FREE TREATMENT FOR OBSESSIVE-COMPULSIVE DISORDER (OCD)

Are you anxious about germs, mistakes, harm, numbers, or unpleasant obsessive thoughts? Do you have problems with compulsive checking, washing, asking for reassurance, or repeating rituals?

If you or your partner experiences any of these problems and are between 18 and 75 years of age, you and your partner might be eligible to participate in a research study on couples therapy for OCD. We are trying to improve upon existing treatments for OCD by including the sufferer's partner. This treatment that we are testing is offered at no cost through a research study being conducted by the UNC-Chapel Hill Anxiety Disorders Clinic. The study will include cognitive-behavior therapy and will not require you to go on any medication, or change any existing medication.

The Human Auditory Development Laboratory is currently recruiting adults between 18-30 years old to help us learn more about how children hear in noisy environments.

During the testing, you will sit in a sound-treated room and will listen to sounds presented over earphones. You will be asked to indicate when you hear sounds by touching a picture on a touch-screen monitor. The sounds we use are not loud.

One visit to the laboratory is required. The visit lasts about one hour. You will receive $15/hour and we will give you a parking pass for parking if you drive to the lab.

If you are interested please call (919) 843-3672 and leave your first name, and a number by which we can reach you (indicating the best times to call).

The enclosed message from Dean Carney is being sent to all deans, directors and department/curriculum heads in the College, and all College faculty, with a cc to administrative managers.

Dear Colleagues,

I'm writing to invite you to a general meeting of all College faculty set for Monday February 16 at 3:30 p.m. in Toy Lounge so that we may discuss recent and pending state budget reductions and how they might affect you and the College.

I'd also like to give you a brief summary here of what we have done so far to address reductions to our current budget, and how we are planning for fiscal year 2009-2010 based on various scenarios as state officials grapple with the global economic crisis and the impact it is having on state budget revenues.

Our overriding goal is to preserve our teaching mission, our critical obligation as the state's flagship public university. We must also do everything we can to maintain the College's support for research, the lifeblood of our teaching and our service to the state. Indeed, research funding has been the bright spot in our budget this year.

State budget cuts are especially challenging for the College because our faculty teach nearly all (87%) of the undergraduate credit hours at UNC. Any major cuts in the College will dominate the impacts on students across the campus. Almost 80% of the College's total budget (excluding contracts and grants) comes from state sources, and 93% of those state funds are for personnel.

As I've mentioned in my earlier emails, the current fiscal year budget had to endure two one-time cuts, totaling 6%, and that was on top of a 1% cut to our permanent budget. We handled the cuts by taking back substantial carry-over funds, and a lot of other cuts to the non-personnel budget. We cannot draw on all of those sources to meet the cut to our permanent budget for FY 2009-2010, and so both non-personnel and personnel budgets will suffer.

Though we will not know what state budget reductions for next year will be until the state legislature acts this summer, we have been asked to plan for reductions of 3%, 5% or 7%. Given what we know about the economic crisis and its impact on state revenues thus far, we have to face the prospect of a 7% cut. In a normal year, we could handle less than half of that by canceling all searches for new faculty and absorbing the cut from retirements and resignations. But the cut we face will be much larger than we can absorb in that manner. This is why we have suspended more faculty searches, bringing the total to almost 40. We will be hiring nonetheless, thanks to donor-supported professorships, and a few hires necessary to maintain, for example, our federally-support area studies centers. Cuts to staff and to the instructional budget will have to be made, and we will exercise prudence in allocating the cuts.

This is only a brief summary of what the College, with your help and support, will do to address our challenging times. I appreciate your patience and cooperation. At our meeting on February 16, I will share additional information with you about what we have to do to balance the budget. I will also talk about our ongoing priorities and goals for the College.

We have faced hard times before and I am optimistic that we will emerge from this economic crisis with our ambitions and our resolve intact. We should delight in the extremely high quality of our students and our colleagues. Let's hold on to our strengths, persevere through the fiscal storm, and be ready to regain our growth the moment conditions improve.

