We would like to invite you to take part in a research project. The purpose of this research is to gain a comprehensive understanding of the experience of academic clustering through the lens of former student athletes. Academic clustering is objectively defined by Case and Greer (1987) as when a significant percentage, typically 25% or greater, of student athletes on one team have the same major. Though a cluster is not wholly unethical, it does raise concerns as to why student athletes are clustered. Utilizing a phenomenological approach this proposed study goes beyond what academic clustering is, but more so explores the experience of clustered student athletes.

You must be at least 18 years old to be in this research project.

The study will take place over the telephone and will consist of three sessions that will take approximately 90 minutes each. All sessions will be tape recorded and transcribed at a later date. If you decide to take part in this study, you will be asked to answer a series of questions about your experience of being clustered into your academic major.

There are no foreseeable risks or discomforts to you for taking part in this study. At the conclusion of the research project all tape recordings and transcriptions will be destroyed.

Your part in this study will be handled in a confidential manner. Only the researchers will know that you participated in this study. Any reports or publications based on this research will use only group data and/or pseudonyms and will not identify you, your college, or any individual as being of this project.

The decision to participate in this research project is up to you. You do not have to participate and you can refuse to answer any question. Even if you begin the study, you may withdraw at any time. You will not be paid for your participation in this study.

If you have any questions about this study, please feel free to call Vaughn Calhoun (857) 212-2893, the person mainly responsible for the research. You can also contact Dr. David Szabla (617) 866-9100, the Principal Investigator.

If you have any questions about your rights in this research, you may contact Nan C. Regina, Director, Human Subject Research Protection, 960 Renaissance Park, Northeastern University, Boston, MA 02115. Tel: (617) 373-7570, Email: irb@neu.edu. You may call anonymously if you wish.

Hello,

As a current doctoral student at Northeastern University a part of my requirements to graduate is to conduct an original research study. Thus, my research interest is to examine the lived experience of former Division I student athletes who have been academically clustered. Academic clustering is a phenomenon in which a number of student athletes, typically 25% or more, are implicitly or explicitly placed in an academic major because it is considered "athletic friendly" so that the student athlete is on a path of least academic resistance in order to focus on his athletic commitments. The title of my research study is A Phenomenological Study of Division I Student Athletes and the Experience of Academic Clustering. I am proposing to interview former Division I male student athletes who participated in either football or men's basketball to obtain their experience of being academically clustered.

Specifically, you are being reached out to because, 1. You are a former collegiate student athlete 2. You participated in football or men's basketball and 3. You may have been academically clustered. Because I was a clustered student athlete, I have a genuine interest in gaining a deeper understanding of the experience of being clustered therefore filling a gap in the current literature that is void of the student athlete's perspective of being clustered. The current literature only speaks of the frequency of clustering.

Your agreement to participate in this research study will require you to take part in a series of three interviews lasting approximately 90 minutes each. These interviews will be arranged at a mutually convenient time and you will be tape recorded so that I will have an accurate account of your description, which will be transcribed at a later date. I will also take notes during our time together. Neither your name nor any other identifying information will be used in this study, and you will have the opportunity to review any and all of the audiotape transcriptions for accuracy. You may withdraw at any time if you feel uncomfortable or no longer wish to participate. If you can confirm that you were a clustered student athlete according to the above description and wish to participate I will forward via email a consent form that you must sign, date, and return to me. Also note that no compensation will be provided to you for participating.

I am happy to answer any questions that you have regarding the previous statements made and/ or about your potential participation in this process.

Thank you

ABSTRACT

The Relationship between Institutional, Departmental and Program-Specific Variables and the Academic Performance of Division I FBS Football Programs by

Steven C. Eigenbrot

Dr. Vicki Rosser, Examination Committee Chair
Professor of Educational Leadership University of Nevada, Las Vegas

This study investigated the connection between the academic evaluation of Division I FBS football programs and the various social settings that influenced these student-athletes. These social settings were classified as: institutional, departmental and program-specific. The experience of the student-athlete is thought to be impacted by all three settings, creating applicability for social identity theory, which provides the theoretical framework of the study.

Informed by a literature synthesis of previous research on this content area, this quantitative study relied on institutional data reported to the NCAA and United States Federal Government to further investigate this topic. Using a multivariate analysis and data gathered from the 2003-04 to the 2009-10 academic year, attributes of all three levels were placed in three regression models to locate trends based on program Academic Progress Rate performance or Graduation Success Rate. The study determined that private control of an institution and participation in bowl games significantly impacted academic performance. This study built on a strong theoretical framework that informed and challenged the dynamic between student and athlete, seeking to advance the understanding of the complex interplay between higher education and intercollegiate athletics.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Thank you very much to Dr. Vicki Rosser for her time, patience and guidance over this exceptionally educational journey. Her leadership and encouragement throughout this process was priceless. A very sincere show of appreciation is also in order for the members of my committee, Dr. Gerald Kops, Dr. Nancy Lough and Dr. Kim Nehls, whose flexibility, feedback and assistance was greatly valued. In particular, thank you to Dr. Kops for the encouragement he offered me five years ago that prompted me to begin this journey.

Thank you as well to Mr. Bill Brady, who invested his time and energy in serving as a mentor to me, and supported my pursuit of this degree in concert with my work schedule. Thank you as well to Mr. Brian Finn, Mr. Jeffrey Crane and Ms. Marcy Girton, each of whom also provided valuable support to me in balancing this experience along with a career.

Lastly, a big thank to you my parents, Ed and Carol, who have always been so supportive of my academic endeavors, and whose love and guidance helped make this a reality. Thank you as well to Kari and my siblings, Karen, Joe and Sara, and their families for their unwavering support during this process.

CHAPTER 1: OVERVIEW

Introduction

In April 2004, the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) adopted a "comprehensive academic-reform package," highlighted by the establishment of the Academic Progress Rate (APR) and Graduation Success Rate (GSR). According to the NCAA, this step was taken at the request of member institution presidents who requested new metrics, which accurately reflected academic performance to account for increased mobility amongst student-athletes. Furthermore, "both rates improve on the federally mandated graduation rate by including students who were omitted from the federal calculation" (NCAA, 2010b). Such a request was made as the negative publicity the topic received over a span of decades had grown in recent years. This occurred as the public became increasingly critical of academic lapses promoted in some cases by the difficult balancing act required to juggle the roles of student and athlete while playing at such a high level of sport (Suggs, 2005).

In the APR, the NCAA established a measure of academic progress to be used for all sport teams that would adjust each term with penalties for failing to meet minimum APR thresholds. These sanctions vary from reductions in the number of scholarships a team can offer to more severe penalties, such as bans from postseason play. With the GSR, institutions were provided with a metric of academic performance that was adjusted to take into consideration those students who did not graduate due to a transfer that occurred when the student was in good academic standing (NCAA, 2010b).

Armed with these two new metrics, those in higher education and intercollegiate athletics were now provided a new lens to quantify the often pressed subject of student-athlete academic performance. To speak to the importance of this inquiry, Maloney and McCormick (1993) summarize the attention paid to intercollegiate athletics quite candidly, noting: "The volume of coverage in the lay press concerning the academic successes and failures of athletes so far outweighs similar stories about non-athletes that one is sometimes left to wonder if anyone cares at all about what goes on in America's colleges and universities unless it pertains to sports or athletes" (p. 555). Whether this quote exemplifies an exaggeration or an unfortunate truth is debatable, but regardless, it illustrates the attention the topic garners.

Speaking to this attention, a shift from individual academic responsibility to team-based accountability has also occurred. In August 2011, the NCAA's Division I Board of Directors approved a future heightening of academic standards of achievement for college athletic programs. This decree called for a raise in the APR benchmark, enhanced bans from NCAA governed post-seasons and financial penalties to those programs that do not perform in the classroom (Sander, 2011a). While this decision has reemphasized the importance of this issue in the modern landscape of college athletics, it is not without critique. For instance, Amy Perko, executive director of the Knight Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics, objected to the heightened APR requirements, noting that absent of stronger initial eligibility requirements for incoming student-athletes, these changes are "not fair to the athletes who are not prepared to do the college-level work" (Grasgreen, 2011, p. 1).

Moreover, some critics argue that the increased academic standards appear to be enhancing the class system in college athletics. Sander (2011a) notes that these objectors claim that since the launch of the APR and its associated penalties, only the large and wealthy athletic programs with expensive academic-support services are equipped. Research supports this claim, as Leung (2011) explains that under the existing ban for post-season play, when it came to men's basketball only less wealthy programs (Cal State Northridge, Grambling, Louisiana-Monroe and Southern) were banned from post-season play.

These critiques are heightened because this decision to adjust the APR lacks a critical mass of empirical research to inform the topic. Therefore, considering this platform for attention presented by intercollegiate athletics, there is an implied value to higher education in filling this gap in existing research and developing an understanding of factors that influence these new metrics. By discovering the role that institutional, departmental and program specific variables play in promoting or preventing the academic achievement of football student-athletes at the highest level of intercollegiate sport, an enhanced understanding of best practices and other significant trends occurs. While the challenging interplay between the role of student and athlete may be at the core of intercollegiate athletics, ideally, this work represents one step on the path of enhancing the student identity of these young people.

The purpose of this study is to examine the role institutional, departmental and program-specific variables play in influencing football student-athletes' academic progress and performance through the framework of social identity theory. The overview of this study will begin by establishing how this work is informed by prior research on the topic, moving on to establish the study's conceptual framework and purpose. The study will then move on to discuss the research design, highlighting the study's research questions, and finally, discussing relevant definitions and limitations of the study.

Literature Review

Explaining the purpose of intercollegiate athletics without using the term "student-athlete" would be impossible. The pursuit of these talented young people is the very core of the entire enterprise. The term itself however, explains a complex and challenging duality of roles juggled by its participants: the role of student and the role of athlete. While the NCAA and today's intercollegiate athletics administrators put forth that the role of "student" is to come before that of "athlete," both the popular media and academic research have brought forth objections, with some even going as far as to argue these students should be viewed as employees of their institutions (McCormick & McCormick, 2006).

Research suggests the academic struggles experienced by student-athletes may be explained in part by their college preparation. High school academic performance (Maloney & McCormick, 1993), as well as demographic factors and academic ability (Lang, Dunham, & Alpert, 1988; Sellers, 1992) were all shown to predict academic performance at the college level. It also has been used to explain below average academic performance for athletes in revenue sports (Purdy, Eitzen, & Hafnagel, 1982).

However, there are significant deviations from the normal recruitment of a student to college from the recruitment of student-athletes (Hood, Craig & Ferguson, 1992; Pascarella & Smart, 1991). Research explains that student-athletes come from unique backgrounds and environments when compared to non-athlete peers (Pascarella et al., 1999). To this end, when statistical controls are made for background characteristics that influence academic aptitude, the academic achievement of athletes and their non-athlete peers, the two are roughly equal (American College Testing Program & Educational Testing Service, 1984; Hood, Craig & Ferguson, 1992; Pascarella & Smart, 1991; Smith & Dizney, 1966; Stuart, 1985). Informed by these findings, this study will focus on those characteristics within the setting of higher education and discuss their impact on the student-athlete.

Regardless of pre-college experiences, the majority of choices made regarding the balancing of roles between student and athlete are made while on campus. Current quantitative data suggests that for the football playing student-athlete, balancing this duality of roles is difficult. LeCrom et al. (2009) notes in his study of 12,980 APR observations between the years 2001-2005 that male student-athletes are less likely to be retained than females. He also found that team sport participants are less likely to graduate than those that participate in individual sports. Pascarella et al. (1999) found that football and male basketball players had negative cognitive affects from sport participation, irrespective of precollege experiences. Rishe (2003) posits this occurs because of the financial stakes of big time athletics and pressure to succeed on the field. Pascarella et al. take their explanation a step farther, warning that "competing in major revenue-producing sports simply absorbs so much physical and psychological energy that there is only a limited amount left to make the kinds of intense investments in one's academic experience that enhance cognitive growth" (p. 23).

Some would argue that in order to meet this exhausting balance of academic pressures and athletic success, institutions have invested excessive in the issue. The Knight Commission (2010) notes that median spending per athlete at the major conference level comes in between four and 11 times more than median spending on education-related activities per student, with the average athletic budget at this level on pace to exceed $250 million by 2020. However, the long-term viability of this type of spending is in question. As of the 2008 fiscal year, the NCAA reported that 25 Division I Football Bowl Subdivision institutions reported positive net revenues for their athletic programs, with the median at about $3 million in excess revenue per institution. However, according to the Knight Commission (2010), the median deficit for the other nearly 100 programs participating at this level is about $8 million a year, a deficit often covered by institutional resources to keep athletic departments operational.

Regardless of the level of departmental financial support, what takes place within the football program itself also plays a pivotal role in the student-athlete experience. Bell's 2009 qualitative study of the experiences of 41 Division I FBS student-athletes, 31 of the participants spoke of the involved role their head football coach took in monitoring their academics, and 13 reported that their coach deemphasized their chances of having a professional career and suggested that the student-athlete concentrate on receiving a degree. Simons et al. (1999) explains that although coaches are required to excuse missed practices for academic reasons, student-athletes shy away from this exemption, opting for make-up class work over a missed athletic practice. "Coaches possess the power to decide which athletes will play or start in the games, [and] many students believe, correctly or incorrectly, that they will be penalized by their coaches for choosing academic commitments over athletic ones" (p. 158). To some extent, institutions have bought into the idea that coaches impact this decision making process, even going as far as to incentivize coaches to encourage strong academic performance by tying financial bonuses to the academic performance of their teams. However, some have criticized this incentive deeming a poor attempt at matching the ideals of athletics with higher education (Eichelberger & Levinson, 2007). Eichelberger and Levinson go on to point out the contract of Jeff Tedford, head coach at the University of California at Berkeley, whose $3.3 million contract contains a maximum academic bonus of $25,000, less than 1 percent of his salary, and the contract of Virginia Tech head coach Frank Beamer, which contains annual on-field incentives reaching $532,500 when compared to $25,000 of academic performance based incentives.

The push for programs to meet higher academic standards was enhanced in 2003-04 when the NCAA initiated drastic academic reform, including not only the introduction of the APR and GSR, but also revising its initial eligibility standards (LaForge & Hodge, 2011). While APR measures the progress of the athlete toward a degree, GSR is the often cited metric used for graduation rates amongst student-athletes, as it is an adjusted version of the Federal Graduation Rate (FGR), altered to account for athletes' greater mobility when compared to non-athlete peers (Denhart, Villwock & Vedder, 2009). Serious sanctions and penalties have been laid out by the NCAA for programs that fail to meet minimum APR thresholds. While first time violators are granted some leniency with a warning, repeat offenders face losing scholarships, recruiting abilities, practice time and eventually postseason bans or banishment from the NCAA (Denhart, Villwock & Vedder, 2009). However, with heightened penalties and standards comes a risk of compromised academic integrity. Fountain and Finley's (2009) examination of ACC football programs found that six of the 11 schools examined had at least one-third of their student-athletes in a single major and all schools had exceeded the 25% cutoff as defined by Case, Greer, & Brown (1987).

With heightened academic standards and a highly competitive athletic landscape facing these football student-athletes, the conflict between the role of student and athlete becomes clear. Adler and Adler (1985) in their study of a private Division I men's basketball program found students entering college with "idealistic goals and attitudes about their impending academic careers" (p. 241). However, their collegiate experience as a whole altered these attitudes and left many students willing to compromise their academic goals, often blaming others for their shortcomings and externalizing their academic failures (p. 247). To this end, Simons, Van Rheenen, & Covington (1999) explains that student-athletes operate in an area of sharp conflicting interests, where at the heart of their priority setting process looms two counteractive forces: education and athletics.

These two counteractive forces bring into play the notion of social identity theory in this study. Research has suggested that the numerous roles played by an individual are what comprise one's identity (London, Downey, Bolger & Velilla, 2005). Studies show that all roles played by an individual are not given equal standing in one's life at any one moment in time (McCall & Simmons, 1978). Chatman, Eccles and Malanchuk (2005) demonstrate the importance of an identity to the individual, known as identity salience, is not static, but rather fluctuating over time based on context and circumstance. The work of Stevenson (1999) with international athletes supported the idea that the actions and perceptions of those around them enhanced the salience of their athletic identity, which in turn, improved their commitment to their sport.

When it comes to student-athletes, Brewer (1991) tells us that the athletic identity is the identification with their role as an athlete. Given the work of Stryker and Serpe (1982), who found that if those within a person's role-set give a high level of salience to a specific identity, this social influence will heighten the level of salience of that role at the individual level, one can start to formulate why the athletic identity can be so strong for the student-athlete. Studies show that once salience is given to the athletic role, student-athletes spend a high percentage of their time with coaches, teammates and others in their athletic role-set, strengthening their commitment to this role (Horton & Mack, 2000; Watt & Moore, 2001).

When it comes to their institutional surroundings, LaForge and Hodge (2011) put forth in their work on metrics of student-athlete academic evaluation that graduation success, as measured by either FGR or GSR, will likely be higher at elite private institutions than their public peers, whose mission includes promoting access to higher education. Understanding the differences between institutions, Bell's (2009) study of role-set influence amongst football players at the Division I FBS level examines only universities classified as "selective" or "more selective" research universities based off the Carnegie Classification system. This decision is supported by prior works that show having academically oriented peers can enhance a student's academic experience (Crosnoe, Cavanagh, & Elder, 2003; Dennis, Phinney, & Chuateco, 2005; Hurtado, Carter, & Spuler, 1996; Tinto, 1993).

While the athletic department and the institution have undeniable impact on the role salience decisions made by a student-athlete, another set of factors that are held much closer to the individual also come into play. The thoughts and opinions of student-athletes' peer groups impact the decisions student-athletes will make (Tinto, 1993). Simons et al. (1999) notes that the power that coaches have over the contributions these student-athletes make to the team due to control over playing time and other in-game decisions looms very large in developing identity salience.

Additionally, the real and perceived benefits of a successful football program to an institution and its athletics department may be an important factor in the promoted salience of the athletic identity. Padilla and Baumer (1994) illustrated that a single win in football over the previous three year period correlated to increased football-related revenues of between $200,000 and $300,000. More recently, Isidore (2010) found that on average, football programs in the six largest conferences earned approximately $15.8 million in the 2009-10 academic-year, or revenue generation well over $1 million per game. These sorts of financial stakes may indeed shift the focus of the student-athlete toward sport at the expense of classroom-related activities.

Conceptual Framework:

Burke (2006) explains that social identity theory is a social psychological examination of intergroup relations, focusing on the idea that group behavior can be attributed to a shared understanding of social group membership. No person is limited to the demands of a sole role within their existence. While an author might balance the roles of daughter, wife, mother, novelist and art enthusiast, a football student-athlete may be a son, boyfriend, brother, teammate, classmate and community volunteer. However, the connection to these roles ebbs and flows, based not only on the individual's psychology, but also based on group factors. According to Bell (2009), "the concept of identity, as understood in sociological terms, links the individual to society, and defines the roles a person takes on in his life" (p. 22). Bell notes that these roles are perpetuated not only by the individual, but also by society, as identity is what links the individual to society. Haslam, Powell and Turner's (2000) demonstrate this finding in determining that employees were most responsive to group-based needs in situations when the worker's group identity was salient.

With the connection between society and identities now explained the basic tenants of social identity theory start to emerge. Chatman, Eccles and Malanchuk (2005) demonstrate the importance of an identity to the individual, known as identity salience, is not static, but rather fluctuating over time based on context and circumstance. This context is often formed in the sense of the social settings presented to the individual. The influence of this social setting on role salience is the primary underpinning of social identity theory. The sociologist Merton (1957) in his seminal work on social theory states that social context is established by a person's role-set, or the group of individuals a person associates his roles with throughout a variety of circumstances.

In the case of this study, there are two identities of interest: college student and football player. The following study examines three categories of variables that impact the social setting presented to these student-athletes. This allows for conclusions to be drawn about the application of social identity theory to the experience of these college students.

Purpose Statement

The purpose of this study is to examine the role institutional, departmental and program-specific variables play in influencing Division I FBS football student-athletes' academic progress, as measured by the NCAA's Academic Progress Rate (APR), and performance, as measured by the NCAA's Graduation Success Rate (GSR) through the framework of social identity theory. This will result in an understanding of characteristics that may influence the identity salience of football student-athletes.

Research Design

Using secondary institutional data provided to the federal government and the NCAA, this quantitative study examines the relationship between institutional, athletic departmental and football program specific variables, and the academic progress and performance of Division I FBS football student-athletes across 120 institutions from the 2003-04 academic-year to the 2009-10 academic-year. This was achieved through comparing measures of academic progress (APR) and academic performance (GSR) between football programs, taking into account three categories of independent variables: institutional, athletic departmental and football program specific.

Within the three different categories of independent variables in the study, there are a total of eight variables. The broadest level of variables looks at the overall academic institution; there are three variables in this category. Two variables that are representative of decisions made at the athletic department level are included in the next category. Lastly, three variables that specifically examine the football programs at these institutions are included.

This study utilized three outcome variables, each of which plays an important part in the academic evaluation of a football program. APR serves as a measure of academic progress toward degree for the NCAA. The average APR score received by these football programs over the period of interest is the first outcome variable. Failing to reach a predetermined APR cutoff point results in sanctions for a given sport program.

The receipt of these sanctions is a second outcome variable. Lastly, GSR is a measure used to evaluate academic success and it serves as a third outcome variable.

In an attempt to draw conclusions about the academic achievements of Division I FBS football programs, this study will regress the eight variables discussed earlier against three outlined academic outcome variables. In the data analysis, each outcome variable will serve as the basis of a regression analysis that models the impact the aforementioned independent variables have on these outcome variables. In total, three regression models will be established to illustrate the role the independent variables play in predicting the three outcomes selected to examine.

Research Questions. The following three research questions will guide the study:

1. What combination of institutional, departmental and program-specific variables explains student-athlete academic progress as measured by APR and informed by social identity theory?
2. Informed by social identity theory, what combination of institutional, departmental and program-specific variables explains an institution's football program's receipt of academic-related sanctions due to low APR?
3. What combination of institutional, departmental and program-specific variables explains student-athlete academic performance as measured by GSR and informed by social identity theory?

Definitions

Some of the language used in the community of intercollegiate athletics is specific to the industry. What follows is a discussion of those terms that are relevant to this study:

Academic Progress Rate (APR) – According to the NCAA (2011), the APR is the basis that academic-reform is depending on, as it gives administrators a more real-time assessment of program academic performance than the six-year graduation-rates of GSR and FGR. The APR awards two points each term to student-athletes, one for meeting academic-eligibility standards and one for remaining with the institution. A team's APR is the total points earned by the team at a given time divided by the total points possible, then calibrated to a scale of 1000 (NCAA, 2011).

Association of American Universities (AAU) – According to the association's website (2011), the AAU is a nonprofit organization comprised of 61 leading research universities in North America. These member universities "are on the leading edge of innovation, scholarship and solutions that contribute to the nation's economy, security and well-being" (AAU, 2011). Since 1900, this organization has set forth to advance the international standing of its member institutions.

Athletic Department Expenditures – Reported with consistent mandates as required by the U.S. Department of Education's Office of Postsecondary Education (OPE), this institution specific variable speaks to the grand total of all expenses incurred by an athletic department, across all its sports and student-athletes, in a given year. The data are pulled from the OPE Equity in Athletics Disclosure Website database, which accesses annually submitted athletics data that is required by the Equity in Athletics Disclosure Act (EADA) (Equity, 2011).

Average Win Total – Tracked by NCAA records, this term refers to the average number of victories a team achieves over the six football season span of this study. During this period, two institutions were forced to vacate wins by the NCAA due to violations. However, for the purposes of this study, these programs did retain the wins in question. This variable is included in the study to illustrate trends of athletically successful football programs and while these wins technically did not happen, the author felt their inclusion painted a clearer picture of athletic success for the study.

Bowl Appearances – Those Division I FBS football programs that finish the regular season with six wins are considered eligible for appearance in a single post-season game known as a bowl game. Appearing in such a game lengthens the football season for the team, often overlapping the season with fall term final examinations. Data pertaining to this variable was gathered from the Football Bowl Association (FBA), which is a non-profit member association that represents all post-season college football bowl games (FBA, 2011).

Bowl Championship Series (BCS) – First implemented during the 1998-99 academic year, the BCS is a system of ranking the nation's elite FBS football programs with the system's two highest teams facing off in a national championship. According to the BCS website (2011), the system "is designed to ensure that the two top-rated teams in the country meet in the national championship game, and to create exciting and competitive matchups among eight other highly regarded teams in four other bowl games" (p. 1). When it comes to oversight, the BCS is managed by the commissioners of the 11 NCAA FBS conferences, the director of athletics at the University of Notre Dame, and representatives from various bowl organizations.

Since 2005, the ranking system has consisted of three equally weighted components: the USA Today Coaches' Poll, the Harris Interactive College Football Poll, and an average of six computer rankings. While the Coaches' Poll consists of the FBS head coaches, the Harris Poll is composed of votes from an array of coaches, administrators, media members and other stakeholders, with an aim of having a wide spanning representation across conferences. The computer rankings are created by specially designed programs that take into account a number of variables, such as win-loss record, strength of a team's schedule, game locations, and margin of victory. The composite of computer rankings consists of the average among six different algorithms produced and updated weekly by Jeff Sagarin, Anderson & Hester, Richard Billingsley, Wesley Colley, Kenneth Massey, and Peter Wolfe. Currently, policy calls for the highest and lowest ranking to be dropped, and average the remaining four is taken before combining it with the other polls to produce the overall BCS ranking (Kotchen & Potoski, 2011).

The rankings are also important because they influence the eligibility of teams for invitations to the other four BCS bowl games. The remaining at large BCS bowl invitations are selected by the administrators of the four games themselves, with each game selecting two teams and selection order rotating each year. Additionally, at large invitations are subject to some eligibility restrictions, which include the following:

- a limit of two BCS invitations per conference
- Notre Dame automatically qualify if ranked in the top eight
- a non-BCS conference team automatically qualify if ranked in the top 12 or if ranked in the top 16 and better than the champion of a BCS conference.

While the BCS rankings are used for determining the eligibility of teams for at large BCS bowl invitations, the individual bowls have on occasion selected teams ranked in worse positions (Kotchen & Potoski, 2011).

Coaching Change – This term refers to the turnover of coaches experienced by a football program. In this study, interim or temporary coaches, often promoted from an existing coaching staff when a head coach leaves a team mid-season, are not counted as an additional coaching change due to their extremely temporary nature. A history of head coaches is kept by the NCAA.

Conference Affiliation – For the purposes of this study, it is important to indicate if each institution is a member of a so-called "major conference" or not. These conferences are those that have been evaluated by the BCS system as automatic qualifying conferences. The Division I conferences evaluated for this status were the: Atlantic Coast, Big East, Big Ten, Big 12, Conference USA, Mid-American, Mountain West, Sun Belt, Pac-12, Southeastern and Western Athletic. Each conference had an opportunity to earn annual automatic qualification through a four-year evaluation covering the regular seasons of 2004, 2005, 2006 and 2007. In accordance with this evaluation, the Atlantic Coast, Big East, Big Ten, Big 12, Pacific-12 and Southeastern Conferences met the threshold and earned automatic qualification through the 2013-14 season (BCS, 2011). Please remember that data from this study is cutoff at the 2010-11 academic-year and thus, conference realignment that occurred after this time will not be included.

Control – Control is explained by the Carnegie Classification system as either public of private, as this cateogorization was one of the main reasons bhind the development of the classification system in 1970 (2011).

Division I Football Bowl Subdivision (FBS) – According to the NCAA (2008), this classification of intercollegiate athletic participants is comprised of institutions that sponsor at least 14 sports (seven sports for men and seven for women, or six for men and eight for women) with two team sports for each gender. Football Bowl Subdivision schools are usually fairly elaborate programs that can offer up to 85 full grant-in-aids (commonly known as scholarships) for their football programs. Additionally, Football Bowl Subdivision teams have to meet minimum attendance requirements (average 15,000 people in actual or paid attendance per home game), which must be met once in a rolling two-year period.

Federal Graduation Rate (FGR) – According to the NCAA (2011), the FGR is measure that assesses first-time full-time freshmen in a given cohort and only counting them as academic successes pending graduation from their institution of initial enrollment within a six-year period. This measure fails to account for transfers into or out of an institution, and has limitations because of the prevalence of transferring in intercollegiate athletics. However, it is the only rate that allows a direct comparison between student-athletes and the general student body.

Football Program Expenditures – Reported with consistent mandates as required by the U.S. Department of Education's Office of Postsecondary Education (OPE), this institution specific variable speaks to the grand total of all expenses incurred by a football program in a given year. The data are pulled from the OPE Equity in Athletics Disclosure Website database, which accesses annually submitted athletics data that is required by the Equity in Athletics Disclosure Act (EADA) (Equity, 2011).

Graduation Success Rate (GSR) – According to the NCAA (2011), the GSR is a graduation-rate computation that is also part of its academic reform initiative. Like FGR, this measure assesses graduation over a six-year period, but the rate includes transfer students, unlike the federal rate. Also unlike the FGR, the GSR accounts for midyear enrollees. It is calculated for every sport.

Identity Salience – According to Stryker and Serpe (1984), "identity salience is a readiness to act out an identity as a consequence of the identity's properties as a cognitive structure of schema" (p. 17). It is identity salience that develops a hierarchy for one's identities with various identities being organized by their probability of coming forth based on a series of situations.

Knight Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics – According to the Knight Commission website (2011a), this group of higher education decision makers works with colleges and universities to direct intercollegiate athletics programs to stay within their educational missions. It was founded in 1989 after a prolonged period of issues within college athletics.

Major Clustering – Major clustering is a phenomenon that occurs when there exists a high percentage of student-athletes within a specific major (Gaston Gayles, 2010). According to the author, this occurs frequently in the social and behavioral sciences and is associated with the idea that student-athletes may be pushed toward certain majors by academic advisors. Gaston Gayles explains that this phenomenon is complicated by the progress to degree requirement of APR.

National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) – According to the organization (2011), the NCAA is a membership organization comprised of over 1,000 colleges and universities, which feature 400,000 plus student-athletes competing across three divisions in 23 sports. The organization was formed to protect the interests of student-athletes, emphasizing athletic and academic excellence.

Public/Private Institution – Provided by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching (2011), this variable examines the origin of control at each institution.

Limitations

Within this study, there are a few limitations that beg mention. With the landscape of athletic conferences changing regularly, it is important to be reminded that the data used in this study predates the start of the 2011-12 academic-year and any conference realignment that occurred during that football season or afterward. However, it does capture data during the conference realignment that occurred for the 2005-06 academic-year. For the purposes of institutional classification as it pertains to conference membership, this study matched institutional membership with its conference membership as of the 2010-11 academic-year.

Also, having entered new area of heightened academic accountability in the NCAA, administrators are asked to use metrics that have been constructed within the last decade. Since its launch in 2004, the NCAA has in fact made minor changes to the APR twice. LaForge and Hodge (2011) point out that GSR and APR, unlike their federal counterpart, can be managed to some extent through roster management tactics, like asking struggling students to transfer or through clustering students in easier majors.

Lastly, it is important to note that any impact on identity salience made by pre-college experiences or social factors such as family history and socioeconomic status cannot be measured due to the standards established by the Family Education Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA). However, that is not to say that such factors do not influence identity salience.

Significance of the Study

This study has implications not only for researchers, but also for practitioners in the field of intercollegiate athletics. There is little in the way of prior research examining APR and GSR, largely due to the recent development of these metrics. Existing research on the topic of social identity theory fits the topic and establishes a theoretical basis to build on our understanding of tradeoffs made between the role of student and athlete that face these young people. Discovering variables that play significant roles in creating similarities or differences in the academic outcomes of these student-athletes may direct future research, probing this topic to determine what causes such discrepancies so that the student-athlete experience may be heightened going forward.

As for practitioners, understanding the differences on an institutional, departmental and program level that promote or hinder academic success should be helpful in guiding and informing decision making by administrators and coaches. For example, if it is discovered that those programs who more frequently visit bowl games struggle to produce strong academic metrics, decision makers might be interested in adjusting the bowl schedule or system holistically. On the other hand, if a positive relationship is found between average win total and either GSR or APR, practitioners may be able to quiet those who complain that winning is done at the expense of academic accomplishment. Regardless of these findings, in this era of heightened accountability within higher education and intercollegiate athletics, it is important that research is provided to answer questions and promote transparency.

Summary

The development of the APR and GSR were both heavily influenced by calls over the last two decades to heighten accountability and academic focus in intercollegiate athletics, especially in revenue producing sports like football. These two metrics, when used in tandem, are thought to provide an insightful look at the academic state of an intercollegiate athletics program, taking into consideration the unique qualities of the experience of the student-athlete. Due to the recent launch of these new metrics, this quantitative study will provide a new lens through which to view academic performance measures.

While prior work on the topic provides an array of applicable data, a critical mass of work exists that suggests the balancing of the role of student and athlete is toughest for those participating in revenue generating sport programs. Therefore, by examining pertinent variables at all levels of the football student-athlete's experience, from institution type to within the athletic department to experiences within the sport program itself, the study provides a framework to examine variables on three different levels. Moreover, these variables can then be isolated to evaluate any role that they may play in altered identity salience of the student-athletes.

This chapter has established a general understanding of the topic and has developed a roadmap for the remainder of this research. Having introduced the topic, explained the conceptual framework and outlined the research design, it is important to firmly establish how this work informs the body of previous research. In order to do so, previous research on this topic must be examined.

CHAPTER 2: LITERATURE REVIEW

The academic landscape facing today's Division I collegiate student-athletes, football or otherwise, is much more complex than it was decades ago. In this new era, institutions and their sport programs are to be held accountable for student progress toward degree, eligibility and graduation, all while facing more pressure than ever to succeed on the playing field. Thus, a confrontation exists between two often conflicting social identities. On one hand, one finds prospective institutional monetary gains, hopes of a professional career, a conflicted peer group and a coaching staff that is often equally conflicted pushing these young men toward putting their role as an athlete first. On the other, one takes note of the NCAA and other parties eager to usher in academic focus and accountability for today's student-athletes, aligning the goals of intercollegiate athletics with the ideals of institutions of higher education.

As we set out to determine what institutional, departmental, and football program characteristics best project academic accountability of their student-athletes, we must first consider what existing literature tells us about these topics, so that this work may better inform future research and build on existing research developments. In launching this investigation, a review of previous literature pertaining to academic preparedness of student-athletes prior to their arrival on campus is required. The discussion then moves to the academic experience of these football student-athletes, looking specifically at three societal factors that influence their college experience: the institution, their athletic department and the football program. The review then presents and discusses the development of academic success measures in intercollegiate athletics and the changes brought on by this era of increased academic accountability. Finally, an understanding of the theoretical framework of social identity theory provides us with an informative lens through which we can evaluate the tradeoffs made between the salience of two pressing identities for these young men: the student and the athlete.

The Pre-College Experience

Before criticizing or praising the academic outputs (grades and diplomas) of student-athletes, we must first look at the input factors contributing to the success or failure of this population. Many studies have shown that for both student-athletes and their non-athlete peers, the academic preparedness of students entering college is a strong determining factor of college achievement. To this end, research suggests that pre-college experiences, demographic factors and academic ability have shown to be strong predictors of college grade point average (Lang et al., 1988; Sellers, 1992). In accordance with these findings, Maloney and McCormick (1993) examined the academic records of all students enrolled at Clemson University during the 1988-89 academic-year, analyzing a total of 279,302 course grades, to find that a student's high school performance has a significant impact on their college career.

The findings of Purdy et al. (1982) connect this linkage between preexisting academic success and ability of Division I student-athletes to perform academically in a college setting. Looking at GPA and graduation rate of greater than 2,000 student-athletes over 10 years at a major university, the authors found that athletes were outperformed by their non-athlete peers, attributing causality to athletes entering their college studies with inferior academic backgrounds, which resulted in poorer grades and lower graduation rates. Moreover, this seminal piece of literature also found participants in the major revenue sports, football and basketball, boast both the poorest academic potential and performance. This is not to imply that most student-athletes reject the role of student, as Adler and Adler (1987) observed, "Most incoming college athletes observed approached their academic role with initial feelings of idealism" (p. 445). Rather, it is to suggest that their pre-college experiences often placed them in situations where academic success was more difficult to come by than it was for their peers.

Comeaux and Harrison (2007) study of over 1,700 freshman football and men's basketball players indicates that race is also an important predictor of collegiate academic achievement, with high school GPA for white student-athletes serving as a stronger predictor of college GPA than their black peers. Again, this reminds us of the work of Lang et al. (1988) and Sellers (1992) who found that many Black student-athletes matriculate from high schools and environments with inferior academic resources, thus tending to be less academically prepared than their white counterparts. Supporting this finding was work done by the Atlanta Journal-Constitution that found student-athletes entering college at Bowl Championship Series (BCS) schools had SAT scores 124 points lower than other students (Knobler, 2008). Meanwhile, football players scored 220 points lower than the average for all students (Lederman, 2008).

Hood, Craig and Ferguson (1992), as well as Pascarella and Smart (1991) also identify that there are challenges in researching the educational impacts of athletic participation on college student-athletes because of variations in the recruitment of these students. Research has shown that these student-athletes are gathering from a unique populous with high school experiences, aptitudes and socioeconomic environments that are unique from those experienced by non-athletes (Pascarella et al., 1999). Gaston-

Gayles (2004) supported this finding with her study of 211 Division I college athletes at a single institution, finding that ethnicity, in addition to ACT scores and academic motivation, were significant factors in predicting academic performance of the student-athlete.

Interestingly though, with statistical controls in place for student background characteristics that influenced academic aptitude, the academic achievement of athletes and their non-athlete peers were roughly equal (American College Testing Program & Educational Testing Service, 1984; Hood, Craig & Ferguson, 1992; Pascarella & Smart, 1991; Smith & Dizney, 1966; Stuart, 1985). This coincides with the work of Sack and Thiel (1979) who found college athletic participation to enhance the social mobility to those from low socioeconomic backgrounds. Supporting this finding by looking at the 2004 NCAA Graduation-Rate Report, Matheson (2007) concludes that after accounting for differences in race and ethnic group and the fact that scholarship athletes represent groups with lower average graduation rates than their non-athlete peers, graduation rates for football players actually match or exceed those of their peers. Matheson also found that men's basketball players, the other "revenue" sport in college athletics, explained over a quarter of its perceived shortfall in graduation rates because of this phenomenon. So, while we must recognize that the preparedness of student-athletes for the academic rigors of college play a role in their viability as successful college students, there is more to the picture of student-athlete academic success than solely what takes place on campus.

The Student's Campus Learning Environment

Conflict between student and student-athlete activities. In a seminal piece of research in this area, Adler and Adler (1985) interviewed and observed 38 basketball players and seven coaches at a private Division I men's basketball program from 1980-84. In their work, the authors found students entering college with "idealistic goals and attitudes about their impending academic careers" (p. 241). However, their collegiate experience (athletic, academic and social experiences) altered these attitudes and left many students willing to compromise their academic goals, often blaming others for their shortcomings and externalizing their academic failures. This finding suggests a troubling road for the student-athlete, who is often subjected to multiple demands on their time and energy. In fact, despite earlier attention paid to demographics and experience-based variables of college recruits, Pascarella et al. (1999) found that irrespective of precollege development and experiences, football and male basketball players had negative cognitive affects from sport participation. And while the work of Adler and Adler (1985) pertained to men's basketball, we find football players struggling to succeed academically at a similar pace, as the two sports graduate student-athletes at the lowest rates of any teams, 67% for football and 62% for men's basketball (NCAA, 2008).

LeCrom et al. (2009) inform the existing literature on the subject with a more comprehensive and updated look at the topic, examining student-athlete retention, as measured by APR, for student-athletes from a single mid-major Division I Conference from 2001-2005, compiling some 12,980 observations. The authors found that male student-athletes were retained at lower rates than their female counterparts, and team sport participants also performed worse than their individual sport peers, also marking a troubling trend for a football program. These findings supported the more sport-specific research of Maloney and McCormick (1993), who examined 279,302 course grades from Clemson students, athletes and non-athletes, from 1985-1989, finding that student-athletes in both football and men's basketball performed worse than their non-athlete and other sport peers alike. When looking for causality of such a discrepancy between sport programs, Fountain and Finley (2009) inform the research by illustrating that while the graduation rate for all Division I student-athletes (63% for the 1999-2000 freshman class) exceeds that for all non-athletes (61% for the same cohort), subdivisions made in the data on the basis of gender, race and sport call for considerable concern. For instance, male African American basketball players graduated at a rate of only 42% and importantly noted for this study, Division I football players at a rate of 54%.

While the work of Rishe (2003) suggests that no correlation exists between student-athlete graduation rate and athletic success, his work does go on to illustrate the subdivisions that can be found when analyzing these statistics by sport, illustrating that a gap exists between the graduation rates of male student-athletes and female student-athletes at major athletic programs. Rishe suggests this gap occurs because of the financial stakes of big time athletics and the pressures to succeed on the playing field for athletes in these programs, "especially in football and basketball" (p. 417). Those in the industry that are tasked with providing academic services to these struggling student-athletes support this view, pointing out that low-performing students are accepted because coaches do not want to compete against schools that accept talented, but academically poor students, and thus, feel that they have no choice but to bring them to campus (Wolverton, 2008). Regardless of reasoning, Pascarella et al. (1999) warn us that

"competing in major revenue-producing sports simply absorbs so much physical and psychological energy that there is only a limited amount left to make the kinds of intense investments in one's academic experience that enhance cognitive growth" (p. 23). In hopes of coping with the academic demands placed on today's student-athlete, some in the industry predict that the future of intercollegiate athletics will involve not only tutors, but an increased utilization of learning specialists to work with athletes and allow coaches to continue recruiting students with marginal academic abilities (Wolverton, 2007).

Institutional influence. The ability to recruit athletes with wide spanning levels of academic abilities like those mentioned by Wolverton (2007) varies from institution to institution, a variation that can later have an impact on academic performance metrics. For example, LaForge and Hodge (2011) put forth in their work that graduation success, as measured by either FGR or GSR, will likely be higher at elite private institutions than their public peers, whose mission includes promoting access to higher education. In fact, it is logical to posit that any metric used across institutions to compare the academic success of their athletes is influenced to some extent by the institution. Pascarella and Terenzini (1991) also pointed out that using grades as a variable to measure college learning fails to account for institutional grading differences, which are likely to vary based on the academic selectivity of the institution. As pointed out by Helliker (2011), this academic selectivity also plays a role in how institutions lump themselves together into conferences. When considering conference membership and expansion from ten to 12 teams PAC-12 President Larry Scott spoke to this point nothing, "the academic brand is as important as the athletic brand," adding that his conference "prides itself on being best of breed academically as well as athletically" (Helliker, 2011, p. 1). These comments were echoed by Chris Hill, the athletics director at the University of Utah, one of two institutions admitted by the conference, as he commented, "From the outset of our talks with the Pac 10, it was clear that we wouldn't have been part of the conversation if not for our profile as a research institution—as well as our athletic success" (p. 1). Variations in the level of preparedness of a college football student-athlete are tied to this study by examining institutional characteristics, such as conference affiliation, public or private school status and academic reputation (as measured by AAU membership status). The selection of these variables takes into consideration the wide spanning student-athlete demographics that end up on various institutional campuses, but they alone do not tell the entire story.

While typecasting institutions may be of some value, evidence suggests a closer look at the academic issues within the classroom is also important. Tinto (1993) exhibited that positive peer support and interaction plays a critical role in the academic success and maturation of a college student. Tinto was able to attribute faculty involvement with the student as one of the strongest predicting factors of graduation within a six year window, confirming the work of Wilson (1975) who noted that the strength of interaction between the student and faculty members accounted for a positive correlation with the student's "intellectual orientation" (p. 180), a concern for the population of potentially marginal students one may find within the make-up of certain athletic programs. Harrison et al. (2006) expanded on this finding in their work on minority student-athletes, discovering that while a strong rapport between faculty and a student-athlete played a positive part in the student's education, the quality of this relationship, more so than the quantity of student-faculty interactions, was a much better predictor of academic success. Comeaux and Harrison (2007) built further on this finding, uncovering that academic success for men's basketball and football student-athletes was at some level related to the nature of student-faculty interactions, as faculty members, who for example, encouraged students toward attending graduate school, made a strong impact on the academic success of these students. Thus, while research suggests the institution, its mission and prestige may impact academic achievement, quality experiences in the classroom are also a vital part of this experience.

Departmental influence. Below the institutional level and above the football program, we find an important level of social influence on the student-athlete that plays a central part in role salience decisions: the athletic department. At this level, many important decisions are made that impact the culture presented to student-athletes. In many ways, the loudest messages are made by the funding decisions this area is required to make, which will serve as a focal point of this study.

Facilities. Nearly 20 years after releasing a landmark report citing existing problems in intercollegiate athletics, the Knight Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics noted in its report, Restoring the Balance that "the costs of competing in big-time intercollegiate sports have soared. Rates of spending growth are breathtaking. This financial arms race threatens the continued viability of athletics programs and the integrity of our universities. It cannot be maintained" (2010, p. 1). The Knight Commission (2010) supports this claim with a number of eye-opening statistics such as median spending per athlete at the major conference level coming in between four and 11 times more than that spent on education-related activities for their students. Furthermore, it explains that the average athletic budget at this level, considering growth trends, will exceed $250 million by 2020, adding only seven athletic programs generated enough revenue to return a profit in each of five years preceding the report.

According to experts, the start of this booming period in facilities growth occurred between 1995-2005, a ten year period in which, according to the SportsBusiness Journal, at least $15.2 billion was spent on college athletics facilities, with greater than $6.4 billion being exhausted on football programs (King, 2005). While some of this money went into refurbishing stadiums and providing departments with luxury seats that can in turn generate money for the department, over $600 million was spent improving athletic training facilities (King, 2005), whose comfort and amenities have drawn criticism for potential excess more than once in the university community.

Since the NCAA has become armed with the ability to take away scholarships from programs that do not perform academically thanks to APR-based sanctions, the facilities arms race has extended beyond new locker rooms and stadiums and on to student-athlete academic centers. As reported by The Chronicle of Higher Education, no longer are team study halls located in vacant classrooms or empty cafeterias, as major college programs have taken to building academic-services buildings, often exceeding 20,000 square feet (Wolverton, 2008).

Budgets. Considering the current spending climate in intercollegiate athletics, much has been made about the ability for all institutions to keep spending at this pace. Some institutions have responded to the strain placed on their overall budget by cutting sport programs offered by the institution, leading groups like the Knight Commission and the Women's Sports Foundation to note that the culture of excess spending in some sports has ultimately eliminated opportunity for other student-athletes. While the Women's Sport Foundation (2011) has called for "schools to embrace the principle of gender equity and equal treatment as the norm" (p. 1), some have claimed that, ultimately, financially strapped institutions are unable to keep up with the spending habits of those that are better off and have opted to cut sports perceived as non-revenue. Although this occurrence contradicts the logic associated with past finding that higher education success rates have been associated with programs with somewhat lower revenues in the past (Padilla & Baumer, 1994), it seems possible that as college athletics have become more associated with revenue generation, findings like those made by Padilla and Baumer may be less important to institutional leadership.

As of the 2008 fiscal year, the NCAA reported that 25 Division I Football Bowl Subdivision institutions reported positive net revenues for their athletic programs, with the median at about $3 million in excess revenue per institution (Brown, 2009). However, median deficit for the other nearly 100 programs participating at this level is about $8 million a year, signifying a rather large gap between what has been called the "haves" and "have-nots" of college athletics (Brown, 2009). This deficit is covered by institutional resources to keep their athletic departments operational in most instances according the NCAA. However, when coupling the current climate of shrinking budgets in higher education with the facilities boom and the increased resources needed to assure compliance with the NCAA's heightened academic standards, one finds a troublesome image of the competitive landscape facing a majority of teams at the Football Bowl Subdivision level who fail to turn a profit within their athletic department.

Interestingly, the financial challenges laid out in today's competitive environment are played out not only on the playing field, but also in the classroom. Following the release of APR scores from the 2009-10 academic-year, Moltz (2011) noted that of the eight teams that were banned from postseason participation because of poor academic standards, four of those programs are from Historically Black Colleges and Universities and a fifth is from an institution that is categorized by the federal government as predominately Black. Although only three of these eight banned teams were football teams and none of them compete at the Division I FBS, the comments surrounding this study bring concern to the notion that only resource rich institutions are suited to deal with the heightened accountability for academic performance. In fact, Wolverton (2007) tells us that since 1997, the budgets for academic services have ballooned at the nation's biggest institutions, doubling on average to over $1 million a year. Sensing such a gap years ago, the NCAA has now introduced the Supplemental Support Fund, which represents $1 million in grant funding earmarked for low-resource institutions with academic needs, not just HBCUs (Moltz, 2011), but doubts still exist as to if this is enough aid for these struggling institutions.

While the struggles of HBCUs may be representative of institutions who lack the resources to thrive academically and athletically, calls for change may impact those who opt for athletic success at the expense of academic performance. Widely known throughout intercollegiate athletics for the group's clamoring for academic reform, the Knight Commission in its 2010 report entitled Restoring the Balance: Dollars, Values and the Future of College Sports, put forth that teams should be on track to graduate 50 percent of their student-athletes to remain eligible for postseason play and that money generated from postseason play should be partially distributed to the institutions that meet the NCAA's graduation requirements. Using GSR as its metric to evaluate graduation rates, according to the Knight Commission more than $146 of the $409 million, or approximately 36 percent, of the revenue earned for postseason appearances in the past five NCAA men's basketball tournaments were earned by teams with GSRs under 50 percent (Knight, 2011b). This call to change has been supported by the U.S. Secretary of Education, Arne Duncan, who stated, "It's time to end rewarding teams millions of dollars for winning basketball games when they are failing to graduate their players. In the era of the 'million-dollar game,' I join the Knight Commission in advocating a reward system that recognizes teams that meet minimal academic standards" (Knight Commission, 2011b, p. 1).

Football program influence. At this point, it seems important to identify the elements of a football program that make it unique to many of its intercollegiate counterparts. From squad size to revenue potential, from coaches' compensation to student-athlete professional aspirations, when it comes to college football, everything appears bigger. However, bigger is not necessarily better and in this case, along with this inflated importance comes heightened attention. Here we investigate what prior research tells us about the experience of college football student-athletes, the game they play, and any trade-offs between the two.

The football player in the classroom. To date, large amounts of research have been conducted on the influence athletics has on undergraduate admissions (McCormick & Tinsley, 1987; Tucker & Amato, 1993; Murphy & Trandel, 1994), student body graduation rates (Tucker, 2004; Mixon & Trevino, 2005) and donations (Tucker, 2004; Humphreys & Mondello, 2007). Currently, some research has been conducted that connects athletic winning and student-athlete graduation rates. However, these studies leave us with mixed results.

One side of the story shows that football players on winning programs struggle in the classroom. The in-season effect, a term favored by Maloney and McCormick (1993), is a decrease in individual student grades when their sport is in-season, a phenomenon that exists only in revenue sports according to their research. Here, the researchers interject that the possible cause of this trend is the pressure enhanced by the monetary importance of successful programs in football and men's basketball, a pressure that forces athletes in these sports to accept a more rigorous athletic load at the expense of their studies. Amato et al. (1996) suggest that one challenge presented to FBS football programs is the longstanding format for post-season play at this level. Unlike all other NCAA sports, the FBS post-season consists of a series of bowl games that span the month of December and go into January. Amato's study compared the performance of 89 of the then existing 106 FBS (then known as Division I-A) programs to 67 of 84 FCS (then known as Division I-AA) and found, all things being equal, a single bowl appearance reduces the average graduation rate of a football student-athlete by more than three percentage points.

On the other hand, research conducted by Lucas and Lovaglia (2005) using initially published APR scores for Division I FBS institutions indicates that major college football programs, whose athletes make higher levels of academic progress (as measured by the APR), are just as likely to win as those programs whose athletes make little progress. This suggests a climate in which an academically strong team is just as likely to succeed on the field as a team that struggles in the classroom, as there is no correlation between APR and winning. However, since this study, adjustments to the APR have been made and institutions have had more time to allocate resources toward this metric if so inclined.

Competition hampered by regulations. Regardless of its impact on grades, there are critics who put forth that the battle of developing a winning college football program is like playing against a stacked deck of cards. The NCAA's regulation over its student-athletes and competition is justified by the organization because of its efforts to promote fairness and create a competitive balance between institutions. However, as Eckard (1998) points out, cartel theory suggests that the enforcement of such regulations inhibits weaker teams from rising to the top and protects those at the top from new competitors. Looking at the rankings and standings of major college football from the 1920s until 1995, with a benchmark year of 1952 noted as when "effective NCAA enforcement began" (p. 348), Eckard found that competitive balance declined after 1952 by all measures.

Further still, Maxcy (2004) argues the NCAA's 'power conferences' act as a monopoly and as a result, enjoy incredible revenues. The authors suggest that the six conferences that comprise the Bowl Championship Series (BCS) are quite effective at consolidating money and power. Supporting this notion, Sutter and Winkler (2003) conclude that despite attempts to create parity in college football, great competitive imbalances still exist.

These claims of hampered competition are important to keep in mind. In the attempt to find commonalities between programs that perform well in the classroom and determine if on field performance is correlated to such success, previous research must be recognized. The evidence suggesting that on field performance may be controlled to some extent by predetermined factors may play a role in explaining future academic outcomes.

Coaches' role. The prediction offered by Wolverton (2007) that heightened personalized attention may serve as the future course for student-athletes is well supported by the existing body of research on this topic. Student-athletes, as explained by Simons et al. (1999), often operate in an area of sharp conflicting interests, where at the heart of their priority setting process looms two counteractive forces: education and athletics. Simons explains that although coaches are required to excuse missed practices for academic reasons, student-athletes shy away from this exemption, opting for make-up class work over a missed athletic practice. "Coaches possess the power to decide which athletes will play or start in the games, [and] many students believe, correctly or incorrectly, that they will be penalized by their coaches for choosing academic commitments over athletic ones" (p. 158). Therefore, it is of no surprise that Bell's 2009 qualitative study of the experiences of 41 Division I FBS student-athletes, 31 of the participants spoke of the involved role their head football coach took in monitoring their academics, and 13 reported that their coach deemphasized their chances of having a professional career and suggested that the student-athlete concentrate on receiving a degree. Applying the work of Bell to Simons' research, we can logically infer that the role of a coach in helping the student-athlete cope with these conflicting interests by emphasizing the importance of the education of the student-athlete will improve the academic focus of the student. Moreover, the work of Pensgaard and Roberts (2001) on the motivational climate of seven elite level athletes, reminds us that coaches play an important role in establishing motivation and guiding the efforts of an athlete.

Institutions have even gone as far as to incentivize coaches to encourage strong academic performance by tying bonuses to the academic performance of their teams. Some (Eichelberger & Levinson, 2007) have criticized this performance incentive deeming it mouth service to match the ideals of athletics to higher education, with others adding that the practice merely widens the gaps between resource rich departments and those struggling to make ends meet (Upton, 2011). Perhaps in light of this criticism, or in an effort to further enhance accountability for academic performance, the NCAA announced in August of 2010 that it would release single-year APRs for Division I head coaches in six sports, including football (Brutlag Hosick, 2010). Developed by the NCAA's Committee on Academic Performance, this step was taken to promote accountability and transparency. Jim Isch, NCAA Interim President 2009-10 noted that the metric was meant to stress the imperative role that head coaches play in the academic development of these athletes.

A New Landscape of Academic Accountability

In 1988, the NCAA set out to clear the air over the demands being placed on college student-athletes, investing $1.75 million in a study of 4,083 students (athletes and non-athletes) across 42 NCAA Division I member institutions, all of which were involved in time consuming extracurricular activities. The seminal nature of this research is explained by the comments of Martin A. Massengale, chair of the NCAA Presidents Commission in 1988 and chancellor of the University of Nebraska in Lincoln, who noted,

"this is truly a landmark study for college athletics and provides the first national data on student athletes" (Bower, 1988, p. 357). This study unearthed that on average football playing students invested 30 hours a week on their sport in season, and 18 hours per week during the off-season, figures that exceeded the cumulative amount of time they invested in preparing for and attending class (Bower, 1988). Importantly, the NCAA has responded to these results. In the more than two decades since this study was conducted, it has implemented stricter practice and participation limitation for its student-athletes, while calling for higher standards of academic performance as well.

These higher standards were initiated in 2003-04 when the NCAA initiated drastic academic reform, including not only the introduction of APR and GSR, but also revising its initial eligibility standards (LaForge & Hodge, 2011). One major reason for the development of the APR metric is that both FGR and GSR inherently operate with a significant time lag, as students (both athlete and non) are expected to depart from the institution six years after their enrollment, creating a significant delay between enrollment and the reporting of a graduation rate (LaForge & Hodge, 2011). While APR measures the progress of the athlete toward a degree, GSR is the often cited metric used for graduation rates amongst student-athletes, as it accounts for their greater propensity toward mobility when compared to their non-athlete peers (Denhart, Villwock & Vedder, 2009). All three metrics, GSR, APR and FGR are needed to evaluate student-athlete academic performance, and while all three have limitations, their use in concert with one another provides an insightful picture that can guide institutional policy making for student-athletes (LaForge & Hodge, 2011).

Federal Graduation Rate vs. Graduation Success Rate. GSR is different than the FGR because unlike its federal counterpart it does not penalize an institution when a student-athlete leaves the school in good academic standing, whether it is to transfer or to play professionally (Denhart, Villwock & Vedder, 2009). According to the NCAA, the GSR captures 37 percent more student-athletes than the federal rate (2010a). Removing the effect of transferring student-athletes on the graduation rates for the 1999-2000 freshman cohort, the GSR reported a graduation rate of 77%, up from the FGR of 63% for this same group of students (Fountain & Finley, 2009). However, the argument that athletes transfer at higher rates than other students has not been conclusively verified and while GSR attempts to control for this variable, it does not give us an apples to apples comparison to the study body at large (Denhart, Villwock & Vedder, 2009). Thus, more work must be done before we can paint an entirely accurate picture of student-athlete academic success.

Academic Progress Rate. While FGR and GSR measure academic performance, we look to a new metric developed by the NCAA to inform us on student-athlete progress to graduation. According to the NCAA (2011):

> "the APR is the fulcrum upon which the entire academic-reform structure rests. Developed as a more real-time assessment of teams' academic performance than the six-year graduation-rate calculation provides, the APR awards two points each term to student-athletes who meet academic-eligibility standards and who remain with the institution. A team's APR is the total points earned by the team at a given time divided by the total points possible."

Adopted in April 2004, APR is based on a scale of 1,000 points and at the time of this study, requires each sport program at the NCAA level to maintain a score of above 925 in order to avoid facing penalties. In order to meet progress to degree requirements, a student-athlete is required to be 40% of the way to a degree by the end of their second year on campus, 60% of the way along by the end of year three and 80% finished by the end of year four (Denhart, Villwock & Vedder, 2009).

When using APR student-athletes earn a retention point for staying at the institution and an eligibility point for satisfying the NCAA's continuing eligibility requirements. Student-athletes are scored the same way for widely surpassing these requirements as they are for inching past them. Thus, using the APR as a standalone measure for academic success does not provide a clear picture of a team's, or an institution's, academic landscape (LaForge & Hodge, 2011). Therefore, it must be used in concert with other academic metrics.

As mentioned previously, serious sanctions and penalties have been laid out by the NCAA for programs that fail to meet minimum APR thresholds. While first time violators are granted some leniency with a warning, repeat offenders face losing scholarships, recruiting abilities, practice time and eventually postseason bans or banishment from the NCAA (Denhart, Villwock & Vedder, 2009). The NCAA (2010a) explains that those programs whose APR is below 900 face sanctions that increase in severity with consecutive years below this threshold in the following manner:

- Year 1: a public warning letter for poor performance
- Year 2: restrictions on scholarships and practice time

- Year 3: loss of postseason competition for the team (such as a bowl game or the men's basketball tournament)
- Year 4: restricted membership status for an institution. The school's entire athletics program is penalized and will not be considered a part of Division I

This relatively young metric has experienced a few minor changes in its application and calculation since its implementation. The NCAA (2010a) adopted the first of these changes in August 2006, allowing teams with less than a 900 score on their APR to gain relief from penalties by demonstrating improvement in their APR. Additionally, in 2008, the policy for evaluating transfer students with a 2.6 GPA or higher was also adjusted.

Most recently however, in August 2011, the NCAA's Division I Board of Directors approved a future heightening of academic standards of achievement for college students. This decree called for a future raise in the APR benchmark for program sanctions from 925 to 930. Furthermore, it enhanced bans from NCAA governed post-seasons (although the BCS, not the NCAA governs the football post-season) and added financial penalties to those programs that do not perform in the classroom (Sander, 2011a). While this decision leaves institutions facing a future with tougher academic standards for their football student-athletes, questions about the merits of the policy change, and APR as a whole, still exist.

Issues with APR. The implementation of the APR is not without critique or objection. Moreover, as the NCAA looks to heightened punishments for failing to meet even higher APR marks, these objections may become even louder. The detractors of APR have three main qualms with the metrics: its artificial nature, the expense associated with compliance, and fairness to the student-athlete.

Artificial nature. LaForge and Hodge (2011) note that GSR and APR, unlike their federal counterpart, can be managed to some extent, as programs might look to encourage student-athletes that are struggling academically to transfer before their poor performance hurts the program's score. While this might represent a positive in the situation where coaches search for better institutional fits for student-athletes, the possible manipulation of the metric also implies the data still demand close examination. Some in the industry have speculated that with the recent advent of APR, and the penalties associated with it, athletic departments will now be more careful with their admissions decisions to avoid losing scholarships or incurring other penalties (Wolverton, 2007).

These penalties have also brought to light problematic tradeoffs between the student and athlete identities of these individuals. Amongst the critics is Gerald Gurney (2011), senior associate athletic director for academics and student life and assistant professor at University of Oklahoma. Gurney takes aim at the APR, calling it "manufactured" (p. 4) and suggesting that the metric has failed to meet its goal of improving access for minority student-athletes while "diminishing the academy" (p. 2).

Expense. Some critics argue that the increased academic standards appear to be enhancing the class system in college athletics. Sander (2011a) notes that these objectors claim that since the launch of the APR and its associated penalties, only the large and wealthy athletic programs with expensive academic-support services are equipped. Gurney (2011) supports this claim, noting that institutions are ballooning their budgets for student-athletes academic support. Illustrating this point, Leung (2011) explains that under the existing ban for post-season play, when it came to men's basketball only less wealthy programs (Cal State Northridge, Grambling, Louisiana-Monroe and Southern) were banned from post-season play.

Student-athlete fairness. Lastly, but importantly, is the subject of how APR standard impact the student-athlete. On the subject of the heightening of APR requirements to 930, Amy Perko, executive director of the Knight Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics, objects, noting that absent of stronger initial eligibility requirements for incoming student-athletes, these changes are "not fair to the athletes who are not prepared to do the college-level work" (Grasgreen, 2011, p. 1).

Knobler (2008) supports this claim, noting that recent changes have merely widened the gap between the academic abilities of student-athletes and the rest of the institution's student body. Gurney (2011) suggests that this results in steering student-athletes toward majors that provide less academic resistance due to large numbers of electives. Palaima (2011) comments that this phenomenon represents a failure in higher education to ensure these individuals "legitimate experiences as students" (p. 1). He goes on to argue that both new metrics, APR and GSR, "serve as smoke screens for the big-time sports programs to keep exploiting student athletes without making it possible for many of them to be students" (p. 2).

Impact of APR penalties. Historically, research shows that there is no significant negative financial impact in the short run on institutions with sanctions and penalties for NCAA violations (Padilla & Baumer, 1994). However, with significant changes to the academic landscape of academic performance occurring so recently, there is little research on the implications of APR-related penalties and their competitive or financial impact on a broad level. However, trends have emerged as to which institutions and programs have struggled most to deal with these changes and what adaptations are occurring to avoid penalty.

As noted by Wolverton (2008), in today's landscape of college athletics, one finds competition for players having a loosening impact on admissions combined with stiffer progress-to-degree requirements than ever before. This has left schools trying to essentially do more with less when it comes to keeping these students eligible. With the threat of losing scholarships and worse looming for poor academic performance, programs have invested heavily in trying to avoid this fate. However, Moltz (2011) informs us that of the eight teams that were banned from postseason play due to the poor academic performance, four of the institutions punished were historically black colleges and universities (HBCUs) and a fifth was a predominately black institution. Moreover, of the 103 programs punished by the NCAA of their academic performance, 33 were from HBCUs. The penalties handed down to these institutions may signify a fear being voiced in the athletic community, as Moltz puts forth this is "a sign of the widening gap between the "haves" and the "have-nots" in college sports" (p. 1).

However, rather than receive these costly penalties, there have been reports of compromised academic integrity that have arisen. Members of the campus community have cried out that college athletes' lack of academic preparation and commitment to learning diminishes academic integrity (Lumpkin, 2008). For example, the work of Lawrence, Hendricks and Ott (2007) in their survey of faculty found that one-third of faculty members believe academic standards are lowered to achieve athletic success in football and men's basketball. This finding represents a dangerous crossroad where, as Libby (2007) suggests, athletic success comes at the expense of academic integrity. This compromised integrity can come not only from lowering faculty expectations, but also in jeopardizing the opportunity of the student to pursue their own academic interests freely.

Fountain and Finley's (2009) put forth a series of reasonable concerns pertaining to heightened academic standards commenting, "While the goal of the APR, to increase graduation rates of athletes, is admirable, the means utilized by schools to avoid loss of scholarship could prove to be dubious. Pressure on coaches, and subsequently on academic advisors and professors, to find new and creative ways for players to stay eligible and ultimately graduate is not a new issue" (p. 3). The authors go on to suggest that while recruiting better prepared student-athletes or committing more resources to academic services are possible outcomes, another effect to be considered is for institutions to continue to "recruit athletes of marginal academic ability and seek easier majors, courses and professors to ensure a reasonable graduation rate," or clustering (p. 3). The potential for encroachment on a student's academic freedom is illustrated by the remarks of Sandy Meyer, assistant director of the academic-support center for athletes at Penn State University, who noted that with the current climate of penalties for poor academic performance, there is too great of a risk for a student-athlete to select anything other than a "safe" major (Wolverton, 2007, p. 1).

Fountain and Finley (2009) examination of clustering in ACC football programs found that six of the 11 schools examined had at least one-third of its student-athletes in a single major and all schools had exceeded the 25% cutoff for clustering as defined by Case et al. (1987). Moreover, it has been shown that clustering occurs at a different magnitude based on race. Fountain and Finley (2009) exhibited in their study of ACC football programs that at over half the schools they examined over 75% of the program's minorities student-athletes were enrolled in just two majors. And while one common excuse given for clustering is that certain majors allow more flexibility in scheduling for athletes, this significant rift between the rate at which white and minority athletes register in these majors rejects this reasoning to a large extent. One longstanding suggestion to counter this problem of clustering comes from the seminal work of Case, Greer and Brown (1987) who suggested the relocation of advisement of student-athletes out of the athletic department. However, this suggestion did not gain popularity at the Division I FBS level.

Furthermore, some like Wright State University Athletics Director, Michael J. Cusack (2007) have complained that on an individual level, the progress to degree requirements trap student-athletes in majors they may have transferred out of due to poor fit. Furthermore, he also adds that the retention component can unfairly punish a program if a student-athlete decided to transfer, but fails to keep up academically before doing so, an unfair burden to a coach and team.

Social Identity Theory

Keeping in mind previous research, it is necessary to move forward and connect with the theoretical basis for this study. The name "student-athlete" illustrates a duality of roles these young people are engaged it. Social identity theory will help to explain the dynamics of the interplay between these two roles and build on the findings of the previous research explained earlier in this section.

As we set out to examine the role institutional, departmental and program-specific variables play in influencing Division I FBS (formerly Division I-A) football student-athletes' academic progress and performance, we hope to develop an understanding of what characteristics define the environment that best promotes the student identity of its football student-athletes. However, in order to do so, a firm understanding of the relationship between the roles of student and athlete must be mapped out. The following section will first introduce social identity theory to the reader, then move on to explain the primary conflict that exists between the student and athlete identities of the student-athlete. Then, we will look at specific levels of the intercollegiate experience to explain how institutional, department and program specific characteristics impact the tradeoff between these two conflicting identities.

Background of Social Identity Theory. Developed by Henri Tajfel and John Turner (1979), social identity theory is a social psychological examination of intergroup relations, group membership and group processes. The theory focuses on the idea that group behavior can be attributed to a shared understanding of social group membership (Burke, 2006). Burke explains that the theory is "framed by a conviction that collective phenomena cannot be adequately explained in terms of isolated individual processes or interpersonal interaction alone" (p. 111).

According to Bell (2009), "the concept of identity, as understood in sociological terms, links the individual to society, and defines the roles a person takes on in his life" (p. 22). In their work, Identity and Interactions, McCall and Simmons (1978) contend that a person's various role-identities provide a lens for how he interprets his experiences throughout life. Furthermore, the numerous roles played by an individual are what comprise one's identity (London, Downey, Bolger & Velilla, 2005). For the male football student-athletes in this study, a focus is given to the interaction between their student identity and their athletic identity.

Studies show that all roles played by an individual are not given equal standing in one's life at a given moment in time (McCall & Simmons, 1978). Chatman, Eccles and Malanchuk (2005) demonstrate the importance of an identity to the individual, known as identity salience, is not static, but rather fluctuating over time based on context and circumstance. This context is often formed through a given social setting. As explained by Merton (1957) in his seminal work on social theory, this social context is established by a person's role-set, or the group of individuals a person associates his roles with in a variety of circumstances. The work of Stevenson (1999) with international athletes supported the idea that the actions and perceptions of those around them enhanced the salience of their athletic identity, which in turn, improved their commitment to their sport. Moreover, in their study of workers, Haslam, Powell and Turner (2000) found that group-based needs were especially important to the individual in situations when the worker's social identity, or their role as a teammate, was salient.

Social role conflict: Athlete vs. Student. When it comes to student-athletes, Brewer (1991) tells us that the athletic identity is the identification with their role as an athlete. Given the work of Stryker and Serpe (1982), who found that if those within an individual's network give a high level of salience to a specific identity, this social influence will heighten the level of salience of that role at the individual level, one can start to formulate why the athletic identity can be so strong for the student-athlete. Studies show that once salience is given to the athletic role, student-athletes spend a high percentage of their time with coaches, teammates and others in their athletic role-set, perpetuating their commitment to this role (Horton & Mack, 2000; Watt & Moore, 2001). Furthermore, the work of DeBrock, Hendricks, and Koenker (1996) suggested that football and basketball male student-athletes have more trouble in the classroom and graduating because of the margin between the potential financial returns from professional careers in sport and the earning potential driven by their college degrees. Thus, we start to develop a compelling case for the prevailing salience of the athlete role.

Bell (2009) explains that those undergraduates who identify themselves with the role of "student" have an academic identity. The conflict between these two identities for salience being settled in large part by the social situations student-athletes partake in. However, the works of Adler and Adler (1987, 1991) demonstrate how the athletic role impacts decision making, friendships, and importance of other roles played by the student-athlete. Bell (2009) adds that a "team culture" can influence athletic and academic decision making on the individual level.

Institutional influence. Examining previous works on social identity theory, we find that the landscape where the student-athlete battles between their student and athlete identities is different from one institution to another. Earlier in this work, many of these variables were promoted when discussing the campus learning environment. LaForge and Hodge (2011) put forth in their work on metrics of student-athlete academic evaluation that graduation success, as measured by either FGR or GSR, will likely be higher at elite private institutions than their public peers, whose mission includes promoting access to higher education. Understanding the differences between institutions, Bell's (2009) study of role-set influence amongst football players at the Division I FBS level examines only universities classified as "selective" or "more selective" research universities based off the Carnegie Classification system. This decision is supported by prior works that show having academically oriented peers can enhance a student's academic experience (Crosnoe et al., 2003; Dennis et al, 2005; Hurtado et al., 1996, Tinto, 1993).

The academic orientation of an institution and its competing institutions may indeed impact the social experiences of an athlete. For instance, as of 2010, all of the participating members of the Big 10 conference (11 institutions at the time) boasted membership in the American Association of Universities, which according to its website is, "an organization of 61 leading public and private research universities in the United States and Canada." Thus, we find that the institution itself can play a part in the salience of the two roles student-athletes find themselves juxtaposed between.

Departmental influence. Moving past the institutional level and the broader environment these student-athletes find themselves in, one finds variability within each athletic department that alters the experience of the student-athlete and impacts role salience. These variables impact the campus-learning environment of the student-athlete only, not their non-athlete peers, as they are not provided access to these amenities and services. One very important variable in this area is athletics departmental spending. According to the Knight Commission (2010), as of 2008, four of the five BCS conferences were spending on average over $100,000 per athlete per year, with the Southeastern Conference (SEC) leading the way, spending $144,592 annually per student-athlete. Meanwhile, also competing at the Division I FBS level, both the MAC and Sun Belt Conferences were spending below $50,000 per year on each student-athlete. Despite this spending, the NCAA reported that 25 Division I Football Bowl Subdivision institutions reported positive net revenues for their athletic programs, with the median at about $3 million in excess revenue per institution (Brown, 2009). However, median deficit for the other nearly 100 programs participating at this level is about $8 million a year. This gap signifies a rather large gap between what has been called the "haves" and "have-nots" of college athletics (Brown, 2009).

This phenomenon, when considering in concert with the previously discussed work of Moltz (2011), who noted that four of the eight teams banned from postseason participation because of poor academic standards after the release of the 2009-10 APR were from historically black colleges and universities, paints a scary picture when it comes to the connection between financial resources and academic achievement. As explained by Wolverton (2007), "institutions continue to pour big bucks into academic-support systems" (p. 1) and thus, larger academic budgets are being used to meet the heightened academic standards and penalties, a trend he refers to as the "APR effect" (p. 1). And while Bell (2009) illustrated the important role of athletic academic support centers and student-athlete advisors, the research from the Knight Commission indicates this extensive outpouring of resources may not be financially feasible for all that compete at this level of college athletics.

These dueling financial strains placed on programs with limited resources force difficult decisions to be made. While underfunding educational initiatives at the expense of athletic achievement is certainly not an ideal objective for athletic administrators, it should be acknowledged that this may be a harsh reality. Therefore, some departments may lack the funding necessary to create an academic culture that enhances the salience of the student role, while also sponsoring an athletically competitive football program.

Football program influence. While the athletic department and the institution have undeniable impacts on the role salience decisions made by a student-athlete, another set of factors also come into play. These influences are those that are related to the football program itself. As previously discussed, the thoughts and opinions of a student-athletes peer group impact the decisions a student-athlete will make (Tinto, 1993). Looking further, one finds that the role of the coach and the success of the team can also play a part in developing role salience.

Role of coach. When it comes to the clash between the conflicting roles tugging on today's football student-athlete, the culture that exists within the football program appears to contribute strongly to identity salience. As explained earlier by Simons et al. (1999), the power that coaches have over the contributions these student-athletes can make to the team through control over playing time and other in-game decisions looms in developing identity salience. Furthermore, one can imagine that coaches, who hold players accountable for class attendance, grades and other academic metrics, leveraging playing time and other athletic rewards for clearing academic measures, could be effective in enhancing the salience of the student identity within the team. Moreover, in Bell's (2009) work, we found that a number of student-athletes highlighted the role played by coaches in deemphasizing their chances of having a professional career and rather, highlighted the opportunity the student-athletes had to pursue a degree.

Further yet, the NCAA appears to have bought in to the notion that coaches play an important role in developing the academic climate around a program with their recent legislation. The organization's decision to release single-year APRs for Division I head coaches in sports, including football (Brutlag Hosick, 2010), illustrates the recognition and accountability being given to the coach for the role they play in promoting academic achievement. So while coaches seem capable of promoting an academically oriented culture, questions remain as to what extent this role may be embraced by coaches.

Impact of athletic success. The real and perceived benefits of a successful football program appear to be an important factor in the promoted salience of the athletic identity. While previously discussed pressures to win in sports like football have become imbedded in the culture of so many campuses across our nation, this phenomenon is certainly not without reason. Long holding is research that indicates the athletic success of Division I football programs can lead to financial gains for the institution. Padilla and Baumer (1994) illustrated that a single win in football over the previous three year period correlated to increased football-related revenues of between $200,000 and $300,000. More recently, we have found that on average, football programs in the six largest conferences earned approximately $15.8 million in the 2009-10 academic year, or revenue generation well over $1 million per game (Isidore, 2010).

Moreover, the athletic role salience gained by the 'big business' nature of college football, institutional compensation of head football coaches may be another indicator of trouble. According to an examination of coaches' contracts that took place in 2007, 52 of the 81 coaching contracts at the Division I FBS level included academic bonuses for the classroom performance of their student-athletes (Eichelberger & Levinson, 2007). However, it is also pointed out that in many of these contracts, which often exceed $1 million per year, these academic bonuses are dwarfed by huge athletic performance incentives, citing the contract of University of California at Berkeley head coach, Jeff Tedford, who makes $3.3 million a year with a maximum academic bonus of $25,000, which is less than 1 percent of his total contract (Eichelberger & Levinson, 2007). This trend appears dangerous when referring back to the identity salience of the student-athlete, as while we recognized that coaches can play a large role in promoting academic oriented role development, many existing practices in the landscape of college football do not encourage coaches from capitalizing on this ability.

Summary

As we set out to use social identity to examine the role institutional, departmental and program-specific variables play in influencing academic progress and performance at football programs in Division I FBS institutions, we are reminded that this study is intended to develop an understanding of what characteristics best define an institution that excels at promoting the student identity of its football student-athletes; a list of these characteristics in question is provided in Table 1. This work is intended to build on the previously discussed works in this field that were previously discussed in this chapter.

In the next chapter, the methods of inquiry for this study will be examined to demonstrate how this work will build on the value of previous research. Leaning heavily on self-reported information from NCAA member institutions and government reports, the quantitative approach to mobilizing the institutional, departmental and program-specific variables used in this study will be highlighted. Additionally, the methods of data analysis also must be brought to light.

CHAPTER 3: RESEARCH METHODS

Introduction

Accountability for the academic success of student-athletes has become an increasingly important topic in intercollegiate athletics over the last decade, as proven by recent conversations to further heighten APR requirements for today's student-athletes (Sander, 2011a). With multi-million dollar coaches' contracts and billion dollar television contracts reshaping intercollegiate athletics, the attention paid to major college football programs appears to be growing exponentially. A main goal of this study was to look closer at the academic measures used to assess student-athletes and determine what aspects of their collegiate experience may impact these measures. This chapter discusses the research methods used to examine this relationship, as data sources, variables, and analysis will be addressed.

Research Design

Using secondary institutional data provided to the federal government and the NCAA, this quantitative study examines the relationship between institutional, athletic departmental and football program specific variables, and the academic progress and performance of Division I FBS football student-athletes. This was achieved through comparing differences in academic progress (APR) and academic performance (GSR) between football programs, while taking into account variables such as institutional type, departmental spending and on-field success. The selection of these three categories of variables was informed by the literature review, as the objective of this study was to build on the previous work in this area while applying a new lens of observation provided to us by the NCAA's implementation of the APR and GSR. Furthermore, the study was also informed by prior research on social identity theory, as the variables selected speak to the interplay between the roles of student and athlete juggled by these individuals and their role salience decisions.

Data Source and Population

The institutions examined in this study were all classified as Division I Football Bowl Subdivision (FBS) institutions, who participated at the highest level of intercollegiate football within the NCAA's membership. These schools included both public and private institutions, and members of major (Atlantic Coast, Big East, Big 12, Big Ten, PAC10 and Southeastern) and non-major (Mid-American, Mountain West, Sun Belt, and Western Athletic) conferences, as well as independent programs that lack conference affiliation (Notre Dame, Army). According to NCAA Bylaws (2008) 20.9.7.1 through 20.9.7.4, member institutions at the FBS level must sponsor 16 sport programs (rather than 14, which is required of other Division I members) and also must play 60% of its football schedule against other FBS teams, average at least 15,000 in attendance for its football contests and exceed minimum requirements for football and departmental grants-in-aid.

The data used in this study came from requisite institutional reporting, either to the United States government or the NCAA. While institutional funding status (i.e. public or private) is filed with the federal government, the athletic department budgetary figures used in this study also came for the federal government, out of the U.S. Department of Education's Office of Postsecondary Education from its Equity in Athletics Database (2011). Additionally, the Association of American Universities' website explains the association's classification and accreditation (2011). Lastly, data involving on-field and academic performance of football student-athletes came from those results achieved between 2004-05 and 2009-10 academic years. This data follows consistent reporting mandates across institutions as imposed by the NCAA.

Variables in the Study

As discussed in Chapter 2, research suggests that institutional (Comeaux & Harrison, 2007; Harrison et al., 2006; Helliker, 2011; LaForge & Hodge, 2011; Pascarella & Terenzini, 1991; Tinto, 1993; Wilson, 1975), departmental (Brown, 2009; Knight Commission, 2010; Moltz, 2011; Wolverton, 2008) and program-specific (Amato et al., 1996; Bell, 2009; Lucas & Lovaglia, 2005; Maloney & McCormick, 1993; Simons et al., 1999) variables can all play a role in impacting the academic performance of a Division I football student-athlete. The following section examines these three conceptual areas of independent variables, and also presents those outcome variables that were used to evaluate academic performance.

Independent variables. As shown in Table 2, this study relied on three different categories of independent variables. Each one of these categories played a significant role in the study because it represents a level of the society in which the student-athlete functions and thus, impacts salience between the roles of student and athlete. The broadest level of variables is that which looks at the overall academic institution. The study utilized three institutional variables to measure the variables' relation to the study's outcome variables. These variables characterize the university and include: AAU accreditation, public/private status and conference affiliation. Next, two variables that were representative of decisions made at the athletic department level were included in the next category. These two variables were athletic department expenditures and football program expenditures. These variables influence the amount of resources available to those participating in intercollegiate athletics and the football program itself. The final classification of variables looks specifically at the football programs at these institutions. The three program-specific variables included in this study were: coaching change, average win total, and bowl game appearances.

Institutional variables.

AAU institution. An institution's status as accredited by the American Association of Universities speaks to level of academic prestige. According to the association's website, these member universities "are on the leading edge of innovation, scholarship, and solutions that contribute to the nation's economy, security and well-being" (2011, p. 1). To a similar end, Bell's (2009) study of football players at the Division I FBS level examined only universities classified as "selective" or "more selective" research universities based off the Carnegie Classification system. This decision was supported by prior work that shows having academically oriented peers can enhance a student's academic experience (Crosnoe et al., 2003; Dennis et al, 2005; Hurtado et al., 1996, Tinto, 1993).

This categorical variable was measured in the study through the use of a dummy variable, with AAU institutions being coded as a "1" and non-AAU institutions receiving a "0." Incorporating academic prestige into this study by examining AAU status not only falls in order with previous literature, it also supports the context of social identity theory. Institutional academic prestige, as identified by Bell (2009), has the potential to impact the educational environment in a way that alters student role salience.

Private/public institution. In this study, the origin of institutional control was provided by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching (2011). LaForge and Hodge (2011) put forth in their work that graduation success, as measured by either FGR or GSR, will likely be higher at elite private institutions than their public peers, whose mission includes promoting access to higher education. Considering this contention, the examination of this categorical variable fit nicely into the study of those institutional elements that may influence academic performance. Moreover, since institutional type impacts the social setting of the student-athlete, this variable may attribute to role salience and social identity.

Conference affiliation. Conference affiliation is first an institutional variable, although some might argue it could also be seen as a departmental variable. Some conferences pride themselves on the academic pursuits of their member institutions and the academic consideration given to their athletic participants. For instance, prior to the start of the 2011-12 academic-year, all members of the Big Ten conference were members of the AAU, making it home to many of the nation's best research universities (Abourezk, 2011). However, the dividing line between "major" conferences and others does tend to suggest trends in athletic department spending, a variable examined more closely in the next section. As previously discussed, the Knight Commission (2010) found that median spending per athlete at the major conference level (see Table 3 for more detail) comes in between four and 11 times more than that spent on education-related activities for their students, a multiplier far higher than that at non-major schools.

Conference Automatic Qualification Status

Conference Name	BCS Automatic Qualification
Atlantic Coast (ACC)	Yes
Big East	Yes
Big Ten	Yes
Big 12	Yes
Conference USA (C-USA)	No
Independent	No
Mid-American (MAC)	No
Mountain West (MWC)	No
PAC 10	Yes
Southeastern (SEC)	Yes
Sun Belt	No
Western Athletic	No

Here, the "major" and "non-major" conferences are separated categorically. This term is defined by the BCS agreement and that organization's identification of automatic qualifying conferences (BCS, 2011). These automatic qualifying conferences are referred to as "major" conference. Conference membership is based on conference alignment as of the end of the 2010-11 academic-year. In this study, an understanding of how conference affiliation may attribute to difference in academic performance will be developed. As it relates to social identity theory, incorporating this variable helps develop an understanding of whether or not the competitive landscape of a "major" conference impacts the interplay between the role of student and athlete differently than it does at the "non-major" level.

Athletic department expenditures. The need to analyze athletic department budgets is rooted in existing literature. Moltz (2011), Wolverton (2007) and the Knight Commission (2010) amongst others have illustrated the correlation between departmental spending and academic success for student-athletes. The information used in this study is made public by institutions to the United States Department of Education. While some correlation between spending and conference affiliation was expected, outliers may exist and should be accounted for in this study. This continuous variable is measured in American dollars. The measure will provide insight as to whether or not the commitment of financial resources made by an athletic department to its student-athletes impacts the academic success of football student-athletes.

Football program expenditures. Also obtained from the US Department of Education, the spending that was earmarked specifically for the football program demanded consideration to account for funding allocations made at the departmental level. Although tied to the football program specifically, this variable is classified as departmental because the decision to fund each sport at its given level is made by athletic department administration, not the sport itself. This continuous variable is also measured in American dollars. The measure will provide insight as to whether or not the commitment of financial resources made by an athletic department to its football program impacts the academic success of football student-athletes.

Coaching change. The turnover of coaches experienced by a football program is a control variable measured continuously to evaluate important changes to the student-athletes' social environment. Chapter two discussed the work of Simons et al. (1999) who explained the power of coaches over student-athletes because of their control over desired outcomes like playing time or in-game playing opportunities. Bell's (2009) qualitative study of student-athletes found that students highlighted the candor given by coaches who emphasized the opportunity of achieving a degree while deemphasizing the importance of continuing with sports.

Yet while coaches seem capable of promoting an academically oriented culture, questions remain as to whether or not the culture of intercollegiate athletics does anything to evoke this responsibility, especially when so much of the spoils may be there for the victors on the field. Regardless, one sees that the rapport between student-athlete and coach could play a role in the identity salience decisions made by these students, and thus a connection to social identity theory exists. Inherently, this rapport could suffer due to coaching turnover.

Average win total. Existing literature suggests conflicting opinions exist as to whether winning impacts academic success. Maloney and McCormick (1993) and Amato et al. (1996) found that playing football significantly hampered academic performance. However, Lucas and Lovaglia (2005) found that major college football programs, whose athletes make higher levels of academic progress (as measured by the APR), are just as likely to win as those programs whose athletes make little progress. However, a critical mass of APR data has accumulated since this study and the topic requires additional research at this time. Regardless, this continuous variable will illustrate how the academic climate around a winning football program impacts academic performance and the social identity of student-athletes.

Bowl appearances. Over the last decade, winning at least six games in a football season classified that program as bowl eligible. While not guaranteed a spot in a bowl game, the majority of teams that reach this mark will participate in a single postseason game known as a bowl. Oversight of the bowl post-season is conducted by the Football Bowl Association (FBA), a non-profit association whose membership includes those Division I conferences that participate in the bowl season (FBA, 2011).

These bowl games are traditionally played either in December or January, with the more prestigious bowls usually being played later than others. Therefore, the more successful the team, the longer the football season in most cases. This phenomenon sets the stage for the "in-season effect" proposed by Maloney and McCormick (1993), as well as Amato's (1996) theory on bowl participation. This existing research suggests that prolonged football seasons hamper academic performance. Thus, looking at this continuous variable as a factor that may impact academic performance or progress was important.

Outcome variables. As illustrated by Table 4, this study utilized three outcome variables, each of which plays an important part in the academic evaluation of a football program. In the data analysis, each variable serves as the basis of a regression analysis that models the influence the aforementioned independent variables have on these outcome variables. In total, three regression models were created to examine the role these independent variables play in explaining each of the outcomes (APR, APR-related Sanctions, and GSR). The use of each of the three dependent variables, on which the regression models were based, illustrated how the study's independent variables influenced the role salience decisions made by the football student-athletes at the institutions in question.

Outcome Variable Grouping and Source

Outcome Variables – Academic
Regression Model 1		Regression Model 2		Regression Model 3
Variable	Source	Variable	Source	Variable	Source
Academic Progress Rate	AAU	APR Sanctions	NCAA	Graduation Success Rate	NCAA

Average academic progress rate. The importance of the Academic Progress Rate was explained in detail previously. As of the 2009-10 season, the NCAA called for each program to maintain a score of at least 925 on a scale of 1,000 points to avoid facing sanctions. Its incorporation into this study hinged upon its implementation by the NCAA as the key metric in measuring student-athlete academic progress. Denhart, Villwock and Vedder (2009) explain the premise of the metric and its emphasis on progress to degree, while LaForge and Hodge (2011) emphasize both retention and eligibility. While APR alone does not complete the illustration of program academic orientation, it starts to build a compelling case for the ability of the student-athlete to meet the challenges of an academic curriculum.

Academic progress rate sanctions. Research explains that the penalties associated with poor APR scores have garnered attention from those in college athletics (Wolverton, 2007). Moltz (2011) provided evidence that program resources are heavily involved in avoiding or succumbing to these penalties. Libby (2007) explains that with athletic success threatened by penalties, issues of academic integrity can now be found. These issues include the promoting of clustering in majors perceived as more flexible or fitting to an athlete's schedule (Fountain & Finley, 2009). By taking this continuous variable into account, evidence either supporting or rejecting these claims may be provided. Additionally, this study should demonstrate if trends exist amongst those institutions that endured penalties, allowing for the development of hypotheses about the conflict between the roles of student and athlete.

Average graduation success rate. GSR is an outcome variables used to evaluate academic performance. GSR is the often cited metric used for graduation rates amongst student-athletes, as it accounts for their greater propensity toward mobility when compared to their non-athlete peers (Denhart, Villwock & Vedder, 2009). The GSR includes all freshman who enter college in a given year, but unlike the federal graduation rate, it goes on to exclude from its denominator those student-athletes who leave the institution in good academic standing (i.e. transfer). The figure's numerator is comprised of those students within the program that go on to graduate, leaving us with a percentage score interpreted as the graduation success rate. While GSR also does not complete the picture of academic climate around a specific program, it can be used in tandem with APR to develop a better understanding of this climate.

