failed to see an unlighted barricade at the route 90 intersection and the car plunged over a seven foot drop.

Psych Honorary Seeks Members

Applications are now being accepted for membership in Psi Chi, national psychology honorary. Any student is eligible who has completeed twelve hours of psychology and is now taking six more. He must have maintained a 1.8 acrage in his psychology courses. cumulative average and a 2.0 ave-

Application blanks may be obtained at the Psych center, 123 College pl. and must be returned by Friday, Oct. 30.

Brown to Address Citizenship Classes

Dr. Stuart Gerry Brown will lecture on "Classics,—What Use in Practice?" to citizenship 1a students at 11 a.m. and 2:45 p.m. today in Marshall auditorium.

The program for the remainder of the semester is: "Laws in the Government of Men," by Spencer Parratt of the political science department; "Men in a Government of Law," and "Middle Sized Loyalty," by T. V. Smith of the citizenship and philosophy departments; and "Loyalty in Public Service," by Dr. Frederick Krinsky of the citizenship department.

Other topics and their speakers will be: "Protecting the Right of the Individual," by dean of the law college Ralph Kharas; "Freedom of the Press," by J. R. Wiggins, managing editor of the Washington Post; and "Structure of Parties," by Dr. A. H. Cope of the citizenship department.

Sophs to Arrange Weekend Dates

All students interested in dates for Colgate weekend and the Soph Hop should leave the following information at the Kappa Alpha Theta house, not later than tomorrow with name, Syracuse address, phone number, your height and type of date preferred.

Norm Hutton and Candy Strothman, co-chairman of Date Bureau, will try and match you with a boy from either Colgate or Syracuse.

All those sophomores interested in working on the date bureau committee should look for the announcement in the Daily Orange soon.

Hill Males to Choose MSG Assembly Reps

For the first time in history, the men's student government assembly will be chosen in campus-wide ballotting as Hill males go to the polls tomorrow.

Names of only 31 candidates for the 36-man assembly will be on the ballots, however. They will compete for a total of 22 seats.

FIVE MEN ARE already in the legislature because of lack of competition in their classifications. Class assemblies will name the remaning nine assemblymen.

Voting booths will be open from 9 a.m. to 4::30 p.m. on the first floor of the Hall of Languages, in the Maxwell lobby and outside the Main library. Booths at Sims and Washington Arms dormitories will be open from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 5 to 7 p.m.

Identification cards will be required from all voters, Stephen Reiss, chief of civil service, said. Civil service will administrate the election.

The year listed on the ID card will determine the class the vote may be cast in, according to Reiss.

CANDIDATES WHOSE names will appear on ballots are:

Senior class—Fraternity: William Levine, Edwin Hochberg, Karl Katcher, Eugene Sandler, City: Joseph Rizzo, Alan Kosoff, Carmen Malagisi, Robert Garver.

Junior class—Fraternity:: Paul Frahm, Lloyd Dunsker, Jack Hen-

Coeds Must Get Late Permissions

Women students who will attend the Hu Harshbarger benefit dance this evening must bring their tickets to the women's student government office during regular hours for a blanket permission.

WSG office hours are noon to 1 p.m. and 4-5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Women who do not get blanket permissions must use a pink special 12 permission for the dance.

ID CARDS

Any student who has lost his identification card must contact Elizabeth Brydon at 75-4191 or Stephen Reiss at 72-5055 for an appointment for a new picture.

There are no more photographic facilities on the Hill, so any student wishing a picture taken will have to make an appointment through Miss Brydon or Reiss with a downtown photographer.

Key to Pick Colgate Queen

It's Colgate queen time again. The prettiest coeds on the Hill will compete for that coveted title in the annual contest under the sponsorship of Orange Key, junior men's honorary.

APPLICATIONS WILL be accepted from all women on campus until next Monday, Gilbert Katz and Marven Wallen, co-chairmen of Colgate weekend, have announced.

Entry blanks printed in the Daily Orange should be mailed to Katz at Tau Delta Phi, 747 Comstock ave., or Wallen at Phi Epsilon Pi, 423 Euclid ave. Applications should include name, address, living center or sorority, class, phone number and home town.

Entry fee is $1 from each contestant. There is no limit to the number of applications from one house, the co-chairmen said.

The Colgate queen will be chosen from among the five finalists at a Daily Orange fan's forum the week before Colgate weekend, which this year is Nov. 13-15. She will be introduced at the Friday night pep rally and take part in the halftime ceremonies at the Political field day

Campus politicians had a "field day" this past weekend. Charges and countercharges were hurled from the respective sides with the bewildered frosh class caught in the middle.

The initial result of the entire affair is the postponement of the freshmen elections. Candidates, who for the most part are unaware of the purposes or consequences of the parties' manipulations have been given several more days in which to campaign—several more days in which to explain the intricacies of a labyrinth with which they themselves are unfamiliar to a group even less prepared to understand them.

In an effort to explain why the elections have been delayed, it is necessary to review the facts which took place since last Thursday.

Thursday night the United Students Party and the Tri-Orange party filed a protest with civil service to the effect that the Piety Hill Alliance had started campaigning before the legal date. They also charged that a poster was illegally placed in a campus building.

A protest board, consisting of the chief of MSG civil service, a senior commissioner in charge of elections, the WSG president and the MSG elections commissioner, met on Friday to hear the case.

The PHA representative did not deny that the posters in question had been placed on campus before Wednesday. However, he claimed that a civil service officer had told him that campaigning was to start on Tuesday. The PHA rep also stated that it was not a member of his party who had placed the poster in the campus building.

The protest board, after hearing the evidence on both sides, went into a closed session to decide the verdict. PHA was eventually judged guilty in reference to two of the posters put out before Wednesday. The party was also found guilty of placing the poster in the building.

On Saturday, PHA officials went to the chief justice of the joint court and asked for an appeal and an injunction against the action of the protest board. They did so on grounds that one of the members of the board had acted "in bad faith." They claimed that this member had contacted the Tri-O chairman and had urged him to file a protest.

Yesterday, the judicial commissioner of civil service, issued a statement requesting that the injunction be revoked. He questioned the legal right of the chief justice alone to grant an injunction in this type of case. The commissioner also claimed that the appeal was based on an allegation without written facts.

The joint student court will meet tomorrow, therefore, to decide two things:

1. Did the chief justice have the right to issue the injunction? and

2. Does the appeal state sufficient evidence to merit the setting aside of the protest board ruling?

The second point of the trial will be decided no matter what verdict is rendered concerning the injunction. Ruling on the first point is only to insure that for the future there is on record a statement concerning the type of case which could permit an injunction.

If the court decides that the board violated procedure, the decision will be set aside. Either the court will hear the original case again, or, citing this as an example where it does not have original jurisdiction, send the case back to a differently composed protest board for re-examination.

The possibility also exists that the court would uphold the board but ask for a lighter punishment.

The major question then seems to be: Can PHA submit enough evidence to support its charges that one of the board members acted in such bad faith that procedure was violated?

The court will then have to decide whether the member in question had actually contacted the chairman of Tri-O. If this could be proved then the court could rule whether the action of telling a party leader that he had cause to file a protest is "acting in bad faith."

In the meantime, it is very easy to forget the freshmen candidates, whose publicity was the basis for the original protest by Tri-Orange and USP.

The action of two of the PHA houses in putting up campaign posters before Wednesday should not reflect on the integrity of the individual candidates. That is why the candidates were allowed, under the original protest board ruling, to continue on the ballot in an independent status.

The undue publicity surrounding the recent protests, injunctions and counterprotests is unfortunate, especially when the issue to be decided tomorrow does not concern any of the candidates.

We urge, therefore, that every freshman learn all the issues involved in the case before he casts his ballot.

Battle of Bloody Ridge: '...the Only Medic Left'

By FRANK McGUIRE
Editorial Page Writer

"My name's Danny O'Shea. I served with the Ninth Infantry Regiment at the battle of Bloody Ridge in Korea.

I was a medic attached to E company and had to take care of the wounded during the attack. We had started our attack and were moving up under heavy fire when the Chinese caught us in a cross fire and we had to move back to defensive positions.

Some of the boys jumped into the Chinese foxholes that were still occupied. Most of them came out all right but some didn't. After we had established our lines, I counted the wounded and found some missing. I started looking for them and heard some moans out in front of our lines. The Lieutenant gave me some covering fire and I went out into the open to look for the man.

It was getting dark and it took me an hour and a half to get the first one back to our lines. I pulled in three guys using the "Belly drag."

I was the only medic left. All the rest had been killed or wounded.

The next day we attacked the hill again. We were pinned down about half way up and had to hold what we had. One of the boys was hit and I went up front to look after him. He was in a hole and after I put some pressure bandages on him, I told him to get back to our lines while I covered him with rifle fire. He went down the hill and made it to our lines. Just as I put my head up to see if it was clear to go, the Chinese attacked and I was caught between our lines and theirs.

A Chinese fired his burp gun at me from 30 yards away and the bullets hit the side of the foxhole, just over my head, kicking dirt in my face. He started running toward me and I tried to get to a tree about ten feet away.

I had dropped the rifle in the foxhole and before I got to the tree, he fired again and hit me in the leg. Just then our boys with the machine guns opened fire and the Chinese stopped firing at me. I started down the hill on my hands and knees, trying to reach ou rlines. After I got to the bottom of the hill, I passed out and when I woke up, I was behind our lines on a litter."

For the past two years, Danny O'Shea has been in Murphy army hospital in Massachusetts recovering from his wounds. He still has a slight limp from the wounds, though, and was discharged from the Army only three weeks ago, on Sept. 30.

Danny enlisted in the Army in July, 1950 and was sent to the 187th Airborne as a paratrooper in Korea. Then, when that unit was assigned to Japan, he returned to Korea to serve as a medic with the Second Infantry division. It was soon after this reassignment that the above described events took place.

His home is now in Newburgh, New York, he's 23 years old and Fine Arts. While in Syracuse, is studying in the College of Danny lives at Collendale A-4.

As Danny was getting ready to hit the sack, I asked him if he wanted to check the copy in the morning. "No",, he said, "I have to leave at eight and I won't be finished with classes until tomorrow afternoon. Fine Arts is keeping me pretty busy."

It seems that Fine Arts isn't the only thing that has been keeping Danny O'Shea busy.

LETTERARY COMMENT

The Reason Behind The Twirler

Oct. 26, 1953

Editor of Daily Orange
Dear Sir:

It appears to me, also an interested observer of twirling exhibitions, that Messers. Minnucci and Hamilton do not know all the facts. Miss Burg is taking Dottie's place. I think this explains why she gets the disproportionate amount of publicity.

It also appears to me as a band member that Eunice is not in Alta's class as a twirler. Of all the contests in which both girls have appeared, Eunice has failed to outtwirl Alta. (I have not seen Eunice twirl three batons as yet.) There are also more details which need not be mentioned here.

Messers. Minnucci and Hamilton better look behind the scenes before they write letters.

I wonder if there was more behind their letter than just a mere interest in twirling?

Sincerely,
Thomas Nellpowitz

MUSIC AIDS

THE GLEN MILLER LEGEND

By DICK CASE
Daily Orange Columnist

An almost fantastic legend began nearly 49 years ago when a second son was born into the family of Lewis and Mattie Miller of Slarinda, Iowa. It's still continuing today.

It is impossible to measure in dollars, records or even memories the contribution Alton Glenn Miller made to music and to the world in general. We cannot capture its final significance with a dozen applause meters or a million smiles. It remains only that this slight, bespectacled Iowa farm lad rose from the backlands to a position which has, and will continue to, command respect among people devoted to good music.

Glenn Miller came upon the entertainment field as America flexed its muscles after the grey years of the depression. He brought the teenagers and grandmas a special kind of tonic which set them to tapping their feet and dancing once more if they were able.

Through a series of highly successful one-night stands and radio broadcasts, he pushed the once weakling dance band business to unheard-of heights and fostered a group of musicians which would one day branch out to cover a good one-half of the field in 1953.

Perhaps Leonard Feather, writing for "Down Beat" Magazine in 1951, expressed it best when he said of Glenn Miller, "But all over the world, to an extend never before conceivable in the history of popular music, to a degree made possible by the deathless nature of the phonograph record and by the unforgetting loyalty of millions, the Glenn Miller melody has lingered on."

Yes, since his death in 1944, the Miller legend has lingered on. Right after the war, the RCA Victor company began releasing re-pressings of the more famous recordings by the Miller band; on LPs, 45s and finally extended plays.

Last month, RCA announced the release of a "limited edition" LP and extended play album which would seem to be the culmination and final tribute from that company to the Miller memory. The set, which includes numbers from air shows and personal appearances as well as studio-recorded sides, boosts 70 selections, more than half on wax for the first time.

There's "One O'clock Jump", "Ida", "Sun Valley Jump", "American Patrol", and "String of Pearls" to list just a representative few.

All are tangible testimony to the smooth trombone, driving beat and arranging gift that were Glenn Miller's. All exist as the only living remembrance of that fabulous 1929-44 era to be found today.

This fine album, along with "The Glenn Miller Story", due to be released by Hollywood around Christmas, servie to stir up pleasant memories for folks who might have danced or loved to the music of Glenn Miller, And it will be around to serve as an introduction to this fellow for future generations.

The Queen of the Hill

By HELAINE BRAND

(This is the first in an architectural series about campus buildings.)

Sketches by Warren Kimble

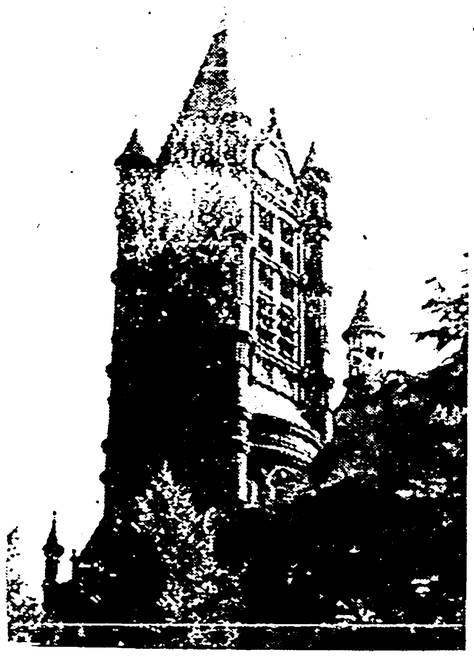
Just who is this regal looking individual, who sits upon her throne-like hill and reigns supreme over the city? Who is this bit of royalty who seems to look down upon all of us with the words, "Defy me if you can!" These and many more are undoubtedly the questions asked as a visitor arriving on Syracuse's campus finds his eyes directed to the leader of the throng—Crouse College.

The cornerstone of Crouse College was laid in 1888 as the third building on campus. The building of this individual was put into the hands of the, at that time prominent architect, Archimedes Russell. He approached the architectural pattern with modern, vigorous ideas desirous of giving this building original decorative detail, but still having to limit his ideas to the material available. Consequently, the finished product, if we were to limit it to one single style of architecture, could most likely be said to follow the Romanesque pattern.

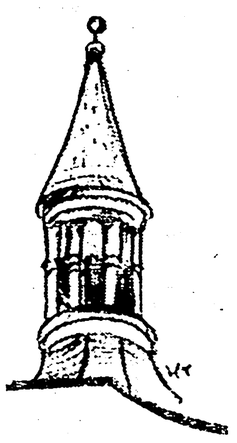
The high roofs, with their many gables, the dormer windows, the round arches which form its southeast entrance way characterize the romantic art of the Medieval, Romanesque style. People of the 19th century seem to possess a love for things of early times and far off lands, as can be observed in this architecture.

The carved designs in the woodwork of the interior follow no particular design, but are largely elaborate patterns conventional of the times. The greatest highlight of the building is the auditorium, which upon entering gives one the feeling of being inside a Medieval Church. It was originally planned that it be a chapel, and the magnificence of its organ, its stained glass windows, artistic woodwork, panelling and intricately created roof can be easily pictured as a background for religious ceremonies. It is designed in such a manner, that its beams, which might be atrributed to Gothic architecture, make it possible for the originality of the roof to be seen in its entirety. Its wooden walls, built in conjunction with the beams, add to the unusual durability of the building.

An invigorating and honest building both in architectural appearance and personality, she is a building which bears no misconceptions. She appears to be stolidly built and is just this. Queen Crouse accepts good naturedly the controversy which exists as to her architectural beauty, but no back talk will she accept as to her prime importance in the city of Syracuse.



The spire that is a landmark for the city of Syracuse. Reaching some 140 feet into the air, the Crouse tower is the home of, (from the first floor), the main entrance, the band office, the chimes console and the bells of the DKE carillon.

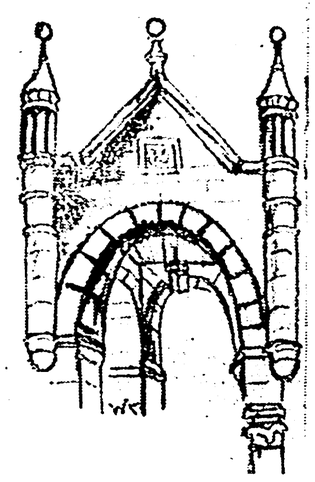


One of the towers that sprout up from the corners of the regal building. The sloping point carries a touch of near east Byzantine.

The Syracuse campus, as a collection of buildings, has been growing on paper and in stone, brick and mortar for the past 75 plus years.

It will be the attempt of this series of articles to explain the basic architecture of the more outstanding buildings on campus in simple terms. In the coming weeks' articles will be written on Hendricks chapel, HL, Carnegie's main library, and the more up to date structures of Shaw and the Lowe Art center.

It is hoped that the articles will present the campus as an example of architectural evolution through the decades rather than a hodge-podge of granite and brick.



The arch and miniature towers of the southeast entrance to Crouse college. The arch is a straight descendent from Rome.

Ballet Named Desire

A modern ballet version of "A Streetcar Named Desire" and "The Nutcracker Suite" will be included in the program presented by the noted Slavenska-Franklin Ballet tomorrow evening in Lincoln auditorium.

The company of fifty performers, headed by Mia Slavenska and Frederic Franklin, includes a symphony orchestra conducted by Otto Frolich.

Sponsored by Civic Morning Musicals, the company will interpert "Concerto Romantico" with music by Franz Liszt, "I Laughed at Spring", music by Donald Gobman, "A Streetcar Named Desire", based on Tennessee William's prize-winning play; and "The Nutcracker Suite" by Tschaikovsky.

The Slavenska-Franklin version of the William's play attracted some 18,000 people to Lewissohn Stadium in New York last summer.

This first event of the Morning Musical's current season is one of the few such full scale ballet productions ond the concert stage.

BETTER THINGS FOR BETTER LIVING ... THROUGH CHEMISTRY

Only $4.50? Fantastic!

Walking away from the ruins of his flying saucer, the tiny creature opened his emergency kit. Peering into it with his middle eye, he beheld a stack of greenbacks, packs of chewing gum, and a sheet of instructions which read: "In this kit you will find everything you need to live as a college student. All college men wear clothes and chew gum. Buy clothes, chew gum constantly...and good luck!"

Scratching his left antenna with his lower left hand, he tore off half of a five dollar bill, popped it into his mouth, and scuttled into a nearby college shop. "Let's see your finest shirt," he squeaked.

The trembling clerk handed him a Van Heusen Oxfordian. "Gleeps, that's really a mimsy!", screeched the little fellow, feeling the luxurious Oxford fabric. "How much is it?"

"Only $4.50," quavered the clerk. "I have them in the smartest new colors...and white to boot. Plus roll collars, button-downs and new short collars."

"Only $4.50? Fantastic!", piped the creature. "I'll take one of each!"

Carefully he counted out twenty sticks of gum and laid them on the counter. "Keep the change," he chortled, putting the shirts under his middle arm. And munching merrily on a crisp ten dollar bill, he waddled out.

Along the Sidelines

By KEN LENT, DAILY ORANGE SPORTS EDITOR

They say that a college as big as Syracuse university isn't capable of maintaining the enthusiastic Joe College phenomena known as school spirit. This lack of the "rah-rah" element, the skeptics say, is evident in the school's football teams when the chips are down. After all, look at the Orange Bowl. Look at last year's Michigan State game.

But last Saturday, the boys from Syracuse proved themselves, both on the gridiron and in the cheerleading section. To an unknowning observer at Hancock field Saturday night, it would have appeared that the home town team had upset Illinois instead of being edged out.

Hundreds of shivering fans cheered their heroes as they stepped from the plane. They roared for the Orange stars of the day, Ted Kukowski, Pat Stark, Neil Brenneman, Bob Leberman and the rest of the Syracuse squad which played the mighty Illini to a standstill for the first three periods.

Coach Ben Schwartzwalder told the crowd, "We did our best." The boys did more than their best. They didn't play over their heads but, rather, showed the brand of football which has been the team's potential since the Temple game.

Neil Brenneman

Saturday's battle was a classic example of the results of overconfidence. Illinois' coach Ray Eliot made the usual perfunctory comments before the game—that Syracuse was a good team, the Illini would be lucky to beat them, etc., etc.

But the Illinois actions and newspaper accounts of pre-game practice didn't agree with the statements. Instead, the reports out of Champaign-Urbana stated that Eliot was resting his first string because he felt he could play his reserves for the "breather" game.

After watching films of the game, this corner is convinced that it was not only Illinois but the officiating which prevented one of the year's biggest upsets. More than once, the officials placed the ball a few yards back of where an Orange ball carrier fell.

On the Orangemen's first extra-point attempt, it looked to us that the Syracuse player who was supposedly guilty of holding, merely stopped his man without the use of his hands. Another time, with the ball on the Illini 28-yard-line, an offside penalty was called on Syracuse after it seemed that an Illinois man jumped before the ball was snapped.

We're not alibiing for the loss but just presenting our version of the officiating after seeing the pictures. The Orangemen may not have won the game, but no one can dispute that the game was a moral victory for Syracuse.

What the coaching staff will have to watch this week is the letdown many teams experience after being "up" for a particular game. There are four more tough games on the schedule with this week's Holy Cross tilt looming as the toughest.

Possibly because of Syracuse's showing and Brown's 6-0 upset win over the Crusaders, our boys will be installed as slight favorites. The coaches know that such odds would be misleading.

After being edged out in the past two series games, Holy Cross would like nothing better than to top Syracuse. Dr. Eddie Anderson's boys are the type of team which rebounds rapidly from shutout defeats such as those which they've experienced from the Quantico Marines and Brown.

After HC, come Cornell, Colgate and Villanova from whom we hope, the Saltine Warriors can take some scalps. However, our feeling toward the Illinois game is, as Winston Churchill once said, "This was their finest hour."

Tonight there is a dance in the Women's gym for Hu Harshbarger, a former Syracuse guard, who lost his leg following a motorcycle accident. The affair is officially listed as a "benefit" to help Hu pay mounting medical expenses.

It's more than that, however. It's a tribute by his fellow teammates and hundreds of fans who watched Hu play his steady unheralded game in four years on the Hill. Congratulations are in order for co-chairmen Dick Beyer and Bruce Yancey, their committee heads, Ray Caldiero's band and everyone who has given his or her free time toward tonight's dance.

We know the students will respond to the dance not because they have to but because they want to. Bill and Betty Orange will have a good time tonight. But the biggest thrill will be the knowledge that they did not forget a fellow Syracusan.