Sincerely,

Bruce W. Carney
Interim Dean

The Office of the Dean of Students and the Carolina Women's Center offer HAVEN (Helping to Advocate Violence Ending Now) training opportunities throughout the semester. HAVEN helps UNC Faculty, Staff, and Students learn how to respond in a meaningful way to sexual and relationship violence in our campus community and to become informed allies. By attending HAVEN training, you help to create multiple safe spaces around the campus for Carolina students to obtain information, engage in discussion, and receive referrals.

You will leave the training with basic information about sexual and relationship violence, how to respond in a helpful way, what resources are available on campus, and what you can do about sexual violence in the Carolina community. You will receive a sign for your door which identifies you as a HAVEN member.

Hello, my name is and I am the for an organization called OASIS, the Organization for African Students? Interests and Solidarity here at UNC Chapel Hill. Annually, members of OASIS organize a series of events that take place during our Africa Week. This year, Africa Week will take place between The theme for Africa Week is Unspoken Truths. The events that take place during Africa Week are all geared towards spreading awareness to our campus and the surrounding communities about the beauty of African culture, dispelling stereotypes and myths, as well providing a social atmosphere in which Africans and non-Africans can interact and learn from each other. The week kicks off with our Marketplace event on Monday and ends on Saturday with our Africa Night Show. I would really appreciate it if you could announce Africa Week to your classes and encourage them to attend the events throughout the week. I hope that you might be interested in attending some of the events yourself. Attached is a flyer for the event. For more information feel free to contact me, or visit www.unc.edu/oasis. Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Employee Forum Extends Deadline for Community Award Nominations

The Employee Forum is extending its deadline for accepting nominations for its Community Award from now through February 16.

Purpose: The Employee Forum Community Award (also known as the Three-Legged Stool Award) is designed to recognize distinguished contributions by individuals who work to promote cooperation and collaboration among faculty, staff and students. The Three-Legged Stool Award is the Employee Forum's highest honor.

Eligibility: Any member of the faculty, staff or student body of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is eligible. (Current members of the Employee Forum Executive Committee are not eligible.)

Criteria for nomination: Nominees should be individuals who inspire creativity; promote harmony and partnerships within the University community; inspire teamwork, cooperation and participation; demonstrate new approaches to current processes; encourage, mentor and build bridges; form alliances to work collectively; or demonstrate any other significant community-building activities.

Administration: Nominations (not to exceed 250 words) will be accepted from any member of the University community. When submitting nominations, please include the name of the nominee, how to contact the nominee (campus address, phone, CB# , or e-mail address), your name and contact information, and the specific reasons you are nominating this individual.

Previous winners include James Peacock, Paul Hardin, Rachel Windham, Elson Floyd, Laurie Charest, Jack Evans, Linwood Futrelle, Susan Ehringhaus, Tommy Womble, Eric Mlyn, Archie Ervin, and Willis Brooks.

No official nomination form is required.

Nominations should be submitted before February 16, 2009, to:

Tommy Griffin, Executive Committee Chair
Employee Forum Office
CB# 3488 Campus Mail

or sent via e-mail to forum_office@unc.edu with the heading "Community Award."

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Triangle Dance Festival for AIDS

In Memorial Hall, on UNC-Chapel Hill's campus, the Triangle Dance Festival for AIDS (TDFA) will hold its 4th annual festival in the spirit of community collaboration, great performances and health justice.

The Triangle Dance Festival for AIDS is a celebration that lends voice and space to art, advocacy and their fusion, all while benefiting direct-service HIV/AIDS initiatives in North Carolina, Africa, Asia and Latin America. TDFA gathers an extraordinary quality and diversity of local and professional dance, musical and cultural performers for an evening of arts followed by a Health Fair Gala - bringing all kinds of people together to engage with HIV and AIDS through creative, educational and volunteer resources.

Last year over 800 people attended Triangle Dance Festival for AIDS. We are looking to reach an even higher number this year. We consider TDFA to be an important part of the Triangle Community as well as the UNC Community. TDFA's profits from our ticketed event benefits several charities that are positively impacting the community through the various programs and community outreach projects that each charity sponsors.