Analysis of the Data

As discussed in the first chapter, this study examined three research questions related to the purpose of identifying institutional, departmental and program-specific variables that influence football student-athlete academic progress and performance.

This study was based on the ability to regress multiple independent variables across selected outcome variables in a multivariate regression model that results in an enhanced understanding of characteristics defining an institution that best promotes the student identity of its football student-athletes.

Multivariate regression. In an attempt to draw conclusions about the academic achievements of Division I FBS football programs, this study regressed the three categories of variables discussed earlier (institutional, departmental and program) against three academic dependent variables. This set up is used to inform readers about the institutional, departmental and program-specific characteristics that are significantly associated with academic performance, as it is defined by our three regression models. Multiple regression analysis was selected because it represents a flexible method of data analysis that examines the relationship between dependent variables with a multitude of other factors, allowing one to examine the effects of a single variable or many variables while evaluating the effects of other variables (Cohen, Cohen, West & Aiken, 2003).

Research Question 1 - Academic Progress Rate. The first research question was: "What combination of institutional, departmental and program-specific variables explains student-athlete academic progress as measured by APR and informed by social identity theory?" This question was examined with SPSS version 19.0 (2011), conducting a multivariate regression that used an array of institutional, departmental and program-specific variables as independent variables to measure any role they played in impacting the APR achieved by each football program.

Research Question 2 – Academic Progress Rate sanctions. The second research question was: "Informed by social identity theory, what combination of institutional, departmental and program-specific variables explains an institution's football program's receipt of academic-related sanctions due to low APR?" This question was examined with SPSS (2011, Version 19), conducting a multivariate regression that used an array of institutional, departmental and program-specific variables as independent variables to measure any role they played in impacting the likelihood of the football program receiving penalties based on low APR scores.

Research Question 3 – Graduation Success Rate. The third research question was: "What combination of institutional, departmental and program-specific variables explains student-athlete academic performance as measured by GSR and informed by social identity theory?" This question was examined with SPSS (2011, Version 19), conducting a multivariate regression that used an array of institutional, departmental and program-specific variables as independent variables to measure any role they played in impacting the GSR achieved by each football program.

Summary

This chapter presents the study's research methods, explaining selected variables and the development of multiple regression models. With the variables informing not only the purpose, but also the framework provided by social identity theory, the study was positioned to provide answers to the presented research questions by measuring the impact of the selected variables on these models.

Although media attention given to college athletics is expansive, and the attention provided to the academic endeavors of these students is garnering more attention as well, empirical data in this area of research is still lacking. While popular media and academia both have opined on the subjects of APR and GSR for college student-athletes, more data analysis is needed to support conclusions with sound statistical backings. Looking closely at aspects of the college experience that vary between institution, athletic department and football program, we are poised to discover those elements of the collegiate experience found to significantly impact academic performance for football student-athletes.

Although APR and GSR have become thoroughly integrated into the lexicon of intercollegiate athletics, research on the effectiveness and impact of these relatively young metrics remains limited. Using existing data provided by these institutions to the NCAA or the federal government, this study develops three regression models to help inform existing research as to what elements of the football student-athlete's collegiate experience tend to influence these metrics. With the methodology of this research now explained, we move on to explore the results of the study, exploring those variables that were found to make an impact on this study.

CHAPTER 4: RESULTS

Introduction

The purpose of this study is to examine the role that institutional, departmental and program-specific variables play in influencing Division I FBS football student-athletes' academic progress, as measured by the NCAA's Academic Progress Rate (APR), and performance, as measured by the NCAA's Graduation Success Rate (GSR) through the framework of social identity theory. This will result in an understanding of characteristics that may influence the identity salience of football student-athletes. Given this information, conclusions may be formed regarding the dynamics of this group of student-athletes, explaining differences based on institutional, departmental and program-specific variables.

The following chapter will consist of two main components. First, descriptive statistics of the variables investigated in the study will be presented and reviewed. Secondly, this chapter will then present the results of the three regression models that were developed to answer the research questions. These results will be summarized and analyzed to conclude the chapter.

Descriptive Statistics

Data analyses for this study were conducted using SPSS version 19.0 (2011). There are exactly 120 institutions that participate in the NCAA's Division I FBS level. However, due to the federal nature of two of these institutions, the U.S. Air Force Academy and the U.S. Naval Academy, expenditure information was not available, leaving a final sample size of 118. The following section provides descriptive statistics for the entire data set used in this study, examining the independent variables on which the study's three regression models rely. These variables are presented within three classifying subgroups: institutional, departmental and program-specific. The section then goes on to illustrate the three dependent variables of the study, with each one providing the basis of a regression model.

Institutional variables.

AAU institution. 37 members of the 118 institutions in the data set were recognition by the AAU as part of its membership at the conclusion of this study, symbolizing a class of leading research universities in North America. This group represented 31.3%, or nearly one third, of the study's population. The remaining 81 institutions were not members of the AAU, representing 68.7% of the population.

Private/Public. Informed by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, data shows that 14.4%, or 17 institutions, in the FBS were private. The remaining 101 were classified as public institutions, which represented 85.6% of the study's population.

Major conferences. In accordance with the agreement FBS institutions made with the BCS, each conference had an opportunity to earn annual automatic qualification into the BCS through a four-year evaluation covering the regular seasons of 2004, 2005, 2006 and 2007. In accordance with this evaluation, the Atlantic Coast, Big East, Big Ten, Big 12, Pacific-12 and Southeastern Conferences met the threshold and earned automatic qualification through the 2013-14 season. Therefore, institutional membership in one of these six conferences classifies the institution as a member of a "major" conference. Given these guidelines, 65 institutions in the FBS (see Table 5), or 55.1% of the population in this study, were members of these major conferences. The remaining 53 institutions are not members of a major conference, which represented 44.9% of the population.

Conference Membership

Major Conferences		Non-Major Conferences

Atlantic Coast	12	USA	12
Big East	8	Mid-American	13
Big Ten	11	Mountain West	9
Big 12	12	Sun Belt	9
Pacific-12	10	Western Athletic	9
Southeastern	12	Independent	3
Total	65 (55.1%)	Total	55 (44.9%)

Departmental variables.

Athletic department expenditures. Provided by the U.S. Department of Education's Office of Postsecondary Education (OPE) and its Equity in Athletics Disclosure website, this publically accessible figure measures average overall spending by an athletic department over an academic year throughout the years of the study. The mean expenses incurred by a department were measured at $38,839,175.57 per year with a standard deviation of $20,523,555.79.

Football program expenditures. Also provided by the U.S. Department of Education's Office of Postsecondary Education (OPE) and its Equity in Athletics Disclosure (EADA) website, this publically accessible figure measures average overall spending by an institution's football program over an academic year throughout the years of the study. The average expenses incurred by a football program were measured at $10,178,333.40 per year with a standard deviation of $5,218,826.57. Given the average expenses incurred by an athletics department were measured at $38,839,175.57 per year, it should be noted that the average expenses incurred by a football program of $10,178,333.40 per year represents 26.2% of the total athletic department budget.

Program-specific variables.

Coaching change. Provided by NCAA records, this public accessible data measures the turnover of coaches experienced by a football program. In this study, it serves as a control variable measured to evaluate important changes to the student-athletes' social environment. On average, during the six seasons that this study examined, a football program had 1.76 head coaches leading its football student-athletes with a standard deviation of .636.

Average win total. Provided by NCAA records, this continuous variable refers to the average number of victories a team achieves per season over the six football season span of this study. Generally speaking, a football regular season in the FBS during this period consisted of 12 games, with the possibility of one or two more games due to post-season play (i.e. conference championship games and bowl game appearances). The average win total for the institutions in this study is approximately 6.38 games per season with a standard deviation of 2.23.

Number of bowl appearances. Provided by the Football Bowl Association (FBA), a non-profit member association that represents all post-season college football bowls, this variable accounts for institutional appearances in post-season play, a factor that lengthens the student-athletes' football season. Once a team accumulates six wins in a given season, they become bowl eligible, but not every six-win team is selected for participation in a bowl. According to the data set, over the six seasons this study examined, the average football program appeared in a bowl game 3.12 times with a standard deviation of 2.06.

Dependent variables.

Average academic progress rate. Provided by NCAA records, this public accessible measure awards two points each term to student-athletes, one for meeting academic-eligibility standards and one for remaining with the institution. A team's APR is the total points earned by the team at a given time divided by the total points possible, then calibrated to a scale of 1000. As shown in Table 6, the average football program had an APR of 939.26 with a standard deviation of 19.18.

Table 6

Descriptive Statistics for Independent Variables

Average APR	939.261299	19.1831591	118
APR Sanctions	.49	.976	118
Average GSR	64.85310746	11.381958842	118

Academic progress rate sanctions. As previously discussed, the APR requires each sport program at the NCAA level to maintain a score of above 925 in order to avoid facing sanctions. These sanctions are tracked and recorded by the NCAA and are accessible to the public. During the course of this study, the average football program received .49 APR-related sanctions with a standard deviation of .976, or almost twice the mean. More specifically, of the 118 institutions in the study, 30 received penalties with a total of 58 sanctions received among them over the period of time examined. Table 7 provides a complete listing of the institutions that received sanctions, please note that all of these institutions are public in nature.

Average graduation success rate. Provided by the NCAA, the GSR is a graduation rate computation. Like FGR, this measure assesses graduation over a six-year period, but the rate includes transfer students, unlike the federal rate. Also unlike the FGR, the GSR also accounts for midyear enrollees and is calculated for every sport. As previously shown in Table 6, the average football program had a GSR of 64.85 and a standard deviation of 11.38.

Lastly, in addition to understanding means and the standard deviations of the variables in the study, the relationship between these variables must be accounted for, as well. In order to do so, a correlation was conducted among the eight independent variables to test for collinearity. The results of the correlation analysis indicated that multicollinearity did not exist among the variables used in the three regression models, as tolerances ranged from .113 to .893 and VIF ranged from 1.119 to 8.869. Following this analysis, an examination of the regression analyses associated with the study's research questions will be presented.

Research Question One

The first research question asked, "What combination of institutional, departmental and program-specific variables explains student-athlete academic progress as measured by APR and informed by social identity theory?" Using regression analysis, a model was run with the data available for the 118 institutions in this study. Data analysis was performed with eight independent variables, three categorical (AAU institution, public/private and major conference) and five continuous (athletic department expenditures, football program expenditures, coaching change, average win total and number of bowl appearances). These variables were used to explain the dependent variable, average APR score.

In the regression, the three dichotomous categorical variables were coded as AAU institutions "1" with all others coded "0," private schools "1" with all others coded "0," and lastly, major conference institutions "1" with all others coded "0." As for the dependent variable, average APR score, programs received a score ranging from 0 – 1000. Across the 118 institutions in the study, the average APR score was reported at 939.26.

In the first regression model, the first indicator was the ANOVA generated by the analysis, which was found to be significant, justifying that this model is in fact linear. The adjusted R squared was .395 or 39.5% of the variance (or error) in the average APR that can be explained by this model. Using a confidence level of 95%, the only significant variable in the model was private institutions, which was found to have significance of $p = .000$ and a positive beta of 25.678. This result suggests that the private control of an institution should increase an institution's average APR score by 25.678 points above the reported beta for average APR score.

As illustrated in Table 8, no other variables (AAU institution, major conference, athletic department expenditures, football program expenditures, coaching change, average win total, or number of bowl appearances) were significant in the APR regression model. However, it may be important to note that of the remaining seven independent variables, all but coaching change produced positive betas, which suggests a positive correlation with average APR score. Coaching change, produced a beta of -.031, indicating that the transition of a program's leadership may result in a less favorable academic performance as measured by APR.

Research Question Two

The second question asked, "Informed by social identity theory, what combination of institutional, departmental and program-specific variables explains an institution's football program's receipt of academic-related sanctions due to low APR?" As discussed earlier in Chapter Three, the answer to this question was analyzed by using SPSS. Using regression analysis, a model was run with the data available for the 118 institutions in this study. Data analysis was performed on all eight independent variables: three categorical (AAU institution, public/private and major conference) and five continuous (athletic department expenditures, football program expenditures, coaching change, average win total and number of bowl appearances). These variables were used to explain the dependent variable, APR-related sanctions.

In the regression, the three dichotomous categorical variables were coded as AAU institutions "1" with all others coded "0," private schools "1" with all others coded "0," and lastly, major conference institutions "1" with all others coded "0." As for the dependent variable, total number of APR-related sanctions, across the 118 institutions in the study, the average number of sanctions was reported at .49, which means that the average institution in this study has received .49 sanctions during the period being examined.

As for the second regression model, the first indicator was the ANOVA generated by the analysis, which was found to be significant, justifying that this model is in fact linear. The adjusted R squared was .249 or 24.9% of the variance (or error) in the receipt of APR-related sanctions that can be explained by this model. Using a confidence level of 95%, the significant variables in the model were bowl appearance and private institution status. Bowl appearance was found to have a significance of $p = .027$ and a beta of -.210. This result suggests that appearance in a bowl game should decrease an institution's receipt of APR-related sanctions, with a bowl appearance decreasing the occurrence of .210 sanctions. On the other hand, private control of an institution was also found to have a significance of $p = .014$ and a beta of -.596. This result suggests that private status should decrease an institution's receipt of APR-related sanctions by .210 sanctions. Thus, the model suggests that those programs with private status and those appearing more often in bowl games are less likely to receive APR-related sanctions. As illustrated in Table 9, no other variables (AAU institution, major conference, athletic department expenditures, football program expenditures, coaching change, or average win total) were significant in the APR regression model. While p = .055 for major conference affiliation did not met the stringent requirements for significance, it did deserve some attention here due to its powerful negative beta of -.525. This negative beta suggested that participation in a major conference may have a strong negative relation to the receipt of APR-related sanctions.

Research Question Three

The study's final research questions asked, "What combination of institutional, departmental and program-specific variables explains student-athlete academic performance as measured by GSR and informed by social identity theory?" Using a regression analysis, a model was run with the data available for the 118 institutions in this study. Data analysis was performed on all eight variables explained in the descriptive section. Data analysis was performed with eight independent variables, three categorical (AAU institution, public/private and major conference) and five continuous (athletic department expenditures, football program expenditures, coaching change, average win total and number of bowl appearances). These variables were used to explain the dependent variable, average GSR score.

In the regression, the three dichotomous categorical variables were coded as AAU institutions "1" with all others coded "0," private schools "1" with all others coded "0," and lastly, major conference institutions "1" with all others coded "0." As for the dependent variable, average APR score, programs received a score ranging from 0 – 1000. Across the 118 institutions in the study, the average GSR score was reported at 64.85.

As for the third, and final, regression model, the first noted indicator was the ANOVA generated by the analysis, which was found to be significant, justifying that this model is in fact linear. The adjusted R squared was .249 or 24.9% of the variance (or error) in the average GSR that can be explained by this model. Using a confidence level of 95%, the only significant variable in the model was private institutions, which was found to have significance of $p = .000$ and a positive beta of 15.355. This result suggests that the private control of an institution should increase an institution's average GSR by 15.355 points above the reported beta for average GSR score. As illustrated in Table 10, no other variables (AAU institution, major conference, athletic department expenditures, football program expenditures, coaching change, average win total, or number of bowl appearances) were significant in the APR regression model.

Summary

The purpose of this chapter was to present the results of the study. Initially, descriptive statistics were outlined to illustrate an overview of the dataset and enhance our understanding of the independent and dependent variables in the study. The chapter then presented the results of the three research questions using regression analysis. In all three regression models, the academic performance of football programs at private FBS institutions was significantly higher than performance at public peer institutions. Additionally, participation in post-season bowl games was found to be a significant in explaining APR-related sanctions. These results will be discussed in more detail in Chapter 5, including sections on implications for theory and policy.

CHAPTER 5: DISCUSSION OF RESULTS

Introduction

This study was conducted across the athletic departments of 118 Division I Football Bowl Subdivision (FBS) institutions and examined the role institutional, departmental and program-specific variables play in influencing football student-athletes' academic measures. This chapter will further discuss the results presented in Chapter 4. The chapter begins with a discussion of the eight independent variables utilized in the study, moving forward to then engage in an in-depth discussion of the three research questions that guided this research. Both of these discussions will be advanced through the framework of social identity theory and the concept of identity salience, as discussed in Chapter 2. The chapter concludes with a discussion of implications of future research and institutional policy.

Summary of Study

This study investigated the connection that exists between the academic evaluation of Division I football programs and the social settings that influence these student-athletes during their intercollegiate career. The social settings that impacted the student-athletes were classified on three different levels. Listed from the broadest level, which influences all students, to the most specific setting, which impacts only those members of the football program, these social settings were classified as: institutional, departmental and program-specific.

Using a multivariate analysis, attributes of all three levels were placed in three regression models to locate trends based on program Academic Progress Rate performance and Graduation Success Rate. Data analysis was performed with eight independent variables, three categorical (AAU institution, public/private and major conference) and five continuous (athletic department expenditures, football program expenditures, coaching change, average win total and number of bowl appearances). Using a theoretical framework that informs and challenges the dynamic between student and athlete, this study sought to advance the understanding of the complex interplay among higher education institutions, intercollegiate athletics, and football student-athletes.

Discussion of Results

Grounded in the work of Tajfel and Turner (1979) on social identity theory, this study examined the varying social settings presented to groups of Division I FBS football players at the 118 institutions in this study and how these varied settings influence the academics of these student-athletes. Chatman, Eccles and Malanchuk (2005) demonstrated the importance of an identity to the individual, known as identity salience, is not static, but rather fluctuating over time based on context and circumstance. This context is often formed in the sense of a social setting of the individual. Merton (1957) explains this social context is established by a person's role-set, or the group of individuals a person associates his roles with in a variety of circumstances.

In this study, three levels of variables that play a role in the student-athlete's environment and influence identity salience are identified. They were: institutional variables, athletic departmental variables and football program-specific variables. While it is recognized that pre-college experiences and characteristics (grade point average, board scores, gender, ethnicity, socioeconomic status, etc.) may indeed impact the academic evaluation of these student-athletes, the reporting of such variables is protected by institutions and thus, not included in this study. The following sections will discuss the empirical research that informed the inclusion of the study's eight independent variables, while commenting on the predictive powers of each variable in the study's three regression models.

Institutional variables.

AAU Institution. As discussed in Chapter 2, the prestige associated with an institution can influence the academic outcomes of its students. Pascarella and Terenzini (1991) illustrated that using grades as a variable to measure college learning fails to account for institutional grading differences, which are likely to vary based on the academic selectivity of the institution, adding any metric used across institutions to compare the academic success is influenced to some extent by the institution. Bell's (2009) study of role-set influence amongst football players at the Division I FBS level examined only universities classified as "selective" or "more selective" research universities based off the Carnegie Classification system. Based on this finding, this study builds on Bell's work by including AAU status as an institutional variable.

In this study, however, institutional status as an AAU accredited college or university did not prove to be an influential predictor of any of the academic variables on which the study's three regression models were built. Thus, while membership in this elite group of the 61 leading research universities in North America may suggest an influence on faculty retention or graduate student recruitment, it has no significant statistical effect on average APR score, the receipt of APR-related sanctions, or average

GSR score. This finding suggests that when looking at institutional research status and reputation, this variable has no significant influence in predicting the academic achievement of undergraduate football student-athletes.

Therefore, it can be understood that in the case of the groups of football student-athletes in this study, the experiences afforded to this population at an AAU accredited institution did not correlate to a significantly different rate of graduation, eligibility or retention, which are respectively the factors that GSR and APR measure. With collegiate experiences at these prestigious institutions not resulting in significantly higher rates of graduation, eligibility or retention, this finding was not surprising considering the college decision making of student-athletes. In this regard, Letawsky et al. (2003) informs us that the five factors of greatest influence in the college selection process of the student-athlete are: degree-program options, head coach, academic support services, type of campus community and the institution's sports traditions. So while academic concerns are present in this list, the institution's academic reputation is not mentioned. This leads to the understanding that institutional academic reputation failed to significantly impact the self-reported recruitment of student-athletes or their rates of graduation, eligibility or retention according to this study.

Public/Private. LaForge and Hodge (2011) put forth in their work that graduation success, as measured by either FGR or GSR, will likely be higher at elite private institutions than their public peers. They posit this because it is public institutions whose mission includes promoting access to higher education. The results of this study provided additional empirical evidence for this finding. In fact, private school status was the only predictor variable found to be significant in all three regression analyses.

This finding supports the notion that institutional mission of providing access to higher education held in common by the nation's public institutions is a significant factor in predicting the academic achievement of an institution's football program. The significance of this finding, and its consistency across all three models, is important to consider in concert with the findings regarding other variables in this study, which will be completed later. However, with this institutional variable's status as the sole significant predictor, one may note that according to the results of this study, the metrics of academic success used in intercollegiate athletics relate less to what any specific institution is doing and more so to the private or public control of the institution.

Major conference. Helliker (2011) noted that academic selectivity plays a role in how institutions negotiate conference affiliations. When considering conference membership and expansion from ten to 12 teams PAC-12 President Larry Scott spoke to this point noting, "the academic brand is as important as the athletic brand," adding that his conference "prides itself on being best of breed academically as well as athletically" (p. 1). The Knight Commission (2010) supports this claim, noting median spending per athlete at the major conference level coming in between four and 11 times more than that spent on education-related activities for their students. However, to this end, the results of the study did not indicate membership in a major conference having a significant relationship in any of the regression models.

While Helliker's (2011) notion that academic selectively impacts conference alignment may be true, the results of this study do not suggest conference alignment playing a role in the level of academic accomplishment achieved by football student-athletes. Thus, it seems evident that the exposure from extensive television contracts, preferential treatment in the postseason BCS agreement, or any other advantage afforded to major conference programs does not translate into significantly different levels of academic performance. Considering the ever changing landscape of conference affiliation that exists today, the importance of this finding cannot be understated, as it informs us that altered academic performance is not an empirically supported claim for the justification of realignment efforts.

Departmental variables.

Athletic department expenditures. As of the 2008 fiscal year, the NCAA reported that 25 Division I Football Bowl Subdivision institutions reported positive net revenues for their athletic programs, with the median at about $3 million in excess revenue per institution (Brown, 2009). However, median deficit for the other nearly 100 programs participating at this level was about $8 million a year, signifying a rather large gap between what has been called the "haves" and "have-nots" of college athletics (Brown, 2009). Additionally, the Knight Commission (2010) reported that only seven athletic programs generating enough revenue to return a profit in each of the past five years. For these reasons, athletic department expenditures were another variable of interest in this study. However, this variable was a non-significant predictor in the three regression models used in the study.

The lack of statistical significance found in the correlation between athletic department spending and these measures of scholastic achievement in some respects brings questions to the notion of "haves" and "have-nots" discussed by those such as Brown (2009). The data in this study illustrates that generous budgetary spending by an athletics department does not correlate to better academic scores. However, the data used here does not inform the study of exactly how much money of the overall budget is spent annually on academic services. The availability of this data from all relevant institutions would certainly enrich the study.

Football program expenditures. According to experts, much of the growth in college athletics facilities occurred between 1995-2005, a ten year period in which, according to the Sports Business Journal, at least $15.2 billion was spent on facilities. During this time, an excess of $6.4 billion was spent on football programs (King, 2005). However, despite this aggressive spending on football, football program expenditures were a non-significant predictor in the three regression models.

Although much of the spending identified above is facilities-based, and unlikely to be reported in these annual spending numbers, the sport-specific budget these programs are dealt was important to consider in the study. Once again, in order to address some of the "have" and "have-not" commentary, the inclusion of this data was needed and provides a starting point for conversation. Had a correlation been discovered, this would have been an important finding to support Brown's (2009) claims that the extensive outpouring of resources may not be financially feasible for all that compete at this level of college athletics.

However, the lack of a correlation between football program spending and academic achievement does not entirely discredit these claims. Despite the absence of a correlation, the data in this study does not account for spending on academic services by sport or department. As discussed by Wolverton (2008), some departments have taken to building 20,000 square foot academic service facilities, and Gurney (2011) noted ballooning budgets for student-athletes' academic services in recent years.

Therefore, the value of this study would be enhanced if the academic services budget provided for these football programs, or the entire athletic department, was incorporated in future works. Moreover, the potential for reputation damaging opportunity cost decisions, such as cutting sponsored sport programs to enhance funding to other areas, is another factor that may allow programs and departments with fewer resources to reallocate spending and maintain required academic achievement in remaining sports. This is also not accounted for in this study and demands further research.

Football program-specific variables.

Coaching change. Student-athletes, as explained by Simons et al. (1999) often operate in an area of sharp conflicting interests, where at the heart of their priority setting process looms two counteractive forces: education and athletics. In Bell's 2009 qualitative study of the experiences of 41 Division I FBS student-athletes, 31 of the participants spoke of the involved role their head football coach took in monitoring their academics. Applying the work of Bell to Simons' (1999) earlier remarks, one can logically infer that a coach can play an active role in helping the student-athlete cope with these conflicting interests, emphasizing the importance of the education of the student-athlete and improving their academic focus. However, this study found that there was no significant effect on the academic variables caused by a lack of continuity in the program's head coaching position.

While the practice of paying coaches bonuses based on the academic achievement of their student-athletes has caught on, the notion that coaches are the ones impacting academic outcomes has its objectors (Eichelberger & Levinson, 2007; Upton, 2011).

Similar to the comments made about departmental and program-level spending, one might speculate based on this result that while coaches may influence the academic climate of a team through control of playing time or class attendance policy enforcement (Simons et al., 1999), the academic services available to these student-athletes may indeed be more impactful in improving academic performance.

Average win total. Research conducted by Lucas and Lovaglia (2005) using initially published APR scores for Division I FBS institutions indicates that major college football programs, whose athletes make higher levels of academic progress (as measured by the APR), are just as likely to win as those programs whose athletes make little progress. This suggests a climate in which an academically strong team is just as likely to succeed on the field as a team that struggles in the classroom, as there is no correlation between APR and winning. The results of this study supported this conclusion, finding no significant relationship between average win total and any of the academic measures included in this work.

This result indicates that as far as the metrics currently employed by the NCAA can measure, football programs at this level are not winning in concert with lax academic performance. Additionally, this result can be interpreted to suggest that the need to perform academically is not hindering programs from winning on the field. Understanding that average win total is loosely associated to FBS postseason play, as football programs need to have at least six wins to participate in the post-season, this finding brings to mind a study of Division I men's basketball programs. As discussed in Chapter 2, according to the Knight Commission, more than $146 million of the $409 million, or approximately 36 percent, of the revenue earned for postseason appearances in the past five NCAA men's basketball tournaments were earned by teams with GSRs under 50 percent (Knight, 2011). Although the postseason formats for the two sports are not identical, the understanding of any relationship between the on-field and classroom performance of athletic programs remains valuable.

Number of bowl appearances. Amato et al. (1996) suggest that one challenge presented to FBS football programs is the longstanding format for post-season play at this level. Amato's study compared the performance of 89 of the then existing 106 FBS (then known as Division I-A) programs to 67 of 84 FCS (then known as Division I-AA) and found, all things being equal, a single bowl appearance reduces the average graduation rate of a football student-athlete by more than three percentage points. To this end, the 'in-season effect,' developed by Maloney and McCormick (1993), states that in revenue sports, individual student grades decrease when their sport is in-season, a period extended by the bowl schedule.

However, contrary to this previous research, appearing in a bowl game was found to have a significant negative relation to the receipt of APR-related sanctions. This result indicates that bowl appearances, which extend the football season significantly in many cases, actually help programs avoid those sanctions granted by the NCAA because of low scores in APR. This finding was particularly interesting because while APR-related sanctions are levied due to a program's inability to maintain an APR above a certain level, there was no significance found between average APR and bowl appearances.

Positing logic for this finding, one might look closer at the two elements that APR is tracking: retention and eligibility. As noted by the NCAA (2011), implementing APR, each student-athlete can earn two points, one for remaining with the institution and another for meeting eligibility and progress toward degree standards. Future studies are needed to explore the loss of these points, particularly at those institutions that are successful in making bowl games. Potentially, the enjoyable experience of playing in a bowl game is enough to motivate this group of student-athletes to remain at the institution or meet academic objectives at a significant level, which results in these programs earning APR points and avoiding sanctions. If this is the case, there are important implications for practitioners, as the current bowl system is subject to frequent criticism from those who support alternative post-season formats.

Implications for Social Identity Theory

With the findings of the study explained and results discussed, it is important that these outcomes are discussed in terms of social identity theory. This theory, which provides the theoretical framework of the study, informs the study through its explanation of intergroup relations, group membership and group processes (Tajfel & Turner, 1979). These group dynamics have the potential to be impacted by the various social settings student-athletes encounter during their intercollegiate career. The following section discusses the findings of this study as they relate to the social identity theory, providing introspection on the ways in which social settings faced by the student-athlete mirror those dynamics addressed by the theory. This discussion will be organized by the three levels of social settings presented to these student-athletes: institutional, departmental and program-specific.

Institutional. There were three institutional variables examined in this study, AAU status, public/private and conference affiliation. Of the three, only public/private institutional control was found to have any significance, and it was discovered in all three models. This finding coincides with the remarks of Sander, following the report of APR through the 2009-10 academic year, when she stated, "The vast majority of the 350 Division I teams that posted scores below the NCAA's benchmark for acceptable academic progress are at regional public institutions" (2011b, p. 1). Although Sander's comments speak to all 350 institutions in Division I and all of their sport programs, not just FBS football programs, her comments bring to light a very interesting phenomenon as it pertains to the influence of the institution on social identity. As discussed earlier, this occurrence, public institutions lagging behind privates in their performance as measured by NCAA metrics, is supported by all three models used in this study. This is to say that average APR, the receipt of APR-related sanctions, and average GSR were all found to be significantly positively correlated to private control over an institution.

As this finding relates to social identity theory, one may hypothesize that the academic performance of a football program is influenced less by the culture surrounding the football program or the athletic department, and more so by some existing dynamic that is isolated to private institutions. Perhaps this dynamic is caused by student-faculty ratio and thus, is more support for the work of Tinto (1993) and Wilson (1975), who note that student-faculty involvement is a key predictor of graduation and academic concern. However, such a conclusion, or relating the finding to institutional mission, class size, admission criteria, student demographics or some currently unidentified trait, begs future research.

Going forward, an understanding that institutional control is a significant factor in predicting football program academic success speaks to the possibility that academic role salience of student-athletes may be influenced by the institutional setting. This conclusion speaks to the work of Stryker and Serpe (1982), who found that if those within an individual's network give a high level of salience to a specific identity, this social influence will heighten the level of salience of that role at the individual level. Perhaps it is the case that at these private institutions, the studious culture that exists amongst undergraduate students is so strong that it suppresses the athletic identity of the student-athlete and leads to improved academic outcomes, the basis of this culture coming potentially from heightened admission standards at a private institution.

Departmental. The two department-level variables examined in this study, departmental expenditures and football program expenditures, were not found to have any significance in any of the three models. When relating this finding to social identity theory, at first glance, this may suggest that an athletic department does not influence the tradeoff between student and athlete role salience. This finding would suggest peers in the classroom, rather than those within the athletic department that participate in other sports, have a stronger influence over academic performance.

However, this may be more of a function of the data available for the study and the variables used, rather than any wide sweeping generalizations about departmental influence. It should be noted that while the OPE Equity in Athletics Disclosure Website database does provide valuable information about athletic spending, the tool does not provide the level of transparency needed to make more powerful conclusions about spending in intercollegiate athletics. In future works, evaluating the department wide commitment to academic success through incorporating average academic services budget, existence of a dedicated academic success building to student-athletes, contractual bonuses for student-athlete academic performance and other variables of this nature would provide more evidence to make conclusions regarding the role of the department in the conflict between student and athlete role salience. However, to date, the OPE Equity in Athletics Disclosure Website or any other database houses this sort of information, which represents a challenge for future research in this area.

Program-specific. There were three program-specific variables examined in this study: coaching change, average win total, and number of bowl appearances. Of the three, only bowl appearances were found to have any significance. This significance was discovered in the regression model that was based on the receipt of APR-related sanctions. As discussed earlier, the finding of a significant negative correlation between bowl appearances and sanctions, but not between bowl appearances and average APR, was slightly surprising. However, the framework of social identity theory provides reason for pause and a potential explanation for this finding.

With APR being based on retention and eligibility, future work may find that the positive experience of participation in a bowl game results in higher levels of student-athlete retention within the football program. This is to say, the unique collegiate experience of participation in the bowl season results in a stronger commitment to the football program and thus, APR scores that avoid sanctions. Considering the findings of both Adler and Adler (1987, 1991) and Bell (2009), who found the athlete role to impact decision making, friendships, the importance of other roles played by the student-athlete, and team culture, this positive impact of bowl participation seems plausible.

Implications for Institutional Policy

Building on a strong theoretical framework that informs and challenges the dynamic between student and athlete, this study seeks to advance the understanding of the complex interplay between higher education and intercollegiate athletics. In turn, this understanding is intended to help institutional policy makers in assessing the academic climate surrounding their football program. Although a majority of variables taken into consideration in the study do not exert a significant impact on the academic metrics used by the NCAA, the lack of significance in many of these variables still resonates as an important discovery.

One of the most interesting discoveries of the study was the lack of support for claims regarding the division of the FBS into two classes of "haves" and "have nots" in regards to how this phenomenon plays out in the classroom. Citing the competitive landscape on the playing field and heightened academic standards, many such as the Knight Commission (2010b) have claimed that those programs below the top tier of college athletics cannot succeed both athletically and academically. However, whether these groups were identified by conference affiliation, athletic department budget or football program budget, there was no significance found in any of these identifiers' ability to predict academic performance as measured by APR or GSR.

While future research would benefit any conclusions reached in this area, the results represent reason for pause before accepting the mantra of a class system when it comes to college football, at least in terms of academic performance. However, the results also illustrate that stronger data reporting standards to the OPE Equity in Athletics Disclosure Website would add additional clarity to the topic. Armed with a more transparent look at institutional spending in athletics, a better grasp on academic performance could be achieved.

Additionally, there was no significance found to the relationship between average win total and APR or GSR. This finding suggests that there is no merit to the notion that teams cannot win both in the classroom and on the playing field. Rather, the finding puts forward that academic success and winning are ideals that programs can achieve in concert with one another.

Limitations

Although this study provides an interesting examination into the academic landscape of college athletics, there are several limitations that are important to highlight. Importantly, this is a single-sport study of football programs that operate at the highest level of intercollegiate athletics. Thus, one should be cautious in generalizing these results across other Divisions of the NCAA and sports, as well. Football at the FBS level remains a unique occurrence in intercollegiate athletics due to both roster size and resource allocation.

Additionally, this study examines the academic success of groups of student-athletes at a collection of institutions, not the specific students themselves. Thus, there is no attention paid to the demographic attributes of the students prior to their arrival to campus. Again, this is not to say that such attributes do not play a role in academic success, rather this information is not readily available to the public.

It deserves to be mentioned that APR and GSR metrics are both relatively new indicators in regards to their existence and implementation. Less than a decade old, these metrics, and any penalties associated with their results, have been adjusted and most likely, will continue to adapt and change. Hopefully, such changes will be guided by research similar to this work, which is intended to provide feedback for the evaluation of the measure.

On a similar note, it should be repeated that all data used in this study was generated by athletic and academic performance between the 2003-04 and the 2009-10 academic year. Considering the ever changing landscape of intercollegiate college athletics, especially in regards to conference alignment, this may change the application of this study's results over time. It seems likely that with conference realignment, reevaluating the results associated with the conference affiliation variable in these regression models will be necessary.

Lastly, basic regression is explanatory, and builds no case of causality of its findings. While previous research may inform the findings of this study and suggest causality, the study itself cannot do so. Therefore, while football programs at private schools performed significantly better as measured by APR and GSR, it cannot be concluded that their education at a private school is the reason for these improved marks. Such questions can only be answered using other methodologies.

Implications for Future Research

This study sought to investigate the connection that exists between the academic evaluation of Division I football programs and the various social settings that influence these student-athletes during their intercollegiate career. During this inquiry, several questions demanding future research emerged.

First, given that private control was found to be significant in all models studied, future attention should be paid to pre-college factors that may impact the college selection process and lead a football student-athlete to an institution. By including socio-economic status and other information specific to the individual, the understanding of an academically successful student-athlete may grow. Additionally, status as a scholarship, or non-scholarship, student-athlete would heighten this understanding, as well.

Secondly, with an institutional variable found to be significant in all three models, a closer look at additional institutional variables is in order. Variables such as cost, size, and location should be added to this study. Additionally, in future work, information pertaining to admission requirements and the number of student-athletes that are classified as "special admits" should also be considered. The inclusion of this data will better illustrate those institutional factors that enhance academic performance.

A third line of inquiry that is needed is more advanced analyses to examine causality. Based on the finding that football student-athletes at private institutions achieve higher levels of success as measured by today's NCAA metrics, research that demonstrates causality between private institutional status and these levels of academic success may prove to be valuable. It is possible that such information could allow non-private institutions to replicate those circumstances that heighten academic success.

From a departmental standpoint, another interesting addition to this study would be a thorough examination of the cutting of sport programs at these institutions. Considering the skyrocketing costs of intercollegiate athletics, as identified by The Knight Commission (2010), as well as the cutting of public funds to many institutions of higher education, it has been documented that many institutions have coped with this strain on resources by cutting sport programs once sponsored. Institutions that take this action to meet the continually rising bar of academic and athletic accomplishment placed upon their athletic programs should be accounted for, as the phenomenon illustrates an important opportunity cost that needs to be measured. Additionally, as discussed previously, future research to explain the relationship between APR-related sanctions and bowl game appearances would be beneficial so a better understanding is developed of the finding of significance in this relationship.

Lastly, applying this model of research to football at other levels of the NCAA, as well as across the multitude of other sport programs would prove to be informative. This study selected FBS-level football because of its resource intensive nature and its status as a focal point for intercollegiate athletics. However, although not all academic measures are the same across the NCAA, an improved understanding of the institutional, athletic departmental and program-specific variables that impact academic performance of other sport programs would be advantageous, as well.

When considering the academic evaluation of the 118 Division I football programs in this study, significance has been identified in the relationship between social settings and the academic performance of student-athletes. Informed by social identity theory, this work found the influence of private control was most strongly associated with the academic performance of these student-athletes, as football programs at private institutions faired significantly better than their public peers in every academic measure the study considered. Equally important, however, was the identification of a number of variables that suggested non-significant given the data at hand, findings which build on the previous work in this content area. These findings, both significant and not, will add to a growing body of research in this content area, hopefully guiding the work of future policy and inspiring the development of additional research.

Memorandum

To: Harold Woodard, Associate Dean

CC: Beth Bridger, Associate Director

From: Bradley Bethel, Learning Specialist

Date: 1/2/2013

Re: Need for More Learning Staff

One of the major functions of the Academic Support Program for Student-Athletes is to help academically underprepared student-athletes develop the academic skills they need to earn a degree honestly and successfully. Many football student-athletes, in particular, come to UNC from low socioeconomic backgrounds and consequently have not developed the same level of reading, writing, and study skills as their peers from more affluent backgrounds. My job as a learning specialist is to teach college-level literacy and study skills to underprepared football student-athletes. However, the academic needs of the football team currently exceed our available resources. If we do not increase the number of learning staff immediately, we risk academic failure for many football student-athletes. The purpose of this memo is (1) to highlight the need for more learning staff and (2) to explain how the new staff will be integrated into the current learning team.

I have identified 34 football student-athletes who will need the support of a learning specialist or assistant during the Spring 2013 semester. Because the level of need varies from student to student, I have further grouped each student into either the Comprehensive level or the Consultive level of academic support. Students in the Comprehensive level need three to five hours per week with a learning specialist or assistant, while students in the Consultive level need one to two hours per week. I have calculated that these 34 students will need a combined 106 – 116 hours per week with a learning specialist or assistant. However, among the current graduate learning assistants and me, we only have 82 combined hours available, leaving us 24 – 34 hours short.

Until we can hire an additional full-time learning specialist, two part-time staff working approximately 15 hours per week will suffice. The two new learning assistants will join the four graduate learning assistants as part of the learning support team I lead. I will assign each assistant a caseload of students, and the assistant will meet with each student throughout the week in accordance with the student's needs. The learning support team will also meet with me weekly, and I will regularly observe the assistants' individual sessions and provide feedback.

To evaluate students' progress from the beginning of the semester to the end, I will use a research-validated tool developed by educational psychologists to measure students' use of learning strategies. Although we cannot guarantee every underprepared student's success at UNC, I am confident that every student who cooperates and makes an effort to learn the strategies we teach them will improve his academic abilities and thereby have a better chance at success.

Of course, our implementing the learning support program effectively requires the two additional part-time staff members. Without additional staff, we will significantly lack the resources to give these underprepared students any chance of success. The university admitted these students and now has a responsibility to support them. I believe UNC is an institution of integrity and as such will ensure adequate resources are in place.

Dear Parents:

This letter was drafted by me and Beth Bridger, our Academic Counselor, and with the help of Tom Timmermans in our UNC Athletic Compliance Office. It pertains to the fact your son or daughter is currently receiving an athletic grant yet not currently participating on the team as a swimmer or diver.

The UNC Athletic Department has a vested interest in your son/daughter even though their athletic status has changed. In lieu of the new scholarship situation your son/daughter has with the Swimming and Diving program, some new policies have been set in order to monitor their academic progress in conjunction with receiving their grant-in-aid.

Before any financial award/check may be distributed by the Compliance Office (Tom Timmermans) at the beginning of each month, the student must meet with their Academic Counselor (Beth Bridger). At this time, the Academic Counselor will gather grade/course information and determine if the student is doing what they need to academically in order to earn their monthly check. This meeting could also include seeing proof of professor communication, tutor review session attendance, study hour completion, paperwork for drop/add procedures, etc.

If the student has not met the requirements during the meeting, their monthly check will not be given to them, or will not be given to them until the requirements have been met, no exceptions.

The same procedure will apply with other department obligations the student must fulfill. If they have not met the requirements requested of the coaching staff or other department staff, their check will be cancelled/held as well.

It is critical that even though your son/daughter may not be actively participating athletically as a part of the team, they are still accountable to UNC Athletics and the UNC Swimming and Diving program. They still contribute to our athletic department as a scholarship student, so their dedication to excellence must be a priority.

Please let us know if you have any questions.

Sincerely,

Rich DeSelm
Head Coach Swimming & Diving

Jenn,
Hope the search goes well. We are also in the midst of searching for a manager and it's been a bit of a mess here since there really has been no one to take over in the interim. Hopefully the dynamic around there will improve. I know it's been a challenge.

I've scanned my notes…I just hope your tutor can read my handwriting. If you have any questions, feel free to ask!

Best,
Kate

Things are about the same around here—always interesting. We are still in the process of finding a director so that should change the dynamic around here a little bit once that is determined.

Hope you have a good weekend,

Hey, Kate:

I hope you are doing well. Happy New Year!

I just wanted to check with you and see if you still had notes from when you SI'ed the GEOG 225 class? We have several students in the class this semester and thought your notes would be helpful for the tutor who would be working with those students.

How is the job going?

Hi Beth,

I hope you are doing well!

The committee has received several incomplete current impact statements from students including student athletes. Would you please remind the students (and their academic counselors) that we need them to complete all of the questions on the impact statement?

Students who submit an incomplete statement will be e-mailed and asked to submit one answering all of the questions before their information can be taken to committee.

Thanks and I appreciate your assistance!

Sincerely,

Tiffany

FEDERAL TAX CHANGES FOR 2013

FICA TAX WITHHOLDING CHANGE

The FICA rate for calendar years 2010 and 2011 was 7.65% for the University and 5.65% for each employee. The rate was comprised of a Social Security tax withholding rate of 6.2% for the employer and 4.2% for the employee, and a Medicare tax withholding rate of 1.45% for both employer and employee. The Tax Relief, Unemployment Insurance Reauthorization, and Job Creation Act of 2010 provided a two percentage point payroll tax cut for employees, reducing their Social Security tax withholding rate from 6.2% to 4.2% of wages paid. The reduced Social Security withholding will have no effect on the employee's future Social Security benefits.

The reduced Social Security tax rate is no longer available for employees beginning with calendar year 2013. The change is effective for calendar year 2013 payrolls. In summary, the Social Security withholding tax rate will be 6.2% for both the University as employer and for employees beginning in calendar year 2013. The social security wage base limit for 2013 is $113,700. There is no wage base limit for the Medicare tax.

ADDITIONAL MEDICARE TAX WITHHOLDING

Beginning in calendar year 2013, the University as employer must withhold a 0.9% Additional Medicare Tax from wages paid to an employee in excess of $200,000 in a calendar year. The Additional Medicare tax is only applicable to the employee. There is no employer share of the Additional Medicare Tax. All wages that are subject to Medicare tax are subject to Additional Medicare Tax withholding if paid in excess of the $200,000 withholding threshold.

FEDERAL INCOME TAX WITHHOLDING

On January 3, 2013 the Internal Revenue Service provided early release copies of the 2013 federal income tax withholding tables. These 2013 Percentage Method Tables for federal Income tax withholding have been implemented and will be used effective with Biweekly Payroll 14 to be paid on 01/11/2013 and with the Monthly Payroll to be paid on 01/31/2013. Additional information on federal income tax withholding is available at http://www.irs.gov/pub/irs-pdf/n1036.pdf

NC State's Academic Support Program for Student-Athletes (ASPSA) would like to invite you and your academic staff to this event. We are still in the planning process, but want to send information out as soon as possible!

The ASPSA intern class plans an annual Academic Support conference for those institutions in driving distance (all are welcome, but that is the target audience). The purpose of this conference is to provide professional resources to those in the academic advising profession who may have a limited budget or restrictions and might not be able to attend any National Conventions. Student-athlete issues will be addressed. This conference will also provide networking opportunities. The date of the conference is Friday, April 26, 2013. The conference will start at 9:00 and end at approximately 4:00 with a social at a local restaurant.

Some of our committed presenters include academic support staff from Clemson University, University of Virginia, University of Georgia, University of North Carolina at Charlotte, and North Carolina Central University.

There is a save the date attached to this email and a formal invitation will follow. If you have any questions or concerns please feel free to contact me by email or by phone at 919-513-1047. Hope all is well!

Is it too late to nominate an honorary coach for the year? Both of these folks are avid fans, and have attended just about every game this year!

Janice L. Anderson is an Assistant Professor of Science Education in the School of Education Learning Sciences and Psychological Studies and Elementary Education Programs. Using a sociocultural and feminist lens, Dr. Anderson's research interests includes examining the use of innovative technologies to facilitate and engage student learning of science. Her current work focuses on teachers' engagement with innovative technologies and how they are enacted within the classroom context. Specifically, she is investigating the complex relationship among teachers' beliefs, their use of technology and the implementation in their science classrooms. She teaches undergraduate courses in elementary science methods and technology integration and doctoral seminars in curriculum and learning sciences. An avid women's basketball fan, Dr. Anderson has held season tickets since coming to Chapel Hill in 2008. She enjoys coming to games with her family, including her toddler son Logan.

Hi Beth,

Attached is a short bio. Please edit and cut as you see fit. I tried to include info that people might find interesting, but then again it might bore them to tears!

I do not have a recent head shot, but you can get one from our Department's webpage at http://www.unc.edu/depts/econ/profiles/balaban.htm.

If the shirt runs on the large side, then I wear a men's medium, otherwise a large.

Finally, I appreciate the ticket offer, but it will just be me. My husband has a hard time staying up past 7pm!

Best,
Rita

Mission

to educate and inform student-athletes, the student body, administrators and staff about responsible social living and health issues that affect the campus community, (including alcohol use, abuse and misuse, sexual assault, hazing) through awareness, influential behavior and interactive programming..

Constitution

This organization shall be known as SWAG (Something We Athletes Got). The members of SWAG believe that student-athletes can play a uniquely effective role, in encouraging their peers to consider, talk honestly about, and develop responsible habits and attitudes toward the use or non-use of alcohol and other drugs.. We will promote responsible decisions about drinking within the campus community..

Coaches,

We were just given an opportunity to have Katie Koestner (see below) at no cost to speak with our student-athletes on sexual assault and student safety. In light of the campus climate, I do not think we can pass on this presentation. I am asking that each team have at least 3-4 representatives at the presentation, which is Tuesday, March 19th at 7pm on the 3rd floor of Loudermilk. You can definitely send more. It will only last one hour. Please send names to me. I will also be inviting CREED Mentors, Veteran Leaders, SAAC, and SWAG. Coaches are also encouraged to attend.

This will not take the place of the Monday, March 25th alcohol and drug education workshop.

Please contact me if you have any questions.
Thanks,
Cricket

Katie Koestner was the first survivor of date rape to speak out nationally. Her emotionally-charged presentation creates an environment of understanding and helps lay the groundwork for behavioral transformation. Katie shares her story on a level that everyone can feel, and to which everyone can relation.

Koestner is a national expert on student safety and teen relationship culture. She has appeared on the cover of TIME Magazine, The Oprah Winfrey Show, NBC Nightly News, CNBC Talk Live, CNN, Larry King Live, Good Morning America, Later Today, MSNBC, Entertainment Tonight and other national television programs. She is the subject of an HBO movie and has lectured at over 1700 schools in North America. In 2010, the US Ambassador to India invited Katie to keynote and lead a 19 day campaign in India to raise awareness about Violence Against Women

Great Expectations

Balancing Support and Structure to Promote Student Growth and Success

“As I understand it, this is your situation. You are trying to achieve two goals simultaneously, which is always very, very difficult.”

Question

How do you set high expectations for your students while still supporting their autonomy?

My goal: to provide research information as well as recommendations from experience and research, so that we can figure out how to better support our student-athletes.
Specifically, I hope everyone here will be able to leave with a plan for how to develop a better relationship with the student they struggle with the most.

Outline

- Expectations
- Self-Determination Theory (SDT)
- Recommendations from SDT
  - Small Groups
- Specific Strategies
  - Small Groups/Whole Class
  - Small Groups/Whole Class: What strategies are working? What aren't? What do you want to try next?

Expectations

How do you set expectations for your students while still supporting their autonomy?

Setting expectations for:

- Students
- Ourselves
- For our relationships with the students

When setting expectations what often gets lost in the focus on supporting students is what our expectations are for ourselves as well as for our relationship with each student.

Ourselves—never a hard line, but what are our general expectations for students. It's amazing what a "I don't do that/I can't help you that way" will do. "But, I can help you this way". If you get challenged, be honest. I don't feel good when I do that, or, that doesn't help you learn in the long run and that's what I'm focused on.
For the relationship—every student is different. Your expectations should not necessarily change, but how you react to/support your student in the process of growing to meet your expectations should. Also, the relationship is a great place to target with a goal. "I want us to have better communication"

Relationship and Expectations

How we interact with our students communicates our expectations for them (Weinstein, 2002)

On the whole, students live up to (or down to) teacher's expectations, especially as students grow older (Valeski & Stipek, 2001)

"The expectation is for the position, not the player"
-Brady Hoke, Head Coach, University of Michigan

Distal and Proximal Expectations

Long-term (distal) expectations for all students: graduate, be able to read at the college level, _____, _____

Short-term (proximal) expectations for individual students: maintain eligibility, understand how to write a thesis sentence, _____, _____

Using Brady Hoke's quotation:

: "The (distal) expectation is for the

What does Coach Hoke leave out?

This is one approach to trying to frame the question broadly. It is important to note the difference between over-arching expectations for our students ("you will be able to read at the college level") and short-term expectations (by the end of this month, we'll be able to construct a thesis sentence without me telling you how to do it")

Transition: Now that we understand that we can have both very high expectations for all students while still differentiating day-to-day expectations, let's take a look at the theory that undergirds the question.

"For students to make self-determined behaviors, they will need to be competent (know how to do something), have some sense of relatedness (others have done this or something similar, or others will find value in what I am doing), and autonomy (ability to choose to make own decision)"

In other words, students have the need to feel like they are able to accomplish tasks, the need to feel like they have people in their lives who are interested in/care about them, and the need to be able to have some control over their own decisions and outcomes.

Self-Determination?

"With a big nod to Arboretum
The schools failed me thank God the farm taught me the value of a calloused hand how to work and plow this land and how even a modest crop will make your Pop the proudest man"

- "Tobacco Road" by Common Market

What can we identify in these lyrics as elements of self-determination
Draw attention to the question mark afterward

Factors Motivating Your Students

Competence:	Structure/Knowledge
Relatedness:	Relationship
Autonomy:	Relationship

Recommendations for the student-teacher relationship

(Reeve, 2009)

- Rely on informational, non-controlling language
- Acknowledge and accept students' expressions of negative effect
- Provide explanatory rationales
- Nurture inner motivational resources
- Display patience to allow time for self-paced learning to occur

Small Groups

In a group of 3-4 people, consider the following questions:

- What are your expectations of your students? Where do you draw the line?
- With which recommendation(s) do you feel most confident? With which do you feel least confident?
- Is there a recommendation you plan to use more?
- Is there a recommendation you disagree with?

5-10 minutes

Strategies for Building the Relationship

- Communication should be clear, open, direct, firm, yet caring
- Use "we", but you have to mean it (also, possible issues)
- Questions, questions, questions
  - How can we do things differently to be more successful next time?
  - What can you do differently to be more successful next time?
- Be aware of when you feel pressure
- Tell the student how you feel
- Openness

Strategies for building the relationship

- Set goals for yourself or your relationship with them. Enlist their help in doing so. This will not only model the behavior, but help you grow as well
- Have structure, but be willing to admit when it isn't working, and ask what the student what he thinks might work. You may have to adjust, but the process should be teamwork
- Every student is different—don't expect what works with one to work with another
- Compliment effort rather than ability
- Be aware and honest regarding the relevance of an assignment

Don't be afraid to tell the student you're frustrated with yourself for not being able to help them achieve their goals better this time around. This is a relationship, and it is always a two-way street.

Small Groups

- Which student do you struggle with the most?
  - How is your relationship?
  - How is your communication?
  - How do you plan to improve?
- Which student do you have the most success?
  - How is your relationship?
  - How is your communication?
  - What can you apply to relationships with other students?
- Getting information from your students:
  - What questions have you found effective with students?
  - In what situations do you feel you get more open/honest answers?

Open Questions

How do we hold high expectations while supporting student autonomy?

Beth,

Sorry I have not reached out, this week has been too busy. I am working on gathering all the information you requested and should have that to you on Monday. Coach Tanner and our SWA both called people they know at UNC. Everyone expressed how much they did not want to lose you.

Our spring break is next week and I will not be in town those two days. I may have you stop by our HR office in athletics to sign paperwork while you are here. I will let you know after I speak with her.

We can pay for the hotel, I will work on that and email you the confirmation. Also, here is the contact for the moving company. Contact Kurt Johnston, 803-315-4204. Let him know you are with USC Athletics and he can give you a quote. I was told that if you pack your own stuff it is cheaper.

Talk to you soon,
Maria

Maria

Just wanted to check in. I heard Coach Tanner called one of our Senior Associate ADs..figured maybe he was having to sign my offer letter? Glad to see he is making sure I am on the up and up.
I will be in town next Thursday and Friday do some house hunting, if you need me to come by the office, let me know. Do you think it will be possible for me to get a hotel room for those 2 days?

Have a great Friday!

> I have attached the itinerary for Thursday/Friday. Your confirmation for the hotel is included. We will pick you up from the hotel for dinner on Thursday.

> During your session with the Dodie staff, you will have 30 minutes to present the following scenarios, including questions from the staff. You will have powerpoint access.

> 1) You have a coach that serves as your academic liaison but you also meet with all of your coaches on a weekly basis. Your academic liaison has requested that you report any and all information about students to them immediately. You have a difference of opinion and feel like you should only report information once you know it is accurate. How do you work to compromise with the coach to ensure both parties are satisfied and have a good working relationship?

> 2) It is about mid-semester, and one of your students arrives to his Monday session and gives you an assignment sheet for ENGL 101. He has to complete a close reading of The Banking Concept of Education by Freire. It needs to be 1-2 pages, and it is due in class on Wednesday. Since you have been working with him for about 2 months, you know that he struggles with reading comprehension, especially with more abstract readings. You also know that he does well with summarizing information once he understands it, but has a difficult time critically analyzing things. What do you do?

Hi Joan,

Our SI Leaders report to the Director of Programs in the Learning Center (me) as do the tutors. We have a small supply room and store all supplies there. We also have a file drawer in the Admin's cubicle for SI leaders to pick up and drop off paperwork, although we are moving towards managing all of those records electronically (currently using Google for this).

The office is interested in finding a room for the SILs to keep supplies, allow them to meet informally, and hopefully, create a sense of their place on campus. Of course space is limited on our campus, but I am meeting with Admin to plead my case. Any suggestions?

Welcome Letter

Dear Academic Mentors:

Welcome to the staff of the Dodie Anderson Academic Enrichment Center for Student-Athletes. As a staff member, you will play an important role in the development of South Carolina student-athletes. Not only will you assist student-athletes in a mentoring role, but you will assist them in developing the skills necessary to be academically successful throughout their entire career at Carolina.

Student-athletes are no different than the traditional students on the Carolina campus; however, the time demands of college athletics place an additional burden upon student-athletes. In addition, requirements such as NCAA and Southeastern Conference eligibility standards add to the burden. The AEC staff provides a variety of services, all of which focus upon the goals of retention and graduation. As an academic mentor, you will function as an integral part of the total academic support program. Throughout your experience with the AEC, we ask that you respect all facets of professionalism, confidentiality, and academic integrity, and adhere to the rules and regulations stipulated in this manual. Your positive, professional relationship with student-athletes is fundamental to the success of this program.

To function as an effective academic mentor, you must be able to relate to the student-athlete in a variety of areas. As time progresses, the aim of the program will be to assist the student-athletes in meeting their goals, including becoming alumni of Carolina. Not only will you see the student-athletes progress, but we are confident that you will experience a sense of growth and satisfaction from your interaction with student-athletes.

Once again, welcome to the AEC staff. We are looking forward to working with you during the 2012-2013 academic year. Be assured, you will receive the support of the professional staff in all endeavors. If you have concerns or questions, please contact one of the professional staff members and every effort will be made to find a solution.

Sincerely,

Jennifer Sturm

Mission of the Academic Enrichment Center

The Academic Enrichment Center, in alignment with the University and Athletics Department missions, aims to build relationships that empower and inspire a diverse group of student-athletes through education, community service, and professional development, to achieve graduation, attain career goals, and appreciate lifelong learning.

Academic Mentor Overview

The Academic Mentor Program is a proactive approach to assisting selected student-athletes in adjusting to college life, maintaining acceptable levels of academic performance, and assisting in tutoring needs. The student-athletes in this program will meet multiple times per week with an academic mentor. Daily session reports and updates will be given to the student's Athletic Academic Advisor. Academic mentors will work on time management skills, study skills, review student-athletes' notes, assignments and exams, and tutor in appropriate areas. They will try to facilitate a sense of belonging and academic responsibility in the student-athlete and provide a connection with the campus community.

Academic Mentor Qualifications

University of South Carolina graduate and doctoral students, as well as community members with specific expertise, are eligible to be mentors for the Athletic Department. In addition, students at the undergraduate level in at least their third year, with a minimum of one year of experience as an AEC tutor, will also be considered. Special consideration will be given to the following disciplines: Education, Counseling, Sport Administration, Student Affairs, and School Psychology. Individuals possessing an advanced degree are strongly encouraged to apply.

All mentors meeting the above eligibility requirements must fulfill the following guidelines in order to be considered:

- Submission of completed application packet, including a copy of current resume
- Minimum of a 3.2 overall GPA for graduate and doctoral students
- Strong communication skills and the ability to relate to students of diverse academic backgrounds
- Commitment to Office, Department, University, Conference, and NCAA standards
- Strong written and oral communication skills are required.
- This position requires a high level of energy and a willingness to work in a high paced, constantly changing environment.
- Must be available to work evenings and occasional weekends.
- Peer advising, counseling, or tutoring experience is desirable.

Academic Mentor Hiring Procedures

- All hiring is done by the Mentor Coordinator.
- The hiring procedure is as follows:

Step 1: Completion and submission of mentor application, including a copy of current resume

Step 2: Interview with the Mentor Coordinator.

Step 3: Completion and submission of two recommendation forms completed by academic or professional references. Submission of a headshot photo to the Enrichment Services Assistant for the mentor's GradesFirst profile.

Step 4: Completion of all hiring forms and approval from the Payroll office and Graduate School or the International Office (if applicable). Please note that approval may not be granted to dual employees.

Step 5: Candidates will be given an orientation where standards will be verbally stated. A quiz will be administered after the orientation measuring each mentor's comprehension of the stated material.

Step 6: Mentors who do not already have a Carolina ID Card will need to obtain one from the Carolina Card Office located in the basement of the Russell House located on Green Street. The Dodie can only be accessed after 5pm by a Carolina ID Card. Each student/faculty/staff member is provided one complimentary Carolina Card. Replacements can be obtained for a $35 fee. Non-student employees should verify that their hiring paperwork has been processed before obtaining a Carolina Card by successfully logging into VIP. All employees should bring a driver's license, passport, OR military ID with them to verify their identity when requesting a Carolina Card.

Academic Mentor Characteristics, Duties and Responsibilities

- Meet with assigned student-athlete(s) 4-8 hours each week
- Maintain a copy of assigned students' class syllabi, along with a calendar system to track exam dates and assignment due dates
- Assist the student-athlete in accomplishing his or her weekly objectives
- Provide feedback to Athletic Academic Advisors: emails, phone calls, GradesFirst Session Reports, and in person conversations
- Provide motivation and study skills assistance
- Tutor student-athletes in all appropriate subject areas; course specific tutors are available for those courses beyond the mentor's area of expertise
- Assist with the development and delivery of resources related to study skills and learning strategies to assigned student-athletes
- Monitor and report student-athlete's progress in utilizing skills and techniques
- Maintain accurate records of interaction with assigned student-athletes
- Compile and report data to student-athlete's Athletic Academic Advisor pertinent to student-athletes' progress per session
- Attend and contribute to Academic Mentor Group Meetings and other trainings
- Act professionally at all times
- Maintain knowledge of USC's academic policies and requirements
- Maintain knowledge of NCAA, SEC, and USC policies and requirements
- PROPER CONDUCT, DRESS, TIMELINESS AND PREPAREDNESS ARE REQUIRED AT ALL TIMES FOR/DURING MENTORING SESSIONS

Academic Mentor Appointments

- The student-athlete and the mentor will receive an automated email from GradesFirst, stating the mentor match, location, and days and times of scheduled sessions. Mentors are responsible for checking their email on a regular basis. The email from GradesFirst is considered official notification of the session. Any questions should be directed to the Mentor Coordinator or Enrichment Services Assistant.
- Mentor sessions may only occur in approved locations, during approved hours (see page 9).
- Mentor sessions must end promptly upon closing time.
- No session can last longer than 2 hours without prior approval.
- Mentor sessions may not be changed or cancelled without the approval of the student-athlete's Athletic Academic Advisor.

- Mentors and students are not permitted to contact each other outside of scheduled sessions. If a tutor must communicate with a student-athlete, all communication must go through the student's Athletic Academic Advisor.

Academic Mentors and Confidentiality

Much of the information you will be privy to while assisting a particular student-athlete will be of a confidential nature. Under no circumstances should you discuss the information provided to you within an academic mentor assignment, or any information you may learn over the course of the semester regarding course grades or academic standing, with anyone other than the student-athlete for whom you are the academic mentor or full-time AEC staff members.

Upon your appointment as an Academic Mentor in the AEC office, you will be required to sign a Confidentiality Agreement. By signing this document, you are affirming your adherence to all policies and procedures enumerated or referred to in this manual. You also acknowledge any willful failure to follow these policies may result in termination of your employment.

Academic Mentors and Communication

The Academic Mentor Program will thrive only if there are open lines of communication among all participants in the program, including the professional staff, graduate assistants, academic mentors, and student-athletes. To this end, we encourage that you maintain good communication with the student-athletes during your sessions. Insist that each student-athlete informs you of any appointments that he or she will miss due to competition or other athletics demands. In addition, you should feel free to ask for and provide feedback regarding any aspect of your experience with a particular student-athlete. For example, if you feel that his or her study habits are lacking, you may want to incorporate some suggestions for improvement into your sessions. If you need suggestions or materials in this area, visit with the Mentor Coordinator. Further, make sure to involve the student-athlete in his or her academic experience by asking for an evaluation of your teaching methods. In general, the student-athlete is the best judge of his or her learning style; you will want to make an effort to tailor your teaching methods accordingly.

To facilitate open communication among all members of the Academic Mentor Program, remember to contact the Mentor Coordinator with any problems or concerns you may have regarding your academic mentor assignments or sessions.

In addition to providing informal feedback during the academic mentor session, it is required that academic mentors fill out the GradesFirst session evaluation forms within three hours of the end of each session.

Academic Mentors and Academic Integrity

Mentors are expected to be academic role models and maintain a high level of academic integrity. Mentors and student-athletes are expected to abide by the Carolinian Creed at all times.

- Under no circumstance should a mentor complete any academic work for a student-athlete, including typing papers. Doing so is grounds for immediate dismissal.
- If a student-athlete is enrolled in a class that you are teaching, do not mentor this student. For example, if you are teaching SOCY 101 section 001, AND a student-athlete is enrolled in your class, then you may NOT mentor this student. Talk to your department chair for further clarification.

Upon your appointment as an Academic Mentor in the AEC office, you will be required to sign an Academic Integrity Agreement. By signing this document, you are affirming your adherence to all policies and procedures enumerated or referred to in this manual. You also acknowledge any willful failure to follow these policies may result in termination of your employment.

Academic Mentor & Program Evaluation

- Session Observations – Each mentor will be observed and evaluated while conducting a session. This will occur at least once per academic year. See the Mentor Coordinator regarding specific evaluation criteria.
- Student-Athlete Evaluations – Student-athletes will be asked to evaluate their mentors once per semester. See the Mentor Coordinator regarding specific evaluation criteria.
- Athletic Academic Advisor Evaluations – Athletic Academic Advisors will be asked to evaluate mentors working with their students' one per semester. See the Mentor Coordinator regarding specific evaluation criteria.
- Program Evaluations – Mentors will be asked to evaluate the Enrichment Services Program at the end of each semester. See the Mentor Coordinator regarding specific evaluation criteria.

Other Academic Mentor Notes

- Appointments with academic mentors are not an alternative to class attendance or the use of professors' office hours. Encourage the student-athletes you are assisting to attend every class on time, be attentive and work hard for the duration of the class period, and maintain frequent contact with their professor.

- Serve as a role model for the student-athlete(s) you are assisting in your approach to academic work. Be a few minutes early for all appointments and make sure that the appointment is constructive. Do not allow a student-athlete to wander around, interrupt another study session, engage in non-academic activity, or end your session because they say they have no work to do. If you go into every session with a plan, you should not have a problem handling this type of situation.

- Be directive. Get a copy of the student-athlete's syllabi. Do not be afraid to require the student-athlete to have completed a certain amount of work by the next session. Make them show you their written work. Suggest additional appointments if necessary.

- Hold the student-athlete accountable for his or her actions. Report all problems to the student-athlete's Athletic Academic Advisor promptly afterwards. Do not let the student-athlete persuade you not to report their poor behavior for fear of punishment. You may think that you are doing them a favor, but you will run into more problems in the long run because they will believe that they can take advantage of this.

- Help the student-athlete(s) manage their time. Point out blocks of free time they can utilize outside of the appointments to complete their assignments. Work with them to establish study schedules for busy times or the completion of large projects.

- Be patient—In both the student-athlete's ability to pick up the material you are working on and their overall academic ability.

- Make the relationship as friendly as possible while trying to maintain as professional an atmosphere as possible.

Enrichment Services Policies Overview

Academic Mentor Orientation

- Mentors must attend an orientation meeting at which time they will be apprised of all University of South Carolina, Southeastern Conference and NCAA rules and regulations pertaining to working with student-athletes.
- Orientation must be completed each year for all new and returning mentors
    - A mentor will not be assigned student-athletes until he or she has successfully completed orientation
- Mentors will be compensated for orientation at the designated hourly rate

Academic Mentor Training

- Mentors must attend a required number of trainings per semester.
    - Fall Semester: 3 trainings (Mandatory Writing Training & 2 Mentor Group Meetings)
    - Spring Semester: 2 trainings (2 Mentor Group Meetings)
    - Refer to page 3 for detailed training information
- Training times will be announced at the beginning of each semester as soon as possible. We are aware of everyone's busy schedules and take that into consideration, which is why any mandatory training is offered multiple days/times and there is an option to choose 2 of the 3 Mentor Group Meetings per semester to attend.
- Failure to communicate any conflicts that could prevent a mentor from attending the required number of trainings each semester may result in termination.

Academic Mentor Communication

- Mentors are responsible for checking email, GradesFirst, and Blackboard regularly. These will be the primary methods in which the Enrichment Services Staff will communicate any important announcements or other information relevant to your role as an Academic Mentor within the AEC.
- Mentor sessions will be scheduled in advance through GradesFirst. Once sessions are scheduled, GradesFirst will send an automated email to the mentor and student, notifying them of the scheduled dates and times of all sessions. This email serves as official notification to the mentor that they have been matched with a student. Mentors must abide by this schedule and notify the Mentor Coordinator immediately if there is a conflict.
- Mentor session times may not be changed or cancelled without prior approval of the appropriate Athletic Academic Advisor.
- Mentors are required to give notification to the Athletic Academic Advisor AND Mentor Coordinator, no later than 5pm the day before, if cancellation of a session is necessary (see page 12 for Excused Absences procedures).
    - Please note habitual cancellations will result in termination
- Various resources and announcements will be posted on Blackboard throughout the semester. Some of the resources include tips for effective mentoring while others will address commonly encountered issues. The Compliance Check will be administered on Blackboard each semester and important announcements may be posted on Blackboard as well. Mentors are expected to check Blackboard frequently and refer to the provided resources.
    - Each mentor's Blackboard username and password are the same as his or her USC network username and password. The USC network username and password combination controls login access to most USC college or departmental networks, campus computer labs, as well as the Blackboard system, University email and UTS Help system.
    - To obtain a USC network username and password, please follow these instructions:
        - Login to VIP (https://vip.sc.edu).
        - Click on the Technology link.

- Click on "Show Me Network Username." The assigned USC Network Username will be displayed and the user will be prompted to choose a password. The password must be typed twice in order to verify the password selection.
- Click on the SET PASSWORD button to set a new password. Allow a few minutes to pass before attempting to login to Blackboard again.
- Passwords are limited to 8-14 characters.
- Each password must be at least eight characters but not more than fourteen characters, cannot contain the username, and must meet at least three of the following:
    - One or more lowercase alphabetic characters (a-z)
    - One or more uppercase alphabetic characters (A-Z)
    - One or more numeric characters (0-9)
    - One or more special characters (!@#$%^&*-+= etc)

No Contact Policy

- Mentors are expected to maintain a professional relationship with each student-athlete. To assist in maintaining this professionalism, mentors are not permitted to contact student-athletes outside of scheduled sessions.
- Mentors and student-athletes are not permitted to exchange phone numbers or email addresses, and are not permitted to call, text, or email each other.
- Mentors and student-athletes may not engage in communication on Facebook, Twitter, or in person outside of the AEC.
- The No Contact Policy applies to all student-athletes, not merely the mentees presently assigned to the mentor.
- Communication outside of sessions must go through the student-athlete's Athletic Academic Advisor or the Mentor Coordinator. (see page 1 for AEC staff contact information).
- This is a zero tolerance policy. Violation of this policy is cause for immediate termination.
- Mentors who have prior relationships with any student-athletes are expected to proactively report these relationships directly to the Mentor Coordinator in writing. Mentors will not be assigned to these students.

Academic Mentor Sessions

- Mentors will arrive at least 5 minutes prior to the session.
    - Mentors should sign in on the log located at the front desk of the AEC when arriving for a mentor appointment.
    - After signing in, pick up an Enrichment Services badge. The badge should be visible on the mentor the entire time he or she is present at the AEC.
    - Then proceed to the designated meeting place for the mentor appointment.
- Mentors will wait at least 10 minutes for the student-athlete to arrive before completing a No-Show Session Report. After submitting the report, the mentor may leave (see page 11 for No Show Procedures)
- If an AEC staff member is assigned to the designated meeting place, it is recommended that mentors check-in with the staff member to ensure the mentor and the student connect.
    - Ex. If the meeting place is at the second floor front desk, check-in with the Enrichment Services Assistant.
    - Ex. If the meeting place is outside the advisor's office, check-in with the Athletic Academic Advisor.
- Mentor sessions will take place in approved locations, during approved times:
    - Dodie Anderson Academic Enrichment Center
        - Monday-Thursday 8am-10pm
        - Friday 8am-5pm
        - Sunday 5-10pm

    - Thomas Cooper Library, during library hours of operation
    - Mentors must request alternate location approval from the Mentor Coordinator prior to conducting any session outside of the Dodie Anderson Academic Enrichment Center.
- The mentor should sign out in the log at the front desk of the AEC and return the badge to the front desk of the AEC
- Mentors will complete the GradesFirst Session Report form within 3 hours for each session.
    - Repeated late submission of GradesFirst Session Reports may result in termination
- Mentors will be paid per session, not per student.
    - Mentor group sessions are not typical and will only occur under limited special circumstances
    - If you are matched with more than one student in a session and the group becomes unmanageable or you feel as if any or all students are not benefiting from the sessions, inform the students' Athletic Academic Advisor and the Mentor Coordinator immediately.

Changes to Academic Mentor Appointments

- The appropriate Athletic Academic Advisor or the Mentor Coordinator must approve any appointment changes. Students may not cancel or change appointment times.
- Mentor session times may not be changed or cancelled without prior approval of the appropriate Athletic Academic Advisor.
- Changes to appointments can be communicated in one or more of the following ways:
    - In person by the Athletic Academic Advisor
    - Via email by the Athletic Academic Advisor, Mentor Coordinator, or Enrichment Services Assistant
    - Via phone by the Athletic Academic Advisor, Mentor Coordinator, or Enrichment Services Assistant
- Mentors should always refer to their personal GradesFirst calendar or check with an AEC staff member if ever unsure of scheduled mentor appointment times.

Helping Students with Writing

- The purpose of this policy is to protect student-athletes, mentors, and the University of South Carolina from accusations of academic fraud. Helping students with writing carries special risks for all concerned. Mentors should help students learn the skills to be successful in college, but are not expected to be trained writing instructors. The Writing Center is an invaluable resource for help with writing skills. Anyone working with a student on a writing assignment should adhere to the following guidelines:
    - Do not write on the student's paper.
    - Do no type for a student
    - When editing an essay, the mentor and student should work together. Corrections should be made together; the mentor provides guidance on the larger problems of the essay, while the student makes actual changes. The student should always understand why the change is being made in the essay.
    - Avoid providing whole sentences and phrases

Textbook Requests

- Mentors may find it helpful to have a copy of the student's textbook in order to prepare for mentor sessions.
- Mentors can request a textbook through the Mentor Coordinator using the following procedure:
    - Obtain the textbook information during a session with the student (title, author, edition, etc.). This information is usually located on the student's syllabus.
    - Email the textbook information to the Mentor Coordinator in order to request the book.
    - The Mentor Coordinator will obtain the textbook by locating it in the AEC book supply room or ordering it from the bookstore.

- The mentor will be notified by the Mentor Coordinator once the book has been obtained in order to schedule a time for the mentor to pick up the book.
- All textbooks are due back at the end of each semester by 5pm on the last day of final exams.

Student-Athlete Expectations

- Student-athletes are expected to be on time for each mentoring session.
- In keeping with the University policy, tutors should wait at least 10 minutes for the student-athlete to arrive.
- Student-athletes are responsible for bringing all necessary materials and textbooks with them to their tutoring sessions.
- They are expected to be prepared for their sessions by working through the material and completing any reading assignments before meeting their mentor.
- At no time should a student-athlete construe a mentoring session as a substitute for class attendance, or as the only time spent on studying outside of the classroom.

Student-Athlete Academic Mentor Session No Shows

- The following are the criteria which constitute the submission of a student-athlete no-show:
  - Student-athlete arrives more than 10 minutes late to any session
  - Student-athlete arrives at any session completely unprepared (no books, notes, materials, etc.).
  - Mentor receives notification of cancelation less than 5 hours prior to the scheduled session.
  - Student-athlete misses the session without giving any notice at all.
- Mentors will be paid half the hourly rate for any session that a student-athlete misses if he or she has not notified his or her Athletic Academic Advisor 5 hours prior to the scheduled session. If the session was scheduled for more than one hour of meeting time, you will still only be paid for the first half-hour.
- We ask that mentors allow the student-athlete 10 minutes to arrive for an appointment before leaving.
- Note the "no show" by filling out a "No Show Tutoring Report" form.
- The Athletic Academic Advisor should be made aware of the no show immediately via phone or email. It is imperative to communicate this situation immediately with the Dodie staff so that it can be handled in a manner to prevent it from becoming a consistent problem.
- Additional information regarding no shows:
  - If a student arrives to a mentor session and informs the mentor that he or she has nothing to work on, the student is not allowed to leave without permission from his or her Athletic Academic Advisor or the advisor's assistant (graduate assistant/intern).
    - First, the mentor should always have a conversation with the student to determine why he or she is saying that there is nothing to work on. Go through the student's objective sheet, syllabi, blackboard, etc.
    - If the student is still insistent that he or she has nothing to work on, the mentor should instruct that student that he or she cannot leave without permission and if he or she still chooses to leave it will be counted as a no show.
    - Once the mentor has informed the student of this and he or she decides to leave anyway, the mentor does not need to do anything else except submit the "No Show Tutoring Report" in GradesFirst as usual.
    - If the student does not leave, try to find anything to work on. Again, look over the objective sheet, syllabi, blackboard, etc. There are almost always reading or notes that can be covered. Try to recall material covered in the last session, and quiz him or her on that.

        - If there is absolutely nothing to do because the student isn't prepared, find the student's Athletic Academic Advisor and let him or her know it will be a no show because the student isn't prepared.
        - If something is found to work on, conduct the session as usual.
    - If the mentor meets with a student and determines that he or she has completed all the work necessary for that session, THE MENTOR is allowed to end the session. All sessions ending early must be determined by the student's Athletic Academic Advisor or the mentor. If the mentor decides that a student can leave, the mentor is paid ONLY for the time met. The mentor is not compensated for the full time of the session. Even if the mentor meets with a student for 10 minutes and decides that is all that is necessary for the session, the mentor will be paid for those 10 minutes. This is true for any session for which the above policy is not followed.
    - If a mentor is going to submit a no show for a student because he or she wants to leave early, the mentor must always inform the student that a now show is going to be submitted.
- No Shows must be submitted within 3 hours of scheduled sessions.
    - Repeated late submission of No Shows may result in termination.
- Reporting No Shows for Group Sessions:
    - If no one in the group shows up for a scheduled session, submit a no show report through GradesFirst.
    - If one student in the group fails to show up for a scheduled session, conduct the session as normal and submit a GradesFirst session report form for that student. In addition, submit a no show for the student(s) who did not show up for a scheduled session.
        - Although the mentor will not be paid for the no show (since the appointment went on as scheduled), it is important that we are notified of all student no-shows to hold everyone accountable to the same standards.
- Student-athletes are held accountable for "No Shows", and there are consequences for them. Please do NOT report a "No Show" for the following reasons:
    - A rescheduled or canceled session with prior approval of the Athletic Academic Advisor and appropriate notice to the mentor (more than five hours in advance of the original appointment).
    - An appointment that was cancelled with appropriate notice, but never removed from GradesFirst.
    - A short appointment that took place, but the mentor decided to end the appointment early.
    - A shortened appointment that ended early where the mentor did not verbally inform the student that his or her departure would result in a no show.

Academic Mentor Absences & Cancellations

- Excused absences:
    - Consistency is a crucial part of establishing rapport with assigned students. It is important to keep any absences to a minimum and to communicate those absences to both the Athletic Academic Advisor and Mentor Coordinator in a timely manner.
    - Mentors are required to give notification to the Athletic Academic Advisor AND Mentor Coordinator, no later than 5pm the day before, if cancellation of a session is necessary.
    - If an emergency arises and a mentor is unable to attend a session, he or she should contact the Athletic Academic Advisor AND the Mentor Coordinator or Enrichment Services Assistant immediately by phone and then email. (see page 1 for AEC Staff Directory)
- Unexcused absences:
    - Arriving more than 10 minutes late to the session.
    - Canceling the session without notifying the Athletic Academic Advisor AND Mentor Coordinator no later than 5pm the day prior to the session.

- Missing the session without giving any notice at all.
- Consequences:
  - First Unexcused Absence: absence is recorded and the mentor is given a written warning.
  - Second Unexcused Absence: absence results in termination.

Parking & Transportation

- All mentors are encouraged to use the Carolina Shuttle whenever possible.
- Mentors should explore their parking options well in advance of their first appointment.
- The Enrichment Services staff realizes that the parking situation is not ideal. Please plan ahead and do not let parking cause tardiness to mentor appointments.
- For the most thorough and accurate information regarding on-campus parking, please visit the Parking Services website: http://www.sc.edu/vmps/park.html.
- Shuttle Transportation
  - All employees are encouraged to use the Carolina Shuttle whenever possible. The Shuttle is free for all students, faculty and staff. The Green Shuttle route stops right out front of the AEC. The Yellow Shuttle route stops one block away from the AEC at Marion and Whaley. Please consider taking the Shuttle. Go to this website for maps, times and live information: http://www.sc.edu/vmps/shuttle.html
  - Additionally, the Alpha Phi Omega (APO) Escort Service is available after 8pm. This service makes night travel safer by allowing students, faculty and staff to request a van to pick them up and drop them off at any location on campus. This service can be requested by calling 777-DUCK (3825). If APO is unavailable, call 777-3351. For more information: http://www.sc.edu/vmps/shuttle.html
- Student Employee Parking
  - All mentors who are students at the University of South Carolina and possess a decal to park anywhere on campus, may park in the Athletic Village Parking Garage adjacent to the Dodie.
  - Mentors must park on floors 3-5.
  - Students who do not have a permit should take the Carolina Shuttle or explore free parking options. During the day, those without parking permits may parallel park on Marion Street with the flow of traffic on a first-come-first-serve basis for no charge. There is also some free parallel parking along Sumter Street as well.
  - After 5pm, all employees can park in Athletic Village Parking Garage for no charge and without a permit.
- Non-student Employee Parking
  - Faculty and staff (non-student employees) may choose to purchase a parking permit for the Athletic Village Garage adjacent to the Dodie for $55 per month from Parking Services, located at 1501 Pendleton Street on the ground level of the Pendleton Garage.
  - Non-student employees may also request a Z parking decal free of charge through Parking Services located at 1501 Pendleton Street on the ground level of the Pendleton Garage. Proof of employment (Carolina Card) is required in order to obtain this permit.
    - If newly hired, request a letter from the Mentor Coordinator to verify employment and obtain the Z permit. Z permits allow the permit holder to park in lots designated as "Any Decal Parking" (AD) or "Faculty/Staff assigned" (FS). There are two AD lots, located about 1-2 blocks away from the AEC behind Bates and Benson. After 2pm and on the weekends, Z permit holders may park in any lot designated as a faculty/staff lot.
  - Employees who choose not to obtain a permit can explore non-permit parking options. During the day, those without parking permits may parallel park on Marion Street with the flow of traffic on a first-come-first-serve basis for no charge. There is some free parallel parking along Sumter Street as well.
  - After 5pm, all employees can park in the Athletic Village Parking Garage for no charge and without a permit.

Conditions for Rehire

- Should a mentor remain in good standing throughout the semester, the mentor will be invited to return the following semester. The following constitutes good standing:
  - Compliance with all policies and procedures outlined in this manual.
  - Successful and timely completion of all training requirements.
  - Timely and accurate submission of all ITAMS, GradesFirst information, and timesheets.
  - Appropriate and respectful communication with all AEC staff members.
  - Proper conduct during sessions.
  - Proven commitment to the program's mission and goals.
  - Positive evaluations by the AEC staff.

- Each semester returning mentors must complete various steps to prepare for the upcoming semester:
  - Notify the Mentor Coordinator of the mentor's intention to return as a mentor with the AEC.
  - Submit availability for the upcoming semester to the Mentor Coordinator and on GradesFirst.
  - Attend orientation (fall semester only).

Academic Mentor Dismissal

- To ensure that competent academic mentors are retained, and to provide feedback leading to improved services, regular evaluation of academic mentors, by staff and student-athletes should be anticipated. Likewise, the academic mentors will have the opportunity to evaluate their experiences each semester.

- Dismissal of an academic mentor may be based on any of the following reasons:
  - Academic misconduct
  - Failure to maintain confidentiality
  - Failure to maintain the highest standards of professionalism
  - Failure to uphold the responsibilities and policies stated in this manual
  - Habitual cancellations of sessions
  - Repeated late submissions of GradesFirst Session Reports or No Shows
  - Late submission of GradesFirst Timesheets or ITAMS
  - Unethical behavior that calls unfavorable attention to yourself as a representative of AEC
  - Fraudulent record keeping; i.e. misrepresentation of time spent assisting or not turning in reporting forms
  - Staff evaluation and/or recommendation
  - Violations of University, Athletics Department, Southeastern Conference or NCAA rules.
  - Contacting a student-athlete outside of a scheduled session

- Actions that will result in Immediate Termination:
  - Contact with a student-athlete outside of a scheduled session
  - Doing work for the student
  - Violating rules and regulations of the NCAA, SEC, or University of South Carolina
  - Repeated cancellations or tardiness without prior notice
  - Contacting the instructors of the students with whom you are working
  - Personal or dual relationships with the student-athlete with whom you are working, without prior consent or knowledge of the Mentor Coordinator
  - Any violation of confidentiality, professionalism, or academic integrity policies, per your signed agreements
  - Falsifying your timesheet and/or purposefully neglecting reporting procedures

- If an incident is not severe enough for an immediate dismissal, the following steps will be applied:
  - First Offense: Mentor will be issued a written reprimand that will be recorded in his or her file.

    - Second Offense: The mentor is recommended for termination; dismissal from the mentoring program will likely result.
- In the event a mentor decides to quit, the mentor should give ample notification, preferably two weeks. If a mentor quits without giving two weeks' notice, the Enrichment Services staff will not be able to provide the mentor with a favorable recommendation.

Payroll

There are 3 steps to the payroll procedure for mentors and all 3 must be completed ON TIME and accurately each week for mentors to receive payment for their hard work.

1. Complete all session reports within 3 hours of the session.
    - Only sessions with a completed session report will show up on GradesFirst timesheets for payment.
2. Submit GradesFirst timesheet by Sunday at midnight each week.
3. Submit ITAMS by Sunday at midnight each week

Below are step by step instructions, with photo examples, to guide mentors through the process.

STEP 1—Complete GradesFirst session reports

Under the TUTOR INFO tab--Select the appropriate appointment in order to file a report.

Complete the report and save. Remember to check and double check everything because once the report is submitted, mentors cannot go back in and edit reports. If a reporting error needs to be corrected, email aeces@mailbox.sc.edu, so the Enrichment Services Assistant can make the appropriate changes.

STEP 2—Submit GradesFirst timesheet by SUNDAY AT MIDNIGHT

Click on the PAYROLL tab on the GradesFirst homepage. Pay periods that need to be submitted are located at the top and pay periods that have already submitted are located below. Select the appropriate pay period(s), double check that the hours are correct, and then click SUBMIT PAY PERIOD.

GradesFirst timesheets are approved on Monday morning by the Enrichment Services Assistant. The approved timesheets are then submitted to the Payroll Coordinator, Ros Isaac, to confirm all ITAMS entries. Without a GradesFirst timesheet, ITAMS entries will NOT be approved and payment will be delayed.

STEP 3—Complete ITAMS by SUNDAY AT MIDNIGHT

Student Employees MUST have a VIP Employee PIN (not a student PIN) to access ITAMS.

- Mentors who have never used their VIP employee account will need to access VIP via the internet at http://VIP.SC.EDU to login and change their password from the default setting. The default password setting is birth month and day (MMDD). Remember to allow 24 hours before attempting to use the new or reset password to sign into ITAMS. Tutors should contact Human Resources at 777-3111 if they forget their VIP employee password.
- New employees will not be able to log into VIP or ITAMS immediately; it will take about 2 weeks for Human Resources to process hiring paperwork and add new employees in the system.

Enter the website for ITAMS as https://itams.csd.sc.edu/. It is recommended that mentors bookmark this site as it is needed to submit hours weekly. To login to ITAMS, mentors should enter their social security number and employee PIN.

After logging in, look at the yellow bar at the top right of the screen and choose “Time Entry.”

Use the drop down menu “Report period ending” to select the appropriate week to enter hours worked. Then click on “AddTimeCde.”

Please notice that pay periods on ITAMS (and GradesFirst) run from SUNDAY TO SATURDAY. When entering ITAMS hours for the week on a Sunday, note that the default date in the box will be the current week (the week coming up) and not the previous week, which is the correct week. PLEASE DOUBLE CHECK THAT HOURS ARE ENTERED IN THE CORRECT WEEK!

Enter hours worked appropriately to coincide with the correct dates. Hours in ITAMS need to be totaled for each day and then the total rounded to the nearest .25. On the top right of the screen there is a "SAVE" box. Once the hours have been entered, be sure to save them. If the "SAVE" box is not clicked, hours entered will be lost. Hours cannot be retroactively added without the help of an administrator, so be certain the hours are correct before hitting SAVE.

When a week's work is complete, a mentor may add 15 minutes (.25) to any day for paperwork. This 15 minutes is only added once per week (not per session) for any week in which the mentor worked. Remember to enter in No-Shows for 30 minutes (.5) of work time.

The last step is to "Send for Approval" to Rosalind Isaac.

Mentors may check back later in the week to see if their hours were approved.

Payroll Policies

- GradesFirst session reports are due within three hours of each appointment. It is understandable that mentors may have several back to back appointments, class, or another job that may occasionally prevent the tutor from completing a report within the three-hour timeframe. If a mentor is unable to complete a report within three hours, he or she must e-mail the Enrichment Services Assistant with an explanation. Session reports are important for Athletic Academic Advisors to track the progress of their students, so submitting them in a timely manner is imperative. Repeatedly submitting late reports could result in the termination of employment.

- Payroll (both GradesFirst Payroll and ITAMS) is due every Sunday by midnight. Submitting late timesheets will delay the processing of paychecks and could result in the termination of employment. There is a three strike policy in place for late time sheets. After the third late timesheet, mentors will be required to meet with the Tutor Coordinator to determine an appropriate course of action.

- Intentionally misrepresenting the number of hours worked is grounds for immediate dismissal. If a session report is not on file, the mentor will not be paid for the session in question.