Improved Gridders Practice for Holy Cross Battle

Perkins, Wetzel May See Action In Weekend Tilt

Although the Syracuse football team has only a 2-2-1 record this season, all is sweet wine and honey in the Orange football camp. The surprising showing against Illinois last week plus the news that fullback Bill Wetzel and end Roy Perkins will probably play at Holy Cross this weekend has certainly brightened up the headquarters of the Orange coaching staff.

The titan Piety Hill stopped the much publicized Illini offense for more than three quarters on Saturday, but tired in the final stanza as Illinois eeked out a thrilling 20-13 victory. This was by far the best showing of Syracuse this season and could easily be termed a moral victory for the Orange as the Illini were supposed to wipe up the field with Orange jerseys.

PARTICULARLY outstanding on the Syracuse forward wall were Les McClelland and Bob Fleck, who played the best collegiate game of their careers, opening gigantic holes on the offensive and remaining immovable objects when the Illini tried to move the ball. Augmenting these two was center Ted Kukowski, who played his usual superlative game in his linebacking slot.

In the Orange backfield Pat Stark and Bob Leberman again stood out. Stark was deadly with his passing and would have completed even more than he did if the Orange receivers didn't have occasional attacks of slippery fingeritis.

Leberman again stood in for the injured Wetzel in assuming the workhorse chores of the backfield. In the five games that the Orange have played this year, the left halfback is leading the team in rushing with 357 yards in 65 carries.

The news that Wetzel may return to action in scrimmages this week, and if all goes well, play at Worcester on Saturday against Holy Cross, is most welcome to Coach Ben Schwartzwalder. Besides bolstering the linebacking spot on defense, the burly fullback was the leading ground gainer on last year's Orange team.

IT IS ONLY supposition, but many people feel that with Wetzel in the lineup this year—he cracked his ankle bone in the fourth minute of the opening game with Temple—the Orange would be undefeated now. Both losses have been by the margin of one touchdown.

The object in the Orange camp is to gain victories in the remaining four games. The past two showings, though culminating in losses, have pleased Schwartzwalder and with the return of Wetzel and the possible return of end Ray Perkins who missed the Illini tilt, Syracuse is in its best physical shape since the opening Temple clash.

This top physical shape will be needed when the Orange tackles the Holy Cross Crusaders at Worcester. Undefeated against collegiate competition until this past weekend, when they lost to Brown, 6-0, the charges of Dr. Eddie Anderson haven't beaten the Orange since 1948 and feel that this is the year to break the Orange victory string.

TED KUKOWSKI, Orange center and linebacker, played another fine game in Saturday's 20-13 loss to Illinois. "COOKIE" teamed with BOB FLECK and LES McCLELLAND to throttle the heralded Illini ground attack.

Orange Booters Lose Second Straight Tilt

Coach Andy Coccari is hoping it won't happen again. Last Saturday, for the second straight week, he had one of his first string booters ejected from the game as Syracuse lost a 3-2 decision to Sampson Air Force base.

The ejection of offensive star Bill Nelson in the third quarter may have been the turning point in the contest.

The Orange opened the afternoon's scoring festivities with a goal by Nelson at the 21:22 mark of the first quarter. Syracuse maintained this lead at half time.

After Sampson had built up a 3-1 lead, the Hill booters put on a drive late in the fourth period which almost caught the Sabres. Duncan Robb scored his first goal of the campaign to put the Orange within one tally of Sampson. However, without Nelson, the Piety boys could not quite breach the gap.

Ayers replaced Godayol for the Orange. Godayol had played against Cortland Teachers last week. Moller played the entire 88 minutes of the contest despite a leg injury.

The ejection of Wirth in the third eriod against Cortland State Teachers college and the loss of Nelson last Saturday via similar route may have cost the Orange booters their second straight winning season. Syracuse will have to win all three remaining games to finish on the winning side of the ledger.

FANS' FORUM

Movies of the Illinois game will be shown at Fans' Forum this week. Thursday night has been selected for the film showing and it will be run in Maxwell auditorium. at 7:30.

Frosh Whip Army Gridders, 20-13

Coach Les Dye's freshman grid charges came through in fine style last Friday with a 20-13 win over a tough Army Plebe outfit at West Point. The Tangerines employed a strong running attack, scoring all three touchdowns on the ground.

The Tangerines threw only three passes during the entire game, two of them being completed.

Harriers Lose; Army Next

GDI's Score Fourth Straight Intra Win

Cleveland A Loses First of Season

Skytop M-1 dumped Grover Cleveland A from the undefeated ranks while the GDI's romped to their fourth consecutive victory in an evening of limited activity under the lights of Hendricks field last night. Of the eight remaining contests, six were forfeited.

The artful combination of Jim Wexler and Finn Jensen enabled Skytop M-4 to shut out Collendale A-9, 14-0. Wexler, M-4 fullback, passed for one touchdown and later intercepted a pass, running 35 yards for another score. M-6, playing with only three men for most of the game, was able to hold Cleveland B to a one touchdown win, 12-7. Ken Hobbs and Tony Cipriano starred for the victors.

ELUSIVE RUNNING, good blocking and four interceptions permitted the "Gosh Darn Independents" to blank Livingston by a 20-0 count. Jack Jacobs completed two touchdown tosses to Sig Sieger while Bill Wham tallied on a 15-yard end run.

Cleveland A and Skytop M-1 fought a gruelling battle, the latter finally winning, 12-7. It was the first loss for Cleveland A after having won its first three games.

The rest of the schedule was filled with forfeits. M-1, M-2, Collendale A-4, Plant Science and Seward House thus lost respectively to M-9, M-10, M-7, Steelers and Charles Whitman house. M-3 and M-14 both lost on a double forfeit.

Intra Swimming

Yesterday's Intramural swimming was comparatively limited as neither Psi Upsilon nor Tau Delta Phi showed up for the first meet. The result was a double forfeit. Phi Kappa Psi took firsts in every event to record an easy victory over Phi Epsilon Pi, 19-2. The final contest of the afternoon saw the relay team from Zeta Psi come through to score the winning points and edge Delta Tau Delta 22-12.

It took Cornell's cross country team 11 years but the Big Red finally defeated the Hill harriers 24-31 in a dual meet run last Saturday at Ithaca.

Not since 1942 had the Cornell runners been able to top their Piety foes. Saturday, despite a record breaking run by Captain Ray Osterhout, the latest Orange victory string was halted at 11 consecutive dual wins. Osterhout's time was 26.16.

COACH BOB GRIEVE had no excuses to offer for the defeat of his highly favored team. According to the Orange mentor, Osterhout was the only man to run up to his capabilities.

One factor which definitely hurt Syracuse was the illness of Steve Armstrong. The Orange junior was hampered by a touch of the flu which prevented him from running at his best.

This Friday, the Orangemen will journey to West Point to engage Army in a dual meet. It is unlikely that either Armstrong or Les Vielbig will be able to run. Vielbig is still hobbled with a bad leg.

In a freshmen race last Saturday, Cornell defeated Syracuse despite the fact that Bob Milner of Syracuse finished first.

Grieve has indicated that unless some of his varsity boys show some improvement in this week's workouts, they may not make the trip to West Point.

WAA Team Wins Tennis Crown In Intercollegiate Sportsday Play

By JODY CRONAU

Hill Women's Athletic association teams annexed first, second and fourth positions, respectively, in tennis, hockey and golf competition Saturday in the fall sportsday program. Over 100 girls from Cazenovia, Cornell, LeMoyne, St. Lawrence and Syracuse participated.

On the Skytop courts, freshman tennis star Libby Harner won two out of three sets from Mary Ann Raleigh, LeMoyne representative.

After defeating LeMoyne, the Syracuse doubles team of Betty Jane Caplan and Jody Cronau nosed out Cornell 6-3, 2-6, 8-6. Sharing the doubles title with Syracuse was a second Cornell doubles team which trounced Dudie Scherer and Lee Freedman, Hill players.

Cornell copped hockey honors, winning two games and tying one. Second-place Syracuse topped Cazenovia, 3-2, and St. Lawrence, 1-0, and lost to Cornell, 2-0.

The golf tournament, based on best-ball team scores, was held at Tecumseh. Golf teams from St. Lawrence and Cornell tied for first place.

Chapel Reps Meet at Casowasco

By LIZ GODDARD
Daily Orange Junior Editor

More than 100 students and Chapel staff members attended the annual house reps conference at Casowasco this weekend.

The two-day program included an address by Dean Eric Faigle, talks by Dean Charles C. Noble, explanations of Chapel's organization and functions, and a planning session by the representatives.

SPEAKING ON Friday night, the liberal arts dean told representatives that each should carry the light from Chapel to the campus and ultimately to the world.

Education and religion go hand in hand, he said. At Syracuse the religious spirit has kept in step with the academic.

"In all history a community has never existed long without a religious flavor," Dean Faigle declared. "Today those attacking community life attack through those who have religion because that is what they're most afraid of."

Dean Noble explained the horizontal organization of Chapel to the representatives, saying its purpose is to change the climate of the University to increase its moral and spiritual growth.

HE DEFINED house reps as "ambassadors for the total impact of the Hendricks Chapel program."

Later the dean spoke of the problems of negative attitudes such as cynicism and indifference. He urged positive thinking habits by making a new beginning, allowing for steady growth and holding intelligent, rational hope.

Saturday morning's program gave the representative an orientation to the various phases of the Chapel. Chapel board, Protestant council, Jewish student fellowship, were explained and some of their programs cited.

This year teams of four, including a staff member and someone from each of the three major Chapel groups, will be visiting all campus living centers. A demonstration of such a visit, termed "Chapel Insights," was marked to the group for criticism.

DEAN NOBLE and the counselors acted out an impromptu presentation of a typical staff meeting in order to demonstrate fully the workings of Chapel.

Speaking Saturday afternoon, the dean outlined three requisites for good leadership: interest in other people; commitment to a job and spiritual channels.

Prof. Floyd E. Carlson of the College of Forestry and Prof. Raymond Piper of the philosophy department, were also present at the conference. Dr. Piper praised the religious spirit at Casowasco, because it "awakens, energizes and joyifies."

In a planning session under the chairmanship of Marcia Health and James Carr, the representatives voted to hold bi-weekly programs at their meetings to solicit workers for social service projects and to investigate the problem of apathy on campus in relation to all campus activities.

In addition to the regular business of the conference, delegates square danced, sang, toasted marshmellows, popped corn and went hiking and boating. They returned to campus at 8 p.m. Saturday.

ERIC A. FAIGLE, dean of the College of Liberal Arts and the School of Speech and Dramatic Arts, addressed the Chapel reps who attended the fall meeting at Casowasco last weekend. More than 100 students heard Dean Faigle advise them to carry the light from Chapel to the campus and ultimately to the world. Courtesy of Tom Beckett football game in Archbold stadium.

THE GRID queen contest idea originated in 1945, when the fan's forum decided that football, like other activities, should have its queen.

Originally the regents were not chosen for Colgate weekend, but reigned over the pigskin clash that followed the finals of the contest.

First in the line of beauties was Kay Holt, who took the throne at Dartmouth weekend eight years ago. The judges were members of the football team and sponsors were The Daily Orange and E. W. Edwards and Son department store.

Lorna Copp, a blonde, blue-eyed coed, was queen in 1946. Judges managed to withhold her name as winner for more than a week before the Temple game.

TRADITIONS COMMISSION and The Daily Orange sponsored the 1947 competition, won by Marilyn Hughes on Holy Cross weekend.

Cornell weekend, 1948, saw Nancy Hills walk off with top honors. She became the first coed to make the finals two years in a row.

Joan Brown was chosen by by judges in 1949 and presented at the Holy Cross game. Previously the queen's identity had been revealed at the pep rally.

The first queen of Colgate weekend was Flo Esposito in 1950, who topped 96 contestants.

A DARK-HAIRED freshman, Marjorie Hannon, was crowned in 1951.

Last year's queen was Jane Gates of Sigma Kappa. The White Plains coed, now a junior, reaped more laurels when she went to the Orange Bowl on New Year's day as Syracuse football queen, sharing a place of honor with Southern belles.

Deans Association Names Piskor Veep

Frank Piskor, University vice-president and dean of student service, was elected president of the New York State Association of Deans and Guidance personnel at their 27th annual meeting last week in Buffalo.

THE PURPOSE of the organization is to promote better continuation of guidance direction for the individual from junior high throughout senior high school to college.

A clearing house has been set up to facilitate the scheduling of college days in high schools. During these college days representatives from universities throughout the state visit the high schools and familiarize the students with various parts of college life.

In the past these days had over lapped and prevented university officials from attending all the meetings.

The continuation of guidance from junior high school gives the University counselor a better picture of the student and enables him to judge more accurately what he can expect of the student. By comparing high school records with actual results in college, corrections can be made in the system.

During the year the committees appointed at the meeting discuss the problems brought up at the convo and work toward a better co-ordinated system. The scholarship and financial aid committee has scheduled a report next month on a possible solution to increased tuitions throughout the state.

FRANK P. PISKOR, University vice-president, has been elected president of the New York State Association of Deans and Guidance Personnel.

Students Cast Votes Today On 22 MSG Assemblymen

Upperclass and frosh males go to the polls today to elect 22 men for the men's student government assembly.

The campus-wide balloting replaces the former method of delegate selected by houses.

NAMES OF only 31 candidates for the 36-man assembly will appear on ballots. Five men are already in the legislature because of lack of competition in their classifications.

Class assemblies will have to choose the remaining nine assemblymen in the following categories: senior independent, junior independent and city; sophomore and freshman independent.

Voting booths will be open from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. outside of the Hall of Languages, Maxwell and the Main library. Booths at Washington Arms and Sims dining halls will be open from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 5 to 7 p.m.

Identification cards will be required to identify voters. The year listed on the card will determine the class the vote may be cast in, according to civil service, which will administrate the election.

CANDIDATES WHOSE names will appear on ballots are:

Senior class—Fraternity: William Levine, Edwin Hochberg, Karl Katcher, Eugene Sandler, City: Joseph Rizzo, Alan Kosoff, Carmen Malagisi, Robert Garver.

Junior class—Fraternity: Paul Frahm, Lloyd Dunsker, Jack Hennessy, Michael Newcomb, Arthur Kinney, Curtis Ford.

FRESHMAN class—Fraternity: Ronald Sloan, Carl Steinhoff, Ronald Miller, Paul Condon, Edward Cowen and Jeffrey Wenig.

Automatically in the assembly are Henry Einhorn senior independent; Roger Herz junior independent; Philip Sperry and Richard Dolinsky, freshmen indeendents, and Michael Boyd, freshman city student.

Seniors and sophomores will cast up to six votes, with the three highest fraternity candidates and one city student being elected. The two runners-up according to highest number of votes cast in either group will also be elected.

Five votes will be cast in the junior and freshman classes, with the five highest fraternitymen winning.

Four Norwegians Here for Study

Four Norwegian executives are here for a two-week study of corporate budgetary control undeer the auspices of the Foreign Operations administration.

They are: Gunnar Aasberg, vice president and controller of the Union co., Oslo; Olav H. Jansen, assistant professor, Norges Handelshoyskoie co., Bergen; Nils Reinholdt, chief accountant, Norsk Jernverk, Oslo; and Bjarne A. Rektorli, commercial instructor, Trondheim Secondary School of Commerce, Trondheim.

THEY WILL investigate American industry, universities, associations, cost planning, cost accounting and cost control procedures. This includes the study of principles, methods and business management relationships.

A two-week tour of Syracuse industries, beginning Nov. 2 will climax their last week. Following this, they will return to New York to evaluate their observations.

Academic director of the group is Allen B. Dickerman, assistant professor of production management, with Wilbert C. Haseman, assistant professor of accounting, as instructor. Guest consultants are James A. Close, professor of finance; Lauren F. Brush, assistant professor of accounting; Alfred W. Swinyard, associate professor of marketing; and Morris E. Hurley, acting dean of the College of Business Administration.

Sale of Syracusan Begins Here Today

Syracusan, the campus humor magazine goes on sale today "Field Generals" by associate sports editor, Ed Meyer will be one of the features of this month's issue.

This edition will present the second anniversary of "Orange Aids", an article to help the bewildered frosh know the University rules, and how to break them —successfully.

The magazine, with cover by Dick Carroll, will be on sale for $.35 in all main campus buildings as well as on Marshall st. Copies will be mailed free of charge anywhere in the world.

Oct. 30 Deadline For Block Seats At Cornell Tilt

Block seating for the Cornell football game at Ithaca on November 7 must be completed by Friday, Oct. 30. All student tickets must be purchased by Nov. 5 for the game with the Big Red. Student tickets, also good for block seating, sell for $1.80 in the ticket office in Archbold Gymnasium. An ID card and ticket for the game must also be presented to procure student tickets.

Pi Lams Sponsor Shaker Contest

The second annual shaker contest, sponsored by Pi Lambda Phi, is now open. Entries will be accepted at the Pi Lam house, with the deadline set at Nov. 6, 1953.

This year's winner will receive two tickets to the Soph Hop, an orchid corsage from Markowitz, and tickets to Shine's Paramount theater. Also, he will lead the new cheer on the night of the Colgate Pep rally.

Rules of the contest are::

1. The cheer must be adaptable for use with shakers.
2. It must be original.
3. It should have something to do with the theme of "beat Colgate".
4. It must be applicable to the motions of cheer leading.

Robert McAllister, head cheerleader, will judge the entries, and the winning cheer will be announced at the Colgate pep rally.

Placement Convo Slated Tomorrow

The second in a series of three placement convocations will be held at 2:15 p.m. tomorrow in Room 117, Lyman hall.

Liberal arts male seniors, business administration seniors, nontechnical seniors and graduate students are encouraged to attend.

The initial section, held two weeks ago, was well attended by Bus Ad seniors. The purpose, objectives and functions of the placement office, scope and type of available positions and current company listings will be reviewed. Companies are already on campus and some of the "finer points" of the interview process will be discussed.

Even those seniors who have already obtained positions or plan graduate study or the armed forces are requested to participate in the placement program so the office can keep complete records and follow the students' progress.

The third convocation: The art of writing effective letters of application is scheduled for mid-November.

Music Ed Seniors To Fete Teachers

The senior class of the music education department of the College of Fine Arts will sponsor a tea tonight from 4 to 6 p.m. in the Alumni room of the Women's building.

Cooperating teachers from local schools participating in the student-teacher program will be present. Several prominent faculty members of the school of education have also been invited.

Refreshments will be served.

Hill Coed Receives CD Appointment

Betty Whiting, a liberal arts student, has been appointed chief of warden service in the Oneida county civil defense organization, according to Director Harry J. Bird.

Miss Whiting will recruit and train more than 250 persons map the city into warden sections and prepare reports on the civil defense work here.

A resident of Oneida, the new warden chief formerly headed the civil defense block leaders group in Sherrill.

TTK Classes Set To Begin Today

Dr. Bye Will Speak At Maxwell Convo

Syracuse university—its relation to the community, the state and the nation, will be discussed by Dr. Carl Bye at 4 p.m. today in Maxwell auditorium at the initial Through the Keyhole training session.

The course was organized by women's student government to instruct coeds interested in working in government or related fields.

Following the session an informal tea will be held in the Founder's room. Sign-ups for the TTK classes will be conducted at the tea. Coeds may also meet the WSG junior and senior officers.

The training program is primarily designed for sophomore students but upperclassmen are also invited to participate. House presidents have especially been urged to complete the program. Only those freshmen enrolled in the National Students' association can take TTK.

Course instruction will include the traditions of Syracuse, leadership, parliamentary procedure and the functions of various student organizations.

Two projects will be required in order to complete the course.

The first will be based on observations of campus organizations while the second may deal with any campus problem.

Themes of the individual TTK classes will be announced at the meeting today.

Dean M. Eunice Hilton of the College of Home Economics is expected to be guest speaker at the next session.

Times of individual classes will be announced today.

Benevolent Group Plans Final Show

The Benevolent Unit of Syracuse will present its last show of the season next Tuesday at the cerebral palsy clinic on Salt feature four coeds from Syracuse Springs rd. The benefit show will university, according to Charles Mitchell, Public Relations director.

Miss Shirley Christie and Miss Eunice Mallot will present twirling acts. Jane Williams will sing for the show, accompanied by Ellen Chuck.

Mrs. Dottie (Grover) Gabor is the president of the unit. The local organization has been arranging benefit shows for the cerebral palsy clinic for five years.

Practice of Parents Influence Drinking Says Dr. Straus

Hill Sociologist Quotes Statistics Published In Recent Book

Drinking is a custom centered in the family and social group, Dr. Robert Straus told students in the second social hygiene lecture yesterday.

The sociologist quoted statistics from his recent book, "Drinking in College", a survey of the attitudes and habits toward drinking of men and women in 27 American colleges.

Parental advice to abstain is the most effective, with advice from churchmen and teachers taking second and third places, he asserted.

"An outstanding influencing factor on students' drinking habits is the practice of the parents," he said. "The majority of students who drink had their first drinks before they came to college and had their first drinking experiences in private homes, usually their own."

Dr. Straus, who served for six years with the Yale Center of Alcohol Studies, said his personal stand on drinking is that "alcohol contributes nothing to young people that cannot be achieved by other means. But I can see drinking as a custom which can only be changed by a gradual shift in values relating to technical knowledge."

The custom of drinking raises several problems, he said, citing the nation's four million problem or pathological drinkers, drinking and driving, as distinguished from drunken driving, taxation and control, behavior associated with loss of control, and education.

Until recently the only information available has been supplied by two extreme pressure groups—the liquor industry and the temperance unions. "We have not had an organized body of consistent factual material about alcohol," he said.

The Yale survey turned up some significant facts about the drinking habits of college students. Varsity athletes were consistently the highest drinkers and women in all-girl eastern schools were under the greatest pressure to drink heavily.

The factor having the greatest influence is the drinker's companions. Women usually drink in mixed company while 50 per cent of the men drink in all male fellowship.

"There is a double standard in relation to drinking and sex," Dr. Straus pointed out, "and both men and women agree that this standard exists."

"A large number of students believe that drinking and sexual behavior are associated," he added. "This belief may be good in that it raises anxieties and may act as a preventative to excessive drinking."

Carnival Buttons Appear Today For Chest Benefit

By BOB LEFKO
Daily Orange Junior Editor

"Dig That Carnival" promotion buttons will make their first appearance on campus today. The red buttons with yellow script are being sold to help publicize the 4th annual Campus Chest carnival which will be held on the new quad Saturday.

Carnival co-chairmen Inga Loeb and Harold Steinberg have announced the buttons will be priced at 15 cents and sold throughout the university by members of the carnival committee. The buttons which are 2¼ inches in diameter will also be sold at Sims hall from 5 to 6:30 p.m.

NEARLY 60 organizations have already applied for booths for the carnival guaranteeing one of the largest carnivals in history. Booth representatives met last night to draw for locations on the "midway."

Due to the main campus changes, the layout of the carnival will be different from previous years. The booths will be located on the main driveway from Bowne hall to Archbold gym and in the areas between.

The chairmen have announced that Lambda Sigma Sigma, junioh woman's honorary will be in charge of the ticket sales for the carnival. The girls will walk through campus dressed in Bermuda shorts distributing the ducats.

Orange Key, the junior men's honorary has also donated its services to the affair and will be in charge of cleanup. They have announced that the quad will be in perfect condition by Sunday morning.

TICKETS FOR ALL the booths will be priced at 10 cents. No money will be taken in at any booth except for the refreshment stand. All the organizations sponsoring booths in the affair will donate their time and expenses with the entire receipts going to Campus Chest.