Come witness the Triangle's best in international, modern and urban dance performing groups, with world music, spoken word, and a celebration of the worldwide battle against HIV/AIDS.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: UNC Chiron Award accepting nominations for outstanding teachers

To Members of the University Community:

Nominations are now being accepted for UNC's new Chiron Teaching Award. Inspired by Randy Pausch's Last Lecture, this award is named after the mythological Greek centaur-teacher who sought to inspire the pursuit of wisdom and enlightenment in those around him.

Carolina's Chiron Award ceremony will honor the intellectual achievements of one Carolina professor while recognizing her or him for remarkable character and service to the undergraduate population of the university. Here is an opportunity for UNC to publicly celebrate and share the exceptional undergraduate teaching that is vital to Carolina's greatness.

Do you know an outstanding professor who you find to be worthy of this honor? Nominate them!

Nomination forms and more information are available at:
http://studentorgs.unc.edu/speakers/index.php/carolina-chiron-award or

Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: University Budget Update

Dear Students, Faculty and Staff:

I'm writing again to share updates about the University's budget. You all know that we face serious budget cuts. The decisions that we make during tough times like these are going to be more important than any we might make when times are good. It would be easy for us to fall into the trap of hunkering down, making cuts across the board and just trying to survive. But the great institutions - the ones that will emerge from this economic crisis even stronger - will be those that are willing to look hard at what they do and then make really smart decisions. I intend for Carolina to be one of those great institutions.
That means we've got to be strategic and look critically at everything we do. We owe it to ourselves, and we owe it to the Legislature and people of North Carolina. We have an obligation to do our part in these tough economic times.

So far in this budget crisis, we have asked the vice chancellors and deans to look within their units to identify the cuts that we need to make. But what we haven't done is take a good look at ourselves from the cross-University perspective to see if there are ways to improve operations and reduce costs.

To do that, Bain & Company, a global business consulting firm, has been asked to conduct a study to help us identify innovative ways to streamline operations, become more effective, and perhaps achieve additional cost savings. The UNC-Chapel Hill Foundation is funding the study, which is made possible through a restricted gift from a Carolina alumnus.

I see this study as a great opportunity to bring in outside experts who can take an objective look at how the University currently operates to meet our campus-wide goals and to fulfill our mission to educate students and serve the people of North Carolina and beyond.

In my regular e-mail updates to the campus about the budget, lots of employees have written back with suggestions about how to improve and cut costs at the same time. Some of those ideas have to do with energy savings, sustainable practices, personnel, purchasing and procurement, technology and facilities.

There is always room for improvement in any operation. And we always have an obligation to try and be better in all that we do to best serve the taxpayers of North Carolina.

The goal of the study, which will be conducted this spring, is to provide the University with potential strategies for operational improvements and enhancements to the intensive planning we already have under way. The Bain study will give us one more tool to make smart decisions about Carolina's future.

I wanted you to have a larger context for where we're headed before sharing the latest developments about what happens next with the state budget picture. Last week, UNC General Administration sent the State Budget Director a memo detailing potential 2009-2011 budget reductions for the UNC system. This information reflected our input that I told you about last month - planning scenarios requested by President Bowles for reductions of 3 percent, 5 percent and 7 percent of our state funding. I also shared some numbers about the possible losses of faculty, teaching and staff positions from those contingency plans, our best estimates of the potential impact.

The General Administration memo also highlighted another UNC-Chapel Hill projection as part of a system-wide list showing the effects of a state cut at the 7 percent level. If we keep the current student-faculty ratio to maintain quality, the loss of about 230 faculty and teaching positions would warrant an enrollment reduction of more than 3,400 students - roughly the size of our incoming first-year class. The memo emphasized President Bowles' plans to make the best possible case with the State Budget Office, Governor Perdue and the General Assembly that permanent cuts next year would be the equivalent of sacrificing North Carolina's future. I wanted you to know that President Bowles and his staff, along with the Board of Governors, are advocating admirably on behalf of all the UNC campuses.

I continue to be impressed by the positive, but realistic approach that our community has taken with these budget issues. I'll keep sharing timely information with you. Regarding our current budget year, the next steps will depend on what happens in Washington with the federal stimulus package, as well as how state tax return revenues are running in April. We're doing all we can right now to be prepared.