Paperwork

Mentors are required to complete and process the following "paperwork":

- GradesFirst availability
- GradesFirst Session Reports
- GradesFirst Timesheet
- ITAMS entries and approval
- Program evaluation survey at the end of each semester

GradesFirst Availability

Mentors must enter their availability for the semester in GradesFirst prior to the start of each semester. The availability entered into GradesFirst should be times a mentor is available for the duration of the semester. Mentor appointments are repeating appointments that last throughout the entire semester. A mentor's availability should not fluctuate from week to week.

To enter availability into GradesFirst:

- Login to GradesFirst using the assigned login and password.
- Click on the "Tutor Settings" tab on the homepage.
- Mentors should enter all days and times they are available to take appointments for the whole semester under the header "Times Available." Click on "Add Time." Mentors should be as liberal as possible to increase their chances of being matched with students.
- Sessions may occur during the normal operating hours of the Dodie Anderson Academic Enrichment Center which are:
    - Fall and Spring Semesters
        - Sunday 5-10pm
        - Monday-Thursday 8am-10pm
        - Friday 8am-5pm
        - Closed Saturday
    - May and Summer Sessions
        - Monday-Friday 8am-5pm
        - Closed Saturday and Sunday
- Do not adjust the time period when entering availability. The time period should default to the current semester—do not pick a different option.
- Mentors do not need to indicate a facility—there is only one option: the Dodie.
- Mentors can indicate a limit on the number of hours they would like to work. Enter that limit in the "Tutor's Preferred Hours" box (at the bottom of the page). Mentors, who have a strict limit on the number of hours they can work due to another job or internship on campus, must enter their limit in this box on their GradesFirst profile. Be sure to click "Save Tutor Settings" when finished.
    - In addition, mentors must email the Mentor Coordinator to verify any limit on the number of hours available to work.

GradesFirst Session Reports

Following each session, mentors will complete an ONLINE evaluation of the session that documents the work completed during that session. These reports serve many purposes and should be completed with care. They will be reviewed regularly by the Athletic Academic Advisor to monitor the student-athlete's progress in his or her class(es), as well as their behavior and conduct in meeting with you. Therefore, mentors should fill out the form in its entirety. In addition, please indicate any pertinent information regarding the general status of the student-athlete in his or her courses. Be descriptive. If the student-athlete is having a problem with any aspect of a course or the material presented, this evaluation provides a format by which this situation may be communicated to the Mentor Coordinator and the student-athlete's Athletic Academic Advisor. If the student-athlete is having a difficult time with particular material, or if he or she is not taking adequate responsibility for his or her academic success, this should be noted on the GradesFirst "Tutoring Report" form. Throughout the semester the Athletic Academic Advisors complete reports detailing the progress of their student-athletes. Included is pertinent information about the mentor sessions such as timeliness, grades, upcoming assignments, and attitudes. The GradesFirst "Tutoring Report" forms are vital. They are the essential part of the mentor's responsibility to communicate with the AEC staff. The mentors who are utilized the most often are those who submit reports consistently and timely. GradesFirst "Tutor Report" forms must be submitted no later than three hours after the end of the mentor session.

Failure to submit reports on time may result in a delay in payment. Repeated failure to complete reports fully and in a timely fashion may result termination.

Notify the student's Athletic Academic Advisor directly either by email, phone, or in person about significant issues and concerns.

Session Reports can be accessed at https://gamecocksonline.gradesfirst.com/

GradesFirst Timesheets

Timesheets are due by Sunday at Midnight each week. See the Payroll section on page 16 for step-by-step instructions on how to correctly complete GradesFirst timesheets each week.

GradesFirst timesheets can be accessed at https://gamecocksonline.gradesfirst.com/

ITAMS Entries & Approvals

Hours must be entered into ITAMS by Sunday at Midnight every week. Mentors are allowed to add 15 minutes (0.25 hours) of preparation time onto their ITAMS timesheet for each week worked. This addition is for each week, not each appointment. Preparation time cannot be added to a week in which a mentor did not have any appointments scheduled. Please see the Payroll section on page 16 for step-by-step instructions on how to correctly complete ITAMS entries each week.

ITAMS can be accessed at https://itams.csd.sc.edu/ It is recommended that mentors bookmark this site.

Program Evaluations

Program evaluations are usually accessible through Survey Monkey toward the end of each semester. Mentors will be notified by the Mentor Coordinator via email once the evaluation is available. Mentors are usually given about two weeks to complete the anonymous evaluation. Please take the time to provide thoughtful feedback on the evaluation as it helps the Enrichment Services staff to continue to improve the Enrichment Services Program. This is the only formal evaluation, but feedback from mentors is welcome throughout the semester.

Academic Integrity

Student-athletes and academic mentors are required to abide by the Carolinian Creed and to maintain academic and personal integrity.

Carolinian Creed

The Carolinian Creed and the Honor Code are designed, in part, to ensure the principle of academic honesty is upheld. As a mentor, you are making a commitment to stop and/or report any academic dishonesty you may witness. We ask that you set an example for the student-athletes to follow. Conduct that violates the Honor Code includes, but is not limited to, the following:

- Giving or receiving unauthorized assistance, or attempting to give or receive such assistance, in connection with the performance of any academic work.
- Unauthorized use of materials or information of any type or the unauthorized use of any electronic or mechanical device in connection with the completion of any academic work.
- Access to the contents of any test or examination or the purchase, sale, or theft of any test or examination prior to its administration.
- Use of another person's work or ideas without proper acknowledgment of source.
- Intentional misrepresentation by word or action of any situation of fact, or intentional omission of material fact, so as to mislead any person in connection with any academic work (including, without limitation, the scheduling, completion, performance, or submission of any such work).
- Offering or giving any favor or thing of value for the purpose of influencing improperly a grade or other evaluation of a student in an academic program.
- Conduct intended to interfere with an instructor's ability to evaluate accurately a student's competency or performance in an academic program. (http://www.sc.edu/academicintegrity/honorcode.html)

Plagiarism (taken from USC English Department Guidelines)

The Academic Responsibility Code in the Carolina Community: USC Columbia Student Handbook and Policy Guide prohibits a student from "unauthorized use of another person's work without proper acknowledgement of source."

Unauthorized use that involves passing off someone else's written work as your own is called plagiarism. Plagiarism can entail several kinds of misrepresentation. For example, a student can commit plagiarism if he or she:

- Any paper or project accepted as the student-athlete's own work cannot have been composed, even in part, by another person. This includes tutor's revisions on rough drafts. *Do not make changes, notations, etc. on a rough draft. This can be, and has been, construed as plagiarism.
- Take, buy, or accept a paper written by someone else and presents any of it their own work. This includes papers from the Web.
- Include passages taken word-for-word from someone else's text in their own paper without placing that material in quotation marks and citing the source.
- Fail to acknowledge the source of any information in their paper that is not either common knowledge or personal knowledge. Common knowledge includes facts, dates, events, information, and concepts that most of the general public knows. Even if your student used an encyclopedia to look up the dates of the Civil War, for instance, they would not need to cite that source in their bibliography because those dates fall into the range of common knowledge. If your student wants to discuss events at a particular Civil War military prison, though, they would need to cite their source, since few people are familiar with that information.
- Borrow ideas, examples, or the structure of another text without acknowledging it – even if the language of the paper is their own. For example, if your student makes an argument about the death penalty using the exact same points in the same order as an editorial in last week's newspaper, without citing that editorial as the source of their arguments, they are guilty of plagiarism.

Avoiding Plagiarism

All college students should know better than to buy an essay, download papers off the Web, or copy someone else's work verbatim. But if you haven't done a lot of college writing assignments, you may not understand the more subtle forms of plagiarism discussed above. Part of the reason they are taking English 101 and 102 is to learn how to find and use source materials appropriately in their writing. You can help your student find plenty of resources to help them:

- Your student's instructor will be able to advise them on the best way to acknowledge source materials or collaborative help they have received on a particular assignment. If your student has questions about how to honestly and accurately present material in a paper, advise them to approach their instructor before the assignment is due.
- One of the textbooks used in First-Year English will be a writer's handbook like The Scott Foresman Handbook that contains comprehensive information about using, quoting, citing, and documenting sources in academic papers. Your student should consult this book when you have questions about particular conventions, rules, and strategies.
- The university libraries can provide students with handbooks, worksheets, and access to online information about systems of documentation used in academic writing (you'll be using the MLA system in your First-Year English classes).
- The consultants at the Writing Center can also offer advice and materials on using source materials appropriately.

Collusion

The Academic Responsibility Code in the Carolina Community: USC Columbia Student Handbook and Policy Guide prohibits "[g]iving or receiving unauthorized assistance, or attempting to give or receive such assistance, in connection with the performance of any academic work." If someone writes (or dictates) all or part of an assignment for you, or if you give or accept inappropriate help on a writing assignment, you are guilty of collusion. Like plagiarism, collusion is a serious academic offense that violates university and First-Year English policies.

Avoiding collusion

Is your student committing collusion if you or a fellow classmate helps them with a paper? It depends. Help that goes beyond constructive advice to doing some or all of the writing, revising, editing, or proofreading for you is collusion – it's passing off work that's partly someone else's as your own. When your student gets help with their writing, it is their responsibility to set appropriate limits. If your student needs additional help beyond your tutoring sessions, it is suggested that they visit the Writing Center, where tutors are highly qualified and have received special training in providing writers with appropriate kinds of help. A tutor/mentor (or other helper) may legitimately:

- Discuss your topic, audience, purpose, evidence, and other broad rhetorical concerns about a paper.
- Point out general patterns of error in a draft.
- Suggest general approaches for solving rhetorical, stylistic, or mechanical problems.
- Review specific grammatical or mechanical conventions (but not fix particular errors in your draft).

A mentor may not:

- Write or verbally dictate a draft or a section of a draft – even a sentence or two.
- Edit or proofread a paper and then correct the errors.
- Do research or procure other substantive material for a paper.

Recycling Papers

Recycling old work violates First-Year English Program policy. It is academically dishonest because it misleads the instructor into treating work completed in another setting as a fresh response to an English 101 or 102 assignment. Besides being dishonest, turning in an old paper can actually hurt your student's performance in class. When they do not go through the writing process, your student loses a valuable chance to practice and improve their writing skills. And experienced instructors say that papers written for other classes rarely match the exact requirements of an English 101 or 102 assignment, so such papers are unlikely to receive good grades.

Occasionally, an instructor may allow a student to write a new paper using research they have done for another course or substantially revise a paper that's already written. If your student is interested in doing this, be sure to encourage them to approach their instructor before the assignment is due and be prepared to show him or her a copy of the original paper.

Consequences

USC and the First-Year English Program take academic dishonesty seriously. In the academic world, passing off work that is not your own response to an assignment is like robbery or grand larceny: the penalties are serious. They can include all or some combination of the following:

- An F on the assignment in question.
- An F for the course.
- A written reprimand or letter of warning from the Dean's Office that becomes part of your permanent academic record.
- Suspension or expulsion from USC.

If your instructor suspects or determines that a student has plagiarized a paper or engaged in any of the other kinds of academic dishonesty discussed in this section, he or she will take the paper to the First-Year English Director. The Director, in consultation with the instructor, will decide whether academic dishonesty has occurred and what the consequences will be. The student will also be interviewed during this process. Then the case will be turned over to the Dean's Office. Plagiarism – even a first offense – usually results in failure of the course and sometimes in expulsion.

Notes on Academic Integrity

Mentors are asked to be especially sensitive to issues of academic integrity. If a student shows you an assignment and you suspect that it may not be his or her own work, please notify the Mentor Coordinator as soon as possible. Follow this procedure even if the student tells you that it is his or her own work.

Some common signs that a student's work is not his or her own include:

- Level of work is beyond what you have previously observed with the student
- Difficult/uncommon words used
- No in-text citations and/or no work-cited page
- For subjects like math, physics, and chemistry, the student is unable to solve the problem when asked to do so without looking at previous work
- One paragraph does not fit with the next
- The assignment does not meet the criteria set forth by the professor

If you are suspicious of any work, regardless of what the student may say, please notify the Mentor Coordinator. Academic dishonesty on the part of the student does not necessarily reflect poorly on your ability as a mentor; however, if at any point you do question the student's work and do not take further action, everyone involved is jeopardized. If you suspect fraudulent academic behavior and do nothing about it, you yourself are committing academic dishonesty.

When you have any questions or concerns regarding academic integrity, please contact the Mentor Coordinator.

Writing Assignments

When you and the student are working on editing a paper, the student's paper should NEVER be in front of you, and should ALWAYS be in front of the student. If you have trouble reading upside down, sit next to the student. Also, the correcting pen should NEVER be in your hand, and should ALWAYS be in the student's hand. The correction marks on the paper should be in the STUDENT'S HANDWRITING, not in yours. Anything other than the student's work on or in the student's paper constitutes ACADEMIC DISHONESTY, and will not be tolerated. If any sort of academic dishonesty on the part of a tutor or mentor is suspected, immediate action will be taken, potentially resulting in termination of employment. The AEC staff takes this issue extremely seriously, as does the university and the NCAA; you should take it just as seriously.

Just because a professor makes corrections and comments on a student's work, it does not mean that it is acceptable for you to do the same. It can be frustrating when a student is having difficulty, but the only requirement is that the student's work be the student's work, not that the student's work be perfect, or what you think is best. If you are struggling with assisting a student in the manner outlined above, please contact the Mentor Coordinator.

Computer Use

Mentors are not permitted to touch ANY computer keyboard or mouse while working with a student. You may not sit at a computer. It is permissible to sit next to the student with whom you are working, but it must be clear to anyone who may happen to see you (and you never know who may be looking) that the student is doing his or her own work. Along with this, when you are in a session, you are not permitted to sit at another computer and do your own work, surf the web, or whatever else you may need or want to do. You are being paid for the time you are working with the student. Your attention must be 100% focused on the student.

Online Courses

Online courses can potentially create sticky situations for mentors. The rule of thumb is to treat them like classroom courses.

- It is permissible to assist students with homework for classroom courses, so therefore it is permissible for online courses.
- It is not permissible to assist students with classroom quizzes, so therefore it is not permissible for online courses.
- It is not permissible to assist students with classroom exams, so therefore it is not permissible for online courses.

* Note: Take Home Exams for classroom courses are similar – it is not permissible to assist students with classroom exams, so therefore it is not permissible to assist with take home exams.

If you are uncertain of something, ASK BEFORE YOU DO!

Professionalism

Part Time Employee Work Attire

Mentors should always be mindful of their attire. What is worn to work has a major impact on how one is perceived by the staff and by the student-athletes encountered during mentor sessions. Below are guidelines to follow while working. They outline what is and what is not appropriate attire for part time employees of the AEC.

Acceptable

- Jeans (without any holes, rips, stains, or frays)
- Khakis
- Shorts (that are not distractingly short, use judgment)
- Polos/ Button-ups
- T-shirts (must not show cleavage, midriff, advertise beer or drugs, questionable slogans, or another university)
- Skirts (that are not too short, use judgment)
- Dresses)that do not show off any cleavage, bra straps, are through, and are not tastelessly short
- Hoodies (without the hood up)
- Sweaters, jackets, coats, etc.

*Anything you think is questionable, is probably not appropriate. Always use your best and most professional judgment, and if you are unsure of an outfit, ask someone!

Not Acceptable

- Booty shorts/mini skirts
- Anything with large holes or stains
- Yoga pants/spandex anything
- Hats/do rags (things on your head)
- Cleavage or midriff bearing items
- Pajama bottoms
- Dangerous jewelry (items with spikes)

* As a general rule, avoid anything that may be distracting to a student

Side note: Student-athletes are not required to follow the same dress code guidelines. Since many student-athletes come from practice, they may come in workout gear. However, no hats/do rags are allowed to be worn by ANYONE.

Acting Professionally as a Student Employee

- Be competent.
  Know, practice, and utilize the necessary skills to do the job well.

- Be reliable.
  Arrive on time, submit session reports and ITAMS sheets when they are due, and do not consistently cancel appointments.

- Have integrity and be honest.
  Project moral character, tell the truth, and be upfront with student-athletes, other student employees, and all staff members.

- Respect others.
  Give respect to earn it. Everyone matters and everyone's input is valuable.

- Be positive.
  An upbeat attitude along with a constant desire to problem solve makes any work environment better and any work relationship stronger.

- Stay work-oriented.
  Never let any person's private life interfere with work. Keep each person's personal life private and try to remain on task at all times.

- Listen.
  Be mindful to listen to student-athletes, co-workers, and staff. Pay attention to what is being said to stay informed about every situation.

- Write proper emails.
  Email etiquette can affect how an individual is viewed as an employee. Always address an email, use complete sentences, and do not incorporate "text lingo" into any email.

- Dress appropriately.
  The way an individual dresses can determine people's impressions in the work place. See the section on Student Employee Work Attire in the Mentor Handbook for examples of what is suitable and unsuitable to wear in the AEC (see page 27).

- Ask Questions.
  If ever unsure of anything, ask for help, clarification, or advice from the staff. It is always better to ask questions than to remain uninformed or to continue doing something incorrectly.

Socializing During Sessions

While it is important to build rapport with assigned students, mentors must maintain the educational focus of the session. Limit the non-educational portions to 5 minutes or less.

Mentor Contact with Student-Athletes

Mentors are not permitted to communicate with student-athletes outside of scheduled sessions. Mentors may not give phone numbers or email addresses to student-athletes, nor may mentors have the phone numbers or email addresses of student-athletes. Mentors and student-athletes are not permitted to call, text, or email one another. All communication outside of a session must go through the Mentor Coordinator, Enrichment Services Assistant, or the student-athlete's Athletic Academic Advisor.

Facebook, MySpace, and other Social Networking Websites

Facebook, MySpace, and other such websites are social in nature. Mentors should not communicate or interact with student-athletes on these websites. The relationship with the student is to remain professional. Do not ask to add them as friends, and do not respond to any of student-athlete requests to be friends. Among other things, it is unprofessional and potentially compromises confidentiality.

Mentor Session Procedures

Initial Contact

- The student-athlete and the mentor will receive an automated email from GradesFirst, stating the mentor match, location, and days and times of scheduled sessions. Mentors are responsible for checking their email on a regular basis. The email from GradesFirst is considered official notification of the session. Any questions should be directed to the Mentor Coordinator or Enrichment Services Assistant.
- Mentor sessions may only occur in approved locations, during approved hours (see page 9).
- Mentor sessions must end promptly upon closing time.
- Mentors are not guaranteed hours.
- No session can last longer than 2 hours without prior approval from the Mentor Coordinator or the student's Athletic Academic Advisor

First Session

- Greet and introduce yourself to the student.
- Confirm the schedule of sessions and set a standard meeting venue for all future appointments.
- Go over the student's course syllabi.
- Determine the student's needs for each course. Ask him/her how you can best help him/her have a successful semester.
- Establish a climate of trust, mutual respect and patience. Clearly express your expectations and ask the student for his/her expectations.

Beginning of Each Session

- Be 5 minutes early for every session. Try to arrive early and prepared, allowing for traffic and parking problems.
- If the student is late, wait at least 10 minutes before completing the GradesFirst No-Show form.
- Start each session on a positive note, with a brief and friendly greeting.
- Always briefly review the material from the previous session with the student.
- Before beginning new material, ask the student how it was taught in class.

During Each Session

- Make sure that assistance is a two way process. Ask a lot of open-ended questions, so that the student cannot simply give a yes or no answer.
- Keep the pencil or pen in the hand of the student. The only time you should pick up a pen or pencil is to demonstrate a concept, not to solve a specific problem or to correct a paper.
- Provide positive feedback to the student. Avoid using negative language.
- When the student has difficulty with homework problems, focus on the concepts he/she is struggling with. Inform him/her that most of the homework should be done before the session, in order to make efficient use of your time.
- Go over the students' notes with them, providing clarification and elaboration. Give them feedback and suggestions about the quality of their notes.
- Help them review for tests. Give them tips about test taking and time management, sharing examples that have worked for you. If they need extra help in these areas, refer them to their Academic Advisor or Learning Specialist.
- Review the students' textbooks with them. Help them with comprehension, main points and summarizing. Demonstrate for them pre-reading, skimming, annotating, and self-monitoring strategies. If they need further help in this area, refer them to their Academic Advisor of Learning Specialist.
- If the students run out of questions for you, develop questions, problems, and quizzes for them. Drill them extensively.

- If the students need help with writing, refer them to a writing tutor or a writing lab. Read the subject writing guidelines for instruction on the limited ways you are allowed to help students with writing.
- If the student is uncooperative or unprepared for a session, provide this information on the Session Evaluation Form. You are not expected to teach new information for the first time. If the student-athlete did not go to class or come prepared, the mentor should review material from recent sessions.
- If you ever feel uncomfortable during a session or suspect academic dishonesty, end the mentoring session immediately and inform an AEC staff member.
- Do not do the students' work for them. Model techniques for them, assist them, and encourage them to become independent learners.

After Each Session

- Give the student feedback on how the session went. Also, ask the student for feedback on ways you can improve the effectiveness of the tutoring session.
- Always give the student specific tasks to complete before the next session.
- Make sure to clarify the time and place for the next appointment.
- Complete the GradesFirst Session Evaluation Form within three hours of the end of the session.
- Enter your hours on ITAMS.

The First Session

It has been said, "You never have a second chance to make a good first impression." This sentiment underscores the importance of the first meeting between you and the student-athlete(s) for which you will be an academic mentor. It is not necessary for you to worry about this meeting, but there are a few things you should keep in mind when planning for it.

1. Be yourself. If you want the student-athlete to trust you and work well with you, he or she must believe that you are being honest with him or her about yourself and your goals for the academic mentor experience.

2. Work from the beginning to build rapport with the student-athlete. Good rapport depends upon good communication between you and the student-athlete. You should not feel a need to discuss your life with a student-athlete unless you are comfortable doing so. But, it is important that the student-athlete learn the two of you do have at least one thing in common -- a desire to see the student-athlete succeed in the classroom.

3. Get to know your student-athlete. In what sport does she/he compete? What position does he play? Where is his/her hometown? If he/she is new to Columbia, are they adapting to their new home easily? These questions and others that will come naturally, help you in two ways: you will get acquainted with the student-athlete(s) for whom you are an academic mentor as well as open the lines of communication between the two of you. It is also a good idea to ask questions about their academic life. This shows your interest in them as a student and not merely as an athlete. It is amazing how much more can be accomplished in the session if the student-athlete feels you are interested in him/her as a person and that he/she is not just a jersey number. If you are a fan, do not be one during the session.

4. Take time to assess the student-athlete's situation in their courses. You will want to determine whether or not the student-athlete is in need of remedial assistance as opposed to more advanced tutoring in the abstract ideas presented in the course.

- Help the student-athlete to set goals for the semester. Does he or she need intensive assisting to organize their daily schedule or assistance to improve his or her grade from a "B" to an "A?"

Remember that, as an academic mentor, you are in many ways a cheerleader for the student-athletes with whom you are working. You should always encourage them to strive for their best effort.

Common Academic Mentor Concerns
NCAA Rules

Role of Athletics Compliance

South Carolina is committed and obligated to the principle of institutional control in operating its athletics program in a manner that is consistent with the letter and the spirit of NCAA, SEC and USC rules and regulations. The NCAA Principle of Institutional Responsibility for the conduct of its intercollegiate athletics program includes responsibility for the actions of its staff members and for the actions of any other individual or organization engaged in activities promoting the athletics' interests of the institution.

The Athletics Compliance Office works to identify and reduce areas of risk within the athletics program that could negatively impact the University. If a problem arises, it is the responsibility of the Athletics Compliance Office to determine how the problem occurred, how it could have been prevented and how to reduce the chances of it occurring in the future.

The NCAA holds each member institution responsible for the conduct and control of its athletics program and all individuals associated with the program. Therefore compliance is everyone's responsibility.

The two main functions of the Athletics Compliance Office are to educate and to monitor. The compliance staff meets regularly with coaches and student-athletes to provide information and materials on the application of the complexities of the NCAA Bylaws, and at the same time provides as much information as possible to the University Community. The staff also monitors functions of the athletics department that are governed by NCAA and SEC legislation.

The compliance office offers a service to coaches and athletics staff members by identifying areas of vulnerability and implementing systems that will reduce the risk of violations within each program. In delivering this service, each person in the compliance office has agreed to be courteous and respectful. In an effort to be accessible, there will be someone present in the compliance office Monday - Friday from 8 am until 5:00 pm. When the office is closed, compliance personnel will be accessible by email and cell phone.

How Compliance Impacts Me as a Academic Mentor

If any employee of the athletics program [coaches, professors, tutors, teaching assistants, student managers, student trainers and staff] knows of any violations of NCAA or SEC regulations, he or she is obligated to report that violation to either the Assistant Director of Athletics for Compliance, Faculty Athletics Representative or the Director of Athletics. All employees are required to cooperate with compliance office personnel in the event of an investigation into alleged violations.

Specifically, it is a violation of NCAA Bylaw 10.1 Unethical Conduct if you do any of the following:

- Refuse to furnish information relevant to an investigation of a possible violation of an NCAA regulation when requested to do so by the NCAA or University of South Carolina;

- Knowingly arrange for fraudulent academic credit or false transcripts for a prospect or enrolled student-athlete;

- Knowingly offer or provide a prospective or enrolled student-athlete an improper inducement or extra benefit or improper financial aid;

- Knowingly furnish the NCAA or University of South Carolina false or misleading information concerning your involvement in or knowledge of matters relevant to a possible violation of an NCAA regulations; or

- Receive benefits by an institutional staff member for facilitating or arranging a meeting between a student-athlete and an agent, financial advisor or a representative of an agent or advisor (e.g., "runner").

Additionally, as a staff member of the athletics department, NCAA Bylaw 10.3 Sports Wagering Activities precludes you from knowingly participating in any gambling activities, including:

- Providing information to individuals in organized gambling activities concerning University of South Carolina's athletics competition;
- Soliciting a bet on any intercollegiate team;
- Accepting a bet on any team representing the institution;
- Soliciting or accepting a bet on any intercollegiate competition for any item (e.g., cash, shirt, dinner) that has tangible value; or
- Participating in any gambling activity that involves intercollegiate athletics or professional athletics, through a bookmaker, a parlay card or any other method employed by organized gambling.

Extra Benefits

A big area of concern is extra benefits. An extra benefit is any special arrangement provided to a student-athlete or the student-athlete relatives or friends not expressly authorized by NCAA legislation. [Bylaw 16.02.3] If you would not give something to every one of the 25,000 students at University of South Carolina, DO NOT give it to a student-athlete. Providing an extra benefit will jeopardize the student-athlete's ability to compete for University of South Carolina and will be cause for your termination.

Some examples of extra benefits include, but are not limited to, the following:

- Cash;
- An employment arrangement for a prospect's relatives;
- Gift of clothing or equipment;
- Co-signing of loans or posting bond;
- Any tangible items;
- Free or reduced-cost services, rentals, or merchandise of any type;
- Free or reduced-cost housing, including opportunity to "house sit";
- The use of washer and dryer;
- Free summer storage;
- Promising employment after college graduation;
- Telephone card to make free long distance calls;
- Meal at a restaurant or country clubs;
- Entertainment services, (e.g., movie tickets, use of an auto, admission to professional athletics contests or a trip to a postseason football game);
- Transportation (ride home or to class) even if student-athlete reimburses for gas;
- Athletics equipment or supplies, (e.g., tennis racquets, golf clubs, polo shirts; running shoes);
- Assistance in payment of bills (e.g., utility bills, rent, auto);
- Sell or arrange to sell muscle-building supplements; or
- Wedding gifts, birthday gifts, anniversary gifts and graduation gifts;

NCAA member institutions are mandated by Bylaw 16.3.1.1 to provide Academic Counseling and Support Services to its student-athletes.

Such counseling and tutoring services may be provided by the department of athletics or through the institution's non-athletics student support services. In addition, an institution may finance other academic and support services that the institution, at its discretion, determines to be appropriate and necessary for the academic success of its student-athletes, including, but not limited to, the following:

(a) Tutoring expenses;

(b) Drug-rehabilitation program expenses;

(c) Counseling expenses related to the treatment of eating disorders;

(d) On-campus student development and career counseling (including the provision of related materials of little or no commercial value to student-athletes) utilizing outside resources;

(e) Future professional athletics career counseling from an institution's professional sports counseling panel (see Bylaw 12.3.4);

(f) Actual and necessary expenses to attend proceedings conducted by the institution, its athletics conference or the NCAA that relate to the student-athlete's eligibility to participate in intercollegiate athletics or legal proceedings that result from the student-athlete's involvement in athletics practice or competitive events. The cost of legal representation in such proceedings also may be provided by the institution (or a representative of its athletics interests);

(g) Use of computers and typewriters. Use of institutionally owned computers and typewriters on a check-out and retrieval basis; however, typing/word processing/editing services or costs may not be provided, even if typed reports and other papers are a requirement of a course in which a student-athlete is enrolled;

(h) Use of copy machines, fax machines and the Internet, including related long-distance charge, provided the use is for purposes related to the completion of required academic course work;

(i) Course supplies (e.g., calculators, art supplies, computer disks, subscriptions), provided such course supplies are required of all students in the course and specified in the institution's catalog or course syllabus;

(j) Cost of a field trip, provided the field trip is required of all students in the course and the fee for such trips is specified in the institution's catalog; and

(k) Non-electronic day planners.

Bylaw 16.3.1.2 Champs/Life Skills Programs requires Member institutions to conduct NCAA Champs/Life Skills programs (or an equivalent program) on its campus. ~~(~~These activities are administered by academic services and monitored and regulated by the compliance office.

If you have any questions about compliance or need an interpretation of an NCAA or SEC regulation, please do not hesitate to call the Compliance office at the University of South Carolina.

University of South Carolina Academic Mentor Statement

Office of Athletics Compliance

This statement must be signed by you at the beginning of each academic year and returned to the Carolina Academic Resources and Enrichment Services (CARES) office. This statement must be signed in order to begin and to continue to tutor for the athletics department.

ACADEMIC FRAUD STATEMENT

As a tutor employed by the University of South Carolina, I am permitted to tutor and assist student-athletes in their understanding of coursework, concepts and applications, and preparation for test taking. I am not to do the class assignments, papers, typing, or other course related work for the student-athlete. If I have knowledge (past or present) of a student-athlete who is submitting work that is not his/her own, I understand that it is my responsibility under the terms of employment with the University of South Carolina Department of Athletics to report this activity to the Associate Athletic Director for Student-Athlete Support Services and/or the Office of Athletic Compliance.

The Academic Responsibility Code in the Carolina Community, USC Columbia Student Handbook and Policy Guide outlines the procedure for academic infractions. Giving or receiving assistance to student-athletes for submitted coursework that is not appropriately cited could be treated with the same severity as cheating or plagiarism and result in suspension, expulsion or termination. This action may also jeopardize the eligibility of the student-athlete.

I agree that I will not/have not disclosed to any party information regarding a student-athlete's academic progress or information regarding coursework and/or tutoring session, except to authorized institutional representatives.

GAMBLING STATEMENT

I will not/have not solicited or accepted a bet on any intercollegiate competition for any item (e.g. cash, shirt, dinner) that has tangible value. I will not provide information concerning intercollegiate athletic competition to individuals involved in gambling activities.

EXTRA BENFITS STATMENT

I agree that I will not or have not provided a student-athlete or a student-athlete's relatives or friends any benefit that is not authorized by the NCAA legislation. I understand that it is my responsibility to report this activity to the Academic Enrichment Center or the Compliance Office.

SEXUAL HARASSMENT

Unwelcome behavior of a sexual nature that relates to gender or sexual identity of an individual and that has the purpose or effect of creating an intimidating or hostile environment of study, work or social living will not be tolerated. Please refer to the USC website www.sc.edu for complete information on the University's policy.

As an employee of USC you are entitled to a harassment free environment. Please report any instances of harassment to the Director of Academic Support or the Faculty Athletics Representative (FAR).

By signing below, I certify that I have read and fully understand the above information. To the best of my knowledge, I will/have comply with applicable NCAA, SEC and USC rules and regulations as a tutor for the Department of Athletics.

Statement of Professionalism

As an employee of University of South Carolina's Athletics Department, you must conduct yourself in a professional and ethical manner. This includes, but is not limited to:

- Dress – appropriate casual attire; NO tight clothing, low-cut or midriff shirts, clothing that reveals undergarments, short skirts or shorts, or any other inappropriate clothing.
- Contact – tutors/mentors and student-athletes are not permitted to contact each other outside of scheduled sessions; all communication must go through the Advisor, Tutor/Mentor Coordinator, or Enrichment Services Assistant
- Timeliness – arrive for appointments at least 5 minutes early.
- Absolute confidentiality -- refer to Confidentiality Agreement.
- Tutoring/Mentoring techniques – promote independent learning and foster effective study habits.
- Academic integrity – maintain academic integrity at all times, and immediately report any academic dishonesty that you witness. Refer to Academic Integrity Agreement.
- Paperwork – fully complete appropriate paperwork, such as session feedback forms and timesheets, in a timely manner.
- Communication – notify the Tutor/Mentor Coordinator and Advisor immediately if you will be late/absent for a scheduled session. Notify an AEC staff member immediately if any serious issues arise.
- A tutor/mentor should NEVER do any of the following:
    - Socialize with student-athletes outside of the AEC while employed as a tutor/mentor
    - Communicate with student-athletes through call, text, email, Facebook, etc
    - Arrange to meet a student-athlete outside of the AEC without prior approval from the student-athlete's Athletic Academic Advisor.
    - Provide any kind of service to student-athletes per NCAA and SEC guidelines, including but not limited to: providing them with transportation, giving them any amount of money, typing their papers, and buying them meals.
    - Prepare the student-athlete's work for him/her.
    - Sit at the computer during a session (the tutee should be at the computer; the tutor/specialist should be behind or next to the tutee).
    - Allow the student-athlete to engage in non-academic activity during a session.
    - Contact the student's instructors.
    - Have a personal or dual relationship with the student-athlete with whom you are working, without prior consent or knowledge of the Tutor/Mentor Coordinator. Dating a student-athlete is strictly prohibited while you are a tutor/mentor

I have read and understand the statements that have been outlined above. I understand that my employment may be terminated for misconduct related to each and any of the guidelines.

Academic Integrity Agreement

Academic Integrity (http://www.sc.edu/academicintegrity/honorcode.html)
The Carolinian Creed and the Honor Code are designed, in part, to ensure the principle of academic honesty is upheld. As a tutor/mentor, you are making a commitment to stop and/or report any academic dishonesty you may witness. We ask that you set an example for the student-athletes to follow. Conduct that violates the Honor Code includes, but is not limited to, the following:

- Giving or receiving unauthorized assistance, or attempting to give or receive such assistance, in connection with the performance of any academic work.

1. Unauthorized use of materials or information or the unauthorized use of any electronic or mechanical device in connection with the completion of any academic work.
2. Access to the contents of any test or examination or the purchase, sale, or theft of any test or examination prior to its administration.
3. Use of another person's work or ideas without proper acknowledgment of source.
4. Intentional misrepresentation by word or action of any situation of fact, or intentional omission of material fact, so as to mislead any person in connection with any academic work (including, without limitation, the scheduling, completion, performance, or submission of any such work).
5. Offering or giving any favor or thing of value for the purpose of influencing improperly a grade or other evaluation of a student in an academic program.
6. Conduct intended to interfere with an instructor's ability to evaluate accurately a student's competency or performance in an academic program.

Academic Issues
The NCAA strictly prohibits any institutional staff member (e.g., coach, professor, tutor, teaching assistant, student manager, student trainer) from completing coursework for student-athletes. This prohibition includes, but is not limited to, the following:

- Completing homework or coursework for a student-athlete.
- Allowing student-athletes to copy your homework.
- Typing or writing a paper and/or an assignment for a student-athlete.
- Providing answers to take-home exams or quizzes.
- Sitting in or taking notes and/or an exam for a student-athlete.
- Copy or fax information, notes or assignments for student-athletes.

NCAA Violation
Academic fraud becomes a violation of NCAA ethical conduct legislation when:

- A staff member knowingly is involved in arranging fraudulent academic credit or false transcripts for a prospective or enrolled student-athletes, regardless of whether the institutional staff member acted alone or in concert with the prospective or enrolled student-athlete.
- A student-athlete, acting alone or in concert with others, knowingly becomes involved in arranging fraudulent academic credit or false transcripts, regardless of whether such conduct results in an erroneous declaration of eligibility.
- If a student-athlete commits an academic offense (e.g., cheating on a test, plagiarism on a term paper) with no involvement of an institutional staff member, the institution is not required to report a violation of Bylaw 10.1-(b), unless the academic offense results in an erroneous declaration of eligibility and the student-athlete subsequently competes for the institution.

IF YOU ARE UNSURE ABOUT ANYTHING, ASK FIRST!!!!**

I have read and understand the information above. I understand that my employment may be terminated for misconduct related to each and any of these issues.

Dear Subject Tutors:

Welcome to the staff of the Dodie Anderson Academic Enrichment Center for Student-Athletes. As a staff member, you will play an important role in the development of South Carolina student-athletes. Not only will you assist student-athletes in a mentoring role, but you will assist them in developing the skills necessary to be academically successful throughout their entire career at Carolina.

Student-athletes are no different than the traditional students on the Carolina campus; however, the time demands of college athletics place an additional burden upon student-athletes. In addition, requirements such as NCAA and Southeastern Conference eligibility standards add to the burden. The AEC staff provides a variety of services, all of which focus upon the goals of retention and graduation. As an academic mentor, you will function as an integral part of the total academic support program. Throughout your experience with the AEC, we ask that you respect all facets of professionalism, confidentiality, and academic integrity, and adhere to the rules and regulations stipulated in this manual. Your positive, professional relationship with student-athletes is fundamental to the success of this program.

To function as an effective subject tutor, you must be able to relate to the student-athlete in a variety of areas. As time progresses, the aim of the program will be to assist the student-athletes in meeting their goals, including becoming alumni of Carolina. Not only will you see the student-athletes progress, but we are confident that you will experience a sense of growth and satisfaction from your interaction with student-athletes.

Once again, welcome to the AEC staff. We are looking forward to working with you during the 2012-2013 academic years. Be assured, you will receive the support of the professional staff in all endeavors. If you have concerns or questions, please contact one of the professional staff members and every effort will be made to find a solution.

Sincerely,

Jennifer Sturm

Mandatory Fall Training Sessions

Mandatory	Compliance Check	10/22/2012-11/2/2012	ONLINE-Due by 5pm 11/2
In addition, select TWO of the following training sessions to attend:
#1	Advisor Panel	Wednesday, 9/12/2012	4:00-5:00pm
#2	Writing*	Wednesday, 9/19/2012	6:00-7:00pm
#3	Writing*	Friday, 9/21/2012	4:00-5:00pm
#4	Session Structure	Tuesday, 10/2/2012	5:00-6:00pm
#5	Math & Science	Thursday, 10/11/2012	7:00-8:00pm

*The Writing training is mandatory for any tutor who lists any English course in their profile on GradesFirst. English tutors are required to attend either training #2 OR training #3. This will count as one of the two required training sessions.

Mandatory Spring Training Sessions

Mandatory	Compliance Check	1/28/2013-2/8/2013	ONLINE-Due by 5pm 2/8
In addition, select ONE of the following training sessions to attend:
#1	Motivation	Wednesday, 2/20/2013	4:00pm
#2	Tests	Thursday, 2/28/2013	6:00pm

*Tutors hired in the spring semester who list any English course in their profile are required to complete a writing training in addition to the requirements listed above. The dates and times for the writing training will be distributed at the beginning of the spring semester.

Compliance Checks

NCAA Compliance rules and regulations for tutors are covered during orientation. During both the fall and spring semesters a mandatory compliance check is administered on Blackboard to review the information covered and provide updates on any new information. Each compliance check is open for a two week time frame on Blackboard and can be completed at the tutor's convenience.

Training Sessions

Training sessions are part of the required continuing education program for Academic Enrichment Center (AEC) tutors. Tutors are required to complete two training sessions in the fall semester and one training session in the spring semester in addition to the compliance check. Orientation and the compliance check do not count as training sessions. Topics are selected based on observed needs and previous requests. Tutors are welcome to submit requests for training topics to a member of the Enrichment Services staff if training in a particular area is desired.

All trainings will take place in the 3rd Floor Quiet Study Room* of the AEC unless otherwise noted. Dates are subject to change. Date and location changes will be announced via email.

Mission of the Academic Enrichment Center

The Academic Enrichment Center, in alignment with the University and Athletics Department missions, aims to build relationships that empower and inspire a diverse group of student-athletes through education, community service, and professional development, to achieve graduation, attain career goals, and appreciate lifelong learning.

Subject Tutor Overview

The primary goal of the Enrichment Services Program is to enhance students' study skills, as well as to assist them in specific content areas. The Tutor Program provides subject-specific assistance to student-athletes as a supplement to the classroom learning experience. The primary responsibility of a tutor is to understand and clearly communicate course content and study skills to the tutees. One-on-one and group tutoring is available in a broad array of courses. Tutoring sessions are held throughout the day and evening, Sunday through Friday. Subject tutors are required to display a high level of academic integrity.

Subject Tutor Qualifications

University of South Carolina undergraduate, graduate, and doctoral students are eligible to apply for tutor positions within the Athletic Department. In addition, community members with specific expertise are also eligible to apply. All candidates must fulfill the following guidelines in order to be considered for a position as a subject tutor:

- Submit complete application packet including an unofficial transcript or resume.
- Maintain minimum of a 3.2 overall GPA for undergraduate and graduate students.
- Maintain minimum of a 3.5 GPA in specific courses tutored.
- Possess strong communication skills and the ability to relate to students of diverse academic backgrounds.
- Show commitment to AEC, University of South Carolina, Southeastern Conference, and NCAA standards.

Subject Tutor Hiring Procedures

All hiring is done by the Tutor Coordinator.
The hiring procedure is as follows:

Step 1: Completion and submission of tutor application, including a copy of an unofficial transcript (students) or resume (community members).

Step 2: Interview with the Tutor Coordinator.

Step 3: Completion and submission of two recommendation forms completed by academic or professional references. Submission of a headshot photo to the Enrichment Services Assistant for the tutor's GradesFirst profile.

Step 4: Completion of all hiring forms and approval from the Payroll office and Graduate School or the International Office (if applicable). Please note that approval may not be granted to dual employees.

Step 5: Candidates will be given an orientation where standards will be verbally stated. A quiz will be administered after the orientation measuring each tutor's comprehension of the stated material.

Step 6: Tutors who do not already have a Carolina ID Card will need to obtain one from the Carolina Card Office located in the basement of the Russell House located on Green Street. Each student/faculty/staff member is provided one complimentary Carolina Card. Replacements can be obtained for a $35 fee. Non-student employees should verify that their hiring paperwork has been processed before obtaining a Carolina Card by successfully logging into VIP. All employees should bring a driver's license, passport, OR military ID with them to verify their identity when requesting a Carolina Card.

Subject Tutor Characteristics, Duties, and Responsibilities

- Understand and effectively communicate subject matter to students.
- Maintain a copy of the course syllabus for each assigned student.
- Assist the student-athlete in accomplishing his or her weekly objectives as it pertains to the tutor's subject area.
- Provide feedback to advisors via in-person conversations, emails, phone calls, and session reports on GradesFirst.
- Provide motivation and study skills assistance.
- Assess academic needs in the tutor's subject area of expertise.
- Maintain accurate records of interaction with assigned student-athletes.
- Work in cooperation with the AEC staff.
- Attend and actively participate in required training sessions.
- Act professionally at all times.
- Maintain knowledge of USC's academic policies and requirements.
- Maintain knowledge of NCAA, SEC and USC policies, rules and regulations.
- Commit to the duties of tutoring.
- PROPER CONDUCT, DRESS, TIMELINESS AND PREPAREDNESS ARE REQUIRED AT ALL TIMES.

Subject Tutor Sessions

- Tutor sessions are scheduled in GradesFirst. Once sessions are scheduled, GradesFirst sends an automated email to the tutor and student, notifying them of the scheduled dates and times of all sessions. Tutors must abide by this schedule.
- Tutor sessions my only occur in approved locations during approved hours.
- Tutor sessions must end promptly upon closing time.
- No session can last longer than two hours without prior approval.
- Tutor sessions cannot be modified or cancelled without the approval of the student-athlete's athletic academic advisor.
- Tutors and student-athletes are not permitted to contact each other outside of scheduled sessions. If a tutor must communicate with a student-athlete, all communication must go through the student's athletic academic advisor.

- Tutors are not guaranteed any minimum number of hours or appointments. Tutor appointments are filled based on need and availability.
- Tutors are paid per session (time worked) and not by the number of students in a session.

Confidentiality

Tutors are exposed to information that is confidential in nature throughout their time with the AEC. Trust is an essential element in the tutoring relationship and all tutors are expected to respect the privacy of the student-athletes. Under no circumstances should a tutor discuss student-athlete information provided to them within their role as a tutor, or any information encountered over the course of the semester regarding course grades or academic standing, with anyone other than the pertinent student-athlete or full-time AEC staff members.

Upon appointment as a subject tutor with the AEC, tutors are required to sign a Confidentiality Agreement. By signing this document, tutors affirm their adherence to all policies and procedures enumerated or referred to in this manual. Tutors also acknowledge any willful failure to follow these policies may result in termination of employment.

Communication

Communication is essential to any position, but especially when working as a team. Communicating with each student's athletic academic advisor is necessary to maintain a comprehensive approach to student-athlete academic support. This communication can take the form of phone calls and face-to-face meetings, but most importantly through completing the tutor session reports.

Tutors are encouraged to maintain good communication with the student-athletes during each session. It is important to assess the student's needs and address them as the tutor is able. Make sure to involve the student-athlete in his or her academic experience by asking for an evaluation of the teaching methods incorporated into each session. In general, the student-athlete is the best judge of his or her learning style; it is important to make an effort to tailor the teaching methods used in each session accordingly.

If a student-athlete needs help in an area in which the assigned tutor is not proficient, the tutor should notify the student's athletic academic advisor or the Tutor Coordinator to arrange for help in that area.

If the tutor thinks it would be beneficial for someone to contact the student-athlete's instructor, please inform the Tutor Coordinator or the student's athletic academic advisor. Tutors may not contact a student-athlete's instructor.

To facilitate open communication among all members of the Tutor Program, remember to contact the Tutor Coordinator with any problems or concerns regarding your specific tutor sessions.

In addition to providing informal feedback during a tutor session, it is required that subject tutors fill out the GradesFirst session report within three hours of the end of each session.

General Information & Expectations

- Serve as a role model for the student-athlete(s) in approaching personal academic work. Be a few minutes early for all appointments and ensure the appointment is constructive. Do not allow a student-athlete to wander around, interrupt another study session, engage in non-academic activity, or end the session because they report having no work to do. Go into every session with a plan, and these situations can be avoided.
- Tutor appointments are not an alternative to class attendance or the use of professors' office hours. Encourage the student-athlete(s) to attend every class on time, be attentive and work hard for the duration of the class period, and maintain frequent contact with their professor.
- Be directive. Get a copy of the student-athlete's course syllabus. Do not be afraid to require the student-athlete to have completed a certain amount of work by the next session. Make them show their written work. Suggest additional appointments if necessary.
- Hold the student-athlete accountable for his or her actions. Report all problems to the student-athlete's athletic academic advisor promptly.
- Be patient in both the student-athlete's ability to understand course material and their overall academic ability.
- Make the relationship as friendly as possible while trying to maintain as professional an atmosphere as possible.
- Tutors and student-athletes are expected to abide by the Carolinian Creed at all times. Under no circumstance should a tutor complete any academic work for a student-athlete, including typing papers. Doing so is grounds for immediate dismissal.
- Do not loan personal items to a student-athlete. Also, do not provide an "extra benefit" such as flash drives, regular meals, pens, pencils, etc. A simple way to eliminate any question on an "extra benefit" is to ask, "am I able and willing to provide this to all 25,000+ students on campus?" The above are violations of NCAA policy. Any questions regarding extra benefits or compliance should be directed to the Tutor Coordinator or Compliance Office for clarification.
- Some tutors serve as teaching assistants. Tutors should not tutor a student-athlete if they are the instructor for the student-athlete's course section. For example, if the tutor is teaching SOCY 101 section 001, and a student-athlete is enrolled in this section of the course, the tutor may NOT tutor this student for SOCY 101 section 001. Tutors in this situation should speak with their department chair for further clarification.

Enrichment Services Policies & Procedures

Tutor Orientation

- Tutors must attend an orientation meeting at which time they will be apprised of all University of South Carolina, Southeastern Conference and NCAA rules and regulations pertaining to working with student-athletes.
- Orientation must be completed each year for all new and returning tutors. Tutors will not receive tutor appointments until the tutor has successfully completed orientation.
- Tutors will be compensated for orientation at the designated hourly rate.

Tutor Training Requirements

- In addition to Orientation, Tutors must complete training requirements each semester.
    - Fall semester: Compliance check and two training sessions.
    - Spring semester: Compliance check and one training session.
        - Tutors hired in the spring semester that are eligible to tutor English courses, must complete the writing training in addition to the spring semester training requirements listed above.
- Training times will be announced at the beginning of each semester (see p. 5). The Enrichment Services staff is aware that many tutors have busy schedules, which is why mandatory training sessions are offered on various days and at multiple times.
- Failure to proactively communicate any conflicts that could prevent a tutor from attending the required number of training sessions each semester may result in termination. Communication after an unexcused absence at a training session is not acceptable.

Tutor Communication

- Tutors are responsible for checking email, GradesFirst, and Blackboard regularly. These are the primary methods in which the Enrichment Services Staff will communicate any important announcements or other information relevant to tutors within the AEC.
- Tutor sessions will be scheduled in advance through GradesFirst. Once sessions are scheduled, GradesFirst will send an automated email to the tutor and student, notifying them of the scheduled dates and times of all sessions. This email serves as official notification to the tutor that they have been matched with a student. Tutors must abide by this schedule and notify the Tutor Coordinator immediately if there is a conflict.
- Tutor session times may not be changed or cancelled without prior approval of the appropriate athletic academic advisor.
- Tutors are required to give notification to the athletic academic advisor AND Tutor Coordinator, no later than 5pm the day before, if cancellation of a session is necessary (see p. 17 Tutor Absences and Cancellations).
    - Habitual cancellations will result in termination

Blackboard

Various resources and announcements will be posted on Blackboard throughout the semester. Some of the resources include tips for effective tutoring while others will address commonly encountered issues. The Compliance Check will be administered on Blackboard each semester and important announcements may be posted on Blackboard as well. Tutors are expected to check Blackboard frequently and refer to the provided resources.

Each tutor's Blackboard username and password are the same as his or her USC network username and password. The USC network username and password combination controls login access to most USC college or departmental networks, campus computer labs, as well as the Blackboard system, University email and UTS Help system.

To obtain a USC network username and password, please follow these instructions:

- Login to VIP (https://vip.sc.edu).
- Click on the Technology link.
- Click on "Show Me Network Username." The assigned USC Network Username will be displayed and the user will be prompted to choose a password. The password must be typed twice in order to verify the password selection.
- Click on the SET PASSWORD button to set a new password. Allow a few minutes to pass before attempting to login to Blackboard again.

Password Restrictions

- Passwords are limited to 8-14 characters.
- Each password must be at least eight characters but not more than fourteen characters, cannot contain the username, and must meet at least three of the following:
    - One or more lowercase alphabetic characters (a-z)
    - One or more uppercase alphabetic characters (A-Z)
    - One or more numeric characters (0-9)
    - One or more special characters (!@#$%^&*-+= etc)

No Contact Policy

Tutors are expected to maintain a professional relationship with each student-athlete. To assist in maintaining this professionalism, tutors are not permitted to contact student-athletes outside of scheduled sessions. Tutors and student-athletes are not permitted to exchange phone numbers or email addresses, and are not permitted to call, text, or email each other. Tutors and student-athletes may not engage in communication on Facebook, Twitter, or in person outside of the AEC. This applies to all student-athletes, not merely the tutees presently assigned to the tutor. Communication must go through the student-athlete's advisor or the Tutor Coordinator. This is a zero tolerance policy. Violation of this policy is cause for immediate termination.

Tutors who have prior relationships with any student-athletes are expected to proactively report these relationships directly to the Tutor Coordinator in writing. Tutors will not be assigned to these students.

Tutor Sessions

- Tutor sessions are scheduled in GradesFirst. Once sessions are scheduled, GradesFirst sends an automated email to the tutor and student, notifying them of the scheduled dates and times of all sessions. Tutors must abide by this schedule.
- Tutors will arrive at least 5 minutes prior to the session.

    - Each tutor should sign in on the log located at the front desk of the AEC when arriving for a tutor appointment.
    - After signing in, pick up an Enrichment Services badge to wear while present in the AEC. The badge should be visible on the tutor the entire time the tutor is present at the AEC.
    - Then proceed to the designated meeting place for the tutor appointment.
- If an AEC staff member is assigned to the designated meeting place, it is recommended that tutors check-in with the staff member to ensure the tutor and the student connect.
    - Ex. If the meeting place is at the second floor front desk, check-in with the Enrichment Services Assistant.
    - Ex. If the meeting place is outside the academic advisor's office, check-in with the advisor.
- After the appointment, the tutor should complete the GradesFirst Session report no later than three hours after the conclusion of the appointment.
- The tutor should sign out in the log at the front desk of the AEC and return the badge to the front desk of the AEC.

Group Sessions

- Group sessions are not common, but do occur.
- If a tutor is matched with more than one student in a session and the group becomes unmanageable, the tutor should notify the appropriate athletic academic advisor and the Tutor Coordinator.
- If a tutor is matched with more than one student and the tutor believes that the group session is not beneficial for all of the student-athletes involved, the tutor should notify the appropriate athletic academic advisor and the Tutor Coordinator.
- GradesFirst Session Reports
    - A report is generated for each student in a group tutoring session. If all students attend, a report should be filed for each individual student.
    - If no one attends a group session, then the tutor should file a no show report in GradesFirst for each absent student.
    - If one student in the group fails to show up for a scheduled session, conduct the session as normal and submit a GradesFirst session report for the student(s) in attendance. In addition, submit a no show report for the student who did not show up for a scheduled session.
        - Although the tutor will not be paid for the no show (since the appointment went on as scheduled), it is important that the AEC staff is notified of all student no-shows to hold everyone accountable to the same standards.

Skype Sessions

Beginning in the fall 2012 term, student-athletes can request a tutoring session via Skype if they are traveling with their team and are unable to attend a tutor appointment. All Skype tutoring requests will go through the advisor and Enrichment Services as do all regular tutor requests. Tutors will be notified if they have been requested for a Skype session and further information will be provided to the tutor at that time, including reference materials to assist the tutor in conducting the session. All Enrichment Services policies apply to Skype tutoring sessions unless the tutor is explicitly informed differently.

Locations

Tutor sessions take place in approved locations, during approved times:

- Dodie Anderson Academic Enrichment Center
  - Sunday 5-10pm
  - Monday-Thursday 8am-10pm
  - Friday 8am-5pm
- Thomas Cooper Library, during library hours of operation with prior approval from an AEC staff member.
- Tutors must receive prior approval from the Tutor Coordinator for permission to conduct any session outside of the approved locations and times.

Do not conduct tutor appointments outside scheduled times and locations without prior approval from the Tutor Coordinator

Length of Tutor Sessions

Tutoring sessions are limited to two hours each unless the student-athlete's advisor approves a longer period of time.

- The student-athlete must request approval to extend the session(s) beyond the two hour limit by communicating the request and reason for the request to his/her advisor; or
- The tutor may request an extension of the session(s) by contacting the student's academic advisor
- Additional time may be approved at the discretion of the advisor.
- Session extensions may be approved for a single session or for multiple sessions

Changes to Tutor Appointments

- The appropriate academic advisor or the Tutor Coordinator must approve any appointment changes. Students may not cancel or change appointment times.
- Tutor session times may not be changed or cancelled without prior approval of the appropriate Academic Advisor.
- Changes to appointments can be communicated in one or more of the following ways:
  - In person by the academic advisor
  - Via email by the academic advisor, Tutor Coordinator, or Enrichment Services Assistant
  - Via phone by the academic advisor, Tutor Coordinator, or Enrichment Services Assistant
- Tutors should always refer to their personal GradesFirst calendar or check with an AEC staff member if ever unsure of scheduled tutor appointment times.

Helping Students with Writing

The purpose of this policy is to protect student-athletes, tutors, and the University of South Carolina from accusations of academic fraud. Helping students with writing carries special risks for all concerned. Tutors should be experts in their subject areas, but are not expected to be trained writing instructors. The writing lab is an invaluable resource for help with writing skills. Anyone working with a student on a writing assignment should adhere to the following guidelines:

- As a general rule, tutors of non-English or writing subject matter should not help student-athletes with papers or writing assignments. Instead refer them to an English or writing tutor.
- Do not edit for writing. Tutors may make suggestions based on subject-specific matters, such as concept clarity, vocabulary, etc.
- Do not write on the student's paper.
- As much as possible, students should take their own notes on the feedback provided by a tutor.
- Avoid providing whole sentences and phrases.
- Use similar principals when helping a student use the computer. If, in the course of working with a student on subject matter issues, the student needs special help for that class, such as setting up spreadsheets, inserting a table, etc., the tutor may sit next to the student to instruct. Under no circumstances should the tutor perform these operations.

Textbook Requests

Tutors may find it helpful to have a copy of the student's textbook in order to prepare for tutor sessions. Tutors can request a textbook through the Tutor Coordinator using the following procedure:

- Obtain the textbook information during the first session with the student (title, author, edition, etc.). This information is usually located on the student's syllabus.
- Email the textbook information to the Tutor Coordinator in order to request the book.
- The Tutor Coordinator will obtain the textbook by locating it in the AEC book supply room or ordering it from the bookstore.
- The tutor will be notified by the Tutor Coordinator once the book has been obtained in order to schedule a time for the tutor to pick up the book.
- All textbooks are due back at the end of each semester by 5pm on the last day of final exams to the Tutor Coordinator.

Parking & Transportation

All tutors are encouraged to use the Carolina Shuttle whenever possible. Tutors should explore their parking options well in advance of their first appointment. The Enrichment Services staff realizes that the parking situation is not ideal. Please plan ahead and do not let parking cause tardiness to tutor appointments. For the most thorough and accurate information regarding on-campus parking, please visit the Parking Services website: http://www.sc.edu/vmps/park.html.

Shuttle Transportation

All employees are encouraged to use the Carolina Shuttle whenever possible. The Shuttle is free for all students, faculty and staff. The Green Shuttle route stops right out front of the AEC. The Yellow Shuttle route stops one block away from the AEC at Marion and Whaley. Please consider taking the Shuttle. Go to this website for maps, times and live information:
http://www.sc.edu/vmps/shuttle.html

Additionally, the Alpha Phi Omega (APO) Escort Service is available after 8pm. This service makes night travel safer by allowing students, faculty and staff to request a van to pick them up and drop them off at any location on campus. This service can be requested by calling 777-DUCK (3825). If APO is unavailable, call 777-3351. For more information: http://www.sc.edu/vmps/shuttle.html

Student Employee Parking

All tutors who are students at the University of South Carolina and possess a decal to park anywhere on campus, may park in the Athletic Village Parking Garage adjacent to the Dodie. Tutors must park on floors 3-5.

Students who do not have a permit should take the Carolina Shuttle or explore free parking options. During the day, those without parking permits may parallel park on Marion Street with the flow of traffic on a first-come-first-serve basis for no charge. There is also some free parallel parking along Sumter Street as well. After 5pm, all employees can park in Athletic Village Parking Garage for no charge and without a permit.

Non-student Employee Parking

Faculty and staff (non-student employees) may choose to purchase a parking permit for the Athletic Village Garage adjacent to the Dodie for $55 per month from Parking Services, located at 1501 Pendleton Street on the ground level of the Pendleton Garage.

Non-student employees may also request a Z parking decal free of charge through Parking Services located at 1501 Pendleton Street on the ground level of the Pendleton Garage. Proof of employment (Carolina Card) is required in order to obtain this permit. If newly hired, request a letter from the Tutor Coordinator to verify employment and obtain the Z permit. Z permits allow the permit holder to park in lots designated as "Any Decal Parking" (AD) or "Faculty/Staff assigned" (FS). There are two AD lots, located about 1-2 blocks away from the AEC behind Bates and Benson. After 2pm and on the weekends, Z permit holders may park in any lot designated as a faculty/staff lot.

Employees who choose not to obtain a permit can explore non-permit parking options. During the day, those without parking permits may parallel park on Marion Street with the flow of traffic on a first-come-first-serve basis for no charge. There is some free parallel parking along Sumter Street as well. After 5pm, all employees can park in the Athletic Village Parking Garage for no charge and without a permit.

Student-Athlete Expectations

Student-athletes are expected to be on time for each tutoring session. In keeping with the University policy, tutors should wait at least 10 minutes for the student-athlete to arrive. Student-athletes are responsible for bringing all necessary materials and textbooks with them to their tutoring sessions. They are expected to be prepared for their sessions by working through the material and completing any reading assignments before meeting their tutor. At no time should a student-athlete construe a tutoring session as a substitute for class attendance, or as the only time spent on studying outside of the classroom.

Student-Athlete Tutor Session No Shows

- Tutors will be compensated for 30 minutes (0.5 hours) for any session missed by a student-athlete or cancelled without notifying the tutor at least five hours prior to the scheduled start of the appointment. If the session is scheduled for more than one hour of meeting time, the tutor will still only be paid for the first half-hour.
- Tutors will wait at least ten minutes for the student-athlete to arrive before completing a no-show session report on GradesFirst. The athletic academic advisor should be made aware of the no show immediately via phone or email. It is imperative to communicate this situation immediately with the AEC staff, so that is can be addressed in a manner to prevent no shows from becoming a consistent problem. After submitting the report and notifying the advisor, the tutor may leave.
- The following criteria constitute the submission of a student-athlete no show:
    - The student-athlete arrives more than 10 minutes late to a session.
    - The student-athlete arrives at a session completely unprepared (no books, notes, materials, etc.).
    - The student-athlete leaves the session without permission from the tutor and academic advisor.
    - Tutor receives notification of a cancellation less than five hours prior to the scheduled start of the session.
    - The student-athlete misses the session without giving any notice at all.
- If a student arrives at the session and informs the tutor that he or she has nothing to work on, the student is not allowed to leave without permission from his or her athletic academic advisor or the advisor's assistant (graduate assistant/intern).
    - First, the tutor should always have a conversation with the student to determine why he or she is saying that there is nothing to work on. Go through the student's objective sheet, syllabi, blackboard, etc.
    - If the student is still insistent that he or she has nothing to work on, the tutor should instruct the student that he or she cannot leave without permission and if he or she still chooses to leave it will be counted as a no show.
    - If the tutor has informed the student of the tutor's intention to file a no show report and the student decides to leave anyway, the tutor does not need to do anything else except submit the no show report as usual.
    - If the student does not leave, try to find anything to work on. Again, look over the objective sheet, syllabi, blackboard, etc. There is almost always reading or notes that can be covered. If the tutor remembers material covered in the previous session, quiz the student on that.
    - If there is absolutely nothing to do because the student is not prepared, find the student's advisor and let him or her know the student will be marked as a no show because the student is not prepared.
    - If the tutor and student are able to find something to work on, conduct the session as usual.
- If the tutor meets with a student and determines that he or she has completed all the work necessary for that session, the TUTOR is allowed to end the session. All sessions ending early must be determined by the student's athletic academic advisor or tutor. If the tutor decides that a student can leave, the tutor is paid ONLY for the time the tutor and student met. Tutors are not compensated for the full time of the session. Even if a tutor meets with a student for 10 minutes and the tutor decides that is all that is necessary for the session, the tutor will only be paid for those 10 minutes. This is true for any session for which the above policy is not followed.

- If a tutor is going to submit a no show for a student because the student wants to leave early, the tutor must always verbally inform the student that of the intention to file the no show report.
- No Shows must be submitted within 3 hours of scheduled sessions.
- Repeated late submission of No Shows may result in termination.

Student-athletes are held accountable for "No Shows," and there are consequences for them. Please do NOT report a "No Show" for the following reasons:

- A rescheduled or canceled session with prior approval of the advisor and appropriate notice to the tutor (more than five hours in advance of the original appointment).
- An appointment that was cancelled with appropriate notice, but never removed from GradesFirst.
- A short appointment that took place, but the tutor decided to end the appointment early.
- A shortened appointment that ended early where the tutor did not verbally inform the student that his or her departure would result in a no show.

Anytime a no show report is filed when the student did arrive at the session, the tutor must verbalize to the student and the advisor the intention to file a no show report.

Group Session No Shows

- If no one attends a group session, then the tutor should file a no show report in GradesFirst for each absent student.
- If one student in the group fails to show up for a scheduled session, conduct the session as normal and submit a GradesFirst session report for the student(s) in attendance. In addition, submit a no show report for the student who did not show up for a scheduled session.
    - Although the tutor will not be paid for the no show (since the appointment went on as scheduled), it is important that the AEC staff is notified of all student no-shows to hold everyone accountable to the same standards.

Tutor Absences and Cancellations

Consistency is a crucial part of establishing rapport with assigned students. It is important to keep any absences to a minimum and to communicate those absences to both the athletic academic advisor and Tutor Coordinator in a timely manner.

Excused Absences

- Tutors should notify the student's academic advisor and the Tutor Coordinator as soon the tutor knows he or she will need to miss or reschedule a session. This allows all parties involved the time to plan accordingly whether that includes rescheduling the session with the tutor or finding another tutor to fill in
- As a minimum, tutors are required to give notification to the student's academic advisor and the Tutor Coordinator, no later than 5pm the day before a necessary cancellation.

- If an emergency arises and the tutor is unable to attend a session, contact the appropriate athletic academic advisor AND the Tutor Coordinator or Enrichment Services Assistant immediately by phone and then email.

Unexcused Tutor Absences

- Arriving more than 10 minutes late to the session.
- Canceling the session without notifying the athletic academic advisor AND Tutor Coordinator by 5pm the day prior to the session.
- Missing the session without giving any notice at all.
- Consequences
    - First Unexcused Absence: absence is recorded and the tutor is given a written warning.
    - Second Unexcused Absence: absence results in termination.

Note that repeated absences, excused or not, may result in termination or affect whether or not a tutor is rehired the following semester.

Subject Tutor & Program Evaluation

To ensure that competent subject tutors are retained, and to provide feedback leading to improved services, regular evaluation of subject tutors, by staff and student-athletes should be anticipated. Likewise, the subject tutors will have the opportunity to evaluate their experiences each semester.

- Session Observations – Each tutor will be observed and evaluated while conducting a session. This will occur at least once per academic year. See the Tutor Coordinator regarding specific evaluation criteria.
- Student-Athlete Evaluations – Student-athletes will be asked to evaluate their tutors once per semester. See the Tutor Coordinator regarding specific evaluation criteria.
- Program Evaluations – Tutors and mentors will be asked to evaluate the Enrichment Services Program at the end of each semester. See the Tutor Coordinator regarding specific evaluation criteria.

Tutors are appointed each semester. Tutoring demands vary each semester and a decline in the number of students taking courses in a tutor's particular academic area(s) can result in a reduction in tutoring hours.

Reasons for Dismissal

Dismissal of a subject tutor may be based on any of the following reasons:

- Academic misconduct
- Failure to maintain confidentiality
- Failure to maintain the highest standards of professionalism
- Failure to uphold the responsibilities and policies stated in this manual
- Habitual cancellations of sessions
- Repeated late submissions of GradesFirst Session Reports or No Shows
- Repeated late submissions of GradesFirst timesheets or ITAMS
- Unethical behavior that calls unfavorable attention to the tutor as a representative of the AEC

- Inaccurate record keeping; i.e. misrepresentation of time spent in tutor sessions or not turning in reporting forms
- Staff evaluation and/or recommendation
- Violations of University, Athletics Department, Southeastern Conference or NCAA rules
- Contacting a student-athlete outside of a scheduled session

Actions that will result in Immediate Termination:

- Contact with a student-athlete outside of a scheduled session
- Doing work for the student
- Violating rules and regulations of the NCAA, SEC, or University of South Carolina
- Repeated cancellations or tardiness without prior notice
- Contacting the instructors of the students assigned to the tutor
- Personal or dual relationships with the student-athlete assigned to the tutor without prior consent or knowledge of the Tutor Coordinator
- Any violation of confidentiality, professionalism, or academic integrity policies, per the signed agreements
- Falsifying a timesheet and/or purposefully neglecting reporting procedures

If an incident is not severe enough for an immediate dismissal, the following steps will be applied.

- First Offense: Tutors will be issued a written reprimand that will be recorded in their file.
- Second Offense: The tutor is recommended for termination; dismissal from the tutoring program will likely result.

In the event a tutor decides to quit, the tutor should give ample notification, preferably two weeks. If a tutor quits without giving two weeks' notice, the Enrichment Services staff will not be able to provide the tutor with a favorable recommendation.

Conditions for Rehire

Should a tutor remain in good standing throughout the semester and the tutor's expertise is still needed by the AEC, the tutor will be invited to return the following semester. The following constitutes good standing:

- Compliance with all policies and procedures outlined in this manual.
- Successful and timely completion of all training requirements.
- Timely and accurate submission of all ITAMS, GradesFirst information, and timesheets.
- Appropriate and respectful communication with all AEC staff members.
- Proper conduct during sessions.
- Proven commitment to the program's mission and goals.
- Positive evaluations by the AEC staff.

Each semester returning tutors must complete various steps to prepare for the upcoming semester:

- Notify the Tutor Coordinator of the tutor's intention to return as a tutor with the AEC.
- Submit an updated unofficial transcript to the Tutor Coordinator in order to verify eligibility for tutoring.

- Update tutoring courses on GradesFirst based on the previous academic semester.
- Submit availability for the upcoming semester on GradesFirst.
- Attend orientation (fall semester only).

Paperwork

Tutors are required to complete and process the following "paperwork":

- GradesFirst availability
- GradesFirst list of courses
- GradesFirst session reports
- GradesFirst timesheet
- ITAMS entries and approval
- Program evaluation survey at the end of each semester

GradesFirst Availability

Tutors must enter their availability for the entire semester prior to the start of each semester. Tutors should keep in mind the availability entered into GradesFirst should be reflective of their availability for the entire semester as most appointments are scheduled as repeating appointments. A tutor's availability should not fluctuate from week to week.

If a tutor's availability changes midway through the semester, the tutor should update their availability on GradesFirst. If the change in availability affects the tutor's previously scheduled tutor appointments, the tutor should also communicate this change in availability to the appropriate athletic academic advisor(s) and the Tutor Coordinator, so appointments can be cancelled or rescheduled.

To enter availability into GradesFirst:

- Login to GradesFirst using the assigned login and password.
- Click on the "Tutor Settings" tab on the homepage.
- Tutors should enter all days and times they are available to take appointments for the whole semester under the header "Times Available." Click on "Add Time." Tutors should be as liberal as possible to increase their chances of being matched with students.
- Sessions may occur during the normal operating hours of the Dodie Anderson Academic Enrichment Center which are:
    - Fall and Spring Semesters
        - Sunday 5-10pm
        - Monday-Thursday 8am-10pm
        - Friday 8am-5pm
        - Closed Saturday
    - May and Summer Sessions
        - Monday-Friday 8am-5pm
        - Closed Saturday and Sunday
- Do not adjust the time period when entering availability. The time period should default to the current semester—do not pick a different option.
- Tutors do not need to indicate a facility—there is only one option: the Dodie.
- Tutors can indicate a limit on the number of hours they would like to work. Enter that limit in the "Tutor's Preferred Hours" box (at the bottom of the screen). Tutors who have a strict limit on the number of hours they can work due to another job or internship on campus, must enter their limit in this box on their GradesFirst profile. Be sure to click "Save Tutor Settings" when finished.

GradesFirst List of Courses

Before a tutor can be matched with a student, the tutor needs to indicate which courses he or she is able to tutor on his or her profile in GradesFirst. GradesFirst can be accessed at the following website: https://gamecocksonline.gradesfirst.com/

- Login to GradesFirst using the assigned login and password.
- Click on the "Tutor Settings" tab on the homepage.
- Tutors should enter the courses they are qualified to tutor under the header "Courses Available to Teach." Select "Add Course."
    - Graduate student and community members may need to access the online USC course catalog via the sc.edu website in order to access course descriptions and appropriately assess which courses they are qualified to tutor.
    - Undergraduate students at USC must earn a B+ or higher in each course and feel comfortable with the material in order to add it to their profile.
- Tutors should enter any relevant comments to go along with the courses on their profile.
    - Ex. It is helpful to know if a tutor is qualified to tutor a book-based or computer-based PHIL110 Logic course.
    - Ex. It can be helpful to know if a course is in a tutor's major field of study or he or she was previously an SI leader.
    - Any information that may be helpful can be included in the comments section with each course.

GradesFirst Session Reports

Following each session, the tutor must complete an ONLINE evaluation of the session that documents the work performed during the session. GradesFirst session reports are due within three hours of each appointment. It is understandable that tutors may have several back to back appointments, class, or another job that may occasionally prevent the tutor from completing a report within the three-hour timeframe. If a tutor is unable to complete a report within three hours, he/she must e-mail the Enrichment Services Assistant with an explanation. Failure to submit reports on time may result in a delay in payment. Repeated failure to complete reports fully and in a timely fashion may result termination.

GradesFirst Session reports are important for academic advisors to track the progress of their students. They serve several purposes and should be completed with care. Reports are reviewed regularly by the academic advisor to monitor the student-athlete's progress in his or her class, as well as the student's behavior and conduct in tutor sessions. Therefore, tutors should fill out the form in its entirety.

Tutors should indicate any information they feel is pertinent regarding the general status of the student-athlete in their course. Be descriptive. If the student-athlete is having a problem with any aspect of a course or the material presented, this evaluation provides a format by which this situation may be communicated to the Tutor Coordinator and the student-athlete's athletic academic advisor. If the student-athlete is having a difficult time with particular material, or if he or she is not taking adequate responsibility for his or her academic success, this should be noted on the tutor reports and reported to the academic advisor in person or via email.

Throughout the semester the athletic academic advisors complete reports detailing the progress of their student-athletes. Included in these reports is pertinent information about the tutor sessions such as timeliness, grades, upcoming assignments, and attitudes. The tutor session reports are vital. They are the most essential part of the tutor's responsibility to communicate with the AEC staff. The tutors utilized most often are those who submit consistent and timely reports.

Session Reports can be accessed at https://gamecocksonline.gradesfirst.com/

GradesFirst Timesheets

GradesFirst timesheets can be accessed at https://gamecocksonline.gradesfirst.com/
Timesheets are due by Sunday at midnight each week. See the Payroll section for step-by-step instructions on how to correctly complete GradesFirst timesheets each week (begins on page 24).

ITAMS Entries & Approvals

ITAMS can be accessed at https://itams.csd.sc.edu/ It is recommended that tutors bookmark this site. Hours must be entered into ITAMS by Sunday at midnight every week. Tutors are allowed to add 15 minutes (0.25 hours) of preparation time onto their ITAMS timesheet for each week worked. This addition is for each week, not each appointment. Preparation time cannot be added to a week in which a tutor did not have any appointments scheduled. Please see the Payroll section for step-by-step instructions on how to correctly complete ITAMS entries each week.

Payroll (both GradesFirst Payroll and ITAMS) is due every Sunday by midnight. Submitting late timesheets will delay the processing of paychecks and could result in the termination of employment. There is a three strike policy in place for late timesheets. After the third late timesheet, tutors will be required to meet with the Tutor Coordinator to determine an appropriate course of action.

Program Evaluations

Program evaluations are usually accessible through Survey Monkey toward the end of each semester. Tutors will be notified by the Tutor Coordinator via email once the evaluation is available. Tutors are usually given about two weeks to complete the anonymous evaluation. Please take the time to provide thoughtful feedback on the evaluation as it helps the Enrichment Services staff to continue to improve the Enrichment Services Program. This is the only formal evaluation, but feedback from tutors is welcome throughout the semester.

Payroll

There are three steps to the payroll procedure for tutors and all three must be completed ON TIME and accurately each week to receive payment for work.

1. Complete all session reports within three hours of the session. Only sessions with a completed session report will show up on the GradesFirst timesheet for payment.
2. Submit the GradesFirst timesheet by Sunday at midnight each week.
3. Submit the ITAMS timesheet by Sunday at midnight each week

Below are step-by-step instructions, with photo examples, as a guide through the process.

STEP 1—Complete GradesFirst session reports

Under the TUTOR INFO tab--Select the appropriate appointment in order to file a report.

Complete the report and save. Remember to check and double check everything because once the report is submitted, tutors cannot go back in and edit reports. If a reporting error needs to be corrected, email aeces@mailbox.sc.edu, so the Enrichment Services Assistant can make the appropriate changes for you.

STEP 2—Submit GradesFirst timesheet by SUNDAY AT MIDNIGHT

Click on the PAYROLL tab on the GradesFirst homepage. Pay periods that need to be submitted are located at the top and pay periods that have already submitted are located below. Select the appropriate pay period(s), double check that the hours are correct, and then click SUBMIT PAY PERIOD.

GradesFirst timesheets are approved on Monday morning by the Enrichment Services Assistant. The approved timesheets are then submitted to the Payroll Coordinator, Ros Isaac, to confirm all ITAMS entries. Without a GradesFirst timesheet, ITAMS entries will NOT be approved and payment will be delayed.

STEP 3—Complete ITAMS by SUNDAY AT MIDNIGHT

Student Employees MUST have a VIP Employee PIN (not a student PIN) to access ITAMS.

- Tutors who have never used their VIP employee account will need to access VIP via the internet at http://VIP.SC.EDU to login and change their password from the default setting. The default password setting is birth month and day (MMDD). Remember to allow 24 hours before attempting to use the new or reset password to sign into ITAMS. Tutors should contact Human Resources at 777-3111 if they forget their VIP employee password.
- New employees will not be able to log into VIP or ITAMS immediately; it will take about 2 weeks for Human Resources to process hiring paperwork and add new employees in the system.

Enter the website for ITAMS as https://itams.csd.sc.edu/. It is recommended that tutors bookmark this site as it is needed to submit hours weekly. To login to ITAMS, tutors should enter their social security number and employee PIN.

Use the drop down menu "Report period ending" to select the appropriate week to enter hours worked. Then click on "AddTimeCde."

Please notice that pay periods on ITAMS (and GradesFirst) run from SUNDAY TO SATURDAY. When entering ITAMS hours for the week on a Sunday, note that the default date in the box will be the current week (the week coming up) and not the previous week, which is the correct week. PLEASE DOUBLE CHECK THAT HOURS ARE ENTERED IN THE CORRECT WEEK!

Enter hours worked appropriately to coincide with the correct dates. Hours in ITAMS need to be totaled for each day and then the total rounded to the nearest .25. On the top right of the screen there is a "SAVE" box. Once the hours have been entered, be sure to save them. If the "SAVE" box is not clicked, hours entered will be lost. Hours cannot be retroactively added without the help of an administrator, so be certain the hours are correct before hitting SAVE.

When a week's work is complete, the tutor may add 15 minutes (.25) to any day for paperwork. This 15 minutes is only added once per week (not per session) for any week in which the tutor worked. Remember to enter in No-Shows for 30 minutes (.5) of work time.

The last step is to "Send for Approval" to Rosalind Isaac.

Tutors may check back later in the week to see if their hours were approved.

Payroll Policies

GradesFirst session reports are due within three hours of each appointment. It is understandable that tutors may have several back to back appointments, class, or another job that may occasionally prevent the tutor from completing a report within the three-hour timeframe. If a tutor is unable to complete a report within three hours, he/she must e-mail the Enrichment Services Assistant with an explanation. Session reports are important for academic advisors to track the progress of their students, so submitting them in a timely manner is imperative. Repeatedly submitting late reports could result in the termination of employment.

Payroll (both GradesFirst Payroll and ITAMS) is due every Sunday by midnight. Submitting late timesheets will delay the processing of paychecks and could result in the termination of employment. There is a three strike policy in place for late time sheets. After the third late timesheet, tutors will be required to meet with the Tutor Coordinator to determine an appropriate course of action.

Intentionally misrepresenting the number of hours worked is grounds for immediate dismissal. If a session report is not on file, the tutor will not be paid for the session in question.

Tutor Session Procedures

Initial Contact

- The student-athlete and the tutor will receive an automated email from GradesFirst, stating the tutor match, location, and days and times of scheduled sessions. Tutors are responsible for checking their email on a regular basis. The email from GradesFirst is considered official notification of the session. Any questions should be directed to the Tutor Coordinator or Enrichment Services Assistant.
- Tutor sessions may only occur in approved locations, during approved hours (see p. 13).
- Tutor sessions must end promptly upon closing time.
- Tutors are not required to tutor every student that is sent their way. If a tutor has taken all the appointments he/she can handle, the tutor must notify the Tutor Coordinator so that the tutor will not be assigned to any additional students.
- Sessions may last longer than scheduled if both the student and the tutor are able to stay, but no session can last longer than 2 hours without prior approval from the academic advisor or Tutor Coordinator.

First Session

- Greet and introduce self to the student.
- Confirm the schedule of sessions and set a standard meeting venue for all future appointments.
- Go over the student's course syllabus.
- Determine the student's needs for the class. Ask him/her what he/she needs from tutoring sessions to succeed in the class.
- Establish a climate of trust, mutual respect and patience. Clearly express expectations of the student and ask the student for his/her expectations.

Beginning of Each Session

- Be five minutes early for every session. Try to arrive early and prepared, allowing for traffic and parking problems.
- If the student is late, wait at least 10 minutes before completing the GradesFirst no show report.
- Start each session on a positive note, with a brief and friendly greeting.
- Always briefly review the material from the previous session with the student.
- Before beginning new material, ask the student how it was taught in class.

During Each Session

- Make sure that assistance is a two-way process. Ask a lot of open-ended questions, so that the student cannot simply give a yes or no answer.
- Keep the pencil or pen in the hand of the student. The only time the tutor should pick up a pen or pencil is to demonstrate a concept, not to solve a specific problem or to correct a paper.
- Provide positive feedback to the student. Avoid using negative language.

- When the student has difficulty with homework problems, focus on the concepts he/she is struggling with most. Inform him/her that most of the homework should be done before the session, in order to make efficient use of your time.
- Go over the student's notes with them, providing clarification and elaboration. Give them feedback and suggestions about the quality of their notes.
- Help them review for tests. Give them tips about test taking and time management, sharing examples from personal experience. If they need extra help in these areas, refer them to their academic advisor or learning specialist.
- Review the student's textbook with them. Help them with comprehension, main points and summarizing. Demonstrate for them pre-reading, skimming, annotating, and self-monitoring strategies. If they need further help in this area, refer them to their academic advisor or learning specialist.
- If the student runs out of questions for the tutor, develop questions, problems, and quizzes for them. Drill them extensively.
- If the students need help with writing, refer them to a writing tutor or the writing center. Read the writing guidelines for instruction on the limited ways tutors are allowed to help students with writing (see Helping Students with Writing on pg. 13).
- If the student is uncooperative or unprepared for a session, provide this information on the GradesFirst session report. Tutors are not expected to teach new information for the first time. If the student-athlete did not go to class or come prepared, the tutor should review material from recent sessions.
- If the tutor ever feels uncomfortable during a session or suspects academic dishonesty, end the tutoring session immediately and inform an AEC staff member.
- Do not do the student's work for them. Model techniques for the student, assist them, and encourage them to become independent learners.

After Each Session

- Give the student feedback on how the session went. Also, ask the student for feedback on ways to improve the effectiveness of the tutoring session.
- Always give the student specific tasks to complete before the next session.
- Make sure to clarify the time and place for the next appointment.
- Complete the GradesFirst Session Evaluation Form within three hours of the end of the session.
- Enter the time worked on ITAMS.
- Once a week, submit the GradesFirst and ITAMS timesheets by Sunday at midnight.

Tutoring Techniques

Summarizing

Frequently encourage the student to summarize information, which they have reviewed in their own words. This helps make the student an active learner. It also allows the tutor to accurately gauge their comprehension of new material.

Silence

Give the students ample time to answer questions. It is important that tutoring be a two-way process. Demonstrating patience will encourage the students to be confident in their responses.

Paraphrasing

Repeat the student's responses in your own words. This shows the student that the tutor understands what they are trying to say. It also improves communication and can clear up misunderstandings.

Demonstrating

Use a variety of techniques to help the students learn new concepts. Some students learn better by hands-on experience, others learn by listening, and still others learn visually, by seeing the material. Usually encompassing all three learning pathways into tutoring sessions will guarantee a basic understanding of the concepts.

Diagramming

Use the dry erase board located in the tutor room, if available, to explain new concepts. Have the students use the boards to practice problems and demonstrate their knowledge. If a board is not available, use a blank sheet of paper. The important thing is to provide the student with visual assistance and give them the ability to work through problems.

Testing

Developing short quizzes is a valuable way to reinforce learning and to evaluate mastery of a subject/concept. Use a variety of formats to prepare students for different types of tests.

Tutoring Groups

- Have students use the dry erase board to write down concepts or practice problems. Encourage the other students to give feedback to the student at the board.
- Model new problems at the board only when necessary. Have the students work through the problems with the tutor or give instructions on how to solve the problem to the group.
- Avoid working one-on-one with students in a group. Have everyone work on common problems or pair stronger students together, taking into consideration the skills and needs of the students. Move between groups as much as possible.
- Make sure that everyone is involved. To help draw out the reluctant participants, use specific questions, such as "what do you understand about this concept?" or "what are you working on?"

- Before a test, end the review session with some test-taking strategies and remind the students that getting a good night of sleep prior to the test is important.
- If a group becomes out of control or if the students are not paying attention, ask those students to leave the group and inform an AEC staff member.

*Note: Group tutoring is paid by the hour and not by the number of students in the session. For example, if a tutor works with five students on Biology for one hour, the tutor is paid for one hour of service and not five.

Group Sessions and No Shows

- If no one attends a group session, then the tutor should file a no show report in GradesFirst for each absent student.
- If one student in the group fails to show up for a scheduled session, conduct the session as normal and submit a GradesFirst session report for the student(s) in attendance. In addition, submit a no show report for the student who did not show up for a scheduled session.
    - Although the tutor will not be paid for the no show (since the appointment went on as scheduled), it is important that the AEC staff is notified of all student no-shows to hold everyone accountable to the same standards.

The First Session

It has been said, "You never have a second chance to make a good first impression." This sentiment underscores the importance of the first meeting between the tutor and the student-athlete(s). It is not necessary to worry about this meeting, but there are a few things tutors should keep in mind when planning for it.

- Be genuine. In order to build trust and rapport with the student-athlete, the tutor must be honest with the student-athlete about him or herself and the tutor's goals for the tutoring experience.

- Work from the beginning to build rapport with the student-athlete. Good rapport depends upon good communication between the tutor and the student-athlete. The tutor should not feel a need to discuss his or her life with a student-athlete unless you he or she is comfortable doing so. It is important that the student-athlete learns that both the tutor and the student do have at least one thing in common: a desire to see the student-athlete succeed in the classroom.

- Get to know the student-athlete. In what sport does he/she compete? What position does he/she play? Where is his/her hometown? If he/she is new to Columbia, are they adapting to their new home easily? These questions and others that will come naturally, help the tutor in two ways: get acquainted with the student-athlete(s) and open the lines of communication between the two parties. It is also a good idea to ask questions about the student's academic life. This shows the tutor's interest in them as a student and not merely as an athlete. It is amazing how much more can be accomplished in the session if the student-athlete feels the tutor is interested in him/her as a person and that he/she is not just a jersey number. Tutors can be fans of Carolina Athletics, but do not be a fan during the session.

- Take time to assess the student-athlete's situation in their courses. The tutor will want to determine whether or not the student-athlete is in need of remedial assistance as opposed to more advanced tutoring in the abstract ideas presented in the course.

- Help the student-athlete to set goals for the semester. Does he or she need intensive assistance to organize their daily schedule or assistance to improve his or her grade from a "B" to an "A?" Remember that tutors are in many ways a cheerleader for the student-athletes with whom they are working. Tutors should always encourage student-athletes to strive for their best effort.

Academic Integrity

Student-athletes and tutors are required to abide by the Carolinian Creed and to maintain academic and personal integrity.

Carolinian Creed

The Carolinian Creed and the Honor Code are designed, in part, to ensure the principle of academic honesty is upheld. As an employee at the AEC, tutors are making a commitment to stop and/or report any witnessed academic dishonesty. Tutors should set an example for the student-athletes to follow. Conduct that violates the Honor Code includes, but is not limited to, the following:

- Giving or receiving unauthorized assistance, or attempting to give or receive such assistance, in connection with the performance of any academic work.
- Unauthorized use of materials or information of any type or the unauthorized use of any electronic or mechanical device in connection with the completion of any academic work.
- Access to the contents of any test or examination or the purchase, sale, or theft of any test or examination prior to its administration.
- Use of another person's work or ideas without proper acknowledgment of the source.
- Intentional misrepresentation by word or action of any situation of fact, or intentional omission of material fact, so as to mislead any person in connection with any academic work (including, without limitation, the scheduling, completion, performance, or submission of any such work).
- Offering or giving any favor or thing of value for the purpose of influencing improperly a grade or other evaluation of a student in an academic program.
- Conduct intended to interfere with an instructor's ability to evaluate accurately a student's competency or performance in an academic program. (http://www.sc.edu/academicintegrity/honorcode.html)

Plagiarism (taken from USC English Department Guidelines)

The Academic Responsibility Code in the Carolina Community: USC Columbia Student Handbook and Policy Guide prohibits a student from "unauthorized use of another person's work without proper acknowledgement of source."

Unauthorized use that involves passing off someone else's written work as your own is called plagiarism. Plagiarism can entail several kinds of misrepresentation. For example, a student can commit plagiarism if he or she:

- Any paper or project accepted as the student-athlete's own work cannot have been composed, even in part, by another person. This includes tutor's revisions on rough drafts. Do not make changes, notations, etc. on a rough draft. This can be, and has been, construed as plagiarism.
- Take, buy, or accept a paper written by someone else and presents any of it their own work. This includes papers from the Web.
- Include passages taken word-for-word from someone else's text in their own paper without placing that material in quotation marks and citing the source.

- Fail to acknowledge the source of any information in their paper that is not either common knowledge or personal knowledge. Common knowledge includes facts, dates, events, information, and concepts that most of the general public knows. Even if a student used an encyclopedia to look up the dates of the Civil War, for instance, they would not need to cite that source in their bibliography because those dates fall into the range of common knowledge. If the student wants to discuss events at a particular Civil War military prison, though, they would need to cite their source, since few people are familiar with that information.
- Borrow ideas, examples, or the structure of another text without acknowledging it – even if the language of the paper is their own. For example, if a student makes an argument about the death penalty using the exact same points in the same order as an editorial in last week's newspaper without citing that editorial as the source of their arguments, they are guilty of plagiarism.