Campus Chest is the only fund-soliciting organization on campus and students will be asked to donate money only once this year during Campus Chest week in the second semester.

The carnival will start at 12 noon Saturday and continue until 7 p.m. Chancellor Tolley is scheduled to give the opening address from the library steps if he does not go to Holy Cross for the football game. He will be introduced by Stuart Parker, co-chairman of Campus Chest.

Approximately 2,500 guests are expected to visit the quad for the carnival. In order to aid those in attendance to find the various booths, a map of the layout of the carnival will be published in Friday's Daily Orange.

IN ADDITION to the regular skill tents, there will be an entertainment tent this year sponsored by the Chapel.

Prizes will be awarded to two organizations for the most original booth and the organization that makes the largest profit.

Committee chairmen for the carnical are Lawrence O'Sullivan, layout; Joan Vinicoff and Richard Zallen, booths; Jane Feighley and Howard Page, tickets; Dorothy Bronin, entertainment; and Eileen Brand, Milicent Auerbach and Robert Lefko, publicity.

Also, Melvin Klein and Shirley Citrenbaum, poster publicity; James Roach, trophies; and Juliette Lobsenz, decorations.

Blowing Her Top

"TUMBLING DOWN" action has begun on the rear portion of Machinery hall. The work is being done in preparation for the construction of the proposed engineering buildings. The section being razed formerly housed Air Force ROTC classrooms and supply rooms.

College Alma Maters Derived From Ballad

By ROBERTA STERN

Who had the alma mater first?

Syracusans claim that their school did and Cornellians also claim the fame for the melody's origin. Actually, the tune, used by both Syracuse and Cornell, was adapted from an old English ballad, "Annie Lisle". Archibald Weeks, a Cornell alum, borrowed the tune and wrote words for it. The song later became the Cornell alma mater.

The words of the Syracuse alma mater were added in 1893 by a Syracuse student, Junius W. Stevens, then a junior on the Hill.

Stevens did not mimic Cornell in his selection of a tune for an alma mater. He wrote in 1938, "I just chose an old song that I had always liked."

Stevens, a member of Delta Upsilon, was on his way home from a fraternity meeting one night when he recalled the beautiful scene he had seen shortly before dusk. The sun had highlighted Crouse college in late afternoon and the image remained in Steven's mind.

The recollection gave him the idea for the lyrics of the song that later became the Syracuse alma mater. He had the entire lyrics in his mind by the time he reached home.

Stevens, who later graduated summa cum laude and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, national scholastic honorary, combined the lyrics with the old English tune and called the composition "Song of Syracuse."

Panhel Schedules Special Convocation

Sorority rushees planning to attend formal rushing parties will attend a special convocation at 7 p.m. tonight in the Chapel rather than in the Women's building as previously announced.

Formal parties and the preferential bidding system will be explained at the convocation, and Panhellenic advisors will be present to answer rushees' questions.

Girls who attended sorority costume parties last Sunday are to pick up bids for formal parties from 12 noon to 5:30 p.m. today at the Panhellenic office in the Women's building. All invitations must be answered and returned immediately.

Formal parties will be held from 7:30 to 10:40 p.m. Friday. Next week rushees will receive preferential cards and select two houses which they wish to join.

Slavenska-Franklin Company to Appear

Ballet Group Includes Fifty Dancers

Civic Morning Musicals, Inc. will debut its impressive 1953-54 concert series in Lincoln auditorium this evening with the appearance of the Slavenska-Franklin ballet company.

This full scale ballet production will present a program of classical and modern dance and will feature many international artists of the ballet stage.

THE COMPANY of fifty, which includes a symphonic orchestra conducted by Otto Frolich, is headed by Mia Slavenska and Frederick Franklin, former Ballet-Russe stars.

Featured work of the evening will be the widely-acclaimed dance interpretation of Tennessee Wiliam's "A Streetcar Named Desire." Choreography for this particular number is by Valerie Bettis.

Opening number in the Slavenska-Franklin production will be "Concerto Romantico" with music by Franz Liszt which includes the composer's "Piano Concerto in E Flat Major."

Also listed on the program is "I Laughed at Spring," music by Donald Gohman and "The Nutcracker Suite," music by Tschaikowsky. Several of the numbers will be accompanied by spoken narration.

CIVIC MORNING Musicals is a non-profit organization which is devoted to the cultural interests of central New York. Founded in 1890, the group has brought many of the world's most accomplished artists to this locale during its long history.

Tickets for the five Morning Musicals concerts are available by season subscrition or by individual event at offices in the downtown Clark Music building or at the University Bookstore.

The second event of the series will occur on November 23, with the appearance of the Virtuosi Di Roma.

Chapel Lectures To Start Today

Dean Charles C. Noble will give the introductory talk in the "You and Your Emotions" lecture series at 4 p.m. today in the Chapel colonial room.

The series, designed to cover emotional problems arising from campus living, will include such topics as "Parents and What to do With Them," "Military Service and You," "Should the Atomic Age Scare You?" and "How to Win Grades and Influence Deans."

They are sponsored by the mental hygiene committee of Chapel under the co-chairmanship of Everett Gertner and Beverly Darrow.

The committee also plans to compile a list of sources of counseling on campus.

A discussion period will follow each lecture. Signups for next week's talk on "Frustrations in Campus Living" will be held between 10 a.m. and noon and from 1 to 4 p.m. tomorrow and Friday in the Chapel board room. The group will be limited to 40 persons.

Prince, ATO Pet Dies After Fall

Prince, Alpha Tau Omega's mascot is dead. The blonde cocker spaniel, who belonged to Tilton Wilkes, died last Thursday night.

Following a fall from a car, Prince went lame and gangrene set in. Put out of his misery by a veterinarian, the mascot was cremateed at a formal ceremony attended by the ATO brothers.

THE GOOD OLD DAYS

According to the Daily Orange of Oct. 25, 1906, students could purchase a ham sandwich at the Famous lunch on East Fayette st. for three cents. A small steak cost five cents, while a sirloin steak or pork chops cost a dime.

Placement Office Slates Interviews

Senior interviews are now being conducted in the Placement Office for Women, dean of women's office. Those interested in having assistance in post-graduate plans should make an appointment to see Miss Dorothy Osborn in the Women's building before Thanksgiving vacation.

AS PART OF the new centralization plan for job placement, the service has been taken over for most schools in the University by the dean of women's office.

Senior women in the colleges of Fine Arts, Home Economics, Liberal Arts and Speech and Drama should see Miss Osborn to schedule interviews.

A few schools have maintained placement services under their auspices. Interviews for education majors will be scheduled by the School of Education placement office. Radio and television students should make appointments at the Radio-TV office and majors in advertising and journalism are asked to schedule placement interviews in the journalism office.

During interviews with Miss Osborn or in the specified offices, seniors will receive credentials which are to be completed before Christmas vacation.

THE DEAN'S office and faculty members in the individual colleges are being notified of the procedure so that they will be able to assist students in discussing plans.

Senior women are requested to register in only one place. Job opportunities which apply to women and are received in other placement offices on campus will be referred to them through the dean of women's office.

The Nylon That Rocks the Cannon

The call is out to all coeds who have ripped or used nylons.

Alpha Tau Omega needs them in order to fire its famous cannon at the Colgate game, George Gearn, chief cannoneer, told the Daily Orange yesterday.

In making this plea, ATO officials explained that two or three stockings are needed to load the cannon after each Syracuse touchdown. Cut to proper size, they serve as a porous sack to hold the gun powder. This allows the fuse to feed the nylon bag and set off the charge.

THE CANNON has a long history at Syracuse. At every football game whether at home or away, whenever Syracuse makes a touchdown it is set off.

The brothers who work the cannon will be dressed in spanking new uniforms this year. Made by one of the pledges' parents, they will follow a gay nineties theme. Blue pants and orange jackets with straw hats completing the outfit will make a colorful sight when the team makes a touchdown.

A minor mishap occurred at the house between the Boston and the Temple game. The barrel of the cannon was stolen by some prankster. It was recovered in time for the game.

The president of the fraternity, George Kepner, said that any girl whoh as extra nylons can bring them to 748 Comstock ave. or they will pick up the stockings from anyone who calls the house at 76-6353.

ALMOST READY on the firing line, the ATO's are preparing for the Colgate game in November. DAPHNE (Dee) BURKE has willingly donated a pair of stockings to the fraternity. The stockings hold the gunpowder that makes the explosions after each Hill TD. A Syracuse officer gives a police escort to HAROLD RATCLIFF, who is soliciting stockings for the cause. Staff Photo by Lee Jones

Unnecessary costs: $162

Once upon a time there were four men on the Syracuse campus interested in intra-mural insurance. Since it would only cost 50 cents a semester and in case of accidents would pay all medical services beyond the infirmary service up to $500, these students thought it was a great thing.

So they signed up. But not enough other students followed their example and the offer of insurance was cancelled for the first semester. The University held open the chance for second semester insurance, if enough students could be interested.

But the games had to go on and the men continued to play in the intra-mural football clashes.

The first boy played for Tau Delta Phi one night and jumped for a pass. Hit in mid-air, he fell to the ground striking his head. The ambulance was called and the Syracusan went to the hospital. Cost of services: $12.

The second Hill student played left end for Beta Sigma Rho. While running after the ball-carrier one night, he was blocked by one of the opposing team members. While breaking his fall he also fractured his wrist. There were X-rays, doctor's fees and a cast which had to be paid for. Total cost: about $40.

The third student was a member of the Kappa Phi Delta fraternity. Carrying the ball on a punt receive this Hill gridder ran into another player. A leg muscle was pulled and X-rays had to be taken. Total costs: $10.

The last student in this story was an Acacian left end. During a play the student was hit in the mouth by an elbow. Cost of extraction of four front teeth and replacements: $100.

Total costs involved in this tale: $162.

But the sad part of this story is that it actually happened. Just ask some of the men in the above fraternities about the four students who were interested in intramural insurance.

High cost of education

Education is no longer a luxury.

The so-called "bygone days" when only the wealthy youngsters took the long trip "to the university" are gone. Increasing technical progress, the continual rise in the standard of living and the social emphasis in the United States make an educated citizenry a necessity to our way of life.

Although interference in education by government has been scorned by the laissez-faire element, practical educators seek government aid without putting the government directly into a position of direct control.

We believe that all students are entitled to more public assistance, both by the state governments and by the federal government.

State governments often establish scholarship programs; some go further by setting up their own colleges. Although New York state has several scattered institutions such as the Colleges of Forestry and Medicine here, it has no central educational plant. Hence, it awards part-tuition college scholarships to qualified students.

The federal government aids most universities but it direct aid to individual students is non-existent, except for a few scholarships mostly for foreign study.

The state could do much to lighten the burden of present and prospective college students by increasing their grants both in number and amount of money. The present grant is $350 per year for four years.

It could also encourage colleges to match the awards so that the difference in full tuition is made up. Syracuse university is one of the few institutions that matches the state grant to all scholarship students maintaining C-plus averages.

The federal government could aid education in a much simpler, less costly but even more effective way.

At present, all persons making annual wages of less than $600 per year are exempt from federal income tax payments. Once the persons goes over that mark, his income is taxable—and for single persons, heavily taxable.

The tax law makes no distinction for students. They are either expected to pay their ways through college on $600 a year, seek scholarships or make a larger income and pay extremely high taxes.

The $600 is no longer even enough for tuition in Syracuse and most other schools. Those students whose families cannot afford to aid them financially and those students who do not have scholarship benefits are finding a college education more and more difficult to get.

We do not ask for a handout from Uncle Sam or from New York state. But we do ask that the amount of non-taxable wages allowed per year be raised and that state scholarships be increased.

Most persons agree that education is no longer a luxury for students. Why doesn't government realize that?

Large & Small Approach

By DON HENRY

"Big" Jim George, height 5 feet 5½ inches, weight 116, and "little" Jim George, height 6 feet, 2 inches, weight 225, are literally a pair of crazy, mixed-up college kids.

The "big" one with the little dimensions is James Bailey George of Binghamton, N. Y., a sophomore who runs on the varsity cross country and track teams. The "little" one with the big dimensions is James Eugene George of Smithfield, Ohio, a senior member of the varsity football and track teams.

Confused? You should have it so bad. Last year, Little Dimensions went up to the scholarship desk during fall registration and asked for his (track) scholarship receipts. The teller said that Jim George had already picked up his scholarship. After several long explanations to the scholarship committee, the whole affair was straightened out. This year Big Dimensions had the same difficulty.

"Little" and "big" spent a hectic first semester last year trying to out-do the other in acts of trickery. It seems that the folks down Binghamton way were raving over the fact that "big" Jim was kicking extra points for the Orange Bowl-bound Syracuse football team. When he went home for Christmas, the cross-country runner said nothing in contradiction of all the praise he received.

When "little" Jim got word of this, he decided to get back at his "twin." The opportunity came a short while later when the postman out at Collendale handed him a special delivery letter for "Jim George." It contained a $5 check. Soon after this, the similarly-named pair agreed to return to each other his rightful belongings and reputation.

During the cold weather last year, Little Dimensions went to put on his overcoat, which had just come back from the dry cleaners, only to find that it swamped him. He had received Big Dimensions coat, a size 46. The Binghamtonian wears a size 36 coat.

Cross country coach Bob Grieve couldn't outfit his protege this year with x-country shoes because the little runner wears a size 6 shoe. So, "big" Jim wears track shoes instead. "Little" Jim, in the spirit of true cooperation, offered his counterpart a pair of his own shoes. The Ohio giant's foot measures to a size 12.

This can't go on forever though, because "little" Jim George graduates this year. But we wouldn't be at all surprised to see Big Dimensions competing in the two-mile run this spring at Archbold and Little Dimensions trying to heave the six-pound discus.

LETTERARY COMMENT

For Chivalry: Sick & Tired Of It All

October 27, 1953

To the Editor of The Daily Orange:

I wold like to agree with Flip Sirota on the subject of chivalry gentlemanly conduct around, on the campus. There isn't much and I think there should be less.

I am sick and tired of hearing and seeing women exploit their sex to get what they want. If they want to be treated like the gentle sex, they should act in that manner.

I've heard some women use language that a Marine would not use under ether, this campus is no exception. When an innocent remark was made in the dining hall last week by a friend of mine, two girls took it the wrong way, and broke out laughing. Then decided it wasn't ladylike and worked up a blush.

In past years, women campaigned for the right to vote and got it. They also got the right to sit at a bar and drink, serve in the Armed Forces, and take over men's jobs in a large part of industry. This isn't what gripes me; it's the fact that when they don't want something, then they are "The Weaker Sex".

I've had women give me dirty looks when I didn't offer them my seat on the subway. I had been working all day; what were they doing? Shopping downtown with hubby's half of the joint account.

Certainly some men charge down the stairs between classes, and why not? If they waited for the girls to move along, they'd never get to class at all.

The girls stand in the middle of a busy hall and cat . . . I mean chat about what Suzie wore last night.

Some have their noses so high in the air, that the clouds have scraped the skin off.

They scream and shout for the same priveleges as men, but when it isn't to their advantage, then comes the cry of "Weaker Sex". To hell with the weaker sex.

Chivalry certainly is dead, it should have been shot years ago.

My name is none of your business.

TRI-O

An Evening at the Theatre

30—Girls—30 at Astor Gypsy Rose Lee & Co.

By JOAN NADELHAFT
Daily Orange Drama Critic

We're not exactly sure whether Clare Booth Luce meant "The Women" as a paean of praise or the last damning word to her sex, but we do know that she showed the worst of the boudoir brigade.

The characters play around with the lives of their friends for the momentary thrill of the latest tidbit. They live from item to item, and scandal is their bread.

The plot works on the "lamb in the forest" theory, or What Does an Honest Woman do among Her Fellow Tigers? She joins them. Or in the words of the closing line, "You're just as much a cat as we are!"

Gypsy Rose Lee dominated the stage every time she walked onto it by her height, her costumes and most of all her personality. She was herself to the teeth and once she got going, reveled in it.

Several of the other characters stood out from the largest cast yet assembled on the Astor stage this season. The minor authoress was sharply delineated by Helen Murphy; the main story character, cooly done by Rosemary Murphy, was an area of calm in the frenzied chatter of the play.

The ever-pregnant friend, Ethel Britton, was great, with a New York accent that out-did Shirley Booth. And Beth Elliot as an aside to the plot rounded out the best of the cast.

Special mention should also be made to Viola Roche, Margaret O'Neill, Rosalynd Avery and Catherine Doucet for fine performances.

We have saved Barbara Atkins for last, because while she did not outdo the stars, she did turn in an excellent performance as a bewildered little girl, very hurt by her mother's strange behavior.

Bouquets also to June Havoc who directed the opus and did a terrific job with only two theater rehearsals. The staging did a lot to speed the play, overcoming the big problem of running 12 scenes in quick succession.

The pacing was good, and the overall effect of 30 women jabbering at top speed gave tone to the play in keeping with Mrs. Luce's intentions. The title speaks well for it—"The Women."

And in this case the play is definitely the thing and will continue to be so all week.

HITCHCOCK PLOT IN PREFAB

By MARIA HEITZ

To the casual passer-by the sounds that issue from the basement of Crouse and prefab 2 directly behind the fine arts building suggests that this conglomeration of discord could easily make up the musical score of the latest Alfred Hitchcock thriller.

What goes on inside is quite obvious. The 17 rooms in prefab 2 and the 18 newly installed quarters in the basement of Crouse comprise the practice quarters of music majors.

Taking a survey of what goes on in these rooms can lead you into just about every field of music and entertainment. The sounds of someone trying out new dance steps, the chords of an organ and the lyrics of an aspiring tenor are mingled with the notes of innumerable horn instruments.

The first thing that came to my mind was "how on earth do these people concentrate on what they're doing with all the sounds that go on around them." The answer from one of the inhabitants of the prefab was, "It's simply a matter of concentration, after a while I don't even hear what the others are doing."

I suppose it's a matter of concentration or a matter of perhaps endangering one's sanity.

Whereas the 18 practice rooms in Crouse which were built during the summer are almost entirely sound-proofed, the walls of prefab 2 are like the walls of any other prefab—about as protective against sound as a blotter. Speaking of the prefab walls, the University saw fit to paint them anew over the summer, erasing all inscriptions and sketches which former scriveners and artists left to posterity.

One of the opinions of a piano major was that the rooms in Crouse were a little too sound-proof. "Not only can't you hear anyone else, you can barely hear what you yourself are doing." Strangely enough this individual prefers to pound the piano in the prefab.

Students who wish to engage one of these practice rooms for the usual time of an hour a day, six days a week sign up at the beginning of the semester for a certain time. The fee for the use of these rooms is $5.00 a semester.

Within the small space that they rent they are maestro of their chosen instrument or of their vocal cords. They are a select but closely knit colony of aspiring artists and amid the chaos of sound that issues from their practice quarters come the melodic trains of a hopeful future in music.

BACK TO THE SALT MINES

That Word Again:

By ROGER J. HERZ

The time isn't far distant.

We'll all wake up too late to get to the 8 o'clock class and go back to sleep. Skip the rest of the day's classes. Same with the rest of the week and the month.

Vines of ivy will crawl over everyone and everything. Varicolored fungi will settle upon the top layer of University society. Complete stagnation.

After a few months, someone will get up and go home. Others will follow. Finis, a noble experiment; that of education.

Reason for the pessimism? That word again.

Student life on the Syracuse campus, and we hear tell on other campuses, is slowing down and nearing a peaceful death. Remember ISA, Independent Students association? It died last year. Take a look at Men's Student Government assembly: unless as a collective we act in some manner, that noble body is doomed.

We take a dismal view of the percentage of students who will vote in today's elections. It's easy to vote—just a punch of the ID card, a secret ballot and we've fulfilled a responsibility.

But our guess is that we'll have a small vote. Too much trouble. And after all, what does one vote count?

And so we fade. The administration will take over in fields we can't handle, because we don't care.

This has become in our own eyes a serious situation. There's more to college than MWF 8, 9, 10 and TTS 11. There's more to education than lectures and reading.

Education must be applied. Student government isn't just a ridiculous parody on other governments; The Daily Orange isn't fantastically different from metropolitan dailies. The campus environment offers opportunities for practice and for real accomplishment.

The problem, that word again, grows. Before individuals will reach the point at which they'll shriek out in poli sci class, grab a smoking, flaming torch and rush out into the street to ACT in logical manner, the problems must be studied.

It is an idle thought that students should be compelled to participate in activities in which they have no interest. No solution lies in such action.

Last Saturday at the Chapel Reps' Casowasco conference, a group was formed to study the problem of that word again. Why is there lack of interest? How may it be combatted? Perhaps it's a question of communication.

The research group isn't a closed one. The problem affects all. Any and all able to shake off lethargy are welcome to participate. Not next week or 1958, but NOW!

Or will it be that word again: apathy.

SIGHTS ON SYRACUSE

'White Bucks' Sequel

By MILT SHEFTER

Musical Notes: Lan O'Kun and Bill Angelos, collaborators on "White Bucks and Tales" music have turned their talents away from the proposed disc from the Big Chum-Little Chum show. The word is you can watch for a new series of pop vocals featuring Peters, Gresinger and other Hill talent. All music and lyrics original, of course, in the special Ok-An style.

* * * * *

Goon Swoon: Success, preceded by the most demonstrative adjectives you can think of, is the only way to describe the Jiminy Cricket ball sponsored by the two-headed ones. The parent Tradition Commission was very enthused about the whole idea since it had not been done before. This probably will become an annual affair, and there's a loud "amen" from this corner if they keep picking queens like Miss Barbara Feick. She must have been the inspiration for the pawnshop song in Pittsburgh.

* * * * *

Schatzi, Come Home: The kidnapped star of Mr. Roberts has still not been returned. A false alarm at the SPCA temporarily lifted the hopes of her owners, but she is still sadly missed by her pint-sized stockholders. The Astor theater reports goats of all descriptions answering the alarm, but the original is still "on the town." All info will be appreciated at the Astor—phone 2-0791. Where, oh where can my little GOAT be . . . .

And now if you'll excuse us, we must get over to the local sawbones. Seems we didn't get out of the way when the Chancellor threw that first bowling ball.

ELECTRICAL ENGINEERS and PHYSICISTS

HUGHES RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT LABORATORIES last year added to their Staff 75 graduates in Electrical Engineering and Physics from colleges and universities throughout the country.

In addition, more than 90 other graduates joined the Hughes organization for continued opportunities in their fields through the HUGHES COOPERATIVE FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM FOR MASTER OF SCIENCE DEGREES. This is a continuing plan to assist outstanding graduates in obtaining their Master of Science Degrees while employed in industry and making significant contributions to important military work.

Hughes, one of the nation's leading advanced electronics organizations, is located in Southern California. College and university graduates who qualify work in the following divisions at Hughes:

RADAR LABORATORY
GUIDED MISSILE LABORATORY
ADVANCED ELECTRONICS LABORATORY
ELECTRON TUBE LABORATORY
MICROWAVE LABORATORY
SEMICONDUCTOR DEVICES
FIELD ENGINEERING

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT personnel work with Radar Systems, Servomechanisms, Computers, Systems Analysis, Information Theory, Automatic Controls, Physical Analysis, Microwave Tubes, Pulse Circuitry, Semiconductor Physics, Diodes, Transistors, Photo Devices, Test Equipment Design, Miniaturization, Electromechanical Design, Gyros, Hydraulics, Subminiaturization, Mechanical Design, Instrumentation, Telemetering, Antennas, Wave Guides.