Finally, if you're interested in reading the General Administration memo mentioned above, along with my previous budget messages and related background, refer to a new link, "Carolina Budget Update," on the University's homepage, www.unc.edu. And keep sending any creative cost-cutting suggestions to budgetideas@unc.edu. On behalf of the vice chancellors, I want to thank everyone who has taken the time to share their ideas.

Sincerely,

Holden Thorp

The Renaissance Computing Institute (RENCI), is a collaborative venture of UNC-Chapel Hill, Duke University, and North Carolina State University. RENCI uses interdisciplinary teamwork, advanced information technologies and domain expertise to advance the frontiers of knowledge, address real-world problems, create economic opportunity, and improve the quality of life for people in North Carolina. RENCI provides an environment conducive to aiding partner groups in solving major research questions and addressing community needs. Working with partner institutions and constituents, the Director will pursue a collaborative vision that ensures RENCI's relevance and responsiveness in a rapidly changing environment. As an advocate for innovation, the Director will speak persuasively to diverse groups about the role of advanced information technologies in research, education, and public service. He or she will partner with institutions, communities, businesses, and governments to solve problems of strategic importance. He or she will have the technical knowledge, broad experience, organizational skills and professional stature to support top-performing teams working in areas such as high-performance computing, visualization, collaborative tools, networking, software development, and data systems. The Director will develop new sources of funding and spearhead new areas of endeavor with an entrepreneurial ethos and with a commitment to interdisciplinary problem solving.

Subject:	INFORMATIONAL: The Order of the Grail-Valkyries is now accepting nominations

To Fellow Members of the University Community:

The Order of the Grail-Valkyries, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill's intellectual honorary society, is now accepting nominations. Founded in 1920, the purpose of the Order is to encourage a dynamic and vigorous campus intellectual climate and to foster unity within our campus community. To achieve this end, the Order recognizes individuals of outstanding character who have made significant contributions to our University's intellectual climate by enhancing our campus's learning environment or by having conducted outstanding research.

Examples of past contributions for which nominees have been recognized include designing and teaching a course at Carolina as a undergraduate, working to establish the Carolina Research Scholars Program, founding the UNC chapter of the Roosevelt Institute, re-designing the first-year curriculum at UNC Medical School, lobbying the North Carolina legislature to pass a carbon reduction and renewable energy bill, leading programs abroad to provide over $100,000 of free dental care to underserved populations, and publishing in journals/presenting at conferences on subjects as wide-ranging as astronomy, linguistics, and plant ecology.

Students and faculty are encouraged to nominate deserving undergraduates, graduate students, and faculty. Please take a moment to recognize the accomplishments of fellow members of the UNC community. The nomination form is available at:

http://gpsf-wiki.unc.edu/confluence/display/fpghs/Nominations+2009

The deadline for nominations is February 16 at 11:59 pm.

For more information, please contact Nicholas Miller at nrmiller@email.unc.edu.

COMMUNITY DAY

Sunday, February 22
1:00 PM - 4:30 PM

Dig into the world of coal, steel, and iron in this day-long family exploration of At the Heart of Progress! Travel to the depths of the Earth with storyteller Hannah Blevins Harvey, Assistant Professor of Theater and Performance at Kennesaw State University, who shares humorous, powerful, and poignant tales of miners from Appalachia. Parent-child partners dance with instructor Maura Michelle Garcia. Art-making activities, dressing up, and more fill out the day. Bring the whole family. Free!

ART & LITERATURE IN THE GALLERIES

Wednesday, February 18, 7:00 - 8:30 PM
Thursday, February 19, 3:30 - 5:00 PM

Join us this week for Art & Literature in the Galleries! The ongoing winter series focuses on books that enhance paintings, sculpture, prints, and photographs that are new on view at the Ackland. Some are long time holdings of the Museum seen in a new configuration; others are new gifts and acquisitions. Still others are part of a local private collection on loan for a temporary exhibition.