Avoiding Plagiarism

All college students should know better than to buy an essay, download papers off the Web, or copy someone else's work verbatim. Students who have not done a lot of college writing assignments, may not understand the more subtle forms of plagiarism discussed above. Part of the reason students take English 101 and 102 is to learn how to find and use source materials appropriately in their writing. Tutors can help their student find plenty of resources to help them:

- The student's instructor will be able to advise them on the best way to acknowledge source materials or collaborative help they have received on a particular assignment. If the student has questions about how to honestly and accurately present material in a paper, advise them to approach their instructor before the assignment is due.
- One of the textbooks used in First-Year English is a writer's handbook like The Scott Foresman Handbook which contains comprehensive information about using, quoting, citing, and documenting sources in academic papers. Students should consult this book for answers to questions about particular conventions, rules, and strategies.
- The university libraries can provide students with handbooks, worksheets, and access to online information about systems of documentation used in academic writing (the MLA system is used in First-Year English classes).
- The consultants at the Writing Center can also offer advice and materials on using source materials appropriately.

Collusion

The Academic Responsibility Code in the Carolina Community: USC Columbia Student Handbook and Policy Guide prohibits "[g]iving or receiving unauthorized assistance, or attempting to give or receive such assistance, in connection with the performance of any academic work." If someone writes (or dictates) all or part of an assignment, or if a student gives or accepts inappropriate help on a writing assignment, the student is guilty of collusion. Like plagiarism, collusion is a serious academic offense that violates university and First-Year English policies.

Avoiding collusion

Is a student committing collusion if a tutor or a fellow classmate helps them with a paper? It depends. Help that goes beyond constructive advice to doing some or all of the writing, revising, editing, or proofreading for the student is collusion – it is passing off work that is partly someone else's as their own. When a student gets help with their writing, it is their responsibility to set appropriate limits. If a student needs additional help beyond tutoring sessions, it is suggested that they visit the Writing Center, where tutors are highly qualified and have received special training in providing writers with appropriate kinds of help. A tutor (or other helper) may legitimately:

- Discuss the paper topic, audience, purpose, evidence, and other broad rhetorical concerns about a paper.
- Point out general patterns of error in a draft.
- Suggest general approaches for solving rhetorical, stylistic, or mechanical problems.
- Review specific grammatical or mechanical conventions, but not fix particular errors in the draft.

A tutor may not:

- Write or verbally dictate a draft or a section of a draft – even a sentence or two.
- Edit or proofread a paper and then correct the errors.
- Do research or procure other substantive material for a paper.

Recycling Papers

Recycling old work violates First-Year English Program policy. It is academically dishonest because it misleads the instructor into treating work completed in another setting as a fresh response to an English 101 or 102 assignment. Besides being dishonest, turning in an old paper can actually hurt a student's performance in class. When a student does not go through the writing process, the student loses a valuable chance to practice and improve their writing skills. Additionally, experienced instructors say that papers written for other classes rarely match the exact requirements of an English 101 or 102 assignment, so such papers are unlikely to receive good grades.

Occasionally, an instructor may allow a student to write a new paper using research they have done for another course or substantially revise a paper that is already written. If a student is interested in doing this, be sure to encourage the student to approach their instructor before the assignment is due and be prepared to show him or her a copy of the original paper.

Consequences

USC and the First-Year English Program take academic dishonesty seriously. In the academic world, passing off work that is not an original response to an assignment is like robbery or grand larceny: the penalties are serious. They can include all or some combination of the following:

- An F on the assignment in question
- An F for the course
- A written reprimand or letter of warning from the Dean's Office that becomes part of the student's permanent academic record
- Suspension or expulsion from USC

If an instructor suspects or determines that a student has plagiarized a paper or engaged in any other kind of academic dishonesty discussed in this section, he or she will take the paper to the First-Year English Director. The Director, in consultation with the instructor, will decide whether academic dishonesty has occurred and determine the consequences. The student will also be interviewed during this process. Then the case is turned over to the Dean's Office.

Plagiarism – even a first offense – usually results in failure of the course and sometimes in expulsion.

General Information on Academic Integrity

Tutors are asked to be especially sensitive to issues of academic integrity. If a student shows their tutor an assignment and the tutor suspects that it may not be the student's own work, please notify the Tutor Coordinator immediately. Follow this procedure even if the student reports that it is his or her own work.

Some common signs that a student's work is not his or her own include:

- Level of work is beyond that which was observed in previous work with the student
- Difficult/uncommon words used
- No in-text citations and/or no work-cited page
- For subjects like math, physics, and chemistry, the student is unable to solve the problem when asked to do so without looking at previous work
- One paragraph does not fit with the next
- The assignment does not meet the criteria set forth by the professor

If tutors are suspicious of any work, regardless of what the student may say, please notify the Tutor Coordinator. Academic dishonesty on the part of the student does not necessarily reflect poorly on the ability of a tutor; however, if at any point the tutor does question the student's work and does not take further action, everyone involved is jeopardized. If a tutor suspects fraudulent academic behavior and does nothing about it, the tutor is committing academic dishonesty.

Any questions or concerns regarding academic integrity should be directed to the Tutor Coordinator.

Writing Assignments

When the tutor and the student are working on editing a paper, the student's paper should NEVER be in front of the tutor, and should ALWAYS be in front of the student. If the tutor has trouble reading upside down, sit next to the student. The correcting pen should NEVER be in the hand of the tutor, and should ALWAYS be in the student's hand. The correction marks on the paper should be in the STUDENT'S HANDWRITING, not the tutor's. Anything other than the student's work on or in the student's paper constitutes ACADEMIC DISHONESTY, and will not be tolerated. If any sort of academic dishonesty on the part of a tutor is suspected, immediate action will be taken, potentially resulting in termination of employment. The AEC staff takes this issue extremely seriously, as does the university and the NCAA; tutors should take it just as seriously.

Professors often make corrections and comments on a student's work, but it does not mean that it is acceptable for a tutor to do the same. It can be frustrating when a student is having difficulty, but the only requirement is that the student's work be the student's work, not that the student's work be perfect, or what the tutor thinks is best. If a tutor should struggle with assisting a student in the manner outlined above, please contact the Tutor Coordinator.

Computer Use

Tutors are not permitted to touch ANY computer keyboard or mouse while working with a student. The tutor may not sit at a computer. It is permissible to sit next to the student with whom the tutor is working, but it must be clear to any observer (which could be anyone) that the student is doing his or her own work. When in a session, tutors are not permitted to sit at another computer and do their own work, surf the web, or any other personal work or activities. Tutors paid for the time they are working with the student. The tutor's attention must be 100% focused on the student.

Online Courses

Online courses can create potentially sticky situations for tutors and mentors. The rule of thumb is to treat them like classroom courses.

- It is permissible to assist students with homework for classroom courses, so therefore it is permissible for online courses.
- It is not permissible to assist students with classroom quizzes, so therefore it is not permissible for online courses.
- It is not permissible to assist students with classroom exams, so therefore it is not permissible for online courses.

* Note: Take Home Exams for classroom courses are similar – it is not permissible to assist students with classroom exams, so therefore it is not permissible to assist with take home exams.

If ever uncertain of something, ASK BEFORE ACTING!

Professionalism

Student Employee Work Attire

Tutors should always be mindful of their attire. What is worn to work has a major impact on how one is perceived by the staff and by the student-athletes encountered during tutor sessions. Below are guidelines to follow while working. They outline what is and what is not appropriate attire for student employees of the AEC.

Acceptable
- Jeans (without any holes, rips, stains, or frays)
- Khakis
- Shorts (that are not distractingly short, use judgment)
- Polos/ Button-ups
- T-shirts (no cleavage, midriff, beer or drugs questionable slogans, or another university's attire)
- Skirts (that are not too short, use judgment)
- Hoodies (without the hood up)
- Sweaters, jackets, coats, etc.
- Dresses (no cleavage, bra straps, not see-through, not too short)

Not Acceptable
- Booty shorts/mini skirts
- Anything with large holes or stains
- Yoga pants/spandex anything
- Hats/do rags (things on your head)
- Cleavage or midriff bearing items
- Pajama bottoms
- Dangerous jewelry (items with spikes)

As a general rule, avoid anything may be distracting to a student. Anything that might be questionable is probably not appropriate. Always use your best and most professional judgment, and if you are unsure of an outfit, ask someone!

Side note: Student-athletes are not required to follow the same dress code guidelines. Since many student-athletes come from practice, they may come in workout gear.
However, no hats or do rags are allowed to be worn by ANYONE.

Acting Professionally as a Student Employee

Be competent.
Know, practice, and utilize the necessary skills to do the job well.

Be reliable.
Arrive on time, submit session reports and ITAMS sheets when they are due, and do not consistently cancel appointments.

Have integrity and be honest.
Project moral character, tell the truth, and be upfront with student-athletes, other student employees, and all staff members.

Respect others.
Give respect to earn it. Everyone matters and everyone's input is valuable.

Be positive.
An upbeat attitude along with a constant desire to problem solve makes any work environment better and any work relationship stronger.

Stay work-oriented.
Never let any person's private life interfere with work. Keep each person's personal life private and try to remain on task at all times.

Listen.
Be mindful to listen to student-athletes, co-workers, and staff. Pay attention to what is being said to stay informed about every situation.

Write proper emails.
Email etiquette can affect how an individual is viewed as an employee. Always address an email, use complete sentences, and do not incorporate "text lingo" into any email.

Dress appropriately.
The way an individual dresses can determine people's impressions in the work place. See the section on Student Employee Work Attire in the Tutor Handbook for examples of what is suitable and unsuitable to wear in the AEC (see page 38).

Ask Questions.
If ever unsure of anything, ask for help, clarification, or advice from the staff. It is always better to ask questions than to remain uninformed or to continue doing something incorrectly.

Socializing During Sessions

While it is important to build rapport with assigned students, tutors must maintain the educational focus of the session. Limit the non-educational portions to 5 minutes or less.

Tutor Contact with Student-Athletes

Tutors are not permitted to communicate with student-athletes outside of scheduled sessions. Tutors may not give their phone numbers or email addresses to student-athletes, nor may tutors have the phone numbers or email addresses of student-athletes. Tutors and student-athletes are not permitted to call, text, or email one another. All communication outside of a session must go through the Tutor Coordinator, Enrichment Services Assistant, or the student-athlete's academic advisor.

Facebook, MySpace, and other Social Networking Websites

Facebook, MySpace, and other such websites are social in nature. Tutors should not communicate or interact with student-athletes on these websites. The relationship with the student is to remain professional. Do not ask to add them as friends, and do not respond to any of student-athlete requests to be friends. Among other things, it is unprofessional and potentially compromises confidentiality.

NCAA Rules
Common Academic Tutor Concerns

Role of Athletics Compliance

South Carolina is committed and obligated to the principle of institutional control in operating its athletics program in a manner that is consistent with the letter and the spirit of NCAA, SEC and USC rules and regulations. The NCAA Principle of Institutional Responsibility for the conduct of its intercollegiate athletics program includes responsibility for the actions of its staff members and for the actions of any other individual or organization engaged in activities promoting the athletics' interests of the institution.

The Athletics Compliance Office works to identify and reduce areas of risk within the athletics program that could negatively impact the University. If a problem arises, it is the responsibility of the Athletics Compliance Office to determine how the problem occurred, how it could have been prevented and how to reduce the chances of it occurring in the future.

The NCAA holds each member institution responsible for the conduct and control of its athletics program and all individuals associated with the program. Therefore compliance is everyone's responsibility.

The two main functions of the Athletics Compliance Office are to educate and to monitor. The compliance staff meets regularly with coaches and student-athletes to provide information and materials on the application of the complexities of the NCAA Bylaws, and at the same time provides as much information as possible to the University Community. The staff also monitors functions of the athletics department that are governed by NCAA and SEC legislation.

The compliance office offers a service to coaches and athletics staff members by identifying areas of vulnerability and implementing systems that will reduce the risk of violations within each program. In delivering this service, each person in the compliance office has agreed to be courteous and respectful. In an effort to be accessible, there will be someone present in the compliance office Monday - Friday from 8 am until 5:00 pm. When the office is closed, compliance personnel will be accessible by email and cell phone.

Tutors and Compliance

If any employee of the athletics program [coaches, professors, tutors, teaching assistants, student managers, student trainers and staff] knows of any violations of NCAA or SEC regulations, he or she is obligated to report that violation to either the Assistant Director of Athletics for Compliance, Faculty Athletics Representative or the Director of Athletics. All employees are required to cooperate with compliance office personnel in the event of an investigation into alleged violations.

Specifically, it is a violation of NCAA Bylaw 10.1 Unethical Conduct if individuals do any of the following:

- Refuse to furnish information relevant to an investigation of a possible violation of an NCAA regulation when requested to do so by the NCAA or University of South Carolina;
- Knowingly arrange for fraudulent academic credit or false transcripts for a prospect or enrolled student-athlete;
- Knowingly offer or provide a prospective or enrolled student-athlete an improper inducement or extra benefit or improper financial aid;
- Knowingly furnish the NCAA or University of South Carolina false or misleading information concerning involvement in or knowledge of matters relevant to a possible violation of NCAA regulations; or
- Receive benefits by an institutional staff member for facilitating or arranging a meeting between a student-athlete and an agent, financial advisor or a representative of an agent or advisor (e.g., "runner").

Additionally, as a staff member of the athletics department, NCAA Bylaw 10.3 Sports Wagering Activities precludes you from knowingly participating in any gambling activities, including:

- Providing information to individuals in organized gambling activities concerning University of South Carolina's athletics competition;
- Soliciting a bet on any intercollegiate team;
- Accepting a bet on any team representing the institution;
- Soliciting or accepting a bet on any intercollegiate competition for any item (e.g., cash, shirt, dinner) that has tangible value; or
- Participating in any gambling activity that involves intercollegiate athletics or professional athletics, through a bookmaker, a parlay card or any other method employed by organized gambling.

Extra Benefits

A big area of concern is extra benefits. An extra benefit is any special arrangement provided to a student-athlete or the student-athlete's relatives or friends not expressly authorized by NCAA legislation. [Bylaw 16.02.3] If you would not give something to every one of the 25,000 students at the University of South Carolina, DO NOT give it to a student-athlete. Providing an extra benefit will jeopardize the student-athlete's ability to compete for the University of South Carolina and will be cause for your termination.

Some examples of extra benefits include, but are not limited to, the following:

- Cash;
- An employment arrangement for a prospect's relatives;
- Gift of clothing or equipment;
- Co-signing of loans or posting bond;
- Any tangible items;
- Free or reduced-cost services, rentals, or merchandise of any type;
- Free or reduced-cost housing, including opportunity to "house sit";
- The use of washer and dryer;
- Free summer storage;
- Promising employment after college graduation;
- Telephone card to make free long distance calls;
- Meal at a restaurant or country clubs;
- Entertainment services, (e.g., movie tickets, use of an auto, admission to professional athletics contests or a trip to a postseason football game);
- Transportation (ride home or to class) even if student-athlete reimburses for gas;
- Athletics equipment or supplies, (e.g., tennis racquets, golf clubs, polo shirts; running shoes);
- Assistance in payment of bills (e.g., utility bills, rent, auto);
- Sell or arrange to sell muscle-building supplements; or
- Wedding gifts, birthday gifts, anniversary gifts and graduation gifts;

NCAA member institutions are mandated by Bylaw 16.3.1.1 to provide Academic Counseling and Support Services to its student-athletes.

Such counseling and tutoring services may be provided by the department of athletics or through the institution's non-athletics student support services. In addition, an institution may finance other academic and support services that the institution, at its discretion, determines to be appropriate and necessary for the academic success of its student-athletes, including, but not limited to, the following:

- Tutoring expenses;
- Drug-rehabilitation program expenses;
- Counseling expenses related to the treatment of eating disorders;
- On-campus student development and career counseling (including the provision of related materials of little or no commercial value to student-athletes) utilizing outside resources;
- Future professional athletics career counseling from an institution's professional sports counseling panel (see Bylaw 12.3.4);
- Actual and necessary expenses to attend proceedings conducted by the institution, its athletics conference or the NCAA that relate to the student-athlete's eligibility to participate in intercollegiate athletics or legal proceedings that result from the student-athlete's involvement in athletics practice or competitive events. The cost of legal representation in such proceedings also may be provided by the institution (or a representative of its athletics interests);

- Use of computers and typewriters. Use of institutionally owned computers and typewriters on a check-out and retrieval basis; however, typing/word processing/editing services or costs may not be provided, even if typed reports and other papers are a requirement of a course in which a student-athlete is enrolled;
- Use of copy machines, fax machines and the Internet, including related long-distance charges, provided the use is for purposes related to the completion of required academic course work;
- Course supplies (e.g., calculators, art supplies, computer disks, subscriptions), provided such course supplies are required of all students in the course and specified in the institution's catalog or course syllabus;
- Cost of a field trip, provided the field trip is required of all students in the course and the fee for such trips is specified in the institution's catalog; and
- Non-electronic day planners.

Bylaw 16.3.1.2 Champs/Life Skills Programs requires Member institutions to conduct NCAA Champs/Life Skills programs (or an equivalent program) on its campus. (These activities are administered by academic services and monitored and regulated by the compliance office.

If you have any questions about compliance or need an interpretation of an NCAA or SEC regulation, please do not hesitate to call the Compliance office at the University of South Carolina.

Office of Athletics Compliance

Academic Tutor Statement

This statement must be signed by you at the beginning of each academic year and returned to the Carolina Academic Resources and Enrichment Services (CARES) office. This statement must be signed in order to begin and to continue to tutor for the athletics department.

ACADEMIC FRAUD STATEMENT

As a tutor employed by the University of South Carolina, I am permitted to tutor and assist student-athletes in their understanding of coursework, concepts and applications, and preparation for test taking. I am not to do the class assignments, papers, typing, or other course related work for the student-athlete. If I have knowledge (past or present) of a student-athlete who is submitting work that is not his/her own, I understand that it is my responsibility under the terms of employment with the University of South Carolina Department of Athletics to report this activity to the Associate Athletic Director for Student-Athlete Support Services and/or the Office of Athletic Compliance.

The Academic Responsibility Code in the Carolina Community, USC Columbia Student Handbook and Policy Guide outlines the procedure for academic infractions. Giving or receiving assistance to student-athletes for submitted coursework that is not appropriately cited could be treated with the same severity as cheating or plagiarism and result in suspension, expulsion or termination. This action may also jeopardize the eligibility of the student-athlete.

I agree that I will not/have not disclosed to any party information regarding a student-athlete's academic progress or information regarding coursework and/or tutoring session, except to authorized institutional representatives.

GAMBLING STATEMENT

I will not/have not solicited or accepted a bet on any intercollegiate competition for any item (e.g. cash, shirt, dinner) that has tangible value. I will not provide information concerning intercollegiate athletic competition to individuals involved in gambling activities.

EXTRA BENFITS STATMENT

I agree that I will not or have not provided a student-athlete or a student-athlete's relatives or friends any benefit that is not authorized by the NCAA legislation. I understand that it is my responsibility to report this activity to the Academic Enrichment Center or the Compliance Office.

SEXUAL HARASSMENT

Unwelcome behavior of a sexual nature that relates to gender or sexual identity of an individual and that has the purpose or effect of creating an intimidating or hostile environment of study, work or social living will not be tolerated. Please refer to the USC website www.sc.edu for complete information on the University's policy.

As an employee of USC you are entitled to a harassment free environment. Please report any instances of harassment to the Director of Academic Support or the Faculty Athletics Representative (FAR).

By signing below, I certify that I have read and fully understand the above information. To the best of my knowledge, I will/have comply with applicable NCAA, SEC and USC rules and regulations as a tutor for the Department of Athletics.

Statement of Professionalism

As an employee of University of South Carolina's Athletics Department, you must conduct yourself in a professional and ethical manner. This includes, but is not limited to:

- Dress – appropriate casual attire; NO tight clothing, low-cut or midriff shirts, clothing that reveals undergarments, short skirts or shorts, or any other inappropriate clothing.
- Contact – tutors/mentors and student-athletes are not permitted to contact each other outside of scheduled sessions; all communication must go through the Advisor, Tutor/Mentor Coordinator, or Enrichment Services Assistant
- Timeliness – arrive for appointments at least 5 minutes early.
- Absolute confidentiality -- refer to Confidentiality Agreement.
- Tutoring/Mentoring techniques – promote independent learning and foster effective study habits.
- Academic integrity – maintain academic integrity at all times, and immediately report any academic dishonesty that you witness. Refer to Academic Integrity Agreement.
- Paperwork – fully complete appropriate paperwork, such as session feedback forms and timesheets, in a timely manner.
- Communication – notify the Tutor/Mentor Coordinator and Advisor immediately if you will be late/absent for a scheduled session. Notify an AEC staff member immediately if any serious issues arise.
- A tutor/mentor should NEVER do any of the following:
    - Socialize with student-athletes outside of the AEC while employed as a tutor/mentor
    - Communicate with student-athletes through call, text, email, Facebook, etc.
    - Arrange to meet a student-athlete outside of the AEC without prior approval from the student-athlete's Athletic Academic Advisor.
    - Provide any kind of service to student-athletes per NCAA and SEC guidelines, including but not limited to: providing them with transportation, giving them any amount of money, typing their papers, and buying them meals.
    - Prepare the student-athlete's work for him/her.
    - Sit at the computer during a session (the tutee should be at the computer; the tutor/specialist should be behind or next to the tutee).
    - Allow the student-athlete to engage in non-academic activity during a session.
    - Contact the student's instructors.
    - Have a personal or dual relationship with the student-athlete with whom you are working, without prior consent or knowledge of the Tutor/Mentor Coordinator. Dating a student-athlete is strictly prohibited while you are a tutor/mentor

I have read and understand the statements that have been outlined above. I understand that my employment may be terminated for misconduct related to each and any of the guidelines.

Academic Integrity Agreement

Academic Integrity (http://www.sc.edu/academicintegrity/honorcode.html)
The Carolinian Creed and the Honor Code are designed, in part, to ensure the principle of academic honesty is upheld. As a tutor/mentor, you are making a commitment to stop and/or report any academic dishonesty you may witness. We ask that you set an example for the student-athletes to follow. Conduct that violates the Honor Code includes, but is not limited to, the following:

1. Giving or receiving unauthorized assistance, or attempting to give or receive such assistance, in connection with the performance of any academic work.
1. Unauthorized use of materials or information or the unauthorized use of any electronic or mechanical device in connection with the completion of any academic work.
2. Access to the contents of any test or examination or the purchase, sale, or theft of any test or examination prior to its administration.
3. Use of another person's work or ideas without proper acknowledgment of source.
4. Intentional misrepresentation by word or action of any situation of fact, or intentional omission of material fact, so as to mislead any person in connection with any academic work (including, without limitation, the scheduling, completion, performance, or submission of any such work).
5. Offering or giving any favor or thing of value for the purpose of influencing improperly a grade or other evaluation of a student in an academic program.
6. Conduct intended to interfere with an instructor's ability to evaluate accurately a student's competency or performance in an academic program.

Academic Issues
The NCAA strictly prohibits any institutional staff member (e.g., coach, professor, tutor, teaching assistant, student manager, student trainer) from completing coursework for student-athletes. This prohibition includes, but is not limited to, the following:

- Completing homework or coursework for a student-athlete.
- Allowing student-athletes to copy your homework.
- Typing or writing a paper and/or an assignment for a student-athlete.
- Providing answers to take-home exams or quizzes.
- Sitting in or taking notes and/or an exam for a student-athlete.
- Copy or fax information, notes or assignments for student-athletes.

NCAA Violation
Academic fraud becomes a violation of NCAA ethical conduct legislation when:

1. A staff member knowingly is involved in arranging fraudulent academic credit or false transcripts for a prospective or enrolled student-athletes, regardless of whether the institutional staff member acted alone or in concert with the prospective or enrolled student-athlete.
2. A student-athlete, acting alone or in concert with others, knowingly becomes involved in arranging fraudulent academic credit or false transcripts, regardless of whether such conduct results in an erroneous declaration of eligibility.
3. If a student-athlete commits an academic offense (e.g., cheating on a test, plagiarism on a term paper) with no involvement of an institutional staff member, the institution is not required to report a violation of Bylaw 10.1-(b), unless the academic offense results in an erroneous declaration of eligibility and the student-athlete subsequently competes for the institution.

IF YOU ARE UNSURE ABOUT ANYTHING, ASK FIRST!!!!**

I have read and understand the information above. I understand that my employment may be terminated for misconduct related to each and any of these issues.

Beginning to Research
Preparing a Proposal/Annotated Bib

This writing assignment will consist of two parts: a one- to two-paragraph proposal and a three-source annotated bibliography. These two steps will demonstrate that you can begin the process of formulating an argument and beginning to research that argument.

The documentary Waiting for Superman has identified some arguments about education in America. There are many others. Choose a topic related to Waiting for Superman that you would like to investigate—it may be something from the film or it may be something outside of the film. Find three articles that address your topic, at least one of your articles must be a scholarly article found via Academic Search Premier. Read through your sources and provide a one-paragraph summary of each article's argument. Use the following acronym to compose your annotation.

Genre of the source
Author/affiliation of the writer(s)
Thesis of the article
Highlights of the argument
Evidence used/experiment performed
Relevance to your research

An annotated bibliography is a list of your sources with notes for each source. You provide the bibliographic information of your source (here, in MLA form) and then provide a summary (an annotation) for that source. Be sure to list your sources in alphabetical order. Note that each entry starts at the margin and the subsequent lines associated with it are indented five spaces. The next entry on the list would return to the left margin.

A sample entry would look like this:

Abbey-Pinegar, Erin. "The Need For A Global Amateurism Standard: International Student-Athlete Issues And Controversies." Indiana Journal Of Global Legal Studies 17.2 (2010): 341-365. Academic Search Premier. Web. 15 Nov. 2011.

In this article, Erin Abbey-Pinegar, a college athlete and sports law enthusiast, discusses the issue of amateurism and international athletes. In particular she addresses the definition of amateurism in the 21st century. Each year, approximately 15,000 international sports athletes arrive to play for Division I teams and help colleges excel on the field. These athletes are constantly being assessed to find if they violate the National Collegiate Athletic Association's amateurism rules. Pinegar thinks the definition of amateurism should be standardized to alleviate these issues with international athletes.

After you have completed your research, compose a 1-2 paragraph proposal for your project. This proposal should be different than your original statement of interest because you have now narrowed down your topic, researched it, and have a more specific idea of what people in the field are saying. Again, you should provide a broad overview of the issue you see as paramount and then should narrow your focus down to your particular issue. Your proposal as well as your annotations should evince your ability to express your ideas in an intelligent and effective manner.

Please format your paper with the MLA header, then put your proposal, and then put your annotated bibliography. You may individually choose the citation method (APA, MLA, Chicago, etc.) you wish to use for your citations.

Reader _____ Writer_____

Research Proposal and Annotated Bibliography

The writer headed the paper with correct MLA format. Yes No

The writer provided an introductory proposal paragraph that

- establishes a focus for the study.
- discusses why this is an important issue.
- provides discussion points that opens up the topic beyond "I am interested in…."
- raises questions for consideration.
- uses a style that is appropriate for an academic paper.
- demonstrates control of grammar and style.

What suggestions would you offer to your writer regarding this introduction?

The writer has provided three sources for his/her research. Yes No

The writer has provided the bibliographical information for all four sources. Yes No

Read each of the writer's summaries. Rank each summary on a scale from 1-3 for each of the following criteria, with 3 meaning completely fulfilled, 2 meaning partially fulfilled, and 1 meaning barely fulfilled.

In the summary, the writer….	Article 1	Article 2	Article 3 provides the name of the author and the genre of the work.
identifies the main idea of the article.
goes on to identify the highlights of the essay and the evidence provided.
discusses the relevance/importance of the article to the writer's chosen topic.
has written a summary that sounds academic in focus.
has written a summary that reads effectively.

What suggestions would you offer to your writer regarding these summaries?

Webinar Overview

Hiring has always been about finding a candidate with the right mix of qualifications, experience, and personality. Over time, evaluating each applicant's potential fit has grown more complex as new hiring tools and techniques have been introduced. Hiring has blossomed into an intricate process fraught with legal and policy implications. (Not to mention the implications of making the wrong hiring decision-- the reason all these complex screening procedures exist in the first place!)
From financial background checks to psychological testing to social media searches, today's hiring committees need expert guidance on creating a process that conforms to legal standards and instills confidence. During this comprehensive webinar, participants will review relevant legal considerations and how they impact screening procedures, the interview process and decision-making. Participants will also review relevant case studies, discuss policy and legal standards, and participate in polling questions to help paint a picture of current practices among universities.

Webinar Objectives

Participants will:

- Review interview questions and discuss the legal importance of consistency and documentation through all stages of the hiring process
- Discover questions that can result in potential lawsuits or violations of ADA standards
- Discuss of the use of criminal background checks and their effectiveness in assessing future violence or risk
- Learn about the legality of obtaining credentialing and financial checks through third-party companies
- Debate the use of psychological testing, addressing relevant legal and ADA standards in both requesting completion of these tests, expertise in terms of scoring, and analysis of results and how best to use them
- Explore the legality and ethics of asking similar hiring questions and applying the same screening process across the entire applicant pool

Dear Professor Wilson,

The Academic Support Program for Student Athletes will continue to have a Supplemental Instruction program for our student-athletes during Summer Session 2 2012. The program has been well received and successful since it started in the fall of 2004. We are constantly trying to improve our support programs in order to better help our students academically.

Supplemental Instruction (SI) is a learning enhancement program and is designed to organize and improve the ways in which students prepare for class outside of the classroom. SI is attached to courses to provide students with a systematic and disciplined approach for processing the course material assigned by the professor. We will be assigning SI leaders to each of the courses selected. These leaders have been identified through our tutor interview process.

The SI program is not intended as a substitution for regular attendance at class. The SI leader attends all lectures, takes notes, reads assignments and is trained in study skill strategies. The SI leader does not re-lecture, but rather facilitates and encourages the group to process the material. The SI meetings will be held during regular study hall hours at the Academic Center. SI will be open to all of the students in the class.

We will maintain records of attendance and use a systematic research-based approach to evaluate our program at the end of the semester (for more information visit the SI website at www.umkc.edu/cad/si.htm). Please let us know (by returning the completed form below) if it would be possible for an SI leader to attend your class. Thank you for allowing us to work with you to help our students succeed academically.

Academic Advice

Dear Beth:
The questions below I hope to get a better sense of some common areas of focus in academic advising for student-athletes. Please share any responses you feel comfortable providing beneath each question. Thank you!

Please note these abbreviations:
Student athlete (SA)
Student athlete academic support (SAAS)
Main campus academic advising (AA)

What do you see as the difference between academic advising and academic counseling?

For SA's, what do you see as the difference between the roles of campus academic advisor and athletic department advisor/counselor?

As counselor, what has been your average caseload? As learning specialist? What is ideal?

What is the difference between a learning specialist, and a reading/writing specialist?

In major/course selection with your students, how does career advising enter into your work?

Are there ways SAAS can utilize campus support services to better advantage for SA's?

WHO HAS THE RESPONSIBILITY FOR THESE ADVISING TASKS? (MORE THAN ONE MAY APPLY):

	Registration	Major & course advice	Skill/interest/career exploration	Referral for services*	Personal issues	Developmental academic support	Educational assessment testing	LD/ADD/ADHD advising	LD/ADD/ADHD support	Learning issues
Campus academic advisor
Athletic academic support advisor
Academic department advisor
Campus learning services
Athletic academic support learning services
Campus disability support
Athletic team personnel
Campus health & wellness
*health & wellness, financial aid, disability services, career services, etc.

Within your position as academic advisor in athletics, where along the advising spectrum, from prescriptive to developmental, do you usually frame your practice with students?

"Committee case" admission students with new diagnosis of LD/ADD/ADHD: _____

"Committee case" students with known diagnosis of LD/ADD/ADHD: _____

"Committee case" students without diagnosis of LD/ADD/ADHD: _____

Regular admission students with known diagnosis of LD/ADD/ADHD: _____

Non-scholarship student-athletes: _____

When you refer a student for a campus service is it your responsibility to follow through, or does that responsibility remain with the student? [Do regulations or administrative structure dictate how intrusive your advising role may be?] Does this apply to AA as well?

If successful completion of an intensive summer "bridge" program was required for conditionally admitted students ("committee cases") before participation in any athletic activity was permitted, what institutional/administrative changes would need to take place?

Realistically, do you think requirement of such a program is possible?

Attach: AF_Call for Proposals_N4A_Membership_July_2013.pdf

Hello PDI Alumni;
I know many are wrapping up your semesters – hope your students all finish strong!

- There are a few spots available for the 2013 PDI Graduation & Alumni Reunion on Thursday, June 6 from 11-12:35pm at Fionn McCool's Irish Pub next to the hotel. We'd love for you to join us for a very large buffet lunch. It looks like we may be able to reduce the cost from the original $20 I quoted so I'll let everyone know soon. Please RSVP if you are coming so we get the food count correct – Durand@uw.edu.
- PDI graduate Tamesha Hilliard has the attached opportunity for PDI alumni to participate in the Athlife Foundation conference in July. The call for proposals is attached – please consider presenting and contact Tamesha with any other questions (TXH8309@dcccd.edu). Some more specifics below:

Hi Kim,
I am currently working with Jeff McCann and Jon Harris of Athlife (who will be attending the conference in Jacksonville); and I wanted to ask if you will email the PDI Alumni to see if anyone would be interested in speaking at The Athlife Foundation conference in July. The conference is for high school professionals that work with student-athletes. We are looking for individuals to come and share their knowledge and expertise with the group. I have attached additional information for your viewing that was also posted on the N4A website.
I appreciate your help!
Best,
Tamesha

Hope to see many of you in Jacksonville next month!

ATHLIFE FOUNDATION - CALL FOR PROPOSALS

The Athlife Foundation would like to extend an invitation to all N4A members to submit proposals to be presented at the 2013 Conference for Secondary Education Professionals. The Athlife Foundation has created a national platform for high schools to develop the Academic-Athletic Support profession, and to create powerful programming aimed at student-athletes to promote academic achievement, and the development of life and leadership skills.

This year's conference will be held July 17-21 at the Sheraton Suites in Alexandria, VA. The Washington Redskins Charitable Foundation's Coaches in the Classroom program will serve as host. We are seeking a range of presentation topics relating to academic-athletic support aimed at the high school level and beyond, open areas for professionals to be creative to seek relevant and topical issues that are prevalent in student-athlete development, as well as areas that can aid in the establishment of a stronger bridge from high school level professional to college level professional.

Eligibility for Submission: Any N4A member involved in academic-advising (administration, faculty, full-time advisors, and administrative staff) is invited to submit a proposal. Proposals should include your presentation title, learning objectives, and desired format (break out or topic presentation). Please include a brief abstract describing your presentation, an outline, the desired learning objectives, and any other pertinent information. Abstracts will be included in the conference program. Please limit abstracts to 125 words.

Format options: Breakout sessions, paper or topic presentations 60-75 minutes in length.

- Breakout sessions can be highly participatory sessions, and presenters should plan to include some lecture as well as possible small and large group activities, and a question and answer period. Breakout sessions should be very hands-on and issue specific with strategies and techniques that the high school staff participants can draw from to potentially incorporate into their own programs.
- Paper or topic presentations discuss current issues in academic-athletic support that will resonate with the high school profession. Some are based on research, some share best practices, and some are developmental, while others are theoretical. The format may be mostly lecture with a discussion following or a more informal discussion.

All sessions are to be proposed 60-75 minutes in length. For questions, or to submit a proposal, please contact Jeff McCann, Executive Director: jmccann@athlife.org - We will accept proposals from April 15, 2013, to May 24th, 2013. Selected Presenters will be notified via email by the end of May 2013. Conference registration fees will be waived for selected presenters.

Registration information for those interested in this attending this professional development opportunity will follow. The conference will have presentation topics relevant for the college level professional, and is aimed at the college level professional that has a strong desire to assist the high school professional population more formally. Webinar Overview

The destructive college romantic relationship. It's a common storyline in the campus setting. Whether you are a Resident Assistant or work in Student Affairs, you've probably had a student come to you wondering, "What should I do about this bad relationship I'm in?" You give them advice. You try to help. You talk with them about the consequences of staying in an unhealthy relationship when they should be focusing on school. You hope they realize that a break might be the best answer. But nothing works and you're left feeling helpless. What can you do? What should you do?

This webinar will offer suggestions and guidelines for Student Affairs staff on how to best advise students seeking relationship help. Based on decades of working with college students in difficult dating relationships, Dr. MJ Raleigh and Dr. Brian Van Brunt will discuss warning signs that can help identify problematic relationships that have the potential to turn violent and/or dangerous. They will offer practical solutions to help students move away from these relationships and move forward to make better dating decisions. Participants will also learn how to utilize the positive signs of a healthy relationship when talking with students about their choices.

The main focus of this webinar will be on relationships that are currently unproductive or problematic but have not crossed over into violence or sexual assault. However, Dr. Raleigh and Dr. Van Brunt will discuss more serious signs of relationship violence and the importance of proper referrals to judicial affairs, counseling, and campus police.

Webinar Objectives

Participants will learn to:

- Help students identify the characteristics and warning signs of unhealthy relationships
- Address how unhealthy relationships differ from violent or dangerous relationships that include sexual assault or violence
- Develop an awareness of how broken relationships may be cyclical and in part due to early family messages about marriage, dating, and expectations about what it means to be in a "healthy relationship"
- Navigate between giving advice, guiding, and informing
- Develop an awareness of healthy relationship signs and how to foster positive communication
- Access on-campus resources and help for students in distress

The password for the Onyen 'bridgerb' is set to expire at this date and time: Mon Jun 3 08:27:37 2013

Visit the following web site to change your password or for information on how to have it reset if it was forgotten:

https://onyen.unc.edu/cgi-bin/unc_id/chpw.pl

After your password expires, you can still access the above site to change your password, though you will not be able to use your Onyen to access any other Onyen-authenticated services until you change your password.

Once you change your password, it will work for another 90 days before it expires again. If you never use your Onyen, then disregard this notice.

Your new Onyen password will be copied automatically to the AD.UNC.EDU domain. If you have any Laptop, Desktop, or handheld device which uses your old Onyen password to automatically login or re-authenticate to services using the AD.UNC.EDU domain (Exchange, for example), be sure to logout of those services and login again with your new Onyen password within 10 minutes of changing it. If you don't, and your devices continue to attempt to re-authenticate using your old Onyen password, your AD.UNC.EDU account will be locked for 10 to 20 minutes, just as if you repeatedly tried to login with a bad password. During that time you will not be able to login.

If you think you might forget your password, consider setting up a "Challenge/Response" where you answer a few personal questions BEFORE you forget your password. Later, if you can answer these questions again, you can get a new password without having to visit one of the password reset sites on campus. Just click "Challenge-Response" at the top of the page mentioned above and follow the instructions.

Webinar Overview

This webinar is a 3-part workshop designed to facilitate your campus team's learning as you design programmatic assessment plans. The ultimate intention of this workshop is for you and your institutional team to walk away with a refined assessment plan and/or report, depending on where you are in your assessment process. Each session is designed to be highly interactive with activities that you complete and share with colleagues and other participants. This process offers a unique opportunity to share ideas and solutions across institutions.

Webinar Objectives

Participants will:

- Describe the history of Outcomes-Based Assessment (OBA)
- Explain the purpose for OBA
- Explain why OBA practice and documentation is so important
- Identify the necessary components of an Outcomes-Based Assessment Plan and report (OBAP)
- Align components of the OBAP with program review, annual planning, strategic planning, and budgeting processes
- Explain the importance of evaluating student learning
- Distinguish between learning goals and outcomes
- Identify characteristics of measurable and meaningful outcomes

Webinar Speaker(s)

Marilee J. Bresciani, Ph.D. is a Professor of Postsecondary Education Leadership at San Diego State University, where she coordinates the masters in Student Affairs/Services in community colleges and higher education, the certificate in institutional research, planning, and assessment, and the masters and doctorate in community college leadership. The curriculum at San Diego State University emphasizes student-learning centeredness, integration of the curricular and co-curricular learning paradigms, and analysis, planning, and responsible practice of leaders in a socially just and global environment.

Dr. Bresciani's research focuses on the evaluation of student learning and development. She uses grounded theory to explore how systems and processes contribute to student learning centeredness, which includes the study of leaders' roles in these systems and processes.

Subject: Meet Our Student Retention Workshop Facilitators!

Ms. Bridger,

When it comes to change leadership in higher education, we all know there's no one magical ingredient that guarantees desirable outcomes. At Teresa Farnum & Associates, though, we wondered what advice experts might have in terms of producing lasting, effective changes in college and university cultures.

And what better experts to consult than the facilitators for TFA's 9th Annual Student Retention Workshop? We invited our eight presenters--who collectively have more than 250 years of experience in higher education administration--to highlight key principles of how to cultivate lasting, systemic change at colleges and universities. Their responses resulted in TFA's newest paper release, Creating Change on College Campuses: Lessons Learned Over Our Years in Higher Education Administration.

Brian Kelly: "My Pre-Game Routine Is To Call Recruits"

from FootballScoop.com

Some of the more superstitious coaches have to have a certain meal, others just down a Red Bull as part of their pregame ritual.

Brian Kelly doesn't do either. He told people at Notre Dame's recent "Town Hall Meeting" that he spends his time leading up to kickoff on the phone with recruits .

"My pregame is to get in and really get working on a lot of things before the game starts. The week is all focused on the game, and trying to win that game and then when that's all done, I'll use Saturday before the game to really do a lot of recruiting."

Can you imagine being a 16 or 17 year old recruit and getting a call from the head coach of one of the top teams in the country hours before they kick off in a huge game against Stanford, Oklahoma or USC?

That phone call carries significantly more weight than the normal call on any other weeknight. Coaches at all levels would definitely benefit from picking up their phones and chatting with a few recruits in the hours leading up to kickoff...

SHOULD COLLEGE FOOTBALL HAVE TWO SIGNING PERIODS?

Coaches, Athletes Weigh In On NCAA's Suspended Recruiting Proposals

by Jason Kersey, NewsOK.com

Oklahoma coach Bob Stoops thought the NCAA's decision to deregulate many of its college football recruiting rules was made in haste.

"Seemed like they were just ready to, in other words, 'Let's take it out of the NCAA and our compliance hands, and let's have no regulation,'" Stoops said. "Well, I don't think that's the right thing to do. I don't think it's been totally broke, so let's not totally change it."

Stoops was among several influential people nationally to speak out against the January proposals that would have allowed unlimited contact between coaches and recruits. Their voices were heard loud and clear; earlier this month, the NCAA Division I board of directors suspended the loosened rules, some of which were set to take effect July 1.

The proposals would have lifted restrictions on phone calls, mail and text messages, which were banned for college football recruiting in 2007. There would've also been no dead period, creating a yearlong, never-ending recruiting "circus," as Stoops called it in February...

State Health Plan Annual Enrollment is under way through May 31, 2013. You do not need to do anything during Annual Enrollment if you are satisfied with the plan in which you are currently enrolled. If you take no action, you and any dependents will remain on your current plan. There are no changes to member or dependent premiums.

During Annual Enrollment you can:

- Enroll in the State Health Plan
- Switch between plans
- Add or remove dependents without a qualifying event. (When adding dependents to your benefit plan, you may be asked to provide documentation of your dependent's State Health Plan eligibility.)
- In addition, and new this year, you may choose a Primary Care Provider

Helping a Friend or Loved One: When to Listen, When to Suggest Professional Help

Have you ever listened to a friend talk about a problem when, suddenly, you become worried? Perhaps it was what was said, or the way it was said, but an alarm in your head signaled a problem. When you hear something that seems too hard for a friend or loved one to manage, they may need more than a friend to listen. They may need the help of a professional.

If a problem is interfering with relationships, health, parenting or work, or changing how someone is functioning, it may be time to encourage them to seek professional help.

For a list of signs that may suggest professional help is a good idea, click here.

Maximizing The Impact Of Advising On Student Success

This session focuses on critical conceptual components and organizational imperatives for a successful advising program. Concepts include advising mission, definition of advising, the relationship between advising and teaching, the relationship between advising and career/life planning, and the relationship between advising and student persistence. Organizational elements include the centrality of advising, campus collaboration and cooperation, active outreach to students, and the importance of training, assessment, and recognition.

This webinar is part of the four-part Summer Advising Symposium.

Series - Academic Advising Symposium

Webinar 1 - Maximizing The Impact Of Advising On Student Success
This session focuses on critical conceptual components and organizational imperatives for a successful advising program. Concepts include advising mission, definition of advising, the relationship between advising and teaching, the relationship between advising and career/life planning, and the relationship between advising and student persistence. Organizational elements include the centrality of advising, campus collaboration and cooperation, active outreach to students, and the importance of training, assessment, and recognition.

Webinar 2 - Organizing & Delivering Advising: Models for Success
Successful academic advising programs do not just happen. They are based on carefully laid plans that focus on student success. This session will review five critical planning elements including: developing an advising mission statement that derives from the institutional mission statement; understanding how advising integrates with other services; identifying relevant goals and objectives for advising; identifying an organizational model best-suited to goal achievement; and delineating how advising services will be delivered.

Webinar 3 - Training Academic Advisors: Conceptual, Relational & Informational Issues
In ACT's most recent national survey of training for all types of advisors, training was rated as one of the least effective components of campus advising programs. Training for staff advisors was found to be lacking in both conceptual understanding and relational skills. Brown (2008) found that most faculty advisors believed that they had inadequate training and preparation before beginning to advise.

Effective academic advising is dependent on three critical components: comprehensive pre-service and ongoing in-service advisor development; assessment of the advising program and individual advisors; and recognition and reward for exemplary performance. Training is the initial component in this process. Without setting expectations and offering skills training, there are no benchmarks for assessment. And, without assessment there are no guideposts for improving. All advisor development programs have common elements and are applicable to faculty, staff advisors, and counselors.

Webinar 4 - Assessing The Effectiveness Of Your Academic Advising Programs
In times of shrinking resources and greater accountability in higher education, it is imperative that proponents of advising justify the claim that advising makes a difference in the lives of students. This session will introduce the processes involved in the assessment of academic advising. It will include rationale for assessment and definition of assessment terminology. In addition, a five-stage model for assessment will be discussed.

Webinar Speaker(s)

Dr. Wes Habley currently serves as Assistant Vice President for Strategic Partnerships at ACT, Inc. Habley has more than 50 published works on academic advising and student retention. His most recent publications include Increasing Persistence: Research-based Strategies for College Student Success, Academic Advising: a comprehensive handbook (2000, 2008), Status of Academic Advising (2004) and What Works in Student Retention in (2004, 2010). He has delivered more than 200 presentations at professional meetings and has served as a consultant or workshop leader at more than 125 colleges in the US, Canada, and the Middle East. Habley is a founding Board member of NACADA and served as President and Treasurer. He served for 22 years as the Director of the Summer Institute on Academic Advising and is the recipient of NACADA's awards for service and for outstanding contributions to the field of advising.
Thomas Brown is a lifelong student and academic affairs educator with an impressive record of effectiveness in creating academic and student affairs programs that promote increased learning, achievement, and success. Tom served as Dean of Advising Services/Special Program at Saint Mary's College of California, was a member of the Board of Directors and Vice President of the National Academic Advising Association (NACADA), and was chairperson of the Prelaw Advisors National Council.

From 1988 to 2008, Tom developed and facilitated general session presentations on academic advisor development for the NACADA Summer Institute on Academic Advising. His most recent publications on professional development include: "Critical Concepts in Academic Advising" in The Academic Advising Handbook, Jossey Bass, 2008, and "Preparing Providers to Foster Student Success", in Fostering Student Success in the Campus Community, 2008. Tom Brown's work is based on an integration of theories, research findings, and practical experience that makes a real difference for individuals and institutions.
Thomas J. Grites is assistant to the provost at The Richard Stockton College of New Jersey. He has been directly involved in and a student of the academic advising process in higher education for over 30 years. Advisors at a variety of institutions have used information and materials from his presentations at national conferences, as well as his publications. Tom has served as a consultant and faculty development workshop leader to over 100 different campuses, and he has addressed numerous high school and community groups in his home state. He was instrumental in forming the National Academic Advising Association and served as its second President for two terms.

His research and writing have linked the importance of academic advising to such seemingly diverse areas as admissions, general education, high school counseling, economic profits, ethics, collective bargaining, and faculty development. His landmark publication, Academic Advising: Getting Us through the Eighties, served as a basis for the review of campus advising programs for many years. Developmental Academic Advising, of which he was a co-author, was used as the "standard text" for advising programs and advisor training programs for many years. He has authored more than 60 journal articles, position statements, book chapters, and consultant reports, and he has delivered more than 120 conference presentations. He recently completed an orientation/textbook for transfer students.

Dr. Hallowell Newsletter May 2013

Greetings!

In his many years of working with adults with ADHD and learning issues, Dr. Ned Hallowell has gained a great deal of wisdom. He also has the gift of being able to inspire others. Perhaps nowhere are these two elements more obvious than in his 2008 commencement address at Eagle Hill School. As it is the time of commencements, we have included a link to it in this newsletter and I hope that anyone who has not read it will take a few moments to do so now. It is well worth your time!

In this issue we also provide a host of resources where you can find actionable ideas to improve your life and that of your family. From pieces on interruptions and clutter to conferences, videos, workshops and camps in which you can participate, this edition is rich with potential "action items" for you.

We hope you enjoy it.

During my weeks of recovery, I learned 3 things I'd like to share with you all.

First, bless exercise. After my first surgery back in 2003 I started working out regularly with Simon Zaltsman, a Russian trainer a couple of years older than I am. Simon is a brilliant man, and he makes exercise entertaining, albeit torture as well. But what useful torture! Thanks to Simon, I was in far better shape for my second surgery than I'd been for my first. As a result, my recovery has been much faster and much less painful. In fact, I've used almost no pain medication. I urge you all, find an exercise buddy or a trainer, or do it on your own, but however you do it, find the time to exercise often.

FAQ

Q: My 9yr old has developed a serious sweet tooth in the past month. He destroyed his sister's birthday cake this weekend. Could this be normal or something that I need to see his dr about? He is on Concerta and Prozac. Thank you so much.

A: Many people -- of all ages -- self medicate with carbs. Ice cream, cake, cookies, sweets of all kinds including soda become favorite targets and lead to often compulsive, frantic consumption. Carbs promote the release of dopamine, which is why they become so irresistible. Best thing to do is make them unavailable or out of reach. And promote better ways of getting the dopamine squirt, like physical exercise. Read about a recent study correlating obesity and ADHD below and also read what Dr. Hallowell has to say about Carbs and self-medication in this NPR Health News issue.

ADHD Linked to Adult Obesity - Dr. Hallowell explains that people with ADHD self-medicate with carbs because carbs do the same thing that stimulant medications do - promote dopamine. Tracking boys into adulthood, this 33 year study found that boys who were hyperactive were twice as likely to have a higher Body Mass Index (BMI) than boys who didn't have ADHD. Webinar Overview

Guns on Campus.
"We would be safer. Armed students create a deterrent. Guns save lives."
"Arming intoxicated students is not a good idea. The risk of accidents is way too high."
"Concealed carry holders go through extensive training to handle their weapons. They should be allowed to protect themselves."
"There is no way to tell the difference between a school shooter and an armed student trying to help."

Guns on campus. Three simple words that cause fear and worry in the minds of most campus administrators. Then again, recent campus shootings bring an element of fear and worry to a campus community. The discussion gets even more confusing when a group of students comes into your office to request permission to conduct an "empty holster" protest on your quad.

- How does your college or university handle the question of concealed carry on campus?
- Which states currently allow guns on campus? Which states are considering legislation?
- How has this been implemented on open enrollment/community college campuses as well as four-year residential schools?

Whatever your viewpoint, the discussion and debate continues. This program will offer an overview of the main points presented by each side and assist student affairs administrators in developing a better understanding of the salient arguments. We will get you 'up to speed' on the issue of guns on campus and help administrators, staff, and faculty better understand the arguments on both sides of this hot-button issue.

Webinar Objectives

Participants will:

- Learn why some students believe that carrying weapons will keep them safe
- Review the philosophy of the empty holster movement
- Discuss how and why armed students will complicate an active shooter protocol
- Learn which states are currently allowing weapons on campus
- Look ahead at states that are next in line to allow concealed carry

Subject: FORMAL NOTICE: Mail List Review for State Budget Office

Deans, Directors and Department Contacts,

North Carolina General Statute 143-169.1 states that public document mailing lists must be reviewed, updated and corrected during each fiscal year. Each list should include only persons or organizations who have requested (or who have renewed their request) to be included on the list, or who receive the document by reason of their official duties (e.g., the State Librarian). This law requires the Chancellor to report the University's compliance to the state budget office, and to certify that mailing lists subject to GS 143-169.1 have been updated since July 2012.

 Please send your response to the query below to vprice@email.unc.edu by June 24, 2013. When you reply, enter your department, school or division name in the subject line. *****

Mailing lists subject to North Carolina General Statute 143-169.1 have very narrow qualifying conditions. Please follow the process below in sequential order to determine if your mailing list qualifies.

1. This law applies only to paper, not electronic, publications that were printed in quantities of 200 or more and mailed all at once. If none of your publications meet these criteria, please skip to the bottom of this message and fill in your contact information.

For publications that do meet the criteria in #1, please ask yourself:

2. Were 200 or more printed, paper copies mailed all at once to any of the following groups:
Alumni?
Paying subscribers?
Enrolled students?
Faculty/staff?
Foundation or other University-related group members?
Other educational institutions and organizations?
Governmental agencies?
Private foundations?
Those billed for purchases of goods or services?
Those on the mailing list by express provisions of statute, or by express provision of judicial order?

If your answer to ANY portion of this question was "yes," please skip to the bottom of this message and fill in your contact information.

If your answers to #2 were all "no," please ask yourself:

3. Was the publication published with state-appropriated funds?

If your answer to #3 was "no," please skip to the bottom of this message and fill in your contact information.

If your answer to #3 was "yes," please ask yourself:

4. Was it issued by an officer of a school, department or other University unit (not including foundations and privately incorporated or non-University entities)?

If your answer to #4 was "no," please skip to the bottom of this message and fill in your contact information.

IF YOUR ANSWER WAS "YES," YOUR MAILING LIST IS SUBJECT TO NORTH CAROLINA GENERAL STATUTE 143-169.1. Go to http://www.unc.edu/depts/pubserv/mailing_list_report.html, download and fill out the form electronically, and reply to this email with the form as an attachment to: vprice@email.unc.edu. You may stop here.

_____OUR UNIT HAS NO MAILING LISTS THAT ARE SUBJECT TO NORTH CAROLINA GENERAL STATUTE 143-169.1.

Signed: (Name) _____ (Telephone number) _____

(Name of your school, department, or division) _____

Are you responding for the (a) entire school, (b) department, or (c) division?

Please remember to send your responses to vprice@email.unc.edu by June 24, 2013. Thank you for your assistance.

How to Win Friends and Influence People (Including Your Recruits!)

When it comes to selling and interpersonal relationships, the master of them all is Dale Carnegie.
Even if you've never read his legendary business books, you probably have heard of one of his most famous titles: "How to Win Friends and Influence People." It is considered one of the foundational texts of sales and communication best practices in the business world.
Is there a way to apply his principles into your recruiting efforts? You bet.
Here are the first three of his six famous principles, with some slight adjustments for college coaches and their recruiting needs:
PRINCIPLE #1: Become Genuinely Interested in Other People
Sounds simple enough, doesn't it? And yet, for many of today's college recruiters, this is the one that is the most difficult - or certainly the most frustrating.
The primary reason this develops into a rather large hurdle for many coaches is because of the two conflicting points of view...

Use Deep Learning To Improve Your Coaching Experience

by Mike Davenport, CoachingSportsToday.com

Coaches aren't born knowing how to coach.

Why would anyone make an assumption that coaches DON'T need to be taught how to coach?

Why would I assume because I'm competent at one thing, like making a PB & J sandwich, that I know enough to be competent at the next level of difficulty (souffle) - without some help?

Drivers are taught.

Doctors are taught.

Teachers are taught.

Coaches, not so much. (Did you know that that United States is one of the few developed countries that does NOT have a national coaching education program?)

That is about as crazy as it comes...

SERVICE ACADEMIES FACE RECRUITING CHALLENGES

Football Coach Mark Dantonio Explains The Professional Nature Of Recruiting

by Mike Griffith, mlive.com

Michigan State coach Mark Dantonio revealed what he shares with recruits during a business leadership seminar on campus this week.
The movie "The Blind Side" would lead one to think it's all about handshakes and eating meals at the recruit's home, but Dantonio explained how he deals with young men from a business perspective.
If there seems to be a more serious tone about the Spartans' players than most programs, it's because Dantonio prefers to recruit like-minded athletes who come in with a purpose.

In Dantonio's seven years of recruiting for the Spartans, only three recruits have "flipped" and gone back on the word after shaking Dantonio's hand in good faith.
Dantonio used a corporate profit-sharing model to explain how he gains a higher level out of his efficiency out of his players...

Webinar Overview

As tragic as college student suicides are, these deaths are only part of the story. Suicide may be the second leading cause of death for college students, but the number of those who attempt suicide or contemplate taking their life is even higher. Experts estimate that 10 to 15 percent of college students think seriously about suicide each year, and 2 to 4 percent will attempt it.

Risks abound in the aftermath of a suicide attempt-for the student, the student's family and friends, the broader campus community, and the institution itself. There may also be serious legal consequences, particularly for residential colleges and universities. This webinar will teach you the key elements of responding to a student in crisis via a 90-minute, comprehensive step-by-step approach to addressing the key issues related to student suicide attempts and safeguarding your institution. Dr. Brian Van Brunt will share his expertise on counseling and higher education law to guide you through the following seven areas:

1. The Initial Crisis - Learn about dangerous behaviors and communication needs
2. Admission to a Hospital - Find out about the legal procedures you need to have in place
3. Communication - Study ways to organize communication to help the student, meet reporting obligations, and protect privacy
4. Circle of Impact - See how to respond to the larger campus community affected by this event
5. Return - Explore appropriate ways to negotiate next steps for the student, whether they involve a separation from or return to campus
6. Watchful Eye - Review best practices for follow-up work with students
7. After the Storm - Focus on how to keep students safe after discharge

Webinar Objectives

Participants will:

- Discuss how a suicidal student should be evaluated and transported to the hospital
- Learn how and what information should be shared with parents
- Review the pros and cons of using an interim suspension versus a medical leave of absence
- Discover ways to keep both the student and the greater campus community safe
- Learn how to avoid exposing the school to undue legal risk during the initial crisis phase, the separation, or the return to school
- Identify ways to help at-risk students access appropriate and affordable mental health care on or off campus

Webinar Overview

Is your institution ready for strategic enrollment planning? Are you prepared with the data you need to make real decisions and establish long-term goals regarding enrollment? Do you understand the most important factors in achieving success and optimal enrollment results?

Gain insight into assessing institutional readiness for enrollment planning and identifying the necessary planning antecedents through this comprehensive two-part webinar. Elements included in the planning cycle as well as a variety of planning constructs and structures will be examined. Dr. Jim Black will guide participants through a process for establishing data-driven enrollment goals, sample Key Performance Indicators (KPIs) and related metrics, common strategic opportunities, and a planning framework. Beyond these fundamental planning ingredients, we will discuss methods of moving from planning to implementation. We will also explore how to assess the impact of the plan so that strategies remain aligned with the internal and external environmental conditions and can be perfected over time.

Webinar Objectives

Participants will:

- Discover the importance of transitioning from tactical to strategic enrollment management
- Understand the foundational elements of enrollment planning
- Develop the ability to focus on what produces optimal enrollment results
- Be able to lead change in the enrollment planning and implementation process

Jim Black, Ph.D., President and CEO
The president and CEO of SEM Works, Dr. Jim Black, is an internationally recognized expert in enrollment management as well as in change management. He has published a monograph titled, Navigating Change in the New Millennium: Strategies for Enrollment Leaders, and four books, The Strategic Enrollment Management Revolution, considered to be a groundbreaking publication for the enrollment management profession, Gen Xers Return to College, Essentials of Enrollment Management: Cases in the Field, and Strategic Enrollment Intelligence. Among his other published works are numerous articles and book chapters including a feature article in College & University, Creating Customer Delight; a chapter, Creating a Student-Centered Culture, for a book on best practices in student services published by SCUP and sponsored by IBM; a chapter on enrollment management in a Jossey-Bass book on student academic services; as well as a bimonthly feature in The Greentree Gazette.

Dr. Black is the founder of the National Conference on Student Retention in Small Colleges and cofounder of the National Small College Admissions Conference and the National Small College Enrollment Conference. He formerly served as the director of AACRAO's Strategic Enrollment Management Conference.

Black was honored as the recipient of the 2005 AACRAO Distinguished Service Award. He has been interviewed by publications such as The Chronicle of Higher Education, Converge Magazine, The Enrollment Management Report, The Lawlor Review, and was interviewed for AACRAO's Data Dispenser. Black also was featured in an international teleconference on enrollment management sponsored by The Center for the Freshman Year Experience at the University of South Carolina, and a PBS broadcast on "Blending High Tech and High Touch Student Services." In 1999, Jim Black was named an IBM Best Practices Partner, one of only twenty-three in the world. He was invited by The College Board to Heidelberg, Germany, to evaluate the APIEL Exam and most recently was invited to lead conferences on enrollment management and student services in the United Kingdom and the Netherlands.

Dr. Black has served on the boards of several technology companies and has consulted with companies such as Microsoft, Blackboard, and the SAS Institute. Higher education clients have included over 400 two-year, four-year, public, and private institutions.

Jim earned a B.A. in English education and M.A. in higher education administration from the University of South Carolina, as well as a Ph.D. in higher education curriculum and teaching from The University of North Carolina at Greensboro. His doctoral experience provides our clients with unique perspectives into innovative pedagogical, curricular, and program opportunities that impact enrollment outcomes. Leveraging his educational background along with his many years as an associate provost, dean, and faculty member in a higher education environment, Dr. Black will provide your institution with strategic insights that are grounded in theory and are actionable

Webinar Overview

This webinar is a 3-part workshop designed to facilitate your campus team's learning as you design programmatic assessment plans. The ultimate intention of this workshop is for you and your institutional team to walk away with a refined assessment plan and/or report, depending on where you are in your assessment process. Each session is designed to be highly interactive with activities that you complete and share with colleagues and other participants. This process offers a unique opportunity to share ideas and solutions across institutions.

Session 1: Thursday, June 13, 2013, 1:00-3:00pm EDT
History and Importance Of Outcomes-Based Assessment & Components Of An Outcomes-Based Assessment Plan & Report (2 hours)

Webinar Objectives

Participants will:

- Describe the history of Outcomes-Based Assessment (OBA)
- Explain the purpose for OBA
- Explain why OBA practice and documentation is so important
- Identify the necessary components of an Outcomes-Based Assessment Plan and report (OBAP)
- Align components of the OBAP with program review, annual planning, strategic planning, and budgeting processes
- Explain the importance of evaluating student learning
- Distinguish between learning goals and outcomes
- Identify characteristics of measurable and meaningful outcomes

Webinar Speaker(s)

Marilee J. Bresciani, Ph.D. is a Professor of Postsecondary Education Leadership at San Diego State University, where she coordinates the masters in Student Affairs/Services in community colleges and higher education, the certificate in institutional research, planning, and assessment, and the masters and doctorate in community college leadership. The curriculum at San Diego State University emphasizes student-learning centeredness, integration of the curricular and co-curricular learning paradigms, and analysis, planning, and responsible practice of leaders in a socially just and global environment.

Dr. Bresciani's research focuses on the evaluation of student learning and development. She uses grounded theory to explore how systems and processes contribute to student learning centeredness, which includes the study of leaders' roles in these systems and processes.

Dr. Bresciani has held faculty and higher education administration positions for over 21 years. In those positions, she has conducted enrollment management research, quantitative and qualitative institutional research, course-embedded assessment, and academic and administrative program assessment. Previously as Assistant Vice President for Institutional Assessment at Texas A&M University and as Director of Assessment at North Carolina State University, Dr. Bresciani led university-wide initiatives to embed faculty-driven outcomes-based assessment in the curriculum. She has led reforms in outcomes-based assessment program review, assessment of general education, quality enhancement, and assessment of the co-curricular.

Dr. Bresciani has been invited to present and publish her findings on assessment and is a leading author of five books on assessing student learning and outcomes-based assessment program review. Dr. Bresciani has developed and delivered several courses on assessment of student learning and is a reviewer for the Australian Quality Assurance Agency and is also a managing partner in an international assessment and enrollment management consulting firm.

Dr. Bresciani holds a Ph.D. in Administration, Curriculum, and Instruction from the University of Nebraska and a Masters of Arts in Teaching from Hastings College.

Organizing & Delivering Advising: Models for Success

Successful academic advising programs do not just happen. They are based on carefully laid plans that focus on student success. This session will review five critical planning elements including: developing an advising mission statement that derives from the institutional mission statement; understanding how advising integrates with other services; identifying relevant goals and objectives for advising; identifying an organizational model best-suited to goal achievement; and delineating how advising services will be delivered.

This webinar is part of the four-part Summer Advising Symposium.

Series - Academic Advising Symposium

Webinar 1 - Maximizing The Impact Of Advising On Student Success
This session focuses on critical conceptual components and organizational imperatives for a successful advising program. Concepts include advising mission, definition of advising, the relationship between advising and teaching, the relationship between advising and career/life planning, and the relationship between advising and student persistence. Organizational elements include the centrality of advising, campus collaboration and cooperation, active outreach to students, and the importance of training, assessment, and recognition.

Webinar 2 - Organizing & Delivering Advising: Models for Success
Successful academic advising programs do not just happen. They are based on carefully laid plans that focus on student success. This session will review five critical planning elements including: developing an advising mission statement that derives from the institutional mission statement; understanding how advising integrates with other services; identifying relevant goals and objectives for advising; identifying an organizational model best-suited to goal achievement; and delineating how advising services will be delivered.

Webinar 3 - Training Academic Advisors: Conceptual, Relational & Informational Issues
In ACT's most recent national survey of training for all types of advisors, training was rated as one of the least effective components of campus advising programs. Training for staff advisors was found to be lacking in both conceptual understanding and relational skills. Brown (2008) found that most faculty advisors believed that they had inadequate training and preparation before beginning to advise.

Effective academic advising is dependent on three critical components: comprehensive pre-service and ongoing in-service advisor development; assessment of the advising program and individual advisors; and recognition and reward for exemplary performance. Training is the initial component in this process. Without setting expectations and offering skills training, there are no benchmarks for assessment. And, without assessment there are no guideposts for improving. All advisor development programs have common elements and are applicable to faculty, staff advisors, and counselors.

Webinar 4 - Assessing The Effectiveness Of Your Academic Advising Programs
In times of shrinking resources and greater accountability in higher education, it is imperative that proponents of advising justify the claim that advising makes a difference in the lives of students. This session will introduce the processes involved in the assessment of academic advising. It will include rationale for assessment and definition of assessment terminology. In addition, a five-stage model for assessment will be discussed.

Webinar Speaker(s)

Dr. Wes Habley currently serves as Assistant Vice President for Strategic Partnerships at ACT, Inc. Habley has more than 50 published works on academic advising and student retention. His most recent publications include Increasing Persistence: Research-based Strategies for College Student Success, Academic Advising: a comprehensive handbook (2000, 2008), Status of Academic Advising (2004) and What Works in Student Retention in (2004, 2010). He has delivered more than 200 presentations at professional meetings and has served as a consultant or workshop leader at more than 125 colleges in the US, Canada, and the Middle East. Habley is a founding Board member of NACADA and served as President and Treasurer. He served for 22 years as the Director of the Summer Institute on Academic Advising and is the recipient of NACADA's awards for service and for outstanding contributions to the field of advising.

The Psychology Behind Your Prospect's Unconscious Decision Making

Your recruit's mind

I often find that the primary thinking of many college coaches when it comes to getting prospects interested in their program as they approach this time of year could be described as a simple three-step process:

* Throw everything we can at them as soon as possible.
* They focus on one or two big selling points for our school or program.
* Those big selling points compel the prospect to want to come to our program.

Oh, if it were only that simple...
In reality, we're finding that today's teenage recruit takes a much more sophisticated approach to identifying with a school and, ultimately, choosing a program. While they have trouble explaining the process, our research as a part of our On-Campus Workshops around the country and continuing work with our clients shows that their decision making process mirrors that of grown adults.

The best example of this is found in a recent fascinating study just published in the Journal of Neuroscience. Researchers have shown that we make buying decisions even when we aren't paying attention to the products, and that electronic observation of brain activity can predict these decisions.
Here are the details from the study...

Parents 'Redshirting' Kindergarten Kids For Future Competitive Advantage

by Stephanie Hockridge, abc15.com

It's an epidemic affecting kindergartners and parents are to blame. It's called "redshirting."

Kids are purposefully held back in school giving them a competitive advantage in sports. But this growing trend can be detrimental for students.

Pint-sized players suit up and make plays, each dreaming, one day an NFL career could be in their future.

Today's parents have a choice when it comes to enrolling kids in kindergarten and more and more of them are deciding to hold back their baby by one year, ensuring he or she will be bigger, taller and stronger than their peers when it comes to sports.

"My brother Ryan was the youngest of four boys," says Jay Feely, the placekicker for the Arizona Cardinals. "He was a lot smaller, dramatically smaller than those in his class at 5 years old."

Feely comes from a family with strong, successful sports background. But, he says his parents did not hold back Ryan specifically to make him a better athlete. In fact, since he was so small, they held him back so he would have time to develop and be the same size as his classmates. Turns out, the Feelys scored with the decision to redshirt Ryan...

Coaches Can Realize More Good Than Bad With Transfer Rule

by Ed Graney, Las Vegas Review-Journal

In the swarm of opinion that followed a decision by Katin Reinhardt to transfer out of UNLV's basketball program this week, an important point was lost: This is why the rule exists.
However anyone feels about Reinhardt bolting the Rebels after averaging the second-most minutes and shots as a true freshman, about a good-but-not-yet-great-player departing a team in which he was afforded the type of freedom most seniors never receive, he had every right to move on.
Kids transfer for all sorts of reasons - lack of playing time, to be closer to family, to play a different position with the misguided notion it will help them make the NBA, to prove a program exists nationally that doesn't have the word "run" in its marketing slogan.
At day's end, though, it's the player's prerogative, no matter how others view the move or how shortsighted it might prove...

Youngstown State University Expands Adoption of the Starfish System to Support Campus Initiative to Improve Graduation and Completion Rates

We recently announced that Youngstown State University has expanded its adoption of the Starfish® system in response to the state of Ohio changing its funding model to include graduation and course completion metrics.

In 2011, YSU selected Starfish EARLY ALERT™ to enable faculty to flag students who were falling behind and then route those concerns to the students' peer mentors as well as to the student support staff in the Center for Student Progress. The Starfish system was selected because of its usability, ease of implementation, and integration capabilities with other campus IT systems, including the Banner by Ellucian student information system and the Blackboard learning management system.

"In our reviews of the various early alert systems, we wanted a system that could be proactive for all students, not just those considered to be at risk. It also had to be easy for faculty to use. Because the Starfish system directly connects to our Banner and Blackboard systems, we have essentially put our student success system in the hands of our faculty members," said Jonelle Beatrice, interim executive director of student life and director of the Center for Student Progress at YSU. "We also really liked that the Starfish system is built around providing students with a dedicated, personalized support network. This is consistent with [YSU's] model of tagging students and getting them into appropriate student services quickly."
Early Results! The student success program, including the use of the Starfish system, is already seeing positive results. Faculty participation in the program has increased from an average of 2 percent to 34 percent. The cumulative GPA for freshmen in fall semester 2011 was 2.39; in fall semester 2012, it increased to 2.46. In addition, the percentage of credit hours earned out of attempted hours was 76 percent in 2011 and it increased to 81 percent for the fall of 2012. In 2012, the analysis also showed that many classes that used the Starfish system had higher completion rates than those that did not use the system. For example, the completion rate for one section of a psychology course that did not use the Starfish system was 58.5 percent as compared to 63.7 percent for a section that did use the system.

Webinar Overview

Effective mentoring has long been recognized as important for success in professional and academic environments. Mentors are often assigned to persons entering a new academic or professional environment, but they are seldom provided the training needed to ensure that the mentoring relationship is most beneficial to the protégé and to the mentor.

This interactive workshop will discuss strategies for effective mentoring of today's students, and will contrast the behaviors of masterful vs. misguided mentors. Additionally, techniques for producing proactive vs. problematic protégés will be discussed. The discussion will help mentors at all levels become more effective at guiding protégés to success.

Webinar Objectives

Participants will:

- Describe the characteristics of effective mentors
- Design and implement activities that will form a productive mentor-protégé relationship
- Avoid the negative influence of stereotype threat in the mentoring relationship
- Help protégés develop the skills and confidence to become their own mentor if they find themselves in a situation in which no mentor is available
- Describe how structured mentoring, based on the scientific method, can increase protégé success
- Avoid behaviors that are characteristic of misguided mentors
- Guide protégés to proactive rather than problematic behavior

Webinar Speaker(s)

Dr. Saundra Yancy McGuire is Professor of Chemistry and Assistant Vice Chancellor for Learning, Teaching and Retention at Louisiana State University. She is the former director of LSU's Center for Academic Success, the winner of the 2004 National College Learning Center Association (NCLCA) Frank L. Christ Outstanding Learning Center Award. She served as a mentor at the 2011 and 2007 NCLCA Summer Institutes and at the 2006 Winter Institute. Most recently, in 2010, she was awarded Level 4 Lifetime Learning Center Leadership Certification.

Dr. McGuire was named a 2011 Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science (AAAS), and in 2010 she was named a Fellow of the American Chemical Society. She received the Presidential Award for Excellence in Science, Mathematics, and Engineering Mentoring in a 2006 White House Oval Office Ceremony.

Dr. McGuire has been teaching chemistry and working in the area of learning support for the past 40 years and has presented her widely praised workshop, "Teaching Students How to Learn", at over 100 colleges and universities.

Turnitin First Draft

Having trouble? View as Webpage

Over the summer, we're going to be hard at work building a teaching resource portal--a place to exchange ideas, rubrics, and lesson plans. To make this a success, we'll need your help as we crowdsource these resources from educators like you, our Turnitin community members.

So send in your favorite lesson plans and rubrics. We'll accept them in pretty much any format, and we'll take care of the rest. Our team of instructors and educational professionals will curate submissions and feature the very best when we launch in the fall. In the spirit of source attribution, these resources will be made available under a creative commons license.

EXPERTS RECOMMEND CAMPUS-WIDE USE OF TURNITIN

Research in Learning Technology: Is it Cheating - or Learning the Craft of Writing?

A new report published in Research in Learning Technology confirms Turnitin's effectiveness on reducing plagiarism and recommends campus-wide implementation for best results.

The study found that more educators are using Turnitin to help students understand how to avoid plagiarizing (72%) than to detect plagiarism (67%) - and a significant amount of educators (56%) use it to help students improve their academic writing skills.

Allowing students to submit drafts and view their originality reports reduces anxiety in students, helping them to correct their mistakes or omissions and feel better that they are on a level playing field with their peers.

5 Curious Recruiting Trends for College Coaches

NCRC 2013

I write this having just finished up hosting our annual college coaches' gathering, the National Collegiate Recruiting Conference.
One of the focuses of this year's NCRC? The changing landscape of effective college recruiting.
Part of what we do at this event every year is outline the trends, news and changes we've tracked over the past year in college recruiting at all levels, and put together an outlook for those that attend this June conference for the upcoming year. To do that, we assemble what has to be one of the most diverse collection of experts from around the country, and let them give our coaches a view from their world on what it takes to be a successful recruiter: Leadership, technological savvy, the right strategy, inspiration, organization, and - most importantly - an understanding of where recruiting is headed for the upcoming year.
There was over 20 hours of information crammed into our weekend conference (hey, it's for serious recruiters who want to advance their career, not vacation-seekers!), but I wanted to pick out five trends that we wanted to share with everyone around the country that couldn't make it to this year's event.
The recruiting trends listed are just observations; you have to decide how to apply them to what you'll be doing this upcoming year, and how to adjust your approach and your recruiting communication as you seek to connect with this general of teenage prospects...

Boxing? Running Into The Water? Crazy Tactics Work For Michigan Swim Coach

by Mark Snyder, Detroit Free Press

Connor Jaeger couldn't believe his eyes when he walked into Canham Natatorium for his official visit in October 2009.

There were the Michigan men's swimmers, running the deck, jumping and smacking the above-pool flags on their way to splashdown.

Then-Wolverine Sean Fletcher often took it another step, able to do a full flip on his way into the pool.

Jaeger thought he knew what Michigan was. Then the reality blew him away.

"How can you not have fun when you're doing something like that?" said Jaeger, a 2012 Olympian who will be a U-M senior in the fall. "We'll work really hard but, then, we'll do something like that and you're getting something out of that, too. It's that explosive exercise, then a sprint and a jump. You're really having fun."

Welcome to the swimming world of Michigan coach Mike Bottom, who runs the men's and women's program with creativity and style, not to mention a little success...

Inside The Mind Of A Passionate Recruiter, In His Own Words

Sherman Morris

by Sherman Morris, Arizona State University

Recruiting is recruiting wherever you go. Some individuals view it as a job; others view it as a passion. I am fond of saying I haven't worked a year in my life because what I do is a passion for me.
I don't recruit. I help individuals change lives.
These young athletes are recruiting-savvy. They understand how the process works and come into contact with a lot of different people. The guys who earn commitments are the ones who have a passion, a calling. They believe in the work that they are doing and truly want to positively affect these young men's lives.
If you don't love this-recruiting and changing lives-you can't work in today's recruiting environment. It's long hours, a lot of travel and a lot of sleepless nights. Ultimately, those individuals who succeed as recruiters have a purpose...

Oregon Lawmaker: Rule Breaking College Coaches Should Pay for Mistakes

by Jonathon Cooper & Lauren Gambino, KVAL.com

One Oregon state lawmaker wants to make college coaches pay up if their recruiting methods break the rules.

A state House committee heard brief testimony Wednesday but took no action on a bill that would make coaches personally liable for the university's legal fees and other costs if they "intentionally or recklessly" commit a major NCAA rules violation.

Rep. Brent Barton says coaches have almost no incentive to play by the rules, and plenty of reasons to cut corners to build a name for themselves. Players, students and fans shouldn't be stuck paying the bill, he says.

"The problem is that the cost and benefits are misaligned," Barton, an Oregon City Democrat, told The Associated Press. "You have coaches who reap the benefits in the short term of ... bending the rules when it comes to NCAA recruiting, but the long-term costs of the conduct are borne by the schools, the players and fans."...

Webinar Overview

What will be the real impact of demographic shifts on your institution? More importantly, how will your institution mitigate threats and seize opportunities in the midst of environmental changes-increasingly diverse students, heightened competition, and mounting fiscal constraints? During this webinar, we will debunk common misconceptions and explore the potential impact of environmental changes as well as seven profound emerging trends expected to impact how colleges and universities will teach tomorrow's students and provide needed services. Knowing what's around the bend allows institutions to innovate and adjust their programs and services in order to meet the ever-changing demands of the educational environment.

Webinar Objectives

Participants will:

- Develop a deepened understanding of the changing students entering higher education
- Gain a holistic picture of emerging trends and ways in which the academy may be affected
- Explore strategies for thriving in this fluid educational context

Webinar Speaker(s)

Jim Black, Ph.D., President and CEO

The president and CEO of SEM Works, Dr. Jim Black, is an internationally recognized expert in enrollment management as well as in change management. He has published a monograph titled, Navigating Change in the New Millennium: Strategies for Enrollment Leaders, and four books, The Strategic Enrollment Management Revolution, considered to be a groundbreaking publication for the enrollment management profession, Gen Xers Return to College, Essentials of Enrollment Management: Cases in the Field, and Strategic Enrollment Intelligence. Among his other published works are numerous articles and book chapters including a feature article in College & University, Creating Customer Delight; a chapter, Creating a Student-Centered Culture, for a book on best practices in student services published by SCUP and sponsored by IBM; a chapter on enrollment management in a Jossey-Bass book on student academic services; as well as a bimonthly feature in The Greentree Gazette.

Dr. Black is the founder of the National Conference on Student Retention in Small Colleges and cofounder of the National Small College Admissions Conference and the National Small College Enrollment Conference. He formerly served as the director of AACRAO's Strategic Enrollment Management Conference.

Preserving Your Intellectual Legacy at UNC
An Information Session for Faculty and Staff Nearing Retirement

Thursday, Sept. 12, 2013
3 – 5 p.m. | Pleasants Family Assembly Room, Wilson Special Collections Library
Free and open to the public
Information: Emily Silverman, Library Development, (919) 962-3437

Retiring? Finding a home for your books and papers will be topic of Sept. 12 program

Retiring faculty and staff members with the question "What do I do with my books and papers?" can receive advice during a free program on Thursday, Sept. 12 from 3 to 5 p.m., in the Wilson Special Collections Library.

Librarians and archivists will discuss ways to preserve your intellectual legacy by donating books, papers, research materials, and data to the UNC Library, or placing scholarly materials elsewhere when appropriate. Speakers will also introduce the resources available through the UNC Office of Gift Planning. Q & A will follow the panel discussion.

Topics and panelists will be:

- Preserving your scholarly work (papers, research materials, and data) – Meg Tuomala, University Archives
- Managing and placing your personal book collections – Libby Chenault, Davis Library
- Gift planning resources – Keith W. Cook, J.D., UNC Gift Planning

RSVP by Sept. 4 to Emily Silverman, Associate Director of Library Development, (919) 962-3437 or essilver@email.unc.edu. Spouses and guests are welcome. This program is sponsored by the Friends of the Library, University Archives, and the Office of Gift Planning.

POLICY MEETINGS

This year's policy meetings will be structured differently. We will be holding two large-group meetings to include policy discussions from Legal Counsel, Sports Nutrition, Student-Athlete Development, and Administration. The meetings will only last about 30-40 minutes. All teams must attend ONE of the sessions that will take place Wednesday, August 22nd and Thursday, August 23rd, both at 7:00pm in Carmichael Arena. One coach must be present to take attendance.

There will also be individual team meetings that will focus specifically on compliance issues.. The meetings should take between 30 and 40 minutes. We would like to conclude all team meetings by Friday, September 14th.

Please contact Natalie Lutz to schedule your individual team compliance meeting, specify which policy meeting your team will attend, and designate the coach that will accompany them.

COACHES CERTIFICATION EXAM

The group Coaches Certification Exams are complete for the 2012-2013 academic year. Individuals still needing to take the exam must contact Lissa Broome to schedule a test date. Remember that your 2011-2012 certification expires on July 31st, at which time you will no longer be permitted to recruit off-campus until you have passed the 2012-2013 exam. Please bring your 2011-2012 NCAA manual to the exam. UNC requires that all coaching staff members, including volunteer coaches and Directors of Operations, prepare for and take the exam, even if they do not recruit off-campus. Lissa Broome's contact information is as follows: lbroome@email.unc.edu, 962-7066.

CAMP DOCUMENTATION

At least 1 week prior to the start of each camp, complete and submit the following forms to Lance in the Compliance Office:

- Student-Athlete Employment Roster
- Outside Coaches Employment Roster
- Free or Reduced Admission Roster

These forms should be signed and submitted even if they do not apply to your particular camps. Failure to submit all paperwork for June and July camps by August 10th will result in a hold being placed on your sport's account with the Business Office.

CERTIFICATION OF COMPLIANCE

The Compliance Office will be sending out the paperwork this month to designated persons in each area regarding the NCAA's Certification of Compliance. All UNC Athletic Department employees (full and part-time) who were at UNC during the 2011-2012 year are required to sign and date this form. New employees for the 2012-2013 year are not required to sign the form. Signing this form indicates that you are not aware of any violations involving UNC, or, if you are aware of violations, you have reported them to the appropriate parties. The deadline for returning this form is August 10, 2012.

POCKET DIALS

Remember that a pocket dial counts as a contact with prospects! Make sure you are utilizing the lock feature on your phone to avoid any unplanned contact with a recruit. If made outside of the permissible time frame, these phone calls are considered violations that must be reported.

Scheduling Examination – beginning Friday, August 31, 2012 and closing on Wednesday, November 28, 2012 (Regular and Final Examination)

Please refer to: http://accessibility.unc.edu/students/registered-students/guidelines-alternative-testing
Examinations are to be scheduled on-line at: http://accessibility.unc.edu (link) Registered Students (link) Schedule Examination
• Examinations must be schedule 3 complete business days (does not include Saturday & Sunday) before the exam. The 'scheduling' day (when you go online) and day of the exam does NOT count as a business day. Therefore, for a Friday exam, it must be scheduled on Monday. So scheduling the exam a week prior is recommended.

• Exams SHOULD be scheduled for the entire semester, however, if you drop the course, please notify Accessibility Resources so we can remove the remaining exams and notification to your faculty.

• If you fail to schedule an examination, plan to take it with the class.

• If you purposefully schedule an exam for another day/time so that it can be scheduled on-line (an Honor Code Violation), plan to take the examination with the class.

• If an examination is rescheduled, have the faculty contact us via email indicating the new date/time of the examination.

Subject: Thank You

Dear Beth, Bradley, and Beth:
Thank you for meeting with us yesterday afternoon. I found the conversation extremely helpful and believe that Barbara, Layna, and Lissa did, too.
The advice you gave us informed our conversations this morning, as well as the decisions we made and the conditions we imposed upon the candidates. Your advice will continue to help us in the weeks ahead as we get ready for next year's class and work with athletics and others to determine our longer-term strategy and goals.
If you're agreeable, I'd welcome the chance to get together again later in the semester. In particular, I'd appreciate your thoughts as to how we might better align our Level 1-2-3 categories with the way you think about the needs of your students. And since we hope to be advising coaches about the students they're recruiting for 2014, I'd welcome another conversation about how we might better identify strengths and weaknesses in young men and women who haven't yet completed the junior year of high school.
I know that you all work incredibly hard to support and encourage your students and that you care deeply for their well-being. I am also convinced that you hold yourselves and your students to high ethical standards. Finally, I know that you have been laboring under difficult circumstances not of your own making.
I promise that I will do everything I can do to make those circumstances less difficult over time – also that I'm behind you and ASPSA and grateful for the important work that you are doing.
Please don't hesitate to call on me if I may do anything to help or if you should have any suggestions, concerns, or criticism. I will do my best to hear any and all. In the meantime, thank you again.

January 8, 2013

Dear Parents:

This letter was drafted by me and Beth Bridger, our Academic Counselor, and with the help of Tom Timmermans in our UNC Athletic Compliance Office. It pertains to the fact your son or daughter is currently receiving an athletic grant yet not currently participating on the team as a swimmer or diver.

The UNC Athletic Department has a vested interest in your son/daughter even though their athletic status has changed. In lieu of the new scholarship situation your son/daughter has with the Swimming and Diving program, some new policies have been set in order to monitor their academic progress in conjunction with receiving their grant-in-aid.

Before any financial award/check may be distributed by the Compliance Office (Tom Timmermans) at the beginning of each month, the student must meet with their Academic Counselor (Beth Bridger). At this time, the Academic Counselor will gather grade/course information and determine if the student is doing what they need to academically in order to earn their monthly check. This meeting could also include seeing proof of professor communication, tutor review session attendance, study hour completion, paperwork for drop/add procedures, etc.

If the student has not met the requirements during the meeting, their monthly check will not be given to them, or will not be given to them until the requirements have been met, no exceptions.

The same procedure will apply with other department obligations the student must fulfill. If they have not met the requirements requested of the coaching staff or other department staff, their check will be cancelled/held as well.

It is critical that even though your son/daughter may not be actively participating athletically as a part of the team, they are still accountable to UNC Athletics and the UNC Swimming and Diving program. They still contribute to our athletic department as a scholarship student, so their dedication to excellence must be a priority.

Please let us know if you have any questions.

Sincerely,

Rich DeSelm
Head Coach Swimming & Diving

Subject: LaSalle tickets/Complimentary Admissions

WBB Staff,

Just wanted to follow up with everyone in the program regarding a violation that we were able to avoid thanks to the good work of Tim Sabo's crew in the Ticket Office. One of the players needed some extra tickets for the LaSalle game and the pool of complimentary admissions for the players was all used up. They asked a staff member for extra tickets who sent a manager up to the ticket office to drop off 3 more tickets for the student-athlete's use.

We need to all be on the same page that when it comes to how our student-athletes and our guests may receive tickets. The only permissible way is through the UNC pass list administered by the Ticket Office; any other tickets given to our players, especially those from staff member's personal allotments, is a violation of NCAA rules. Fortunately, we were saved in this case and we just wanted to remind everyone of the relevant legislation. If you have any questions, just let me know. Thanks!!

Lance

16.2.1.1 Institutional Events in the Student-Athlete's Sport.

An institution may provide four complimentary admissions per home or away intercollegiate athletics event to a student-athlete in the sport in which the individual participates (either practices or competes), regardless of whether the student-athlete competes in the contest.

16.2.1.2 General Regulations.

Complimentary admissions shall be provided only through a pass list for individuals designated by the student-athlete. "Hard tickets" shall not be issued.

Dear Beth,

How are you? I don't know if you remember me but we met a couple of years ago on committee established through Steele Building.

During the 2012-2013 academic year, I will serve as the liaison to WBB. I don't know if you are aware of the restructuring of the FAC under the leadership of Joy Renner. If not, we can schedule a time over the next few weeks to speak.

I hope things are well and I look forward to hearing from you.

Subject: Academic Worksheets

Harold,
Thank you for bringing your team to our meeting this week. It was very insightful and helpful to have their perspective and description of the challenges student-athletes face.
I am heading up Academic Advising's task force to transition us to Electronic Academic Records (aka "Paper-Reduction"). Our charge is to stop using paper files for students and have everything scanned and accessible online. (We are working with ITS on this.) Dean Bobbi Owen has said that next year (2013-14) we will no longer be using academic worksheets.
Our plan right now is for incoming first-year and transfer students in 2013 to be on the electronic system this coming spring/summer. We will continue with the paper files for current students.
That means, we are more and more relying on Tar Heel Tracker and will not be creating new academic worksheets for the incoming students or for current students. Students who do not have a working Tar Heel Tracker will have academic worksheets, but that is only for a handful of current students.
I bring this to your attention so that you can let your staff know that worksheets are being phased out and we need to be using Tar Heel Tracker more and more. We know the system has its shortcomings but the Registrar is working on it (our feedback to them helps improve the system). If your staff has not been trained to use THT, they can get training from the Registrar's Office.
If you have any questions, or wish to discuss this, please feel free to contact me.
Thanks.
Roger

STUDENTS MUST ALWAYS BE ENROLLED IN 12 HOURS FOR FALL AND SPRING FOR NCAA ELIGIBILITY.