ENGINEERING WORK INCLUDES THE FIELDS OF Technical Writing, Missile Field Engineering, Engineering Administration, Radar and Missile Instruction, Radar Field Engineering, Patent Law.

HOW TO APPLY: Consult your Placement Officer for personal appointment with a member of our Engineering Staff who will visit your campus

THRU THE MUCK with MEYER

By ED MEYER Associate Sports Editor

"What happened to the football hero?
The fellow we used to know,
The guy who kicked. Who ran and passed.
The one who got the grades in class.
WHERE THE HELL DID HE GO?"

Neither the Republicans nor the Democrats had anything to do with it, but college football has returned to normal again after the "time for a change" chant was hammered in the heads of the National Collegiate Athletic Association for the past two years.

But just how far has football changed? With the two platoon tossed to the wind it is about time we sat down and looked over the situation more carefully. So we did last Saturday afternoon. And we had some assistance too. With the help of Red Barber, Vince Scully, Connie Desmond and the "CBS Radio Football Roundup", we all got together and the results were something to really think about.

We figured that it was just about the right time to see how the change has affected college football. With midseason approaching most of the teams without spring practice were rounding into form. So, on went the radio and this is what we heard . . . .

Philadelphia, Penn. was our first stop with Vin Scully. The mighty midshipmen of Navy were out to beat Penn in another game on its famous "suicide schedule." The game was moving along at a surprising pace with no scoring in the first half. Most experts figured the Middies to win after their amazing shellacking of Princeton. Things were just beginning.

Next stop was Lafayette, Ind., with Purdue and Michigan State tangling in another Big Ten contest. Here once more things were moving along on the slow side with neither team scoring in the first half. It was really starting to become an interesting afternoon.

Notre Dame, Ind. was next on the list with the Fighting Irish and Georgia Tech meeting head on in the nation's number one game. At the half it was the Irish ahead 7 to 0. A team had finally scored.

The "Old Redhead" turned to the scores off the teletype. Penn State was giving TCU a tough first half at 14 apiece. Wisconsin was upsetting Ohio State 12 to 7 at the half. Paul Giel and Minnesota were giving favored Michigan a 14-0 surprise also in the first half. Princeton was leading the Big Red of Cornell by one point, 7 to 6 at the half. Yale was leading Colgate and Syracuse was giving Illinois a tough battle. Now the last score really began to confuse us.

And so on moved the afternoon as we stayed glued to the radio trying to see if we could possibly prove anything from today's football scores. Perhaps the big change had given football the needed shot in the arm. Over the past month the leading teams had been upset week after week. Good old fashion football may be on its way back.

But it was time to check back for more scores and the sound moved to Franklin Field in Philadelphia. The score was 6 to 6 with about a minute left to play so they switched to another game. Off to Indiana and the Michigan State contest. The announcer was screaming and yelling about some streak being broken. When he finally settled down we discovered that Purdue had beat the Spartans with a fourth period score. And who won the game but an ex-State player.

Off to South Bend and the Notre Dame game. With Coach Frank Leahy in the hospital the Irish moved back in front in the second half after Tech had tied the score 7 to 7. The final read the Irish in front for Coach Frank, 27-14. Seems like it happens every week.

Now the scores began coming in fast. Colgate tied Yale in big moral win for the Raiders. Minnesota shellacked Michigan. Penn State upset the Texas Christian club and Cornell came back to nip past Princeton. Meanwhile the latest from Champaign was that Syracuse was ahead 13 to 7 in the third period.

From Franklin Field came word that Penn had kicked a field goal with less than a minute to go and beat the Middies 9 to 6. Northwestern upset Pitt in a midwest thriller. Ohio Sate pulled one out of the fire by nipping Wisconsin, 20 to 19. The afternoon was nearing an end.

So we sat there thinking it all over. We had heard the scores from all over the East, South and Midwest. You could look at it from one angle and then turn it around to read completely different. Was the change making a new mark or was football still the same as in the two platoon era?

Yes, football has changed. It has that new touch which makes a mediocre team capable of downing the big favorites on any given Saturday. It has something which the gridiron sport has lacked for many years. It's our old buddy "Mr. Upset" and his return to the form which was so prevalent in the pre-war years. Yeah, it was real good to have him back again.

So the day's work was over. The books were still on the shelf but we had made an important discovery. But before the job was over we switched back to Red for a final on the Orange game. It would be a complete success if they did upset the Illini.

"From Champaign, we just got the final on the Syracuse-Illinois game," Red stated. "Illinois 20, Syracuse 13. Some scare for the men of Ray Eliot."

Off went the radio. You know, "ya just can't win 'em all." (But still . . . .)

"I think we've found that hero
The one from long ago.
He's coming back to football
To remake the gridiron show."

Dekes Gain in Intras

By HANK GREENWALD

A variety of ballgames dotted last night's card of intramural football at Hendricks field. The scores ranged from 6-0, to 42-0.

Sigma Alpha Mu topped Zeta Beta Tau, 24-7, Beta Theta Pi shut out Phi Delta Theta, 8-0, Alpha Epsilon Pi edged Sigma Phi Epsilon 8-6, Phi Kappa Tau blanked Phi Epsilon Pi 13-0, Delta Kappa Epsilon routed Delta Tau Delta 42-0, Kappa Sigma and Zeta Psi battied to a 20-20 tie, Pi Lambda Chi defeated Lambda Chi Alpha, 12-0, Phi Kappa Psi subdued Alpha Chi Rho, 6-0, Sigma Alpha Epsilon toppled Alpha Tau Omega, 21-6, and Washington Arms, 2-3 won by forfeit over Thomas Dewey.

A pass from Art Bennett to Hugh Basset provided the winning marker as the Betas beat the Phi Delts. They added points by virtue of a safety.

The night's most thrilling contest saw Kappa Sigma fight back to earn a 20-20 deadlock with Zeta Psi. Two kick-off returns, good for scores, by Al Jotaro, enabled Kappa Sig to stay in the game. George Rovere took part in two scoring efforts for Zeta Psi.

Illinois Game Films Slated for Maxwell Tonight

Vinnie Vergara Injured; May Not Play Saturday

After a slight mishap yesterday, Ben Schwartzwalder had his boys ready to go again. Fullback Vince Vergara, who showed to such good advantage against Illinois was carried from the field after last night's practice. Today, however, Vergara was back on the field, but without pads. The extent of the injury was undisclosed and whether or not he will be able to play against Holy Cross was unknown.

From past indications of Syracuse-Holy Cross football games, the tilt on Fitton field in Worcester this Saturday afternoon should be a thriller. The last two Orange games with the Crusaders have been wide-open affairs and were not settled until the final seconds of play.

IN 1950, at the same Fitton field, Syracuse assumed an early 27-7 lead and appeared to be in for a romp. Then the Crusaders suddenly became alive on the passing arm of Charlie Maloy and tied the score at 27-27 late in the final quarter. With less than a minute left to play, Orange quarterback Bernie Custis ran for a touchdown and gave the Piety Hill team a well-earned 34-27 victory.

Last year in Archbold stadium the Orange gave Holy Cross its only collegiate defeat by squeeking through to a 20-19 victory. The lead shifted hands several times till the passing of Pat Stark and Bruce Yancey in the final two minutes of play gave the Orange the narrowest margin of victory. Stark passed to end Don Ronan with forty seconds remaining for the touchdown.

In the ten meetings between Syracuse and Holy Cross on the gridiron since 1905, the Orange have captured seven games while only losing three to the New Englanders. This year the game is rated close to a tossup in most quarters.

VINNIE VERGARA, Orange fullback, who excelled in the closing minutes of the Illinois defeat, injured his leg earlier this week and may not play Saturday.

The fortunes of the Syracuse football team have risen considerably with the recent performances against Penn State and Illinois, though both games ended in defeat for the Orange. With a little better luck and a little more depth, the Orange could have conceivably won both games.

THESE STRONG showings plus the news that injured fullback may be available for action Bill Wetzel and end Ray Perkins against the Crusaders is a warning to Holy Cross mentor, Dr. Eddie Anderson, that another wide-open, thrilling encounter may be in store for this weekend.

The Crusaders romped over Dartmouth, Colgate and Bucknell in their first three outings this year, before being upset by Brown last week. Anderson has a strong, experienced squad this year and is hoping to break the jinx of never defeating a Ben Schwartzwalder-coached team.

M-8, M-5, Psi U Win As Wenig, Brown Take Swim Honors

Limited activity was displayed last night in the intramural swimming league. Three events were scheduled, with two taking place and the other resulting in forfeit.

Led by Jeff Wenig, who captured two events, Skytop M-8 defeated their neighbors from M-7 11-3. Sal "Beaver" Alia, George Winston and Ronnie Yantz were the lone representatvies from M-7. In the other meet, Skytop M-5 submerged Skytop M-9, 8-1. Lyle Brown took top honors with a win in the 50-yard freestyle. Psi Upsilon won over Tau Delta Phi by forfeit.

INTRA BITS: The point system for scoring swimming events is based on the 5-3-1 method. Five points are awarded for each first place finish, three points go to the second place finisher and one point is presented for the "show" position.

The relay race is not always run in each meet. When the score demands that another event be held to determine the winner, the relay is held. However, if the point is differential is greater than the seven points allotted this race, it is not held.

Holy Cross Prestige Drops Following Upset by Brown

After Saturday's surprise defeat at the hands of underrated Brown, 6-0, Holy Cross' Crusaders will be out to prove it was all a mistake this week as they play host to Syracuse at Worcester.

Previously rated one of the top squads in the East, the Crusaders' defeat is being rated as one of the biggest upsets of the year. The victorious Brownmen had been considered a pushover in what was to be a workout for Holy Cross' second and third squads.

PRIOR TO Saturday's game, Dr. Eddie Anderson's squad had been one of the surprises of the year with impressive early victories over Dartmouth, Colgate and Bucknell and a single defeat to the semi-professional Quantico Marines.

Main handicap for the New Englanders' this year has been the absence of an outstanding signal caller, Chuck Maloy. Filling in for Maloy has been Jack Stephans, a sophomore from New York city. Due to his limited experience, much of the Crusaders' offense has been on the ground.

Leading the rushing offensive have been two veteran halfbacks, Gene Schiller and Pete Biocca. Both are light, weighing 170 pounds but are swift and tricky. The question still remains though whether they can carry the brunt of the attack without a good passer to back them up.

Another senior, Tom Murphy, will be filling the plunging spot come Saturday. Murphy is a perfect one-platoon man since he is highly rated as a defensive player. He also is a crack punt-return artist having been one of the nation's leaders last year.

LEFTOVERS: Saturday will be Gene Flynn day at Worcester as Holy Cross pays tribute to its athletic director for his 25 years service to the school . . . Biocca and Schiller carried the ball nearly 100 times between them in 1952 . . . . They gained 332 yards . . . Four of the Crusaders' squad members are graduates of one New York school, Aquinas Institute in Rochester . . . Eddie Anderson is one of the two major college head coaches who has won more than 80% of his games at one school . . . A large contingent of Syracusans is expected to be at the game with many planning to attend MIT's IFC weekend afterwards.

Webster Calls

Coach Ted Webster has issued an immediate call for all swimming candidates to see him any time this week at the new pool in the men's gym after 1 p.m. The frosh and varsity teams plan to start practice this week for an intensive winter schedule.

Frosh Hoop Team Called by Mogish

Coach Andy Mogish has issued a call to all frosh basketball candidates to report to him in the main gym on Monday, November 2, at 3 p.m. All aspirants for the frosh hoop squad are to bring their own sneakers.

Fans' Forum has been moved up a day and will be shown tonight, 7:30 at Maxwell auditorium. Backfield coach Bill Bell has consented to show the movie of the Syracuse-Illinois game. Bell will narrate the movies as they run. This was the best game of the year as far as the team goes and should prove interesting to the fans.

Bell will tell the fans with his West Virginia drawl all about the harrowing experience Illinois suffered last Saturday. Although the game was televised, Syracuse fans who saw the TV should come to get the coaches' view on the game.

AFTER VIEWING the films the coaches have found some infractions that are questionable. Coach Bell will point them out. The movies are run in slow motion. Time consuming huddles, penalties and time-outs are not shown as the fans see nothing but football.

The movies are taken from the press box and afford a good view of the game. Some circles have said that Syracuse played their best game of the year. Even Coach Elliot said that Syracuse outplayed them.

Several players played very good games. Ben Schwartzwalder said that Pat Stark passed a brilliant game.

Of importance will be the coaches' opinion of the Holy Cross team coming up this week. Although Coach Bell didn't scout the Crusader team he has read the scouting reports of the scouts and is well informed on the Cross team. One of the biggest jobs on the hands of the coaching staff will be over-confidence after coming close to the Illini team. The movies can be run in slow motion and will be re-run if a fan so requests.

Coach Bell played high school football under Schwartzwalder. When World War II came along he enlisted in the Air Force and served as a pilot. After the war, Bell followed Ben again and played under him at Muhlenberg. He graduated from Muhlenberg in '48.

He came to Syracuse in 1950 and began teaching the backs their business.

Intramural Harriers Race at Drumlins

An intramural cross country meet will be held at 11 p.m. Saturday at the Drumlins. Teams wishing to enter should submit a list of entries to the Intramural office in Archbold gymnasium by Thursday noon.

Five men must finish in order for a team to qualify for the title. There is no limit to the number of entries a team may run.

Illinois Ranking Improves; Rated Fourth Nationally

Illinois, despite its close game with the underdog Orangemen earlier in the week, has moved up in the national collegiate football ratings.

In a poll taken by International News Service, the Fighting Illini were ranked fourth nationally. Notre Dame's grid powerhouse, which snapped Georgia Tech's 31 game undefeated string, was the country's top-ranked eleven.

Maryland's undefeated Terrapins were rated second and Baylor's Bears third in the poll

AVIATION ENGINEERING
Today More Than Ever . . . .
offers a Sound, Well-Paid FUTURE
with a Leader Like CURTISS-WRIGHT

Today's graduate engineer seeking a secure, well paid career will do well to look to the aviation industry, provided he joins a leader with permanent roots in the field.

Such a company is CURTISS-WRIGHT, and here is why it will continue to provide exceptional engineering career opportunities of many kinds.

● Aviation is a precision industry in which new developments are rapid and continuous. Curtiss-Wright, always in the forefront of these advancements, is a center of research programs that go beyond aviation itself and thus create new products and processes affecting many other industries as well. The company's leadership in military aviation power is assured by long range research and development plans. Commercial production is growing, in both aviation and developments in other industries.

● To meet aviation's need for ever-better materials and techniques, Curtiss-Wright explores many fields — hydraulics, mechanics, electronics, plastics and metallurgy . . . new alloys and casting methods. Out of this research come not only improved propellers and powerplants, but many products with applications in general industry.

● So great an asset is this pool of engineering experience that it has become a bulwark to the national defenses and economy.

● For these reasons, including the wide range of projects at Curtiss-Wright, the company offers stability and solid career jobs for qualified engineers. One may choose his favorite field or specialty and look for increasing advancements and rewards as fast as he can assume responsibility.

WRIGHT AERONAUTICAL DIVISION, at Wood-Ridge, N J., leads in the development and production of reciprocating and jet engines, and development of turboprops and ramjets.

PROPELLER DIVISION, at Caldwell, N. J., is engaged in many projects other than the name implies. In addition to propeller research and production, it embraces machine design, stress analysis, aerodynamics, hydraulics, metallurgy, electronics, servo-mechanisms, instrumentation and controls.

Jobs are waiting for:
MECHANICAL ENGINEERS

If you want permanence, progress and good pay that grows better, living near your work in a desirable home area, contact your placement office for additional information and arrange for an interview with our representatives when they visit the campus.

Dr. Chang Arrives Tomorrow For University Conference

Dr. You Chang Yang, Korean ambassador to the United States, will arrive in Syracuse tomorrow evening.

Dr. Chang is coming to participate in the annual Conference on Eastern Asia, to be held on the Hill this weekend. He will open the proceedings with a lecture in Maxwell auditorium Friday at 8 p.m.

ACCOMPANYING DR. YANG is a Syracuse graduate, Phillip Han, first secretary of the Korean embassy in Washington.

The weekend's program will include a series of discussion groups held Saturday morning and afternoon, and led by prominent out-of-town participants. These include representatives from Colgate and Cornell universities and members of the Institute of Pacific Relations.

Highlighting Saturday's events will be a speech by Dean Paul H. Appleby of the Maxwell school on "Government Problems in the New Asia." The speech will follow a luncheon in Sims dining hall.

All the discussions deal with Asian problems, such as Communism, trade, industrialization, Soviet penetration and government. They are open to all those who are interested.

In charge of the weekend program are Dr. George B. Cressey, Dr. Donald Bishop and Douglas Haring of the Maxwell school.

Rabbi Hyman Explains Purpose Of Hill Fellowship Organization

By LIZ GODDARD
Daily Orange Associate Editor

The purpose of a Jewish fellowship on campus is to preserve the continuity between religious life at home and the one the student joins when he graduates, Rabbi Irwin Hyman, new chaplain to Jewish students on the Hill explained.

"The Jewish student must be made to feel that he is not necessarily isolated from the religous community," he said.

ALSO RABBI of Temple Adath-Yeshurun, So. Crouse ave. and RABBI IRWIN H. HYMAN has been selected as chaplain to Jewish students for 1953-54. He also has a congregation in the city.

Harrison st., he previously served as advisor to JSF when Rev. Powers was dean of Chapel.

He is a graduate of Columbia university and the Jewish Theological Seminary of America. After graduation in 1935 he came to Syracuse.

He said he feels "congenial" to this work with students because he has been doing such counseling since his graduation from the seminary.

As chaplain to Jewish students this year he is working with Dr. Fred Krinsky, assistant chaplain, and Miss Arlene Rothman, counselor.

CURRENTLY HE has been working to organize and plan the Colgate weekend brotherhood service. As usual Rev. Ralph Sockman will preach the sermon at the annual service which is combined with the Jewish Sabbath eve services.

Cantor Harold Lerner of Rabbi Hyman's temple, will chant the Sanctification. Prof. Arthur Poister and the Chapel choir will participate with Rev. Arnold Nakijima. Rev. Arthur Hopkinson and Rev. Wesley Konrad are also taking part in the service. Dean Charles C. Noble will introduce the minister from New York.

Rabbi Hyman said he would like to see Sunday night discussion groups started for JSF as well as weekly study groups. He will start teaching Hebrew classes this week.

"You can't exhaust the subject of Jewish culture and tradition," he said. "It can only exhaust you. I would like to see every student learn as much about it as he possibly can."

Court Meets Today For PHA Decision

A time but no definite place has been set for tonight's joint student court hearing of two cases involving Piety Hill alliance.

At 7 p.m. today the court will meet to judge on the legality of an injunction by Women's Court Chief Justice Winona Brierly which would allow PHA to continue as a political party until the court could meet.

The court will also hear and judge on PHA charges that one member of the protest board was ineligible to act in that capacity because he contacted the chairman of Tri-Orange party and advised him to file charges.

Howard Osofsky will defend the student government protest board in the PHA action against it.

Officials plan to confer with Social Director Miss Margaret Parker early today to find a suitable place in which to hold the trials. So far they have been unable to select a university building which could remain open a sufficient length of time to conclude the hearings.

According to an official of men's student government, tonight's trial will probably be an open hearing.

Initiates Appointed By Iota Alpha Pi

Iota Alpha Pi social sorority recently initiated its pledges at a banquet at Sherman's. They are Helene Chudler, Barbara Barnett, Lynn Fried, Lila Jaffee, Marilyn Leffert, Lenore Meyerowitz, Myrna Silverglate, and Joanne Stern.

New officers are chancellor, Marsha Sank; first vice chancellor, Carol Kruptkin; second vice chancellor, Fran Meiselman; recording secretary, Sherry Suieb and corresponding secretary, Gail Dudkin.

Marjorie Austrian is treasurer, rushing chairman is Carol Retig; assistant rushing chairman, Carol Agnello; social chairmen, Shelley Sporn; assistant social chairman, Sybil Mellman; sergeant at arms, Rita Weinstein; and Panhellenic representatives are Rita Weinstein

SMITH DONATES HALL

The Hall of Applied Science at Syracuse was donated to the University by the late Lyman C. Smith, to further the study of engineering problems. Smith was the head of the L. C. Smith typewriter company in Syracuse.

Juniors May Hold Orange Breakfast

The senior class has declined to sponsor the Bill Orange breakfast, according to Gil Katz, chairman of the Bill Orange breakfast committee. Lack of adequate finances was cited by the senior class as the reason for their refusal.

The committee will now ask the junior class for their support of the breakfast. It is expected that they will accept. Should they not, however, it will be up to the sophomore class to sponsor the Colgate weekend breakfast.

Williams to Talk At Club Meeting

Dr. Milton Williams, of the philosophy department, will speak at the first meeting of the philosophy club at 7:30 p.m. today in the Lowe Art center.

His subject will be "The Value of philosophy." Time will be provided for student discussion and refreshments will be served at the meeting which is open to all interested.

3-D Kate

LOOKS LIKE a song cue. KATHRYN GRAYSON and HOWARD KEEL will fill the air with music tonight in "Kiss Me Kate," three-idmensional Technicolor movie opening at Loew's State. The picture is being shown here in 3-D and in conventional process in Rochester.

"Kate" Will Kiss On 3-D at Loew's

Syracuse will be the focal center for the entire motion picture industry tonight when the premire of "Kiss Me Kate" in 3-D opens at Loew's State.

"Kate" will be shown in a flat screen "2-D" version in Rochester. This is considered the ultimate test of the three-dimensional process and the results of attendance in the two cities will probably determine future use of 3-D, according to Robert H. Odell, executive director of the Council for 3-D film development and progress.

Odell, working for the impartial, non-profit industry-wide organization, is in Syracuse in the interest of this test.

"Kiss Me Kate" is the story of the love problems of Howard Keel and Kathryn Grayson and the troubles Cole Porter has with them in his efforts to put on a musical version of Shakespare's "Taming of the Shrew."

The movie gives Kathryn Grayson and Howard Keel a chance to sing "So in Love," "Why Can't You Behave?" "Wundarbar," "I Hate Men," "Were Thine That Special Face" and "Kiss Me Kate."

Ann Miller, as the "other woman" in Keel's life, renders "'Always True to You in My Fashion" and "Tom, Dick or Harry."

Even Keenan Wynn gets into the singing act, warbling with James Whitmore, "Brush up on Your Shakespeare."

Cole Porter is portrayed by Ron Randall.

"Kate" is the first big musical done in the 3-D medium. The picture uses only one camera and one projector with two images on the film. This supposedly eliminates the annoying intermissions for film changes.

Hill Grad Exhibits At City Museum

Paintings Displayed By Bradley Walker

Two paintings by Bradley Walker Tomlin, graduate of the Syracuse College of Fine Arts, are currently on display at the Museum of Fine Arts.

Bradley was a native Syracusan who's paintings achieved national prominence. He died recently.

Also included in the exhibition are works by William Baziotes, Jimmy Ernst, Dolia Lorian, John Marin and Max Weber. The display continues through Sunday, Nov. 8. Daily hours are from noon to 5:50 p.m., Sunday's 2 to 5:30 p.m. Students will be admitted in the morning also.

INFIRMARY LOCATION

The student infirmary, now located on Waverly ave., was originally a unit of the Good Shepherd hospital. The move to its present location occured in the summer of 1924.