Student-athletes must meet two sets of eligibility requirements. UNC eligibility requirements must be met in order for the student to return to the University each year. NCAA requirements must be met in order for the student-athlete to participate in athletics each year. The above grid represents minimum requirements for UNC and NCAA academic and athletic eligibility. Results of not meeting the above stated requirements:

Academic Probation: If a student does not pass 9 hours --OR--falls below a 2.0 GPA. University status is changed automatically to PROBATION. One semester is given to restore academic good standing.

UNC Academically Ineligible: If a student does not pass 9 hours --AND--falls below a 2.0 GPA. University status is changed automatically to ACADEMICALLY INELIGIBLE. A letter of appeal must be written to University Appeals Committee. Committee will re-instate student to PROBATION or suspend the student from the University for one semester, probation is not guaranteed.

NCAA Ineligible: If a student does not meet the GPA, Semester Hours, or Progress Towards Degree Requirements, their status will be changed to NCAA ACADEMICALLY INELIGIBLE. This will keep the student from game competition for the upcoming football season.

If a student does not pass 6 degree applicable hours in the Fall/Spring semester, they are NCAA INELIGIBLE to compete in the following season.

Dear Faculty,

On behalf of the Academic Support Program for Student-Athletes, I would like to extend a special invitation for you to participate as a Guest Coach for a home women's basketball game this season. This invitation is in recognition of your commitment to student development and your support of Carolina student-athletes.

A special Guest Coaching event will take place for the ACC-BIG 10 Challenge game vs Ohio State on Wednesday November 28th. With game time at 7pm, the events will start around 5pm.

As part of the special ACC-BIG 10 Challenge game program, you are invited to a pre-tip-off social gathering (with food) in the women's basketball offices, sit-in on the pre-game speech, a bench seat, and 2 tickets to the basketball game.

If you are unable to attend the ACC-Big 10 Challenge event, please see the list of home games below and indicate your top 3 preferences. These programs will include sit-in on the pre-game speech, a bench seat, and 2 tickets to the basketball game.

- Thursday January 3rd, vs Maryland, 7pm

- Sunday January 6th, vs Virginia Tech, 2pm

- Sunday January 13th, vs Georgia Tech, 2pm

- Thursday January 17th, vs Virginia, 630pm

- Thursday Januray 31st, vs Florida State, 7pm

- Thursday February 14th, vs Wake Forest, 7pm

- Thursday February 28th, vs Boston College, 7pm

It is with tremendous pleasure that we offer you this unique opportunity. You will experience an inside look at Carolina Women's Basketball and interact with the coaches, student-athletes, and other members of the Carolina Community, becoming an ambassador for UNC-Chapel Hill.

If you would like to accept the invitation to the ACC-BIG 10 Challenge game, please RSVP by *Tuesday November 20th at 919. 843. 5669 or bridgerb@uncaa.unc.edu. If you rather attend another home game, please let me know your top three selections at your earliest convenience. Please know, availability is on a first come first serve basis. I sincerely hope you will join us!

Hi Beth and Brad! Here you go ...

1. Does your school offer introductory science courses for non-science majors? For example, Ohio State has Biology 101 for non-science majors, which is different from Biology 111 for science majors.

Yes.

BIO 105 is for non-science majors, as opposed to BIO 181.

CH 100 is for non-science majors, as opposed to CH 101.

2. Does your school offer basic English and math courses for students whose ACT or SAT scores are below a certain score? For example, here at UNC, students who score below 460 on the writing section of the SAT are required to take English 100 before taking English 105. Does your school also offer remedial English and/or math courses?

The English department gives a self-assessment on which to base English placement (ENG 100 or ENG 101) and follows up with initial in class writing responses the first two days of class which instructors review to see if placement was appropriate. More information can be found here: http://english.chass.ncsu.edu/undergraduate/first_year_writing/fy_writing_placement.php

We do not offer remedial math courses and information regarding placement can be found here: http://newstudents.ncsu.edu/firstyear/placement.php#math

3. Does your school offer study skills and/or life skills courses? If so, are they exclusively for student-athletes?

While no courses are considered in the category of "study or life skill" by the university, most all incoming students at NC State take a First Year Experience course that is contingent upon their major and is taught by the individual colleges (I think this is the type of course to which you are referring). In addition to those major specific courses, the Academic Support Program for Student-Athletes teaches a first year course that is specific for student-athletes; it is one credit.

There are also other university courses that I would categorize as "life skill" courses including: career exploration and development, transfer student success, transitions for the college graduate, seminar education for military veterans/service members, alcohol, drugs and tobacco, human sexuality, women's health issues, personal health, nutrition, exercise and weight control, stress management, and prevention of sexual assault and violence.

Let me know if you need more specific information about these; there is public information on the university website on all of these courses.

4. How many full-time learning specialists does your academic support program for student-athletes employ?

None.

Thanks for sharing the results once compiled; our office would be interested in them!

Films vs. Theater

Expectations

- Films
    - More real
    - Create a real environment
    - Same movie every time, nothing changes
- Plays
    - Change by performance
    - More about visual metaphors
    - Directors vision for the play
        - Would look weird if the set was used for a film
- Differences
    - Fourth wall
    - Set construction
        - Movie vs. TV vs. Play
            - Plays-address every part of the space
        - Filming
            - Only need to build so much and the audience won't see the rest it
            - Only need as much as the camera will show
            - Don't have to address the entire set
    - Lights
        - Larger in films
        - Have to move as well, portable and movable
        - Both use Fresnel fixtures
            - Films have more wattage
        - Different process to light a film than a play
    - Properties
        - Heavily detailed in films
        - Have to be more durable
    - Sound
        - In theatre
            - Happens in the moment
        - In film
            - Put in after the film is completed
            - Foley artist
                - Creating sound effects for movies
    - Costumes and makeup
        - Higher level of detail in films
        - More natural looking up close in films
    - Special effects
        - Takes more time and effort for small effects and event

Applying make-up

- Important bones
    - Super siliary arch
        - Brow bone
    - Nose
    - Temples
    - Jaw/mandible
    - Cheek bones
        - Zygomadic arch
- Balancing out normal facial features with the light on stage (shadows)
- Basic tools
    - Facial cleanser
        - Clean face
        - No stubble (unless for character)
    - Foundation
        - Basic color of skin
            - (Apply moisturizer before)
        - Cream-based
        - Air-brush
            - Spray directed on actors face
        - Pancake makeup
            - Isn't sweat resistant
        - Need a wide range
        - Basic layer of face
    - Highlights and shadows
        - More intense colors
    - Eyebrow pencils
    - Eyeliner pencil
        - Enhances detail of eye because under the light the details disappear
        - Black and brown
    - Mascara
        - Defining eyes
        - Black
        - Black/brown
        - Clear—helps pronounce eyelashes without color
    - Blush
        - Powder blush
    - Lip color
        - Lipsticks
        - Lip liner
            - Creates a barrier to keep color on the lip—running on to other parts of face.
    - Translucent powder
        - For people who sweat a lot
    - Nose and scar wax

        - Mold into any shape to for facial features
    - Adhesive- spirit gum
        - Attach features-appliance
    - Remover (glue remover)
        - Take everything off
    - Make-up remover
        - Wipes that take everything off
    - Brushes
        - Expensive
        - Natural horse hair
        - Multiple uses
    - Make-up sponges
        - Only use once
        - Come in multiple shapes
- Faces
    - Symmetry
        - Three tiers
            - Hair line to eyebrow
            - Eyebrow to lip
            - Lip to chin
        - Make them as equal as possible
        - Play with proportions
- Wigs
    - Attachment
        - Lace (stuff on rugs)
        - Makes seam unnoticable

Costumes

- Careers in costumes
    - Theatre
    - Film/tv
    - Dance
    - Musical performance
  - Costume design and costume production
- Should be able to wear as much as possible
  - Helps understand entire process of production
- Responsible for aesthetic elements of costumes
  - Colors
  - Fabrics
  - Silhouettes
- Express design through renderings and research packets
- Understanding observation
  - How clothing speaks about us as people
  - What are the clothes trying to say
  - Observing the world around us
  - Trying to capture a character with clothes
  - Have to be familiar with the script in order to understand the characterization of each character
    - Relationships
    - Inner feelings
- Report to the director
  - Depends on director how much they are involved
- Design process
  - Commitment
    - What is your role in the play
  - Analysis
    - Answer questions about the play
      - Looking at particular characters
      - Looking at the world they live in
      - How will the costumes come to life
      - What are the most important elements for each character
      - How the work load will be distributed
      - Scene by scene
        - What will they be wearing in each scene
        - What is the scene breakdown
          - Same day, new day, week, year
      - Figuring out the entirety of the work load of the play
      - Anticipating who will be changing their clothes
        - How long do they have
        - How the costume is designed
          - Planning ahead
  - Research

        - Dictated by
            - What the play is
            - Directors vision
        - Primary resource
            - Pictures
            - Using original sources
                - As much as possible
    - Experimentation
        - Trying things out
        - Sketches
        - Pulling
        - What will work from research
    - Incubation
        - Stop and let it be
        - MOST IMPORTANT PART OF THE PROCESS
        - An answer will come about if you step back for a set period of time
            - Might not be the right answer but it is a start
    - Selection
        - Decisions best choices for the play
        - Start making the clothes
    - Presentation
        - To costume shop
        - Director
    - Implementation
        - On stage
    - Evaluation
        - What worked/didn't work
        - What will you do next time to make it more successful
- Costume Production
    - Interprets design teams artistic direction and costume renderings
    - Brings the costumes from the page to the stage
    - Wearable garments according to the design concept
    - Reports to the costume designer
    - Actor's ideas are taken into consideration as well
- Costume career demographics
    - For every performer on stage
        - There is and average of 20 people working behind the scenes
    - For every paying job in costume design
        - There are at least three paying jobs and in production
- Costume production team
    - Costume shop manager
        - Over see the whole shop
            - Budget
            - Stock items

            - Who is working on what costume
    - Draper or tailor
        - Taking sketch from designer and making patterned
        - Skilled, great deal of training
        - Women=draper
        - Tailor=men
        - Not too much cross over between draper and tailor
    - First hand
        - From the draper or tailor
        - Cut the pattern
    - Stitcher
        - Sew the fabric together
        - Know different techniques and how to work with different fabrics
    - Crafts artisan
        - Components of costume that are more prop-like
            - Jewelry
            - Lizard tail
            - Hats
            - Shoes
            - Armor
        - Dying and painting for a particular costume
        - Bring many different skills to the table
    - Wardrobe supervisor
        - Run the wardrobe
            - Take costumes and watch them until the end of the show
            - Maintaining integrity of clothes
            - How are they cleaned
            - How are they kept
            - Communication between first hand, costume designer, and stitcher
            - Protect the costumes
            - Take care of costume and quick changes during the show.
    - Wigs/makeup
    - Dresser
- What makes a good costume production team
    - Creative skills
        - Specific knowledge of fabrics and garment construction
        - Sewing skills
        - Costume history knowledge
        - Surface design skills
            - Dying screen-printing
    - Interpreting design styles
        - Understanding the designers language to make the design a reality

Imaginary Invalid

- Started meeting in June 2012
    - Collaborating on a cohesive design
    - Decided to make the show contemporary
    - Worked on script for over a year
    - Had to make the props costume and scenery seem like they were from 2012
        - Special details
    - Added death and sickness to the show
        - Comedic factor to the play
        - Comedic approach to costumes
    - Scenic designer
        - Uses a model to show her vision
        - Weaker and stronger positions in the house
        - Intention is to be a rough space
        - Warehouse nature about the set
        - Everything has become darker and darker as the week has continued
        - Hospitals in the Czech republic and Soviet Union and Guantanamo
        - The chair Molière died in is famous in France
            - Chair used in future performance
            - Nobody sits in the chair (haunted)
        - Divided space
            - Chapel
            - Nurses station
            - Boy's area
    - Lighting designer
        - Co-designer with professor
        - Designed light plot without seeing space
        - Designed really fast
        - Colored diagonals
        - Light all over stage
        - Needed to know how the actors used the stage
        - Tried to fit the director's motif of play
- Molière wrote play about imaginary invalid
    - He actually died on stage
    - Play about his health?
    - Character is a hypochondriac
    - Empty and haunted
    - Feelings of fear and health are underneath
    - When there are moments get dark and lonely
        - Followed by a quick switch of mood
    - Character doesn't care about quality of his stuff

Scenery

- Paint
    - Colors
        - Never use one color
        - How with the color work on stage
        - Brands

Sound Design and technology

- Sound is the variation of air pressure with time which propagates in an elastic medium like air
- Basis of all sound is a sine wave
    - More condensed
        - Higher frequency
    - Higher, longer
        - Louder
    - All sound can be derived from sound waves
- Human hearing
    - 20 hz to 20 khz
        - Most people 30 hz to 18 khz
    - Keyed in at 1-5 khz (human voice)
- Exposure to 85-95 db can cause long-term hearing problems
- 125 db is threshold for pain
- 140 db is safest with proper protection
- History of sound design
    - Greek masks were designed to help amplify sound on stage
    - Design of amphitheater itself helped carry the sound to 14k spectators
    - Using carbon materials can carry voice
        - Sandstone
        - Help cut out lower frequencies and amplify the human voice
    - Churches
        - Hard materials and careful design helped sound waves carry to the back
        - Medieval churches and European churches
    - Early theatrical uses for sound
        - Most early sound effects can be found in opera
        - Wind machine
        - Thunder machine
            - Use cannon balls
                - Rolls back and forth
            - Stealing my thunder
    - Audio
        - Modern day
        - Audio requires electricity
        - Electrical representation of sound
            - Microphones convert sound into electrical signal
            - Transferred to the sound board
            - The signal is then sent to an Amp, which boosts the signal.
            - It is then sent to a speaker and which turns the signal into Sound Energy
        - Balanced vs. unbalanced
            - Audio requires two wires to carry
                - Runs longer than 10 feet tended to get interference and low audio quality

            - Engineers found if they ran another signal cable 180 degree out of phase from the original signal, a circuit could combine the signals back up and cancel the inference
    - Digital vs. analog
        - Audio comes into microphones as analog signal
        - The device (board fx unit, etc) then takes the signal and turns it into 1's and 0's
        - This leads to a loss in quality
            - Quality digital equipment now sample at CD+ quality so this is no longer an issue
            - Audiophiles can "hear" the difference as digital signal is bright and less warm that analog in general
- Sound design
    - Theatre
        - First Broadway credit in sound design- Abe Jacob, 1971, Jesus Christ Superstar
        - Designed Chorus Line
            - First use of microphones to amplify the actor's voice
            - Put them on the stage, shotgun microphones
        - First Tony for sound design
            - 2007-2008
            - Mic Pool- The 39 Steps
            - Scott Leherer- South Pacific
    - Dance
        - Most systems required are play CD over loud speakers
            - Larger companies require composers onsite
            - Merce Cunningham
                - Dance choreographer
                - Pit on stage playing whatever they want
                - Dances are choreographed by time not music
    - Opera
        - Influenced by modern technology
        - Opera singers requires monitor on stage
            - Help them hear the orchestra
        - SFX integrated along with traditional and modern instruments
    - Concerts
    - Recording
- Straight Plays
    - Emphasis on Sound Effects and Composition
        - Director and composer
        - Decides placement of SFX, volume, etc.
    - Sound Designers concentrates on the sound cues and not the system (left to the engineer)
- Musicals
    - Emphasis on system design
    - Same duties as Straight plays

        - Normally less SFX
    - Works closely with house engineer to set up system for reinforcement/amplification
    - Spends considerable time on system delay and equalization
- Tours and concerts
    - Musicals without the actors
        - Producers have money and willing to spend it
    - Works with road house to put together a system tour in semi
        - Emphasis on SPL levels, quality of sound, ease of load-in, and ease of recreating the same sound night after night
    - For non semi-tour will spend a lot of time on the phone with venues and carry special microphones with them

Subject: Meeting Request-Chancellor's & Excellence in Management Awards Review

Hello committee members-

I would like to propose a combined meeting with the Chancellors Awards committee and the Excellence in Management committee. These are different wards but are promoted and celebrated at the same time. As I have been able to settle in and gain a better understanding of these awards, I see couple areas that could benefit from us taking time to revisit –

1) Marketing
2) Committee Structure

Marketing- I was surprised at the lack of applications received. Just for comparison, I reached out to NC State and they had over 45 applications just for the Chancellors Award. I know we have many employees on this campus that are doing world-class work. I think the lack of applications is mainly due to a few factors: 1- Getting people to take the time to nominate, 2- Time of year the applications are accepted, 3- Duration. You all have been at this much longer than I and you may have additional ideas to add.

Committee Structure-We need to discuss duration of appointments and recruitment of new members. You all have been serving on these committees for many years and I hope you will continue to do so as your skills and knowledge are valuable to the awards process and success. What prompted this was when the chair for the Excellence in Management Committee stepped down. Danny was gracious in accepting the role and doing a great job. However as people are being asked to do more and more with fewer resources. I want to insure we have strong processes in place to insure the committee continues as people retire or step down.

These are just a few thoughts and I am sure you all have many ideas about how we can improve the awards processes so we can recognize and promote the great work of employees at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Do you all have any time next week to meet?

I look forward to hearing from you all.

Best-

Kim

Lets talk tomorrow...I have an idea
The cater menu is pretty limited.
What if we only gave options for staff to pick from sandwiches, salads, and burgers...all of these are pretty much under $12.
Then what if we order like 4 big appetizers and some sort of dessert tray....

I still think we would come in under $20 a head.

Lets plan tomorrow...

Here is the menu from Champps. Kristen has put us down for 12:30pm on Dec 17th. We can chose from group gathering menu giving everyone two options. The menu ranges from $12.00-$14.00. If we can get everyone to chose what they would like then we can call it in to have it ready for us. Also We can still get the private dinning room for $50.00 or they will have a table that will sit 20 people upstairs in the main area. We can choose. Please let me know if you have any questions.

Nate,

It was a pleasure speaking with you on the phone. I hope we can work together to coordinate your lunch gathering at Champps Americana. I have attached our Group Gathering menu and our main menu for you to look over. The Group Gathering menu features the buffet options as well as full-service lunches and dinners. Please note that the party platters in this menu are for To-Go only. As mentioned, you also have the option of selecting menu items from the main menu to create a limited menu for your gathering. There are many dining options for you and your guests. If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact me. I would love to host your gathering.

Thanks,

Webinar Overview

The Center for Academic Excellence on the campus of North Carolina A&T State University implemented a pilot male retention program entitled Project M.A.R.C.H. (Male Aggies Resolved to Change History) in Fall 2009, designed to enhance the academic progress of first-year, African American male students to increase their persistence, retention, and matriculation at the university. This program was created in response to a University System of North Carolina report that stated "UNC should increase the educational attainment of all underrepresented populations, especially African American males." Project M.A.R.C.H. incorporates intensive intrusive advising, tutorial support, supplemental instruction, academic monitoring, and academic skill building workshops, resulting in 80 percent retention for the all of the its three cohorts.

This webinar will focus on the multifaceted approach used in this program to address both the academic and social needs of this special population, with an emphasis on intensive intrusive advising, as well as the assessment of student learning outcomes, program objectives, and the program's effectiveness in the retention and persistence of the population.

The discussion will begin with a brief historical review of academic advising practices concluding in our practice of intensive intrusive advising. Proceeding this discussion will be an overview of the Project M.A.R.C.H. program and its implementation on the campus of North Carolina A&T State University and will continue with an assessment overview. It will conclude with an open discussion about how similar programming might be implemented on respective campuses.

Webinar Objectives

Participants will learn how to:

- Increase the persistence and retention rates of first-year, African American male students
- Implement strategies to facilitate social development, communication efficacy, and the building of a peer support network
- Review practices that model intensive intrusive advising strategies including:
    - structured block scheduling
    - tutorial assistance
    - supplemental instruction
- Assess program and student learning outcomes to develop best practices and strategies for similar programmatic implementation at their home institution

ACADEMIC SUPPORT PROGRAM FOR STUDENT-ATHLETES
POLICIES AND PROCEDURES: Spring Semester 2013

AN IMPORTANT MESSAGE…
The University of North Carolina expects students to act with the highest regard for integrity and ethical conduct when it comes to the UNC Honor Code and NCAA rules. These standards are to be taken seriously with your academic decision making as you not only represent yourself, but also your family, your team, and the University of North Carolina.

STRUCTURED STUDY PROGRAMS
First-year students participating in our structured study program will be required to complete designated team hours of structured study per week. Upperclassmen who are below a certain GPA may also be required to attend according to his/her academic counselor's guidelines. Structured Study starts on Tuesday, August 28th. All structured study hours must be completed during the building's hours of operation, Sunday through Thursday. Students MUST present their ONE Card in order to log study hours at night. There will be a sign-in sheet for hours logged during the day.

EVENING TUTORING
Contact your academic support counselor if you need a tutor. Tutoring will begin on Tuesday, August 28th and will run from 6:00pm -10:00pm, Sunday-Thursday evenings. See staff on duty for nightly tutor schedule. This schedule may change during the term, so be sure to check in with the staff on duty each night. In order for the tutoring session to be useful and productive, please arrive on time with proper books, notes, materials, and your computer. YOU MUST HAVE A GOAL FOR YOUR TUTOR SESSION!

UNC/NCAA TUTOR POLICIES
The Academic Support Program for Student-Athletes provides a variety of resources to promote academic success. These resources are to be used with the utmost respect and regard for academic integrity.
The following are NOT ALLOWED when utilizing tutors and other academic staff/resources:

- Working with a tutor who is not currently employed by the University without paying the standard rate for such service.
- Contacting tutors, via telephone, text messaging, social networking sites, etc.--you must contact tutors through your academic counselor
- Having tutors write papers for you or do any of your class assignments for you
- Having tutors write thoughts and circle misspellings on your papers
- Meeting with ASPSA tutors for academic sessions outside of the Academic Center
- Socializing with tutors outside of academic sessions (ie dating or contact on social networking sites such as Facebook, MySpace, or Twitter)
- Providing tickets to tutors or putting tutors on pass lists
- Accepting cash, gifts, and other extra benefits from tutors
- IF YOU WISH TO HIRE A PRIVATE TUTOR YOU MUST MEET WITH TUTOR COORDINATOR, SUSAN MALOY!

YOU ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR ALL OF YOUR OWN ACADEMIC WORK

GENERAL FACILITY RULES
Any violation of the following rules may result in removal from the facility and possible loss of tutor privileges

- Behave in a manner that does not disrupt others
- Must be respectful of all staff (part-time staff and tutors included)
- Discard all trash in appropriate receptacles
- Accessing non-academic websites during academic sessions is prohibited
- Cell phones and other similar electronic devices are prohibited during academic sessions
- Music use is at the discretion of your academic counselor
- Please do not put your feet on the furniture, also, if you move the furniture please put it back in its original location

IMPORTANT ACADEMIC INFORMATION & EVENTS

YOU MUST BE ENROLLED IN 12 HOURS TO BE CONSIDERED A FULL TIME STUDENT AND ABLE TO PRACTICE AND COMPETE

CLASS ATTENDANCE
Class attendance is mandatory and necessary. Attend and be on-time to all classes. Please note that English 100 and 105 have a very strict attendance policy. Make sure that you inform your professor of your competition schedule in advance!

DROP/ADD PROCEDURES
You MUST MEET with your academic counselor in order to add or drop a course. Your eligibility may depend on it! After the on-line drop/add period ends, you must see your academic advisor on campus to obtain a drop/add form. You must then obtain your academic counselor's signature. Should you go to the Registrar's Office without that signature, you will be turned away. REMEMBER, ONCE YOU RECEIVE THE DEAN'S APPROVAL, YOU WILL HAVE UNTIL THE END OF THAT DAY TO MAKE YOUR SCHEDULE CHANGE. DO NOT FORGET TO GET YOUR ACADEMIC SUPPORT COUNSELOR'S SIGNATURE/APPROVAL BEFORE SEEING THE REGISTRAR!

DECLARING/CHANGING YOUR MAJOR
You MUST MEET with your academic counselor in order to declare or change your major. Paperwork must be filled out and signed BEFORE you MEET with your academic advisor at the Steele Building. If you do not have the proper paperwork, you will not be able to declare/change your major with your campus advisor.

TRAVEL LETTERS
All students in their competition season need to contact their professors during the first week of school and make them aware of their travel schedule by handing them a copy of the travel letter with the conflict dates highlighted. Students need to make arrangements for these conflicts as soon as possible. Remind professors each week of pending competitions! After the second week of classes, letters will no longer be available at the Academic Center – they will ONLY be available at your coach's office. NEW POLICY: You must obtain each professor's signature and return it to your academic counselor as verification that you have met with your professor.

TEXTBOOK PURCHASE/PICK-UP POLICY (only for student-athletes designated to receive books as part of their scholarship)

- Where (Book Forms): Loudermilk Center for Excellence, Pope Academic Center Room 2417 (by computer lab)
- When (Book Forms): 10:00am-2:00pm, Monday August 20 thru Friday August 24 and 6:00pm-8:00pm Tuesday August 21
- Where (Pre-Packaged Books): Student Stores/South Road Entrance/1st floor on the left
- When (Pre-Packaged Books): 7:30am-9:00pm during Student Stores hours of operation
- Last day to purchase books: October 17th
- Save receipts for ALL purchases and returns
- All books from dropped courses must be returned to either Student Stores (with proof of receipt of return) or your academic counselor—You will not be approved to drop a class unless you either return the books or show a receipt.
- Only textbooks and course materials that are listed in the official University Book list as "required" may be purchased.

ALL STUDENT-ATHLETES

- YOU MUST MEET WITH YOUR MAJOR ADVISOR ON CAMPUS EACH SEMESTER IN ORDER TO REGISTER FOR CLASSES
- YOU MUST MEET WITH YOUR ACADEMIC SUPPORT COUNSELOR FOR AN INDIVIDUAL MEETING TO REVIEW YOUR ELIGIBILITY STATEMENT EACH SEMESTER

GRADUATING SENIORS

- At least 120 hours/2.0 cum, 1 LFIT needed
- See major advisor on campus and complete an official degree audit during your senior year
- Resume on file with University Career Services, Career Guide
- Application for 9th or 10th semester (if necessary)
- Last day to file for Fall 2012 graduation – Friday, October 12th
- UNDERLOAD APPROVALS MUST BE COMPLETED BY THE END OF THE FIRST WEEK OF CLASSES—FRIDAY, AUGUST 24th

JUNIORS

- See major advisor on campus for academic worksheet update

SOPHOMORES

- You must declare a major with your major advisor on campus before your junior year, specifically during the second semester of your sophomore year before Fall registration!

Hey Jaimie and Beth!

I hope you both had a Merry Christmas! I'm emailing you because I was researching Summer Associate Programs in Investment Banking and I came across this group, Alumni Athlete Network, that partners with certain big Investment Banks that targets student-athletes (I know we talked about Tap being in the Business School). I don't know if any of the guys have looked into this at all, or are even interested, but if they are interested in Investment Banking, or finance in general, it would be a good program for them to check out.

Here is the link http://www.alumniathlete.com/wallstreetprogram.html.

I know I would've loved to have applied to something like this when I was in undergrad, so I thought I'd pass this along. The application deadline is January 20th, I believe.

They have a few other programs for student-athletes looking for full-time employment as well.

Hope all is well!

When we will do beginning of semester team mtg? Tuesday 8th? I have mtgs already set up that day for 115 and 5.

Also, please have kids do surveys..they need access to computers and TIME to do with thought and consideration. Optimally, I want to meet with them about their responses on Tuesday, or at least that first week of class.

Here is the information we talked about for Guest Coaches
Possible script for Announcer:
We are pleased to have 2 Faculty Guest Coaches with us at today's game.
Professor David Navalinsky is the Director of Undergraduate Production in the Department of Dramatic Art where he oversees all aspects of the undergraduate theatre experience. He spends his summers as the Technical Director for the Illinois Shakespeare Festival. David has taught at the University of Texas at Arlington and the University of Mississippi. David has also worked professionally in California and Ohio. Some of David's favorite projects were at the Dallas Children's Theater where he made a dinosaur collapse and pirates walk the plank.
Professor Kathryn Burns, is an instructor in the history department, specializes in colonial Latin America. She is from Austin, Texas and has been at UNC since 2000. She has degrees from Princeton University, University of Texas, and Harvard University.

We would like to thank them for their commitment to student development and support of Carolina student-athletes.
Only Navalinsky has a head shot, maybe we could just so a NC logo for Burns?

Subject: Academic All-America nominees

Beth and Jenn,
When you get a chance, could you please let me know whether we have any potential nominees for Academic All-America honors from mbb or wbb? Full criteria below, but basically it's soph or above with a 3.3 or better cumulative GPA.
Thanks,
Dana

REMINDERS:
The nominee must be a starter or important reserve with legitimate athletic credentials.

Nominees must have a cumulative grade point average of at least 3.30 (on a 4.0 scale) in BOTH undergrad and graduate work. This MAY NOT be rounded up to 3.30 -- thus, a student-athlete with a 3.299 GPA is not eligible. Nominees in graduate school must have a cumulative GPA of 3.30 or better both as an undergrad AND in graduate school. For example, a student-athlete with GPAs of 3.0 in undergraduate work and 3.9 in graduate school would not be eligible, even if the average of the two combined was above 3.30.

Nominees must have reached sophomore athletic and academic standing at your institution (true freshmen, red-shirt freshmen and ineligible athletic transfers are not eligible) and must have completed at least one academic year at your institution.

Nominees must have participated in at least 50 percent of the team's games. The basketball programs are not selected by position, so please remember to include the nominee's position in the field for academic and athletic accomplishments.

POLICIES AND PROCEDURES: Spring Semester 2013 DRAFT

AN IMPORTANT MESSAGE…
The University of North Carolina expects students to act with the highest regard for integrity and ethical conduct when it comes to the UNC Honor Code and NCAA rules. These standards are to be taken seriously with your academic decision making as you not only represent yourself, but also your family, your team, and the University of North Carolina.

STRUCTURED STUDY PROGRAMS
First-year students participating in our structured study program will be required to complete designated team hours of structured study per week. Upperclassmen who are below a certain GPA may also be required to attend according to his/her academic counselor's guidelines. Structured Study starts on Sunday, January 13th. All structured study hours must be completed during the building's hours of operation, Sunday through Thursday. Students MUST present their ONE Card in order to log study hours at night. There will be a sign-in sheet for hours logged during the day.

EVENING TUTORING
Contact your academic support counselor if you need a tutor. Drop-in tutoring for English, Math, and Foreign Language will begin on Monday, January 14th with all other tutoring scheduled to begin on Tuesday, January 22nd and will run from 6:00pm -10:00pm, Sunday-Thursday evenings. See staff on duty for nightly tutor schedule. This schedule may change during the term, so be sure to check in with the staff on duty each night. In order for the tutoring session to be useful and productive, please arrive on time with proper books, notes, materials, and your computer. YOU MUST HAVE A GOAL FOR YOUR TUTOR SESSION!

UNC/NCAA TUTOR POLICIES
The Academic Support Program for Student-Athletes provides a variety of resources to promote academic success. These resources are to be used with the utmost respect and regard for academic integrity.
The following are NOT ALLOWED when utilizing tutors and other academic staff/resources:

- Working with a tutor who is not currently employed by the University without paying the standard rate for such service.
- Contacting tutors, via telephone, text messaging, social networking sites, etc.--you must contact tutors through your academic counselor
- Having tutors write papers for you or do any of your class assignments for you
- Having tutors write their own thoughts, circle misspellings, and write edits on your papers
- Meeting with ASPSA tutors for academic sessions outside of the Academic Center
- Socializing with tutors outside of academic sessions (ie dating or contact on social networking sites such as Facebook, MySpace, or Twitter)
- Providing tickets to tutors or putting tutors on pass lists
- Accepting cash, gifts, and other extra benefits from tutors
- IF YOU WISH TO HIRE A PRIVATE TUTOR YOU MUST MEET WITH TUTOR COORDINATOR, SUSAN MALOY!**

IMPORTANT ACADEMIC INFORMATION & EVENTS

YOU MUST BE ENROLLED IN 12 HOURS TO BE CONSIDERED A FULL TIME STUDENT AND ABLE TO PRACTICE AND COMPETE

CLASS ATTENDANCE
Class attendance is mandatory and necessary. Attend and be on-time to all classes. Please note that English 100, 101, and 105 have a very strict attendance policy. Make sure that you inform your professor of your competition schedule in advance!

DROP/ADD PROCEDURES
You MUST MEET with your academic counselor in order to add or drop a course. Your eligibility may depend on it! After the on-line drop/add period ends, you must see your academic advisor on campus to obtain a drop/add form. You must then obtain your academic counselor's signature. Should you go to the Registrar's Office without that signature, you will be turned away. REMEMBER, ONCE YOU RECEIVE THE DEAN'S APPROVAL, YOU WILL HAVE UNTIL THE END OF THAT DAY TO MAKE YOUR SCHEDULE CHANGE. DO NOT FORGET TO GET YOUR ACADEMIC SUPPORT COUNSELOR'S SIGNATURE/APPROVAL BEFORE SEEING THE REGISTRAR!

DECLARING/CHANGING YOUR MAJOR
You MUST MEET with your academic counselor in order to declare or change your major. Paperwork must be filled out and signed BEFORE you MEET with your academic advisor at the Steele Building. If you do not have the proper paperwork, you will not be able to declare/change your major with your campus advisor.

TRAVEL LETTERS
All students in their competition season need to contact their professors during the first week of school and make them aware of their travel schedule by handing them a copy of the travel letter with the conflict dates highlighted. Students need to make arrangements for these conflicts as soon as possible. Remind professors each week of pending competitions! After the second week of classes, letters will no longer be available at the Academic Center – they will ONLY be available at your coach's office. NEW POLICY: You must obtain each professor's signature and return it to your academic counselor as verification that you have met with your professor.

Good morning Coach Hatchell,

I hope you had a blessed holiday season and that 2013 is off to a promising start.

The Faculty Athletics Committee (FAC) reviewed and discussed information regarding admissions at the December meeting. We will spend the January meeting to further discuss issues and offer any formal recommendations. The meeting is scheduled for tomorrow, Tuesday the 8th, at 4:30 p.m. I apologize for the short notice but circumstances over the winter break prevented an earlier communication.

If you would like to speak via phone then please let me know.

I hope you have a wonderful day.

January 8, 2013

Dear Parents:

This letter was drafted by me and Beth Bridger, our Academic Counselor, and with the help of Tom Timmermans in our UNC Athletic Compliance Office. It pertains to the fact your son or daughter is currently receiving an athletic grant yet not currently participating on the team as a swimmer or diver.

The UNC Athletic Department has a vested interest in your son/daughter even though their athletic status has changed. In lieu of the new scholarship situation your son/daughter has with the Swimming and Diving program, some new policies have been set in order to monitor their academic progress in conjunction with receiving their grant-in-aid.

Before any financial award/check may be distributed by the Compliance Office (Tom Timmermans) at the beginning of each month, the student must meet with their Academic Counselor (Beth Bridger). At this time, the Academic Counselor will gather grade/course information and determine if the student is doing what they need to academically in order to earn their monthly check. This meeting could also include seeing proof of professor communication, tutor review session attendance, study hour completion, paperwork for drop/add procedures, etc.

If the student has not met the requirements during the meeting, their monthly check will not be given to them, or will not be given to them until the requirements have been met, no exceptions.

The same procedure will apply with other department obligations the student must fulfill. If they have not met the requirements requested of the coaching staff or other department staff, their check will be cancelled/held as well.

It is critical that even though your son/daughter may not be actively participating athletically as a part of the team, they are still accountable to UNC Athletics and the UNC Swimming and Diving program. They still contribute to our athletic department as a scholarship student, so their dedication to excellence must be a priority.

Please let us know if you have any questions.

Sincerely,

Rich DeSelm
Head Coach Swimming & Diving

Dear Faculty,

On behalf of the Academic Support Program for Student-Athletes, I would like to extend a special invitation for you to participate as a Guest Coach for a home women's basketball game this season. This invitation is in recognition of your commitment to student development and your support of Carolina student-athletes.

Please see the list of home games below and indicate your top preferences. These programs will include sit-in on the pre-game speech, a bench seat, and 2 tickets to the basketball game.

- Thursday January 17th, vs Virginia, 630pm

- Thursday Januray 31st, vs Florida State, 7pm

- Thursday February 14th, vs Wake Forest, 7pm

- Thursday February 28th, vs Boston College, 7pm

It is with tremendous pleasure that we offer you this unique opportunity. You will experience an inside look at Carolina Women's Basketball and interact with the coaches, student-athletes, and other members of the Carolina Community, becoming an ambassador for UNC-Chapel Hill.

If you would like to accept the invitation as a Guest Coach, please RSVP as soon as possible at 919. 843. 5669 or bridgerb@uncaa.unc.edu. Again, please let me know your top selections at your earliest convenience. Please know availability is on a first come first serve basis. I sincerely hope you will join us!

Hey Beth,
I have tried to find time recently to go through the invoices for you, but it doesn't look as though that is gonna happen anytime in the near future. I can scan the individual invoices over to you and see if someone in your office can go through them, but I do not have time as of now. I am not sure if this is something Nate could do, or even a student intern. I apologize, but we have so much going on right now and this isn't something that can be added to the list right now. Communication

Class Meetings:

Course Website: https://sakai.unc.edu/portal/site/comm

Instructor: Email: @email.unc.edu

Office: Office Hours: Thursday 1:45-2:45pm and by appointment

About the Course

Course Objective

The primary objective of is to introduce you to communication skills that are relevant to creating and sustaining interpersonal relationships. The specific objectives of this course include:

- increasing your awareness of the process of interpersonal communication
- increasing your sensitivity to the influences of culture on communication
- increasing your competence as an interpersonal communicator

The fundamental assumption of this course is that communication can be conscious, reality-based, and highly satisfying, and that interpersonal communication skills can be acquired, changed, developed, and/or improved.

Target Audience

This course is designed to benefit everyone. The course, while broadly useful, is also part of the requirements of a Communication Studies major. As a required, introductory course option for the Communication Studies major, we will also explore interpersonal and organizational communication as fields of knowledge and academic disciplines.

Many students find this course most useful when they share their personal stories and experiences, but this is not the only way to engage the subject matter. We will be watching tv episodes, clips from movies, and engaging other media in order to have a deep supply of examples to draw from. If you are uncomfortable sharing your own personal stories in class, that is OK, just make sure you are participating through other examples.

Methods of Instruction

We are only together for 50 minutes, 3 times each week. In order to get the most out of this time, you will need to be wholly responsible for reading your textbook and understanding it as best as possible. It is inevitable that some things will be harder to understand, and we can go over these things in class, but class time will primarily be spent applying these ideas, not explaining them. Should you have a question, please make an appointment to meet with me during my office hours or at another time.

This class will require you to listen, speak, perform, write, take notes, work independently, and work in small groups with other students. If you are uncomfortable with any of these skills make an appointment to talk with me!

Required Textbook

Wood, Julia. Interpersonal Communication: Everyday Encounters. 7Th Ed. Boston: Wadsworth, 2013. Print.

Course Policies

Respect

I will not tolerate any harassment based on age, sex, gender identification, sexuality, race, economic class, size, or other group affiliation. I don't think that this will be a problem at all, but given the personal nature of this course it is extremely important that we treat each other with respect and do our best to create a supportive, welcoming environment. Class should be a place where we all feel comfortable, and this is not possible if some people are being treated poorly. If you are uncomfortable in class for ANY reason, please get in touch with me.

Privacy

What takes place in this class is private, confidential. Information shared is privileged. This means you are not to discuss with people outside the class any specific comments and behaviors of members of the class. Of course, you may share material covered in the class, as well as your own reactions, insights, and so on.

Late Work

Late work will be accepted via email up to 1 week after the original assignment was due. You will receive 5% deduction in your final grade for each calendar day your work is late. This includes holidays, Saturdays and Sundays.

Missed Midterm

If you miss the midterm for a university-approved excuse, the weight of that test will be added to the weight of your final exam (making your final exam worth 30% of your total grade). University excused absences include the sickness of a student, the death of a family member, university-sponsored event, and other circumstances covered by UNC policies. All excused absences must be accompanied by a written excuse. Tests missed without a university-approved excuse will receive a grade of 0. There are no exceptions.

Attendance

Attendance is a requirement for success in this course. You may miss up to 3 class periods for ANY REASON (have a cold, a Sopranos marathon, whatever) with no penalty. For each absence beyond 3 your final grade will be deducted by one letter grade. You are responsible for obtaining any material/information distributed in a missed class period. Please make an appointment with me if you believe you have earned an exception to this rule.

Communicating with the Instructor

- All out-of-class communication should either occur directly through email (@email.unc.edu) or through Sakai. If you want to discuss something please do so in person by either setting an appointment or signing up to meet during my office hours on Sakai (through the "sign up" feature).
- You should not expect a reply for at least 24 hours after you submit your email/message.
- Questions about exams and assignments will not be answered if turned in within 24 hours of the due date, so plan ahead!
- All assignments will be returned within 14 days. Please don't ask me about it before then, and feel free to bug me incessantly after then.
- If you are planning on attending office hours, please either email me or sign up via the "Sign

Hi Beth,

I hope you are doing well!

The committee has received several incomplete current impact statements from students including student athletes. Would you please remind the students (and their academic counselors) that we need them to complete all of the questions on the impact statement?

Students who submit an incomplete statement will be e-mailed and asked to submit one answering all of the questions before their information can be taken to committee.

Thanks and I appreciate your assistance!

Sincerely,

Tiffany

Current Impact Statement

Name_____ Date_____ PID_____

In addition to reviewing your documentation, we would also like specific information on how the diagnosed disability/medical condition described is currently impacting your functioning and causing you substantial limitations.

Please address ALL of the following in as much detail as possible. Feel free to use to use the back of this form, or type your response on additional paper. Incomplete responses will be returned for more information

If a written response is difficult for you, you may record your responses and submit an audio file.

1. Considering the skills such as reading, writing, paying attention, mathematics, etc., describe (be specific) the current (or recent) impact of the disability/medical condition in both of the following areas:

    a. In Class (lectures, test-taking, participation, etc.)

    b. Out of Class (studying, time management, homework, etc.)

2. Accommodations/Services
   In reference to the above information, describe accommodations or services that you think you will need. Why?

In addition to your response, you may also ask others who currently know you, or have observed you to submit answers to these questions in a separate document.

Sign your name indicating you composed and wrote the response.

Hmm, the current impact statements I have seen lately have seemed ok. Jim Kessler has sent emails to the last few students letting them know the committee would be reviewing their documentation so I am not sure if she feels earlier impact statements were not up to par or if they are from non-athletes. I suppose the easiest way to respond would be to let me know we will do diligence on our end... .always something with them!

Hi Beth -- Barbara Taylor Davis is trying to send the PHOTOS directly to you. So far the msg hasn't been getting to my email.
You may want to email Barbara if the photos don't arrive in your email inbox (her info is below).
Thanks, Altha p.s. Perhaps they are large files (she has high resolution camera)

POLICIES AND PROCEDURES: Spring Semester 2013

AN IMPORTANT MESSAGE…
The University of North Carolina expects students to act with the highest regard for integrity and ethical conduct when it comes to the UNC Honor Code and NCAA rules. These standards are to be taken seriously with your academic decision making as you not only represent yourself, but also your family, your team, and the University of North Carolina.

STRUCTURED STUDY PROGRAMS
First-year students participating in our structured study program will be required to complete designated team hours of structured study per week. Upperclassmen who are below a certain GPA may also be required to attend according to his/her academic counselor's guidelines. Structured Study starts on Sunday, January 13th. All structured study hours must be completed during the building's hours of operation, Sunday through Thursday. Students MUST present their ONE Card in order to log study hours at night. There will be a sign-in sheet for hours logged during the day.

EVENING TUTORING
Contact your academic support counselor if you need a tutor. Drop-in tutoring for English, Math, and Foreign Language will begin on Monday, January 14th with all other tutoring scheduled to begin on Tuesday, January 22nd and will run from 6:00pm -10:00pm, Sunday-Thursday evenings. See staff on duty for nightly tutor schedule. This schedule may change during the term, so be sure to check in with the staff on duty each night. In order for the tutoring session to be useful and productive, please arrive on time with proper books, notes, materials, and your computer. YOU MUST HAVE A GOAL FOR YOUR TUTOR SESSION!

UNC/NCAA TUTOR POLICIES
The Academic Support Program for Student-Athletes provides a variety of resources to promote academic success. These resources are to be used with the utmost respect and regard for academic integrity.
The following are NOT ALLOWED when utilizing tutors and other academic staff/resources:

- Working with a tutor who is not currently employed by the University without paying the standard rate for such service.
- Contacting tutors, via telephone, text messaging, social networking sites, etc.--you must contact tutors through your academic counselor
- Having tutors write papers for you or do any of your class assignments for you
- Having tutors write their own thoughts, circle misspellings, and write edits on your papers
- Meeting with ASPSA tutors for academic sessions outside of the Academic Center
- Socializing with tutors outside of academic sessions (ie dating or contact on social networking sites such as Facebook, MySpace, or Twitter)
- Providing tickets to tutors or putting tutors on pass lists
- Accepting cash, gifts, and other extra benefits from tutors
- IF YOU WISH TO HIRE A PRIVATE TUTOR YOU MUST MEET WITH TUTOR COORDINATOR, SUSAN MALOY!**

YOU ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR ALL OF YOUR OWN ACADEMIC WORK**

GENERAL FACILITY RULES
Any violation of the following rules may result in removal from the facility and possible loss of tutor privileges

- Behave in a manner that does not disrupt others
- Must be respectful of all staff (part-time staff and tutors included)
- Discard all trash in appropriate receptacles
- Accessing non-academic websites during academic sessions is prohibited
- Cell phones and other similar electronic devices are prohibited during academic sessions
- Music use is at the discretion of your academic counselor
- Please do not put your feet on the furniture, also, if you move the furniture please put it back in its original location

IMPORTANT ACADEMIC INFORMATION & EVENTS

YOU MUST BE ENROLLED IN 12 HOURS TO BE CONSIDERED A FULL TIME STUDENT AND ABLE TO PRACTICE AND COMPETE

CLASS ATTENDANCE
Class attendance is mandatory and necessary. Attend and be on-time to all classes. Please note that English 100, 101, and 105 have a very strict attendance policy. Make sure that you inform your professor of your competition schedule in advance!

DROP/ADD PROCEDURES
You MUST MEET with your academic counselor in order to add or drop a course. Your eligibility may depend on it! After the on-line drop/add period ends, you must see your academic advisor on campus to obtain a drop/add form. You must then obtain your academic counselor's signature. Should you go to the Registrar's Office without that signature, you will be turned away. REMEMBER, ONCE YOU RECEIVE THE DEAN'S APPROVAL, YOU WILL HAVE UNTIL THE END OF THAT DAY TO MAKE YOUR SCHEDULE CHANGE. DO NOT FORGET TO GET YOUR ACADEMIC SUPPORT COUNSELOR'S SIGNATURE/APPROVAL BEFORE SEEING THE REGISTRAR!

DECLARING/CHANGING YOUR MAJOR
You MUST MEET with your academic counselor in order to declare or change your major. Paperwork must be filled out and signed BEFORE you MEET with your academic advisor at the Steele Building. If you do not have the proper paperwork, you will not be able to declare/change your major with your campus advisor.

TRAVEL LETTERS
All students in their competition season need to contact their professors during the first week of school and make them aware of their travel schedule by handing them a copy of the travel letter with the conflict dates highlighted. Students need to make arrangements for these conflicts as soon as possible. Remind professors each week of pending competitions! After the second week of classes, letters will no longer be available at the Academic Center – they will ONLY be available at your coach's office. NEW POLICY: You must obtain each professor's signature and return it to your academic counselor as verification that you have met with your professor.

TEXTBOOK PURCHASE/PICK-UP POLICY (only for student-athletes designated to receive books as part of their scholarship)

- Where (Book Forms): Loudermilk Center for Excellence, Pope Academic Center Room 2417 (by computer lab)
- When (Book Forms): 10:00am-2:00pm, Tuesday, January 8 thru Wednesday, January 16
- Where (Pre-Packaged Books): Student Stores/South Road Entrance/1st floor on the left
- When (Pre-Packaged Books): 7:30am-9:00pm during Student Stores hours of operation
- Last day to purchase books: March 7th
- Save receipts for ALL purchases and returns
- All books from dropped courses must be returned to either Student Stores (with proof of receipt of return) or your academic counselor—You will not be approved to drop a class unless you either return the books or show a receipt.
- Only textbooks and course materials that are listed in the official University Book list as "required" may be purchased.

ALL STUDENT-ATHLETES

- YOU MUST MEET WITH YOUR MAJOR ADVISOR ON CAMPUS EACH SEMESTER IN ORDER TO REGISTER FOR CLASSES
- YOU MUST MEET WITH YOUR ACADEMIC SUPPORT COUNSELOR FOR AN INDIVIDUAL MEETING TO REVIEW YOUR ELIGIBILITY STATEMENT EACH SEMESTER

GRADUATING SENIORS

- At least 120 hours/2.0 cum, 1 LFIT needed
- See major advisor on campus and complete an official degree audit during your senior year
- Resume on file with University Career Services, Career Guide
- Application for 9th or 10th semester (if necessary)
- Last day to file for Spring 2013 graduation ~ Friday, February 10th
- UNDERLOAD APPROVALS MUST BE COMPLETED BY THE END OF THE FIRST WEEK OF CLASSES ~ Friday, January 11th

JUNIORS

- See major advisor on campus for academic worksheet update

- You must declare a major with your major advisor on campus before your junior year, specifically during the second semester of your sophomore year before Fall registration!

FRESHMEN

- You must meet with your advisor in the College of Arts & Sciences for initial advising appointment before registration during the Spring semester.

ACADEMIC ELIGIBILITY REQUIREMENTS

UNC* REQUIREMENTS FOR STUDENT-ATHLETES

Steps for Completing Orientation Reservations: Student-Athletes

Please carefully review all instructions below before proceeding with your Orientation Reservation. You may want a printed version of this page for reference while signing up for Orientation

1. Review Orientation Dates and Fee Policies by clicking here.

2. Review Orientation Reservation instructions by clicking here

3. Create an ONYEN (http://onyen.unc.edu)

4. Activate your UNC email account (http://my.ad.unc.edu, select Email Set-up option)

5. Pay/defer your enrollment deposit (can take 3-10 business days to receive and post)

6. Know the names and email addresses of any family members/guests attending New Student Orientation with you (for fee information regarding Parent/Family Orientation Reservations, please click here)

7. Know if any of your family members/guests attending Orientation want to make a reservation for on-campus Orientation housing. (Please note that overnight, Orientation on-campus housing is not available for family/guests attending Orientation in August.)

8. We estimate that completing your Orientation reservation will take between 20-30 minutes. Please note that once you start your reservation, you must complete all information at that time; you may not start the application, save information, and then complete it at a later time. If you close your browser, disconnect your Internet session without completing or without canceling your reservation, or leave the application idle for longer than 15 minutes, you will need to start a new reservation.

9. Go to http://my.unc.edu and select Undergraduate Orientation link

10. Enter your ONYEN and password and complete your Student and Family/Guest Orientation Reservation.

11. When you are prompted to select your Orientation Session date:
    a. If the Athletics Department has not assigned you to a specific session, please select the Orientation Session that best fits your schedule; Orientation sessions are available on a first-come, first-served basis.

    b. If the Athletics Department has confirmed an assigned Orientation session for you to attend, please select that appropriate session. If your Athletics-assigned session is not presented as an option, please make a reservation for any open session. Immediately after completing your reservation, please contact the Office of New Student & Carolina Parent Programs at newstudents@unc.edu or 919-962-8304 to verify your Orientation dates. Please be sure to include your name, PID, athletic team, and athletics assigned Orientation Session date in your email.

12. Paying for Orientation
    a. If you are not a full grant-in-aid student-athlete, when you are prompted for your Orientation payment, you may select Visa, MasterCard, check or money order. Please note that payments made by check or money order must be received and processed by the Office of New Student & Carolina Parent Programs no later than 10 days. Please make checks payable to UNC at Chapel Hill. For more information about Orientation Payments, please click here

    b. If you are a full grant-in-aid student-athlete, when you are prompted for your Orientation payment, choose the Pay-By-Check option. After you select the Pay - by-Check option, and finish your reservation, email newstudents@unc.edu to confirm your reservation, so the University Athletics credit can be applied to your Student Orientation Reservation. The email must include the following information: name, PID, athletic team, and if applicable, the athletics assigned Orientation Session date. After the credit has been applied, you will be notified of any outstanding balances related to Parent/Family Orientation Reservations that you are responsible for completing. (Please note that Parent/Family Orientation Reservation Fees and Guest Orientation Housing are not included in the athletics orientation credit. For more information about what the athletic scholarship covers, please contact the Athletic Department). A sample email is detailed below:

       Sample language for the email:
       I, (Insert Name, PID, athletics team), have reserved a place in Orientation for (Insert Date), and will be receiving a full athletics grant-in-aid. Please apply the University Athletics credit to my reservation, and recalculate the bill to let me know how much (if any) I still owe to complete my reservation.

Hi Beth,

Yes, you are still scheduled to present and we have been approved to go into closed session to discuss specific students' experiences with LEEP. I have secured permission to bring Bradley, so please let him know he should come prepared to discuss specific examples of how LEEP has impacted students.

They also want to hear about our tutoring program, so I have asked Susan to be prepared to discuss how tutorials have been organized and run since last fall.

Thanks again for your help with this.

Learning
Engagement and Enhancement Program

Mission

To support student-athletes who are the most academically challenged become goal-directed, strategic, and self-regulated learners

Philosophy

Our philosophy is both student-centered and learning-centered. We believe our students can succeed when provided an environment in which learning is a central value. The following seven principles underscore our service to student-athletes:

1. Every student is a learner.
2. Every student has potential.
3. Every student possesses valuable knowledge.
4. Every student will make his or her own learning choices.
5. Learning is an active process.
6. Learning is social.
7. Learning can be enhanced.

Goal

Every student who participates in LEEP will maintain eligibility and advance to graduation.

- Students will demonstrate increased levels of self-regulated learning.
- Students will demonstrate increased reading comprehension levels and fluency with college-level vocabulary.
- Students will demonstrate increased ability to compose college level texts

- This program was created to take a quantitative and qualitative look at WHO we are servicing in terms of Learning Specialists, Learning Assistants, and priority tutoring.
- We understand their can be "outliers" in our system, so if you have concerns about a student, please see your Learning Staff member. This does not mean they will be placed in L.E.E.P., but the Learning Staff will help counselors with implementing a program of service for the student.

2012-13 MILDRED McCASKILL AWARD

Nomination Form

The Mildred McCaskill Award was established by members of the McCaskill family to recognize her contribution and support of the athletic programs at the University of North Carolina. Originally established as an endowment scholarship, the award has been broadened to include annual recognition to an outstanding male and female SENIOR student-athlete. Excellence in athletics, scholarships, and service to the community are the criteria for the annual individual award. Please nominate any member of your team that you feel excelled in academics and community service as much as they did in their athletic realm.

Please take time to make a nomination and provide the reasons and/or examples to justify your respective selection:

Thanks!
What are the two best times during the week of March 25th where a number of advisors could hold walk-in hours in Loudermilk for pre-registration advising.
How many of your first year students have not completed their first year advising appointment or attended an advising group workshop? We need to determine quickly if there is a need for an additional group advising workshop for our ASPSA students.
Who would be willing to help lead training workshop for academic advisers on NCAA rules and guidelines regarding student-athletes' eligibility requirements?

School of Education

EDUC ADVISOR CONTACT: KARA GRAWOZBURN

IN SUMMARY: IF KIDS WANT TO DO EDUCATION….

- FEASIBLE PROGRAMS ARE ELEM AND MIDDLE GRADES

- CHILD DEVELOPMENT AND FAMILY STUDIES COULD BE FEASIBLE FOR A FALL SPORT ATHLETE, BUT ALMOST IMPOSSIBLE FOR WINTER/SPRING DUE TO LATE AFTERNOON COURSE TIMES

- WHEN STUDENT IS 'SERIOUS' ABOUT APPLYING, EMAIL COACH, TOM TIMMERMANS, AND MR. GALLO TO PROPOSE THE STUDENT IS SERIOUS ABOUT PURSING SCHOOL OF EDUCATION AND THEY COULD BE A POSSIBLE 5TH YEAR CANDIDATE TO FINISH THEIR PROGRAM.

- TOM WILL SAY, "NOT GUARANTEED" BUT AS LONG AS THEY DOING WELL ACADEMICALLY AND NOT HAVING BEHAVIOR ISSUES, THEY WILL GRANT THE 5TH YEAR.

- DO APPLICATION PROCESS, HAVE THEM MEET WITH KARA.

- IF ACCEPTED, NOTIFY COACH, TOM AND MR GALLO AGAIN TO LET THEM KNOW.

- AGAIN, TOM WILL SAY 'NOT GUARANTEED' BUT AS LONG AS STUDENT IS IN GOOD STANDING, THEY WILL BE FINE.

- HAVE THEM MEET WITH KARA TO GAME PLAN CLASSES.
    - THEY HAVE 4 SEMESTERS (JR AND SR) TO COMPLETE JR YEAR EDUC COURSES—JUST WATCH SATISFACTORY PROGRESS DURING JR YEAR, 6 HR, 18 HR RULE. IN EXTREME CIRCUMSTANCES, YOU MAY NEED TO HAVE ANOTHER MAJOR DECLARED…KARA CAN GIVE PERMISSION AND DECLARE THIS AND THEN REMOVE WHEN NEEDED.
    - WILL COMPLETE SENIOR YR COURSES IN 5TH YEAR (FALL AND SPRING STUDENT TEACHING)
    - HAVE THEM TALK TO PROFESSORS AND KARA ABOUT GETTING CLOSE TO CAMPUS PLACEMENTS AND THE ABILITY TO START PLACEMENTS EARLY, OR GET EXTENSIONS DUE TO COMPETITION/PRACTICE SCHEDULES.
    - ALSO, IN OUR TALKS, THEY SAID IT WOULD NOT BE A PROBLEM TO GET 9TH AND 10TH SEMESTER APPROVED. TALK WITH KARA IF A PROBLEM OCCURS. SEE ORIGINAL NOTES FOR EMAIL WITH THIS RECOMMENDATION.

Hello Beth and Wally,

I hope you both are doing well.

I wanted to touch base with you regarding the select group of athletes who might attend Summer Bridge. Do you happen to have a group identified that I should be reaching out to for recruitment purposes? Please let me know how I can assist in any way with this process.

Thanks,
Marcus

Hope this all sorts itself out. 'Everyone' seems to think we came up with this master plan, when it to me it seemed to me we can up with options if this was mandated for athletes to do, a big difference.

Hey Beth,

Yes, Harold mentioned to me last week or the week before that you would be leaving for South Carolina. Trying to get out of here!?! ;-) Trust me. We've both shared mutual concerns regarding communication around tbese parts. I in no way feel that this is a reflection of your unwillingness to work on this. :-) In my opinion it's become someone's grand idea but the ability to execute was not quite thought out. I will certainly reach out to Jenn. Wally also responded and said he would get back to me, so I may wait for his response.

I wish you well on your next chapter in South Carolina. So which part of South Carolina are you going to?

If I get a chance, I will definitely stop by Friday. I assume tbis is Tobacco Road that I've heard about out by the DBAP? I live in Durham, so it would work for me on the way home, provided I get away from here in time. I'm preparing for two big events on campus this weekend and might be pulling a late one on Friday.

Hey Marcus

Not sure if you caught wind but I took a position at South Carolina. Please Jenn Townsend to help you with this project in my absence. Also, just FYI, no one has communicated with us at all about tbis, so p,ease don't take it as us not trying to collaborate, we didn't know to proceed, retreat etc.

Good luck!

Having a party on Friday at Tobacco Road, love if you can stop by, 430 or any time after.

Hey Dean Woodard

Hope you are doing well! Missed you at Tobacco Road on Friday but I heard about the new chancellor, so I am sure you were at that reception.
I contacted Kim Allison about any exit paperwork, but she said she hadn't gotten my resignation letter yet. How should I proceed with this?
Thanks for any help.

2012-13 MILDRED McCASKILL AWARD

Nomination Form

The Mildred McCaskill Award was established by members of the McCaskill family to recognize her contribution and support of the athletic programs at the University of North Carolina. Originally established as an endowment scholarship, the award has been broadened to include annual recognition to an outstanding male and female SENIOR student-athlete. Excellence in athletics, scholarships, and service to the community are the criteria for the annual individual award. Please nominate any member of your team that you feel excelled in academics and community service as much as they did in their athletic realm.

Please take time to make a nomination and provide the reasons and/or examples to justify your respective selection:

UNC safety found not guilty of assaulting female student
July 21, 2003

By BETH VELLIQUETTE, The Herald-Sun
An Orange County judge on Monday afternoon found a North Carolina football player not guilty of assaulting a UNC student and exposing himself to her.

Tommy Antoine Richardson, 18, who lived at 158 Ehringhaus Dormitory on the UNC Campus, had been charged with assault on a female, misdemeanor false imprisonment and indecent exposure after an encounter with a female student at Morrison dormitory on April 24. He was a freshman safety on the football team at the time.

UNC police served Richardson with the warrants on May 5. He was suspended from the football team and from the university after his arrest. His attorney, George Doyle, said Richardson may still have to appear at the UNC Honor Court, which is a closed court in which students serve as judges, prosecutors and defense attorneys. The decisions the Honor Court makes are not made public unless the student on trial asks that the court be open.

During Monday's trial in front of District Court Judge Alonzo Coleman, the woman testified that she was walking on a path toward Morrison dormitory, where she lived, when Richardson approached her and began talking to her.

Richardson testified that he and another football player, Mahlon Carey, had just finished study hall at the Kenan Center and that he and Carey were walking to Morrison to visit a friend of Carey's who lives on the 10th floor.

The woman and Richardson both testified that when they arrived at Morrison, Richardson asked for her telephone number and she gave it to him. When they entered Morrison dorm, the woman, Richardson, Carey and other students got on the elevator going up. On the sixth floor, she got off to go to her room, and Richardson got off, too, while Carey continued on to the 10th floor.

Richardson said he asked for her Internet instant messaging name, which he wrote down on a flyer, and then asked her for a hug, he said. Richardson said he then got back on the elevator and rode up to the 10th floor, where he stayed about an hour before going back to his own dormitory.

The woman, however, claimed that after they parted on the sixth floor, she walked to her room and closed the door. She heard a knock and opened it to see Richardson standing there. Richardson grabbed her hand and pulled it toward his crotch, she said. He then exposed himself to her, she said.

Richardson took the stand in his own defense and showed his cell phone, where he had programmed her number when she gave it to him that day. He also pulled out a flyer for a party, which showed where he had written her instant messaging name that she gave him.

Richardson's high school football coach from North Miami Beach High School testified as a character witness saying that Richardson had been the student body president and captain of the football team. He was a friendly and outgoing student, who never acted inappropriately with women, said Jeff Bertani.

Defense Attorney George Doyle argued that no one knows exactly what happened that day. "We do know from our witnesses that Tommy Richardson is an outgoing, gregarious fellow," he said. "We know he is the type of person that would walk up to a fellow student without a proper introduction and introduce himself."

He asked the judge to consider two important points in making his decision: that the woman gave Richardson her cell phone number and that she gave him her Internet instant messaging name. "If you say to a person, "no" on the path going to Morrison, you don't give him your phone number," he said. "That doesn't make sense."

"If you say no on the pathway, you don't give that person your screen name," Doyle said. "If you are scared, you don't walk to your room. You walk down those steps to the police, which is right down stairs. You don't wait and think about it and report it until the next day."

Assistant District Attorney Kayley Taber argued that Richardson thought he was a big man on campus and that the woman was very shy and polite. She gave him her cell phone number while they were walking, but she began to become fearful when he asked to walk her into her dormitory, Taber said. "At that point she doesn't expect that somebody is going to expose his penis in the middle of the day," Taber said.

She gave him her instant messaging name to be polite and as a way to get rid of him, Taber said. "She's trying to be a polite Southern young lady, who's trying to get away from him," Taber said.

Coleman said it was a difficult case, but that he had a question in his mind about what really happened. Because the judicial standard is that a judge must be convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that Richardson committed the crimes, he said he found Richardson not guilty.

When he announced his decision, Richardson's mother, Stephanie Fair, raised her arms up in jubilation. Richardson walked her out of the courtroom with his arms around her while she cried tears of joy and relief.

Richardson declined comment except to give credit to Doyle. Richardson hopes to be reinstated in school and on the football team but will have to wait to see whether he has to appear in front of the Honor Court, Doyle said.

Richardson played in 11 games for the Tar Heels in 2002 and made one tackle.

Thembalihle Sidaki – Senior Prosecutor at Khayelitsha Magistrate's Court (29 April 2004). Prosecutor Sidaki has dealt with all cases related to the AEC in the Magistrate's Court - over 100 by his own account. He was also part of strategy meetings with SAPS, ANC councillor, SERVCON, Sheriff of the Court, SANCO as part of making preparations for evictions in Mandela Park and synergising efforts.

ANC Councillor Ngombane - For Mandela Park, Macassar & Graceland (29 April 2004). Councillor Ngombane has been an ANC councillor since 1996 – Mandela Park has been part of his constituency since 2000. He has been involved from the beginning of the conflict (circa 2000) in negotiations with SERVCON (on behalf of his constituency) and also active in developing structures to counter the work of the AEC. He has also been part of the strategic planning meetings as mentioned above.

Superintendent Vosloo - Interim Head of Khayelitsha Police Station (29 April 2004). Superintendent Vosloo has been active in the policing of Mandela Park since 2001. He has extensive experience in developing strategies for ensuring public order during evictions (i.e., protecting sheriff) and in carrying out arrests of AEC members, predominantly on charges of trespassing and public violence.

Mr. Miaso – Western Cape Provincial Department of Housing – Director of Administration (28 April 2004). Mr. Miaso is responsible for overseeing the administration of indigent housing grants under the rubric of the 'People's Housing Project' (PHP). The PHP has been implemented throughout Khayelitsha and is often provided to those who qualify after they have been evicted from RDP (SERVCON) houses.

Dr. Martin Legassick - University of the Western Cape History Department and long-time socialist activist (30 April 2004). Dr. Legassick works with the MPAEC. In particular, he has been involved in the facilitation of popular political education seminars as well as provision of financial and logistical support for ongoing actions of the MPAEC. He has also written and conducted research (some of which has been published) around the activities of the MPAEC.

Roger Ronnie – General Secretary of SAMWU (28 April 2004). Mr. Ronnie has been a vocal supporter of South African social movements and in particular the AEC. Through his position in SAMWU he has helped establish links between the union movement and the new social movements. He has also assisted the AEC with meeting space as well as general logistical support.

Peter van Heusden - former Treasurer of the AEC and independent researcher (29 April 2004). Peter was active in the AEC during the height of repression in Mandela Park (2001-2003). His duties included raising financial support for legal defence as well as being the primary liaison between the AEC and it various legal representatives. He has also conducted research on the activities of the AEC and is presently active with community structures in other parts of the Western Cape.

Fonky Goboza - Deputy Secretary and Office Administrator of MPAEC (30 April 2004). Mr. Goboza is a founding member of the MPAEC and has been an active leader in the Western Cape AEC. In his position as Office Administrator, he is often the first contact for people in the community who face evictions. He has also participated in meetings with other social movements, including the SMI. Mr. Goboza has been arrested and jailed on numerous occasions for his activities in the MPAEC.

Group Interview with AEC women's group (30 April 2004). Three representatives of the AEC Women's Group were collectively interviewed. Their insights covered issues related to housing in the community, police repression and the character of the MPAEC. Their views are of particular importance given that women make up the majority of the membership of the MPAEC and are at the coalface of the conflict between the community and the state.

*NOTE: After contacting a SANCO representative in Mandela Park, a meeting was set up for a collective interview with the local branch executive. However, on arrival at the meeting the bona fides of the researchers were questioned. Members of the Executive were antagonistic to our presence in the community and although the meeting was split on allowing us to continue with the interview we believed it would be best if we left the meeting. We had no further communication with the SANCO branch or individual members after this point.

Durban (Chatsworth)

Chantelle Pillay – Executive member of the Bayview Flats Residents Association - BFRA (7 June 2004). Chantelle is a founder member of the B.F.R.A. She is currently a member of the Executive and acts as the organisational secretary and she has also represented the organisation in discussions with the local councilor and City Council members. In addition, Chantelle has represented BFRA in national meetings of the Social Movements Indaba. She resides in Bayview with her extended family.

Seelan Pillay - Investigating Officer at Bayview Police Station (7 June 2004). Officer Pillay has been the chief investigating officer for Bayview Police Station since the late 1990s. He was involved in the investigations of complaints lodged by members of the community and the City Council officials, relating to incidents during the planned eviction of Bayview Flats residents in 1999. He also serves on the Bayview Community Policing Forum that was set up in 1995.

Orlean Naidoo – Founder member and Chairperson of the Westcliff Residents Association – WRA (7 June 2004). As Chairperson of the WRA Orlean has been active in the Concerned Citizens Forum, in allied struggles with the BFRA and has participated in numerous mobilisations and struggles in and around Chatsworth and the Greater Durban area. She continues to remain active in ongoing struggles around basic service provision in the community.

Devan Pillay – Chairperson of the ANC Bayview Branch, Chairperson of the Bayview Residents Association – BRA - and longtime community activist (8 June 2004). Mr. Pillay is a veteran of the anti-apartheid struggle and has participated in numerous community structures including, the Natal Indian Congress, the UDF and the BRA (founder member). He currently is active in the Bayview CPF and has run for local government office. He also participates in meetings between the City Council and the Bayview community related to the ongoing Council Development Programme in Chatsworth.

Megan Naidoo – Head of Finance Section for the Durban City Council, Department of Housing (8June 2004). Mr. Naidoo oversees the finance department and his duties include: handling of all billing for basic services and council rental stock. He also has extensive knowledge of Council practices in relation to evictions and financial strategic planning.

T. Palan – Minority Front Councillor (proportional representative) for Ward 69 in Chatsworth - Durban City Council (9 June 2004). Mr. Palan has been a local councillor since the 1970s and has also served as a parliamentarian in the House of Delegates under the tri-cameral system in the 1980s. He has served in his current position since 1999 and has participated in meetings with the BFRA and has extensive knowledge of local politics in the area.

Chanta Reddy – Attorney in the law firm Chanta Reddy & Associates (10 June 2004). Ms. Reddy previously worked for another law firm that represented the BFRA and the Concerned Citizens Group in a number of legal matters. Most notably, she was crucial in securing an interdict against the Durban City Council in 1999, which prevented the eviction of a resident of Bayview flats and which contributed to the current moratorium on evictions in the area. She has also been involved in other legal cases relating to water cut-offs in Bayview and other areas in Durban.

Heinrich Bomhke – legal representative for the Concerned Citizens Forum (CCF) and long-time activist in Durban (8 June 2004). Mr. Bomhke is a founder member of the CCF and its key legal strategist. He has also written extensively on the community struggles in Durban and more broadly and has been participated in numerous discussions and meetings at a national level with other social movements. He has been involved in all major mobilisations and actions of the CCF since its formation.

Fatima Meer – Founder member of the Concerned Citizens Group (CCG) and a long-time anti-apartheid activist (10 June 2004). Mrs. Meer has been an ANC member and leader in Durban for many decades and is the official biographer of Nelson Mandela. She currently serves as patron of the BFRA and remains a key member of the CCF. Although she recently suffered a debilitating stroke, Mrs. Meer continues to be active in community struggles in and around Durban.

Brandon Pillay – Chairperson of the Bayview Flats Residents Association (14 June 2004). Mr. Pillay helped found the BFRA and throughout its existence has held the position of Chairperson. He has been the BFRA representative on numerous community structures and has represented the organisation in negotiations/talks with the Durban City Council. He has participated in the Bayview CPF and presently sits on the consultative forum overseeing the City Council's Development Programme in Chatsworth.

Collective/Group Interview with BFRA members (14 June 2004). A group over 10 BFRA members were brought together and interviewed in an open-discussion format. Most of these were ordinary members and the vast majority were women. All aspects of BFRA history and activities were covered as well as personal experiences/stories.

Johannesburg (Orange Farm)

Michael Motlhala - Commissioner of Orange Farm Police Station (20 July 2004). Commissioner Motlhala has been in his present position since mid-2002. He was brought in from the headquarters of the Vaal Policing District (under which the Orange Farm Police Station falls) ostensibly to 'ensure service delivery' from the SAPS after the previous Commissioner was 'redeployed' due to lack of performance. He is involved in overseeing and managing the various CPF's in the Orange Farm area and sits on an advisory committee/forum all of the municipal entities operating in the Greater Johannesburg Metro.

Alina Mahlangu – ANC Ward Councillor in Orange Farm (15 July). Mrs. Mahlangu has been a ward councillor for the ANC in Orange Farm since 2001. Her ward covers eight different sections of Orange Farm including Stretford Extension 4 - the area in which pre-paid water meters have been installed. She has been at the forefront of supporting the installation of pre-paid meters in Orange Farm and has been involved in both political and physical confrontations with activists from the Orange Farm Water Crisis Committee (OFWCC).

Philemon Jiba – Co-ordinator of the Orange Farm Community Advice Centre (13 July 2004). Mr. Jiba, a resident of Orange Farm, has been running the Community Advice Centre since its inception in the late 1990s. His work involves providing legal and administrative advice to community residents on a range of socio-economic issues as well as mediating, on behalf of residents, with relevant government agencies. In the past two years, the Mr. Jiba and the Centre staff have become intricately involved in taking up issues and struggles involving the OFWCC.

Brickes Mokolo – Organiser for the Orange Farm Water Crisis Committee and long-time political/community activist (15 July 2004). Mr. Mokolo is a founding member of the OFWCC and one of its most recognisable and popular leaders. Prior to the formation of the OFWCC, he was active in SANCO and also has a long history of community/political activism dating back to the early 1980s. Besides his ongoing organising work in the community, Mr Mokolo has represented the OFWCC in most of its formal dealings with local councillors, government officials and has also engaged in extensive international travel on behalf of both the OFWCC and the Anti-Privatisation Forum.

Sam Makgoka – Deputy Chairperson of the Orange Farm Water Crisis Committee (13 July 2004). Mr Makgota is one of the founder-members of the OFWCC and was one of the first group of people to be moved to Orange Farm in the early 1990s. Prior to the formation of the OFWCC he was one leaders of the community that negotiated with government on behalf of residents over issues of housing and basic services. He is involved in the Itsoseng Co-operative (aligned to the OFWCC) that runs a number of income-generating projects and social services.

Tseko Mokwena – Activist within the Orange Farm Water Crisis Committee (15 July 2004). Mr. Mokwena has been an activist with the OFWCC since 2002 and lives in Extension 7b – an area covered by another ANC ward councillor (Thumela Potledi), where Johannesburg Water has been attempting to roll-out pre-paid water meters. Mr Mokwena was assaulted by the ANC councillor at an OFWCC meeting in April this year and filed charges.

Assah Phohledi – Former SANCO and CPF leader in Orange Farm (13 July 2004). Mr Phohledi arrived with one of the first groups of relocated residents in Orange Farm in 1990. He was involved in the community's initial attempts to establish a civic/residents organisation and went on to help launch the local SANCO branch. He held several positions in SANCO, the CPF and the local RDP committee before resigning due to the corruption and political opportunism amongst the leadership of these structures.

Collective/group Interview with OFWCC members (20 July 2004). A group of seven OFWCC members were brought together and interviewed in an open-discussion format. All aspects of OFWCC history and activity was covered as well as broader discussion around privatisation and poverty issues.

*NOTE: We interviewed a female teacher from Matewane Secondary School in Orange Farm (who did not want to be identified) who had been suspended for several months due to active opposition against the effects of privatisation of education. She, alongside some parents of the school's learners, subsequently approached the OFWCC for organisational and political assistance.

*NOTE: We attempted for several weeks to arrange an interview with a senior member of the management of Johannesburg Water (JW). After repeated phone calls and faxes (including providing JW with our interview questions), we were informed that JW would not grant us an interview and were simply told to visit the JW website for information.

Other interviews

Jackie McKay – Head of Information Centre of the National Intelligence Agency (20 May 2004). Mr. McKay provided us with a formal briefing of the NIA's structures and operations as well as its role vis-à-vis the struggles and activities of the new social movements. We were not allowed to bring any recording equipment to the interview, ostensibly fro security reasons.

Patrick Flusk – Deputy Director-General in the Department of Provincial and Local Government responsible for 'free basic services and infrastructure' (May 2004). Mr. Flusk has been with the department for several years and has been the official most involved with socio-economic issues that have directly affected poor communities. This was the only telephonic interview we conducted.

*NOTE: Several unsuccessful attempts were made to set-up an interview with the National Commissioner of the South African Police Services (SAPS) - or any other senior official. We were constantly told that the department would 'get back to us', but this never transpired.

African & Afro-American Studies

The current goal of African and Afro-American Studies at UNC-CH is to give specific and precise attention to the histories, cultures, and cultural linkages of the peoples of Africa and their descendants in the New World. Although students must concentrate in either African or Afro-American Studies, all majors must gain competence in both areas and thereby come to understand the cultural and historical continuities and contrasts between Africa and the African New World.

The purpose of the African Studies concentration is to develop an analytical approach to contemporary Africa. Courses stress the importance of traditional values and institutions to the definition of modern African society, and stress the historic range of commercial and political relationships with Europe and the New World. The purpose of the concentration in Afro-American Studies is to develop a broad knowledge of the history and culture of the peoples of African descent in the Americas and the significant social, political, economic, and humanistic issues they face.

Career Opportunities

The skills and perspectives of African Studies provide an excellent background for students considering careers in international development, education, business, government, or diplomacy.

Students concentrating in Afro-American Studies go on to a wide variety of managerial, teaching, and research positions. Other careers for which an Afro-American Studies concentration is excellent preparation include law, the foreign service, various positions in government, communications, social work, community development, and public administration. All persons whose future work might require substantial contact with African Americans can benefit from completing the requirements of the degree. Likewise, students who wish knowledge and appreciation of African American culture for its own sake will find the program challenging.

Double Major

Many students opt to combine African & Afro-American Studies with a major in such fields as English, Music, History, and Psychology. Increasing numbers of pre-law and pre-med students are choosing a double major in African & Afro-American Studies as a prerequisite for successful careers in or involving the black community. Social agencies, offices of civil rights compliance, and equal opportunity offices deliberately recruit workers with a background in this field. Students who are inclined toward the creative arts often wish to deepen their sensitivities and insights into the myriad aspects of black culture. Artists, writers, and musicians have long drawn thematic and textual materials from the African and Afro-American experience. The double major in African & Afro-American Studies is an appropriate complement to virtually any field of endeavor.

Actually they were rather bright red. I actually picked up some info for future classes. Hope things aren't too out of hand! Here's the AFAM 40 Syllabus -- should fit on one sheet front and back as is, if not feel free to manipulate and rebuild. Working on the Freshman now.

See you soon.

DESCRIPTION: AFAM 40, introduction to the American Black Experience (to the Civil War), has two primary objectives. The first objective is to provide a clear understanding of the origins of the Trans-Atlantic Slave trade and the impact of this trade on Africa, Europe, and (Native) America; the second objective is to apply this understanding to contemporary American society to examine the roots of our cultural diversity. I hope you will examine how we know what we know and the politics of the educational process in addition to internalizing the "facts" of history. We will use a variety of methods and techniques to examine the place that black Americans hold and have held in U.S. society. I will focus on North Carolina for examples, and hope to integrate the broad topics of black studies with our specific locale.

FORMAT: This course will consist of lectures and discussion and four videos. Note that the videos are important sources of information and will be addressed in your exams. If you wish to review the videos they are available in the Media Resources Center in the Undergrad library.

REQUIREMENTS: There will be a midterm exam, a short essay, a quiz, and a final examination. If you must miss class be sure that you get the notes from another student—much of the material covered in lectures is not in the text. Please complete assigned readings before they are due. Make sure to consult the websites mentioned in class, particularly the website that is associated with the Africans in America video series.

--Incompletes are not automatically granted so please complete all work on time.

--There is no extra-credit.

HONOR CODE: You are required to be familiar with and to follow the Honor Code at U.N.C.

Please note, this is an automated response alias which brings you a link to the webpage. Please do not email questions that can be resolved by checking the webpage, such as dates available, requests Reservation Request forms or guidelines. These are available on the website.

You can check Toy Lounge availability by clicking a link on the website. Please remember you will need transition time of at least 45 minutes, or more, if catering, etc. is involved, between your meeting and other meetings scheduled.

A link to the Reservation Request form is on the website.

To serve alcohol in Toy Lounge, you must complete an Alcohol Use Request form ahead of time and send it to the Dean's Office. These are available through a link on the website. From the Dean's Office it will go to the Provost's Office and then be returned to you. You must have this approved form on file before serving alcohol at any event in Toy Lounge.

To reserve Toy Lounge, you must submit a signed hard copy Reservation Request form (link on website). No reservation is confirmed until this form is received. The form can be mailed to CB 1504 or dropped off at 106 Dey Hall. (There is a drop box.) Please do not come to Dey Hall expecting to make a reservation. Forms are not available there; they are available only on the website.

As you can imagine, it is important to observe all Toy Lounge usage guidelines. These are posted in Toy Lounge and linked to the webpage. Failure to observe guidelines, such as returning the key on a timely basis, returning furniture to place and removing all trash, may impact future reservation requests by your group.

Note: Please do not email or call to check Toy Lounge availability or to get a blank reservation form; these are available on the website. No reservations will be made by phone, by emailed forms or in person; all reservations require delivery of a signed hard copy Reservation Request form.

Thanks to Rob Moore in Romance Languages for overseeing this. Questions that cannot resolved above may be directed to toylounge@unc.edu.

Please let us know if you have further questions or suggestions on expediting the Toy Lounge reservation process.

Dear Professor

I am writing to express my gratitude for the time you took to write a letter of reference for Professor Georges Nzongola-Ntalaja during our recruitment effort. I am pleased to inform you that Professor Nzongola-Ntalaja accepted our offer and will be joining us on July 1, 2007 as full Professor, after he finalizes his duties at the United Nations.

I know that writing a letter of reference took an enormous amount of time and effort on your part. I therefore thank you for being part of this process, and for contributing to its success.

Yours Sincerely,

Julius E Nyang'oro

CCO and SPC Instructors --
We have had some significant changes in our processes lately, and it is time to share some of that with you. I will try to keep this brief so that you can catch the drift of the changes without having to know all the background. If you have questions or would like more information, please feel free to let me or Judith Benowitz know.

The biggest change is that the University decided that instructors of all credit courses offered through the Friday Center must hold some type of academic appointment in the academic department offering the course. This came as a result of our recent reaccreditation review by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, and is viewed, in my words, as a tightening up of the criteria for who teaches these courses. SPC courses and instructors from the other member institutions of the Self-paced Consortium are not affected by this.

Second, we are now trying to plan a year in advance for both CCO and SPC in working with departments on which courses will be offered and who will be the instructors; this is more of a change for CCO. Part of this process is that the University Registrar's Office routinely rolls over every semester's courses and instructors to the same semester the next academic year -- fall 2006 to fall 2007, etc. Because of this, it may seem that a particular course is going to be offered or a particular instructor is going to teach a course when, in fact, neither will happen. By planning further in advance, we hope to avoid having incorrect information disseminated.

This long range planning is also a result of the efforts in the College of Arts and Sciences to incorporate distance education better into the workings of each department. The Dean appointed a task force to review the situation and make recommendations, and we are waiting to see just what the end result will be. And, that is the next message - that there may be more changes coming.

Finally, while this is a time of change, we are excited by the direction in which the changes seem to be moving. We look forward to having the departments more involved in both CCO and SPC, and we are very pleased to think that CCO and SPC courses may become more integral to the ways in which each department offers its courses.

Thanks to you for working with us. Let me know if you have questions or comments.

TIM MCMILLAN

Department of African and AfroAmerican Studies

"Professor Timothy McMillan wholeheartedly believes that no power is greater than the gift of education," writes a student from his First Year Seminar class in a letter of nomination for the Tanner Teaching Award. Professor McMillan's teaching is so exemplary that another of his students noted "he set the bar for me for what an education at Carolina should be...and he set that bar very high." Several students noted that even in large classes Professor McMillan made them feel as if he was speaking directly to them as individuals while discussing topics with the entire class. The praise for Prof. McMillan's teaching does not stop with his students. A nomination letter from one of his peers notes that McMillan's "passion for the subject infects everyone in the class, including me."

Professor McMillan comes to UNC from UNC: after earning his B.A., M.A., and Ph.D. in Chapel Hill, we were fortunate to be able to lure him back to join the University in 1997. Since returning to UNC, Professor McMillan has been a leader in the education of undergraduates and the public. He developed the first African American Studies Department First Year Seminar course, and individuals and groups from across the state seek him out for his "Black and Blue" tour outlining UNC's black history. He remains a favorite on campus and has even been called "campus famous" because he has an "honest and humorous style of teaching [that] proves to be the tool that draws every one of his students into his lectures."

Professor McMillan has an obvious dedication to educating North Carolinians. Students, peers and the community recognize his excellence in teaching, but one student feared that this excellence was "under appreciated." Such universal appeal is rare in the University, so it is time for the University to show its true appreciation by awarding Professor Timothy McMillan a Tanner Award for Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching.

TANNER AWARD FOR EXCELLENCE IN UNDERGRADUATE TEACHING

JAMES A. ROSE

Department of Physics and Astronomy

On the last day of his Observational Astronomy course, Professor Rose dons a wizard costume and presents himself as "AstroJim." Calling each student by their astronomy nickname, he inducts them into an order of "astronomy knights"—an elect few who have mastered the art of astronomical observing. The humor, creativity, and engagement demonstrated by this ceremony epitomizes why Professor James Rose is a memorable teacher and the perfect recipient of a Tanner teaching award.

Professor Rose brings a rare energy to his classes. Always enthusiastic, he works hard to ensure that all his students learn highly complex topics, gauging the class and pacing the content so that everyone understands the concepts. As one student observes, "I have never seen Professor Rose grow impatient with any line of reasoning; this allows students the security to think out of the box and perform at a greater level of creativity." From his being propelled across the room on a skateboard, to sending students careening in wheelie chairs, Professor Rose's demonstrations of physics are always entertaining and memorable.

He has taught two First-Year seminars, most recently one on the Copernican Revolution, in which he took his freshmen out to Jordan Lake at night to observe Jupiter. For the course in Observational Astronomy, students commit to all-night labs; they marveled that Professor Rose gives "everyone his phone number so that [they] could call him at ANYTIME" if they had trouble with the Morehead telescope. "He didn't mind us calling him at 1:00 a.m.," one student attests.

Passionate, funny, and completely committed to teaching, "AstroJim" gets undergraduates to love Physics. Students never forget him or his classes, and they will be thrilled to know that he has been awarded a Tanner Teaching award.

Dear Colleagues:
The information that I sent you yesterday regarding approval of FYS was incorrect. Hopefully, uncertainty re: the approval process for FYS is now resolved. I have listed the steps below, clarifying that Step 2 (consultation with me) is optional. I hope that my error did not cause you too much trouble.

Steve

FYS should be proposed a year before they are first offered. Deadlines for submission of on-line course proposal forms (Step 3) are September 15th and January 15th, so the proposal process should be initiated with sufficient time budgeted for Step 1 and the optional Step 2.

Step 1: Discuss the idea for the FYS with your Departmental Chair or Director of Undergraduate Studies to explore feasibility and ascertain departmental commitment to offering the FYS if approved.

Step 2: This step is optional but recommended: Complete the FYS Prospectus Form and submit it to Associate Dean Steve Reznick for initial review. This step could provide helpful advice on how to organize a successful FYS and possibly avoid problems that might arise in Step 4.

Step 3: Route your proposal to your departmental course scheduling officer who will submit an on-line new course proposal form. If an FYS Prospectus Form was created in Step 2, attach it to the on-line proposal as the course syllabus.

Step 4: New course proposals go to the Subcommittee on General Education, and then to the Administrative Boards for final approval.

A) Faculty Bio:
Provide a short paragraph with a description of yourself. Include academic interests as well as personal information. This information will be used to promote your course. Please limit your bio to no more than 100 words.

B) Seminar description:
Please provide a description that summarizes the seminar's content and goals using terms that will be familiar to a lay audience or that are defined within the description. We will use this description in various materials that describe your seminar. Please limit your seminar description to no more than 150 words.

C) Topics and Readings:
Include a list of topics that will be covered in the seminar broken down into teaching units, and a list of materials (i.e., books, articles, films) that will be used in the seminar.

D) Active Learning Components:
The FYS Program promotes active learning. Please describe the learning and teaching activities that will be used in this class, being reasonably specific about the kind of interactive work that the students will be responsible for, in and outside the classroom, and how such work will affect their final grade. An optimal FYS will minimize traditional lecture-oriented activities, and integrate a combination of independent research, group projects, performances, and/or other activities.

E) Out-of-classroom activities:
If your course will include activities that take place outside of the classroom, please describe them.

F) Communication Intensive Components:
If the proposed FYS is to meet the Communication Intensive Connection, provide a brief description of how writing and speaking will be integrated into the subject matter of the course, making effective communication of the content a substantial portion (at least 20%) of the grade for the course, and how written and oral assignments will reflect course content and promote the revision of writing or speaking in response to feedback and discussion.

G) Evaluation:
Please describe how student work will be evaluated and how grades will be assigned. Note that a final exam is not required in an FYS.

Alice and all -

Thanks for letting me know about the discrepancy on the University Registrar Calendar for Spring 2008. The calendar on our website has now been updated to show the correct date of September 29, 2007 for the entry "Registration begins according to Registration Schedule". Attached is a copy of the calendar as a word document if you would like to print a revised copy.

Thanks,

Playing fantasy football in the ACC

STIRLING HAIG

CHAPEL HILL - I'm a professor and I believe in collegiate athletics in balance with academic achievement. Mens sana in corpore sano. I once wrestled for UNC-Chapel Hill, my alma mater. My nickname is "Coach." Really.

And I should further confess right at the start that I was a professor of French. O mon dieu! I ought to have gone to law school or become a historian or a businessman, but I just liked French literature. And to think that it doesn't exist anymore (a victim of cultural studies). Well, never mind.

Here's my dilemma: I love sports, but I oppose "big-time" athletics.

Oh, in the old days I believed in the possibility of reform. I believed in the Knight Commission. With the chairman of the English department, I engaged in spirited public debate on the place of athletics within the university -- on the other side were then-Director of Athletics John Swofford and the faculty athletics representative. I joined a rump committee of faculty members who met privately with then-Chancellor Paul Hardin to discuss reform -- until he figured out that we were gadflies with absolutely no power.

Now UNC is No. 1 in the nation in raising contributions for athletics. The Chronicle of Higher Education reports it; The N&O's Ruth Sheehan devotes a column to it. A Duke professor tells her that faculty feel they're "riding some sort of tiger." Bill Friday tells her that it's all about money, that faculty should have a voice in this matter; but they see "that their chancellors haven't done anything to stop the commercialization of collegiate sports, so they wonder, 'Why should I?' " Maybe some brave chancellors will "step up and regain control."

Maybe. But there's a chancellor search going on right now at Chapel Hill, and from experience I can assure you of this: It is a given, a lock, a slam dunk that whoever he/she turns out to be will 1) certainly have good academic and administrative credentials and 2) just as certainly be an enthusiastic supporter of big-time athletics.

Reformers need not apply. The trustees hire the chancellor, who answers to them -- not the faculty -- on athletics. The trustees want skyboxes, Jumbotrons, private "Ram" roads for speedy ingress/egress to and from athletic facilities. They want bowl games, Final Fours, national championships!

And yet I still nurture a faint hope for reform. My proposal won't fly, but I'll still take a chance and loft it as a half-court desperation shot, a Hail Mary pass, as it were.

Let's reconfigure the ACC. Let's form a new, smaller conference based on a group of regional institutions of excellent academic reputation. They would enforce high entrance standards for all applicants. No athletic recruiting per se, but applicants with athletic talent and high class rank may be identified. I can envision the results now: a Naismith Award candidate with a Phi Beta Kappa key! An

All-American soccer player on her way to Oxford with her Rhodes scholarship! My Tar Heel heart soars in unison with the graduation rates.

My core members would be UNC-Chapel Hill, N.C. State University, Wake Forest, Duke, the University of Virginia, William & Mary. Too few schools to make a conference, and perhaps too "North Carolina." Add Vanderbilt? Does Georgetown play football? Help me flesh this out, folks. In homage to our Ivy League model, we could call it the Kudzu Konference. Just kidding. No, AAC would be better: the Academic Athletic Conference. I keep trying to reunite those twin ideals; I'm still a reformaholic.

(Stirling Haig is professor of French, emeritus, at UNC-Chapel Hill.)

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill

FACULTY APPOINTEE CERTIFICATIONS AND CONDITIONS OF EMPLOYMENT (PAGE 1 OF 2 PAGES)

Appointee's Full Name:	Enter Full Name Here
Primary Rank Title:	Enter Rank Title Here
Base Department / Name:	Enter Dept # - Department Name Here ...

In order to receive a compensated temporary or permanent faculty appointment with the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, you must agree to the following conditions of employment. In the case of unpaid appointments, agreement to these conditions applies as of the first date that work is performed for pay.

1. Federal law requires each new employee to complete the "Employee Information and Verification" section of the Federal Immigration Service Form I-9 and to submit certain original documents for examination in order to verify and certify identification and employment eligibility. The University requires the completion of these requirements no later than three (3) business days of the employee's first day of work counting the first day.
2. In compliance with North Carolina law, the University verifies each employee's legal status or authorization to work in the United States after hiring using the Department of Homeland Security's Basic Pilot Program. Your employment will be terminated if you fail to comply with the employment authorization requirements or if it is determined that you are not authorized to work in the United States.
3. North Carolina law requires notice to every applicant for state employment that willfully providing false or misleading information or failing to disclose relevant information shall be grounds for rejection of an application or later disciplinary action or criminal prosecution. Dismissal from employment shall be mandatory in any case in which a false or misleading representation is made in order to meet position qualifications. The employer is required by law to verify an applicant's representations about credentials and other qualifications relevant to employment. By executing this document, you authorize the release to The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill of any document or information within the possession of a third party, such as an educational institution or licensure board, that may serve to verify any representations made by you on this Form AP2a and on the University's "Recommendation for EPA Personnel Action" (Form AP-2) which must also be completed prior to employment.
4. The University will complete a criminal conviction check prior to the appointee's first scheduled day of work. A criminal conviction does not in and of itself prevent an appointee from being employed by the University. The nature of some convictions, however, may cause certain appointments to be unavailable to you. Failure to completely disclose information about a criminal conviction or plea on the prescribed University forms is considered falsification and may result in the appointee not being eligible for employment at the University.
5. The University requires all of its employees hired on or after July 1, 1999 to be paid by "direct deposit" into a bank or credit union account. In order to satisfy this requirement, you understand you must submit the direct payroll deposit authorization (Form PR-8) to the University Payroll Department by the end of your first workweek. Your signature below certifies that you understand you will not receive a paycheck from the University until the appropriate payroll forms have been completed and submitted.
6. You understand that you are required to provide your U.S. Social Security Number (if one has been issued to you) so the University can satisfy its income-reporting and withholding obligations under North Carolina and federal laws. Unless this sentence is marked through and initialed by you, you voluntarily permit the use of your social security number for internal record keeping and information management operations. However, you understand you will be randomly assigned a University-generated personal identification number (PID) which the University will instead use whenever possible.
7. You understand, if your position's duties expose you to blood borne pathogens or other potentially infectious material, you are required to attend the University Environment, Health & Safety Office's OSHA-required training within your first 10 days at work. You also understand that to comply with University policy, if your position's duties include engaging in University health care activities, you must (a) satisfactorily complete a tuberculosis screening skin test (PPD) within your first 10 days of work, and (b) disclose to your department head, dean, division chief, Office of the Provost, or the chair of the University's A.I.D.S. Task Force if you are currently, or later become, infected with either the HIV or Hepatitis B viruses

8. State law requires each permanent employee regularly scheduled to work full-time (75% full-time equivalent) hours or more each workweek to participate in either the Teachers' and State Employees' Retirement System (TSERS) or the Optional Retirement Plan (ORP). The appointee makes an irrevocable election to participate in one of these retirement plan options within 60 days of his/her hire effective date. Each employee presently is required to contribute six percent of his/her gross salary by payroll deduction, and that the State retains the right to amend the contribution rate.

9. North Carolina law requires certification that you are in compliance with the registration requirements of the Military Selective Service Act (http://www.sss.gov/must.htm) prior to appointment. The University is required by law to verify such compliance. If you do not answer affirmatively to either Question A, B or C listed below, you will be notified that a proposed finding of ineligibility for employment will be finalized, unless, within 30 days, you provide information which establishes compliance with the registration requirements of the Military Selective Service Act.

(Select A, B, or C)

A. ___ I certify that I am registered with Selective Service.

B. ___ I certify that I am not required to be registered with the Selective Service because (select one):

___ I am a female. ___ I am under the age of eighteen years.
___ I was born before 1960. ___ I am a non-immigrant alien.
___ I am in the armed services on active duty (Reserves and National Guard are not considered on active duty.)
___ I am a permanent resident of the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands or Northern Mariana Islands.

C. ___ I certify that my requirement to be registered with the Selective Service has expired or is inapplicable, and (select one):

___ I was registered when the requirement was applicable to me.
___ I was not registered when the requirement was applicable to me, but my failure to register was not a knowing and willful failure to register. Please explain on attached signed and dated sheet.

Appointee's Signature: _____ Date: _____

Appointing Department Representative Signature: _____ Date: _____

Important Benefits Notifications: For your information, you should also note the following time-sensitive enrollment deadlines regarding certain benefits for eligible appointees following your hire effective date:

- If you are eligible for employee health insurance, election to participate in the State's employee health insurance plan must be received within 30 days of your hire effective date. The employee has the option of choosing this health insurance coverage to begin on the first day of either the first or second month following employment. Health insurance coverage for hire effective dates prior to the selected coverage effective date is the appointee's responsibility.
- If you are eligible for retirement benefits, you are required within sixty (60) days of your hire effective date to elect participation in either the North Carolina Teacher's and State Employees' Retirement System (TSERS) or the University of North Carolina Optional Retirement Plan (ORP). Your failure to make this election within this period on the required forms irrevocably results in the automatic election of TSERS as your retirement plan. Please ensure you take immediate action following your hire to exercise this important option.

Hi Travis,
Eunice and I are planning a round table on the election. It will take place next Monday at noon - you booked Toy Lounge for it. We'd like to have some juices/sodas and bottled water and will need help getting the drinks to Toy Lounge. Would you and our student assistant be able to help us? I could put the drinks in my car, but the closest parking would probably be near Memorial Hall. We could try to take the drinks between 11:30 -12:00. Please let me know if you have any suggestions and if some type of cart might be a possibility.

Thanks,
Kia

Dear Friend,
This year a team of us have joined together to raise money for the UNC KidneyKare 5k walk/run on March 21, 2009 in loving memory of Janice L. Mills. Many of you helped us become the top fundraiser for the march last year. We're hoping you'll join us again by walking, running, or contributing! For more information and to contribute easily online, please see the webpage for our site: Jan's Friends for Kidney Kare at Tell your friends about this campaign. It raises money for the Kidney Education Outreach Program(KEOP) that creates public awareness about this disease that strikes one in nine residents of North Carolina.

Join us in honoring Jan's memory and to help others save their lives through early detection.

Thank you in advance for your support.

UNC HOME ADMISSIONS FOR PARENTS ALUMNI GIVE TO CAROLINA ATHLETICS

April 2009 Special Edition: Champions Again!

TAR HEELS TAKE THE TITLE

The Tar Heels are No. 1 - again! Carolina, led by Coach Roy Williams along with senior starters Tyler Hansbrough and Danny Green, claimed its second national basketball championship in the last four years Monday night in Detroit. The Tar Heel faithful celebrated on Franklin Street, and they'll gather again today when the team returns to a jubilant Smith Center.

Carolina spotlights our students' remarkable academic achievements in "We celebrate all our champions - Whether they can dunk or not," an ad debuting last year with Nobel Prize winner Oliver Smithies. This year we feature five winners of distinguished scholarships - the Rhodes, Churchill, Goldwater, Luce and Truman. Carolina is among the most successful universities in producing students who have what it takes to earn these prestigious awards. See the ad here.

Woody Durham, the voice of the Tar Heels, lends a hand in a light-hearted video look at Carolina's future inspired by the familiar ad tagline that's a post-script to Super Bowl broadcasts. See the video, go to UNC's YouTube Channel. If you haven't seen Coach Williams' appearance in a new "Guitar Hero" television ad, check it out. Joining him are Mike Krzyzewski, Rick Pitino and Bobby Knight.

Go Heels!

Digital Edition May/June 2010

The May/June issue of the Carolina Alumni Review's digital edition is now available. Go to the new issue to read:

To Love Like This
In the fifth championship year, when the Heels went on a run, their fans went on a running dialogue. Yay for the virtual cheering section.

The Perfectly Placed Modifier
Daphne Athas '43 lived in a shack, but she "owned" a university. At 41 years on the faculty and counting, she's a strong link to the old soul of Chapel Hill — and Carrboro — and to a couple of generations of students she taught how to break the rules.

These Seeds She Planted
As the shock of Eve Carson's death eased, the promise of her legacy has been fulfilled in a renewed commitment to improving lives and institutions.

The following message is being sent separately to the DDD list.

In follow-up to recent communications regarding the designation of CDMEs within your units, both of our departments have received questions on making the decision to designate CDMEs. Here is some brief guidance to assist you and your units in this process.

CRITICAL DUTIES AND STAFF

As a reminder, CDMEs are employees who perform functions that are absolutely essential to the continuation of core University operations during a potential multi-week public health emergency. During such a time frame:

-- Classes have been canceled
-- Students have been sent home unless otherwise directed by public health authorities
-- Most University operations have been suspended
-- Employee absenteeism is expected to rise approximately 20-40 percent
-- Most personnel and financial systems have been automated and/or are being administered centrally

In these situations, CDMEs perform:

-- activities related to direct patient care
-- activities related to supporting students who must remain on campus
-- maintenance/operation of University infrastructure critical during a public health emergency
-- maintenance/operation of critical University-sponsored research activities

Examples of individuals we would expect to be designated as CDMEs include:

-- leadership/managers deemed critical to essential core University functions
-- public safety personnel
-- physicians, nurses and other health professionals who provide direct patient care
-- maintenance and administrative staff essential in a health care setting
-- essential University-wide utilities and physical plant personnel
-- lab animal care personnel
-- residential staff and student union staff to support a student population of 6,000 (2,000 on site; 4,000 offsite)

Designation of CDMEs should be limited to as few positions as possible to maintain these duties.

NON-CRITICAL DUTIES AND STAFF

In contrast, work that would not be considered essential during a public health emergency includes:

-- routine academic and administrative duties
-- routine student affairs duties
-- routine conduct and maintenance of research operations

Examples of individuals we would NOT expect to be designated as CDMEs include:

-- teaching faculty and faculty administrators
-- departmental business officers, accountants, contract and grant administrators
-- HR facilitators and other administrative support specialists
-- development personnel
-- library staff
-- research staff, determined by the type of research being performed
-- student services and admissions personnel

APPOINTMENTS OF CDMEs

Normally, CDMEs are permanent employees. SPA and EPA policies provide additional time-and-a-half compensation to CDME permanent employees required to report to a worksite during a public health emergency.

In the event that permanent staff are unavailable or not qualified to perform essential functions, temporary employees may be designated as CDMEs. However, temporary employees are not eligible for time-and-a-half compensation as CDMEs.

Student employees should not be designated as CDMEs.

PRIMARY CDMEs vs BACK-UP CDMEs

Departments that have staff who perform public health emergency duties should identify at least one layer of back-up for every CDME designated staff member. Advance planning of these designations is strongly recommended, and the policy recognizes that some employees may be required to fill necessary vacancies in primary CDME staff in the midst of a public health emergency.

CDME DESIGNATION IN HRIS AND EPAWEB

Currently, the HR systems have only one CDME category. We are working to update our HR systems to allow CDME designations of "primary" and "back-up." For now, departments may designate both their primary and back-up CDMEs in the HR systems or may choose to designate only the primaries in the systems but inform the back-up staff that they may be activated when and if they are needed. Please note that in the HRIS system, temporary employees cannot currently be designated as CDMEs; departments would have to maintain lists of those employees separately. EPAWeb has the capability to track temps.

HR Data Warehouse is updated each night for changes to both EPAWeb and HRIS as it relates to Communicable Disease Mandatory designations. Departments may obtain a list of everyone in their department and their status by running a Detail Report from the Warehouse and selecting "Communicable Disease Mandatory Employee" from the Available Fields. Be sure to select "All Permanent and Temporary Employees," "Active Employees (Including On-Leave)," "All Employees" and "All Full- and Part-Time Employees" in the Select Employee Criteria. Human Resources is in the process of revising the field labels from "Public Health Essential" to "Communicable Disease Mandatory Employee" or "CDME" in EPAWeb and HRIS. The HR Data Warehouse label is being updated to Communicable Disease Mandatory Employee overnight tonight.

Based on these additional guidelines, we ask that you continue to carefully review, identify and update your CDME designations by May 8.

If you have questions regarding CDME designations, contact your assigned Employee & Management Relations Specialist in OHR by accessing HR Connect via the Office of Human Resources Web page. Additionally, you can also contact the Environment, Health and Safety Department at 962-5507.

The enclosed message from Dean Carney is being sent to all Deans, Directors and Department/Curriculum heads, and all faculty in the College of Arts and Sciences, with a copy to administrative managers.

Dear Colleagues,

I am delighted to announce that Harold Woodard, a UNC alumnus and long-time associate dean of student academic counseling in the College, will serve as associate dean and director of the new Center for Student Success and Academic Counseling, effective July 1.

The Center, which combines the services of the Office of Student Academic Counseling and the Academic Services Programs (including Summer Bridge and support for student athletes, students with LD/ADHD and others), is designed to enhance services to all undergraduates seeking specialized academic support.

Harold has extensive leadership and administrative experience in academic counseling, including outreach and support to diverse students before they arrive at Carolina and during their studies here.

He has been associate dean of Student Academic Counseling since 1995. He also serves on the advisory boards of the Sonja Haynes Stone Center for Black Culture and History and the Upward Bound Program, as well as the board of directors of the Carolina Student Union. He previously served as a reading instructor at the Learning Center, a curriculum specialist for Upward Bound and a lecturer in African and Afro-American studies.

The College will benefit from Harold's continued leadership in this vital new role. I hope you will join me in congratulating him.

With best regards,

Bruce W. Carney
Interim Dean

Colleagues,

Although Debby's impending retirement is coming fast, we would be seriously remiss if we did not create a significant occasion to recognize and honor her more than 30 years of service to our department. It has been suggested that such an occasion might take place in the week prior to the start of classes (Wed. Aug. 19 is a date that has been suggested), perhaps reserving the Faculty Lounge in the Campus Y building.

Do colleagues have ideas or suggestions as to what might be appropriate, or how we might recognize Debby?

Freeze may stay in effect 8th year.

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
Emergency Budget Guidelines
7/29/09

 SPENDING FREEZE EFFECTIVE IMMEDIATELY **

Effective July 24, 2009 and until further notice, the State Budget Director, acting on behalf of the Governor, and under Article III, Section 5(3) of the North Carolina Constitution, has implemented hiring and spending restrictions on all state funds including state receipts (16020 Academic Affairs, 16021 Health Affairs, 16022 AHEC, and State Receipts). The accounts affected by this freeze are identified in the Financial Records System (FRS) as 2-XXXXX and 3-8XXXX. This spending freeze does not apply to non-state funds, although prudence should be exercised in spending non-state funds.

Actions contrary to these guidelines will result in the transfer of expenses to non-state funding sources.

Questions
use Remedy / Finance / State funds

11) Current temporary appointments, including students, may be continued if there was a commitment before July 24. New student hires are allowable if granted a special exception by OSBM. A blanket request for the semester will be submitted by the Budget Office.

12) Overtime hours are permitted but should be kept to a minimum.

13) Recruitment and selection processes:

    a. Searches officially underway may be continued but only appointments of teaching faculty, public safety officer positions or heath care staff providing direct care to patients may be made. (See #1 and #2 above for advance notification requirements)

    b. For those positions which are not teaching faculty, public safety officers, or health care providers, employment offers may not be extended until further notice.

    c. New searches may be initiated, but no advertising or recruitment expenditures are permitted from state funds.

14) Employee insurance payments, worker's compensation claims, disability payments, and other similar legal obligations are permitted.

Process:

- To initiate a pre-approval request under #1, #2, and #3 above, the attached form must be completed and submitted electronically for each proposed offer to Thea Crabtree in the Budget Office at 919-962-5764 or pwcrabtr@email.unc.edu. The form must be submitted to the Budget Office prior to the offer. Per the freeze rules, the Budget Office can only submit the requests to OSBM at noon each Monday. Do not contact OSBM. Per the freeze rules, OSBM will have approximately one week to question the request. If the request is not questioned after a one-week period from submittal to OSBM, the Budget Office will return the approved form to the unit. For EPA new hires, the approved form from the Budget Office will need to be submitted to the EEO Office as part of the Final Selection Document before that office will approve the selection. For SPA new hires, the approved form from the Budget Office will need to be submitted to the Human Resource Employment and Staffing Specialist assigned to your department, before an offer will be made to the selected candidate.

- The Office of Procurement Services will capture the data centrally and submit the pre-approval request for items falling under #4 above.

- Requests for exceptions to the above personnel expense guidelines are being approved only in extremely rare cases. The special request must represent an emergency situation. Requests should be sent to Thea Crabtree in the Budget Office at 919-962-5764 or pwcrabtr@email.unc.edu. Do not contact OSBM.

* Send exception requests to Dean's Office *

Other Non-Personnel Expenses

Other non-personnel expenses paid 100% from non-state sources are allowed. Other non-personnel expenses paid fully or partially on state funds are prohibited, except as noted below:

1) Transfers of expenses from non-state funds to state funds are not permitted.

2) Purchase orders for goods or services that have been ordered but not received by July 24, 2009; do not have to be cancelled.

3) The purchase of good and services from state funds are allowed only in the following circumstances.

   a. Good/supplies purchased for resale. (Minimum quantities only)

   b. Food, diapers, baby formula, and other expenses for the direct care of infants/children are allowable. (supplies must be kept to a minimum)

   c. Drugs for the delivery of direct care to patients. (supplies must be kept to a minimum)

   d. Food, bedding, and supplies for the care of the research animals, the purchase of research animals and the repair of equipment - such as cage washing -- that are needed to be compliant with federal regulations. (supplies must be kept to a minimum)

   e. Lab supplies. (Only minimum to core operations)

   f. Office supplies. (Maximum of one month's supply)

   g. Copier leases and supplies. (supplies must be kept to a minimum)

   h. Postage for normal business operations. (supplies must be kept to a minimum. Electronic means of communicating should be used whenever possible)

   i. Communication costs. (Must be kept to a minimum)

   j. Safety supplies and equipment.

   k. Printing and mailing of materials required for core operations.

   l. Existing and renewal leases for facilities and equipment.

   m. Security badges for employees.

   n. Maintenance of vehicles, facilities and equipment that cannot be postponed.

   o. Purchases of gasoline, other fuels and other supplies necessary to operate maintenance equipment and delivery vehicles.

Process:

- The allowable expenses identified above that are processed on a purchase order ($5,000 or greater) must be pre-approved by the campus and notification must be submitted to OSBM at least one week prior to the obligation, unless it is for direct classroom instruction. The Office of Procurement Services will capture these data centrally and submit the pre-approval request.

- The allowable expenses identified above that are processed through the small order payment process or a p-card (less than $5,000) must meet the freeze rules stated above. Transactions will be reviewed as invoices are submitted for payment. Unallowable expenses charged to state funds will have to be moved to another fund source.

- Requests for exceptions to the non-personnel expense guidelines are being approved only in extremely rare cases. The special request must represent an emergency situation. Any request for exception must be sent to Fahir Zulfikar, Operational Manager, Procurement Services at 919-962-0739 or zulfikar@email.unc.edu. Do not contact OSBM.

Superior Kiswahili VI

Swah 407

Instructor: Alphonse S. Mutima, Ed.D.

Adjunct Assistant Professor

Course Rationale

Currently, the Swahili instruction UNC-CH is a three year program that focuses mostly on language acquisition. It is necessary that students who completed Swah 405 have a better understanding of the Swahili people through a literature course taught in Swahili.

Course description

This course is offered to students who completed Swah 405.It focuses on Swahili prose and poetry .By learning both types of literature, students will improve their communicative skills and cultural understanding. This will be achieved by 1) writing short stories and poems , and 2) reading, analyzing and synthesizing poems and Swahili prose texts.

Invitation from Hannah Gill: The Latino Migration Project is sponsoring this excellent new film on Polish migration in the US (by acclaimed filmmaker Ruth Leitman) in an attempt to look at a contemporary issue from a number of different geographical perspectives. We invite you to join and enrich the conversation with perspectives from your world region!

"Tony and Janina's American Wedding: A Deportation Love Story"
a film by Ruth Leitman

6pm Tuesday, Oct. 26
The FedEx Global Education Center Auditorium
301 Pittsboro Street, UNC-Chapel Hill Campus, Chapel Hill
Free parking available

Tony & Janina's American Wedding is a feature length documentary that gets to the heart of the broken, red tape ridden U.S. immigration system. After 18 years in America, Tony and Janina Wasilewski's family is torn apart when Janina is deported back to Poland, taking their 6 year old son Brian with her. Set on the backdrop of the Chicago political scene, and featuring Illinois Congressman Luis Gutierrez at the heart of the immigration reform movement, this film follows the Wasilewski's 3-year struggle to be reunited, as their Senator Barack Obama rises to the Presidency. With a fresh perspective on the immigration conversation, this film tells the untold human rights story of Post-9/11 America, that every undocumented immigrant in our country faces today, with the power to open the conversation for change.

Directed by Ruth Leitman and co-produced by Steve Dixon.

Sponsored by the Latin American Coalition and the Latino Migration Project at UNC Chapel Hill. (www.isa.unc.edu)

Subject: [asc_events] CFP: SERSAS/SEAN Spring 2011 Conference

---

From: Todd Leedy, University of Florida, Gainesville <tleedy@ufl.edu>
Date: 2 November 2010

Africa Connected: Movement, Flow, and Change
28-29 January 2011
Gainesville, FL

The South Eastern Regional Seminar on African Studies (SERSAS) and the South East Africanist Network (SEAN) are pleased to announce an initial call for papers for a joint conference to be hosted by the University of Florida and co-sponsored by University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill.

The call for papers is open in terms of topics and methodologies to any aspect and region of Africa, though the general theme for the conference will be "Africa Connected: Movement, Flow, and Change." Papers addressing issues such as migration/remittances, regional/global capital flows, international assistance/development programs, information/communication technologies, and transnational forms of popular culture are particularly welcome.

SERSAS/SEAN invites the participation of advanced undergraduate and graduate students in addition to established scholars. Multi-media presentations will be facilitated and are encouraged. SERSAS also awards the Jim Brown Prize for the best paper presented by a graduate student at the conference. This award is $100.

Abstracts
Interested scholars are invited to submit an abstract of approximately 250 words to the members of SERSAS and SEAN conference coordination committee:

Kea Gordon, gordenk@cofc.edu
Todd Leedy, tleedy@ufl.edu
Aran MacKinnon, amackinn@westga.edu
Jeremy Rich, jrich@mtsu.edu

Deadline for submission of abstracts: 15 December 2010

Registration
Registration fees are $20 for faculty and $10 for graduate students. These fees can be paid onsite at the conference

Accommodation
A limited number of rooms have been placed on hold for conference attendees at the UF Reitz Union Hotel and Holiday Inn University Center in Gainesville. SERSAS/SEAN will pay for a limited number of accommodations at these two hotels - first priority will be given to presenters appearing on the program. Attendees must make individual reservations by contacting the hotel directly and using the appropriate group code with their own credit card. Please contact Todd Leedy (tleedy@ufl.edu) for further details.

Reitz Union Hotel (group code IBA11) ph. 352.392.2151 - reserve by 12/27/10

Holiday Inn University Center (group code ASG) ph. 352.376.1661 - reserve by 1/6/11

You CAN Quit Using Tobacco!

It takes hard work to stop smoking, chewing tobacco or using snuff. But, there are lots of great reasons to quit.

- You may live longer and feel better.
- You will reduce your chance of a heart attack, cancer or stroke.
- You will have more energy and breathe easier.
- If you are pregnant, your baby will get more oxygen and be healthier.
- The people you live with, especially your children, will be healthier.
- You will have extra money to spend on things other than tobacco products!

The State Health Plan for Teachers and State Employees has many resources and benefits to help you.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Vice Chancellors and Deans
FROM: H. Holden Thorp HHT
DATE: October 27, 2010
RE: Supervisory Spans and Elevating Departmental Business Functions

Enhancing communication and decision-making through reduced layers of supervisory management, and achieving better scale and cost-effectiveness by consolidating selected administrative functions, were two major areas of focus in the Bain study. To address these topics, I have asked the Office of Human Resources (OHR) to issue the attached guidelines for two new University initiatives – Supervisory Spans and Layers and the Consolidation and Elevation of Selected Departmental Business Functions, primarily human resources and finance. I ask you to carefully review these guidelines with your leadership teams and to make it a priority to make measureable progress on these initiatives beginning this fiscal year. Copies will also shortly be posted to the OHR web site.

The guidelines intentionally provide broad discretion in terms of how they are implemented and carried out. This is in recognition that no single approach will fit the mission or culture of every school and division, and that one of our strengths as an institution is the flexibility and authority that is afforded each of you to determine the most effective approach in structuring and operating your areas of responsibility. However, we all share the broader responsibility of ensuring that the University is managed effectively and in a way that demonstrates our stewardship of the resources provided to us by the State and other external entities that entrust us with performing sponsored research. These accountabilities compel us to seize this opportunity to make essential and sustained improvements in how we deliver core administrative services throughout the University, and how we design our organization in terms of supervisory reporting relationships.

I have asked OHR to develop specific procedures and reporting mechanisms in the months ahead to assist us in implementing these guidelines and monitoring our progress. OHR will provide further information directly to your unit's HR Facilitators on how our position classification procedures will soon be modified to monitor supervisory spans and layers. While there is no requirement to modify existing supervisory positions to meet the new spans and layers guidelines, there is an expectation going forward that these guidelines will inform your decisions at such time as SPA or EPA non-faculty supervisory positions are created or modified during the position classification process. Likewise, OHR will implement enhancements to the human resources data warehouse to give management the ability to track progress in this area. OHR has already begun to partner with individual Schools and Divisions that are pursuing Unified Business Clusters (UBCs) or other approaches to consolidating selected business functions. The attached guidelines further clarify how these organizational transformations should be approached; OHR will also meet individually with your School/Division administrative leadership to discuss these options and answer questions.

I recognize that these changes are significant and will not occur overnight. My interest is not in quick fixes, but in long-term, sustainable improvement. I expect you to carry out these changes in a way that minimizes any impact to individual employees as much as possible. However, I also want to convey the sense of urgency that all of us as University leaders must have in approaching these initiatives. I have committed to our Board of Trustees and to external stakeholders of the University that we will make a sustained effort to improve our administrative efficiency in a variety of areas. I consider the attached guidelines and your involvement and support in carrying them out as essential to the University's success. Please accept my sincere appreciation for doing your part to help us advance as an institution.

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
Guidelines on Clustering and/or Elevation of Departmental Business Functions

November 3, 2010

Overview

It is the University's goal to conduct its business operations as efficiently as possible to maximize resources that can be directed to its core missions of teaching, research and public service. One possible approach is to cluster or elevate selected business functions to the School/Division level that has been traditionally decentralized to the department level. (In this usage, "cluster" and "elevation" have distinct meanings and are defined below.) This approach is anticipated to achieve increased efficiencies and enhance service quality. Human resources and finance/accounting support have been identified as primary consolidation opportunities; however, additional options may exist within some units, including information technology support, sponsored research administration and facilities coordination. These guidelines and procedures have been established to assist Deans and Vice Chancellors in carrying out the transformation of their core administrative functions to achieve the desired efficiency and service improvement outcomes.

Organizational Approaches

Two primary organizational approaches have been identified:

- Unified Business Cluster (UBC): This option offers a UBC manager/director role with subordinate accounting and human resources specialists. This group delivers comprehensive administrative services to a group of departments and centers (see Attachment A for an example). The UBC manager/director is typically an administrative "generalist" (e.g., Business Officer or Business Manager) whose skill set spans the finance and human resources domains. The UBC model elevates the traditional departmental business office to a higher organizational level, and expands the number of departments and/or centers served by such a unit. This approach retains an integrated approach to business operations, but presents challenges in recruiting and retaining the depth of expertise that may be necessary for more advanced consultative services within both the finance and human resources domains. The UBC model also requires that both the human resources and financial functions be consolidated at the same time, when in some circumstances there may be reasons for one or the other to remain decentralized at a departmental level, or to be consolidated on separate timelines.

- Elevated Business Function (EBF): This option involves the creation of separate but equal human resources and finance managers/directors within a School/Division organization or some other group arrangement, as opposed to a UBC led by a single administrative "generalist." Each manager/director has subordinate specialists who assist in the delivery of their respective services (see Attachment B for an example). This approach may afford the opportunity for the School/Division to accept more delegated authority from central offices, and therefore operate more independently in addressing complex matters, given the higher degree of subject matter expertise and competency available with these specialist roles. It also offers the option to consolidate or elevate one business function (e.g., human resources or finance) instead of both together. For some units, it may be more feasible to elevate one function but leaving the other to continue operating on the departmental level.

Both approaches lessen the number of distributed business office staff that must interact with central University offices, which in turn eases communication and training challenges, and simplifies the implementation and support of core University business systems. Deans and Vice Chancellors have the flexibility to adopt either approach as they work to transform their administrative operations depending on their specific needs and organizational culture. The Office of Human Resources (OHR) is available to assist units in evaluating which model most effectively addresses their needs and the human resources implications of one approach over another.

Technical Assistance

OHR is available to provide consultative assistance to Department Heads in their efforts to plan and implement UBCs or EBFs and has more detailed information to assist in this process. To obtain such assistance, contact OHR's Director of Classification and Compensation at 962-8099.

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
Management Guidelines on Reduction of Supervisory Layers and Spans of Control

November 3, 2010

Overview

It is the University's goal to achieve and sustain a reduction in layers of supervisory management. This goal originates from the recommendations of the Bain Report and carried forward to the University's CarolinaCounts initiative. Reduced layers of management are expected to enhance University-wide communication, which can be adversely impacted by excessive layers of supervisory management, as well as improve efficiency and economies of scale with regard to supervisory resources. By increasing the number of employees currently managed by an individual supervisor, a reduction of managerial layers and an increase in spans of control within each Department and School/Division can be realized.

Guidelines

- For the purposes of this policy:
    - "Supervisor" is defined as an SPA or EPA non-faculty employee who has primary responsibility for hiring, assignment and monitoring of work, and performance management for at least one other individual within their work unit.
    - "Supervisory span" or "span of control" is defined as the number of individuals who directly report to an individual supervisor excluding dotted line reporting relationships.

- Faculty supervisors are excluded from the provisions of this policy due to the unique role and mission of the faculty.

- Department Heads are expected to make every effort to achieve a minimum supervisory span of four employees (including any administrative or executive assistants) for each supervisory position with seven direct reports considered a desirable goal. It is recognized that the minimum supervisory span of four employees may not be achievable or appropriate in every circumstance and Department Heads have the latitude to depart from these standards when essential business needs or University operational needs dictate.

- In circumstances where a Department Head will deviate from the minimum number of direct reports set forth in this policy, the approval of the relevant Dean or Vice Chancellor is necessary. Delegation of this approval authority by a Dean or Vice Chancellor to a subordinate is not permitted except in exceptional circumstances.

Reporting and Monitoring

The University's Human Resources Data Warehouse, which is available to Departments and School/Division Administrative offices, includes the capability to report on supervisory spans and layers by Department. The Chancellor has directed OHR to implement specific procedures to monitor supervisory spans and layers throughout the University and to assist University Senior Officers and Department Heads in facilitating achievement of these goals within their work units.

Accordingly, Departments will be asked to address supervisory spans of control in all SPA and EPA non-faculty position classification or reclassification actions and to assure consideration has been given to these spans prior to a supervisory position being created or recruited.

Opportunities to Re-Consider and Increase Spans of Controls

The following are specific situations in which opportunities to increase supervisory spans, and thereby reduce layers of management may be present. Department Heads should utilize these opportunities to the greatest extent possible to advance the goals of this policy.

- Employee retirements
- Vacancies
- Organizational re-structuring due to operational needs or budget cuts
- Layoffs as a result of budget cuts
- Creation of new positions
- Use of a "lead employee" versus a formal supervisory position
- Reporting relationship changes
- Creation of Unified Business Clusters (UBCs) or elevating Department-level business functions into School/Division-level Finance and/or Human Resources Manager

Technical Assistance

OHR is available to provide consultative assistance to Department Heads in their efforts to increase supervisory spans and to reduce organizational layers. To obtain such assistance, contact OHR's Director of Classification and Compensation at 962-8099.

Changes to Form I- 9 and E- Verify Process

FROM: Noreen Montgomery, Employment & Staffing
Office of Human Resources

Effective Monday, Nov. 29, U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) will implement the following changes to the E-Verify system:

- Late submission notations: E-Verify will require that a reason be provided for late submissions (those sent more than 3 days from the date of hire) before the E-Verify case can be processed.

Departments must provide a reason for all late submissions by adding a case note to the OnDocs tab for the employee's Form I-9. The reason you enter must be 200 or fewer characters and must not include any personally identifiable or sensitive information (such as Social Security numbers).

- Photo matching tool: E-Verify will require that the photo on government issued documents (including Permanent Resident Card I-551, Employment Authorization Document I-766, U.S. Passport and Passport card) presented by the employee match an electronic photo provided by the Department of Homeland Security records before the E-Verify case can be processed.

As a reminder, departments must upload clear and legible identification and work authorization document(s) with the Form I-9. Illegible documents will not be accepted and may delay the processing of the Form I-9 and E-Verify verification within the mandated timeframe.

- Card Number submission: E-Verify will require the submission of the card number for I-551 and I-766 documents. A field will be available in Section 2 to capture this data for submission to E-Verify.

As a reminder, federal and state laws require that all Form I-9 and E-Verify verification be completed for all new and rehired employees within three business days of the date of hire. Departments are asked to complete the Form I-9 as early as possible within the three day period to allow time for the EEV unit to complete the E-Verify verification on time. Failure to complete the Form I- 9 appropriately, include a copy of supporting document(s), indicate a reason for a late submission and/or complete the form on time will create a compliance issue and may result in fines, civil and criminal penalties and/or debarment from federal contracts.

Click here for step-by-step procedures for processing a Form I-9 in the LawLogix Guardian system. Detailed Form I-9 and Employment Eligibility Verification information are also available on UNC's website.

If you have questions, contact an Employment Eligibility Verification (EEV) Specialist in the Office of Human Resources at 962-0985 or send an email to eevquestions@listserv.unc.edu. Thank you for your continued focus on ensuring that your department complies with these federal and state regulations.

EPA Applicant System Enhancements

FROM: Ann Penn, Equal Opportunity/ADA Officer

I'm pleased to announce an enhancement to the EPA Applicant System that will provide applicants with the ability to add/update their contact information, application information and documents. The enhancement will be available as of Friday, Nov. 12.

The confirmation email that is sent to a candidate applying for an EPA Faculty or Non-Faculty position will contain instructions and a link to guide them on how to add/update their current information.

When an applicant changes contact information, application information or adds/updates documents, an immediate screen of confirmation is displayed. The applicant also receives an email confirmation of any changes made.

Also, search committee chairs will receive an email notification when an applicant updates their application information.

Please contact the Equal Opportunity Office at 966-3576 if you have any questions.

Changes to HR Central Inbox

FROM: Theresa Silsby, HR Application Support
Office of Human Resources

In effort to increase the system's performance, we have made changes to the inbox for HR Central applications. Prior to the change, the inbox was displayed as one page with three different sections for Actions Awaiting Approval, Paused/Retracted/Disapproved items and FYI Notifications. Effective Wednesday, Nov. 17, the inbox will have three separate pages for each category of activity. The navigational links on the left side of the page will also change. The new links will be as follows:

- HR Inbox - Awaiting Approvals or Actions
- HR Inbox - FYI Notifications
- HR Inbox - Paused, Retracted or Disapproved

These changes were made due to memory issues that caused the system to perform slowly and occasionally "hang." We will continue to work with our programmers to find ways to enhance the system's performance and very likely will be making similar changes to other areas within the system in the near future.

Any new updates will be communicated when changes are made. Please contact the HR Application Support help desk with any questions regarding this change by submitting a remedy ticket or calling 962-HELP (4357).

10-15	19.75 days per year (158 hours)	20 days per year (160 hours)
15-20	22.75 days per year (182 hours)	23 days per year (184 hours)
20+	25.75 days per year (206 hours)	26 days per year (208 hours)

These accrual rates will be updated in the Vacation Leave policy and in the TIM System. An additional communication about this change will be sent out to all employees in December.

Voluntary Shared Leave Policy Changes

FROM: Brian Usischon, Benefits Services
Office of Human Resources

Effective Jan. 1, the Voluntary Shared Leave program will be updated to include the following provisions:

- Employees can donate sick leave to non-family members only. The current policy limits donations of sick time to family members.
- Sick leave donations are limited to five days of sick leave per year to any one non-family member recipient.
- Total sick leave donated to non-family member recipients cannot exceed 20 days per year.
- Donated sick leave cannot be used towards State Retirement credits when an employee retires.
- Non-family member donors must be informed of the impact of donating sick leave on State Retirement credits in the Teachers' and State Employees' Retirement System.

These changes will be incorporated to the University's Voluntary Shared Leave Policy and impact all leave earning SPA employees, EPA Non-Faculty and Faculty (12-month).

Reminder - - Elimination of Compensatory Time and On- Call Pay for SPA Exempt Employees

FROM: Jessica Moore, Classification and Compensation
Office of Human Resources

The Office of Human Resources sent out a memo on June 22, detailing the elimination of comp time and on-call pay for SPA exempt employees as of Jan. 1.

Please note that this does not affect SPA non- exempt employees. Non-exempt employees include classifications such as housekeepers, maintenance, administrative support and business services coordinators.

During the last six weeks of this year, you should stop the accumulation of comp time for SPA exempt employees, and encourage them to use any banked time before they code vacation or sick leave. Travel time is a subset of comp time and, as the policy change cites, exempt employees will no longer be eligible to earn or use comp time as of Jan. 1. For more information on these changes visit our website.

Re: Mobile Communications Device Policy

On December 1, 2010, as a cost-savings step, UNC-Chapel Hill will begin a phased transition from department-provided cell phones and Personal Data Assistants (PDAs) to a stipend program for most authorized employees.

In the past, employees authorized by their departments to have Mobile Communication Devices (MCDs) like cell phones or PDAs were issued equipment and service contracts by the University. Personal use of MCDs was prohibited and many employees carried two devices—one for business and one for personal use. Most employees currently authorized to have University-supplied MCDs will be asked to turn them in and switch to the stipend program.

We realize that many University employees may be legally obligated to complete the terms of a current MCD contract. If the University department requires the employee to carry an MCD to perform his/her duties, such as regularly sending and receiving time-sensitive e-mails remotely, the employee, with the approval of the supervisor and/or administrative department chair, will obtain a personally-owned MCD and service plan when the current University-paid contract ends.

The stipend ($35 for voice-only plan, $70 for voice and data plan) will be included in the employee's paycheck and reported on the employee's W-2 form. The stipend is subject to all regular payroll taxes, but will not be included in the employee's State retirement computation. Employees must complete the MCD Justification Form and submit it to Payroll Services.

To be eligible for the stipend, the PDA must support ActiveSync (Microsoft Exchange Server support) in order to access the University's e-mail, calendar, and other University-related services.

MCD users should be aware that all University policies related to storing and transferring secure data via an MCD must be followed.

MCDs used to conduct University business are subject to public information requests. If billing statements are requested, the employees will have three days to redact personal calls, text messages or e-mails before submission to the University's Public Records Officer. Billing statements that reflect University business must be retained for a period of three (3) closed fiscal years.

Each department is strongly encouraged to review the necessity of wireless devices, and to select alternative means of communication when feasible. Suggestions can be found in the detailed policy statement.

The entire policy, including frequently asked questions, is available online at http://financepolicy.unc.edu/Document/1200/1269.

Preventing Sexual Harassment Training

FROM: Lorri Dolinger, Equal Opportunity/ADA Office

The Equal Opportunity Office will teach a class on Preventing Sexual Harassment in the Workplace on Dec. 9.

The goal of this course is to enable participants to understand what sexual harassment is, identify inappropriate workplace behaviors, increase awareness and employ strategies to prevent it.

The class will also clarify organizational and administrative liability, highlight the University's sexual harassment policies and procedures, and provide guidelines and resources for reporting and responding to sexual harassment.

This course is open to and beneficial for all UNC-Chapel Hill employees. You can register for this class through Training & Talent Development in the Office of Human Resources.

Tobacco Prevention Evaluation Program

Supporting Community Change Through Evaluation

Do you smoke or use tobacco products?

If so, you are eligible to participate in a focus group to talk about the State Health Plan for Teachers and State Employees' (Plan) smoking and tobacco cessation resources. Information from the focus groups will help the Plan enhance its cessation benefits to better support members who want to quit using tobacco products. Your feedback is very important to the Plan. Members who take part in a focus group will discuss their:

- opinions on the effectiveness of the Plan's cessation resources to help members stop using tobacco;
- barriers that prevent them from using the resources and benefits to help them quit; and
- ideas that the Plan may be able to adopt to help members quit using tobacco.

Each focus group will include 6 to 9 Plan members who currently use tobacco products. Participants who meet the focus group requirements will be chosen on a first-come, first-served basis. Focus groups will be held in a convenient location near Greenville, Greensboro or Asheville and will last about 90 minutes. Each participant will receive dinner and $25.

Focus group participation is completely voluntary. You have been randomly selected from the Plan's membership database for the opportunity to provide feedback. Your identity will not be shared with the Plan, your employer, or the focus group study sponsors. During the focus group discussion your voice will audio recorded. All focus group responses will be kept confidential and your name will never be reported with any data.

The North Carolina Health and Wellness Trust Fund* is sponsoring this independent evaluation of the Plan's smoking and tobacco cessation benefits. The Tobacco Prevention and Evaluation Program (TPEP) at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is contracted to lead all focus group and report results.

To take part in a focus group, please either:

- Go to the TPEP web site at www.tpep.unc.edu and follow the prompts for State Health Plan focus groups.

OR

- Call UNC TPEP at (919) 843-6328 and leave your name, phone number, and the best time to reach you.

A researcher from TPEP will contact you directly about this opportunity.

Thank you!

*The NC General Assembly established the North Carolina Health and Wellness Trust Fund Commission (HWTF) in May 2001 to invest in programs and establish partnerships to address access, prevention, education and research that help improve the health of all North Carolinians (http://www.healthwellnc.com).

Today at 3:30pm, Charlene Regester, associate professor of African and Afro-American Studies at UNC, will be at the Bulls Head to share from her new book African American Actresses: The Struggle for Visibility, 19001960, with video clips from select films discussed in the book.

"In this important work, Charlene Regester brings into focus the lives and careers of representative black women actresses in Hollywood across generational divides in order to reposition them beyond the confining shadow of otherness and marginality. The sum result is a re-telling and correction of history." -- Audrey McCluskey, Indiana University Bloomington

Nine actresses, from Madame Sul-Te-Wan in Birth of a Nation (1915) to Ethel Waters in Member of the Wedding (1952), are profiled in African American Actresses. Charlene Regester poses questions about prevailing racial politics, on-screen and off-screen identities, and black stardom and white stardom. She reveals how these women fought for their roles as well as what they compromised (or didn't compromise). Regester repositions these actresses to highlight their contributions to cinema in the first half of the 20th century, taking an informed theoretical, historical, and critical approach.

Charlene Regester is Associate Professor of African and Afro-American Studies at the University of North Carolina Chapel Hill. She is co-editor of the Oscar Micheaux Society Newsletter and serves on the editorial board of the Journal of Film and Video.

Subject: [hrfac] Additional Updates to the HR Central Inbox

To: HR Facilitators
From: Dave Turner, Senior Director of Hr Administration & Systems

This memo includes important information for HR Facilitators who process actions using the HR Central Inbox.

On November 17, we introduced a change to the HR Central Inbox to improve performance problems within the system. Prior to the change, the Inbox was displayed as one page with three different sections for Actions Awaiting Approval, Paused/Retracted/Disapproved items and FYI Notifications. The change split the Inbox to display as three separate pages with one for each category of activity; within each page, we limited the amount of data returned and created multiple pages within each category.

We have received feedback from our campus customers that these changes have increased the amount of time it takes to process actions, and this increase has created severe stress in some areas during the December pay cycle when deadlines are shorter. To address this problem as quickly as possible, the following changes will be made to the system before 8:00 AM on Monday, December 6:

1) We are expanding the number of records returned on each page to 500, which should result in almost all users having just one page of records for each Inbox category.
2) We are changing the sorting functionality of the pages, so that once you have completed an action review or approval, the system will return you to the Inbox as it was sorted when you selected the action.

We will continue to look into strategies that improve the Inbox functionality in the coming weeks, but believe this will immediately improve our customers' ability to use the system efficiently. If you have any questions regarding the Inbox functionality, please contact the HR Help Desk for assistance at 962-HELP (962-4357). We apologize for any inconvenience that this change has caused.

Benefits Updates for 2011

FROM: Brian Usischon, Benefits Services
Office of Human Resources

With the start of the new year upon us, it's important to review some timely benefit news and information.

Annual Enrollment Changes: Any benefit elections made during the annual enrollment for NCFlex and the University benefit programs take effect Jan. 1, 2011. Remember to check your pay stubs (Jan. 14 for biweekly paid employees and Jan. 31 for monthly paid employees) to ensure that the programs you elected are reflected with the corresponding deductions.

MetLife Group Term Life Insurance: If you are enrolled in this University plan, you may see a change in your deductions beginning with your January paychecks. Adjustments to your premiums are made based on your age and salary as of Dec. 31 of each year.

ING (ReliaStar) Group Term Life Insurance: If you are enrolled in this NCFlex plan, you may see a change in your deductions beginning with your January paychecks. Adjustments to your premiums are made based on your age and salary as of Jan. 1 of each year.

MetLife Critical Illness: If you are enrolled in this NCFlex plan, you may see a change in your deductions beginning with your January paychecks. Adjustments to your premiums are made based on your age and salary as of Jan. 1 of each year.

Health Care and Dependent Care Flexible Spending Accounts (FSAs): Claims for limits elected for the 2010 plan year must be filed with Aon by March 31, 2011. Services must have been rendered by Dec. 31. You can check the balance of your FSA, status of claims submitted, and pending reimbursements by registering with Aon Online at http://www.ncflex.selfservicenow.com.

- FSA claims kits will be mailed to employees' home addresses the last week in December. Please read the materials enclosed with the claims kit concerning when to file claims and when documentation is required.
- Receive Claim Status Updates via E-mail: You can provide your e-mail address and receive e-mail notification of your claims and payment status. Enter your e-mail address on the FSA ClaimsPlus site (www.ncflex.selfservicenow.com). You will continue to receive paper statements if no e-mail address is on file.
- Check your pay stub: Review your paycheck to verify the correct per-pay period deductions are taken out for your 2011 NCFlex FSA account(s). If you find errors, contact Benefits Services.

NCFlex Convenience Card: If you have an NCFlex Convenience Card, do not destroy it. New cards will not be issued for the new plan year; they are automatically reissued 30 days prior to the card expiration date.

- Requesting NCFlex Convenience Cards: Request an NCFlex Convenience Card through the ClaimsPlus Online Reimbursement System (www.ncflex.selfservicenow.com). To request dependent cards, call the NCFlex FSA Customer Service Center at 877-371-2926 and speak to a customer service representative. You can also cancel your NCFlex Convenience Card online, or by calling the NCFlex FSA Customer Service Center at 877-371-2926. It takes approximately 7-10 business days for cards to reach participants. There is a $6 annual fee, and you receive two cards per request. If you would like additional cards, there is a one-time $5 fee for each request, which is good until the card expires. These fees will be deducted from your FSA the month in which you request the card.

Retirement Plan Limits for 2011:

- The limit on contributions to a 403(b)/401(k) plan for 2011 is $16,500. If you are over the age of 50, or will turn 50 by Dec. 31, 2011, you are eligible for an additional $5,500 catch-up contribution.
- The limit on contributions to a 457(b) plan for 2011 is also $16,500. If you are over the age of 50, or will turn 50 by Dec. 31, 2011, you are eligible for an additional $5,500 catch-up contribution.

Employee contributions to a 403(b) and 401(k) plan are combined together; however, employees can maximize saving opportunities by contributing to a 457(b) plan. Amounts contributed to a 457(b) plan are not combined with your 403(b) and/or 401(k) contributions.

If you have questions about your deductions or elections, email benefits@unc.edu or call 919-962-3071.

Lifetime Income Option Available for NC 401(k) and NC 457(b) Deferred Compensation Plans

Holiday Blood Drive

FROM: Carolina Blood Drive Committee

We are less than two weeks away from the Holiday Carolina Blood Drive from 7:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Dec. 14 in Woollen Gym. With a goal of 400 units, we need 200 more donors.

As of Nov. 29, there were 222 whole blood appointments and 52 double red cell appointments. The drive also needs more volunteers. Visit http://www.unc.edu/blood/ or dial 962-5663, extension 229, for details and to register.

University and community residents are all invited. Walk-ins are welcome, but appointments are recommended.

Parking will be free on the fourth and fifth levels of the Cobb Deck, accessible from the driveway to the Center for Dramatic Art off Country Club Road.

Besides the feel-good buzz from a good deed done, you'll get free food afterward and a chance to win airline tickets.

During the holidays, blood donations typically decrease, but the need for blood remains steady. So this year, celebrate the holidays by giving the gift of life to someone in need in our area.

Reminder: Savings Bonds Deductions Discontinued in 2011

FROM: Brian Usischon, Benefits Services
Office of Human Resources

The U.S. Department of Treasury has announced that they will phase out the issuance of paper savings bonds through payroll deduction plans effective with the first payday of 2011.

As a result of this change, the University will discontinue savings bond deductions with the last payday in December 2010 for any employee with an active deduction. Effective immediately, no new deductions will be set up for savings bonds.

Benefits Services has contacted all employees with active deductions directly concerning the program's phase-out.

Office of Human Resources

Mid-cycle performance reviews are not required for most SPA permanent employees. However, mid-cycle reviews are required if:

- The employee received a "Below Good" or "Unsatisfactory" on the overall rating of their 2010 annual performance appraisal, and/or

- The employee received a "Below Good" or "Unsatisfactory" on one or more principal function ratings on their 2010 annual performance appraisal.

Mid-cycle reviews should be completed before the end of January so that the employee has at least three months to take any corrective action prior to the next annual appraisal, which is due May 31. More than one mid-cycle review can be performed if the supervisor deems appropriate.

Although mid-cycle reviews are not required for all employees by the Office of Human Resources (unless the above situations apply), individual departments or divisions may require mid-cycle reviews for all of their employees at their discretion.

The Performance Management policy can be found at http://hr.unc.edu/policies-procedures-guidelines/spa-employee-policies/performance-management/PM-SPA

If you have additional questions, contact your Employee & Management Relations Consultant in the Office of Human Resources.

Graduate Student Health Insurance Program

FROM: Emily Coble, Cash Manager
Finance Division

Graduate students that will be graduating at the end of fall semester 2010 in December must be removed from the Graduate Student Health Insurance Program effective Jan. 14. To do this, go to the "Graduate Student Health Insurance Enrollment and Change Form" in the Payroll Menu in FRS. Place a "G" in the "Delete Code" field and "01/14/11" in the "Removed" field.

The students who graduate in December are covered by the graduate insurance until Jan. 14. These changes must be done no later than Thursday, Jan. 7. Once a student has graduated, they are no longer eligible for Graduate Student Health Insurance. Hill, Chesson, & Woody will notify each student by letter informing him/her of this and will give him/her the opportunity to extend the insurance coverage from his/her personal funds.

Please contact Tin Lay Nwe at 843-8965 or nwes@email.unc.edu if you have any questions.

Thank you for your prompt attention to this matter.

North Carolina Retirement Systems

Messages from the North Carolina Retirement Systems to Retired Public Sector Employees

Active Members Have the Ability to Transfer NC 401(k) and Deferred Compensation Funds at Retirement for a Lifetime Benefit

Effective January 1, 2011, retiring members of the Teachers' and State Employees' Retirement System (TSERS) and Local Governmental Employees' Retirement System (LGERS) with an existing NC 401(k) or NC Deferred Compensation (457) account through Prudential Retirement, will have the opportunity to transfer all or a portion of their NC 401(k) and/or Deferred Compensation funds at retirement to the North Carolina Retirement Systems.

During the 2010 legislative session, the General Assembly passed a bill providing the opportunity for retiring active members to transfer funds for this lifetime benefit, also known as creating an annuity. Previously, this option was available only to North Carolina law enforcement officers.

Who can transfer?

- This option is available to retiring TSERS or LGERS members, including law enforcement officers, who have NC 401(k)/NC 457 account balances through Prudential Retirement, the Plan's third-party administrator.
- Law enforcement officers vested by June 30, 2010, have the option to transfer funds under this newly established Transfer Benefit available to all members, or transfer funds under the previously established plan specifically for law enforcement officers.

Determining if the NC 401(k)/457 Transfer Benefit is Right for You

Having multiple options to transfer all or a portion of your NC 401(k) or 457 funds can give you the opportunity to increase your monthly retirement benefit for recurring expenses while maintaining a cash reserve in case of emergencies, or to use at some future date.

The NC 401(k)/NC 457 Transfer Benefit is designed to provide a lifetime benefit. However, the NC 401(k)/NC 457 Transfer Benefit may not be the right option if you only need income for a fixed period of time, or if you have large expenses for which you need access to your funds. Transferring entire 401(k)/NC 457 account balances may not be the right option for those who:

1. Need their NC 401(k)/NC 457 to provide emergency funds after retirement,
2. Desire to leave a bequest, or
3. Want to bridge from retirement to Social Security

How the NC 401(k)/NC 457 Transfer Benefit Works

- You may apply to transfer all or a portion of your NC 401(k) or NC 457 funds at the same time you apply for retirement. Employees can transfer funds from both accounts.
- Upon retirement you would submit the Form 319401k and/or Form 319457, or for law enforcement officers vested by June 30, 2010, the Form 319LEO, to initiate the transfer of funds from your respective accounts. Forms are available from www.myncretirement.com, under the "Applications and Forms" section.

- Transfers are a one-time, irrevocable election. After-tax Roth contributions are non-transferrable.
- There is a one-time administrative fee of $100 per transfer.

How can I learn more about the NC 401(k)/NC 457 Transfer Benefit?

Several resources are available to help you learn more about the Transfer Benefit, and to help you determine if the benefit is right for you. The North Carolina Retirement Systems and Prudential Retirement have partnered with the State Employees' Credit Union (SECU) to provide you with information on the Transfer Benefit. Contact any one of the partners for more information:

State Employees' Credit Union – SECU has employees who are ready to advise you on whether this benefit is right for you. They offer this service free of charge and you do not need to be a Credit Union member. As a non-profit, member-owned organization, SECU will provide you with unbiased advice.

Visit the NC 401(k)/457 Transfer Benefit website at www.nclifetimeincome.org.

If you do not have access to the Internet or have further questions about the material on the website, SECU call center staff is available to assist you 24 hours a day at 1-888-732-8562. Press "3" to reach an experienced call center staff person.

North Carolina Retirement Systems – The NC Retirement Systems will help you identify or obtain the correct forms to complete, will address questions about how to apply for the Transfer Benefit, or check on the status of your application.

Visit the NC 401(k)/NC 457 Transfer Benefit educational website at www.myncretirement.com. Click on the ORBIT link to use the Transfer Benefit Estimator in your personal ORBIT account.

NC Retirement Systems call center staff is available to verify the status of your application. The call center is open Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. – 5 p.m. at 1-877-NCSECURE (1-877-627-3287).

Prudential Retirement – Prudential's call center staff will answer questions about your existing NC 401(k) or NC Deferred Compensation (457) account(s), or will assist you in establishing a new account, if you are employed by a participating employer.

Learn about the Plan features by visiting www.ncplans.prudential.com.

Prudential Retirement call center staff are available Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. at 1-866-NCPLANS (1-866-627-5267).

If you miss the opportunity to transfer your funds when you retire, you have the option to transfer funds at any point after retirement. However, if you are a law-enforcement officer, certain options are only available at the time of retirement.

Benefits Updates for 2011

FROM: Brian Usischon, Benefits Services
Office of Human Resources

With the start of the new year upon us, it's important to review some timely benefit news and information.

Annual Enrollment Changes: Any benefit elections made during the annual enrollment for NCFlex and the University benefit programs take effect Jan. 1, 2011. Remember to check your pay stubs (Jan. 14 for biweekly paid employees and Jan. 31 for monthly paid employees) to ensure that the programs you elected are reflected with the corresponding deductions.

MetLife Life Insurance: If you are enrolled in this University plan, you may see a change in your deductions beginning with your January paychecks. Adjustments to your premiums are made based on your age and salary as of Dec. 31 of each year.

ING (ReliaStar) Life Insurance: If you are enrolled in this NCFlex plan, you may see a change in your deductions beginning with your January paychecks. Adjustments to premiums are made based on your age and salary as of Jan. 1.

MetLife Critical Illness: If you are enrolled in this NCFlex plan, you may see a change in your deductions beginning with your January paychecks. Adjustments to your premiums are made based on your age and salary as of Jan. 1 of each year.

Health Care and Dependent Care Flexible Spending Accounts (FSAs): Claims for limits elected for the 2010 plan year must be filed with Aon by March 31, 2011. Services must have been rendered by Dec. 31. You can check the balance of your FSA, status of claims submitted, and pending reimbursements by registering with Aon Online at http://www.ncflex.selfservicenow.com.

- FSA claims kits will be mailed to employees' home addresses the last week in December. Please read these materials concerning when to file claims and when documentation is required.
- Provide your e-mail address and receive e-mail notification of your claims and payment status. Enter your e-mail address on the FSA ClaimsPlus site (www.ncflex.selfservicenow.com). You will continue to receive paper statements if no e-mail address is on file.
- Review your paycheck to verify the correct deductions are taken out for your 2011 NCFlex FSA account(s). If you find errors, contact Benefits Services.

NCFlex Convenience Card: If you have an NCFlex Convenience Card, do not destroy it. New cards will not be issued for the new plan year; they are automatically reissued 30 days prior to the card expiration date.

- Requesting NCFlex Convenience Cards: Request an NCFlex Convenience Card through the ClaimsPlus Online Reimbursement System (www.ncflex.selfservicenow.com). To request dependent cards, call the NCFlex FSA Customer Service Center at 877-371-2926 and speak to a customer service representative. You can also cancel your NCFlex Convenience Card online, or by calling the NCFlex FSA Customer Service Center at 877-371-2926. It takes approximately 7-10 business days for cards to reach participants. There is a $6 annual fee, and you receive two cards per request. If you would like additional cards, there is a one-time $5 fee for each request, which is good until the card expires. These fees will be deducted from your FSA the month in which you request the card.

Retirement Plan Limits for 2011:

- The limit on contributions to a 403(b)/401(k) plan for 2011 is $16,500. If you are over the age of 50, or will turn 50 by Dec. 31, 2011, you are eligible for an additional $5,500 catch-up contribution.
- The limit on contributions to a 457(b) plan for 2011 is also $16,500. If you are over the age of 50, or will turn 50 by Dec. 31, 2011, you are eligible for an additional $5,500 catch-up contribution.

Employee contributions to a 403(b) and 401(k) plan are combined together; however, employees can maximize saving opportunities by contributing to a 457(b) plan. Amounts contributed to a 457(b) plan are not combined with your 403(b) and/or 401(k) contributions.

If you have questions about your deductions or elections, email benefits@unc.edu or call 919-962-3071.

Lifetime Income Option Available for NC 401(k) and NC 457(b) Deferred Compensation Plans

FROM: Brian Usischon, Benefits Services
Office of Human Resources

Effective Jan. 1, retiring members of the Teachers' and State Employees' Retirement System (TSERS) who have an existing NC 401(k) or NC Deferred Compensation

(457) account through Prudential Retirement will have the opportunity to transfer all or a portion of their NC 401(k) and/or Deferred Compensation funds at retirement to the North Carolina Retirement System for a lifetime benefit.

For additional information, please read the attached notice from the North Carolina Retirement System or call your Benefits Consultant at 919-962-3071.

Holiday Blood Drive

FROM: Carolina Blood Drive Committee

We are less than two weeks away from the Holiday Carolina Blood Drive from 7:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Dec. 14 in Woollen Gym. With a goal of 400 units, we need 200 more donors.

As of Nov. 29, there were 222 whole blood appointments and 52 double red cell appointments. The drive also needs more volunteers. Visit http://www.unc.edu/blood/ or dial 962-5663, extension 229, for details and to register.

University and community residents are all invited. Walk-ins are welcome, but appointments are recommended.

Parking will be free on the fourth and fifth levels of the Cobb Deck, accessible from the driveway to the Center for Dramatic Art off Country Club Road.

Besides the feel-good buzz from a good deed done, you'll get free food afterward and a chance to win airline tickets.

During the holidays, blood donations typically decrease, but the need for blood remains steady. So this year, celebrate the holidays by giving the gift of life to someone in need in our area.

Reminder: Savings Bonds Deductions Discontinued in 2011

FROM: Brian Usischon, Benefits Services
Office of Human Resources

The U.S. Department of Treasury has announced that they will phase out the issuance of paper savings bonds through payroll deduction plans effective with the first payday of 2011.

As a result of this change, the University will discontinue savings bond deductions with the last payday in December 2010 for any employee with an active deduction. Effective immediately, no new deductions will be set up for savings bonds.

Benefits Services has contacted all employees with active deductions directly concerning the program's phase-out.

To: HR Facilitators

From: Noreen Montgomery, Employment & Staffing
Office of Human Resources

Note: This memo contains time-sensitive and important information for individuals in hiring units that process criminal conviction check requests.

Recently, the Office of Human Resources (OHR) and Department of Public Safety (DPS) implemented changes to the SPA and EPA Pre-Employment Background Check policies. Because we are still receiving outdated crimcheck forms and incomplete information, we wanted to remind you of the following important changes:

- Effective 11/12/2010, only the new version of the pre-employment background check request form will be accepted. The revised form may be downloaded from http://hr.unc.edu/n/CCM1_018532 and is also included in the Form Finder section of the OHR website under "Recruitment and Selection Forms".
- Driving-related questions must be correctly completed by the candidate (on page 1) and hiring department (on page 2).
- If the hiring department has checked "yes" to either of the driving-related questions (on page 3), then the department must submit a legible photocopy of the driver's license with the pre-employment background check request form to the Public Safety Background Check unit. Note: Driver's licenses issued by the certain states (e.g. Pennsylvania and Washington) require additional documentation before a verification can be initiated. The Public Safety Background Check unit will notify hiring departments if additional documentation is required.
- New background check FAQs have been posted here: http://hr.unc.edu/policies-procedures-guidelines/spa-employee-policies/recruitment-and-selection/CCM3C_024391.

Incomplete and/or incorrect versions of the pre-employment background check request form will be returned to the hiring department, which will delay the completion of the background investigation.

Please do not hesitate to contact us for assistance or to help in addressing questions from potential hires. If you should have questions regarding any of these changes, please contact your OHR Employment Consultant, Academic Personnel or any member of the EPA Non-Faculty HR unit.

MEMORANDUM

To: Deans, Directors, and Department Chairs

From: Dennis Press Dennis Press
University Controller

Re: Annual Notice on Special Transactions for Biweekly Payroll

Date: December 7, 2010

OVERVIEW

This memorandum is the annual notice regarding special transactions that are processed to accommodate the biweekly payroll calendar. This notice is being provided earlier in the fiscal year to provide additional time for your budget planning efforts. PLEASE NOTE THAT FISCAL YEAR 2011-12 WILL CONTAIN 27 BIWEEKLY PAYROLLS INSTEAD OF THE USUAL 26, AND BUDGET PLANNING FOR THIS INFREQUENT OCCURRENCE BEGAN IN FISCAL YEAR 2000-01. For State Funds, budget for permanent positions has been carried forward at each fiscal year-end in central reserve accounts and will be allocated during fiscal year 2011-12 to fund the additional biweekly payroll occurring on June 29, 2012. Contracts and Grants are time-limited awards and are not impacted by the "27th biweekly" payroll. For other Non-State Funds, which include Facilities and Administrative (F&A) Funds, SPA salary encumbrances are posted each year to assist you in ensuring that sufficient salary and benefit budget will be available. Your continued vigilance in ensuring sufficient budgets are in place is essential.

DETAIL INFORMATION

The 26 biweekly payrolls provide payment for 260 work days. Fiscal Year 2010-2011 has 261 work days, and fiscal year 2011-2012 will also have 261 work days. Since SPA staff members are paid for 260 work days within the fiscal year, special encumbrance and expenditure transactions are necessary to obligate and use budget for the additional work day within the fiscal year.

For fiscal year 2010-2011, a cumulative SPA salary encumbrance for 9 days was posted to your FRS accounts in July 2010 for certain Non-State Funds. The additional salary budget for permanent SPA staff was encumbered so that the salary amount would be available for carry forward to the next fiscal year for Non-State Funds. A salary encumbrance for one day was posted for State Funds so that the one-day salary amount could be expensed in fiscal year 2010-2011. A total of 10 work days will be accumulated over twelve years so that funding for permanent positions will be available for a "27th biweekly" payroll that will occur in fiscal year 2011-2012 on June 29, 2012. The actual payroll number for the "27th biweekly" payroll will be biweekly number 26.

As part of the fiscal year 2010-2011 close-out, the special encumbrances will be liquidated. For State Funds, the one-day encumbrance will be liquidated and a one-day expense will be posted prior to the June 30, 2011 close-out. For Non-State Funds, excluding Contracts and Grants, the 9-day encumbrance will be liquidated prior to the June 30, 2011 close-out, but expenditures will not be recorded since the funds are not subject to reversion. The special encumbrances were not posted for Contracts and Grants since those accounts are time-limited awards and are not impacted by the "27th biweekly" payroll issue.

Once the close-out for fiscal year 2010-2011 is complete, special encumbrance transactions will be posted for fiscal year 2011-2012. An encumbrance transaction for one workday will be posted for State Funds. Cumulative salary expenditures that have been recorded to address this issue for State Funds are being maintained in central reserve accounts so the budget will be available for allocation when needed. For Non-State Funds, excluding Contracts and Grants, an encumbrance transaction for 10 days will be posted to provide a cumulative encumbrance for salaries for the "27th biweekly". Budgets for related benefits are not encumbered by this process, so you may wish to reserve related benefits.

Please take appropriate action to ensure budget is available for the special encumbrances so that budgeted funds will accumulate and be available in fiscal year 2011-2012. This action of allocating budget to fund the encumbrances for Non-State Funds, which includes Facilities and Administrative Funds, will ensure available funds for the next 27th biweekly payroll. The first 2 characters of the reference number in the FRS encumbrance transaction will continue to be "SC" (for Special Calculation), and the expenditure object code will continue to be 1212 – SPA Salaries. The table at the end of this memorandum summarizes the special encumbrance and expenditure transactions.

The special encumbrance and expenditure transactions for the biweekly payroll address the budget issue for the "27th biweekly" payroll. The University budgets are for a full fiscal year, but the 26 biweekly payrolls span 364 days of the 365 (366 in leap years) days in a fiscal year. Therefore, there is usually one workday (sometimes two workdays) that roll forward at the end of the fiscal year and are paid on the very next biweekly.

The full annual salaries for SPA staff are paid over the 26 biweeklies plus one or two days in the very next biweekly. That is why the pay dates for the biweekly payrolls vary. For the prior year the last biweekly payday for the fiscal year was June 18, 2010. This year it will be June 17, 2011. Next year the last two biweekly paydays will be June 15 and June 29, 2012. The biweekly paydays change each year, and every 11 or 12 years (depending on leap years) there is a biweekly payday on or about the first day of the year and on or about the last day of the year, so the fiscal year contains 27 paydays. But each time the pay is for 2 full weeks.

This is mentioned to distinguish between the budget issue and the salary calculation issue for SPA staff paid on the biweekly payroll. Budgets for State Funds and encumbrances for Non-State Funds are accumulated to fund the next 27th biweekly payroll in 2011-2012. The funds are being accumulated over a 12-year period since the 26 biweekly payrolls do not span a full fiscal year, and the one or two days remaining each year are needed in fiscal year 2011-2012. It is important to note that SPA staff members are fully paid their annual salary over the 26 biweeklies plus the remaining day (or two in some years) that is paid in the very next biweekly.

I hope this information provides useful background for the special encumbrance and expenditure transactions for the biweekly payroll. Thank you.

Please note that this memo was sent separately to the DDD list.

The State faces a very serious budget shortfall for the coming fiscal year, FY 2011/12, and Governor Perdue has therefore required all cabinet agencies to institute a hiring freeze in order to help offset some of the future challenges. While the freeze does not apply directly to the University of North Carolina system, we will all feel the effects of the budget shortfall, and, accordingly, all UNC campuses have been directed by UNC General Administration (GA) to institute a hiring freeze on all positions funded on State funds. For our campus, this means all permanent and temporary positions funded by State appropriations or receipts in FRS Accounts 2-XXXXX and 3-8XXXX other than those positions determined to be "essential."

THE UNIVERSITY of NORTH CAROLINA
at CHAPEL HILL

MEMO TO: Deans, Directors, and Department Heads
Human Resources Facilitators
Business Managers

FROM: Bruce Carney, Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost

SUBJECT: Hiring Freeze for State Funded Positions

DATE: January 3, 2011

The State faces a very serious budget shortfall for the coming fiscal year, FY 2011/12, and Governor Perdue has therefore required all cabinet agencies to institute a hiring freeze in order to help offset some of the future challenges. While the freeze does not apply directly to the University of North Carolina system, we will all feel the effects of the budget shortfall, and, accordingly, all UNC campuses have been directed by UNC General Administration (GA) to institute a hiring freeze on all positions funded on State funds. For our campus, this means all permanent and temporary positions funded by State appropriations or receipts in FRS Accounts 2-XXXXX and 3-8XXXX other than those positions determined to be "essential."

This freeze will be instituted, effective immediately, with the exception of the specific exclusions noted below. It is expected that this freeze will remain in place through the remainder of the current fiscal year. While positions that are under recruitment and posted prior to January 3, 2011, are excluded, Deans and Vice Chancellors are expected to make a concerted effort to review and confirm that these positions are essential enough to the operation of their units to merit continuing recruitment and hiring. Where opportunities exist to cancel such recruitments without causing undue operational hardship, Deans and Vice Chancellors are encouraged to do so. For the duration of the hiring freeze, Deans, Vice Chancellors or their designees are expected to assure that only "essential" positions are hired on State funds by applying the guidelines outlined in this memorandum.

Exclusions to the Hiring Freeze Not Requiring Special Approvals

The following are excluded from the hiring freeze and may be recruited and hired without the special approvals outlined in this memorandum. These positions remain subject to normal hiring approvals and prudence should be exercised in all such hiring given current and developing budget challenges.

- Any permanent or temporary position that is 100% funded on Non-State salary sources (e.g., auxiliaries, contracts and grants, overhead/F&A, trust, etc.).
- Any permanent position that was posted for recruitment prior to January 3, 2011, as long as the applicable Dean's Office or Vice Chancellor determines the position to merit continuing recruitment/hiring in light of current budget developments. A list of all active recruitments for each School/Division will be provided by the Office of Human Resources (OHR) to Deans and Vice Chancellors within the next several days to assist in making these determinations.
- All faculty positions, including clinical faculty.

- All undergraduate and graduate student positions (e.g., undergraduate student assistants, graduate teaching assistants, RAs, etc.) when the position requires continuing status as an active student at UNC-Chapel Hill.
- All post-doctoral scholars, medical residents, and medical fellows.
- All campus police officer and campus security officer positions (excludes parking and traffic enforcement positions, which must be determined to be essential and are subject to special approvals).

Non-Faculty Positions with Direct Patient Care Responsibilities

All non-faculty positions that directly involve patient care (including student health) will require submission, for tracking purposes, of a "UNC-Chapel Hill State Hiring Freeze Exception Request Form" approved by the relevant Dean or Vice Chancellor prior to any recruitment or hiring. However, as long as these positions satisfy the conditions noted on the Exception form, no other special approvals will be needed and Departments can then proceed with recruitment and hiring. "Essential" patient care positions are defined as those that either directly interact with patients as a primary part of their job responsibilities or whose primary work location is in a clinic or hospital setting and the position serves an integral role in patient care operations. Positions not meeting these specific criteria but that are still otherwise deemed essential by a Department Head may receive an exception but are subject to the special review and approval procedures outlined in this memorandum and included on the Exception Request Form.

Approval Criteria for All Other Positions

For all other positions, Department Heads will be required to assess and specifically document whether a State-funded position proposed for hire is deemed "essential" to University operations and to receive the approval of the appropriate Dean and/or Vice Chancellor. Determining whether a position is "essential" relies on an assessment of whether the position can temporarily remain unfilled without causing a critical or unacceptable impact to the University's operations that cannot be reasonably addressed in some other fashion. The following are examples of responsibilities that may serve as the basis for a position being determined as "essential" depending on the specific circumstances present:

- Non-Faculty positions directly involved in supporting classroom instruction.
- Positions critical to maintaining essential University-wide infrastructure such as energy, building operations, telecommunications, and data networks.
- Positions critical to maintaining campus health and safety or in providing for the care of research animals.
- Positions necessary to satisfy documented contractual obligations including federally-sponsored or privately contracted research.
- Positions that are directly in response to the University's Carolina Counts productivity initiative (e.g., elevated business functions, unified business clusters).
- Positions necessary to maintain a critical University-wide administrative function or to ensure University-wide compliance with federal or state laws and regulations.
- Positions that are otherwise determined to be critical to campus operations by the Chancellor, the Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost, or their designee(s).

While the above are intended as examples, whether a position is ultimately determined to be "essential" will depend on the totality of factors cited in the submitted justification.

Funding Sources and Restrictions

- Filled positions may not be moved to State funds with the exception of those positions noted as fully excluded from the hiring freeze.
- Filled and vacant positions may be moved to any combination of Non-State salary sources.
- Retroactive funding changes moving salary expenses to State funds from other Non-State funding sources will not be permitted except in exceptional circumstances approved by the Director of the University Budget Office.
- Adjustments to move salary expenses between State accounts are permissible if necessary to correct errors or otherwise maintain the accuracy of State accounts.

Exception Approval Process

Department Heads who propose to recruit and hire a State-funded position not otherwise excluded from these special procedures must document and justify why the position is deemed "essential" using the "UNC-Chapel Hill State Hiring Freeze Exception Request Form" prior to initiating any recruitment or job change/hiring activity. This form is available for download from the OHR website at http://hr.unc.edu/n/CCM3_024721. Completed forms should be submitted to the applicable Dean or Vice Chancellor for approval after which, they will be jointly reviewed by OHR and the University Budget Office. Departments and Centers should not submit exception forms without such approvals and should be aware that individual Deans or Vice Chancellors may implement specific procedures within their areas of responsibility for handling these approvals. Please look for updates from your Dean or Vice Chancellor's Office for any guidelines that may apply specifically to your department or center.

Impact on Approval of Recruitment and Job Change/Hiring Actions

For recruitment and job change/hiring actions originated on or after January 4, 2011, OHR and the EEO Office will review each action to assure compliance with the hiring freeze on State-funded positions. For SPA and EPA non-faculty positions that will not involve the use of any State funds, all of the submitted action comments must include a statement that "No State funds will be used in the hiring of this position" in order to avoid any delay in processing. For SPA and EPA non-faculty positions that will involve the use of State funds, all submitted actions must include in comments that "This position will be hired using State funds." Actions for faculty positions, student positions, post-docs, medical residents, medical fellows, and police and security officers will not require any special comments or handling for submitted actions.

Questions

For general questions regarding the hiring freeze exception process or about the status of a specific submitted exception request, please send e-mail to freeze-waivers@unc.edu.This email box will be jointly monitored by staff from the University Budget Office and OHR. For questions about whether a particular funding source is subject to the hiring freeze, please contact the University Budget Office at 966-3251.

Thanks in advance for your cooperation in complying with these guidelines.

FY 2010/2011 STATE HIRING FREEZE EXCEPTION REQUEST FORM

INSTRUCTIONS: This form is required to request exceptions to the hiring freeze on State funded positions on the basis of a Department declaring a position "essential". For questions regarding whether a source of funding is subject to the hiring freeze, contact the University Budget Office.

Department Heads should complete all required information and then obtain the required approval signatures from their Dean or Vice Chancellor. Completed forms should be emailed by the applicable Dean or Vice Chancellor's Office with required signatures in PDF format to: freeze-waivers@unc.edu. Submissions are copied to OHR and the University Budget Office, who are jointly responsible for review and approval. If you have questions regarding a potential form submission or regarding the status of a submitted form, you may also use the above e-mail address and a staff member from one of these offices will contact you.

Information for Employees

Leave Policy Changes (contact: Benefits Services, 962-3071)
New vacation accrual rates went into effect Jan. 1 for SPA employees. The Vacation Leave policy for SPA Employees has been updated to reflect the new accrual rates. In addition, also effective Jan. 1, the Voluntary Shared Leave policy was updated to reflect the addition of sick leave as an approved leave source.

Lactation Support Policy (contact: Benefits Services, 962-3071)
To comply with The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act of 2010, the University has implemented a Lactation Support Policy. This policy is intended to assist working mothers with the transition back to work following the birth of a child by providing lactation support. A lactation support program allows a nursing mother to express breast milk periodically during the work day. Click here to review the Lactation Support Policy.

Advanced Communication Skills
Based on extensive research on effective communication and influencing, this course provides clear, practical principles and skills that participants can immediately put into action to build rapport and create more successful outcomes in key interactions and business relationships.

These skills are especially useful in working with people we perceive to be "different" than ourselves, and in "difficult" interactions. This very active approach to building rapport and communication skills is based largely on the change system Neurolinguistic Programming (NLP), and challenges many of our assumptions and common sense ideas about communication and relationships.

HR Facilitator Quarterly Meeting

FROM: Kathy Bryant, HR Communications & Talent Development
Office of Human Resources

The next HR Facilitator quarterly meeting will be held on Wednesday, Jan. 12, at 2:30 p.m. in 111 Carroll Hall. Please add this to your calendars.

Although this meeting falls during the first week of classes, which I understand is a busy time for many of you; we felt it was important to continue with the scheduled meeting particularly in light of yesterday's announcement of the hiring freeze on state-funded positions. The agenda for this meeting includes the following items:

- Hiring Freeze topics
- Public Information changes
- Workforce Factbook
- Manager/supervisor communications

Please make every effort to attend and/or have your office represented. Also, please be sure to sign in as you arrive or depart so that we can confirm your attendance.

We look forward to seeing you there!

Service Award Verifications

FROM: Ashley Nicklis, Benefits Services
Office of Human Resources

Benefits Services is requesting that HR Facilitators review the attached service award reports and validate the following information by Jan. 15:

5, 10 and 15 Years of Service Report – this report reflects those SPA and EPA Non-Faculty employees who will have reached their anniversary between January and June 2011. Please validate the employees listed in your department, review their total state service date (TSSD) and the employee's first and last name as it will be printed on the employee's certificate. Corrections or changes should be sent to benefits@unc.edu. The certificates and corresponding gifts will be available for pick up by the end of February. Further information will be communicated once the awards are ready for distribution.

20 Years of Service Report – this report reflects those SPA and EPA Non-Faculty employees who will have reached their anniversary between Jul. 1 and Jun. 30. Please validate the employees listed in your department, review their total state service date (TSSD) and the employee's first and last name as it will be engraved on their 20 Year plaque. Corrections or changes should be sent to benefits@unc.edu. The 20 Year Banquet will be held in April.

25, 30, 35, 40, 45 and 50 Years of Service Report – this report reflects those SPA and EPA Non-Faculty employees who will have reached their anniversary between July 1, 2010, and June 30, 2011. Please validate the employees listed in your department, review their total state service date (TSSD) and the employee's first and last name as it will be printed on the employee's certificate. Corrections or changes should be sent to benefits@unc.edu. The service reception for employees with 25 or more years of service will be held in May. The certificate and corresponding glass trophies will be distributed at that time.

Questions concerning Service Awards can be directed to benefits@unc.edu. See attachment.

New Postdoc Spring Orientation

FROM: Sibby Anderson-Thompkins,
Office of Postdoctoral Affairs

*If you have hired a new postdoctoral scholar since our last orientation, September 1, 2010, please send the name and email address of the Postdoc to opa@unc.edu.

UNC New Postdoc Orientation (and Welcome Back Returnees)

Location: Bioinformatics 1131

Date: Feb. 2
Time: 12:00 p.m. - 2:00 p.m.

The Spring Orientation is an opportunity for new and seasoned postdocs to be introduced to the staff of the Office of Postdoctoral Affairs (OPA) and gather information about health insurance, benefits, and other campus services that are available to them during their appointment at UNC-CH. There will be a welcome address from Dr. Sibby Anderson-Thompkins, Director of Postdoctoral Affairs, and guest speaker, our own International Faculty Advisor, Dr. Manzoor Bhat on "Making the Most of Your Postdoc".

Lunch will be provided. Registration is REQUIRED for catering purposes.

Please share the attached flyer with all faculty, staff, and postdocs in your department. This flyer includes information on how to register for the orientation program. Click here for flyer and to view the registration link for Spring Orientation click here.

Email Sibby Anderson-Thompkins if you have any questions or concerns.

Information for Employees

Leave Policy Changes – Effective Jan. 1

FROM: Ashley Nicklis, Benefits Services
Office of Human Resources

Vacation Leave for SPA Employees
New vacation accrual rates went into effect Jan. 1 for SPA employees. The Vacation Leave policy for SPA Employees has been updated to reflect the new accrual rates. Click here to review the updated policy.

Voluntary Shared Leave
Effective Jan. 1, the Voluntary Shared Leave Policy was updated to reflect the addition of sick leave as an approved leave source for shared leave donations. The policy on Voluntary Shared Leave has been updated to reflect this change. Click here to review the updated policy.

Lactation Support Policy

FROM: Ashley Nicklis, Benefits Services
Office of Human Resources

To comply with The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act of 2010, the University has implemented a Lactation Support Policy. This policy is intended to assist working mothers with the transition back to work following the birth of a child by providing lactation support. A lactation support program allows a nursing mother to express breast milk periodically during the work day. Click here to review the Lactation Support Policy.

Training Spotlight – Upcoming Classes Available

Advanced Communication Skills
Based on extensive research on effective communication and influencing, this course provides clear, practical principles and skills that participants can immediately put into action to build rapport and create more successful outcomes in key interactions and business relationships.

These skills are especially useful in working with people we perceive to be "different" than ourselves, and in "difficult" interactions. This very active approach to building rapport and communication skills is based largely on the change system Neurolinguistic Programming (NLP), and challenges many of our assumptions and common sense ideas about communication and relationships.

Subject: [wssupervisors] Work-Study: Spring Info

Supervisors,

Just a quick reminder that students may begin working on the first day of Spring classes, which is Monday, January 10, 2011. In the few short days remaining, please remember to do two things:

1. Recalculate your student(s) remaining work hours – remember offices/departments are responsible for paying wages earned above and beyond the maximum award amount, and
2. Please log onto the work-study website (workstudy.unc.edu) and ensure that your "Display to Student" flag is appropriately set:
   Display to students? [ ] = position is CLOSED (you are not hiring) and position information is NOT VISIBLE on the student website: jobsontheweb.unc.edu
   Display to students? [√]= position is OPEN (you would like to hire for the spring) and position information is VISIBLE on the student website: jobsontheweb.unc.edu

Hope everyone had a safe and happy holiday season and that the New Year is off to a good start!

Best,
SMK

Flexible Spending Account Claim Filing Reminder

FROM: Ashley Nicklis, Benefits Services
Office of Human Resources

Thursday, Mar. 31, is the deadline for filing reimbursement claims on your Health Care and Dependent Care flexible spending accounts for expenses that were incurred on or before December 31, 2010. Claims must be received by Aon Consulting, the plan administrator for NCFlex, no later than Mar. 31. After Mar. 31, employees will not be able to claim any of the remaining monies in their flex accounts for 2010.

You can check your balances online here or call Aon Consulting at 877-371-2926. Download the claim form from the NCFlex website or fax your claim form(s) to Aon at 866-892-8063. If you fax a claim form, be sure to keep the fax confirmation number and a copy of all submitted claims for your records. If you have questions, call Benefit Services at 962-3071.

Helping Heels Registration Open

FROM: Aimee Krans, Benefits Services
Office of Human Resources

The Work/Life Manager in the Office of Human Resources publishes Helping Heels, a registry of individuals affiliated with the University who are willing to provide a variety of caregiving tasks on a part-time informal basis. This could include any combination of the following: childcare, elder care and/or pet care.

The list is published three times per year. The Helping Heels registry is simply a referral program; interested families must contact the listed individuals directly to arrange an interview or to schedule care.

If you are interested in becoming a Helping Heel, providing childcare, elder care or pet care, the UNC-Chapel Hill Helping Heels provider list offers you a unique opportunity to advertise your skills and availability to the campus community and provide part-time care for families of Carolina students and employees.

To register, click here to complete the on-line registration form. You must complete the registration form no later than Friday, Jan. 21, to be included on the spring 2011 registry.

If you are looking for a Helping Heels provider, the spring provider list will be available on-line after Jan. 26. For more information contact Aimee Krans, Work/Life Manager, at 962-6008 or by email.

Equal Employment Opportunity Institute (EEOI)

FROM: Lorri Dolinger, Equal Opportunity/ADA Office

Statewide training sessions for the Equal Employment Opportunity Institute have been announced for the first half of 2011. The Equal Employment Opportunity Institute (EEOI) helps managers and supervisors understand important employment discrimination laws and how they impact day-to-day managerial decisions. Case studies and other activities are used to learn how to apply the laws' principles to create fair, equitable, and inclusive work environments. The skills taught in EEOI enable state government managers and supervisors to address complex diversity issues in a legally compliant manner.

Attending EEOI 1 is mandated for managers and supervisors. EEOI 2 is for executive-level employees only.

For more information about the Equal Employment Opportunity Institute (EEOI) contact the Equal Opportunity/ADA Office at 966-3576. To register for one of the training sessions click here. See attached for training schedule.

Subject: SERSAS SEAN January 2011 in Gainesville

From: Todd Leedy, U. of Florida, Gainesville <tleedy@UFL.EDU>
Date: 12 January 2011

Dear Colleagues,

Please find below the preliminary program for our meeting later this month. We do still have a number of accommodation slots available. Attendees must make individual reservations with their own credit card by contacting the hotel directly and using the appropriate group code. SERSAS/SEAN will pay for a limited number of attendee accommodations at these two hotels, up to the limit of the reserved group blocks. To: All Campus IMAP Customers <tim_mcguire@unc.edu>
Subject: IMPORTANT: Changes To Spam Scanning Service

Hello,

You are receiving this message because you are a user of the ITS-managed Cyrus IMAP service or ITS-managed Exchange service. I am writing today to inform you of a fairly significant change to the SPAM scanning service that will occur on January 28th, 2011. You may have received a message about this change that mentioned January 21st. We have decided to reschedule until January 28th in order to communicate this change to some users that may have been left out of the original communication. While more inclusive, this message may reach you twice. I apologize for any duplicate messages that you may have received.

The most significant change I want to relay to you will be in your access to quarantines and settings. The new system is much better at NOT mistakenly catching good messages and marking them as SPAM. With this and a recommendation from the vendor in mind, we have decided to remove ALL end-user access to the system. If you feel that the SPAM engines have "eaten" a message in error, a call to 962-HELP will engage an administrator who can troubleshoot the entire mail infrastructure including but not limited to the spam appliances. There is NO action required on your part. The old Proofpoint system will remain available for end user access until February 15th, 2011. This change is in large part an effort to cut costs. The new system is approximately 60% of the cost of the old system, 5-6% more effective at catching SPAM and viruses and more robust in terms of delivery of legitimate messages.

I apologize for any inconvenience that this change may cause.

Warmest Regards,

Tim McGuire

Leading Up: Influence at any Level

The responsibilities of any employee naturally place them in the middle of opposing forces. They may be expected to appease customers and clients while meeting the needs of their bosses. Yet, without appropriate support from above, workers can be hindered in their effectiveness to develop leadership, deliver services, and create overall job satisfaction. This participatory workshop will explore the practical knowledge and skills of leading up the chain of command, using tools such as self-management, the power of influence, giving status reports, understanding your boss's world, building trust, and paying attention so that you can influence and lead at any level.

On Jan. 1, the North Carolina State Health Plan's Health*Smart* program introduced a Personal Health Portal with a new look and additional resources. These resources include a health assessment questionnaire, the ability to connect to a health coach via e-mail and a personal health record for members to store health information.

There is no additional cost for services through the NC Health*Smart* program. The program includes health coaching, 24/7 nurse line services, case management and other resources. Members who register can take the online health assessment and receive a personalized action plan to discuss with their health provider.