27 Assemblymen Elected In Yesterday's Balloting

In yesterday's balloting, University men elected 27 MSG assembly representatives. Five of the total number were automatically winners, because they lacked opposition in their classifications.

The nine assemblymen need to round out the 36-man body will be chosen by class assemblies.

THE VICTORIOUS candidates are:

Senior fraternity — Edwin Hochberg, Karl Katcher, William Levine and Eugene Sandler. Senior Independent; Henry Einhorn; Senior city—Robert Garver and Allen Kosoff.

Junior fraternity—Lloyd Duncker, Curtis Ford, Jack Hennessey, Arthur Kinney, Michael Newcomb; Junior independent—Roger Herz. No city men were chosen.

Civil service officials estimated that "between four and five hundred" male students voted in the elections.

Voting took place from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. outside of the Hall of Languages, Maxwell and Main library, and during lunch and dinner hours in Washington Arms and Sims dining halls.

Identification cards, used to determine which class slate the voters were eligible to vote on, were punched to prevent ballot box stuffing.

Civil service, which supervised the elections, declined to issue any statistics regarding the number of votes cast.

The nine assemblymen who will be selected by the class assemblies are in the following classifications: senior independent; junior independent and city; sophomore and freshman independent.

ID Cards, Ticket Deadline Set

Lost identification cards and football tickets may be replaced from 2 to 4 p.m., Thursday, Nov. 5, for the last time.

Those who have lost their cards must contact Elizabeth Brydon, 75-4191 or extension 264, or Stephen Reiss, 75-0037, before 5 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 4.

Any students who do not have cards or tickets replaced at this time must purchase regular admission tickets to attend the Cornell and Colgate games.

Students are urged to check that they have their ID cards.

Civil Service Test Scheduled for Hill

Candidates Selected On Basis of Exam

Any senior interested in a career in Civilian Management can take the U.S. Civil Service Commission's Junior Management Assistant examination on December 5. Any one who plans to enter government service must realize that they must act now in order to be eligible for appointment at the end of the school year.

Each year a number of eligible candidates are selected on the basis of the examination, and trained for eventual assignment to top-level administrative positions. The examination is designed to determine whether or not candidates possess, in outstanding degree, certain qualities which are considered necessary for development into future administrators. Some of these qualities include integrity, emotional stability and social adjustment, leadership, ability to make oral and written presentations, ability to make contacts and to negotiate, preparation for management and public affairs.

Applications must be in by Nov. 12 at the U. S. Civil Service commission, Washington 25, D. C. The exam will be held Dec. 5 in Syracuse.

IN ORDER to qualify for the exam, candidates must have completed a four-year college course leading to a bachelor's degree. Students should have either 30 semester hours in public business administration or in the social sciences or have three years of experience as a staff.

For a higher-paying position, applicants must have either one year of graduate study in the administration or social science fields or one year of experience in these areas.

Applicants who pass the two written tests and an interview will be eligible for the following types of assignments:

1. as a staff management assistant in budget preparation, analysis and review, 2) as a professional assistant in fields of economics, history, political science, international relations and intelligence, 3) as a staff engaged in substantive program analysis and planning.

JMA booklets are on reserve in the citizenship library and in 212 Maxwell.

Ed Seniors, Grads Eligible for Grants

Seniors and recent graduates preparing for a teaching career are eligible for Danforth Foundation scholarships. Candidates must be planning to enter graduate school in September 1954 for their first year of graduate study.

University vice-president Frank Piskor will work with the Foundation on the selection of candidates.

The scholarships will provide financial aid within prescribed conditions to fit the student's needs. Students not needing financial aid are also invited to apply. Holding of other scholarships does not prevent a student from winning a Foundation grant.

Only candidates who have demonstrated a superior intellectual ability and have good health records will be considered. Deep religious convictions and growing religious perspectives are also desired in the applicants.

Students wishing further information should contact Piskor.

Humanities Lecture Commences Today

H. Neil Richardson of the Hill department of Bible and religion, will speak at the first of a series of seven humanities lectures at 4:15 p.m., Thursday, Nov. 19, in Maxwell auditorium.

Richardson spent last year doing archaeological research in Palestine.

Suzanne Langer will lead the next lecture, discussing "Philosophy in a New Key." She will be followed by J. V. Langmead Casserley, speaking on "Interpretation of Irreligion."

David H. Owen, of the English department, will lecture in the field of American literature, and Sawyer Falk is scheduled for a speech on drama.

The series will be completed by one creative writer and one representative from Phi Beta Kappa. The names of these two have not yet been announced.

Film Bits Included In ASA Program

The Art Students' association will show excerpts from the Victor Herbert film "Naughty Marietta" starring Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy for its second program of the year at 7:15 p.m. today at the Lowe Art center.

Membership cards will be available at tonight's program. Active student support is needed for a series of recent art films, experimental films, lectures, and exhibitions.

Class Reps Picked For WAA Board

Francine Harbach, junior, and freshman, Jane Grant have been appointed respective class representatives to Women's Athletic Association.

A city student and member of Theta Phi Alpha, Francine is majoring in general psychology. During her freshman year at LeMoyne, she as a member of the planning board which organized LeMoyne WAA activities.

Francine transferred to Syracuse for her sophomore year, and participated in WAA intramural basketball. The junior representative is action in student politics and St. Thomas More house activities.

As junior rep, Francine will direct WAA publicity, assist the vice-president, head an awards committee and assist in policy planning.

Assuming policy making and publicity promotion duties will be freshman representative Jane Grant.

In the College of Liberal Arts, Jane is a WAA representative from Wilson cottage. She was a member of high school athletic associations.

Smith-Spencer Gets Philharmonic Role Under Metropoulos

A Syracuse university faculty member will sing the tenor role in the New York Philharmonic symphony performance of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" which opens in New York Nov. 5.

Harvey Smith-Spencer, assistant professor of voice in the School of Music, will sing under the direction of Dimitri Mitropoulos. Other artists appearing in the concert will be soprano Eleanor Steber, also Nel Tengemann and bass Jerome Hines.

Born and trained in America Smith-Spencer has sung throughout the United States and Mexico in concerts, operas and oratorio. At present he is combining an active career with teaching.

He has studied voice with Charles Dalmores and Janet Spencer in Hollywood and Alice Nichols in New York. Miss Nichols is still his vocal coach.

Redlands Presbyterian church in California was the scene of Smith-Spencer's first singing apparance. For four years he sang as a baritone and then became a tenor. This transition has occurred frequently with Wagnerian tenors such as DeReske and Melchior.

His first appearance as a tenor was in the Pasadena May festival as winner of their competition in the anniversary performance of Handel's "Messiah." This performance established him in the front rank of tenors and the following season found him singing six major opera roles, including "The Bartered Bride," "Aida" and "Il Trovatore."

His west coast career was climaxed by his appearance in the Hollywood bowl presentation of Handel's "Belteshazzer."

Then moving to New York, he sang in churches, temples and radio until he auditioned for the great Bethlehem Bach Festival. His performance here established him as a premier tenor in oratorio and concert appearances on the East coast.

His major oratorio appearances include the leading tenor roles in all the works of the current repertoire, as well as some rarely performed ones. His engagements have included the New York Oratorio Society, the Bethlehem Bach festival, Pasadena May Festival, Carmel-by-the-Sea Bach festival and Hollywood Bowl.

An orchestra soloist, he has appeared with conductors Serge Koussevitsky, Otto Klemperer, Richard Lert and Anthony Collins and with the Boston Symphony, Chicago Symphony, Mexico City Opera and Symphony, New York Philharmonic, Los Angeles Philharmonic and Hollywood Bowl.

In opera, Mr. Smith-Spencer has done 28 leading roles, including the restoration of the role of "Orfeo" in Gluck's great opera, in the original tenor version as done by the composer in the Paris version of 1761.

Bowes Appointed Federal Attorney For Local District

Faculty Member To Hold Twofold Post Of Lawyer and Prof

Professor Theodore Bowes, recently appointed attorney for the Northern District of New York, will also remain as a member of the Syracuse university faculty. Bowes, a member of the College of Law faculty, received news of his presidential appointment on Tuesday.

He flies down to Washington, Sunday to confer with his new boss: Herbert Brownell, Jr., Attorney General of the United States. When Bowes is sworn in late next week or perhaps in Washington, he will replace former assistant U. S. attorney Anthony Caffrey. Caffrey was appointed last June when Edmund Port resigned.

Bowes was a Syracuse lawyer before joining the University faculty. Besides being an instructor he is the general counsel for the Industrial Institute at Syracuse university.

At the outset of World War II, Bowes was one of the first members of the Syracuse faculty to enter the Armed Forces. He received an appointment as captain in the air force in January of '42. He rose to the rank of colonel before he left the service in 1946 and returned to Syracuse university.

During the war Bowes was decorated with the Legion of Merit at a Pentagon ceremony. While in the service, Bowes served as chief procurment officer of the Material Command at Wright field, the air force's big supply base in Dayton, Ohio.

President Eisenhower's appointment came on the heels of another appointment: J. Brodbury German Jr., to an office as a U. S. marshall for the same district. Both Eisenhower appointments had to clear the Senate.

Syracuse residents since 1931, both Mr. and Mrs. Bowes have been active locally. Mrs. Bowes was a former assistant district attorney. She is now a member of the Board of Education.

Bowes is a member of the New York state Bar association and the American Bar association.

College Publication Penetrates USSR

The MSC Veterinarian, Michigan State college scientific journal, has penetrated the iron curtain.

Copies of the 13-year-old publication are sent to several European nations, including the USSR. The magazine began as a 32-page publication and at present runs 132 pages.

Practicing veterinarians and educators in the field have contributed to the journal but it is managed and edited by the Michigan state students with Dr. Clyde F. Cairy, professor of physiology and pharmacy, acting as staff advisor.

Board's Decision on PHA Upheld by Student Court

By ED HARDY
Daily Orange Junior Editor

The joint student court in a six-hour session last night upheld the decision of the government protest board against Piety Hill Alliance and exonerated board member George Kepner of charges of bias filed against him by PHA.

The majority opinion of the tribunal as read by Chief Justice Winona Brierley declared: "The court finds no grounds to support the plaintiff's (PHA) charges in this case. Therefore, the decision of the protest board is sustained."

Before considering the allegations against Kepner, the court debated the validity of an injunction issued Saturday by Miss Brierley enabling PHA to continue active functioning as a political party until the joint court could meet to consider the case and charges against Kepner.

In its decision on the injunction point, the court said that it "observes that the chief justice acted in good faith in the absence of precedence."

The group suggested that in the future the chief justice have no authority to issue an injunction without first attempting to call together the joint court wihin 24 hours o hear a request for appeal. If the court cannot meet within this time, then the injunction may be granted, the tribunal ruled.

PIETY HILL Alliance had been suspended by the protest board Friday in support of charges by Tri-Orange and United Students parties that PHA had campaigned for freshman elections before the official opening date of Oct. 21.

THE INFANT party, formed on Oct. 8, subsequently went to Miss Brierley and obtained the injunction. Jerome. Rudolph, judicial commissioner of the men's student court, had then challenged her right to issue the stay order.

Under request by defense attorney Howard Osofsky, attorney general of men's student government, the court agreed to consider initially only the first point in PHA's appeal that "their is sufficient grounds to set aside the decision since George Kepner was acting in bad faith."

A move by Robert Yallum, the counsel for the plaintiff, to postpone the trial in order to have more time to prepare the case was denied by the court.

The joint elections commission of student government asked for and received permission from the joint student court to postpone freshman elections for no more than one week.

The appeal was made because the commission felt it would be unable to prepare ballots by the legal deadline of Oct. 30 set by the class governing act.

Piety Hill based its contentions against Kepner on a statement by Thomas Bird, who said Tri-O chairman John Hennessey told him Kepner had asked Hennessey to file a protest.

"KEPNER WAS quite bitter about the posters being put up ahead o ftime," Bird quoted the co-chairman as saying. "Kepner said if a protest was filed, he would see that the freshman candidates of PHA were disqualified," Bird claimed Henessey had stated.

Hennessey denied that he had made the statements as repeated y Birdb. He asserted that he had never spoken to Kepner about the protest and had mentioned to Bird only that "Kepner had witnessed the taking of the picture of the poster at Pi Alpha Chi and I hope the penalty will be that the PHA slate will be erased from the election."

Edwin Hochberg, the other chairman of Tri-O, also denied ever having discussed the protest with the special projects commissioner of MSG.

Kepner declared that he had never spoken to any Tri-O officer before the protest board met. He reported that as a member of civil service he had witnessed, at the request of USP officers, the photographing of the poster Monday night, Oct. 19.

"USP at that time asked how a protest could be filed and in answer I outlined how to the best of my knowledge of the class elections act," Kepner said.

Acting as counsels for the plaintiff besides Yallum were John Beach, Philip Huttar and Lawrence O'Sullivan.

Gymnast Team, Band To Perform at Cornell

The Zip team and the Marching band have joined forces for transportation to the Cornell game a week from this Saturday. The five-man squad will join the "hundred men and a girl" also for an action-musical combination for pep festivities at the game.

The gymnasts will present both planned and spontaneous displays with two tumblers. two trampoline men and a fellow who will cavort in both fields.

According to Chris Chrisfield, manager for the Zip team, thee trampoline will make an appearance for the first time at Syracuse games. The bouncing canvas apparatus will afford variety for the show.

Oh yes, Cornell has been contacted concerning working the Zip team int othe half-time show. As yet an answer has not been received.

It is the task of these fellows to bring about the spirit described as follows:

"School spirit should be defined not only as a sontaneous demonstration of enthusiasm, but also as the quiet pride that we take in the continual growth and improvement of our University.

"We do not fully realize the place of leadership that Syracuse holds among American universities today. Nor do we realize the tremendous potential that is being developed for the coming years."

Forestry Students Hear TV Smith

Noted Prof Lectures On U.S. Politics

"Pessimism about politics can be cured by taking a long view of problems," said Prof. T. V. Smith of the philosophy and citizenship departments at Syracuse university.

Prof. Smith spoke on the topic "The Promise of American Politics" to the students and faculty of the State University of New York College of Forestry at Marshall hall yesterday.

Emphasizing the need for citizens to understand the position of their political representatives, he pointed out that only 50 per cent of the qualified voters go to the polls during presidential elections. However, many more criticize the representatives' decisions without offering a program of their own, stated the former senator from Illinois.

"Very many of our national problems arise from irreconcilable adherence to so-called principle," said Prof. Smith. "The genius of a man in politics is to go half way and assume responsibility when men cannot compromise."

Smith defined politics as "the art of settling disputes between equally honost men when they refuse to compromise."

STADIUM PROBLEMS

In 1935 there were problems about the stadium seating, too, only then the question was "Should the men and women sit together at the games?"

Dr. Yang to Open Asian Conference

Dr. You Chang Yang, Korean ambassador to the United States, will be on the Syracuse campus tonight to open the annual conference on Eastern Asia.

Dr. Yang will speak on "Korea Today," at 8 p.m. in Maxwell auditorium. The main event of Saturday's program will be a speech by Dean Paul H. Appleby of the Maxwell school on "Government Problems in the New Asia." A luncheon in Sims dining hall will precede Dean Appleby's speech.

The conference will include a series of discussion groups hld Saturday mornings and afternoon. led by prominent out-of-town participants. These include representatives from Colgate and Cornell universities and members of the Institute of Pacific Relations.

Hill students, and anyone else interested, may attend these discussions. They will deal with Asian problems, such as Communism trade, Soviet penetration and government.

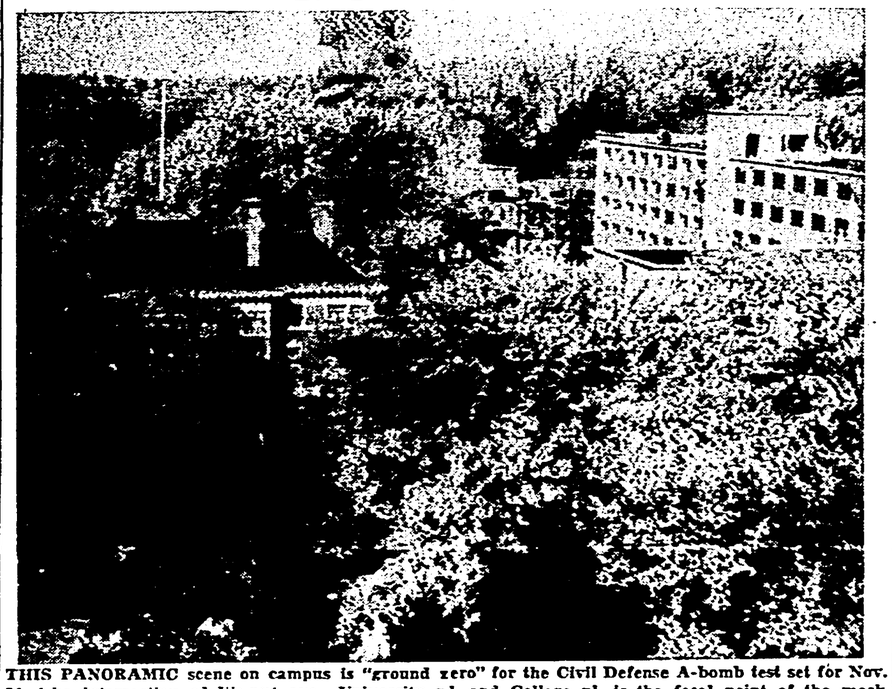
Dr. Yang will be accompanied by a Syracuse graduate, Phillip Han, first secretary of the Korean embassy in Washington.

Law Dean Joins Arbitration Board

Ralph E. Kharas, dean of Syracuse University's College of Law, is one of the 21 new members recently appointed to the arbitration committee of the American Arbitration Association.

This group is made up of prominent attorneys and labor management representatives from all regions of the country. The main function of the committee members, who are specialists in all phases of arbitration operations, is to administer rules of procedure governing arbitration panels.

Ground Zero



THIS PANORAMIC scene on campus is "ground zero" for the Civil Defense A-bomb test set for Nov. 21. The intersection of Walnut ave., University pl. and College pl. is the focal point of the mock bombing. The test is being held by the local Civil Defense unit in cooperation with the University.

Dean Noble Traces Mental Progress Of Growing Child

Mental health involves not only physical actions and intelligence, but also the idea of "a feeling," said Dean Charles C. Noble yesterday in the Colonial room of Hendricks chapel.

Dean Noble spoke on the topic, "You and Your Emotions," at the first lecture series sponsored by the mental hygiene committee of the Chapel. Co-chairmen of the committee are Everett Gertner and Beverly Darrow.

Many examples of feeling enter into the growth of a child, stated the Dean. Some have "guilt feelings," others have feelings of frustration, and still others have feelings of mental depression.

The Chapel head traced the development of mental health of a child from birth until adulthood. When a child is born, explained Dean Noble, he is "what might be called a 'thing'," with no mental development. The problem then is to raise the child in the developmental relationships of society.

"In order for a child to become a well-adjusted youngster, he must live in a secure and socially integrated home," Dean Noble said.

If there is conflict in the home, insecurity and a maladjusted individual could develop, stated Dean Noble. He also believed that from 1½ to 2 years is the age time that parental guidance will have the most influence.

At the junior-senior high school age, when most people begin to reach maturity, Dean Noble believes that the real mental development of the child takes shape.

"We find ourselves by losing ourselves for other selves," said the Chapel counselor. A person at this point in life desires to belong and identifies himself with various groups.

He indicated that no person from that time on is neutral, and that life gets value and significance for everyone with the success of the group to which he belongs. "Growing up is a measure in terms of unselfishness," he said.

Dean Noble stated people continually go wrong because they are unable to adjust themselves to symptons and a vicious circle develops. Many pahtological disturbances are also developed from home, community, and neighbors.

A person must have an "unselfish adjustment, which leads to ever-expanding loyalties," he indicated.

"Emotional Health," a film on mental development, followed the lecture. The movie described the psychological factors involved in a person's maladjustment.

Signups for next week's lecture, "Frustrations In Campus Living," will be held today and tomorrow from 10 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 4 p.m. in the Board room.

NSA to Sponsor Literary Contest

New York state National Student association is sponsoring a short story contest in all affiliated colleges in the state. This includes Syracuse.

Stories are limited to a maximum of 2000 words, and must be the original work of the submitter. All material must be typewritten, double spaced on standard paper, and must be submitted in triplicate.

Awards are: first prize, a gold medal; second prize, a silver medal; and third prize, a bronze medal.

Entries must be postmarked no later than Dec. 31 and sent to NSA Contest Chairman, D'Youville College, 320 Porter ave., Buffalo 1, New York.

UNIVERSITY OF MAINE

Classes at the University of Maine will be run on an eight-hour day basis this year, the registrar of the university announced recently. This system had not been in effect since 1946. At that time an increased enrollment of veterans made it necessary to tighten up on all schedules. Now that the enrollment of students has reached normal again, the university is able to revert to an eight-hour a day schedule.

Applications Asked For MSG Positions

Junior class President Sam Shawhan today announced the need for Junior class independents and city students to fill vacancies present in MSG assembly.

No formal applications are needed. All interested Juniors should report to the Junior class assembly meeting tonight at 7 in the Dance studio of the Women's building.

Hour of decision

A word to all Syracuse university coeds continuing rushing:

Tomorrow night is your final look at the sororities during this formal rushing period. Saturday you will be asked to file your preferential cards. You will be given an opportunity to name four houses.

However, Panhel urges that you do not put down the name of any house you are not willing to pledge. If, after looking over the individual houses, there is any doubt in your mind that you are willing to be associated and live with the girls for four years, do not file the houses' names.

If this means that after careful observation and due consideration there is but one house in which you will fit, turn in that one name only. If there are no houses, then do not file the card. Returning four names, just to fill the blanks, forcasts heartaches.

It is possible that the last houses you name are the ones which ask you to pledge. Even though you did not expect this to happen, you are still committed to the house, since it was on your preferential card. Only a formal act of de-pledging can relieve you of your assumed responsibility.

Therefore, if you are not completely satisfied with any of the last houses visited or you would like to know the girls better, we urge you to postpone final decision and rush informally.

Events of this next weekend may be among the most important in your life. Think carefully before you act.

Editor-in-chief

A singular honor

A singular honor came to Syracuse university this week when one of its faculty members was appointed to the post of United States attorney for the northern district of New York.

Theodore F. Bowes, a professor for 17 years at the College of Law, was named Tuesday for the public post by President Eisenhower.

The Daily Orange is proud to join with the Dean of the Law School Ralph Kharas in the statement that "we are happy he can be of public service."

His many years on the law school faculty, his professional practice carried on for the same number of years, and his war service in related fields, speak only for the wiseness of the President's decision.

It was not without regret, however, that law students read of the appointment. For them it would mean that one of their most well-liked profs would have to step down as placement director. Although continuing his teaching this semester, Prof Bowes will also have to relinquish his full-time teaching job second semester, remaining in a "part-time" capacity.

The students at 400 Montgomery st. considered the new appointee as one of their closest friends and counselor. Industrious, but always genial, Prof. Bowes was consistently thought of as thinking first of the students' welfare.

The law school professor, in his capacity as U.S. attorney, may represent the government in cases dealing with everything from immigration laws, subversive activity, the pure food and drug acts and draft dodging to FHA mortgages.

We join the state and city of Syracuse in congratulating Prof. Bowes on his appointment and in wishing him continued success in his legal profession.

LETTERARY COMMENT
D.O. WRITER: CRITICISM & REPLY

Criticism

Oct. 24, 1953

My dear Editorial Page writer: (Dick Case)

Judging from your article concerning Mr. Rains' performance, we are forced to come to the radical conclusion that you have taken a typically sophomoric attitude. The manner in which you wrote your absurd criticism sounded as though it were forced since you had nothing else to say.

You stated that "he made rather a confusing night of it," to this we can only say that it is YOU who are confused since it appeared that you as well as the "Syracuse" audience had no contact with this type of cultural performance.

The piano was "dull", you my dear sir fit this description more adequately than the originally intended object. Your more ridiculous statement about his poor choice of material indicates on your part either a lack of attention or intellect (perhaps both). If you had applied yourself you would have noticed he diversified his material with drama, poetry, humor and pathos.

I sincerely hope that your college education will help you to become a little more intellectual and mature.

Joyce Pivar, Ellen Shuman.

Defense

Oct. 27, 1953

Misses Pivar and Shuman:

The mere facts of chivalry prohibit a suitable reply to your recent note. I will, however, attempt to make my stand clear as far as the Claude Rains' performance is concerned.

My main argument with the program was not with the way that Mr. Rains performed the readings but with the entire nature of the evening. The music was inappropriate, Mr. Rains' manner forced and the general air of uneasiness which hung over the auditorium lent a quality to the program which can only be described as I have in the review, "a very confusing night of it."

Regarding my "sophomoric" attitude, I went to the show with a supposedly open mind, half-expecting to be entertained and I left not a little shocked at what I had witnessed. The main basis of my review was on the program's entainment value which, I believe, was very much lacking.

You stated that I was forced to my conclusion because I had nothing else to say. On the contrary, the boss did not permit enough lines for me to say what I would have liked to and perhaps, to qualify a few of the points.

I will still hold that Mr. Maxim's piano was "dull" and exceedingly uninspired. His background contributed nothing to the program and indeed, he gave Mr. Rains' words quite a struggle. He might have stayed at home.

As for variety, I will stick to the contention that Mr. Rains' choice of material fell into a rut and although "drama, poetry, humor and pathos" were present, they could not be found in pleasing proportions.

Our disagreement, ladies, seems to fall back onto just what we went to the auditorium seeking. I went to be entertained and you apparently went for the cultural values. Although your hunger for the finer things might have been satisfied, I could have stayed by the fireside with a good book and been just as happy.

I am sorry that you find my pieces "dull" and me personally absurd, but I am pleased that you manage time to read them regardless of your opinion of same.

I honestly appreciate your very fine criticism for, heaven knows, we down here don't profess to have the final say on anything.

Yours truly,
Dick Case

It's a Riot

An Iowa State College upset victory over a rival has caused uncontrollable rioting for two days as a demonstration against college president James Hilton's decision not to declare a holiday.

Coeds have locked themselves in dorms in an effort to prevent wild panty raids. Road signs were torn up, traffic halted and fires started as the riot gained momentum.

Students attempted to tear down a nearby dam, but ailed because "The dam is too damn big," according to police chief O. J. Erickson.

The Boss & Star

By JOAN NADELHAFT

She was going to a specialty store to pick out the furs for the show, and at the moment was dressed in a torn shirt, rolled slacks, and patent leather shoes with light blue socks. Five minutes later, a new June Havoc walked out of Dressing room 1 impeccably dressed in a trim tweed suit, high heels, etc.

In less than 20 minutes she had picked more than $5,000 worth of furs, and chosen a debutante gown for the last act of "The Women."

Then came the fun. When we came outside to go back to the theater, she stopped there for "just a minute." She bought several pins, some earrings, and a pearl choker. Husband William Spier, himself a famous radio and television producer and director, stood by, in the manner of husbands immemorial, and produced a blank check.

Paying pert attention to her show in the making.

Before going for the furs, Miss Havoc had been supervising the costuming. She pinned flowers onto the gown of a walk-on, and talked costumes with another bit actress for almost ten minutes, moving quickly from here to there, soothing frictions as they arose.

She acted every minute. When she spoke, she didn't talk, she made a speech. She spoke quickly, but in a controlled voice that did not sound like chatter.

She seemed to like people, and chatted with those around her in a friendly fashion. At the store, she talked to the salesgirls, and completely charmed them. Her cast worked well under her, and did as she said, with few complaints.

Small and blonde, Miss Havoc wears a great deal of blue. In accessories, if not her clothes. Monday, she wore a tremendous blue ribbon at the back of her hair, blue necklace, blue earrings, and a blue pin on her suit.

Timmie, Miss Havoc's minute dog, was master of Dressing room 1. When we walked in, the Yorkshire terrier reared to his full ten inches of height and informed us in his loudest yip that he was lord of all he surveyed—a traveling bag.

During the three hours we spent with her, Miss Havoc had captivated several salespeople completely, won over some reluctant cast members, and organized the staging of an entire play.

Her volatility, charm, and friendliness added up to the pertest, and prettiest director we've talked to yet.

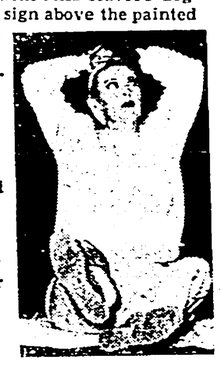
Gypsy Rose Lee, "vaudeville personality", talented author and competent actress, is every bit the star at the Astor theater, offstage as well as on.

Playing the role of Sylvia Fowler in Clare Booth's play "The Women," she dominates the stage with her regal carriage and attention-demanding voice.

In crowded baskstage quarters she has a private dressing room, shared only with Miss Havoc's dog Timmie. The sign above the painted figure one on the door reads: "Dangerous Dog; Do not Disturb!"

During dress rehearsals and in conversations Miss Lee constantly refers to her days in "vaudeville." In the scene taking place in a Reno hotel she fights with another woman and must kick off her high heeled shoes. Fussing about it at rehearsal, she commented "I haven't had to worry about this sort of thing since my days in vaudeville."



Glamorous "Gypsy" gymnast sets a pose.

Displaying a fine sense of comedy on stage, she made quick clever comments at Monday's dress rehearsal. Watching another actress strut across the stage she called "Behave yourself darling. We're legitimate this week."

In the final scene of the play Miss Lee stops the performance with her appearance in a monstrous floor-length fur cape. "In vaudeville, when I wore it," she explained, "the orchestra had to play 36 bars before the show could go on."

Many of the clothes she wears are Miss Lee's private possessions. She resurrected her "fishin' shoes" to wear in the exercise scene and had to wash out a pair of socks to complete the costume.

Her 8-year-old son Erik accompanied her to Syracuse. His mother gives him all his lessons, working together two hours daily. Already he is in the equivalent of the fourth grade.

Good friends with all the cast, he ran in and out of dressing rooms in a business-like manner. During the dress rehearsal he toted a gun and a flash camera trying to get "a good shot of Mommy" from the first row of the theater.

During a break-in scene he carefully focused the camera and "Mommy" cautioned him to "get your finger away from the lens, dear."

AT THE FLICKERS
'THE FILM BY ANY OTHER PROCESS...'

By CHARLES SAMUELS
Daily Orange Movie Critic

Cole Porter's musical comedy of backstage life was an immensely successful stage hit, a few seasons ago, and there is no reason why it should not enjoy equal success on it's present version. Mr. Porter supplied "Kiss Me Kate" with one of his wittiest, most melodic and thoroughly delightful scores and it has been kept intact, as has Sam & Bella Spewack's solid book. Old Bill Shakespeare has helped the proceedings, for the actors in the show are performing a musical version of "The Taming Of The Shrew." These scenes are thoroughly wonderful and are among the film's more happy moments.

The film is actually just a literal transferal of a work of art from one medium to another. Therefore the only real difference between the present and previous version is the acting. The casting here has been, for the most part quite fortunate. Howard Keel is altogether superb as the egocentric star. It has never been a secret that Mr. Keel could sing—and sing he does. For he now has a lusty part, suited to his talents, and he obviously relishes it. The audience does too. Kenan Wynn and James Whitemore are on hand with two richly comic performances as a pair of Shakespeare-loving thugs.

As a matter of fact, the only real trouble comes from the distaff side. Kathryn Grayson is asked to play a hot-tempered star and her own personal sweetness harms the effectiveness of her performance. Ann Miller's energetic job is calculated to wear out her audience. Her gyrations are more suited to the activity of a windmill than a lovely young woman and we wondered just how long she'd last. She did however, much to our surprise.

By now it should be obvious that this is a pretty good film. There is, however, another consideration and that is whether or not 3D enhances the effect. It does not. It detracts from it because the producers have still not gotten over their mad compulsion to pelt the audience with diverse articles of furniture, clothing, etc., etc., etc. By now this thing has lost its charm and this reviewer, at least, is pretty fed up with reeling from blows, low or otherwise.

Since everyone is in a Shakespearean mood; a good film by any other process would still be as good.

"Terror On A Train," a tight little suspense item completes the bill.

On Identity

Sitting in the Varsity the other day, I happened to hear the following: "If you keep that up, you'll turn into one." Upon further investigation, I found the subject of the reproach a beautiful blonde male, his destiny, turning into a rare hamburger. Although a complete transformation is not probable, wouldn't the world be in a pitiful state if people who ate hamburgers to excess would not only have an upset stomach, but would also go around with hunks of meat chained to their ankles.

And think of the fanatic SU golfers. Can you imagine a coed dancing at the Orange with her date and his golf bag? Not to say anything about DO editors writing love letters in newspaper style, and on copy paper, at that.

And what would happen to our glorious football team if they all ran around the field each lugging a pigskin? Or the girls who live in the sun; can you just see them carrying a ball of flame around with them?

But you will have to excuse me now, while I take my typewriter to dinner with me.

Icicles on the Ceiling

By JOHN JOHNSRUD
Daily Orange Columnist

Camus geologists don't even have to leave the Hill to see examples of an unusual rock formation. Amatuer spelunkers and others interested in caves don't have to leave the University area to see a sight common in subterrean caverns but not on campus.

In one of the lower grottos of one of the cavernous campus buildings may be seen a sight rarely, if ever, afforded to a visitor to any modern building.

Should one venture into the basements on the north side of Maxwell and look up at that part of the ceiling which is under the stone walks surrounding the building he would see quite a fascinating sight. There on the roof of the chamber miniature stalactites are forming.

Their formation probably came about in the years since Maxwell was built when the material sealing the space between slabs of rocks slowly became porous enough to allow rain water to seep through.

Whenever it rains, the water dissolves a bit of the rock and slowly erodes the rock a little more. The water then seeps through the porous material until it reaches the roof of the basement. There it drops to the floor leaving a little of the dissolved rock clinging to the ceiling.

With the passage of time more and more material is left by the escaping water with the deposit taking on the form of a rock icicle.

The largest of these local stalatites is about eight inches in length. Some are, on the other hand, shorter and bigger in diameter. The largest of these measures about two inches in circumference.

Pedestrian traffic through the rooms prevent the growth of stalactites on the floor which usually accompany the formation of the hanging stalactites.

If the present conditions of rain, weathering and deposition continue, these stalactites will reach the floor in several hundred years.

Icicles on the ceiling . . . a worm's eye view of the Maxwell sidewalks. These have been in the process of forming for a decade and a half, and it will take a century for these stoney points to reach the floor.

The 'Arrival' of a Campus Band

By DON HENRY

The Saltines have done it. Kenny Fredericks and his 14-piece orchestra have given this University what it has long needed, namely, a good, solid all-campus dance band.

Fredericks and most of the instrumentalists on the Hill have felt that the social organizations' and class-sponsored dances would benefit greatly in both promotional and financial aspects if they had a good campus band available.

As Ken puts it, "These class dances, like the Soph Hop, which we're playing at this year, usually put the class a couple of hundred dollars in debt because they have to pay so much for a big-name band. And maybe they've picked a band which has a style that some of the kids don't like, and therefore lose a couple of ticket sales.

"What we're trying to do is remedy both these problems. The Saltines, naturally, will be relatively cheap in expense, but we'll play a good variety of danceable numbers. Naturally you can't please everyone if you have one distinct style, but we play a little Anthony, a little Brown, some Spivak and so on. That way we're bound to please most of the kids."

Following up on that theory, Ken told us that numerous students have come up to him and said that they really liked this number or that number on the program last Saturday at the Jiminy Cricket ball.

Fredericks and Ed Lisk organized the band a little over three weeks ago after the Goon Squad asked Ken to get a band for the J-C ball. Lisk, who plays 2nd sax, and Fredericks organized the band as thus:

Pete Manikas on the bass, George Winfield at the piano, and George Ward as the drummer; Ray Caldiero, Stan Colella and Chuck Cannizaro blowing trumpet; Jack Isnotta, Greg Rich and Lynn Schult in the trombone section; and Joe Riposo, 1st sax, Lisk, 2nd sax, Lou Kauder, 3rd sax, Nick Palumbo, 4th sax and Fredericks, 5th sax.

The Saltine fourteen were hired to play the Soph Hop during one of the six rehearsals they held before premiering at the Goon Squad dance. Fredericks said he hopes to add a female vocalist to the outfit for the Soph Hop.

"Some of the boys will probably work up some arrangements for the Soph Hop," Ken told us. trombone arrangements and Riposo is working on some, too. However, we'll go for the main part, with the tunes we played Saturday, plus 25 other numbers we've rehearsed which we haven't played yet."

All in all, we're inclined to go along with Fredericks and his boys in the opinion that the Saltines will be an asset on the campus scene. Here's hoping we hear more of them in the future than just the Soph Hop.

Along the Sidelines

By KEN LENT, DAILY ORANGE SPORTS EDITOR

"Uneasy lies the head that wears the crown." So goes an ancient proverb which could very easily apply to that monarch of the fall, King Football. Already the 1953 campaign has produced its quota of upsets and what the second half will bring, no one, not even Ben Schwartzwalder, can tell.

In reference to the new one-platoon system, some interesting statistics were brought to our attention this week. Arnie Burdick, SU's genial publicity director, had some time on his way to Illinois and so being the good samaritan that he is, decided to check on some figures (the written kind) for the benefit of the sports writing fraternity.

What he came up with practically points out what was predicted at the beginning of the season—that one-platoon football has been responsible for more exciting games than under the old let's-throw-everyone-into-the-game system.

For example, in the 71 contests participated in by 24 Eastern schools last year, only 39% were decided by 7 points or less. Contrast that with '53 in which out of the 36 Eastern tilts played, 59% have been won by the same margin.

In Syracuse's case all but one of our five games (80%) have been in the touchdown or less category. Perhaps some faults have been found with the one-platoon, but it appears that from the spectator's viewpoint, the change has rated 100% in the excitement league.

* * * * *

Don Geyer, a former Northwestern All-American guard, had quite a bit of praise for Bob Fleck and Les McClelland in an Illinois newspaper article. Said Geyer, "I thought the guards were the two best to play here this season."

"They were on Caroline all afternoon and did hamper his work. What the guards didn't do, the defensive left half-back Bob Leberman did. All in all Syracuse put up as good a defense as I have seen against the Illinois attack."

Amen.

ORANGE SLICES: The Cornell game is sneaking up on us week after next. Block seat tickets can be obtained up until this FRIDAY and single seats until Nov. 5 . . . Look for the Orange hill-and-dalers to look better against Army. Despite the stiff opposition, the thinclads are angry at themselves for the bad showing at Cornell. And when Ray Osterhout and Co. get their dander up, look out!

DOUBLE-TAKE DEPT: Bob Krause, the Herald-Journal's genial reporter, in writing about the plane trip to Illinois had this to say, "The hostess on the plane, a gigantic Capital Airlines four-engine job . . . ." Hm-m-m-m.

Hill Soccer Team Preps For Union

Coach Andy Coccari sent his charges through another heavy workout yesterday in an attempt to iron out weaknesses that cropped up in Saturday's 3-2 loss to Sampson.

The ejection of Nelson from the contest in the third quarter was probably the turning point in the game against the Flyers. Nelson, who notched his third goal of the season last Saturday, leads the team in scoring to date.

Coccari is still desperately searching for the combination that will give him maximum offensive strength and yet not weaken the defense. Gunnar Wirth's presence in the goal has plugged that vital hole but has weakened the offense.

In an attempt to correct his anemic offense, Coccari is moving Nelson to the center forward position and switching Wirth to the inside left slot.

In another change, Vic Oberschal will get his first starting assignment since the Cornell game.

For the second straight week, Bill Ayres will get the nod at the starting inside right slot. Ayres won the job from Steve Godayol, who received honorable mention ratings in last year's all-American soccer poll.

Should Ayres tire later in the game, he will be spelled by Mike Newcomb who started against Sampson. Newcomb has been off and on the starting team ever since his sophomore year and gives Coccari a reliable replacement.

Other booters who figure prominently in Coccari's plans for Saturday's meet with Union college at Schenectady are defensemen Don Schupe, Don Moller, Bud Gormon, Joe Milliron and offensive stalwart Duncan Robb.

Schupe and Gormon have been two pleasant surprises for Coccari so far this season. A converted harrier, Shupe has turned out to be one of Coccari's better defensemen.

Capt. Moller and Milliron are two other booters who have contributed strongly to the Orange's tight defense, while Robb give the Saltine's one of the strongest scoring threats from the side in the East.

DEFENSEMAN DON SHUPE is counted on by Coach Andy Coccari to help the Orange booters defeat Union college at Schenectady on Saturday.

AXEL SPOTS—A seventh game has been added to the Orange's schedule. On November 3, the Hillmen will meet Brockport State Teachers college at Brockport. Last year, the Orangemen nipped Brockport 5-4 in overtime, after they had overcome a 4-0 lead held by the teachers at halftime.

FROSH CAGERS

Coach Andy Mogish of the frosh basketball team has announced that any interested aspirants for the Tangerine squad are to report to him in the main gym on Monday at 3 p.m. with their own equipment.

CORNELL TIX

Friday is the last day student block seating can be obtained for the Cornell football game at Ithaca on November 7. The sale of student tickets will continue, however, till Thursday, November 5. An ID card must be presented to get tickets in the Archbold gym ticket office.

Coach Ed Anderson Shuffles Positions For Saturday Tilt

Faced with the worst string of injuries in his 10 seasons on Mt. St. James, Dr. Eddie Anderson is busy shuffling his Holy Cross gridders in preparation for their Saturday engagement with Syracuse.

A trio of Crusaders exected to carry much of the offensive load during the second half of the season are sidelined by injuries suffered in last Saturday's loss to Brown and will not play against the Orange.

WARREN O'DONNELL, sophomore fullback and son of the late Holy Cross coach, Cleo, underwent surgery on his damaged left knee earlier this week and is through for the season. Gene Schiller, the Crusaders' top left halfback, has a separated shoulder and will be idle for about three weeks.

The East's second ranking pass receiver in 1952, end Jack Carroll probably will also miss the weekend struggle at Worcester. The 6 ft. 4 senior, who grabbed 46 passes for a total of 609 yards last season, has a bad knee.

Also on the doubtful list for Saturday with a pulled Achilles tendon is center John Hurley, a junior from Rochester.

Most serious of these injuries, from the Crusader standpoint, is that suffered by Schiller. The left halfback is key man in Anderson's combination straight-T and single wing offense and Schiller's loss, coupled with earlier injuries, leaves Dr. Eddie without an experienced man at this post.

Anderson was displeased with the performances of several other Crusaders against Brown and other changes are contemplated before Saturday.

Syracuse Climbs Into Sixth Slot In Weekly Lambert Grid Ratings

CAPTAIN HANK LEMIRE, 6 ft., 190-pound senior, is rated one of the finest ends in Holy Cross history. A defensive starter the past two seasons, Lemire has readily adjusted to one-platoon football. He also handles most of the Crusader punting.

Syracuse has jumped from eighth to sixth place in the weekly Lambert Trophy ratings which were released yesterday. Though intersectional games, as was the Orange-Illinois encounter, are not considered in this race for Eastern grid supremacy, the strong showing of the Piety Hill team against the Illini apparently accounted for the rise.

Holy Cross, ahead of the Orange last week, fell to 18th place in the current ratings after Brown upset the Crusaders on Saturday. By virtue of these ratings, Syracuse is a nine point favorite over the Crusaders, but in the final analysis, the game shapes up as a toss-up.

REPORTS THAT fullback Bill Wetzel might return to action on Saturday seem a bit pre-mature. As of yesterday, the burly linebucker was not even dressing for scrimmages and it seems likely that he won't make the trip to Worcester. It is probable that Wetzel will be available for at least limited duty against Cornell on November 7.

Vinnie Vergara, Ray Perkins and Lyle Carlson have worked out with the team in practice sessions this week, but haven't worn pads and probably will not face the Crusaders either.

The practice and skull sessions this week seem to be emphasizing defensive alignments as the Crusaders boast one of the best offensive machines in the East. Since the Illini encounter, the Orange have fallen out of the top ten teams in the nation in rushing and total defense.

Although the Orange 6-2-2-1 defense against the Illini worked rather well as the center of the line Bob Fleck and Les McClelland, submarined all afternoon in an attempt to trap the runners behind the line of scrimmage, Coach Ben Schwartzwalder will probably revise this defensive alignment against the pass-conscious Crusaders.

GRID BITS—Schwartzwalder yesterday drew up the point that this is the second time Syracuse has played away on an opponent's Homecoming Day. Penn State beat the Orange on a similiar day . . . it is ironic that the Orange have lost their last two games, yet seem to be getting stronger with every outing . . . For the first time this season, and probably the only time, Syracuse will enter the Holy Cross fray wearing Orange jerseys. Holy Cross has expressed a desire to wear white jerseys, their perogative as home team.

Harriers Strive to Regain Winning Form Tomorrow

Smarting from their first defeat in eleven dual meets, the Syracuse university hill-and-dalers have engaged in extensive practice drills in preparation for the meet tomorrow against the Army cadets at West Point.

tory of Colgate as compared to a squeaker by the Big Red over the same school, it was expected the Piety harriers would have little trouble in disposing of the Ithacans.

THE FACT THAT Don Fryer and Frank Calzi have yet failed to hit their best form is one of the biggest reasons why the Orangemen did not lick the Cornellians. A year ago at this time, both Fryer and Calzi were among the early finishers in almost every race.

Although Steve Armstrong is still in the infirmary suffering from the flu, it is expected that he will be out by Thursday when the team will leave for West Point.

While Armstrong should be available, Les Vielbig is defenitely out of the Army meet. Les has been on the sidelines since the opening meet with Colgate and, since he has been out of action for so long, Coach Bob Grieve would not let Vielbig run even if his ankle is sound again.

Grieve remarked after Tuesday's practice, "if only the boys ran like they did today in last Saturday's meet with Cornell, the final score would have been 16-40 in favor of Syracuse."

The team leaves this morning for West Point and will return directly after the race Friday.

Yachters to Engage In Final Home Meet

The Orange sailors will compete in their final home regatta of the fall season Saturday when they meet Cornell, Colgate and New York State Maritime College on Lake Onondaga. The first of eight races is set to go off at 2 p.m.

Cornell, led by Pete Eising and Bob Morrison will probably provide the chief threat although Syracuse edged them in a quadrangular on Cayuga lake four weeks ago. Eising did not skipper in that meet.

Ray Walker and Ed Viani will handle the tiller for the Maritime crew in their first Syracuse visit.