To help spread awareness of this program, post the attached flyers throughout your workplaces.

Preventing Sexual Harassment in the Workplace

The goal of this course is to enable participants to understand what sexual harassment is; identify inappropriate workplace behaviors, increase awareness and employ strategies to prevent it. The class will also clarify organizational and administrative liability and responsibility, highlight the University's sexual harassment policies and procedures, and provide guidelines and resources for reporting and responding to sexual harassment. This course is open to and beneficial for all UNC Chapel Hill employees who need an increased awareness and understanding of sexual harassment prevention.

Leading Up: Influence at any Level

The responsibilities of any employee naturally place them in the middle of opposing forces. They may be expected to appease customers and clients while meeting the needs of their bosses. Yet, without appropriate support from above, workers can be hindered in their effectiveness to develop leadership, deliver services, and create overall job satisfaction. This participatory workshop will explore the practical knowledge and skills of leading up the chain of command, using tools such as self-management, the power of influence, giving status reports, understanding your boss's world, building trust, and paying attention so that you can influence and lead at any level.

Location: 104 Airport Drive, 1500-A

Good morning,
This is to inform you that human resource facilitators will be able to pickup 2010 W-2 Forms for active employees beginning on Friday, January 28th. Payroll Services is located in the AOB in Suite 3600 and their hours are 7:30 am to 4:30 pm. Your student-employee should receive the W-2 when they report to work. The exception is community service agencies, which will be picked up by our office. Those work-study students should come to 216 Vance Hall to get their W-2. Inactive employees as of December 31, 2010 will have their W-2 mailed to the last known home address as recorded on their direct deposit/check by January 31st. Thank you.

Here at the Institute for the Arts and Humanities, we strive to serve as the intellectual crossroads of Carolina — a place for vibrant conversations that cross disciplines and engage different, sometimes conflicting, perspectives. We provide a space for light-hearted banter around the breakfast table, and a place to civilly address sometimes difficult or emotionally charged topics. This semester will be no exception.

In this newsletter, we'll share some exciting news, starting with the announcement of our spring 2010 Fellows. Our Faculty Fellows represent seven disciplines and will pursue projects ranging from "The Magic of Nature" to "Family Papers and American Linguistic History" and beyond. Our Leadership Fellows represent four departments in the College of Arts and Sciences and the Schools of Government, Medicine and Nursing. We wish all our Fellows a semester of rich conversation, teaching, research and growth.

Carolina has embraced Chancellor Thorp's innovation initiative, and so have we. The Institute is uniquely positioned to lead in fostering interdisciplinary innovation, as IAH Advisory Board Chair John C. O'Hara explains in his Perspectives piece on how the Institute can address "wicked problems." In this newsletter, we look back at our fall events, including our Innovation Symposium, which featured a keynote by the chancellor and an all-day faculty symposium.

We also look to the future of our role in the innovation initiative: We are proud to announce a $100,000 Innovations Fund, in partnership with the Office of the Vice Chancellor for Research and Economic Development and with support from the Hyde Family Foundations. The fund will support interdisciplinary projects that foster innovation in the arts and humanities at Carolina.

In addition to our innovation programming, we are hard at work preparing for two signature IAH events: The Mary Stevens Memorial Reckford Lecture in European Studies and The Weil Lecture on American Citizenship.

Belgian political theorist Chantal Mouffe will deliver the 17th Reckford Lecture Thursday, February 10, at 7:30 p.m. in the Hanes Art Center auditorium. Her talk, titled "An Agonistic Approach to the Future of Europe," will argue that the European Union must embrace a pluralistic, diverse identity rather than trying to form one national, or "we," identity.

Our Weil Lecture, set to take place Wednesday, March 16, at 7:30 p.m. in the Hill Hall auditorium, will likely prove to be a centerpiece of conversation at Carolina in the coming weeks. Our faculty committee, comprising IAH Fellows from a blend of disciplines, has selected New York's Imam Feisal Abdul Rauf, the imam originally affiliated with the interfaith cultural center near Ground Zero, known now as Park51, to deliver the lecture. Leading up to his talk, we'll host two panels examining civil discourse (Feb. 22) and religious pluralism (March 1) in American society. Visit iah.unc.edu/calendar for details on those events.

Given the sometimes heated debate around the Park51 center, we anticipate some difficult, but thoughtful, conversations. Our goal in bringing the imam to campus is not to revisit the controversy or debate the morality of the cultural center. Instead, we hope to generate a more considered and global conversation. The imam has dedicated himself to fostering interfaith dialogue and to bridging cultural gaps between Islam and American democracy — you can read more about his biography and the lecture here. We look forward to hearing his insights on American citizenship and the discussions that will surround the lecture.

I'm certain that some of you, our readers, may have comments regarding the Weil lecture or our other programming. As always, we encourage you to participate, in the grand tradition of the Institute, and join the conversation. Please feel free to send us an email, call me at (919) 843-2657, or better yet, stop by and chat with us at an upcoming event.

Perspectives: Hyde Hall: The Big Tent

Author John Kao coined the phrase "wicked problems" to point to the enormity of issues such as extreme poverty, climate change, natural resource depletion and communicable diseases. These wicked problems have no easy solution. But under Chancellor Holden Thorp's leadership, UNC-Chapel Hill has committed to an interdisciplinary innovation initiative focused on solving these wicked problems that currently face our nation and our world.

Hyde Hall is the recognized Big Tent on campus—a place for open, candid conversations — and the IAH has served an important role in providing a safe space where Thorp and Goldstein's "creative class" of faculty can collaborate and innovate. How will the arts and humanities, and the IAH, contribute to solving these wicked problems?

Fall Events

Our fall semester was one of our busiest yet. In addition to signature IAH events like our "welcome back" reception in August, grants mentoring workshop in September and Fellows recognition celebration in December, we embraced the opportunity to host conversations on innovation — particularly the role of arts and humanities — and leadership.

IAH fund will support innovation at Carolina

The Institute for the Arts and Humanities, in partnership with the Office of the Vice Chancellor for Research and Economic Development and with support from the Hyde Family Foundations, will introduce in 2011 a $100,000 Innovations Fund to support novel projects involving the arts and humanities at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

As a University-wide initiative, the Innovations Fund is open to any applicant who includes in his or her working group a participant in the arts, humanities or qualitative social sciences. This design is intended to be more inclusive of University researchers and encourage interdisciplinary collaboration across UNC's campus.

2011 Reckford Lecture to take place Feb. 10

Belgian political theorist Chantal Mouffe will deliver the Institute's 2011 Mary Stevens Reckford Memorial Lecture in European Studies Feb. 10. Mouffe, professor of political theory at the Centre for the Study of Democracy at the University of Westminster in London, will give the free public talk, "An Agonistic Approach to the Future of Europe," at 7:30 p.m. in the Hanes Art Center auditorium. A reception and book sale will follow the program in Hanes Auditorium, and the next day, Mouffe will participate in a workshop in Hyde

Hall for faculty and graduate students, "Space, Hegemony and Radical Critique."

Feisal Abdul Rauf to deliver 2011 Weil Lecture

Imam Feisal Abdul Rauf, who has led an effort to build a controversial inter-faith cultural center in lower Manhattan, will deliver the 2011 Weil Lecture on American Citizenship at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The free public talk, hosted by the Institute for the Arts and Humanities, will be at 7:30 p.m. March 16 in Hill Hall. Doors will open at 7 p.m. Admission is free, but tickets will be required. The biennial lecture, supported by private funds, is the featured event in a series of conversations on American citizenship in the coming weeks.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Incubator Improvements

The best view from Hyde Hall just got better. While we have long known that our Incubator, located on the second floor, has a terrific view of McCorkle Place, it hasn't always been so obvious. Thanks to recent renovations, however, we've opened up the space by donating our creative cubicle-style furniture to the communication studies department and our bright blue carpet to the anthropology department. Our new open layout, which provides additional flexibility and capacity, and natural-hued carpet make the space shine and highlight what we affectionately think of as our "tree house." Stop by and see for yourself — or contact us to schedule an event there.

IAH Staff News & Notes

Congratulations are in order for Chris Meinecke, IAH business manager extraordinaire. Chris recently completed the University Leadership Education and Development (U-LEAD) program at UNC. The highly selective nine-week program works with emerging leaders at Carolina, giving them the tools they need to be successful at Carolina. Chris was one of just fifteen participants from UNC and three from N.C. Central.

In other IAH news, communications specialist Kirsten Beattie has been promoted to a new role as the assistant director of development and communications. In addition to continuing her communications work (like this lovely newsletter!), Kirsten will now assist our director of development, Mary Flanagan, and run the Institute's annual giving program.

Finally, the Institute once again celebrated the giving season as a staff. Our annual staff collection for Heifer International was enough to donate a goat and a "promise gift basket" to help families in need build a sustainable future.

For our annual staff outing, we enjoyed a fascinating — if chilly — tour of the cemetery courtesy of renaissance man and IAH Fellow Bland Simpson. Among the many tidbits of history that Bland shared with us was the startling reminder of just how many graves are scattered across campus, many unmarked. It was a neat — if chilling — reminder of our University's past.

Carolina Cares, Carolina Shares
The IAH is proud to have achieved 100% participation in "Carolina Cares, Carolina Shares," the State Employees Combined Campaign that facilitates staff giving through payroll deduction. Led by our team captain, Chris Meinecke, we increased our donation total by a whopping 539% from last year.

Helping Heels Care Provider List

FROM: Aimee Krans, Work/Life Programs
Office of Human Resources

The spring 2011 Helping Heels Care Provider List is now available on the Human Resources website. This list includes UNC-Chapel Hill affiliated individuals who are interested in providing part-time and occasional child care, elder care and/or pet sitting services.

The responsibility for the screening process rests solely and completely with caregivers and the person hiring them. Although we have listed skill information submitted on provider registration forms, we remind you that providers may not necessarily be trained to care for persons who have medical or psychiatric conditions requiring specialized care.

The Helping Heels Care Provider List includes detailed information about providers, including UNC affiliation, provider experience, availability and access to transportation, so that you can make a more informed choice about whom to call.

The list is searchable by clicking on the Search (binoculars) button in Adobe Acrobat.

The Helping Heels Care Provider List will next be updated for the summer.

If you have any questions, contact Aimee Krans, Work/Life Manager, at 962-6008.

Pre- employment Background Check Tip Sheet

FROM: Noreen Montgomery, Director of Employment and Staffing
Office of Human Resources

The Office of Human Resources has developed the following Pre-employment Background Check Tip Sheet to guide departments through the background check process. The tip sheet is a summary of standard practices, processing timelines and exceptions which should be referenced in conjunction with the full policy and related resources.

OHR PROCEDURAL TIPS

Please refer to the full policy details on this topic at:

http://hr.unc.edu/ Keyword: BACKGROUND CHECK POLICY

QUICK SUMMARY

STANDARD PRACTICE: Await Full Results from UNC Public Safety Prior to Making a Job Offer.

If 7 business days have elapsed since initiating a background check with UNC Public Safety and final background check results have not yet been received, in the event of a critical staffing need or perceived risk that the selected candidate may receive a competing job offer, Department Heads may request authorization from the Office of Human Resources (OHR) to issue a conditional job offer. The conditional offer does not permit the selected candidate to report for duty or begin work until such time as the background check is fully completed.

STANDARD PRACTICE: Employee Does Not Report to or Begin Work Until All Background Check Results Have Been Received and Deemed Satisfactory.

In the event 30 calendar days have elapsed since a background check was initiated with UNC Public Safety and full results have not been received, the Department Head may request approval from the Vice Chancellor for Human Resources to initiate a conditional job start. This option will only be permitted in exceptional circumstances where a critical University business need has been demonstrated and when the position does not deal with sensitive populations or have access to sensitive University facilities. This option may only be exercised with advance approval of the Vice Chancellor for Human Resources.

SPA, FACULTY, EPA NON-FACULTY TEMPORARY & PERMANENT EMPLOYEES

PRE-EMPLOYMENT BACKGROUND CHECK GUIDELINES

Responsibility for Initiating Checks

- SPA Permanent employee pre-employment background checks will be initiated by your OHR Employment Consultant.
- EPA Non-Faculty and SPA Temporary pre-employment background checks are initiated and the results reviewed by the appointing department, with OHR consultation as needed. Checks with potentially negative results will be returned by UNC Public Safety directly to OHR for review and consultation with the hiring department management.
- Faculty pre-employment background check process differs from above. Refer to the Academic Personnel web site for procedures: http://provost.unc.edu/.

Standard Timeline

Normally, background checks should be submitted to UNC Public Safety and satisfactory results received before an offer of employment is made or an employee is permitted to report for duty and begin work. In the event of a critical staffing need or an identified risk of a selected candidate receiving a competing job offer, OHR has procedures to enable expedited handling of job offers or job starts under certain circumstances.

When Results are Delayed

Under typical conditions, background check results are returned to departments within 7 business days of their being requested. This ensures timely action on offers of employment and establishing employee start dates. However, due to the nature of the nationwide background checking process and the reliance on outside sources for these results, this time frame cannot always be met.

When full background check results are not received by a department within 7 business days, the Department may request OHR for approval to make a conditional offer of employment pending final, satisfactory results.

In unusual and exceptional circumstances, once 30 calendar days have elapsed since a background check request was initiated, and only with approval from the Vice Chancellor of Human Resources, a conditional start of employment may be considered for positions that do not have contact with sensitive populations (e.g., students, patients, minors), have access to sensitive facilities, or have authority over University funds. Such situations will be considered on a case by case basis and take into account critical business need.

Helping Heels Care Provider List

FROM: Aimee Krans, Work/Life Programs
Office of Human Resources

The spring 2011 Helping Heels Care Provider List is now available on the Human Resources website. This list includes UNC-Chapel Hill affiliated individuals who are interested in providing part-time and occasional child care, elder care and/or pet sitting services.

The responsibility for the screening process rests solely and completely with caregivers and the person hiring them. Although we have listed skill information submitted on provider registration forms, we remind you that providers may not necessarily be trained to care for persons who have medical or psychiatric conditions requiring specialized care.

The Helping Heels Care Provider List includes detailed information about providers, including UNC affiliation, provider experience, availability and access to transportation, so that you can make a more informed choice about whom to call.

The list is searchable by clicking on the Search (binoculars) button in Adobe Acrobat.

The Helping Heels Care Provider List will next be updated for the summer.

If you have any questions, contact Aimee Krans, Work/Life Manager, at 962-6008.

Pre- employment Background Check Tip Sheet

FROM: Noreen Montgomery, Director of Employment and Staffing
Office of Human Resources

The Office of Human Resources has developed the following Pre-employment Background Check Tip Sheet to guide departments through the background check process. The tip sheet is a summary of standard practices, processing timelines and exceptions which should be referenced in conjunction with the full policy and related resources.

OHR PROCEDURAL TIPS

Please refer to the full policy details on this topic at:

http://hr.unc.edu/ Keyword: BACKGROUND CHECK POLICY

QUICK SUMMARY

STANDARD PRACTICE: Await Full Results from UNC Public Safety Prior to Making a Job Offer.

If 7 business days have elapsed since initiating a background check with UNC Public Safety and final background check results have not yet been received, in the event of a critical staffing need or perceived risk that the selected candidate may receive a competing job offer, Department Heads may request authorization from the Office of Human Resources (OHR) to issue a conditional job offer. The conditional offer does not permit the selected candidate to report for duty or begin work until such time as the background check is fully completed.

STANDARD PRACTICE: Employee Does Not Report to or Begin Work Until All Background Check Results Have Been Received and Deemed Satisfactory.

In the event 30 calendar days have elapsed since a background check was initiated with UNC Public Safety and full results have not been received, the Department Head may request approval from the Vice Chancellor for Human Resources to initiate a conditional job start. This option will only be permitted in exceptional circumstances where a critical University business need has been demonstrated and when the position does not deal with sensitive populations or have access to sensitive University facilities. This option may only be exercised with advance approval of the Vice Chancellor for Human Resources.

SPA, FACULTY, EPA NON-FACULTY TEMPORARY & PERMANENT EMPLOYEES

PRE-EMPLOYMENT BACKGROUND CHECK GUIDELINES

Responsibility for Initiating Checks

- SPA Permanent employee pre-employment background checks will be initiated by your OHR Employment Consultant.
- EPA Non-Faculty and SPA Temporary pre-employment background checks are initiated and the results reviewed by the appointing department, with OHR consultation as needed. Checks with potentially negative results will be returned by UNC Public Safety directly to OHR for review and consultation with the hiring department management.
- Faculty pre-employment background check process differs from above. Refer to the Academic Personnel web site for procedures: http://provost.unc.edu/.

Standard Timeline

Normally, background checks should be submitted to UNC Public Safety and satisfactory results received before an offer of employment is made or an employee is permitted to report for duty and begin work. In the event of a critical staffing need or an identified risk of a selected candidate receiving a competing job offer, OHR has procedures to enable expedited handling of job offers or job starts under certain circumstances.

When Results are Delayed

Under typical conditions, background check results are returned to departments within 7 business days of their being requested. This ensures timely action on offers of employment and establishing employee start dates. However, due to the nature of the nationwide background checking process and the reliance on outside sources for these results, this time frame cannot always be met.

When full background check results are not received by a department within 7 business days, the Department may request OHR for approval to make a conditional offer of employment pending final, satisfactory results.

In unusual and exceptional circumstances, once 30 calendar days have elapsed since a background check request was initiated, and only with approval from the Vice Chancellor of Human Resources, a conditional start of employment may be considered for positions that do not have contact with sensitive populations (e.g., students, patients, minors), have access to sensitive facilities, or have authority over University funds. Such situations will be considered on a case by case basis and take into account critical business need.

UNC VITA

UNC-Chapel Hill VITA is a pro bono student group at the UNC School of Law that is dedicated solely to preparing free tax returns to low income individuals who meet our guidelines. We can e-file taxpayers' federal and all of their state tax returns. All volunteers are all IRS-certified.

Taxpayers are eligible if they meet the following criteria: make less than $60,000/yr for a family of four or less than $49,000 for individuals. We service all those who qualify and are not limited to residents of the Carrboro-Chapel Hill area.

Our site is open from Feb. 3 through Apr. 3. (except for spring break from Mar. 4-13) and all sessions are located at the law school (Van Hecke-Wettach Hall) in room 3031.

Hours of operation:
Thursdays-5p.m. to 7p.m.
Saturdays-noon to 3 p.m.

Sunday-noon to 3p.m.

Clients must make an appointment by going to the UNC VITA website.

State Employee Credit Union Volunteer Income Tax Assistance
The SECU has also partnered with the Internal Revenue Service to offer VITA services. This program is available to help taxpayers with a household income of $49,000 or less complete and electronically file basic tax returns. SECU's trained employees are available to assist qualified participants by appointment Jan. 20 through Apr. 18. Schedule an appointment with your local State Employees' Credit Union office. Changes to SPA and EPA Non- Faculty Position Classification Procedures Regarding Supervisory Spans & Layers Guidelines

FROM: Matthew S. Brody, Associate Vice Chancellor for Human Resources

In follow-up to the Chancellor's memo on supervisory spans and layers dated October 27, 2010, the Office of Human Resources (OHR) is implementing several changes to our position classification procedures for both SPA and EPA non-faculty positions, effective immediately.

SPA Positions
When departments either newly create an SPA position or seek to change an existing position classification (branch, role or competency), the SPA Job Description Form (PD-102-CB) will now require specific information to be provided on supervisory spans and layers. The submitter will indicate via a checkbox in Section 11 of the form if the position has direct supervisory responsibilities. If the answer is yes, the form will also require the department to indicate the number of individuals that report to the position in question. If this number is less than four, then this is considered an exception to the University's supervisory spans and layers guidelines and requires the direct approval of the relevant Dean or Vice Chancellor. A signature line has been provided in Section 12 of the form. The updated form has been posted to the OHR website. Prior versions of this form should no longer be used.

EPA Non- Faculty Procedures
The EPA Non-Faculty position classification process is entirely on-line, so there is no paper form to be revised. The EPAWeb Position Management System is being updated very shortly to add three additional mandatory questions to position creation and position modification actions as follows:

- Does the position directly supervise other individuals: Yes or No
- If Yes ...
    - How many individuals does this position supervise: <indicate number>
    - If the position supervises less than 4 individuals, has the applicable Dean or Vice Chancellor directly approved this exception to the supervisory spans and layers guidelines: Yes or No

HR Facilitators will be notified as soon as these changes are made in EPAWeb. For the time being, EPAWeb position actions must include in action comments a statement that the "Position has no supervisory responsibilities" or alternatively that "This position supervises X individuals" with X being the number directly supervised. If the number supervised is less than four, the applicable School/College/Division-level approver must obtain the direct approval of the Dean or Vice Chancellor as an exception to the spans and layers guidelines and certify this approval in action comments. Any actions submitted after the date of this memo that lack this newly required information will be returned to the originating department.

Questions

We appreciate your cooperation as we implement these changes to comply with the University's guidelines on supervisory spans and layers. If you have questions on these changes for SPA positions, please contact your assigned OHR Classification and Compensation Consultant. For questions on EPA Non-Faculty positions, any member of the EPA Non-Faculty Human Resources unit can assist you.

YOU may qualify for

FREE

tax preparation through VITA...

(Volunteer Income Tax Assistance)

If you meet the following criteria:

Your 2010 household income was less than $49,000.

Is your household income greater than $49,000? Ask an SECU tax preparer about your tax preparation alternatives. Please note: You may not qualify for VITA if your return is complex. SECU members may utilize TurboTax at a discounted price through www.ncsecu.org.

Where and When?

Schedule an appointment with your local State Employees' Credit Union branch from January 20th - April 18th.

Electronic Filing

SECU will file your return electronically so you can have your refund in as little as 8-15 days. Can't wait that long?

Tax Refund Express Loan

This is a low cost alternative to expensive Refund Anticipation Loans. With a low interest rate of 12%, a typical 15 day loan would only cost about $2 based on a loan amount of $500. Don't pay high fees to get your own refund!

Expanded Tax Refund Options

SECU is now offering the Cash Points Global product as an option for depositing your refund. Stop by any SECU branch or contact the Call Center at 1-888-732-8562 for more information about Cash Points Global and/or to open an account prior to completing your tax returns.

State Employees' Credit Union®

You may be eligible for the free VITA service if your household income was $49,000 or less for the 2010 tax year. Schedule an appointment with your local State Employees' Credit Union branch from January 20th – April 18th.

SECU will prepare the following:

Form 1040 EZ
Form 1040 A Form 1040

"Spark Change from Within" Rye Barcott Hillard Gold '39 Lecture

Tuesday, March 29, 7:00 PM
The Nelson Mandela Auditorium, FedEx Global Education Center

Free and open to the public. Arrive early to guarantee entry! Book signing and reception to follow!

On the surface, Rye Barcott may seem a man of contradictions: a Marine and a peacemaker, a Harvard MBA, entrepreneur, and co-founder of Carolina for Kibera, a nonprofit organization in one of the world's largest slums. But, at its core, his mission is steadfast: to serve, to spark change from within. In his gripping 2011 memoir, It Happened on the Way to War: A Marine's Path to Peace, Barcott recounts his experiences building and learning from leaders in unlikely places: from the Kibera slum of Nairobi, Kenya to the bomb-strewn streets of Fallujah and beyond. Eschewing old notions of top-down, command-and-control management, he shows the impact that small, diverse groups of committed people can have in the world.

Global Engagement Summer Institute

Final Deadline: April 1, 2011

A distinctive study abroad program that prepares undergraduate students with the knowledge, tools and experiences to confront shared global problems. Students intern in interdisciplinary teams of 4-5 at community-based nonprofits in Bolivia, India, Nicaragua or Uganda.

It's that time of year again to update Work-Study job descriptions. You will soon be receiving an automated e-mail informing you that your job description has had the review flag turned off by the Work-Study Administrator. This is your indication that it is now okay to proceed. Attached you will find instructions on how to access and update your existing job(s), create new positions and adjust wage rates for returning students. Please save the attachment, read it in its entirety, and refer to it at any time for instruction and clarification. Please note that the information is intended for returning supervisors only and should not be shared with anyone who has not previously undergone mandatory supervisor training.

The deadline for updating job descriptions is April 1, 2011. Meeting the deadline will ensure that all positions are online and available for students to view as they receive their financial aid information for the 2011-2012 academic year. If you know of someone in your department who would like to participate in the Work-Study Program, please let him/her know that New Supervisor Training Sessions will be held in June, July and August -- dates, times, and locations to be advertised in the University Gazette starting in May.

Just as a general reminder, please double check the total number of hours your current work-study students have worked for this academic year as it is common for students to edge closer to their maximum award amount at this point in the spring. Again, it is the responsibility of the department to pay wage amounts for hours worked above and beyond the student's total Work-Study Award.

As always, thank you for your participation in the Federal Work-Study Program!

Best,
SMK

Federal Work-Study Program 2011-2012

TO: Returning Supervisors
FROM: Office of Scholarships and Student Aid
RE: Updating 2010-2011 Work-Study Jobs
DATE: March 8, 2011

It is time to update your Job Descriptions on the Work-Study website. The following is a step by step instructional guide on how to complete this process. As you edit or create new jobs, please keep in mind your returning students and their level of work if you want to increase their wage rate. You may increase their wage rate within their current salary level, or you may create a new position at a higher salary level if necessary. It is up to your discretion whether or not a returning student receives a wage increase. Please read the following instructions carefully:

Main Menu:

1) Accessing Jobs on the Web
2) Updating previously created positions
3) Creating additional positions
4) Taking over existing positions
5) Job Classification System
6) Interviewing Students
7) Hiring Students and Payroll Forms
8) Assigning students and wage rates
9) Reminders for 2011-2012

Please edit your job listing by April 1, 2011.

1) Accessing Jobs on the Web

Please remember to bookmark the Jobs on the Web URL: http://workstudy.unc.edu

- Once you enter the site, select Supervisor/Administrator Login.
- Enter your PID (as it appears on your UNC One Card, or call the UNC One Card Office at 962-1385 if you have forgotten it)
- Enter your pass code.
    - If you have forgotten your pass code, select reset your pass code on the main page and enter the appropriate information when prompted. You will be reassigned a new pass code that will be sent immediately to your e-mail address as listed in your Supervisor Registration.

Return to Main Menu

2) Updating Previously Created Positions

To update your previously created positions, go to Browse/Edit My Job Listings under Supervisor Functions. All of your current job listings will continue to be displayed, and you can access each one by clicking on its job title. You will see all of the originally submitted content from your 2010-2011 job descriptions carried forward on the job template. You should update the following items:

- Job Availability: Select Fall Only, Spring Only, or Fall and Spring.
- Academic Year Period: You must select 2011-2012 for jobs to be displayed to students seeking jobs next year. You MUST update your jobs even if you have students returning to your position.
- Funding Source: Update only if it has changed from last year.
- Work-Study Job Site: Update only if it has changed from last year.
- Work-Study Job Pay Level: This has been defaulted to last year's Pay Level. After determining the level of responsibility, qualifications and skills, and scope of work, you will select a pay level from S1-S4, which will carry a wage range. The exact hourly wage rate for each individual student will not be determined until after you select the candidate for the job. Therefore, only the pay level range (S1-S4) will be advertised in the job description.
- Job Description: Under Job Description you will see that all of your previous duties to be performed and required job skills have been carried forward from 2010-2011. For 2011-2012 you will have to review each item and make sure that it now fits the criteria of the pay level you have selected. You may create your job description and incorporate the common language of the pay level within your job description, or you may designate that you would like to have the common language of the pay level appear above your description by simply checking the "Include Common Language" box. Then, you would simply list the tasks to be performed.
- Additional Information about the job: This additional information has been carried forward from your 2010-2011 job description. Please update accordingly.
- Days and hours of week that work is available: Update only if the work schedule has changed.
- Total number of positions: Must have a number selected in order for a job to be displayed.
- Total number of open positions: The maximum number of students you wish to newly hire for next year (do not include returning students).
- Maximum number of hours per week per person: MAY NOT exceed 20 hours per week.
- Minimum hours acceptable per week per person: Six is the average minimum; determined by supervisor.
- Display to students: Indicator should be turned on (shown by a check mark in the box) if you plan to advertise available positions on the student website (jobsontheweb.unc.edu). Indicator may be ONLY turned off if all of your positions are filled. Remember, job descriptions are required to be updated even if you have a returning student.
- Reviewed by admin: For office use only, please leave the indicator in the on position.

Please continue to update all previously created positions in the same manner.

3) Creating Additional Positions

To create a new position, a supervisor should select one of the job programs under the Add a new job listing link on the main page. Remember, the category automatically defaults to Child Care so you should update accordingly. Complete all required fields. Any new positions created will need to be reviewed by the Office of Scholarships and Student Aid.

4) Supervisors Taking Over Existing Jobs

[follow these instructions only if you are taking over a supervisory role for a position that was previously created by someone who is no longer employed in your department]

1. Send an e-mail to Michelle Klemens, the assistant director of federal employment programs, at michelle_klemens@unc.edu with your name and PID, the name and PID of the previous supervisor whose job(s) is/are being transferred to you, the Internet Job ID#, and the name(s) and PID(s) of student(s) actively assigned to the position(s). This information will be used to reassign the job(s) to your PID.

2. Within 1-2 business days, you should be able to log on to the Web site with your PID and password and view the positions listed under your information. This will allow you to view and/or edit any current job descriptions, update any of your registration information, or create any new jobs as needed in the future.

5) Job Classification System

Purpose:

We have established a job classification and compensation system that differentiates among skill levels, abilities and prior work experience, and one that also recognizes and pays for the wide array of job responsibilities and duties that a student performs. A more comprehensive job classification system and a broader range of wage rates permits supervisors to more equitably classify and compensate students based on the level of complexity of the job and on the student's individual skills, abilities, and experience.

Supervisors should strive to create positions that provide students with a chance to explore career opportunities; to gain a better understanding of how knowledge gained in school is applied on the job and to acquire important practical skills that will give them an edge when they apply for a job after graduation.

The department is responsible for hiring the student and determining their wage rate within the guidelines outlined in the Job Classification System.

Structure:

Student employment pay levels are based on the qualifications and skills required for the position, the scope of work, and level of responsibility of an employee holding the position. The hourly rate for a student employee who returns to the same department and position may be increased at the department's discretion after the student completes each year of employment. The hourly rate of a new student employee hired in a position that s/he has not previously held should not exceed 80% of the range maximum.

Four pay levels exist with corresponding hourly rate ranges.

Pay Level S1 - $7.25 - $8.30: No experience or previous training is required. Includes positions that perform routine tasks with minimal responsibility. Where applicable, positions may require demonstrated ability to successfully interact with the public. Student employee works in a well-supervised setting.

Pay Level S2 - $8.30 - $10.05: Little or moderate experience, technical knowledge, or previous training is necessary. Special instruction may be necessary for some aspects of these positions. Student employee must demonstrate the ability to learn new tasks and work independently with moderate or limited supervision.

Pay Level S3 - $10.05 - $11.80: Moderate to substantial experience, technical knowledge, or previous training or certification is necessary. Student must possess a high level of competency or fluency with a specialized skill. Student employee readily demonstrates the use of independent judgment, decision-making ability, and may be expected to work responsibly with little or no direct supervision. Previous work experience at a lower level within the same department or functional area may be required. These positions may involve supervision, training, and/or tutoring of others.

Pay Level S4 - $11.80 - $13.55: In addition to the qualifications and scope of work associated with Level 3, these positions require an individual who possesses substantial experience, advanced technical knowledge, and previous training or certification. The student may be expected to manage research, analysis, publication, instruction, or other special projects or activities of significant scope.

Examples of Positions in these Pay Levels:

Clerical Assistant I – (Pay Level S1): Performs general office support functions. Duties typically include: providing general information, responding to routine inquiries, operating basic office machinery, answering phones, making appointments, filing, maintaining records, making deliveries or errands. On-site training and supervision are continuously provided.

Technical Assistant III – (Pay Level S3): Performs advanced technical services. Duties may include: controlling the flow of work through a computer system; determining the source or cause of system problems and taking appropriate corrective action; analyzing, designing and developing customized programs and reports; database design, development, and maintenance; developing or enhancing web based programs and information. Limited supervision is provided, and the student employee is expected to operate independently in the performance of a wide range of duties.

Establishing Wage Rates

Please keep in mind that each student's Federal Work-Study award will vary based on the family's financial situation. Below is a chart to determine approximately how many hours per week a student could work based on their award and the position level. You will initially set the pay level range (S1-S4) based on the level of job responsibilities and skills required. The pay level range will be advertised within your job description. You will set the specific wage rate within the pay level range after you determine the candidate's level of experience. You will set the actual wage rate for each student individually when you assign them to the job on the website.

Pay Level	Wage Range	Midpoint Wage	Award Amount	Hours/Week
S1	$7.25 - $8.30	$7.77	$1800	7.7
			$2700	11.5
			$3200	13.7
S2	$8.30 - $10.05	$9.17	$1800	6.5
			$2700	9.8
			$3200	11.6
S3	$10.05 - $11.80	$10.92	$1800	5.4
			$2700	8.2
			$3200	9.7
S4	$11.80 - $13.55	$12.67	$1800	4.7
			$2700	7.1
			$3200	8.4

6) Interviewing Students

Students may view available Work-Study positions online over the summer and may contact you via e-mail or telephone to ask a few questions. However, interviews are not permitted until the first day of classes. Students are first required to come by the Office of Scholarships and Student Aid to pick up their Job Assignment Form, which is their "license to work." The Job Assignment Form must be presented to the supervisor at the start of each and every interview. The Job Assignment Form assures you that the student has been awarded Federal Work-Study funding. Any wages earned by a student who is not eligible for work-study will be paid by the hiring department.

Return to Main Menu

7) Hiring Students and Completing Payroll Forms

Once you have identified a student you would like to hire into a position and the student accepts your offer of employment, you must complete two very important steps:

Step 1: Fill out the student's Job Assignment Form. In Section 1, you will need to fill in the designated pay per hour and calculate total work hours (total award amount/hourly wage rate = total work hours. Total work hours/30 weeks = average number of hours student may work per week to earn total award amount). In Section 2, you will need to fill in all information. In Section 3, you and the student will need to fill in all information and sign the form. A copy of the completed Job Assignment Form MUST be returned to the Office of Scholarships and Student Aid.

Step 2: Assist student in filling out/submitting all payroll forms to your office/department's HR Facilitator. These forms include the Electronic I-9 (if applicable), W-4, NC-4 and Direct Deposit Authorization Form. Once the forms have been completed, it is the responsibility of the hiring department to enter the information into the HRIS system. For payroll purposes, the student will be listed under your department number and the Federal Work-Study account number will be used as the source of funding.

Return to Main Menu

8) Assigning Students and Wage Rates

Once the Job Assignment Form has been completed (and a copy has been sent to the Office of Scholarships and Student Aid), and all payroll forms have been submitted to the hiring department and entered into the HRIS system, you will need to enter the Work-Study Web site again. Log on using your PID and pass code, and go into Supervisor Functions, then Designate Student Job Assignment. Next, select the job title of the position for which you are assigning a student. This will bring up the Student Assignment Form. This is the page in which you will assign the student and the pay rate. Enter the student's PID (as listed on the Job Assignment Form). List the student's first name, last name, hiring date, and pay rate that you have identified for that particular student. You will be reminded once again of the Pay Level range that you selected on the job description. You will indicate the exact pay rate, total award (from Job Assignment Form), and then determine the Annual maximum hours (total award divided by pay rate). Any hours exceeding the annual maximum must be covered by the hiring department.

º Student PID:

º First name:

º Last name:

º Hire date: MM DD ccYY MM/DD/YYYY

º Pay rate: (from $8.30 to $10.05)

º Total award:

º Annual max. hours: (Total award / Pay rate)

You will update your Job Description at this point by reducing the number of open positions and determine if you would like to continue to display your job to students. If you like, you could also update the total number of positions available by increasing the number of positions for which you are hiring. All of these fields will be updated on your job description.

9) Reminders for 2011-2012

Job Interviews:
The supervisor will not be able to officially interview a student until the first day of classes of the fall semester. A student may not be interviewed until they present the supervisor with the Job Assignment Form (JAF). The JAF ensures the supervisor that the student is eligible for Federal Work-Study funds. Any student hired without a JAF will have to be paid from the supervisor's departmental funds.

Payroll Procedures:
Once hired, students must complete payroll forms (electronic I-9 if applicable, W-4, NC-4, Direct Deposit) with the hiring department's HR Facilitator. The HR Facilitator will enter payroll information into the HRIS System. For payroll purposes, students will be housed under the hiring department number but the Federal Work-Study account number (to be given at a later date) will be used as the funding source in the HRIS System.

Time Keeping:
All students and supervisors must use the Time Information Management System to track work hours. Students are required to complete Computer-Based Training for "Time Stamp Student and Temp Employees" on the first day of work. Students (listed as "employee" in TIM) and their supervisors (listed as "manager" in TIM) are REQUIRED to approve work hours on a biweekly basis before the department TIM Administrator performs the final sign-off. If you, as a supervisor, do not know how to use the TIM System, then you must complete the Computer-Based Training for "TIM Managers."

Supervisor's Forms:
In addition to the Job Assignment Form, training materials, confidentiality clauses, and/or FERPA training certificates, all supervisors are required to keep a Time Record Log to record students' hours. This ensures that a student does not work over their maximum allowable hours, as indicated on the supervisor copy of the Job Assignment Form. If a student works over their allowable hours through Federal Work-Study, the department employing the student becomes responsible for paying the additional hours exceeding their maximum award.

Browse All Job Listings
Supervisors may view all of the job listings in the system by program, category, department, or agency. This function, "browse all job listings", located under the Supervisor Functions, works the same way as the student browse function except all jobs are displayed regardless of number of open positions, semester, display, or review status.

Looking Ahead to Summer 2012
Since Work-Study funding is limited, the availability of summer work-study awards will be determined on a yearly basis. In the case where funding is available, students must apply for summer aid by completing the Summer Aid Application available in March 2012 at the Office of Scholarships and Student Aid. For the most part, only students who were eligible for Work-Study during the preceding academic year will be awarded work-study for summer. There will be only a few students meeting special conditions who will be considered for new Work-Study assignments during summer. Students must be actively enrolled in summer session courses to be eligible for Summer Work-Study Funds. Students who receive work-study funding will be required to pick up a Job Assignment Form on the first day of summer session classes.

Training Workshops for New Supervisors
All new supervisors are required to attend a mandatory, in-person training over the summer to be eligible to participate in the Federal Work-Study program. Times, dates, and locations for the training sessions will be advertised in the University Gazette starting in May.

Special Note: This information is intended ONLY for supervisors who have previously attended a Work-Study Supervisor Training course. Please do NOT pass along this information to individuals who have not attended training because they will NOT be admitted into the program.

Evening Activities- Safety/Security Considerations

FROM: Chief Jeffrey McCracken
Chair, Campus Security Committee

This memo serves as a reminder for faculty, staff, and students who attend classes and other campus and community activities at night or work alone in campus buildings after regular business hours.

- See Something? Say Something! Emergency Call Boxes are located across campus on black poles with blue lights on top. University police respond to the call box location as soon as the call box is activated, even if you do not speak. Click here for more information. In an emergency, or if you notice anything suspicious, notify University Police by using a call box or by calling 962-8100 (routine calls) or 911 (emergency calls).

- Lock Your Doors! Secure doors to rooms, residences, and offices when you're occupying them and also when you're leaving, even if it's just for a short time.

- SafeWalk provides a male-female pair of DPS-trained student walkers to accompany students at night between any on-campus locations, including Granville and most Greek housing, as well as select off-campus locations. SafeWalk operates Sunday-Thursday; 11 p.m. to 3 a.m. Call 962-SAFE (7233) or submit a ticket online.

- RaveGuardian is a free service that allows registrants to activate a virtual escort with their cell phones when crossing campus after dark. Register for the service online and access other safety features.

- Now UNC Mobile and Rave are offering Smart911, a free opt-in system through which UNC community members can register their phones and create personalized profiles by adding a photo, local address, relevant medical conditions and other information. Smart911 protects your information and ensures it gets only to the people who need it and only when they need it (your profile is only visible when you call 9-1-1). For more information on how to register your cell phone free of charge with the Smart911 system click here.

- When walking at night, plan the route in advance so you can stay in well-lit areas; stay alert to your surroundings at all times; and never walk alone. Tell someone where you are going and when you expect to return.

- In the late afternoon or at night, use fare-free Chapel Hill Transit services. The "U" and "RU" routes circle campus in both directions between 7 am and 8 pm on weekdays. Click here to see when the next bus will arrive and reduce your outside wait time. Safe Ride Routes are also offered to serve parts of campus, Chapel Hill, and Carrboro. Click here for more for information.

- The P2P Express service runs a fixed route every 15 minutes from 7 pm to 3 am seven days a week when the dormitories are open during the academic semesters. Riders must show a UNC OneCard or University ID to board. For an Express map and more information on all P2P services (including a Law School shuttle, Student Health Service / UNC Hospitals' Emergency Room transportation, a Library SafeRide Shuttle, and Sunday service to the PR Lot) visit click here.

- P2P also transports students to open campus buildings as well as providing rides for students, faculty and staff to campus parking lots between dusk and dawn, seven days a week, excluding University holidays. To arrange a ride, call 962-7867 (TDD 962-7142 for hearing impaired only).

Information Technology (IT) Award Nominations

FROM: 2011 IT Awards Committee

Nominations for the Annual IT Awards are now open! Links and information on the individual or team nominations are available on the website and are due by Wednesday, Mar. 9.

We invite you to recognize someone who has given you outstanding technical support by nominating an individual or team for an Information Technology (IT) Award. This award honors any type of information technology support on campus, from staff (permanent employee) who provide computing support, write code, or administer a network, to teams working together to provide specific technology services for a department or the University.

A nomination is an excellent way to let your IT support staff know you appreciate what they do. Please provide specific information that will tell this year's committee how the nominee or team stands out.

Winners will be announced at the Annual IT Awards Ceremony, Tuesday, Apr. 12, 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the Carolina Club. Event registration for the IT community will open at a later date.

Please note that last year's award winners are listed on our website and are not eligible for this year's awards.

Filing Your State Taxes Correctly and On Time - - Make Sure You Take Advantage of Tax Credits

FROM: NC Department of Revenue

The 2011 tax season is underway. The N.C. Department of Revenue offers the following tax tips to make sure you file your taxes correctly and on time.

- Plan to file your taxes electronically: filing your taxes electronically is fast, convenient and more accurate than paper filing. Plus, you receive a confirmation that your return and/or payment have been received. Direct deposit of your state income tax refund is available only if you e-file. If you owe additional tax, you can make payments electronically on the agency's website by bank draft, Visa, or MasterCard. Just visit the North Carolina Department of Revenue website, click on Electronic Services for Individuals and then D-400V, Individual Payment Voucher.

- The opportunity to e-file for free is available for those that meet certain eligibility requirements. More information about e-filing, including free and other low cost filing options, is available by clicking the e-file link on the front page of the agency's website.

- You may qualify for the earned income tax credit: the state Earned Income Tax Credit increases this year to 5 percent of a taxpayer's federal credit. Check your eligibility for the federal and state earned income tax credits. If you qualify for the federal credit, you qualify for the state credit.

- Don't file photocopies of tax forms: if you file using paper forms, please use preprinted forms or forms you download from the department's website. Photocopies of forms may not scan correctly, which could delay the processing of your return or cause errors that would require you to file an amended return.

- Taxpayers can get tax forms mailed to them free of charge by calling 877-252-3052 during regular business hours or by writing to the department. Taxpayers can also order forms from the department's website.

- Make sure you include your correct address: thousands of state tax refunds are returned each year because taxpayers put an incorrect address on their returns. Double check your personal information -- including your current address -- before you send in your return.

- Make your check out to the N.C. Department of Revenue: some taxpayers send checks made out to the Internal Revenue Service for their state taxes. If you owe any state tax, make your check out to the N.C. Department of Revenue.

You may qualify for free tax preparation and filing: taxpayers with low- to moderate incomes may qualify for free tax preparation and filing assistance through the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance program sponsored by the Internal Revenue Service. For more information on VITA programs available for Carolina employees, click here. For more information please call the Taxpayer Assistance and Collections Center at 877-252-3052.

- SafeWalk provides a male-female pair of DPS-trained student walkers to accompany students at night between any on-campus locations, including Granville and most Greek housing, as well as select off-campus locations. SafeWalk operates Sunday-Thursday; 11 p.m. to 3 a.m. Call 962-SAFE (7233) or submit a ticket online.

- RaveGuardian is a free service that allows registrants to activate a virtual escort with their cell phones when crossing campus after dark. Register for the service online and access other safety features.

- Now UNC Mobile and Rave are offering Smart911, a free opt-in system through which UNC community members can register their phones and create personalized profiles by adding a photo, local address, relevant medical conditions and other information. Smart911 protects your information and ensures it gets only to the people who need it and only when they need it (your profile is only visible when you call 9-1-1). For more information on how to register your cell phone free of charge with the Smart911 system click here.

- When walking at night, plan the route in advance so you can stay in well-lit areas; stay alert to your surroundings at all times; and never walk alone. Tell someone where you are going and when you expect to return.

- In the late afternoon or at night, use fare-free Chapel Hill Transit services. The "U" and "RU" routes circle campus in both directions between 7 am and 8 pm on weekdays. Click here to see when the next bus will arrive and reduce your outside wait time. Safe Ride Routes are also offered to serve parts of campus, Chapel Hill, and Carrboro. Click here for more for information.

- The P2P Express service runs a fixed route every 15 minutes from 7 pm to 3 am seven days a week when the dormitories are open during the academic semesters. Riders must show a UNC OneCard or University ID to board. For an Express map and more information on all P2P services (including a Law School shuttle, Student Health Service / UNC Hospitals' Emergency Room transportation, a Library SafeRide Shuttle, and Sunday service to the PR Lot) visit click here.

- P2P also transports students to open campus buildings as well as providing rides for students, faculty and staff to campus parking lots between dusk and dawn, seven days a week, excluding University holidays. To arrange a ride, call 962-7867 (TDD 962-7142 for hearing impaired only).

Information Technology (IT) Award Nominations

FROM: 2011 IT Awards Committee

Nominations for the Annual IT Awards are now open! Links and information on the individual or team nominations are available on the website and are due by Wednesday, Mar. 9.

We invite you to recognize someone who has given you outstanding technical support by nominating an individual or team for an Information Technology (IT) Award. This award honors any type of information technology support on campus, from staff (permanent employee) who provide computing support, write code, or administer a network, to teams working together to provide specific technology services for a department or the University.

A nomination is an excellent way to let your IT support staff know you appreciate what they do. Please provide specific information that will tell this year's committee how the nominee or team stands out.

Winners will be announced at the Annual IT Awards Ceremony, Tuesday, Apr. 12, 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the Carolina Club. Event registration for the IT community will open at a later date.

Please note that last year's award winners are listed on our website and are not eligible for this year's awards.

Filing Your State Taxes Correctly and On Time - - Make Sure You Take Advantage of Tax Credits

FROM: NC Department of Revenue

The 2011 tax season is underway. The N.C. Department of Revenue offers the following tax tips to make sure you file your taxes correctly and on time.

- Plan to file your taxes electronically: filing your taxes electronically is fast, convenient and more accurate than paper filing. Plus, you receive a confirmation that your return and/or payment have been received. Direct deposit of your state income tax refund is available only if you e-file. If you owe additional tax, you can make payments electronically on the agency's website by bank draft, Visa, or MasterCard. Just visit the North Carolina Department of Revenue website, click on Electronic Services for Individuals and then D-400V, Individual Payment Voucher.

- The opportunity to e-file for free is available for those that meet certain eligibility requirements. More information about e-filing, including free and other low cost filing options, is available by clicking the e-file link on the front page of the agency's website.

- You may qualify for the earned income tax credit: the state Earned Income Tax Credit increases this year to 5 percent of a taxpayer's federal credit. Check your eligibility for the federal and state earned income tax credits. If you qualify for the federal credit, you qualify for the state credit.

- Don't file photocopies of tax forms: if you file using paper forms, please use preprinted forms or forms you download from the department's website. Photocopies of forms may not scan correctly, which could delay the processing of your return or cause errors that would require you to file an amended return.

- Taxpayers can get tax forms mailed to them free of charge by calling 877-252-3052 during regular business hours or by writing to the department. Taxpayers can also order forms from the department's website.

- Make sure you include your correct address: thousands of state tax refunds are returned each year because taxpayers put an incorrect address on their returns. Double check your personal information -- including your current address -- before you send in your return.

- Make your check out to the N.C. Department of Revenue: some taxpayers send checks made out to the Internal Revenue Service for their state taxes. If you owe any state tax, make your check out to the N.C. Department of Revenue.

You may qualify for free tax preparation and filing: taxpayers with low- to moderate incomes may qualify for free tax preparation and filing assistance through the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance program sponsored by the Internal Revenue Service. For more information on VITA programs available for Carolina employees, click here. For more information please call the Taxpayer Assistance and Collections Center at 877-252-3052.

Subject: [hrfac] Advance Copy: New Requirement for Current Faculty and Staff to Report Criminal Convictions

TO: HR Facilitators

FROM: Kathy Bryant, HR Communications & Talent Development

The following memo regarding this new policy is being sent to you in advance. It will be distributed to all employees via Formal Notice email tonight. If you have questions about this policy, please see the contact persons at the end of the following message.

To: All Permanent and Temporary Faculty and Staff

From: Bruce Carney, Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost
Brenda Malone, Vice Chancellor for Human Resources

Subject: New Requirement for Current Faculty and Staff to Report Criminal Convictions

Over the past several years, the University has taken a number of steps to enhance workplace safety, including a significantly redesigned workplace violence policy, a new workplace threat assessment team, the addition of 24-hour employee assistance program (EAP) services through Deer Oaks, and significant enhancements to our pre-employment background check process for new hires. In taking these steps, the University also identified a gap in that we did not have a formal policy in place requiring faculty and staff to inform University officials in the event they may be convicted a crime. The University has now implemented this requirement through its new policy titled "Policy on Reporting of Criminal Convictions for Currently Employed Faculty and Staff". The full text of this policy may be viewed on the Office of Human Resources (OHR) website at the following location: http://hr.unc.edu/policies-procedures-guidelines/spa-employee-policies/employment/CCM3_025868.

If you do not have convenient access to this website or otherwise desire a printed copy of this policy, you may also request it from your department's HR Facilitator or by contacting OHR Employee and Management Relations directly at 843-3444.

A few important points regarding this new policy:

- This new reporting requirement applies to criminal convictions from this point forward and does not apply to past or prior convictions. The policy is not retroactive.
- The policy creates a requirement that when any current faculty or staff member is convicted or makes an admission of guilt to a crime in a court of law, they must report this information within five business days to their immediate supervisor, Department Head, or the Employee and Management Relations Department in the Office of Human Resources.
- This policy applies to all permanent and temporary faculty and staff of the University including post-doctoral scholars, medical fellows, and adjunct faculty.
- Only criminal convictions or formal pleas admitting guilt are reportable under this policy. Being charged with a crime for which you have not been convicted does not trigger this requirement.
- Convictions for routine traffic-related infractions (e.g., speeding, unsafe movement, improper equipment) are not required to be reported under this policy unless driving is a required part of the employee's regularly assigned job duties. In these circumstances, the employee must report any traffic-related conviction under the provisions of this policy.

- It is not the intent of this policy that every criminal conviction will result in the University taking an action that could affect an individual's employment. Many non-violent criminal offenses (for example, DWI, DUI, simple possession of a controlled substance, worthless check, non-violent disorderly conduct) may not necessitate taking any action at all unless the conviction affects the employee's ability to perform their job duties, poses an unacceptable safety risk, or is part of an ongoing and sustained pattern of illegal conduct.

If you have any questions about this new policy, SPA and EPA non-faculty employees may contact Employee and Management Relations in the Office of Human Resources at 843-3444. Faculty members may contact Faculty Personnel in the Office of the Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost at 962-1091.

TO: HR Facilitators

FROM: Kathy Bryant, HR Communications & Talent Development

The following Formal Notice email is being distributed to all employees via mass email overnight tonight. We are forwarding it to you in advance so you will be aware that it is going out.

If you have questions, please direct them to the email account we have set up for this purpose, hr-personnel-flexibility@unc.edu. Thanks.

To: All Employees

From: Brenda Richardson Malone, Vice Chancellor for Human Resources

FORMAL NOTICE: UNC System Personnel Flexibility Proposal

Earlier this year, the General Assembly asked UNC General Administration (GA) to look at ways to increase operational effectiveness and efficiency across the University system. GA developed several proposals that met this criterion and presented those to legislative leaders.

One of those proposals is to consolidate all University system employees under the authority of the UNC System Board of Governors (BOG). This would be a departure from the current system, where SPA employees are under the authority of the State Personnel Act as overseen by the State Personnel Commission and Office of State Personnel, while EPA employees (both faculty and non-faculty) are under BOG authority.

The intent of this proposal is to simplify personnel administration for all of the UNC campuses by providing consolidated authority for personnel matters under a single body, the BOG, and to provide the UNC System with the ability to tailor its personnel programs in a way that better responds to the unique needs of higher education, which would benefit both employees and the individual campuses.

Although the details of this proposal have not been finalized, I thought it would be helpful to provide you with the information that GA has shared with various parties, including the Governor, legislative leaders, the system-wide Faculty Senate, and system-wide Staff Assembly leaders. This information has also been shared with the Employee Forum.

This document is available on the Office of Human Resources website at http://hr.unc.edu/faculty-and-staff/personnelflexibility/index.htm.

I understand that you will have many questions about this proposal. Please note that no legislation has been written or introduced, so there are no further details at this time. As we get additional information from GA, and as legislation is considered, we will continue to keep you informed and add new details to the link above. In addition, we are currently working on a Frequently Asked Questions (FAQ) document that we hope to provide in the next several days.

If you have questions about this proposal, you can submit them to hr-personnel-flexibility@unc.edu. Please note that we will not directly answer each submitted question; however, all questions will be considered for addition to our FAQ document as the information becomes available.

Subject: [hrfac] SPA Layoff Policy and Form Revision

To: HR Facilitators

From: Noreen Montgomery, Employment and Staffing
Office of Human Resources

Based on instructions from the Office of State Personnel (OSP), revisions have been made to the portion of the University's SPA Layoff Policy dealing with the priority of SPA permanent employees compared to those with temporary, probationary, trainee or time-limited status when making layoff decisions within a defined work unit.

This revision, which has been mandated by OSP, clarifies that SPA temporary, probationary, trainee (during their first six months of training), or time-limited employees who perform work in the same or related SPA job classification within the affected work unit must be separated before any employee with a permanent appointment, regardless of whether the temporary, probationary, or time-limited employee has relevant skills that the permanent employee may lack.

The SPA Layoff Request form has also had minor updates to clarify additional information that is needed regarding the department's proposed layoff plan. Departments should begin using the updated version of the Layoff Request form immediately and not use the prior version.

For SPA Layoff policy information and resources please refer to our website at: http://hr.unc.edu/policies-procedures-guidelines/spa-employee-policies/separation/CCM1_018627. This page includes links to the updated SPA Layoff Policy, revised SPA Layoff Request form, and our Layoff Resource Guides for Managers and Employees.

Please direct questions on any of these items to your assigned Employment Consultant. Contact information for your Consultant is available through HR Connect at http://hrconnect.unc.edu/.

Changes to Family Medical Leave (FMLA) Policy

FROM: Ashley Nicklis, Benefits Services
Office of Human Resources

You are receiving advance notice of the following communication, which will be sent as a Formal Notice to all permanent employees tonight.

Effective Apr. 1, the Family Medical Leave policy has been updated to bring the University's policy into compliance with the Office of State Personnel's policy. The primary changes include the following provisions:

- FMLA leave is triggered based on an eligible employee experiencing a qualifying medical condition as defined in the FMLA leave policy, whether or not this leave is requested or initiated by the employee.

- Any use of paid or unpaid leave for an approved FMLA leave will run concurrently with FMLA and does not extend the 12-week FMLA leave period.

These changes have been incorporated to the University's applicable FMLA policy and can be reviewed on the OHR website.

The updated policy will apply to all leave initiated on or after Apr. 1. Any leave that have already been requested and have a start date after Apr. 1 will fall under the old provisions.

In addition to the changes noted above, the Family Medical Leave Act includes specific provisions applicable to military families that are covered in a separate University policy called "(FMLA) Military Caregiver/Qualifying Exigency Leave". This policy can also be found on the OHR website.

If you have questions, contact your Benefits Consultant at 962-3071.

Revision to Supervisory Spans and Layers Guidelines

FROM: Matthew S. Brody, Associate Vice Chancellor for Human Resources

The following message is also being sent to the DDD list.

In follow-up to the "Management Guidelines on Reduction of Supervisory Layers and Spans of Control" which was issued on November 3, 2010, a minor change has been made to these guidelines. Previously, the guidelines included an exclusion only for faculty supervisors. It has been determined that this exclusion will now also be extended to non-faculty supervisors who manage research personnel on research projects.

The remaining provisions of these guidelines are unchanged. The updated guidelines reflecting this change are now published on the OHR website.

If you have any questions regarding these guidelines contact Jessica Moore, Director of Classification and Compensation in the Office of Human Resources at 962□8099.

EPA Recruitment, Selection & EPA RecruitmentWeb Training

FROM: Rudy Jones, Equal Opportunity/ADA Office

The next EPA Recruitment, Selection & EPA RecruitmentWeb training is Wednesday, Apr. 13, at 104 Airport Drive, in the finance conference room on the 3rd floor. Click here to register for this class.

The focus of this class is to conduct successful searches and the related processes. It also includes an overview of Equal Opportunity recruitment and search procedures as well as general information about EPA RecruitmentWeb.

Participants will receive guidance on developing recruitment plans, advertising, sourcing applicants, search committee responsibility and other important elements of conducting successful searches. The session will also provide an overview on how to initiate searches, complete hires and other related processes using EPA RecruitmentWeb. Additionally, the session will provide information on reviewing and evaluating applications, interviewing and selection to ensure that searches meet the University's Equal Opportunity and Affirmative Action requirements.

This course is suited for individuals who have responsibility for EPA recruiting and for those seeking a better understanding of Equal Opportunity processes and procedures.

Information for Employees

Nominate a Finance Employee for the Extra Mile Award

FROM: Laurie Burroughs, Co-Chair, Finance Extra Mile Award Committee
Janet Kelly-Scholle, Co-Chair, Finance Extra Mile Award Committee

The extra mile award was established to recognize the individual accomplishments of Finance Division employees who truly "go the extra mile" for you. Please take this opportunity to nominate a Finance Division employee who consistently provides you and your department with exceptional customer service. A total of five finance employees will be selected from your nominations and will be recognized at this year's finance division employee appreciation event in May.

All current, full-time or part-time, permanent or temporary employees of the Finance Division working 20 or more hours per week are eligible to receive this award. Staff at the director level, immediate past year's winners and the current members of the extra mile award committee (Jena Broach, Scott Dwyer, Joe Eubanks, Margarita Helms, Troy Howell, Henry Price, Tammy Jorgensen, Diana Malinsky, Laurie Burroughs and Janet Kelly-Scholle) are not eligible to apply.

The nomination form and instructions are attached and may also be accessed on the Finance Central log in page. Eligibility and nomination guidelines can be found on the Finance Division's website.

To be considered, all nomination forms must be submitted to the EMAP Committee Chair, CB#1225 by Apr. 30.

Background Check Fee Increase

FROM: Matthew S. Brody, Associate Vice Chancellor for Human Resources

Effective Apr. 11, all University pre-employment background checks will cost an additional $3.50 per check. This added cost is related to a mandated check that is required of all institutions that are federal contractors, which includes the University. This added amount represents the direct cost to the University, which will be performed by our background check vendor Castle Branch and include no other internal overhead expense.

Beyond the added fee, this requirement will be handled automatically and will not result in any other visible changes to our background checking process.

If you have any questions regarding this change, please contact your department's assigned Employment and Staffing Consultant in the Office of Human Resources.

EXTRA MILE AWARD PROGRAM

Nomination Form Instructions

- Any full-time or part-time permanent or temporary SPA employee within the Finance Division who works 20 or more hours per week is eligible for the award, with a few exceptions. The following individuals are not eligible:

  1. A new or temporary employee is not eligible for an award until they have completed 90 days.
  2. Once an employee has received an award they are not eligible for another award the following year.
  3. Members of the selection committee are not eligible for nomination, nor are individuals in a position of senior director or above. Further, these individuals may not make nominations of others while serving their term on the committee.

- Indicate the nominee's name and their department in the spaces provided. The seven major departments within the Finance Division to choose from are described below. Also include your name, phone number and signature as the nominator. More than one person can nominate the same individual on this form. If so, print each nominator's name including their signature in the additional space provided.

Subject: [hrfac] New Policy and Procedures Regarding Unpaid Volunteers, Interns and Visiting Scholars

---

TO: Deans, Directors, Department Heads
Human Resources Facilitators

FROM: Noreen Montgomery, Senior Director, Employment and Staffing
Office of Human Resources

This memo will be sent to the DDD list tonight.

The University has a variety of circumstances when individuals may be invited to serve in an unpaid capacity as a volunteer, intern, or visiting scholar. While continuing to encourage and support these activities, the University also must assure that liability and safety issues are appropriately addressed for these types of arrangements. For this reason, effective May 1, a new policy titled "Policy on Unpaid Volunteers, Interns and Visiting Scholars" is being implemented to provide more clarity and an orderly process for departments to engage individuals in these types of unpaid assignments. The full text of this new policy and related forms may be viewed on the OHR website at http://hr.unc.edu/policies-procedures-guidelines/spa-employee-policies/employment/CCM3_027082.

To minimize administrative burden, enrolled UNC-Chapel Hill students, as well as individuals who volunteer for seven calendar days or less without any ongoing affiliation with the University, are generally exempted for the requirements of this policy. The policy does implement more stringent requirements, including a mandatory background check, for individuals who serve in longer-term unpaid assignments or in any situation where they will have unsupervised access to minors or sensitive University facilities. You are encouraged to carefully review the portions of the policy that specify to whom the policy is applicable and permitted exclusions so you will have a better understanding of those situations that fall under this policy and those that do not.

Departments that engage new unpaid volunteers, interns and visiting scholars as of May 1 must comply with the provisions of this policy. For individuals who are already serving in any of these capacities prior to this policy being effective, departments must bring these individuals into compliance with the policy provisions no later than July 1, including completion of any mandated background checks.

We recognize that there may be existing arrangements for unpaid volunteers, interns, and visiting scholars within your areas and that there will be questions as departments implement these new procedures. OHR will work with you to address any questions and minimize inconvenience to the greatest extent possible.

Background Check Form Update

The University's background check form has been updated and now includes appropriate language to address unpaid volunteers, interns, and visiting scholars to facilitate those situations where the policy now requires background checks for these individuals.

Effective immediately, only the newly revised form (Rev. 4/8/2011) will be accepted. Background check request forms submitted to the background investigator on or before April 17 do not need to be retracted to comply with the revised form.

As a reminder, all sections of the request form must be legible and filled out completely prior to submission to the background investigator. Incomplete forms will be returned to the requesting department's contact person for completion, which will delay processing.

For more information on pre-employment background check policy, procedure, frequently asked questions and forms, please refer to: http://hr.unc.edu/policies-procedures-guidelines/spa-employee-policies/recruitment-and-selection/CCM3_015203.

Please address any specific questions to your department's assigned Employment and Staffing Consultant in the Office of Human Resources. You may also feel free to contact myself or Lisa Weinshank, OHR Employment Manager, directly and we will be glad to assist you.

Chancellor's Awards and Excellence in Management

FROM: Aimee Krans, Benefits Services
Office of Human Resources

Nominations are now being accepted for the Chancellor's Awards for Excellence and the Excellence in Management Awards. The deadline for submitting nominations for both awards is Friday, May 20. Nomination forms for both awards are located on the OHR website.

Chancellor's Awards for Excellence
The Chancellor's Awards for Excellence is based on meritorious or distinguished accomplishments that are, "clearly above and beyond that which would be expected from dedicated employees who are fully and competently discharging all of the duties and satisfying all of the requirements of their jobs", while a University employee. The award categories are:

- Outstanding State Government Service
- Innovation(s)
- Public Service
- Safety/Heroism
- Human Relations
- Other achievements

The award given to five University employees are monetary awards of $1,000, certificate and special leave time of 24 hours. The recipients of the Chancellor's Awards for Excellence are sent forward for a statewide award, the Governor's Awards for Excellence.

Excellence in Management Awards
This award was designed to recognize meritorious and distinguished accomplishments in management at the University. All permanent employees serving in a managerial capacity are eligible to be nominated for this award. All permanent University employees (including temporary employees) and students are eligible to submit nominations.

For the purposes of the award, management is broadly defined as managing employee, student or financial resources, facilities or special projects, leading a task force or an ad hoc committee of a sizable nature.

Two awards are given annually. Award recipients will be honored at a recognition luncheon in the fall and will receive a certificate and monetary award of $500.

Workplace Literacy Program

FROM: Verita Murrill, Training & Talent Development

If your department is without a recruiter, please designate one by Apr. 15. And contact Aimee Krans in the Office of Human Resources or call 962-6008.

We are launching the Carolina Blood Drive database this year, which allow donors or volunteers to sign up electronically on the website and recruiters to contact donors and volunteers directly for updates and reminders. Recruiters will also be able to keep up with points earned in a recruiting contest as participation increases. Information on how to be a successful recruiter will be available on the website.

The last time that UNC-Chapel Hill collected 1000 units of blood was in 2004, when we collected 1033. We are long overdue to do this again. In 2009 and 2010, the drive collected 976 units. Let's get excited about this worthwhile cause and exceed our goal of 1000 units. To see the results of previous drives click here.

State Health Plan Update

TO: All Permanent Employees

FROM: Ashley Nicklis, Interim Senior Director, Benefits Services
Office of Human Resources

As you may have seen, on Wednesday, Governor Perdue vetoed legislation that would have made changes to the State Health Plan. We had planned that UNC-Chapel Hill's annual enrollment would begin next week; however, this recent development will cause the enrollment period to be delayed.

We understand that some of you may be concerned and want to know what changes to expect. It is difficult for us to determine, at this point, when we might expect a new bill to be presented, but we are monitoring this legislation very closely.

It is possible that the annual enrollment period could occur after the spring semester has concluded. We will send out updates as we have additional information to share. Please monitor your communications from our office over the next several weeks for news on the State Health Plan changes and annual enrollment period.

If you have any questions, please contact your Benefits Counselor or call 962-3071.

Grievance Panelist and Support Person training

FROM: Gena Carter, Employee & Management Relations
Office of Human Resources

The Office of Human Resources is seeking individuals to serve as hearing panelists and support persons as part of the SPA Grievance Policy. Individuals may be nominated by their supervisors or may self-nominate (with approval of their supervisors). Both permanent SPA and permanent EPA non-faculty employees are eligible to serve as support persons. Only permanent SPA employees are eligible to serve as hearing panelists.

Overview of SPA Grievance Process
The SPA Grievance Policy provides a mechanism for SPA employees to resolve workplace disputes. In Step 1 of the process, a member of the grievant's management responds in writing to the grievant's matter of concern. The grievant may file a Step 2 appeal of management's response. At Step 2, a panel composed of three University SPA employees hears the case and makes a recommendation for action to the Chancellor, who renders the final decision for the University. Most grievances are completed within 90 calendar days. Support persons are volunteers who can assist employees throughout the grievance process.

Time Commitment
In most cases, panelists and support persons would participate in fewer than three cases per year. Participants can accept or decline requests based on other scheduling needs. A hearing panelist's involvement over a three-week period may require up to 20 hours of work time. A support person's involvement over a three-month period may require up to 30 hours of work time. Appointments are for two-year terms and are renewable.

Qualities of Hearing Panelists and Support Persons
The Office of Human Resources is seeking individuals with strong analytical skills, strong ability to understand and apply University policy, and strong oral and written communication skills. Panelists and support persons must exhibit respectful conduct at all times to all parties involved in a grievance, encourage mutual respect among parties, contribute to providing a fair and honest process, and maintain confidentiality at all times. Panelists and support persons must continue to meet their normal work responsibilities while assisting with the grievance process.

Submitting a Notice of Interest
Interested individuals must submit a notice of interest to the Office of Human Resources. The notice of interest form is available on the OHR website. You can also request a notice of interest form by emailing Employee & Management Relations or call 843-3444. Interested individuals must complete training provided by the Office of Human Resources before being appointed to serve as panelists and/or support persons. The next available training will be held in the Sycamore Room in the Giles-Horney Building.

Part 1: Tuesday, May 17 from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.
Part 2: Friday, May 20 from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

If you have questions regarding this opportunity, please contact Martha Fowler or call 843-8676.

Thank you for your continuing service to the University community.

Dial '7' For Outside Calls

FROM: Information Technology Services

Beginning April 30, the University community will dial "7" instead of "9" to make an outside call from a landline. The change, which affects both University and UNC Health Care System landlines, is designed to reduce misdialed or hang-up 911 calls, saving both time and money.

Public safety officials estimate that they receive nearly 4,900 mistaken 911 calls each year at an annual cost of more than $48,000 to verify that each call is not a true emergency. Changing the dial-out prefix to "7" should substantially reduce these calls – and the cost associated with them, said Lt. Col. George Hare, deputy director of public safety.

The Department of Public Safety, in conjunction with ITS Communication Technologies, has worked with AT&T to implement the change for Carolina. To give people time to adjust to dialing "7" instead of "9," there will be an overlap period in which both numbers will work.

ITS Communication Technologies is working directly with people who have automated equipment that relies on a dial-out prefix so they can be notified to reprogram their equipment.

For information about the change, see its.unc.edu/CommTechnology/Dial7AccessCodeChange. People with questions can call 962-HELP and select the option for telephone requests or they can submit questions to dial7@unc.edu.

Subject: [hrfac] Advance copy: Employee Assistance Program Changes

TO: HR Facilitators

FROM: Brenda Richardson Malone, Vice Chancellor for Human Resources

The memo below will be sent to all employees tonight as a Formal Notice. It is being shared with you in advance for your information.

Employee Assistance Program Changes

TO: All Employees

FROM: Brenda Richardson Malone, Vice Chancellor for Human Resources

Effective July 1, the Office of Human Resources will offer Deer Oaks as the University's sole provider of Employee Assistance Program (EAP) services. As an employee of UNC-Chapel Hill, you and your dependents are eligible for this important benefit at no cost.

The Office of Human Resources currently has two providers of EAP services – Deer Oaks and our local representative, Susan Criscenzo. The University's current budget situation has necessitated a review of our EAP offerings and we have made the decision to move forward with only one provider – Deer Oaks. While we have benefitted greatly from our relationship with Susan Criscenzo over the years, we know that Deer Oaks is fully equipped to support the University's future EAP needs. Beginning July 1, Susan Criscenzo will support UNC Healthcare as their full-time EAP provider. You can continue to consult directly with Susan through June 30.

Deer Oaks representatives are available 24 hours a day, 365 days a year, and have access to clinicians with considerable expertise, in convenient locations. Their providers can offer counseling for stress, depression, anxiety, workplace difficulties, substance abuse, marital problems, family or parenting conflicts, grief, violence and unhealthy lifestyles. You and your dependents are allowed one confidential counseling visit at no cost. Additional visits will be charged based on your insurance coverage.

In addition, Deer Oaks can provide tools and referrals for:

- Childcare and eldercare resources with referrals
- Financial and legal issues
- Child and parenting support services
- Retiree assistance
- College resources
- Moving resources

For additional information or a referral to a provider nearest you, please call Deer Oaks toll-free at 877-327-7658. Online tools are available at www.eapnc.com (login and password: eapnc).

UNC-Chapel Hill is committed to the health and well-being of its employees and their family members. We encourage you to use this important benefit should you have need.

Subject: [wssupervisors] New Supervisor Training Info & Summer Update

---

Supervisors,

I apologize for the lengthy e-mail, but there is a lot to cover.

Federal Work-Study Orientation for New Supervisors (please pass along to anyone who might be interested in attending one of our training sessions):

The Office of Scholarships and Student Aid offers training sessions for full-time, permanent faculty/staff members interested in joining the Federal Work-Study Program. Training is mandatory and covers topics such as institutional and federal guidelines, student payroll, the job classification system, documenting student hours in TIM, creating job descriptions and marketing jobs online. No registration is required (although attendance is documented); attend a session that works best for you. Please note that postdoctoral scholars, graduate students and part-time employees are not eligible to serve as work-study supervisors.

All sessions will be held in Room 121 of Hanes Art Center on the following dates:
June 14, 2011: 2-4 p.m.
July 6, 2011: 10-12 p.m. (noon)
Aug. 4, 2011: 2-4 p.m.

Summer Work-Study:
We had extremely limited funding for Summer Work-Study and exhausted the entire amount on the very first day of packaging. In total, 500 students were awarded a summer-specific Work-Study Award in the amount of $800.00. Even if your current 2010-2011 work-study student will attend summer classes, please don't assume s/he has been awarded Summer Work-Study. You must physically see and sign the student's summer-specific Job Assignment Form (available to students on the first day of class) prior to placing that student back on Work-Study Payroll. Thomas will follow up next week with summer-specific payroll information and instructions.

Thanks,
SMK

This is a reminder that work-study students may work through May 6th (if they still have available hours for this academic year). Remaining hours DO NOT rollover into summer work-study. The TIM system does not monitor the hours, only records them. It is your responsibility to monitor your student's hours. If the student exceeds their academic year award, then your department will be contacted to initiate a transfer of funds for the excess.

All current work-study students are scheduled to auto-terminate effective on May 6th. The students and the managers should perform TIM approvals by the end of the day on May 6th to ensure that each time record is accessible before termination.

May 10th is the first day that work-study students attending summer session I may pickup their job assignment form in 216 Vance Hall. Your department will be responsible for distributing and collecting the necessary tax cards from the hired employee. Returning work-study students can get their necessary direct deposit info upon request from the payroll manager in your department. Otherwise, direct deposit authorization forms and the voided checks or bank letters must be received from the employees. All tax cards and the direct deposit info should be submitted to Payroll Services in a timely manner.
Attached is the HRIS Quick Guide and the Vac instructions for Summer 2011 Institutional Work-study.

HRIS Quick Guide for Undergraduate Summer Work-Study:

No one is permitted to hire a work-study student (1) until on or after the first day of classes: May 10, 2011 and (2) without first seeing a Job Assignment Form**

- The actual date of hire should be used for "Event Date"
- The "Planned End Date" should be 07/22/2011
- Job Title & Working Title should be "09903" for Work-Study Student
- FTE = .5
- FRS Account Number: 668856 (you will need to add this account number to your VAC table before you can process any work-study hires – please see second attachment)

If detailed instructions for data entry are required, please refer to the following informational link:
http://hrisguide.unc.edu/lessons/New_Hire_for_SPA_TemporaryStudent_Employee.html

General questions and concerns related to Summer Work-Study should be addressed to Michelle Klemens (tele: 962-4176, e-mail: michelle_klemens@unc.edu)

Specific questions and concerns related to Undergraduate Summer Work-Study data entry in HRIS should be addressed to Thomas Harper (tele: 962-4170, e-mail: thomas_harper@unc.edu)

From the HRIS desktop, double-click on the 'Positions and Funding Container'.

From the 'Positions and Funding Container', double-click on the 'Maintain VAC Fund Source'

When the list for the 'Maintain VAC Fund Source' appears, key in your department number and click OK.

To add an account to the VAC table, click the 'Add' button once, and a new row will display at the bottom of the table.

You can either enter in the account number by manually keying it in to the 'Account' column, or you can search for the icon by double-clicking on the 'UNC FRS Accounts by Account' browser. From the browser, you will select the account number you wish to use, and drag and drop it to the 'Account' column.

Once the account has been entered in, click 'Display Attributes', and then File – Save.

Hi Coach. The campus is still buzzing from last night's panel discussion. As you can imagine, an event is that nature can be a blessing and a burden. ;) My only still lingering wish is that there were more coaches and student-athletes in attendance. ;) Nonetheless, here's my latest outreach to you to assist your program:

1. Carolina Sports Business Club - The Club is a great student-run organization for all students (regardless of major) interested in careers in the sport industry. Whether its youth, interscholastic, college, international or professional – The Club seeks to connect them to information and experiential education opportunities. We try to create or find out about activities and events to help students get more prepared for a career in this very competitive industry. http://studentorgs.unc.edu/carsbc/ February speakers included Coach Shelton, Martina Ballen, Tar Heel Monthly, and IMG College. Mr. Cunningham is scheduled to share during our annual Celebration Week in April. See attached for the next meeting.
2. TPG Sport Careers Conference – April 20-21 in Charlotte. I know the owner of this firm and they plan on putting a REAL career conference. I am joining their advisory panel. All the pro sport organizations will be there plus 20+ firms expecting resumes and looking to HIRE. http://www.tpgsportsgroup.com/careerconf.html
3. EXSS 327 - This course is for sport administration majors (juniors and seniors) seeking a sport management-related internship for academic credit (summer, fall or spring terms). I sometimes have one or two openings for non-EXSS majors.
4. Carolina Black Caucus (aka Black Faculty and Staff) – I am the chair of the Caucus. Over the past two years, I have been observing/meeting/discussing/offering recommendations on the state of UNC athletics with various people on campus, including the Chancellor. After the football matter, we formed a subcommittee that is interested in the welfare of Black students, in particular, student-athletes. Do know that you can always call on us to assist you. We are here to be another resource for you as you guide them to success. www.unc.edu/cbc
5. Entrepreneurship Minor - I am engaged in discussions to create a sport business track for this popular minor. http://www.unceminor.org/ I am currently teaching the first Entrepreneurship in Sport course. Stay tuned and supportive ;) of this new offering. Thanks!
6. Lecturer-Advisor Position – The university created these faculty positions two years ago for the eight largest academic departments. We have academic advising office hours in Steele Building (academic advising home) and also teach. I think it is good for you to know to refer your students to lecturer-advisors IF they are getting frustrated with a regular full-time advisor. The full-time advisors are very good; however, they can't know all the details about a particular department's curriculum and career options. Thus, the creation of these positions to further assist students.

Please tell your players about these opportunities and let them know my door is always open to them.

Continued Success and Go Heels,

Dear colleagues-

This comes from a colleague in history:

a recent email I received from one of our recent PhD's, one who's teaching a course in modern global history for us:

"I know that you have been involved with attempts to reform honor court in the past. We've had three cases of plagiarism in 140:1 so far this semester (two business students and a journalism student!!). In each case, the attitude of the students after my first contact was "take me to honor court because you won't win." After a second contact, they apologize for their first response, but it really says something about a certain undergraduate mentality. I'm not sure if you are still working in this area administratively, but I thought that I'd pass on the anecdotes."

Subject: FORMAL NOTICE: Reminder: Feedback on Draft Guiding Principles for BOG Personnel Authority

TO: All Employees

FROM: Brenda Richardson Malone, Vice Chancellor for Human Resources

Last month, I sent the University community a draft of guiding principles that would provide a foundation upon which the UNC System would develop a unified personnel system, if the General Assembly grants the authority.

Chancellor Thorp and I, along with UNC General Administration, are interested in employees' thoughts on this topic. If you have not already done so, please take a moment to review the draft, which is available at http://hr.unc.edu/faculty-and-staff/personnelflexibility/CCM3_035316. Our deadline to transmit your input to General Administration is fast approaching, so I ask that you provide any feedback to us by Wednesday, March 14, at hr-personnel-flexibility@unc.edu. Please note that we will not directly answer each email; however, all feedback will be consolidated and provided to General Administration.

As previously indicated, the draft incorporates comments from the UNC Staff Assembly Executive Committee, and was shared at the Personnel & Tenure Committee of the UNC Board of Governors last month.

This legislative proposal is critically important and would affect all universities within the system by realigning personnel authority for all university employees to the UNC Board of Governors. There are substantial benefits to all employees, in that it will allow the Board of Governors to develop policies and practices that would be better aligned with the higher education environment, while maintaining existing employee protections as stated in the guiding principles. I encourage you to review the draft and provide any feedback. Thank you.

John,
Here is the report that was produced by IR. I also attached the cohort list that I provided to them. Bruce Carney's comments are below as well.

Thanks,
Susan

Many thanks. It's not a happy picture, is it? Thanks as well for including the numbers of students.

Dear Colleagues:

For those of you who were able to attend last Friday's brown bag, thank you for an engaging discussion!

Attached are some additional resources you may find helpful.

Please join us for the next session on April 20th!

Brown Bag Lunch Series on

THE CROSSROADS OF STUDENT SUCCESS: ACADEMICS, WELLNESS AND ENGAGEMENT

Spring 2012 Schedule

February 17th

Disability Services and Meeting the Demands of University Life with Jim Kessler, Director, Disability Support Services, and Tiffany Bailey, Assistant Director, Disability Support Services

12 noon - 1:30 p.m. Location: Graham Memorial 011

What do students with disabilities need to have equal access to academics? Come to this session to meet with the Director and the Assistant Director from the The Department of Disability Services to discuss programs and services that permit students to, as independently as possible, meet the demands of University life. Participants will have the opportunity to ask questions as well as learn about the ways the department works to assure that all programs and facilities of the University are accessible to all persons in the University community.

March 16th

Challenges of Change with Beth Jordan, Senior Lecturer in Psychology and Academic Advisor

12 noon - 1:30 p.m. Location: Graham Memorial 011

Dr. Jordan's research has focused on understanding identity formation during adolescence and young adulthood. She is especially interested in how the process of self-exploration and self-definition are affected by family background as well as cognitive development. In this session, Dr. Jordan will talk about her research as well as her work as an academic advisor and instructor. The common thread that ties together her advising, teaching and research activities is the concern with how people cope with these big questions: Who am I? Where do I fit in? and What should I do with my life?

April 20th

The Value of Engagement in the Co-curriculum

with Bettina Shuford, Associate Vice Chancellor, Division of Student Affairs

12 noon - 1:30 p.m. Location: Graham Memorial, Room 211

Student engagement both in and outside of the classroom is known to have positive effects on student learning and success. This session will address the benefits of out-of-classroom learning activities and the value it has in providing a holistic learning environment for students. The presenter will highlight best practices for developing a seamless approach to learning and will engage the audience in identifying how we can be more intentional in helping students make connections between their in-class and out-of-class learning experiences at UNC.

May 11th

The Other First Years: Stories from Transfer Students with Cynthia Demetriou, Rebecca Egbert, Annice Fisher, Rachael Murphy-Brown and Mary Lide Parker

12 noon - 1:30 p.m. Location: Graham Memorial 039

Join us for a viewing of Ms. Mary Lide Parker's short film, "The Other First Years: Stories from Transfer Students at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill." The viewing will be followed by discussion about the transfer student experience. Individuals who work with transfer students in multiple capacities across campus will be present. We also welcome your perspective and experience! Come share your stories of transfer student experiences and your recommendations for encouraging success.

Thank you for sharing this information with me. Anson, I am not certain that "we have been swept into the football academic scrutiny" as you have expressed ~ but I will follow up.

I truly understand your concerns ~ they are warranted and I take them seriously. I am going to speak to a few people about this.

Take care and hopeful you are well.

Thanks Larry! Duke beat us 1-0.

The player who got the assist is Molly Pathman who is the starting left back for the U-20 Nat'l Youth Team. Unable to dress for us because we are held to a higher academic standard than Duke was Crystal Dunn and Kealia Ohai who also start for the U-20 Nat'l Youth Team as well. Our two kids were only allowed to register for 6 hours of class this semester (the # of training camps and world cup qualifying makes online or independent study the only route) because we are restricted in the # of online classes and independent study. We have been swept into the football academic scrutiny, it seems. I hope this does not come to bite us in recruiting if the word gets out that all Nat'l Youth Team players that go to UNC can't participate in their games because of football scrutiny. Who are the best recruits in America? Yes, the National Youth Team Players .... even Stanford's players are allowed to play with their college team while they represent their country.

I know you guys are fighting for us but I HATE losing ESPECIALLY to DUKE .... EVER!!!!!

Just from my little understanding of this, I believe it does have something to do with the institution not allowing student-athletes to take more than a certain number of online courses in a term, as well as professors being resistant to student-athletes missing a lot of "regular" classes during a term. I think it's more of a philosophy of our academic departments in general, as opposed to having anything to do with the football issue. It's my understanding that this is not at all a new policy (regarding the online course limit).

Just my two cents for what it's worth, since I'm entirely out of the academic loop on this issue.

I agree with Amy on all counts, although the statement about professors resistance to student-athletes missing a lot of "regular" class time during the term could stem from the football issue. We have always had women's soccer players in similar situations in years past, but to my knowledge we were able to use the online option as well as independent study options in order for them to remain full-time. I don't believe the policy regarding online course limits has changed, but I do think the heightened awareness of independent studies has changed the philosophy and possibly closed the door on some of those options for the future.

Robert you can speak to this better than I can.

Thanks,
Susan

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: New Friday Center Website

Dear Colleagues,

The Friday Center has launched a redesigned Website http://fridaycenter.unc.edu. One significant change to the site's content and structure is in the Noncredit Programs area (http://fridaycenter.unc.edu/pdep), where we have incorporated information about the continuing education activities of other units on campus. We are already doing this with our ThinkAgain! and Preview publications, but the new site design gave us another way to continue this type of information sharing.

If you would like to share information about your upcoming events on the Friday Center's site, please contact Tyler Ritter (Associate Director for Communication and Instructional Design etritter@email.unc.edu) and we will do our best to incorporate within the appropriate content and structure. We cannot guarantee that we will be able to include all content items, but we'll do our best and we appreciate your patience and understanding.

We value your feedback and encourage you to offer suggestions or comments.

Best regards,

Rob

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: ULEAD 2012 Applications and Information Sessions

---

TO: Deans, Directors and Department Heads

FROM: Kathy Bryant, Senior Director, HR Communications & Talent Development
Office of Human Resources

For several years, the University has shown its commitment to the development of leaders, most recently through the University Leadership Education & Development (ULEAD) program. Applications are being accepted for ULEAD's 2012 session, which will be held this fall.

ULEAD is an annual educational program for emerging University leaders. It is composed of five core classes, a 360 leadership assessment, peer coaching, and team projects that are designed to contribute in real and innovative ways to improving the effectiveness of the University. Class topics include Crucial Conversations, negotiation skills, leading change, strategic thinking, Appreciative Leadership and the business of higher education.

The Office of Human Resources is offering two information sessions about ULEAD for interested managers:

-- Thursday, April 5, 10-11 a.m., Davis Library 219
-- Monday, April 9, 2-3 p.m., Administrative Office Building 1501C

Detailed information about ULEAD 2012 and the application process is available online at http://hr.unc.edu/training-development/specialized-programs/u-lead/index.htm. Please make this information available to those on your team who may be interested or would benefit from the program.

Interested applicants are encouraged to note the criteria for eligibility. Applications are available online or by contacting Training & Talent Development at 962-2550 or at training_development@unc.edu. The application period has been extended through April 20.

If you have questions, contact William Frey at 962-9685 or at will_frey@unc.edu.

Hi Robert and John,
I'm in the process of creating a brochure outlining the AIM (Athletes in Medicine program). My hope is that coaches can start to use it in recruiting, but I also wanted to get everything down on paper in order to get the basics in front of people like yourselves and make sure we're all on the same page.
I'm still hoping to get something together before the FAC meeting this afternoon, but at the very least will have this as an outline from which to speak. But ... I wanted to have you look at it first and make sure you're fine with everything.
Two items in specific:
-- the idea of having incoming student-athletes who plan to be pre-med meet with or at least communicate with (email or phone) an upperclass pre-med student-athlete prior to registration to give thoughts on classes.
-- the idea that sophomores would need to have a 3.2 cumulative GPA (or whatever we pick) to start the program. I think we'd have an appeals process -- if you're below a 3.2, you'd need to lay out the reason(s) why and make a case that you're going to improve.
Please let me know what you think, and in particular if you see any red flags.
Thanks,
Dana

Dana,

Thanks for this. You know my thoughts on the gpa...at least some of them. I don't know where I will land on that issue. In terms of upperclassmen advising frosh on class selection...not sure that is a good idea. We need to point our frosh to the academic counselors. Robert? John Robert and I had a brief chat about this today, but my thought is that any advice from an upperclassman would be entirely supplemental to the counselors. It would just provide an opportunity to bounce questions off someone who has recently traveled the same path. In talking with student-athletes who in med school now or are about to graduate about what they'd like to see in the program, I got a couple of "I wish I'd known ..." comments dealing with classes. I thought it could be a way for freshmen to get some opinions from people who have recently taken those classes.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Call for 2012 Carolina Summer Reading Program Discussion Leaders

Dear Faculty and Staff:

Please consider joining us as a discussion leader for the Carolina Summer Reading Program. The program invites all first-year and transfer students to read a book and participate in small group discussions facilitated by faculty and staff volunteers with college teaching or group facilitation experience.

"The Shallows" by Nicholas Carr will be the 2012 summer reading book. "The Shallows" describes how human thought has been shaped through the centuries by "tools of the mind" and how our brains, revealed through historical and scientific evidence, change in response to our experiences. The book was a finalist for the 2011 Pulitzer Prize for general nonfiction and for the 2011 PEN Center USA Literary Award for research nonfiction. For additional information about "The Shallows" and the author, please visit the Carolina Summer Reading website at http://summerreading.web.unc.edu

If you are interested in serving as a discussion leader, please complete the online sign-up form at http://summerreading.web.unc.edu. You are welcome to facilitate a group on your own or collaborate with a faculty member, staff member, or student. The priority date for signing up to serve as a discussion leader is Friday, April 18, 2012.

You will be notified electronically by April 25th if you are selected to serve as a discussion leader. Discussion leaders will be provided a free paperback copy of "The Shallows" by May 2, 2012. The date and time for the Carolina Summer Reading Program Discussion Sessions is located at http://summerreading.web.unc.edu. Throughout the summer, the Carolina Summer Reading website will be updated with inter-disciplinary materials to assist you in planning and conducting your session.

In addition, we are interested in involving the UNC community through programming related to the themes explored in "The Shallows." If your department plans to offer related programming, please contact New Student & Carolina Parent Programs at newstudents@unc.edu

Thank you for your continued support of this exciting intellectual endeavor!

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Service Order Freeze and VoIP announcement

---

Information Technology Services (ITS) Communication Technologies (Comm Tech) is initiating a new service order freeze of all moves, adds, and changes (MAC's) for AT&T phone service effective April 11, 2012 through June 8, 2012. This freeze impacts changes to AT&T Centrex phone lines only. Requests for new phone service during this time can be accommodated, as all new phone line requests are now provisioned with a new Verizon Business Hosted IP Centrex (Voice over Internet Protocol, or VoIP) phone and phone number.

Repair and voicemail requests will be supported during this timeframe for both AT&T and Verizon IP Centrex services, as well as most requests to move phones within campus buildings.