On Sunday, the Hill freshmen will compete in the Mid-Atlantic Frosh championships at Navy. Art Arnold and Jay Short will captain the Orange boats with Don Bergomi and Sandy Fishman crewing. Two qualifiers from each of the four district eliminations will vie for the freshman title.

Three Forfeits Mar Intra Football As Acacia, Omega Score Wins

By ERNIE ETOLL

Although intramural football was marred last night by three forfeits, Acacia, Phi Gamma Delta, Omega Pi Alpha, The Steelers and Washington Arms 4-5 gained victories in games played.

Acacia edged by Pi Kappa Alpha, 6-0, with a 30-yard run by Keith Johnson on an intercepted pass being the difference in the game. Outstanding on offense for the losers was Charlie Wysong.

THE FRATERS from Phi Gamma Delta romped over Sigma Nu, 22-0. Led by Tom Goins who scored three touchdowns, Phi Gam was never in jeopardy of losing. One safety and two extra points by Okie Harris accounted for the rest of the victor's scoring.

In another hard fought game Pi Lambda Phi was defeated by Omega Pi Alpha, 13-6. Alex Newberger scored on a 58-yard punt return with 10 seconds left in the game. Mike Kerston scored 7 points for the winners, while Mel Smith scored the Pi Lambs' only points.

The Steelers led by Tom Hinchey, who was a one-man team, defeated Livingston, 20-12, in the most thrilling game of the evening. All Hinchey did was score one touchdown, hand off for another TD and pass for two extra points. Livingston played exceptionally well considering that they only fielded four men and elected to play rather than forfeit.

Washington Arms 4-5 defeated Grover Cleveland-A, 13-0 in the last game of the evening, while Whitman House forfeited to Grover Cleveland-B, Plant Science forfeited to City Men and Skytop M-3 won on forfeit from Collendale A-4.

Phi Psi, Zeta Psi Win in Intra Swim

By BOB TATA

In a full schedule of intramural swimming last night at Archbold Pool, Phi Kappa Psi, Zeta Psi, Alpha Epsilon Pi, and Skytop M-2 registered victories. In the first meet, Phi Psi romped over Phi Delt 22-12 as Phi Psi took firsts in every event.

The next two meets were highlighted by close scores. The most exciting meet of the night saw Zeta Psi squeeze past the Betas 18-16. Zeta Psi trailed all the way into the 200-yard relay where they caught the Betas and went on to win. Another interesting battle was staged between AEPi and Psi U. Although AEPi took three out of four firsts, Psi U. managed to stay in contention right up to the final event. When the final score was tabulated, AEPi held the edge 17-13.

'Famous Artists' Will Present 'Carmen Jones' Next Month

Carmen Jones, the brilliant tongue-in-cheek adaptation of Bizet's "Carmen," will be presented in Lincoln auditorium on the evening of Nov. 7 as the third attraction of the Famous Artists' fall season.

Boasting 10 members of the original Broadway cast, the Syracause production of the comic opera is described as a "concert version" of the show which did record business during its New York run.

SPECIAL STUDENT tickets priced at $1.50 will be available in a booth at the Campus Carnival on Saturday. They will also be sold throughout the week at the University Bookstore or the downtown ticket office of Famous Artists in the Clark Music building.

A portion of the "Carmen Jones" ticket sales at the Carnival will go to the Campus Chest fund.

Starring in the local production of "Carmen Jones" will be Miss Muriel Rahn, the original Carmen during 134 performances of the show in New York. Miss Rahn, termed one of the nation's most versatile young sopranos, has appeared with several symphony orchestras as a soloist and as a recitalist in the leading concert halls of the country.

The two-hour concert version of "Carmen Jones" is based on Bizet's well-known opera with modern lyrics by Oscar Hammerstein II. The locale of the show is transferred from Spain to below the Mason-Dixon during the days of World War II. A parachute factory replaces Bizet's cigarette company and sultry Carmen is molded into a slightly-exicting modern miss.

WRITING ON THE original Broadway version of the show, John Chaman of the New York Daily News said, "It is superb, it is enchantingly beautiful, it is musically exciting . . . and stirring."

"Carmen Jones" ranks as a major work designed for Negro performers. The Syracuse presentation is said to contain all the songs, dialogue, drama, comedy and satire of the original version. It will be done in costume.

The show is staged and adapted by Richard Campbell and produced by Nat Debin.

Luther's Life

Martin Luther (Niall MacGinnis) the fiery 16th century monk who split Church and Empire through his demand for religious reform, is married to Katherine von Bora (Annette Carell), in a scene from "Martin Luther," the dramatic feature film produced on location in Western Germany by Louis de Rochemont Associates.

'Martin Luther' Film To Open at Strand

"Martin Luther," feature-length film about the work and life of the founder of the Protestant movement, opens today at Loew's Strand.

Student discount tickets for the film are available in the office of Prof. John F. Olson, 413 HL, according to an announcement from the local Loew's office.

The story was filmed in Germany and the title role is played by Niall MacGinnis, British actor, who heads the cast of 500 that were enlisted from seven nations.

The film tells the story of the 16th century monk who defied excommunication and the stake in his demand for religious reform.

As an Augustinian monk, Luther tried to find peace of mind and soul through study, work, worship and confession. But he could not escape the fear of evil and punishment no matteer what he did.

He later was labeled a heretic because of his teachings, but he lived on to see the Protestant nobls and theologians reject Charles V's demand to abandon their "heresies" and reunite with Church and Empire. His demand for reform gave birth to an evangelical movement that quickly spread throughout Europe and the world.

AFROTC Initiates New Program

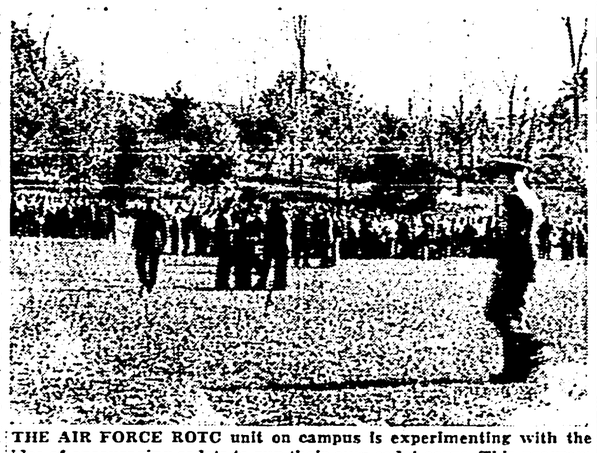
Air Force ROTC is now in the midst of a major experiment—encouraging cadets to run their own cadet corps. The cadre, regular staff officers, are acting only in an advisory capacity in all matters pertaining to the administration of the cadet wing.

The wing organization, modeled after a regular Air Force organization, is led by Cadet Col. John J. Forgette, University senior.

Forgette and his wing staff are responsible for conducting drill seessions, appointments and promotions and other policy and administrative procedure.

The aim of the program is to promote effective leadership, Air Force authorities state. While no arms are used in the drill sessions, the drill is intended to strengthen military discipline, leadership and efficiency, and prepare cadets for officers' positions after graduation.

A headquarters section has been established this year to handle administrative affairs. It is headed by Cadet Maj. Jason Decker.



THE AIR FORCE ROTC unit on campus is experimenting with the idea of encouraging cadets to run their own cadet corps. This program is being initiated to promote effective leadership in the cadets.

Clifford Appointed To Guide Greeks

Earle W. Clifford, assistant dean of men, has been apointed administrator in charge of fraternity affairs. He will assist Professor Theodore G. Denise who is chief representative of fraternity men in their dealings with the faculty.

Denise will serve as advisor and consultant to fraternity groups. Clifford will handle matters of administrative decision and routine involving fraternities. They will consult together before reaching decisions.

Sylvia Sidney and Cat to Star In Astor's 'Bell, Book and Candle'

The Astor theater which up to now has presented a series of four farces, will turn to a more sophisticated comedy next week. John Van Druten's successful "Bell Book and Candle" will open Tuesday evening.

The play will star Sylvia Sidney in the role of a modern witch. This is the part that was portrayed so convincingly by Lili Palmer on Broadway. Another star of the comedy will be Pyewaocket or "Pye" an alley cat who assists Miss Sidney in her spells.

Part of the success of the Astor has been due to the importation of name stars to play in each production. Such peopie as Edward Everett Horton, Vicki Cummings, Lisa Ferraday, Hurd Hatfield and Jay Jostyn have already appeared.

This project while local in scope, benefits the whole nation. Theater managers all over the country are watching Syracuse for signs of success.

Bill Orange Set to Clash With Holy Cross Tomorrow

Korea Ambassador to Open Eastern Asian Conference

Dr. You Chang Yang, Korean ambassador to the United States, will give the opening address at the annual conference on Eastern Asia at 8 p.m. tonight in Maxwell auditorium

Dr. Yang who will speak on "Korea Today," will participate in the weekend events of the conference.

A SYRACUSE university graduate, Philip Han, is accompanying Dr. Yang. Han is the first secretary of the Korean embassy in Washington.

Dr. Yang is holding a press conference at 9:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. today in the Hotel Syracuse.

The highlight of Saturday's program will be a speech delivered by Dean Paul H. Appleby of the Maxwell School of Citizenship on "Government Problems in the New Asia."

During the morning a series of discussion groups, which will be led by prominent out-of-town participants, will be held. Representatives of Cornell and Colgate universities and the Institute of Pacific Relations will take part in the discussions.

Preceding Dean Appleby's talk will be a luncheon in Sims dining hall. After the dean's address more discussions will take place.

Asian problems, such as Communism, trade, industrialization, Soviet penetration and government will be the topics covered in the discussion groups. All interested in these discussions may attend them.

Dr. George B. Cressey, Dr. Donald Bishop and Douglas Haring of Maxwell are in charge of the weekend conferences.

Ed Sullivan Show Slated Nov. 16 At War Memorial

Ed Sullivan, star of CBS-TV's "Toast of the Town" and columnist for the New York Daily News, will bring his television-size revue to the War Memorial auditorium Nov. 16.

The benefit performance is sponsored by the LeMoyne College Guild for a building fund.

MAYOR THOMAS Corcoran has issued a proclamation making Nov. 16 "Ed Sullivan Day" in Syracuse and has urged all Syracusans to support the guild project.

Sullivan will bring several acts from "Toast of the Town" to the Memorial stage which will be supplemented by local talent. Accompanying him will be Ray Block, orchestra leader on the show, and four of Block's key musicians.

In order to promote local interest, a talent contest was given in connection with the Sullivan show on Wednesday evening at the Industrial club with contestants from all local industries participating.

Sullivan, long one of the nation's top newspaper men, entered the field of television during its early days and since that time has lifted his weekly "Toast of the Town" show (Sunday, 8 p.m., channel 8) to one of the "most-viewed" variety programs on the network. He is also credited with the introduction of a large amount of new talent into the medium.

ROY S. UNBEHEND, first vice-president of the guild, is general chairman of the affair, assisted by the honorary chairman, the Very Rev. William J. Schlaerth, S.J., president of LeMoyne college.

Tickets for the revue, priced at $3.50, $2.50, and $1.50 are available at Edwards and Sons department store and the Onondaga Hotel cigar stand.

Saltines Favorites By Six Point Margin

By JOEL FEIDELMAN
Daily Orange Junior Editor

The Syracuse university football team, 48 strong, will leave from Hancock field this afternoon for Worcester, Mass., in preparation for tomorrow's game with Holy Cross at Fitton field at 2 p.m. The Orange are a one touchdown favorite in pre-game calculations.

Although Syracuse is invading New England with only an average record of 2-2-1 in its five outings this year, the Orange have improved considerably with each encounter. Holy Cross started fast, but were upset by Brown last weekend, and are hoping to regain their previous form with a victory over the Piety Hillers.

FOUR ORANGE STALWARTS will not see action tomorrow. Bill Wetzel, not quite recovered from an injury received in the first four minutes of the opening Temple game, will not make the trip, while Vinnie Vergara, Lyle Carlson and Ray Perkins will accompany the team but their chances of playing are improbable.

As in previous games, Coach Ben Schwartzwalder is hoping that the Orange forward wall will stop the Crusaders' running attack. Practice sessions this week have emphasized defense as the Orange coaches have worked overtime to improve the Hill pass defense, one of the most evident weak spots in past games.

For the first time this season, Syracuse wasn't mentioned in the weekly rankings of rushing defense and total defense, but the Orange forward wall has continually outcharged and outplayed the lines of its opponents and is expected to give the Holy Cross a tiring afternoon. If Ben and his aides have come up with an adequate pass defense, Syracuse could easily regan the victory trail after two straight losses.

The unofficial starting lineup for the Orange will be the same as started last Saturday against the Illini. Neil Brenneman, filling in adequately for the injured Perkins, and soph Pete Schwert will open at end. There is a possibility that left end Herb Steigler will be moved to the right terminal to bolster Brenneman.

VETERANS JIM GEORGE and Les McClelland, playing along side each other on the strong side of the unbalanced line, will start in the tackle slots. Both have been high spots in the superlative work of the Orange forward wall.

Bob Fleck and Sam Johnson will continue in their guard positions while Ted Kukowski will round out the line in his center and line-backing specialty. Tenacious Ted and the 245-pound Fleck have both been mentioned prominently for section and All-American honors.

Pat Stark, who shone in the Illini tilt, will again lead the team from the quarterback spot, while workhorse Bob Leberman and punter Art Trollo will fill out the halfback positions. Soph Don Laaksonen will continue to sub for the injured Wetzel at fullback and as linebacker when Syracuse uses a 6-2-2-1 defense.

Tomorrow's clash at Worcester is the third straight away game for the Orange. The Hill gridders don't return home until Colgate provides the opposition on November 14. In the interim, Cornell will be met at Ithaca next Saturday. The season will be closed November 21 against Villanova in gigantic Municipal stadium in Philadelphia.

Draft Examination Applications Due

More students have picked up applications for the November selective service colleg qualification test than had at the same time last year, Earle W. Clifford, assistant dean of men, told The Daily Orange yesterday.

With deadline for filing the form set at Nov. 2, 460 students have taken applications. Less than tow hundred took the November exam last year, Clifford said.

THE EXAM will be administered Nov. 19 in Archbold gym.

Clifford urged all students who have not previously taken the test to do so this year.

The exam, three hours long, provides evidence for the use of local boards in considering a student for deferment from military service. Syracuse university will be one of approximately one thousand examination centers in the nation.

If an undergraduate student scores above 70, he may be deferred. Graduate students must get 75 to receive a deferment based on the exam.

THE TEST offers a way toward a student deferment in addition to class standing, Clifford said, and noted that taking it cannot be harmful.

In answer to those who believe that waiting to take the exam will up their score, he said that "specialization in any area tends to work adversely in a general test of this type, and therefore the sooner a student takes the test, the better he will probably do."

Ford Foundtion Offers Fellowships

Recipients to Study Vital World Areas

Fellowship awards for American men and women who wish to either begin or continue study or research on Asia or the Near and Middle East are being offered by the Ford Foundation board on Overseas Training and Research.

This program is intended to stimulate increased knowledge of these areas and to help meet the need for larger numbers of American men and women with deeper understanding of the peoples and governments of vital regions of the world.

Students who will graduate from college next year and people who have completed their formal educational training and have already initiated their careers are eligible to apply for the awards. The board expects to make the awards to people drawn from a wide variety of educational and professional backgrounds.

For further information and application blanks, write to the Ford Foundation board on Overseas Training and Research, 575 Madison ave., New York 22, New York. Deadline for applications is January 8, 1954.

DO Business Staff to Meet

All Daily Orange business staff members must attend a staff meeting at 4 p.m. Monday in the Hellobx. All prospective salesmen are urged to attend today's meeting, according to Robert Goldstein, business manager.

Bishop of Liberia Will Speak Sunday

Rt. Rev. David W. Harris, Episcopal bishop of Liberia, will speak to the Canterbury fellowship at 6:30 p.m. Sunday at Grace church.

He came to Syracuse to participate in the Patronal Festival at All Saints church and will leave Monday for New York to sail to Liberia.

Elected bishop of the missionary district of Liberia, West Africa, in 1945, he has been in the United States for several months to report on the progress being made.

The bishop is a native of North Carolina and has been active in Negro work here since he entered the ministry in 1920.

He worked in the Southern Virginia diocese and was in the home department of the national council of the Protestant Episcopal church.

Liberia is approximately 45,000 square miles and has a population of two million. The Episcopal church began work there in 1950 and now has 442 parishes and missions, 29 clergy and about 44,000 communicants in the district. Bishop Harris has no assistant.

New Events Added To Pool Schedule

Opens, Restricted Swims Set for Women

Special activities have been added to the Women's building pool program for 1953-54.

While Mondays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. are reserved for faculty women and women staff employees of the University, the pool will be opened from 8:30 to 9:30 p.m. to women graduate students.

On Thursdays from 8:30 to 9:30 p.m., the pool will be available for those women who wish to do lap swimming. It will be restricted to this activity.

Any graduate or undergraduate women registered at Syracuse university or University college are eligible for dips Monday, Tuesday and Friday from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. and on Wednesday from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Special or regular women's physical education privilege cards are required.

Maxon to Interview January Graduates

January graduates enrolled in either liberal arts or business administration will have an opportunity to be interviewed by the Regional Personnel director of Montgomery Ward.

G. D. Maxon will talk to men students interested in the store's retail store management program or in positions as accountant trainees.

Both men and women students seeking buyers jobs may arrange for an interview with Maxon.

Interested students may discuss interview times before noon on Tuesday in 105 Slocum.

A Montgomery Ward representative will also visit the campus in the spring for June graduates.

MSF to Complete Reservation Work

Methodist Student fellowship members will complete work on a social service project at the Onondaga Indian reservation tomorrow.

Groups will leave from the Chapel at 8:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. Last Saturday about 25 students applied new siding and a fresh coat of paint to parts of the Methodist parsonage on the county reservation.

MSG Announces Election Statistics

Civil service yesterday announced that a total of 494 male students voted in Wednesday's elections for 27 men's student government assemblymen.

Civil service refused to issue a reakbdown of number of votes in each class. It said that the freshman class cast the most ballots while the senior class the least.

Junior Elections officer Willard Schop asked all elected assemblymen to submit campaign expense accounts or statements to the civil service office.

Deadline Slated For Chairmanship

Applications for plenary chairmanship of the American foreign policy conference will be accepted until 5 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 4.

Applications may be turned in to Marcia Michelbacher, Chi Omega. They should include name, address, phone number, year and experience in chairing such meetings.

WAA Lengthens Sign-up Deadline

Late basketball team registrations will be accepted Monday and Tuesday from 1 to 2 p.m. and from 4 to 5 p.m. in the Women's Athletic Association board room in the Women's building.

Women's cottages and sorority houses wishing to compete in the basketball tournament must file petitions stating their reasons for late registration, in the board room.

OPEN HOUSE

Phillips cottage is holding an open-house on Sunday, Nov. 1 to which the whole campus is invited. The house will be open to the students from 2 to 5 p.m.. Refreshments and entertainment will highlight the day.

Model Generators On Display Today

Small scale models of two pressure steam generators will be on display today in the Lyman hall museum.

The display is being brought to the campus by the Babcock and Wilcox company and is sponsored by the mechanical engineering department of the College of Engineering and the student branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

One model is a pulverized-coal-fired open-pass reheat boiler designed to operate at a pressure of 2,075 pounds per square inch, delivering steam superheated to 1,050 degree fahrenheit, with reheating to the same temperature.

The other model is a cyclone-furnace-fired radiant reheat boiler of a capacity of 1,500,000 pounds of steam per hour. Both models are color coded and without outside walls, so that the flow of fuel, air, gas, water, and steam can be completely traced to show the functioning of modern boilers.

All engineers in the community are invited to attend the display. W. R. Little of Babcock and Wilcox will address the meeting of the student ASME at 11 a.m. today.

Krinsky to Speak At Jewish Service

Dr. Krinsky of the Maxwell school will speak on "Balfour Day, 36 years later: the renewal of the services in Chapel at 7:15 p.m. Arab-Israeli conflict" at Jewish today.

Lloyd Dunsker will be the student cantor. The blessing of the candles will be done by Rena Hyman. Student readers will be Jack Most, William Levine and Matthew Seidman and Phil Lapedus.

Beta Sigma Rho, Phi Sigma Alpha, Zeta Beta Tau and Pi Epsilon Pi will also take part in the service.

An informal Oneg Shabbot will be held in the Colonial Room of the Chapel after the service. The JSF discussion group will meet after the Oneg Shabbot.

Carnival to Get Free Equipment

Miscellaneous equipment without charge is available for all groups sponsoring booths tomorrow's Campus Chest carnival, according to an announcement from the Hill Bookstall on Marshall st.

Lynch to Appear Sunday Evening

Christopher Lynch, the noted Irish tenor, will present a concert in Lincoln auditorium this Sunday at 8:15 p.m. under the auspices of the Syracuse Catholic Women's club.

Lynch, who for many years has been one of the best-known representatives in the world of song from his native Ireland, will present a program ranging from operatic arias to several Broadway show tunes. He will also render a number of Irish folk tunes.

In addition to his work on the concert stage, the gifted tenor has made several radio and television appearances in the past few years. He studied in Dublin, London and Rome before making an American debut at Carnegie Hall.

Daily Orange Notice Ruling

The Daily Orange requests that all campus notices be turned in not later than 3:30 p.m. on the day preceding insertion. All notices for Monday issues must be turned in by 3:30 p.m. on the Friday preceding publication.

Articles will be written on scheduled meetings only when sufficient newsworthy facts are presented to warrant a separate article.

Booths to Dot Quad at Carnival

"Dig That Carnival."

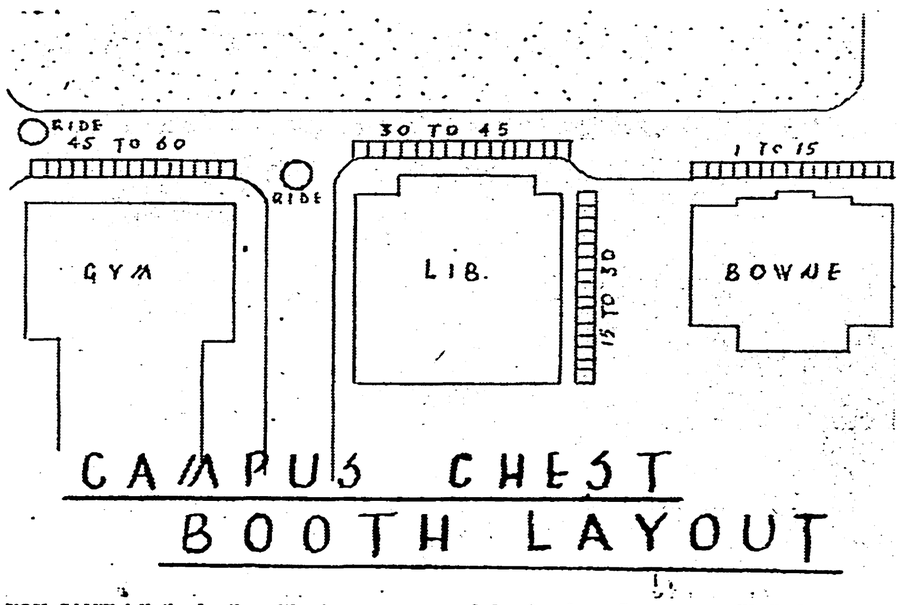
Tomorrow at 12, the 4th annual Campus Chest carnival will begin on the newly dug quad. Over 60 booths complete with flashy colors, loud barkers and fun for all will open as Syracuse university takes a seven hour excursion into the world of the midway.