This service order freeze is in support of the campus transition to implementing new Verizon Business Hosted IP services, and specifically for allowing the capability to port UNC phone numbers.

Please contact 962-HELP and select option 1 for Telecommunications to consult with an analyst for questions and planning.

Hi All. This article is creating a buzz across campus. Many feel that Nocera embellished the lunch discussion. Many are happy that he at least drew attention to the matter. We all remain hopeful…

Note: I reviewed the Nocera article with my first year seminar students (99% are student athletes from football, men's basketball, wrestling, rowing, and track/field) and the only concern they expressed was the fact that Nocera/Williams called out the wrong language -- Swahili instead of Portuguese!! A few also were disappointed that before they enrolled they received course recommendations for student athletes and they followed the advice. However, when they later got on Connect Carolina and saw all the other course options they were upset. One clearly was mad that he had to take AFAM 101 because it filled a requirement. One quote in response to their need to speak up as valued students, "Dr. Stroman, it just doesn't work that way. You can't beat the system. You have to follow along or my coach will take it out on me."

Needless to say, the discussion today was rather lively and engaging. We did end on a positive note too. That is, one student stated that "we should just take it as a challenge to do well in our sport and in class." ;)

Football and Swahili

By JOE NOCERA, New York Times, 4-10-12

I was at the University of North Carolina when I heard the Swahili anecdote.

It was at a luncheon organized by some faculty members who have become, like me, critics of the N.C.A.A. and the hypocrisy of college sports. Among those attending was a former Carolina football player named Deunta Williams.

About halfway through lunch, the talk turned to education. The University of North Carolina, mind you, is a place that professes to care a great deal about whether its athletes go to class — and earn a degree. And, of course, the N.C.A.A. claims — preposterously — that athletes are students above all else.

Yet several of the professors complained that whenever an athlete enrolled in their classes, they got a letter from the athletic department asking them, in effect, to go easy on the player. After all, he was holding down a full-time job: playing football for the university.

Williams, however, had his own set of complaints. Athletes, he said, could only take the classes the athletic department wanted them to take. Coursework couldn't interfere with practice, of course. It was always better that the classes not be too difficult — otherwise, there might be eligibility problems. And one other thing:

"All the freshman football players take Swahili as their language requirement," Williams said. Why? Because the athletic department tutors are strong in Swahili.

I've been thinking about that Swahili story a lot these days. Over the past few months, as I've tackled the problems with college sports — and called for players to be paid, instead of serving as free labor in a multibillion-dollar industry — many readers and bloggers have responded by pointing to the presumed value of the free education they're getting. Some have argued that the right answer is for universities to de-emphasize athletics. Others have said that schools should stop accepting athletes, no matter how talented, who lack the skills to do college-level work. Just last week, Bob Costas, the estimable NBC sportscaster, devoted two hours of airtime to the state of college sports. (I was one of the panelists.) A half-dozen times, he asked whether it was right for schools to enroll athletes who couldn't handle the academic requirements of college.

I have come to believe that that is the wrong question. Yes, the world would be a better place if universities were not trying to manage a huge entertainment complex "on the side." But schools with big-time football and basketball programs are not acting irrationally. In addition to the millions of dollars such programs reap, they can put a school on the map, making it more attractive to potential applicants. A good college team can bind together a campus like nothing else.

In playing for the team, the athletes are giving their schools more immediate value than anyone else in the student body. They are also doing something that requires at least as much skill as playing in a university orchestra. Even putting aside the question of pay, surely the university ought to feel a moral obligation to return the favor by giving the players the tools to succeed in life.

Instead, universities do the opposite. With their phony majors and low expectations, they send the unmistakable message to the athletes that they don't care what happens after their eligibility expires. It's a disgrace.

Instead, why not allow football players to major in, well, football? This is a solution put forth by John Kilbourne, a professor of movement science at Grand Valley State University in Michigan. Kilbourne, a former dance major, points out that college dancers can focus almost exclusively on the thing they are passionate about — even though the vast majority will not ultimately be professional dancers. Why is it so terrible to think of a football player doing likewise? Surely they could get more from a course in, say, "racism and football" than in most of what they are now forced to take.

There is another way to come at this. It requires tossing the "student-athlete" pretense overboard and being honest about the revenue-generating role athletes play — and the fact that many are ill equipped to do college work. Ellen Staurowsky, a professor of sports management at Drexel University in Philadelphia, has proposed "reimagining" the college system to acknowledge that football and basketball players are employees first and students a distant second. In her model, players would get paid something — and if they chose to pursue a college education, that would be an extra benefit. If they needed remedial reading and math instead of Shakespeare, the university would provide that, even if it didn't ultimately lead to a college degree.

"All of the problems in college sports stem from one root cause," she told me recently. "It is all built on a lie."

Until we acknowledge that lie, the freshmen football players will be studying Swahili.

Note: I reviewed the Nocera article with my first year seminar students (99% are student athletes from football, men's basketball, wrestling, rowing, and track/field) and the only concern they expressed was the fact that Nocera/Williams called out the wrong language -- Swahili instead of Portuguese!! A few also were disappointed that before they enrolled they received course recommendations for student athletes and they followed the advice. However, when they later got on Connect Carolina and saw all the other course options they were upset. One clearly was mad that he had to take AFAM 101 because it filled a requirement. One quote in response to their need to speak up as valued students, "Dr. Stroman, it just doesn't work that way. You can't beat the system. You have to follow along or my coach will take it out on me."
Needless to say, the discussion today was rather lively and engaging. We did end on a positive note too. That is, one student stated that "we should just take it as a challenge to do well in our sport and in class." ;)

"Rely on vision instead of rules and procedures to guide you and your team."

Football and Swahili

By JOE NOCERA, New York Times, 4-10-12

I was at the University of North Carolina when I heard the Swahili anecdote.

It was at a luncheon organized by some faculty members who have become, like me, critics of the N.C.A.A. and the hypocrisy of college sports. Among those attending was a former Carolina football player named Deunta Williams.

About halfway through lunch, the talk turned to education. The University of North Carolina, mind you, is a place that professes to care a great deal about whether its athletes go to class — and earn a degree. And, of course, the N.C.A.A. claims — preposterously — that athletes are students above all else.

Yet several of the professors complained that whenever an athlete enrolled in their classes, they got a letter from the athletic department asking them, in effect, to go easy on the player. After all, he was holding down a full-time job: playing football for the university.

Williams, however, had his own set of complaints. Athletes, he said, could only take the classes the athletic department wanted them to take. Coursework couldn't interfere with practice, of course. It was always better that the classes not be too difficult — otherwise, there might be eligibility problems. And one other thing:

"All the freshman football players take Swahili as their language requirement," Williams said. Why? Because the athletic department tutors are strong in Swahili.

I've been thinking about that Swahili story a lot these days. Over the past few months, as I've tackled the problems with college sports — and called for players to be paid, instead of serving as free labor in a multibillion-dollar industry — many readers and bloggers have responded by pointing to the presumed value of the free education they're getting. Some have argued that the right answer is for universities to de-emphasize athletics. Others have said that schools should stop accepting athletes, no matter how talented, who lack the skills to do college-level work. Just last week, Bob Costas, the estimable NBC sportscaster, devoted two hours of airtime to the state of college sports. (I was one of the panelists.) A half-dozen times, he asked whether it was right for schools to enroll athletes who couldn't handle the academic requirements of college.

I have come to believe that that is the wrong question. Yes, the world would be a better place if universities were not trying to manage a huge entertainment complex “on the side.” But schools with big-time football and basketball programs are not acting irrationally. In addition to the millions of dollars such programs reap, they can put a school on the map, making it more attractive to potential applicants. A good college team can bind together a campus like nothing else.

In playing for the team, the athletes are giving their schools more immediate value than anyone else in the student body. They are also doing something that requires at least as much skill as playing in a university orchestra. Even putting aside the question of pay, surely the university ought to feel a moral obligation to return the favor by giving the players the tools to succeed in life.

Instead, universities do the opposite. With their phony majors and low expectations, they send the unmistakable message to the athletes that they don’t care what happens after their eligibility expires. It’s a disgrace.

Instead, why not allow football players to major in, well, football? This is a solution put forth by John Kilbourne, a professor of movement science at Grand Valley State University in Michigan. Kilbourne, a former dance major, points out that college dancers can focus almost exclusively on the thing they are passionate about — even though the vast majority will not ultimately be professional dancers. Why is it so terrible to think of a football player doing likewise? Surely they could get more from a course in, say, “racism and football” than in most of what they are now forced to take.

There is another way to come at this. It requires tossing the “student-athlete” pretense overboard and being honest about the revenue-generating role athletes play — and the fact that many are ill equipped to do college work. Ellen Staurowsky, a professor of sports management at Drexel University in Philadelphia, has proposed “reimagining” the college system to acknowledge that football and basketball players are employees first and students a distant second. In her model, players would get paid something — and if they chose to pursue a college education, that would be an extra benefit. If they needed remedial reading and math instead of Shakespeare, the university would provide that, even if it didn’t ultimately lead to a college degree.

“All of the problems in college sports stem from one root cause,” she told me recently. “It is all built on a lie.”

Until we acknowledge that lie, the freshmen football players will be studying Swahili.

Katie,
This is great news. I think it is something for the Task Force to discuss.
Thanks,

Dear Task Force Members:

Jan and I briefly about the possibility of having a link to the Honor Code in Sakai in all students' workspace pages. That would mean that a link to the Honor Code and/or related resources would show up each time a student logs in to view any of her course materials. It was a passing thought, but out of curiosity I contacted the amazing Kim Eke, Sakai guru, whose response is below. In short, it is very doable, but of course it would depend on what the task force recommends.

Hi, Katie,

Nice to hear from you. :) It is technically possible to add a link to the academic honesty policy. Might it be most appropriate in a student's MyWorkspace rather than in every single course site? (Some course menus are really, really long and we advocate using less whenever possible.)

Another option to consider is posting a static link in everyone's MyWorkspace (see attached).

In short, there are definitely possibilities - and some are easier and quicker to accomplish -- like, I can do it right now ;) -- and others would require the developers to make changes in the backend.

:) I hope I made it in time for your meeting!

Kim

Hi Kim:

Hope you are well :). Anne and I have been involved in various discussions about the Honor System and I was wondering if in Sakai there could be a way to link the policy on academic honesty on the left hand menu so that when student's login and they are on their course site they can access it easily-similar to how you all were able to incorporate the library/reserves tool? It would be interesting to know if that is possible for our next committee discussion on education and outreach.

Honor Code

UNC's Honor Code is founded on the ideals of academic honesty, personal integrity, and responsible citizenship

It is the responsibility of every student at UNC to:

1. Obey and support the Honor Code
2. Refrain from lying, cheating, and stealing
3. Conduct themselves so as not to impair the welfare or educational opportunities of others in the University community
4. Refrain from conduct that may damage the University or its personnel or jeopardize the safety and welfare of members of the University community

From: The Instrument of Student Judicial Governance, Section II.A

Where/When Does the Honor Code Apply?

- ALL academic work - whether graded or ungraded
- All conduct on campus
- Conduct that occurs off campus when there is an university interest (e.g., DWI in proximity to campus; conduct that occurs while student is representing the University)
- Application to Graduation

Academic Honesty

Students are expected to refrain from all forms of academic dishonesty. Some of the issues that arise in academic cases are:

- Plagiarism
- Unauthorized Collaboration
- Unauthorized Assistance
- Cheating (e.g., use of unauthorized materials on exams)

Plagiarism

- Plagiarism – "Deliberate or reckless representation of another's words, thoughts, or ideas as one's own without attribution"
- When you write a paper…
  - List EVERY source (including the Internet, newspapers, and journal articles) in your bibliography or "Works Cited" page
- If you take words (always use quotation marks!), thoughts, or ideas from a source, you must list it within the paper
- When in doubt . . . ASK!

If you look it up, write it down!

Plagiarism

- Talk with your professors and instructors about proper citation methods and make sure you understand them well before your assignment is due
- Complete the plagiarism tutorial at www.lib.unc.edu/plagiarism/

Collaboration & Assistance

- Collaboration - working with others to complete academic assignments
- When is it allowed?
  - Only when the professor says it is!
  - Be sure you understand whether you are allowed to work with others on any graded work (it is your responsibility to know what is permitted).
  - Don't be afraid to ask your professors questions.

Faculty are obligated to report allegations of cheating to the Honor System

It is against university and faculty council policy for a professor to give a failing grade because he/she thinks you cheated without reporting the case to the Honor System.

Causes of Academic Misconduct

1. Lack of preparation
2. Not understanding and clarifying instructor's expectations
3. Time management issues
4. Stress-related issues
5. Sense of being overwhelmed

Conduct Issues

Students are expected to refrain from conduct adversely affecting members of the University community or the University. Some of the conduct issues that often arise:

- Illegal possession of drugs
- Driving while impaired
- Fighting
- Damage to or theft of property
- Lying to a University official
- Falsifying University documents
- Engaging in recklessly dangerous, disorderly or obscene conduct
- Hazing

What happens at Honor Court?

- Students who are accused of violating the Honor Code are tried before a board of their peers (student-run system)
- Standard of Proof: Beyond a reasonable doubt
- If a student is found to have violated the policy, the student court determines an appropriate sanction.

Sanctions

- For academic cheating, the usual penalties are:
  - Dismissal/suspension from the University for one semester and
  - A failing grade in the course or on the particular assignment at the recommendation of the instructor
  - Lost credit in other courses taken that semester
  - May have other consequences (NCAA eligibility)
- For academic cheating, the minimum sanction is academic probation for one semester. IMPORTANT: Probation prohibits participation in varsity sports unless the Honor Court makes a specific exception.
- For a second case of academic cheating, the minimum sanction is suspension for at least two semesters.

During the period that a penalty of record is active (suspension, probation), a notation will appear on the student's transcript and the student will not be permitted to graduate

Sanctions

- For conduct cases, there are a wide range of penalties that may be imposed by the Honor Court depending on the nature and gravity of the offense:
  - Definite or indefinite suspension from the University
  - Definite or indefinite probation
  - Community service
  - Loss of University privileges
  - Some combination of sanctions

THE CROSSROADS OF STUDENT SUCCESS: ACADEMICS, WELLNESS AND ENGAGEMENT

Spring 2012 Schedule

April 20th The Value of Engagement in the Co-curriculum

with Bettina Shuford, Associate Vice Chancellor, Division of Student Affairs

12 noon - 1:30 p.m. Location: Graham Memorial, Room 211

Student engagement both in and outside of the classroom is known to have positive effects on student learning and success. This session will address the benefits of out-of-classroom learning activities and the value it has in providing a holistic learning environment for students. The presenter will highlight best practices for developing a seamless approach to learning and will engage the audience in identifying how we can be more intentional in helping students make connections between their in-class and out-of-class learning experiences at UNC.

This memo is to inform you that the date to post all open permanent Faculty positions using the PeopleAdmin recruitment/applicant tracking system has been moved to May 31, 2012, from our previously planned go-live date of April 30. The additional time for the Faculty position type will allow for thorough testing and review of the applicant tracking system and applicant portal before going live. We are still on schedule to implement permanent Staff (SPA) position posting in PeopleAdmin on June 25, 2012.

In previous communications, we announced that zero-based salary and zero-based FTE positions do not require posting or waiver approval in PeopleAdmin. We also indicated that further discussions would be necessary to determine if this would be limited to only those positions where there is no intent to pay. After further review, it has been determined that positions with a zero-based salary where there is intent to pay, either from a payroll schedule or through lump-sum payment(s), will need to be posted in PeopleAdmin. This includes adjunct positions. If a position is initially set up with no intent to pay, but a department later decides to give a Visiting/Part-time Faculty employee a lump-sum payment, the position will need to be posted. This will not apply to positions that will be filled by independent contractors or vendors who receive payment through Disbursement Services.

PeopleAdmin Reminders

Supplemental Questions - Adding supplemental questions when creating a posting can be very beneficial in refining your applicant pool to identify the most qualified candidates or to screen out candidates who lack essential qualifications. Each department can decide whether to require applicants to answer supplemental questions or whether to set up answers that would disqualify candidates. Departments can either use a question from the Supplemental Question bank or develop a unique question that suits their specific department or position. Supplemental questions may have predefined answers or be open-ended.

User Guide - A user guide is now available on the home page of PeopleAdmin under the My Links section. The user guide can also be accessed directly using your Onyen and password at https://hrisguide.unc.edu/uncpa-help/. The User Guide has lessons for the following position types: SPA Temporary, Temporary Instructional/Research/Executives (EPA Non-Faculty), Visiting/Part-time Faculty, and Permanent Instructional/Research/Executives (EPA Non-Faculty). As each new position type is launched the User guide will be updated. Additionally, we will soon have computer-based training modules for various user groups available (such as department HR representative, search committee member, department EEO representative, etc).

All,
I don't think we have any of these this year, but a good tidbit of eligibility legislation for all to know.

Subject: Management Toolbox: Performance Management

TO: All University managers and supervisors
FROM: Brenda Richardson Malone, Vice Chancellor for Human Resources
As managers and leaders at UNC-Chapel Hill, we all have a special challenge – how to complete our own duties while leading our teams to achieve their goals. To help you in your quest, the Office of Human Resources has developed a Management Toolbox, which we will send to all University managers and supervisors on occasion via email.
We have designed this material to provide helpful tools to help you succeed in your management and leadership responsibilities. This issue will help you manage performance – a task that's not only important as we approach the end of the SPA and EPA non-faculty performance management cycles, but all year around. Later toolbox topics will include stress management – both for you and your teams – and change leadership. We will post all of our toolbox issues on the OHR website at http://hr.unc.edu/managers-and-hr-facilitators/mgmt-tools/index.htm.
We hope you find these materials both interesting and useful to you, and we welcome your feedback – and suggestions for future topics – at hr@unc.edu<mailto:hr@unc.edu>.
Thank you.
You are receiving this email and attachment because you are identified as supervising one or more employees in the University's HR systems. If this is not the case and you have received this communication in error, please email hr@unc.edu<mailto:hr@unc.edu>.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Performance Rating & Competency Assessment Data Entry Schedule

TO: Deans, Directors, Department Heads
FROM: Gena J. Carter, Senior Director, Employee & Management Relations
Jessica Moore, Senior Director, Classification & Compensation
Office of Human Resources

Annual Performance Appraisals and Employee Competency Assessments must be completed for SPA permanent employees by May 31, 2012. Department HR Facilitators must enter ratings into HRIS between May 21 and June 29, 2012. A separate communication has been sent to the Facilitators.

THE IMPORTANCE OF THE PERFORMANCE MANAGEMENT PROCESS
The performance management program is a communications system designed to help the employee succeed. It provides the structure through which work unit objectives, manner of supervision, performance expectations, and performance results are defined and clarified. Proper application of the performance management program is essential in the proper execution of other personnel policies, including proper classification and compensation, defensible disciplinary action, and appropriate layoff determination.

NO SELF-REPORTING OF RATINGS
The individual who will enter the department's ratings into HRIS must not enter their own rating. Instead, that employee's supervisor must complete the Performance & Competency Rating Manual Entry Form (available on the Office of Human Resources website) and either fax (962-8658), email as a signed PDF (to emr@unc.edu) or mail to Employee & Management Relations in the Office of Human Resources, CB #1045 no later than June 29, 2012. Employee & Management Relations will enter the rating into HRIS.

WHO MUST RECEIVE PERFORMANCE APPRAISALS
All SPA permanent employees (including full-time, part-time, and time-limited) who are regularly scheduled to work 20 or more hours each work week and who by May 31, 2012 will have been working for at least three months under one or more work plans (this work may have been performed in more than one department) must have an annual performance appraisal.

Employees who began their permanent SPA employment on or after March 1, 2012 will receive a rating of "I" (Insufficient Time). Work performed on or after March 1 will be considered part of the employee's 2012-2013 performance cycle. However, supervisors are encouraged to complete a mid-cycle review for these employees after the employee has completed three months of work.

For employees who transferred into your department on or after March 1, 2012, an annual performance appraisal is still required. Supervisors have two options for addressing the appraisal:

Option 1: The supervisor may request that the employee's previous supervisor complete an annual performance appraisal for the period prior to the date of employee transfer. This rating would be entered as the employee's annual appraisal for this cycle. All work performed by the employee in the current position would be reflected in next year's performance appraisal. (This creates a slightly longer performance cycle for the employee for the coming cycle.)

Option 2: The supervisor may request a mid-cycle review or its equivalent from the previous supervisor to be considered in determining the overall rating for the employee for this performance cycle.

WHO MUST RECEIVE COMPETENCY ASSESSMENTS Changes in assessment ratings must be entered into HRIS by June 29, 2012 for all SPA permanent employees (including full-time, part-time, and time-limited) who:

*are regularly scheduled to work 20 or more hours each work week, and *by May 31, 2012 have been working for at least three months in the current position.

Even if the employee's overall or component competency rating(s) have not changed, comments should be added in section IX, Supervisor's Comments on Competency Assessment, that the assessment remains the same form the last review. The overall assessment rating must be entered into HRIS reflecting the current review date.

For employees who started in their position on or after March 1, 2012, the competency assessment must be completed at the time the employee has worked three months in the position.

QUESTIONS?
If you have questions about the performance management process or assigning appropriate ratings, contact your Employee & Management Relations Consultant.

If you have questions about the competency assessment process or assigning appropriate ratings, contact your Classification & Compensation Consultant.

---

It is time once again for the annual SPA Performance Rating & Competency Assessment for the period June 1, 2011 through May 31, 2012.
Please note that these must be completed and returned to my office NO LATER THAN NOON on Wednesday, May 5, 2012. There will be no extensions to this deadline because of the University's data-entry deadline.
The form for this process is attached, and has not changed from the one instituted last year. Also attached is a sample form to guide you in this process. Be reminded that the performance rating and the competency assessment are combined on this form. This process must be completed for all permanent full and part time SPA employees who have been under a work plan for at least three months.

Important Notes:

1. Performance Rating: should be completed on all employees under a work plan for at least three months (all new employees should have a work plan completed, signed and returned to this office within 30 days of their hire date).

2. Competency Assessment: Supervisors are expected to take this annual opportunity to review the previous ECA. However, if the employee's overall or component competency rating(s) have not changed during the review cycle, then the ECA does not need to be fully redone. Instead, supervisors can simply date the assessment for the current review year and add a comment in Section IX that no changes occurred during the assessment review period. If the overall or any one component rating has changed from the previous year, the entire ECA must be completed.

3. Work Plan: Work plans should be reviewed for accuracy, and if the work plan needs to be updated, that section must also be completed for the June 1, 2011 - May 31, 2012 review period.

4. The ORIGINAL Completed forms with all required signatures should be returned to our office by the deadline noted above.

5. Employees should receive a copy of the completed forms for their files.
Thank you for your prompt attention to this important process. Please share this with others in your area responsible for performance reviews of employees in your area. If you have any questions, please contact me at 2-7850 or Kathy Dutton at 2-1030.

Joyce

P.S. Information on the EPA performance review process will be sent in a separate email, but note that the Office of Human Resources has stipulated that those reviews must be completed by June 30, 2012.

II. INSTRUCTIONS

1. Principal Functions should briefly describe related duties in a manner that is Specific, Measurable, Attainable, Relevant, and Time-bound (SMART) and reflects performance at the "Good" level of performance.
2. Principal Function weights represent the relative value placed upon the Principal Function as a percentage of the Overall Performance Rating. The sum of the weights assigned to the Principal Functions is 100%.
3. The North Carolina Employee Performance Rating Scale is defined as follows:

   Outstanding Performance (O) - Performance is far above the defined job expectations. The employee consistently does outstanding work, regularly going far beyond what is expected of employees in this job. Performance that exceeds expectations is due to the effort and skills of the employee. Any performance not consistently exceeding expectations is minor or due to events not under the control of the employee.

   Very Good Performance (VG) - Performance meets the defined job expectations and in many instances, exceeds job expectations. The employee generally is doing a very good job. Performance that exceeds expectations is due to the effort and skills of the employee.

   Good Performance (G) - Performance meets the defined job expectations. The employee generally performs according to the expectations doing a good job. The employee is doing the job at the level expected for employees in this position. The good performance is due to the employee's own effort and skills.

   Below Good Performance (BG) - Performance may meet some of the job expectations but does not fully meet the remainder. The employee generally is doing the job at a minimal level, and improvement is needed to fully meet the expectations. Performance is less than a good job. Lapses in performance are due to the employee's lack of effort or skills.

   Unsatisfactory Performance (U) - Performance generally fails to meet the defined expectations or requires frequent, close supervision and/or the redoing of work. The employee is not doing the job at the level expected for employees in this position. Unsuccessful job performance is due to the employee's own lack of effort or skills.
4. The Career Banding Competency Assessment Scale is defined as follows:

   Developing - Required position competency is not yet fully applied by the employee at the level defined by the manager as necessary to meet stated business needs. The employee may be lacking in some elements of the required position competency.

   Applied - Required position competency is often demonstrated by the employee at the level defined by the manager as necessary to meet stated business needs.

   Broadly Demonstrated - Required position competency is consistently demonstrated by the employee at, and occasionally above, the level defined by the manager as necessary to meet or exceed stated business needs.

SPA PERFORMANCE MANAGEMENT AND COMPETENCY ASSESSMENT FORM

IX. SUPERVISOR'S COMMENTS ON COMPETENCY ASSESSMENT

Supervisors must address the specific competencies identified in Section VII and justify the employee's overall competency rating. Comments may also include any activities designed to develop the employee's knowledge, skills, and abilities.

Sarah's position has recently changed from a Social/Clinical Research Specialist to an Educational Consultant with the position having new duties. Overall, Sarah demonstrates the competencies required of her new classification title at the applied level. As she has recently taken on supervisory responsibilities, her competencies in the area of training and advising lower level staff is still developing. Sarah's professional knowledge, analytical thinking, and communication skills are all demonstrated at the applied level. We expect these skills to continue to grow as Sarah takes on more broad and complex training and educational program management responsibilities. Sarah is broadly demonstrated competencies in the area of training as she directs, organizes, and executes high-quality national training programs.

Consulting and Advising: As team lead for the training program, Sarah has taken over responsibility for the direct supervision of one FTE and one to two student research assistants. She is now responsible for day-to-day supervision of training responsibilities for other staff members. Sarah has begun to organize and delegate work, and provide direction and oversight. She is developing exceptional problem solving and organizational skills, but overall is still developing in this area. We expect this competency will continue to grow and develop as Sarah becomes more comfortable with her new supervisory responsibilities. Sarah is comfortable seeking out advice appropriately and consulting with others when sticky situations arise.
Knowledge: Sarah has an excellent understanding of the purpose and objectives of the training program. She applies her knowledge of public health and health promotion to training activities and appropriately seeks out subject matter experts in nutrition, physical activity, and public health practice. She has a solid foundation in data collection and analysis and is demonstrates competencies at the applied level as she continues to provide ongoing trainings and as she works to develop trainings in new areas.
Analytical Thinking: Sarah is able to review and ensure consistency with national standards and recommendations across training programs. This includes ensuring that training is consistent with CDC guidance to state programs as well as consistent with national nutrition and physical activity recommendations. She also manages the budget and personnel related to a variety of training activities. Her budget management skills are well developed in some areas. For example, she uses her analytical skills to estimate budgeting expenses related to in-person national trainings and web-based trainings. Overall, Sarah demonstrates analytical thinking skills at the applied level in all aspects of her position and constantly continues to "think outside the box" with creative ideas and new initiatives.
Communication: Sarah has had limited opportunity to refine her presentation skills at national meetings as this is a new addition to the position's duties and responsibilities and is still developing in this area. In the coming months, she will have a number of opportunities to present at national audiences in Atlanta and California. However, her skills in the area of organizing and leading meetings are strong. She has shown great skill and ability when organizing meetings of national advisory and stakeholder groups, meetings with CDC technical advisors, and training team members. Overall, Sarah's communication skills/ability is at the applied level, but her opportunities to expand her presentation skills at the national level will likely strengthen her abilities in this area of competency.
Training: Sarah oversees an annual national obesity prevention training course that attracts public health practitioners from across the country. She coordinates planning through a national advisory committee, develops/adjusts course "curriculum" on an annual basis, identifies and coaches content experts from multiple sectors, delegates responsibilities and supervises training through consultants internal and external to UNC-CH. She demonstrates broad competencies as she consistently delivers high-quality training programs.

X☐ I agree with the contents of this form.
☐ I do not agree with the contents of this form.

Employee Comments (optional):

XI. SIGNATURES

Signatures are required from the employee, the employee's supervisor, and the employee's second-level supervisor. The employee's signature indicates only that the work planning conference or assessment session was held with the employee. The signature of the employee does not imply agreement with the statements or ratings contained in the work plan and/or assessment.

It is time once again for the annual SPA Performance Rating & Competency Assessment for the period June 1, 2011 through May 31, 2012.
Please note that these must be completed and returned to my office NO LATER THAN NOON on Wednesday, June 5, 2012. There will be no extensions to this deadline because of the University's data-entry deadline.
The form for this process is attached, and has not changed from the one instituted last year. Also attached is a sample form to guide you in this process. Be reminded that the performance rating and the competency assessment are combined on this form. This process must be completed for all permanent full and part time SPA employees who have been under a work plan for at least three months.

Important Notes:

1. Performance Rating: should be completed on all employees under a work plan for at least three months (all new employees should have a work plan completed, signed and returned to this office within 30 days of their hire date).

2. Competency Assessment: Supervisors are expected to take this annual opportunity to review the previous ECA. However, if the employee's overall or component competency rating(s) have not changed during the review cycle, then the ECA does not need to be fully redone. Instead, supervisors can simply date the assessment for the current review year and add a comment in Section IX that no changes occurred during the assessment review period. If the overall or any one component rating has changed from the previous year, the entire ECA must be completed.

3. Work Plan: Work plans should be reviewed for accuracy, and if the work plan needs to be updated, that section must also be completed for the June 1, 2011 - May 31, 2012 review period.

4. The ORIGINAL Completed forms with all required signatures should be returned to our office by the deadline noted above.

5. Employees should receive a copy of the completed forms for their files.
Thank you for your prompt attention to this important process. Please share this with others in your area responsible for performance reviews of employees in your area. If you have any questions, please contact me at 2-7850 or Kathy Dutton at 2-1030.

Joyce

P.S. Information on the EPA performance review process will be sent in a separate email, but note that the Office of Human Resources has stipulated that those reviews must be completed by June 30, 2012.

RE: Independent Study Task Force Report

DATE: May 3, 2012

The report prepared at the request of Dean Karen Gil by the Independent Study Task Force is now available athttp://www.unc.edu/depts/uc/AB/4-17-12/IndepStudyReport_Final.pdf. The group was charged to develop guidelines for independent study courses to include the following information:

1.Expectations concerning student assignments and contact hours with the instructor.

2.Conditions under which an active (approved) course may be taught in a different format (such as directed readings, independent study).

3.Conditions under which a course may be taught as a directed readings course before it is submitted for a permanent course number.

On April 17, 2012, the Administrative Boards of the General College and the College of Arts and Sciences approved six groups of recommendations, which Dean Gil has subsequently endorsed and charged the Office of Undergraduate Education with implementing. I will be in touch with you early in the fall 2012 semester concerning putting these recommendations into place but wanted you to be aware of them now. Some of the detailed recommendations, especially those on pages 6 through 10, are likely to have an impact on the scheduling of independent study and related courses for the spring 2013 semester. I also call your attention to the template "Independent Study Learning Contract" (Appendix D) which is available to you now prior to being required for use beginning with the spring 2013 semester, and to limits about how many independent studies should be supervised in any given semester. You (or your student services manager) may be contacted over the summer about renumbering certain courses that are inconsistent with the Standard Course Numbering System.

If you have any questions or concerns, please feel welcome to email me (owenbob@unc.edu <mailto:owenbob@unc.edu>).

Thanks for your help and support.

Hello Folks,

I am sure everyone is busy with end of the semester craziness but I wanted to please ask the following questions:

Do any of you have policies for the following:

1. Student Athletes & Independent Studies
At BC, independent studies are offered by department, generally called Readings & Research, the student registers for the class with a specific faculty member. They negotiate a project and meet periodically throughout the semester. The student produces a final paper.

2. Access to Student Athlete Log-in/Password (to check assignments/grades/etc. on whatever systems you use). How do you get this information?

As LRSA staff we have access through our username and pin to the UIS (University Information System) for all current student-athletes.

3. Our Athletic Dept. is designing a system for the distribution and tracking of I-Clickers, which is why I am seeking info. on how other schools handle this. I did get Becky's and David's responses earlier. Thanks.

We are in retreat so I will be quick. No independent study. We have creative inquiry for 1-3 hours. Typically our super stars. I am notified by advisor before it begins. Once FSU report came out we no longer share or keep log in information. Students bring laptops in and log in to share grade information in addition to our two grade reports during semester. Hope this helps.

We do not have any policies for independent studies. Each institutional department governs these opportunities and there are restrictions on how many one instructor can offer.

The only way we get access to the Student Log-in accounts is with student permission, normally they are present (online registration is usually the only time when a student will ask us to log-in for them to enroll them if they are competing.)

We do have our football freshmen write down their info when the first log in so they do not forget it. We do not use it other than to help them log in and we secure the info in our office.

Happy post season eligibility everyone!

Jermaine,

Here at Syracuse, Independent Studies are regulated by the academic departments and schools and colleges. Each semester, our Faculty Oversight Committee reviews the list of student-athletes completing Independent Study credits, and the faculty members sponsoring the credits. This group will keep records of faculty sponsorship and will conduct their own follow-up if they feel that it is necessary.

As far as monitoring work/grades, we ask student-athletes to log-in to Blackboard during visits to our office. Our staff can then view a student's progress without violating the University computing policy.

Tough Choices for Athletes' Advisers
May 9, 2012 - 3:00am
By Allie Grasgreen (http://www.insidehighered.com/users/allie-grasgreen)

Colleen Evans, the former director of student-athlete academic support services at San Diego State University, loved counseling athletes. Hers was better than a regular advising job, she says, because the focus on athletes alone allowed her to work more closely with fewer students, building stronger relationships and watching the students grow both on the field and off.
But at times, pressures from coaches to keep athletes eligible -- sometimes at the expense of an athlete's academic pursuits -- were too much to bear. So much so that after 20 years in the business, she recently left it. "It just -- it gets to be a lot," she says. "You can feel the walls closing in on you, from all sides."
When the National Collegiate Athletic Association raises the academic standards athletes must meet to be eligible, debate about whether it's in the best interest of those students inevitably ensues. The NCAA argues that its more stringent rules – which regulate an athlete's courseload, minimum grade point average and progress toward a degree (measured by the NCAA's Academic Progress Rate) – have led to higher graduation rates (http://www.insidehighered.com/news/2011/10/26/ncaa-data-show-more-athletes-graduating-college). But critics contend (http://www.insidehighered.com/news/2012/01/12/ncaa-convention-educators-question-academic-reform-measures) that the rules force athletes to weigh their desire to remain eligible against their academic interests when the time comes to choose classes and even majors, and wrongly assume that an athlete who graduates received a good education.
Among the advisers who guide these athletes through college, opinions about the extent to which the latter is true vary. But they agree the rules are making the profession increasingly complicated, and many say they're contributing to quick burnout and high turnover.
"That shadow of APR and eligibility rules -- it's just like a cloud that's looming over us constantly," said Joseph P. Luckey, director of athletic academic services at the University of Memphis and president of N4A, the National Association of Academic Advisors for Athletics. "The focus is more about those things than worrying about, is this kid growing academically, is this kid growing as an individual, is this student ready for life after college?"
Academic advisers to athletes say it is common for staff to leave the profession after just a few years, and at the annual N4A convention, it's tough to find anyone who's been in the game longer than five or six. As in every field, there's more than one factor at play: institutions with top athletic programs might have more than a dozen advisers on staff, while those with fewer resources have just a handful for several hundred students -- even as many have bulked up their staff in the growing field. There's also typically not a lot of upward mobility, which advisers say drives turnover to an extent.
But it's clear that the philosophical quandary sometimes posed by the NCAA's academic standards weighs heavily on advisers' minds.
Take, for instance. the newly instated "nine-credit rule," which beginning in August will require football players to take at least 12 credits in the fall term and pass at least nine of them (they currently must pass only six). Athletes who don't comply will be suspended from the first four games of the following season.
In research (http://www.insidehighered.com/news/2012/04/20/football-advisers-predict-negative-athlete-outcomes-under-9-credit-rule) presented at last month's College Sport Research Institute Conference, advisers were pessimistic about the rule's effect on students -- discouraging them from taking academic risks, to preserve eligibility -- and on the advisers themselves.
"Our unit does not advise based on how to keep students eligible, which this legislation is encouraging," one adviser said. "We can now, officially, be classified as 'eligibility brokers' instead of 'academic advisers.' "
The roots of academic reform (http://www.ncaa.org/wps/wcm/connect/public/NCAA/Academics/academics+history) in the NCAA trace back to 1983, when the association established a minimum 2.0 GPA, 700 SAT score and 11 earned core courses for prospective athletes (today, the NCAA uses a sliding scale by which an athlete can make up for a lower GPA with higher standardized test scores, and vice versa). Over the past two decades, the association has gradually upped the bar on continuing eligibility. But the system also allows institutions to regularly enroll athletes with lesser credentials than the typical admit -- contributing ever more to the pressure on advisers.

The two biggest reform packages came in 2003-4, with the creation of the APR, and last year (http://www.insidehighered.com/news/2011/10/28/ncaa-board-approves-athletic-eligibility-rules-division-i-athletes), when the NCAA raised the minimum APR, established a new penalty structure for those who don't meet it, and issued new core-course eligibility rules for incoming freshmen and transfer students.
"Nobody's going to really advocate for less strict academic standards," said Jim Pignataro, who is in his 10th year as director of student-athlete support services at Michigan State University. "The rub is where we can't control admissions -- however, we have eligibility and progress-to-degree standards that are very difficult and make the work of academic advisers very difficult."
Athletes must also adhere to the 40/60/80 rule, part of the NCAA's 2003 academic reform package. It requires athletes to complete 40 percent of their degree requirements by the end of their second year, 60 percent by the end of the third year, and so on. If the NCAA is already ensuring progress to degree through that rule, Luckey asks, why go further into the weeds with arbitrary policies like the 9-credit rule?
"You can't legislate every outcome," Luckey said. "What's happened is we're making decisions based on data. Absolutely, if I pass more hours in a semester am I going to be more on track to graduate? The answer is yes.… But as you try to legislate those things, it can have those negative consequences."
In Evans's experience, an at-risk athlete who has just floated along to maintain eligibility has few choices when it comes time to choose a major. A college GPA that's hovering around 2.0 doesn't allow for many options (though she stressed that the majority of athletes don't have this problem; it's generally the star players, who more often than not have been admitted outside the regular admissions process at their colleges, who have trouble).
"So the conversation is, 'O.K., where do you want to go here, because if you really want to do that major, you're going to have to give up athletics and focus on school,' " Evans says. "Well, that isn't an option when you're talking to a kid who's on a full athletic scholarship."

(Asked to comment, San Diego State said in a statement: "Student-Athlete Academic Support Services is committed to a comprehensive program of academic, professional and personal development for student-athletes. The SAASS works closely with campus resources across campus to enhance the academic and career development of student-athletes." It also stressed the consistently increasing number of athletes -- at most recent count, 256 of 500 total, setting a record for the seventh straight year -- who are recognized for achieving at least a 3.0 cumulative GPA or one of 3.2 in either fall or spring semester.)

Gerald Gurney, an assistant professor of adult and higher education at the University of Oklahoma and a longtime adviser to athletes there, worries that the standards, combined with ever-intensifying pressure from coaches to keep their players eligible, are correlated with the notable rise in academic rules violations
(http://www.insidehighered.com/news/2011/02/07/ncaa_punishes_almost_half_of_members_of_football_bowl_subdivision_for_major_rules_violations).
“Many of the young professionals are former student-athletes who earn a master’s degree in something related to counseling or student personnel work in higher education or student affairs and they come into the profession wide-eyed and believing that they can make a true difference,” Gurney said. “And slowly they find themselves to be products of a much larger system that only cares about the eligibility of student athletes and APR numbers getting the athletes eligible at all or any cost.”
Gurney has found in his research (http://www.insidehighered.com/news/2012/01/09/ncaa-convention-presentation-says-some-athletes-lack-basic-academic-skills) that many of the athletes who get into college by virtue of the NCAA’s sliding scale are not truly prepared for college-level work. But the NCAA says that if advisers are having trouble keeping athletes eligible under its rules, perhaps colleges shouldn’t be admitting those students in the first place.
“One of the things I think that we continue to stress, obviously, is that institutions need to be comfortable that they’re bringing in students who are capable of doing the work and being successful on that campus,” said Kevin Lennon, the NCAA’s vice president of academic and membership affairs. “As you raise the standards and as campuses, even independent of the NCAA, are raising the academic qualifications of their incoming students in general ... that becomes a real conversation that needs to take place on campuses.”
Carrie Leger, director of the Academic Support Program for Student Athletes at North Carolina State University, is less pessimistic than many of her colleagues.
“I often am saying that I support [the rules], and am in favor of them, and really appreciate the work that the NCAA has done in reviewing data to understand what meaningful increases are,” Leger said. “There are some challenges. But my experience is, when we raise the bar, the students meet it.”
Leger, who used to work on academic issues at the NCAA, says the key is effective communication between all parties. North Carolina State, for instance, does educational sessions before the fall semester with advising staff, coaches and athletes, in which the standards -- and the consequences for not meeting them -- are thoroughly reviewed.
“I hear the frustrations of some of my colleagues, and they’re tired, and they’re not having fun,” Leger said. “I think it’s harder when you don’t feel like you have the support of the people that you’re working with and the coaches that you’re working with. I think then advisers really have the weight of, ‘I’ve got to figure out how to do that -- how is the student going to be eligible?’ It takes a village sometimes.”
And the solution isn’t always ideal. Just last week, Luckey spoke with a student who wanted to study pre-med -- and play professional football. He chose a different major (and acknowledged that it was his choice).
“It’s not as simple as providing tutoring, mentoring, advising to students,” Luckey said. “It’s gotten more about tracking the students, the numbers, the research, so that I often find there’s days that I spend more time doing reports to the NCAA and other things than I actually do sitting in an office with students in front of me.”
For Evans, that was always the best part. But the constant back-and-forth with coaches, acting as a liaison between them and faculty, making phone calls to handle issues with other parts of campus like housing or administration -- overshadows the rest of the work.
"At the end of the day, it's very much about what one power coach wants. And an athletic director who's listening to his coach is going to say, 'O.K,' " says Evans, who advocates for moving academic centers for athletes outside the scope of athletics departments. "And I think there's very few individuals out there who can manage that for very long."

Dear Carolina faculty and staff,

An email was recently sent out announcing that Carolina Family Fund scholarships for the 2012/2013 academic year are now being accepted.

The Carolina Family Scholarship is a need-based scholarship for children of UNC-Chapel Hill employees. The scholarship provides financial support for our children to attend ANY of the campuses in the UNC system, as well as state community and technology colleges.

The scholarship selections are made by a committee which changes membership every year, and consists of two faculty and two staff members. It is led by a representative from the UNC-Chapel Hill Office of Scholarships and Student Aid.

So, I'm looking for two faculty and two staff members who would be willing to volunteer to commit to one or two 1-hour meetings to review and select the scholarship winners for this year.

Please email me at bruce_egan@unc.edu if you are interested in volunteering to be on the committee which will probably meet sometime towards the end of May/beginning of June.

More information about the Carolina Family Scholarship can be found at www.unc.edu/familyfund and

Thank you!

Gerald Gurney, an assistant professor of adult and higher education at the University of Oklahoma and a longtime adviser to athletes there, worries that the standards, combined with ever-intensifying pressure from coaches to keep their players eligible, are correlated with the notable rise in academic rules violations
(http://www.insidehighered.com/news/2011/02/07/ncaa_punishes_almost_half_of_members_of_football_bowl_subdivision_for_major_rules_violations).
“Many of the young professionals are former student-athletes who earn a master’s degree in something related to counseling or student personnel work in higher education or student affairs and they come into the profession wide-eyed and believing that they can make a true difference,” Gurney said. “And slowly they find themselves to be products of a much larger system that only cares about the eligibility of student athletes and APR numbers getting the athletes eligible at all or any cost.”
Gurney has found in his research (http://www.insidehighered.com/news/2012/01/09/ncaa-convention-presentation-says-some-athletes-lack-basic-academic-skills) that many of the athletes who get into college by virtue of the NCAA’s sliding scale are not truly prepared for college-level work. But the NCAA says that if advisers are having trouble keeping athletes eligible under its rules, perhaps colleges shouldn’t be admitting those students in the first place.
“One of the things I think that we continue to stress, obviously, is that institutions need to be comfortable that they’re bringing in students who are capable of doing the work and being successful on that campus,” said Kevin Lennon, the NCAA’s vice president of academic and membership affairs. “As you raise the standards and as campuses, even independent of the NCAA, are raising the academic qualifications of their incoming students in general ... that becomes a real conversation that needs to take place on campuses.”
Carrie Leger, director of the Academic Support Program for Student Athletes at North Carolina State University, is less pessimistic than many of her colleagues.
“I often am saying that I support [the rules], and am in favor of them, and really appreciate the work that the NCAA has done in reviewing data to understand what meaningful increases are,” Leger said. “There are some challenges. But my experience is, when we raise the bar, the students meet it.”
Leger, who used to work on academic issues at the NCAA, says the key is effective communication between all parties. North Carolina State, for instance, does educational sessions before the fall semester with advising staff, coaches and athletes, in which the standards -- and the consequences for not meeting them -- are thoroughly reviewed.
“I hear the frustrations of some of my colleagues, and they’re tired, and they’re not having fun,” Leger said. “I think it’s harder when you don’t feel like you have the support of the people that you’re working with and the coaches that you’re working with. I think then advisers really have the weight of, ‘I’ve got to figure out how to do that -- how is the student going to be eligible?’ It takes a village sometimes.”
And the solution isn’t always ideal. Just last week, Luckey spoke with a student who wanted to study pre-med -- and play professional football. He chose a different major (and acknowledged that it was his choice).
“It’s not as simple as providing tutoring, mentoring, advising to students,” Luckey said. “It’s gotten more about tracking the students, the numbers, the research, so that I often find there’s days that I spend more time doing reports to the NCAA and other things than I actually do sitting in an office with students in front of me.”
For Evans, that was always the best part. But the constant back-and-forth with coaches, acting as a liaison between them and faculty, making phone calls to handle issues with other parts of campus like housing or administration -- overshadows the rest of the work.
"At the end of the day, it's very much about what one power coach wants. And an athletic director who's listening to his coach is going to say, 'O.K,' " says Evans, who advocates for moving academic centers for athletes outside the scope of athletics departments. "And I think there's very few individuals out there who can manage that for very long."

Sherry and Robert -

I write to let you know that I have appointed two additional faculty members, Isaac Unah and Kenneth Janken, to the the advisory board. Attached is the revised roster.

Sherry - I so appreciate your willingness to serve as chair this year which got this advisory committee well underway (revitalized) and hope that we can rotate it annually. Does that make sense to you?

Bobbi

Subject: FORMAL NOTICE: 2013 Holiday Calendar

MEMO TO: Deans, Directors, and Department Heads

FROM: Brenda R. Malone, Vice Chancellor for Human Resources

The State Personnel Act provides all State employees a holiday schedule that cannot exceed 11 paid holidays per year, except in those years in which Christmas Day falls on a Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday - when the schedule allows 12 paid holidays. For 2013, Christmas Day falls on a Wednesday; therefore, we have three paid holidays at Christmas (a total of 12 for the year).

UNC System institutions are also allowed to adjust the dates of the annual holidays to accommodate the academic schedule. Traditionally, UNC-Chapel Hill has moved only the State's Veterans Day holiday into the winter break period (between Christmas holiday and the New Year's (Eve) holiday period). For next year, 2013, the University will observe Tuesday, December 31, as a holiday in lieu of Veterans Day.

It is noted that some departments have essential work that must be done on designated holidays. SPA employees who work on holidays are paid holiday premium pay, in addition to hour for hour compensatory time up to 8 hours.

The 2013 holiday schedule is as follows:

* New Year's Day -- Tuesday, January 1, 2013
* Martin Luther King Jr. Day -- Monday, January 21, 2013
* Spring Holiday -- Friday, March 29, 2013
* Memorial Day -- Monday, May 27, 2013
* Independence Day -- Thursday, July 4, 2013
* Labor Day -- Monday, September 2, 2013
* Thanksgiving -- Thursday, November 28, and Friday, November 29, 2013
* Winter Break -- Tuesday, December 24, Wednesday, December 25 and Thursday, December 26, 2013
* New Year's Eve -- Tuesday, Dec. 31, 2013

If you have questions, please contact your Benefits Consultant. You can search for your department's assigned Benefit Specialist using HR Connect (http://hrconnect.unc.edu/); select the topic, "Benefits Questions."

Subject: FEC Response to recent report

Dear Colleagues,

I write on behalf of the Faculty Executive Committee, which spent nearly its entire meeting on Monday, May 13, 2012 discussing matters raised in the report by Senior Associate Deans Jonathan Hartlyn and William Andrews on courses in the African and Afro-American Studies Department. We commend the Chancellor for appointing this excellent committee and for its thorough investigation and forthright reporting of the facts.

We also thank you for sending us your timely, well-articulated, and thoughtful concerns. As the faculty's elected representatives, and the body charged with acting when the full Faculty Council is out of session (as it will be until September 7), we feel a deep sense of obligation to take faculty requests seriously.

After significant discussion about what action the FEC might take, and with the Chancellor's encouragement, we have formed a subcommittee to look further into these matters. Consisting of Professors Steven Bachenheimer (Microbiology and Immunology), Michael Gerhardt (Law School), and Laurie Maffly-Kipp (Religious Studies), the subcommittee will be charged with three primary tasks to completed for the FEC meeting on Jun 25, 2012 (3:00-5:00 pm in South 105). FEC will then consider additional steps.
The subcommittee will:Review all reports relevant to this situation, including the review of courses in African and Afro-American Studies, the report on Independent Studies in the College, and the 2011 review of the Academic Support Program for Student Athletes, and meet with the authors of those reports to discuss their processes and findings. Review other relevant materials and summarize and characterize the work that has already been done, including new procedures or policies already put in place.

Based upon this review and taking into account questions you and others have raised, identify questions or gaps in knowledge that remain regarding events, systems, practices, or structures that might have allowed or facilitated the troubling breaches of academic integrity. The committee should focus in particular on those matters that have not been sufficiently addressed by procedures and policies already put into place.

Create a plan for next steps. The subcommittee will consider what is necessary and feasible to investigate further in order to respond to the unanswered questions; and will make recommendations for other actions that need to be taken to reassure faculty and our community that we fully understand the problem, and that appropriate safeguards are already or will be put in place to ensure the integrity of our academic offering to students and our academic standards going forward.

In addition to appointing the subcommittee, I will take opportunities, such as my report to the Board of Trustees, to express the faculty's deep concern about the dismaying information that has been uncovered and publicly reported by the University. While it appears that the problems are limited to a few people, the reputation of all of us is on the line. It is important to reaffirm our fundamental and unwavering commitment to academic integrity and excellence in teaching, research, and public service as the highest missions of this great institution.

Please do not hesitate to contact me again with any concerns you may have, and thank you for your dedication to Carolina.

Best,
Jan

Hi Joy -
I understand that you are the incoming chair of the elected Faculty Athletics Committee which makes you an ex officio (voting) member of the advisory committee for ASPSA (Academic Support Program for Student Athletes). I have attached the current roster (with your name included) and roster. Robert Mercer is working on scheduling a meeting this summer. The current chair is Sherry Salyer; a new chair will be identified at the next meeting.

All,
There has been some discussion about how to certify the 18-hour Rule for a student who enrolled mid-year. I want to be sure that everyone understands that only the % toward degree and GPA are certified prior to the Spring term (based on the students terms of enrollment). The 18-hour rule is only certified prior to the Spring term in the students 1st year of enrollment. After that, the 18-hour rule is certified prior to the Fall term for each subsequent year. It may seem awkward, but you will actually use the first fall semester twice to certify the 18-hour rule in order to get them back on track. Please let me know if you have any questions about this. I ran this by the ACC just to be sure I wasn't misinterpreting the rule, and her response is below. Also at the bottom in blue is an archived interp that is now incorporated into Bylaw 14.4.3.1.4.1 that helps to further explain this.

Thank you,
Susan

Yes, you're looking at that legislation correctly.

Thanks so much Lindsey.

Can you weigh in on another one for me? Am I correct that Bylaw 14.4.3.1.4.1 requires us to certify the 18-Hour Rule for a Mid-year enrollee who initially enrolled in Spring 2011 using Spring 2011 and Fall 2011 the first time and then Fall 2011 and Spring 2012 to get him back on track? So we essentially use the first Fall semester (Fall 2011) twice to certify the 18-hour rule. Do you agree?

14.4.3.1.4.1 Application to a Midyear Enrollee. After a midyear enrollee's initial certification, (prior to the start of the institution's third semester or fourth quarter following the student-athlete's initial full-time enrollment) the student-athlete's completion of the 18-semester/27-quarter hour requirement shall be certified prior to the start of each academic year based on the student-athlete's record since the beginning of the previous fall term.

Thank you,

Susan

Application of 18/27 Credit-Hour Requirement to a Midyear Enrollee or Midyear Transfer Student-Athlete (I)
Archived Interpretation
Date Published: April 30, 2008
Item Ref: 1
Archive Info: Incorporated into Division I Manual (see I-2009-1).
Interpretation:
The committee determined that an institution is not required to certify the 18/27 credit-hour requirement for a midyear enrollee or transfer student-athlete until the completion of two regular, full-time semesters or three full-time quarters at the certifying institution. After the initial certification, the institution shall certify the 18/27 credit-hour requirement based on the student-athlete's record since the beginning of the previous fall term. For example, an institution would not certify the 18/27 hour requirement for a student-athlete who initially enrolls at the institution in the spring semester or winter quarter until the start of the following spring semester or winter quarter. Thereafter, the institution would certify the 18/27 hour requirement prior to the start of each fall term.

Robert,

I hope you are doing well. This back of mine has keep me, well...on my back, since Tuesday. I have been able to get up some, but, I think I am still a couple of days from getting back to the office. Hope to see Mario tomorrow. We will need to catch up. I am very interested in how your meeting with Fedora went and the strategic planning meeting, as well as what's happening around the office.

I have attached a string of emails with some profs about a new class. You should be handling this anyway, not me. But, given my situation, can you take the reins on this. If you do not think it is worthwhile let me know. It looks pretty exciting to me.

Let's talk soon. John

Just a reminder that the deadline is fast approaching! See below:

Thanks,
Joyce

It is time once again for the annual SPA Performance Rating & Competency Assessment for the period June 1, 2011 through May 31, 2012.
Please note that these must be completed and returned to my office NO LATER THAN NOON on Wednesday, May 5, 2012. There will be no extensions to this deadline because of the University's data-entry deadline.
The form for this process is attached, and has not changed from the one instituted last year. Also attached is a sample form to guide you in this process. Be reminded that the performance rating and the competency assessment are combined on this form. This process must be completed for all permanent full and part time SPA employees who have been under a work plan for at least three months.

Important Notes:

1. Performance Rating: should be completed on all employees under a work plan for at least three months (all new employees should have a work plan completed, signed and returned to this office within 30 days of their hire date).

2. Competency Assessment: Supervisors are expected to take this annual opportunity to review the previous ECA. However, if the employee's overall or component competency rating(s) have not changed during the review cycle, then the ECA does not need to be fully redone. Instead, supervisors can simply date the assessment for the current review year and add a comment in Section IX that no changes occurred during the assessment review period. If the overall or any one component rating has changed from the previous year, the entire ECA must be completed.

3. Work Plan: Work plans should be reviewed for accuracy, and if the work plan needs to be updated, that section must also be completed for the June 1, 2011 - May 31, 2012 review period.

4. The ORIGINAL Completed forms with all required signatures should be returned to our office by the deadline noted above.

5. Employees should receive a copy of the completed forms for their files.
Thank you for your prompt attention to this important process. Please share this with others in your area responsible for performance reviews of employees in your area. If you have any questions, please contact me at 2-7850 or Kathy Dutton at 2-1030.

Joyce

P.S. Information on the EPA performance review process will be sent in a separate email, but note that the Office of Human Resources has stipulated that those reviews must be completed by June 30, 2012.

Subject: FORMAL NOTICE: SPA Grievance Policy Revisions

To: All Permanent Employees

From: Gena Carter, Senior Director, Employee & Management Relations
Office of Human Resources

The State Personnel Commission requires review of University/Agency grievance policies every two years and has approved revisions to the UNC-Chapel Hill SPA Grievance Policy, effective July 1, 2012.

An advance copy of the revised SPA Grievance Policy is available on the Office of Human Resources website at:
http://hr.unc.edu/employee-relations/.

OVERVIEW OF CHANGES

SECTION II.B.3:
Establishes that agreements to extend deadlines in order to pursue alternative dispute resolution (e.g., mediation) must be approved in writing by both parties. Previously, there was no written requirement.

SECTION V.B.3:
Establishes a deadline for submitting information and witness lists for a Step 2 Hearing as 10 calendar days prior to the date of the hearing. Previously, the deadline was established on a case-by-case basis.

SECTION VI.F.1.D:
Previously stated that permanent or probationary employees or former employees may file an appeal alleging violations of the Family & Medical Leave Act, the Americans with Disabilities Act, the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, or the Fair Labor Standards Act directly with the Office of Administrative Hearings. Removed because grievants must first complete the University's internal grievance process for these issues.

The State's grievance policy now includes coverage for violations of veterans' preference in all employment actions. Previously, only veterans' preference in initial employment and reduction in force had been covered. The University's policy already provides coverage for any policy violation; accordingly, no language changes were required to our policy.

Other language changes that did not affect the substance of the policy were made for clarity.

Please refer to the policy at http://hr.unc.edu/policies-procedures-guidelines/spa-employee-policies/employee-relations/GRIEVE-SPA for more information.

GRIEVANCE POLICY HIGHLIGHTS

WHAT IS GRIEVABLE?

-- Disciplinary actions
-- Harassment
-- Discrimination
-- Retaliation
-- Annual performance appraisal
-- Performance-related pay decisions
-- Policy violation
-- Inaccurate or misleading information in personnel file

Refer to the policy for specific requirements.

STEPS IN THE GRIEVANCE PROCESS

STEP 1: The employee ('grievant') has 30 calendar days from the date of the event (or knowledge of the event) being grieved to submit a grievance filing form to Employee & Management Relations (E&MR) in the Office of Human Resources. E&MR will send the grievance to a 'respondent' (usually, the second- or third-level supervisor of the grievant) who has 10 calendar days to submit a written response to E&MR.

STEP 2: The grievant has 10 calendar days from the date of receiving the Step 1 response to submit a Step 2 appeal to E&MR, which will schedule a hearing within a month of the filing. A panel of three volunteer SPA employees will hear statements from the grievant and respondent and will review additional information they submit. The panel submits a report and recommendation to the Chancellor within 10 calendar days of the hearing.

FINAL AGENCY DECISION: The Chancellor has 10 calendar days to review the panel report and recommendation and make a final decision for the University on the issue.

FURTHER APPEAL: For some issues, the Chancellor's decision is final. Other issues may be appealed within 30 calendar days of receiving the Chancellor's decision to the State's Office of Administrative Hearings.

AVAILABLE SUPPORT

The Grievance Coordinator in the Office of Human Resources can assist employees in understanding their rights under the SPA Grievance Policy and help with the filing process.

"Support persons" are volunteer SPA and EPA non-faculty employees of the University trained by the Office of Human Resources who can assist a grievant in completing filing forms, gathering supporting information, attend grievance-related meetings with the grievant, and attend the Step 2 hearing. With their grievant's or respondent's permission, support persons are allowed to speak on their behalf during the opening and/or closing remarks of the Step 2 hearing. The support person cannot represent or serve as an attorney for the grievant. The Grievance Coordinator keeps a list of trained support persons.

The Office of Human Resources website includes additional guidance materials that can assist employees with the grievance process. Go to http://hr.unc.edu/policies-procedures-guidelines/spa-employee-policies/employee-relations/GRIEVE-SPA for more information.

HEARING PANELIST AND SUPPORT PERSON TRAINING

If you are interested in serving as a support person and/or grievance hearing panelist, the Office of Human Resources will offer a day-and-a-half training late-summer/early-fall 2012. You must meet certain requirements and have your supervisor's approval to participate as a support person or hearing panelist. Additional information about this training will be sent in a separate communication.

If you have questions about this policy, please contact Employee & Management Relations in the Office of Human Resources, 104 Airport Drive, Chapel Hill, NC 27599-1045. Phone: 919.843.3444. Email: emr@unc.edu.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Chancellors Award for Excellence

TO: All Permanent University Employees

FROM: Holden Thorp, Chancellor

We all work with someone who is special, who comes up with a better system or goes the extra mile to help a fellow employee or a student - someone who deserves recognition for what she or he brings to the job. Now is your chance. Nominations are now being accepted for the 2012 Chancellor's Award for Excellence, and I invite you to submit a nomination for that deserving employee.

The Chancellor's Award criteria are based on meritorious or distinguished accomplishments that are "clearly above and beyond that which would be expected from dedicated employees who are fully and competently discharging all of the duties and satisfying all of the requirements of their jobs" while a University employee. The awards categories are:

-- Outstanding State Government Service
-- Innovation(s)
-- Public Service
-- Safety/Heroism
-- Human Relations
-- Other Achievements

Each year a selection committee composed of staff and faculty members reviews nominations and recommends five employees for recognition. The five Chancellor's Award recipients are honored at a recognition reception; each receives a monetary award of $1,000 and a special leave award of 24 hours.

Employees who are selected for the Chancellor's Award for Excellence are automatically nominated for the Governor's Award for Excellence.

Any permanent employee may recommend a University employee for the Chancellor's Award. The nomination process includes submitting a nomination form along with up to a maximum of three letters of recommendation (letters of recommendation are optional and not required). You can complete a nomination form by clicking on the link provided in this email or by searching for the form on the Office of Human Resources website at http://hr.unc.edu and using the keywords "Chancellor's Award."

View from Chapel Hill: Athletes don't rule

Letter to the Editor
Charlotte Observer
2/20/03

The writer is director of admissions, UNC-Chapel Hill. In response to "Athletics admissions"
(Feb. 18 editorial):

Our university community takes seriously the undergraduate admission process for all students.
Indeed, our faculty have direct involvement in our admission of student-athletes.

As a result, our admission standards for student-athletes exceed those set by both the NCAA and the 16-campus UNC system. We report no "academic exceptions" because we have none based on NCAA or system standards.

Typically, we admit about 20 to 30 student-athletes who meet or exceed the NCAA and UNC system requirements but not our own higher standard. Those students earn admission only after careful review by a faculty panel.

Carolina regularly declines to admit student-athletes, some of whom later compete against the Tar Heels. Our coaches bring few such cases forward for consideration in the first place because of the university's high standards.

Gridiron grad rates don't make cut

News and Observer
2/19/03

Fewer than half the recruited football players who enrolled in 1996 at N.C.

State University and UNC-Chapel Hill earned diplomas within six years, continuing a general decline in football graduation rates at both campuses.

Among freshmen who entered in the fall of 1996, eight of 19 NCSU players, 42 percent, graduated by the spring of 2002. UNC-CH gave diplomas to 10 of 21 players, 48 percent -- the poorest six-year graduation rate in Chapel Hill since the UNC system began keeping score in the 1980s.

The statistics on recruited and scholarship athletes were released last week.

The low graduation rates are drawing criticism from faculty and academic leaders, even as academic reforms are on the way this fall from the National Collegiate Athletic Association, which oversees major college sports.

"You have to do better by these young people who give you the best years of their lives," said retired UNC system President William Friday, who helped lead the Knight Foundation Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics, a reform group. "Once these young people enroll and use up their eligibility in athletics, it's the moral duty of the institution to give them work skills and professional skills. This isn't the way it's worked out at all too many campuses."

Under reforms the Knight Commission proposed in 2001, a team with a graduation rate under 50 percent would be banned from post-season play. If that restriction had been in place, it would have kept NCSU out of the Gator Bowl this year.

Since football power Florida State University entered the Atlantic Coast Conference, which includes NCSU and UNC-CH, in 1992, the sport has gained more emphasis in the league. Budgets have grown; recruiting has become more competitive. Professor Sue Estroff, the UNC-CH faculty chairwoman, said the latest graduation rates provide a reality check.

"The higher the stakes for winning football games, the more we're going to see this," Estroff said.
"We just have to decide what is more important."

Athletics officials say graduation rate reports can be misleading because they omit players who transfer to other institutions. Of the NCSU players who did not graduate, said Athletics Director Lee Fowler, three transferred to other schools. Others turned professional or left in good academic standing, he said, and four were suspended academically.

"I'll always want 100 percent of them to graduate," Fowler said. NCSU's six-year football graduation rate dipped to 39 percent last year and 33 percent for the freshmen of 1992, but in other years it has kept above 50 percent.

At UNC-CH, Athletics Director Dick Baddour said several players left after a coaching change from Mack Brown to Carl Torbush in December 1997.

"I think it's a transition issue," Baddour said. Of 11 Carolina players who did not graduate, he said, four flunked out. The rest transferred or went pro before finishing their eligibility.

The NCAA reported a six-year graduation rate of 52 percent for Division I scholarship football players who started in 1995. Unlike the NCAA, UNC counts players who were recruited as athletes, even if they did not receive scholarships.

John Blanchard, senior associate athletics director, said UNC-CH's 1997 freshman class is on track to graduate at a rate of 70 percent or better. The current progress of that class isn't known, since UNC has decided not to compile five-year graduation rates, as it had done since 1985. Conforming with NCAA practice, the new UNC report lists six-year rates only.

Carolina has recently beefed up academic support for athletes, which costs more than $640,000 annually. Study hall for football players was moved from evening to afternoon -- before practice when players are more alert.

Philip Carter, chairman of NCSU's Faculty Senate, said he has no problem with giving athletes a lot of academic support.

"I'm not against doing whatever we need to get them through," Carter said. "If we ask them to represent the university and we set up unreasonable numbers of contests during the school week, we need to make sure we do whatever we can to help them get through their coursework."

Graduation rates among all student-athletes improved. At NCSU, all athletes graduated at about the same rate as the student body in general -- about 64 percent in six years. During the same period at UNC-CH, athletes graduated at 70 percent compared with 80 percent of the student body.

Men's basketball graduation rates vary considerably from year to year because of the small number of athletes represented. The rates for the 1996 freshmen were 75 percent at NCSU and 33 percent at UNC-CH, but the 1995 freshman rate was 0 percent at NCSU and 100 percent at UNC-CH.

The numbers might look different in coming years as new NCAA standards go into effect. Starting with freshmen this fall, new eligibility standards will put more emphasis on grade-point averages and required courses as opposed to SAT scores. The reforms also require that student-athletes make faster progress toward graduation.

This year might bring a renewed push for more far-reaching reforms. A national faculty coalition on athletics has just formed, and in May, Friday will convene a new version of the Knight Commission. Graduation rates will be at the top of the group's agenda, Friday said.

Carter said reforms are needed at NCSU and other ACC schools.

"We've lost track of what the heck's important in college," Carter said. "Of course, whenever I say that, people think I'm unrealistic."

UNC should review policies on athletes
Editorial
Chapel Hill News
2/19/03

The University of North Carolina Board of Governors received reports last week on the state of athletics on the campuses. They were not very reassuring.

The UNC-Chapel Hill campus reported a decline in graduation rates of athletes in the so-called "revenue sports" - football and basketball - over the six-year period that began with the class of 1996. The rate among football players dropped from 54.1 percent the previous year to 47.6 percent in the most recent year. The rate among basketball players dropped from 100 percent to 33.3 percent. (The basketball rate may be deceptive because of the smaller numbers involved.)

All student-athletes at UNC graduated at a rate of 70 percent, and the student body as a whole had an 80.4 percent graduation rate. Over the last six years, the football graduation rate has declined steadily from the 60-plus percentile to the 50s and now the 40s. N.C.

State's football rate is similarly dismal, 42.1 percent.

Athletic department officials downplay the numbers, saying the football decline may be due more to one-time factors such as the departure of Coach Mack Brown in 1997. But that's the same thing they said last year, and the numbers haven't improved.

It is time for the university's leadership - chancellors, trustees, the Board of Governors, and President Molly Broad - to get alarmed about the embarrassing graduation rates and do something about the situation. Carolina's rates have slipped below the averages of both the Atlantic Coast Conference and the NCAA. They bespeak an ongoing imbalance between athletics and academics that has the potential to, at best, erode the university's reputation and, at worst, erupt in major scandal.

One source of improvement may be new NCAA rules that seek to improve graduation rates by setting higher grade performance standards for students as they progress through college. Two things will be necessary to enable students to reach the higher bar. One is greater support for - and expectations of - athletes while they're in school.

The other is to make sure students are qualified when they are admitted, and there are discouraging signs on that front. At the same time it raised the bar for staying in college, the NCAA relaxed admission standards for athletes. The intent is to give colleges more flexibility in admitting athletes who may not perform well on SAT tests but otherwise would be qualified.

But we have cause to be concerned about admissions, because both UNC and N.C. State have adopted procedures that, in effect, hide information about athletes who are admitted as exceptions to normal admissions standards. The Board of Governors requires an annual report on athletes admitted as exceptions, but UNC 10 years ago adopted new lingo that allows it to accept below-standard athletes without labeling them as "exceptions." N.C. State, tired of bad publicity, did the same thing last year. UNC admits 20 to 30 such athletes annually, but they don't show up on the report to the Board of Governors.

The public would be forgiven for coming to this conclusion: Carolina and State are admitting more athletes who are not qualified academically, judging by their graduation rates. But through procedural sleight of hand, they conveniently evade the troublesome question of whether athletes are being admitted who don't meet admissions standards.

The Board of Governors should require a full and open public accounting of admission of athletes and their graduation rates.

Athletics admissions
UNC board chairman raises some very good questions
Charlotte Observer
2/18/03

UNC Board of Governors Chairman Brad Wilson spoke for a lot of North Carolinians last week when he asked this question about campus admission policies involving athletic exceptions: Huh?

That's the shorthand version of his question, which came in response to an annual university system report on the number of students admitted as exceptions to normal admission standards. Overall, the system reported 146 students admitted as exceptions -- 44 of them student athletes and 102 with other special talents.

N.C. State University last week revealed that it had six such athletic exceptions -- and would have reported 14 exceptions if it had not recently changed its definition of an exception.

UNC Chapel Hill, by contrast, does not use the term "exception" for borderline students it admits. It calls them "committee cases" when applicants don't meet UNC-CH standards but do meet minimum UNC system and National Collegiate Athletic Association standards. The university admits 20 to 30 of those each year.

Chairman Wilson noted that when campuses use different terms to define how borderline students are admitted, the university obviously has a terminology problem: "What is an exception?" he asked in an interview. "What is a committee case? Are they different? If they're different, how are they different?"

Good questions, and one the university system's staff will be asked to answer in March. Perhaps the general administration will be able to shed some light on how the 16 campuses handle applicants who don't meet campus standards -- and which campuses may be abusing their discretion.

Last week The News & Observer reported that N.C. State Chancellor Marye Anne Fox had approved a definition change that would allow the university to report fewer exceptions. Chancellor Fox said a previous formula used at N.C. State was so confusing it was of little value.

The differing definitions used at the UNC system's two largest campuses suggest that these universities are overly sensitive to appearances that they admit athletes and other students who wouldn't qualify academically unless they had certain talents, whether it's shooting a three-pointer, playing a piccolo or designing a Web site. All universities look at a variety of talents, experiences, backgrounds and abilities when admitting students. Taking steps to hide those admissions is an exercise in academic dishonesty.

Each university has to wrestle with getting the right mix of students on campus, and each chancellor must be accountable for admission decisions. A one-size-fits-all admissions policy has no place here.

But the university system should insist that campuses use a uniform definition to describe their admission exceptions in annual reports to the board and to the public. And it ought to require universities to explain themselves when they resort to other terminology to describe the admission of students who wouldn't normally qualify for admission.

UNC's athlete-graduation rates decline

Drop is sharpest in revenue sports, with rate for football players plunging by almost 7 percentage points.

Chapel Hill News
2/16/03

CHAPEL HILL -- A report presented last week to the UNC Board of Governors indicates a slight drop in six-year graduation rates for UNC-Chapel Hill student athletes -- and a more significant decline for UNC-CH football players.

According to the UNC system's 2001-02 Intercollegiate Athletic Report, the six-year graduation rate for student athletes fell from 70.8 percent for the class of 1995 to 70 percent for the students who entered college in 1996.

But in revenue sports, the decline was much greater.

The six-year graduation rate for football players dropped almost 7 percentage points -- from 54.1 percent to 47.6 percent.

The graduation rate for men's basketball players -- which is subject to wide fluctuations because so few students are involved -- fell from 100 percent for students who entered in 1995, when all four eligible players graduated, to 33.3 percent in 1996, when one of three eligible players graduated.

The UNC system report considers all student athletes when calculating graduation rates.

An NCAA report released in the fall lists even lower student-athlete graduation rates at UNC-CH -- a discrepancy that likely can be attributed at least in part to the fact that the NCAA report considers only scholarship athletes.

The NCAA report puts UNC-CH's student-athlete graduation rate at 69 percent for students who entered college in 1995.

That same report lists a football graduation rate of 52 percent -- 5 percentage points lower than the conference average.

According to both reports, UNC-CH's graduation rates in revenue sports are much lower than the university's graduation rate for all student athletes and lower still than the graduation rate for students in general.

Graduation rates at many Division I universities -- including UNC-CH -- are a cause for concern, said Former UNC-system President William Friday, who chaired the Knight Commission on Higher Education, which examined issues of academic integrity in college athletics.

"The record speaks for itself and shows that we have to make improvements," Friday said.

Friday said several new NCAA standards that will be implemented in the fall represent important first steps towards improving athletic graduation rates.

The changes, which were recommended by the Knight Commission, will drop the 820 minimum SAT requirement for admission and replace it with a sliding scale that allows a lower SAT score if a student's high school grades are higher.

The new rules also raise the bar on students' performance once they are admitted. Students now will have to maintain 1.8 GPA until after their junior year when the requirement will be 2.0.

"I did hope these would change that picture," Friday said.

But John Blanchard, the university's director of academic support programs for student athletes, said he is concerned that the new standards might not have the desired effect.

Blanchard said the rule changes could make it easier for student athletes to gain admission but more difficult for them to maintain eligibility once they enter college.

"They're trying to up graduation rates by making it easier to get into school and harder to stay in school," he said.

Blanchard said the decline in football graduation rates, for a large part, represented lingering fallout from the sudden departure of football coach Mack Brown in December 1997.

Some players Brown recruited, he said, might have become disillusioned after Brown announced he was taking the head coaching position at the University of Texas-Austin, either transferring to another college or leaving school all together.

"That doesn't always cause a problem when there is a coaching change," he said. "But sometimes it does."

Blanchard also said the statistics could be misleading because they measure only the percentage of students who graduate from UNC-CH and do not account for students who transfer and graduate from other institutions.

"When you are trying to assess a program, you have to look at statistics over a period of time," he said.

Although he did not have specific data, Blanchard said he expects the five-year graduation rate for football players who entered college in 1997 to be close to 70 percent.

The five-year graduation rate for UNC-CH football players fell from 54 percent for students who entered in 1995 to 43 percent for students who entered in 1996.

Friday said the new standards represent a growing awareness among NCAA officials and universities' athletic directors about the problem of low athletic graduation rates.

"There is a consensus now that where we've been going and what we've been doing has to change," he said.

Friday said athletic graduation rates at UNC-CH are a problem and that he would like to see the university serve as a model for other campuses by adopting policies that better serve the academic needs of student athletes.

"The best way to effectuate change," he said, "is to get up front and lead it."

Why no 'exceptions'

Letter to the Editor
News and Observer

2/15/03

Regarding references in your Feb. 14 story "Players' struggle in class masked" to the admissions process for student-athletes at UNC-Chapel Hill:

Our university community takes the undergraduate admissions process for all students, including student -athletes, very seriously. Our faculty guide us in our decision-making.

As a result, UNC-Chapel Hill's admission standards for student-athletes exceed those set by both the National Collegiate Athletics Association and the 16-campus University of North Carolina. We do not report "academic exceptions" because we do not have any based on the NCAA or system standards.
Moreover, our policies and practices reflect careful consultation with the Board of Trustees, the Faculty Committee on Athletics and the Faculty Committee on Admissions.

Typically, the university admits approximately 20 to 30 student-athletes who meet or exceed the NCAA and UNC system requirements, but not the higher standard set by our campus. Those students earn admission only after careful review by a faculty panel whose members are also involved in semester-by-semester reviews of course grades and overall academic progress of student-athletes. Those faculty also help decide any corrective actions if appropriate.

Carolina regularly declines to admit student-athletes who later compete against the Tar Heels. Our coaches do not bring many of these kinds of cases forward for consideration in the first place because of the high standards the university has set.

More data sought on 'exceptions'
Chancellor Marye Anne Fox disputes the characterization of her role in changing an academic policy at NCSU

News and Observer
2/15/03

CHAPEL HILL -- The chairman of the UNC Board of Governors asked Friday for a fuller explanation of how the UNC campuses report their "academic exceptions" -- students who may fall short of the usual admission standards but are accepted anyway. Chairman Brad Wilson said he wants more information about why the 16 UNC campuses use different reporting methods. Wilson said he was responding to articles in The News & Observer about the process.

Also Friday, NCSU Chancellor Marye Anne Fox disputed some of the findings in the N&O articles about how she and top campus officials handled a policy change on exceptions last summer. As a result of the change, NCSU lowered the number of freshmen identified as exceptions from 14 to six. Officials said all are athletes.

"I was just very concerned about perpetuating the image of me forcing this on somebody," Fox said. "I was concerned about the image of not consulting with faculty."

Wilson asked UNC system President Molly Broad to develop an explanation of the report for a March meeting, and he expects board members to have questions. The annual report on intercollegiate athletics includes information on graduation rates and SAT scores for student-athletes.

Friday's report showed 146 students admitted as exceptions to the usual standards. Among them were 44 student-athletes, including 12 in football and men's basketball.
Exceptions also can involve students with artistic and other talents, but the report did not describe the 102 non-athletic exceptions.

In 1994, UNC-Chapel Hill did away with the term "exception" to describe its borderline students, so the number reported each year is zero. Instead, at-risk students are called "committee cases" and are admitted after their files are reviewed by a committee.

At UNC-Chapel Hill, Admissions Director Jerry Lucido said none of those students is an exception. They might not necessarily meet UNC-CH standards, he said, but all meet minimum NCAA standards and UNC system course requirements. Broad agreed.

"Every single one of the students meets minimum course requirements established by the Board of Governors and meets minimum requirements of the NCAA," Broad said.

Wilson said the confusion is one reason why he wants a review.

"One thing we've learned here is terminology," Wilson said in an interview. "What is an exception? What is a committee case? Are they different? If they're different, how are they different?"

No matter how universities report the exceptions, it is important that they do so, former UNC President William C. Friday said in an interview.

"When you let them in, you turn away other North Carolinians who have higher qualifications," Friday said. Friday is working with the NCAA's Knight Commission to study athletics and academics at the nation's universities.

Fox disputed a statement in The N&O that she had "quietly and quickly approved" the exception policy change. She said her second-in-command, then-Provost Stuart Cooper, had the final say on the new policy, but she acknowledged that she later expressed her own approval of Cooper's decision. She said she had not initiated the change but had organized an initial meeting in response to an issue raised by Athletics Director Lee Fowler.

"I didn't tell them to change it," Fox said. "I just teed up the issue."

The new policy was intended to correct a "flawed" statistical formula used to calculate a student's predicted success as a freshman, she said. Under the new policy, approved last summer, officials no longer rely solely on the statistical formula to define exceptions.

Instead, the files of borderline applicants are reviewed by the admissions director, who judges their qualifications based in part on whether the school has enough tutoring and other assistance available to help them graduate.

Yet another policy change is being reviewed now. This proposed change will be presented to some faculty senators in March.

The change made last summer was not referred to the Faculty Senate or to the campus at large for comment. But Fox said that a faculty representative to the Athletics Council was involved and that college deans and the admissions committee were informed.

It's no game
The state university system needs to be clear and accountable regarding standards for athletes admitted as "exceptions."

Editorial
News and Observer
2/15/03

When it comes to admitting athletic recruits with substandard academic qualifications at major colleges, coaches and athletics directors nationwide engage in a sport of rationalization that is positively acrobatic. It goes something like this: We want to help young people who might not otherwise have an opportunity for an education. These are kids with special talents. We have to do this because everyone else is doing it and if we want to compete we should not put ourselves at a disadvantage. And so on and so on.

To be sure, in some cases the rationale may be perfectly sincere and not without merit. But by and large, the reality is that major-college football and basketball athletes who do not meet a university's conventional academic requirements are admitted because a coach thinks they can help put the ball in the end zone or the basket, and do their part to glorify the athletics program. (And by the way, help keep the big-money engine that drives the program running smoothly.)

N.C. State University is now in the midst of a contentious discussion over some of the consequences of playing the big-time game, as first reported Friday in The News & Observer. Its fellow flagship institution in the University of North Carolina system, UNC-Chapel Hill, ought to be a part of that discussion as well. Both schools have refined the way they deal with labeling those students, most of them athletes, who have been called academic "exceptions."

UNC-Chapel Hill didn't like the stigma that came with admitting larger numbers of such students -- some critics believe large numbers of exceptions indicate too much influence on the part of coaches and athletics departments
-- so it simply changed the designation and now calls the students "committee cases."

NCSU Chancellor Marye Anne Fox also says there's a stigma associated with the label "exception." As it happens, her university is listing fewer students as exceptions now that it has changed the way it identifies them.
Fox characterizes the previous approach as flawed. A factor the university considers is whether its own support system can help the student have a good chance at graduation. As a result of the changes, the university is listing fewer "exceptions" in its report to the UNC system's Board of Governors.

Certainly there's a place for admitting students, among them athletes, who may not meet conventional standards.
But the Board of Governors and President Molly Broad should establish a clear and uniform means of identifying those students that would apply at all the system's universities.

What's more, chancellors should be accountable. If, for example, a school recruits a dozen football players who don't measure up to normal academic standards for admission, it should expect that the graduation rate of those players will match that of others on the team and perhaps even the five-year graduation rate of the student body.
If it doesn't measure up, the school should be forced to reduce the number of exceptions.

That might not please some athletics officials, but it would serve to keep the reins on college sports in the hands of chancellors, who should, and must, hold them tightly.

==========
Players' struggle in class masked

News and Observer
2/14/03

This morning, the leaders of North Carolina's university system will examine a document on intercollegiate athletics that shows six "academic exceptions" among N.C. State University's freshman class and none at UNC-Chapel Hill.

Those numbers don't begin to paint the true picture.

Nearly 10 years ago, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill stopped reporting exceptions -- students who don't meet a school's usual admission standard but gain entry because of a special talent. The university simply did away with the category after lousy publicity on the number of exceptions, especially in football. The university now accepts 20 to 30 such students each year.

Now NCSU is admitting more athletes who would be considered borderline academically. Facing an increase in the number of athletes who would be labeled exceptions, the university changed its policy last summer. Leaders now are considering another change, which would -- as Chapel Hill did -- lose the term "exception" altogether.

Today's report to the UNC Board of Governors will list five exceptions on NCSU's football and men's basketball teams, according to a draft copy of the report. There was another exception in women's soccer.

Still, had the university not quietly made its policy change, the number would have been significantly higher: 14, according to a memo obtained by The News & Observer through the state's public records law. NCSU officials said in interviews later that they recall that all 14 were athletes.

UNC-Chapel Hill is accepting far more such borderline students. But the university now calls them "committee cases."

"There might be in the neighborhood of 20 to 30 students like that every year," said Jerry Lucido, UNC-CH's admissions director. All are athletes, he said.

Universities and colleges often admit students who don't meet academic requirements as "exceptions" because of particular talents they bring to the school. Those exceptions often are athletes.

In Chapel Hill, admissions officials review borderline students' entire files to make decisions.

"We pore over transcripts of the individuals," Lucido said. "We discuss character. We discuss coursework. Often times, we work with coaches to beef up curriculums during a [potential student-athlete's] senior year. And frankly, we take most of them."

But reporting the number of exceptions, on a document to be made public, can be embarrassing for universities.
"How many articles would be written if we went from zero-zero-zero-one to, say, 16?" said Lee Fowler, NCSU's athletics director, explaining the policy change at his school.

According to an early draft of today's report, NCSU will show more exceptions than any other UNC system school in the combined sports of football and men's basketball. Appalachian State University has four, UNC-

Asheville, two, and UNC-Greensboro, one. Everyone else has none.

Thomas Conway, N.C. State's interim vice provost for enrollment management and services, decided in January to begin shopping another change to campus groups that would eliminate the term "exception," as UNC-CH did.
He spoke with deans Thursday morning and is scheduled to talk with faculty senators March 3.

"I think UNC did it for the right reason," Conway said. "And I think we ought to consider their logic."

The work to obscure the number of struggling student-athletes worries some academics who recall problems in the 1980s with how universities ran their athletics programs.

In 1983, under the late Jim Valvano, the Wolfpack men's basketball team won a national championship. The desire to remain competitive nationally resulted in the admission of some athletes with low academic qualifications. Valvano stepped down in 1990 amid allegations of academic abuses in the program and in the wake of NCAA and UNC system investigations.

Art Padilla, a professor of business management at NCSU, is concerned that if institutions such as NCSU and UNC have changed their definitions, no one will know whether student-athletes are meeting standards.

"We need to have, and the UNC governing board should continue to insist upon, consistent and verifiable information from year to year that provides this public information," Padilla said. "I think any efforts to hide or mislead by playing with definitions are wrongheaded and ultimately will harm the university as well as its students, faculty and certainly its administrators."

Rule change fairer for all, Fox says

News and Observer
2/14/03

RALEIGH -- N.C. State University Chancellor Marye Anne Fox wants a national championship football team.
She hired coach Chuck Amato to deliver it, and the Pack finished 11th in the national polls this year after beating
Notre Dame 28-6 in the Gator Bowl.

But State faced a potential problem this year: Among the school's freshmen athletes were 14 who would have been deemed academic exceptions -- students unlikely to have been admitted if not for their athletic prowess.

Not all 14 were football players, but the high number would have raised questions of whether NCSU was lowering its admissions standards to attract better athletes.

Fox quietly and quickly approved a change in the definition of exceptions last summer. Some leaders on campus supported the change but felt the process should be more open. Instead of 14 exceptions, NCSU today will report six on its annual tally for the University of North Carolina Board of Governors -- five in football and men's basketball.
There was another in women's soccer. Even with the change, the total will be NCSU's highest since 1991.

Fox called the change a matter of fairness. She said a formula previously used in the admission process was "seriously flawed" and noted many schools have their own definition of academic exceptions.

But she conceded that a higher number of exceptions -- after years of very few -- would have raised questions.

"Perception always has something to do about it," Fox said in an interview Thursday. "But we worry more our students' experience than we do about the perception."

Last spring, Fox said Athletics Director Lee Fowler spotted trouble: Rising overall student performance at the university in 2001 would mean that if the athletes who enrolled in the fall of 2001 had entered in 2002, several would have fallen under the definition of exceptions. So it was apparent that the 2002 recruits, with similar grades and test scores, would have resulted in more academic exceptions.

NCSU uses a complex equation called the Admissions Index to describe students. School officials juggle a student's SAT score, high school grade-point average and class rank to come up with a predicted GPA for the student's freshman year. Until last spring, students were labeled exceptions if their predicted GPA fell below 1.8 on a 4.0-point scale.

"My understanding is this is so seriously flawed, [analysts] can't even tell you why," Fox said.

Fox said she turned the matter over to George Dixon, then the school's director of admissions. She said Dixon, who retired in January, recommended the change and it was approved by Stuart Cooper, then the NCSU provost.
"It was the provost's call," Fox said.

Cooper denied that Thursday. "No, she initiated that activity, and if anything, it was consensus agreed to in her office," Cooper said. But he added, "I certainly agreed with that consensus."

Cooper is no longer provost. He resigned in January after Fox fired two of his top assistants. He remains a tenured professor at NCSU.

Although other officials agreed with the change, they disagreed about whether to keep it quiet.

Frank Abrams, who was fired by Fox and was Cooper's chief of staff, said he and others recommended going public with the policy and taking it through the usual channels. That meant a time-consuming route through faculty, deans and various committees.

Fox said Thursday that she saw no reason to spend months on that.

"There wasn't any reason to wait," she said. "What would I wait for? We make lots and lots of decisions at this level."

In e-mail to Cooper in August, Fox asked, "Why should this ever become public knowledge unless leaked/ disseminated from the Provost's office? I see no reason to retreat to a procedure we have been told is fundamentally f lawed and is not useful for its intended purpose."

Fox said Thursday that her e-mail described how to disclose the information. "I didn't say, 'Don't do it,' " Fox said.

In September, Fox indicated to NCSU's legal counsel that she planned to sign off on the policy change herself.

She wrote, "Do I understand correctly I have the right to approve his procedure without consulting any faculty body?"

The attorney said she did.

Although Fox said Thursday that the numbers weren't the impetus for the change, officials knew months ahead of time that there could be more academic exceptions than usual. In e-mail in March 2002 to an admissions official, the Athletics Council chairman warned that the policy might need an examination.

"Since we may be seeing more exceptions, it would be good for us to visit this issue in order to have a common understanding," wrote Donn Ward, a professor of food science.

Fowler said neither Amato nor men's basketball coach Herb Sendek asked that the exceptions policy be reviewed or changed. Neither coach could be reached Thursday for comment.

Philip Carter, chairman of NCSU's Faculty Senate, said the change has raised questions among NCSU's faculty senators.

"We're as anxious as anybody to get to the bottom of it," Carter said. "It makes me nervous any time something is done during the summer."

Dixon, the former admissions director who is now a consultant to the UNC system, raised another objection in e-mail to Cooper last June. Noting that two athletes with cumulative high-school GPAs of lower than 2.0 were seeking admission, Dixon wrote, "I have never in almost 30 years seen recruits like this ... not even a 2.0 high-school GPA, regardless of the reason, is uncharted territory for N.C. State."

Both athletes were admitted.

We need all athletes out classes by 2pm, but last fall we had afternoon study table at 12:30 - 2:00 pm (freshmen out of class by noon). If you have any questions give me a call.

Hi Guys,

I would like to provide Arts & Sciences some information on fall sports practice times so they can better help our freshmen student athletes plan their fall class schedules. Please email me the time that your students need to be available for practice. I will then provide a list of teams and practice times to Arts & Sciences. Thank you.