THE ENTIRE festivities will begin as carnival co-chairman Harold Steinberg introduces Chancellor Tolley who will give the opening address. From that time on, each guest will be able to select his own form of entertainment from among the multitude of festivities.

For the men, one of the main attractions will be the "Can-Can" sponsored by Kappa Sigma and Kappa Kappa Gamma. There should also be a large male congregation around Heffron Cottage's "Getting Gertie's Garter" and "Monte Carlo With Girls" under the direction of Skytop M-6 and Ten Eyck cottage.

Anyone intrigued by mechanical rides will be satisfied by "The Chairoplane" run by Sigma Alpha Mu, Beta Theta Pi and Alpha Gamma Delta and another ride

(See CARNIVAL, page 4)



YOU CAN'T tell the booths without a program, and here's where Syracusans will flock tomorrow for the annual Campus Chest carnival, to be located on th enew quadrangle. More than 60 booths will vie for the interest—and money—of fun-seeking and charity-minded collegiates. Chancellor WILLIAM P. TOLLEY will kick off the festivities with a noon-time address.

Syracuse Will Meet Weakened Opponent

By BOB LEFKO
Daily Orange Junior Editor

In recent weeks, it has been Ben Ben Schwartzwalder's Orangemen who have done most of the griping because of injuries. This week, the tables will be turned and the Saltine's opponents, Holy Cross will be the squad in the worst physical shape.

This doesn't necessarily mean Syracuse's injured crew has improved since an inactive list with names like Bill Wetzel, Ray Perkins, Lyle Carlson and Vince Vergara is an impressive one. Nevertheless, the Crusaders are in such bad shape they are setting an unenviable record.

MOST IMPORTANT losses for the New Englanders are halfback Gene Schiller, end John Carroll and fullback Warren O'Donnell. They're just a small segment of the injury list though as 10 men from the Crusader's first two squads will be lost for the game.

Due to injuries, Coach Eddie Anderson has found it necessary to completely rearrange his new positions. The Crusader's squad and many men will be at No. 1 quarterback in previous games, Bill Haley, will be switched to halfback to fill in for Schiller, formerly the top Holy Cross runner.

With Haley at halfback, the signal-calling spot will be filled by senior Don Jolie. The veteran passer was understudy to Chuck Maloy his first three years at school and will be getting his first real test Saturday.

Veteran Pete Biocca will again fill the righthalf spot and may be the only regular backfield man in his right position. At fullback, Anderson is still not sure whether he will use Chick Murphy or Joe Harrington. Murphy has been rotating with the injured O'Donnell in early games, but was unimpressive in last week's defeat to Brown.

BOB DEE, a giant end will be elevated from the reserves to fill Carroll's shoes and team with Capt. Hank Lemire. Carroll's absence will put a big hole in the Crusaders' passing attack since he was their leading end with 11 receptions.

Ed Stromski, another inexperienced junior will be at center in place of the injured John Hurley and Dick Murphy. Murphy has been relegated to the reserves after lackadasical performances in early clashes.

Other starting linemen for the Crusaders, barring further injuries will be tackles Jim Vogt and Mike Cooney, and guards Tony Parisi and Bob Flacke.

Fearful of the Orange power after last week's near upset of Illinois, Anderson has said the New Englanders will "have to concentrate on our defense. We must stop Syracuse first and then see what we can do about getting a touchdown or two."

POSSIBLY THE most important man in getting those TD's will be end Lemire. Matt Bolger, the Brown end coach rates the Holy Cross captain as "one of the great ends."

With all the injuries, many of the Crusader's starting 11 will probably be counted on to go all 60 minutes. Halfback is where depth is really lacking with only George Hettinger ready to step into the breach. Gerry O'Leary and Gerry Jackson, the squad's two fastest men and Bob Rosmarino, Ed Ney

Political chaos

This newspaper supports no candidates during campus elections. As the only organ to which students have access, we do not feel it proper for The Daily Orange to champion the cause of one candidate or party.

We believe that students are capable of forming wise decisions on their own observations of the candidates.

This editorial stand, however, does not condone the conduct of every party, no matter what methods it uses to promote its own interests.

The demeanor of Piety Hill Alliance's formal (and informal) officials since the student government protest board's decision against them last Friday has done nothing but create confusion among students.

The entire issue, as it was eventually developed, had nothing to do with the freshmen candidates and little to do with the elections themselves. But the publicity and notoriety in which the frosh of necessity were emeshed was far beyond any reasonable limits.

The initial blame lay with the individual houses for putting up material before campaigning could officially begin. However, the entire party can be censured for the action following this.

The conduct of some PHA members during the joint court trial Wednesday left much to be desired. The representatives not only tried to discredit one of the members of the government board but also attempted to destroy faith in the entire board, thus reflecting on the character of students who have served in civil service or non-political jobs during their entire college career.

They also made statements, which if ever repeated outside of court to even one person, could constitute slander.

Although we realize that any party, nationally or locally, may defend itself in somewhat the same fashion, we cannot absolve PHA on this basis. Politics of their nature cannot be pure, but neither should they drag people or institutions through this type of incrimination.

We once more urge the freshmen to disregard these irrelevant issues and concentrate on the individual candidates and their qualifications.

Perhaps better party organization and a reaffirmation of principle will prevent occurrences of this type in the future.

Editorial evolution

After observing the results of yesterday's experiment, the editors of this paper have decided to change the column sizes of the editorial page. Whereas the former width of a column, excluding the editorials, was two inches, the new width is two and a sixth inches per column. This expansion of the feature columns also results in the reduction of the editorial column from four to three inches.

The move has been made in an aim to further the readability of the page presenting a more concise editorial column and allowing space for additional articles on the rest of the page.

This is the first time such a layout of the editorial page has been done in the history of the Daily Orange.

NSA: THE IMPELLING GROUP

By EILEEN CHAMBERLAIN

(Editor's note: This is the second and final story in a series on national and local functions of NSA. Today's article concerns achievements and plans of the Syracuse chapter.)

National Student's association at Syracuse university has generally been known as an information-finding body in campus problems. In the past it has been the impelling group behind a number of improvements on the Hill.

Identification cards for all students were proposed by NSA two years ago to replace the unwieldy passbooks formerly given at registration. The possibility of a smaller identification credential was studied by NSA members and placed before student government assemblies.

The change was inspired by knowledge of similar identification plans at other colleges and universities. When the first Syracuse ID cards appeared they were on a trial basis. As the system seemed to be more successful than the earlier method, officials decided to continue it.

This year the pink and blue cards with photos pasted on the outside replaced the original white tickets with inserted pictures. NSA will probably continue to study results of the ID card system to improve it in succeeding years.

Student discount service, which began at Syracuse this fall, was originally a national project of the student association.

Working through NSA, women's and men's student government coordinated a plan for the discount system, found local merchants who were willing to cooperate and supervised the sale of discount cards at the September registration.

The student discount service is conducted throughout the United States on college and university campuses.

Syracuse university is a participant in the national plan to exchange American and Canadian students. Every other year a group of Canadian students comes to Syracuse for a long weekend to study the general campus setup here. They visit classes, inspect various activities and are entertained by the local affiliate of NSA.

In alternating years students from Syracuse visit Canadian universities to observe procedure there.

Foreign policy conferences form a large part of NSA proceedings. Members of the local NSA are planning now for a spring conference here. They hope to secure a national political figure as guest speaker.

The local members have considered trying to obtain Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt or Adlai Stevenson.

NSA is an organization which seeks to coordinate national university activities with local campus policies. This year co-chairmen Marcia Michelbacher and Darwin Bolden will attempt to carry out a program designed to promote student welfare at Syracuse university and to integrate the program with national activities of the student association.

Scotch & ?

A dull class or two seems as prevelent in the midwest as in the rainy east as reported from the Michigan State Daily:

An intellectual history class was discussing the various contributions of European cultures to the American colonies. From the rear of the room came a question . . . "and how about the Scotch-Irish?"

The professor paused, "Ah, yes, the Scotch-Irish. Ah . . . they were partially Scotch and partially Irish. Hmmmmm . . . they came from Scotland and Ireland, that's how they got their name you know. Well . . . we know very little about the Scotch-Irish settlers."

IN THE HALLWAY

No Squawks, Please

By ED HARDY

Daily Orange Columnist

Wednesday was the perfect example of two kinds of attitudes toward student government in action.

It was a day in which about 4,500 undergraduate men had a chance to exercise their lawful right— and their duty—to elect representatives to the men's student government assembly.

And it was a day in which a campus political party—Piety Hill Alliance—questioned the decision by the student government protest board which suspended the recently-formed group for four months and forced them to withdraw support from four candidates for freshman class officers.

Apathy once again was the byword in the elections. A little more than 10 per cent of the male population, or 494 men, went to the polls. Definitely a poor performance on the part of citizens who should take an interest in who passes the laws that affect them.

We'd suggest that there be no squawks of objection from campus men this year if they don't approve of what the assembly does. Objections could have been voiced in voting.

In a heated, six-hour session last evening, legal processes of student government were tested—and upheld.

The decision brought in by the joint student court was actually the only fair one that could be rendered in such a situation.

The protest board as well as one of its members was on trial. According to the class elections act as revised in March, there are only two grounds on which a decision could be appealed: submission of new evidence or violation of procedure by the protest board.

There was no new evidence, but Piety Hill intimated that George Kepner, special projects commissioner of men's student government had acted in bad faith and therefore the board's decision to remove PHA from the political scene was not justified.

The court ruled against the charges of bias on Kepner's part—based on testimony by one witness that the commissioner had told Tri-Orange Co-chairman Jack Hennessey PHA would be punished if a protest of illegal campaigning were filed. Both Hennessey and Kepner denied any such statements. It would seem that the PHA witness had mistakenly twisted normal political talk around.

The court also set a rule that request for appeal of a protest board decision be considered by the entire court before an injunction be issued.

The precedence set by the joint court in its decision established the respect the elections protest board deserves. It should mean that fewer appeals of the board's actions will come in future campaigns.

Mulching We Will Go

A 31-inch thing-a-ma-bob is buzzing out its own peculiar September song on the Syracuse campus and making short work of a zillion or so autumn leaves as they loiter helplessly on the wide Orange spaces.

The particular mechanical device in question is a marvelous bit of wizardy called "The Leaf Mulcher," designed with the specific intent of pulverizing the leaf population on campus to near dust.

Manufactured by the Toro company, the "Leaf Mulcher" is an attachment to Toro's Whirlwind lawn mower and it employes a 31-inch rotating blade to do its digestive chores. Utilizing the suction and hammer mill processes the gadget reduces each leaf to bits and deposits it upon the ground again to serve as a natural fertilizer.

According to Campus Foreman Merrow, the new machine has been in use over a week and has shown such promise that in order for a second mulcher has been placed by the Building and Grounds department. Although the entire campus has yet to be vacumed by the machine, the goal is almost in sight.

"It eliminates all raking and depositing of leaves," Merrow boasted, "and it has also relieved four or five men of a difficult chore."

And presumably, the Syracuse campus will be a much more fertile expanse, come the Spring growing season.

It would seem that this newest addition to the army of devices for the betterment of things beautiful while affecting a mild sort of unemployment, it definitely is a step forward in the struggle twist man and his trees.

"Thou art mulch . . . to mulch thou shall return."

Thailand in Syracuse

By ANDRA KADALIS

I became interested in Thailand about which all I knew was the name, and even that for some strange reason in my mind was connected with tea.

That's why when I met Siddlichai Somchit—or Sonnie for short, my first question was: "Do you drink a lot of tea in your country?" Sonnie laughed and explained, that Thai stands for—free, and Thailand is "the land of free." Then as she mentioned that before her country had been called Siam, I already had an idea, at least as to where Thailand is located on the map.

Can't you just picture little delicate Sonnie arriving in U.S. a month ago, completely lost in a huge pile of baggage? And she was not going to let her baggage out of her sight either. She looked very suspiciously at all porters and expresses that offered her help—you see, this was something new for her. But finally Sonnie had to give in, and her baggage was transported without her. "I was very surprised," she says, "when it really did arrive in Syracuse!"

But that was only the first step in the U.S. In a little while Sonnie was completely bewildered by the largeness of this country, and the great speed, that life is going on here.

"In my country we don't take life so seriously," she smiles, "my people are happy and content with what they have, and that's why we have more time for actually living, and not running after something all the time. My people are also very sociable and helpful, like for example in the villages there is no such thing as I do my work and you do yours. Everybody joins together in harvesting their fields."

As a matter of fact Sonnie is studying education and orientation program here, and hopes to teach the young people of Thailand to be more serious. Thailand is such a rich country with its natural resources, but they are not properly used. The young people of Thailand think more about traveling and seeing other lands than their own.

Sonnie is very glad that she is so far in the north, and she is impatiently waiting for snow, because that also will be a new experience for her. At this point I kind of unconsciously looked at the beautiful light silk national costume Sonnie was wearing and shivered a little. "Oh, yes," Sonnie explains, "as for a winter coat, I don't have one yet, but I'll soon get it, and it will be my first one. And boots—it must be fun to wear those!"

Otherwise Sonnie feels almost at home in Syracuse, and thinks that the American people are extremely friendly. Except for a litle disappointment: "In Thailand I had seen many American movies, and had been greatly impressed by the Indians, but here you don't even see any. Only on the reservations, but they don't wear the big feathers, nor run around half naked, she concludes sadly. Instead, Sonnie is very fascinated by the American girls, that remind her of the beautiful dolls imported in Thailand from Europe and U.S.

When asked about boys Sonnie, who looks so very young, admits, that even though she would like to get to know the American boys better, she is already married, and has her husband and a three-year-old daughter back home. And they are the only thing she misses in Syracuse.

Sonnie wishes very much that the Americans would learn more about Thailand, because she says that it hurts very much to hear people say that Thailand, which has been free for centuries, is a part of Indochina or something like that.

Harriers Encounter Army In Meet at Cadet Course

By BOB GROGAN
Daily Orange Junior Editor

In their toughest meet of the season to date, the Syracuse university cross country team will engage Army's Black Knights this afternoon at West Point.

The Piety runners will be out to establish another winning skein once they were beaten last Saturday by Cornell after 11 consecutive dual meet triumphs.

ARMY IS LED by Captain Bill Cory, a senior from Talmo, Kansas. Others who figure prominently in Coach Nathaniel Cartmell's plans for a successful season include seniors Bill Almon and Bob Wray and junior Jim Healy.

The Cadets have lost four of last year's top five runners including Lew Olive, Heptagonal individual champion in 1952.

Captain Ray Osterhout of the Orange will be seeking his fourth straight individual meet triumph in today's race. The Piety flash finished first against St. John's and Navy in a triangular run, and Cornell and Colgate in dual runs.

Osterhout, according to Coach Bob Grieve, is the only Syracuse performer running up to his capabilities. His time of 26:16 against Cornell established a new course record at Ithaca.

AFTER A FIVE-DAY battle with flu, Steve Armstrong has returned to action but because of the long layoff, may be of little use to the Hill thinclads.

Armstrong's poor showing at Ithaca was attributable to his illness. Had he been in top running condition, the Orange harriers might still possess an undefeated record.

Sophomores Ed Alger and Jim George must take up the slack in the Piety lineup caused by the inconsistent performances of seniors Don Fryer, Frank Calzi and Gene Parker.

Parker ran a strong second in the Colgate race but has since been disappointing in meet competition.

LES VIELBIG, a highly regarded sophomore harrier, did not make the trip to West Point because of a leg injury. He has been unable to run for the past two weeks and will probably require at least another seven days to regain his running form.

A freshman race between Syracuse and West Point will precede the varsity encounter. Bob Milner of the Orange will be after his second win of the season in this race. He finished well ahead of the rest of the field in the freshman race against Cornell last week.

Following the Army meet, the Orange harriers will face Fordham and Iona in a triangular race in New York City on Nov. 7.

The Cross country team plans to return home immediately after the meet with Army. Grieve will probably run nine men in the race and hope that they all manage to finish.

CAPTAIN RAY OSTERHOUT will be after his fourth triumph of the season today when Syracuse engages Army in a cross country meet at West Point.

NCAA Grid Survey Shows Attendence Drop Nationally

Statistics released by the NCAA yesterday, revealed a three per cent drop in collegiate football attendance up to and including last Saturday's games.

The biggest drop in attendance has taken place in the Missouri Valley Conference where a 13 per cent reduction was recorded. This conference includes such national powerhouses as Oklahoma and Missouri.

Ivy league followers are rejoicing to the biggest national gain in attendance of four per cent. This disclosure is rather surprising since the league has only come up with one powerful team this year in Pennsylvania.

The Big Ten continues to be the largest drawing league in the country. Some of the biggest institutions in the world are represented in this league: Michigan, Illinois and Michigan State to name the larger ones.

Tangerine Gridders Clash With Wyoming Seminary

Bill Orange's Tangerine gridders will be gunning for their second straight win of the season this Saturday at Hendricks field when they take on the Wyoming Seminary eleven of Pennsylvania. Kick off time is 2 p.m.

Coach Les Dye will start a team consisting chiefly of players who didn't see too much action in last week's encounter with Army. The frosh gridders defeated a tough Plebe outfit, 20-13 at West Point.

IN THE first of two home games this year, Dye will go with Jimmy Ridlon and Vern Howell at the wing posts. Jim Leutze and McGuire will start at the guard positions.

Jack Kiviat and Stan Leonik, tackles, and Joe Rose, center, round out the starting line. Dick Bach will handle the signal-calling chores and Bill Brown will start at full. Dye's halfbacks will be Nick Baccile and Ron Tyler.

The white-haired frosh mentor is starting a relatively inexperienced team so he can get a line on each player's ability. He plans to use two teams interchangeably throughout the game, as he did last week, to give each boy a chance to perform.

With the exception of Mike Minko, who suffered a recurrence of an ankle injury and Jerry Cashman, who will be out of action with a bad back, the Tangerines are in good physical shape. Tackle Jim Podraza and guard Ted Warholak began working out again this week after recovering from early season injuries.

Saturday's tilt should provide some indication of how strong Colgate's frosh team is this year. The little Red Raiders beat Wyoming, 35-7 earlier this season.

Leberman, Fleck To Lead Orangemen

Bob Leberman, speedy halfback from Hamburg, N. Y., and Bob Fleck, 256 pound guard who hails from Syracuse, have been selected by the Orange coaching staff to represent the Orange gridders as co-captains for the Holy Cross contest tomorrow at Worcester.

This will mark the third time that Leberman has been one of the co-captains. Three weeks ago he was chosen to this post for the Fordham game and last week he was one of the Piety captains at Illinois.

The honor given to the hard-charging halfback is greatly deserving. Bob's performance in the Illinois game left little to be desired. There is little doubt that he will be given much consideration when the all-East selections are made.

As is the rule of Syracuse football, co-captains are designated before every contest.

Final Opportunity For Block Seats At Cornell Tilt

Block seating for the Cornell football game at Ithaca on November 7 must be completed by this afternoon. All student tickets must be purchased by Nov. 5 for the game with the Big Red. Student tickets, also good for block seating, sell for $1.80 in the ticket office in Archbold gymnasium. An ID card and ticket for the game must also be presented to procure student tickets.

Hill Booters Seek Initial Victory At Union Tomorrow

Piety Lineup Changed As Coccari Searches For Winning Combo

By ALEX STRASSER
Daily Orange Junior Editor

The Syracuse booters attempt to end their two game losing streak tomorrow when they travel to Schenectady to meet Union college in the next to last away game of the current campaign.

Coach Andy Coccari is planning to make only a few minor changes in the line-up that saw action against Sampson last Saturday.

IN ONE OF the changes, Vic Oberschal will get his first starting assignment since the Cornell game. Obershal hasn't seen much action since then but Coccari is hoping that he will be able to regain his top playing form.

Offensive star Sig Wirth has been switched from the center forward slot to the inside left position on the forward wall in another change by Coccari.

Bill Nelson, whose ejection from the Sampson tilt was considered by many to be the turning point in the game will take over Wirth's old center forward position.

The Orange's defensive wall will see Joe Milliron and Nick Rozos at the fullback positions while Don Moller, Don Schupe and Bud Gormon round out the defensive section at the halfback posts.

MILLIRON, SCHUPE and Gormon have been pleasant surprises to soccer fans this season. Milliron did stand out on last year's frosh squad but he wasn't expected to break into the starting lineup.

Before this fall, Schupe used to do all his running for track mentor Bob Grieve. Out for soccer for the first time this year, Schupe has won a starting position. Both he and Milliron play an aggressive game, keeping the pressure constantly on the opposition.

Although he saw a good deal of varsity action last year, Gormon also wasn't given much chance of making the first team. To Coccari's pleasant surprise, however, the husky junior has turned out to be one of the better halfbacks on the squad.

DUNCAN ROBB is another junior who will start against Union on Saturday. Robb is one of the best side shots of the game and against Sampson last Saturday, he finally netted his first goal of the campaign.

THE GOAL POSITION will once again be capably handled by Gunnar Wirth. The younger Wirth has made some difficult saves and has effectively plugged the biggest gaps in the Orange's defensive structure.

The way frosh Frank Stille has been handling the ball lately, however, it appears that Wirth will not be needed at goal next year, thus freeing him for exclusive offensive duty.

Holy Cross . . .

and Larry Travers will all be on the bench.

A full house of 25,000 fans is expected to see the game at Worcester in what is the 11th renewal of the series. Last year's contest at Archbold Stadium found the Orange on the long end, 20-19 as a last minute score won the game.

Along the Sidelines

Worcester is a typical New England city. One of the main manufacturing centers of the grand, old soverign state of Massachusetts, the home of the Holy Cross Crusaders is usually a quiet, untroubled metropolis.

Tomorrow, however, the staid community will turn into a riproaring, rah-rah collegiate confusion as Uncle Ben's Orangemen lead over 500 fans to the Crusaders' homecoming contest.

There's no doubt that the game will be a good one. They always are. The last time the Orange invaded the Yankee city, the result was one of the most heart-stopping battles in Syracuse grid history.

All the excitement of the 1950 thriller was crammed into the final five minutes of play. A rampaging Syracuse squad had run roughshod for the first three quarters, 27-7. Orange fans sat back smugly, backfield coach Bill Bell contentedly began to put away his spotter cards in the press box and Ben Schwartzwalder relaxed on the Syracuse bench.

Then the roof fell in. Within the space of 4 minutes, the resilient Crusaders had bounced back for three quick touchdowns to tie the game. With two minutes left, HC shortkicked the kickoff. In the mad scramble which ensued, an Orange player wrapped his arms around the spinning pigskin on the Crusader 45-yard line.

A 15-yard penalty brought the ball to the Holy Cross 30 and then after several ground plays, the accurate right arm of the Orangemen's brilliant quarterback, Bernie Custis, passed the ball to a Syracuse player in the end zone for the winning, eleventh-hour score.

Tomorrow's game promises to be made out of the same mold. The Crusaders reportedly use six to eight different offensive formations running from an unbalanced line. This means that the Orange will have to stick with a simple defensive alignment and hope for the best.

According to Les Dye, who scouted the Purple, there is no team that HC would rather beat, with the possible exception of Boston College, than Syracuse. The coaching staff feels that Dr. Eddie Anderson's obys have been eagerly looking forward to this game.