This month's selection, Emile Zola's Germinal - a story of coal mining in nineteenth century France - provides an excellent complement to the special exhibition At the Heart of Progress: Coal, Iron, and Steam since 1750,

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: University Awards for the Advancement of Women

Call for Nominations
2009 University Awards for the Advancement of Women

On behalf of the Offices of the Chancellor and the Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost, the Carolina Women's Center is pleased to announce the call for nominations for the 2009 University Awards for the Advancement of Women. This award recognizes contributions to the advancement of women at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Each year, three individuals--one faculty member, one staff member, and one undergraduate/graduate student/postdoctoral scholar--may be selected to receive the award. The faculty and staff recipients each receive $5000 and the undergraduate/graduate student/ postdoctoral scholar recipient receives $2500. Awardees are honored in a ceremony during the Carolina Women's Center's annual Women's Week Celebration.

Please submit nominations for women and men who have contributed in one or more of the following ways:

* Elevated the status of women on campus in sustainable ways;
* Helped to improve campus policies affecting women;
* Promoted and advanced the recruitment, retention, and upward mobility of women;
* Participated in and assisted in the establishment of professional development opportunities for women; and/or
* Participated in and assisted in the establishment of academic mentoring for women.

To submit a nomination, please use the online form at:
http://www.unc.edu/oira/public/women_nomination.html

All faculty and staff nominees must be permanent employees. No self-nominations will be accepted. Carolina Women's Center administrators and staff are not eligible for nomination. The deadline for nominations is Monday, February 23, 2009, at 5:00 p.m.

Previous award winners are:
(2008) Kay Lund, Cookie Newsom, Emily Joy Rothchild
(2007) Barbara Harris, Annette Madden, Emily Dunn,
(2006) Jan Boxill, Terri Houston, Matt Ezzell

Please contact Dr. Donna M. Bickford, Director of the Carolina Women's Center at dbickford@unc.edu or (919) 843-5620 if you have questions about the awards or nomination process.

The link to the nomination form is also available on the Provost's website at www.unc.edu/provost and the Carolina Women's Center website at womenscenter.unc.edu.

The Osun Grove of Osogbo, Nigeria, as a World Heritage Site
The Denial and Dilemma of Archaeology
Friday, February 20, 2009, 3 PM
Hyde Hall, Room 210

Talk given by Akin Ogundiran of UNC-Charlotte, Chair of the Department of Africana Studies. In 2005, UNESCO inscribed the Osun-Osogbo Grove (Nigeria) as a World Heritage site. The grove is the most visited indigenous sacred site in Africa south of the Sahara and is the sacred home of African Atlantic world goddess, Osun. This presentation examines the cultural politics of modernity and tradition that reconstructed the sacred space of Osun-Osogbo in post-colonial Nigeria and the total absence of archaeology in the nomination of the site for World Heritage status. The presentation will draw attention to recent archaeological investigations within the sacred grove and the implications of the findings for transforming current narratives about the grove. Co-sponsored by the Archaeology Curriculum Program and the African Studies Center. Free. Please Contact: Brenda Moore bmoore@email.unc.edu for more information.

Dear Mrs. Crowder,
I am a student at Elon University and I wanted to let you know that John Prendergast will be speaking on March 4th in Whitley Auditorium at 7:30 pm.
John Prendergast is one of the major activists for ending the genocide in Darfur and has recently written the book Not On Our Watch, with Don Cheadle. John is the Senior Advisor to the International Crisis Group and is the co-founder of the ENOUGH campaign (www.enough.org). John also worked for the White House and State Department during the Clinton years and was involved in many peace processes throughout Africa. John Prendergast has worked with members of Congress, the United Nations, human rights organizations, and think tanks. John has written eight books on Africa and has also run programs on CBS's 60 minutes to help raise awareness about the genocide in Darfur. The genocide in Darfur has been going on for five years and still students are not aware about it or what they can do to help stop it. Attached is a poster for the event in case you would like to forward it to any other organizations that may be interested.
sincerely,
Frank Stiefel

Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: Alert Carolina Siren Test - Tuesday, February 24

Dear Students, Faculty and Staff:

The University will TEST the emergency sirens and text messages on Tuesday, February 24, between noon and 1 p. m. You don't need to do anything for the test, part of our ongoing Alert Carolina safety awareness campaign. We test the sirens each semester to remind everyone what to do if they hear them go off for a real emergency and to make sure the equipment works properly.

Anyone outside on or near campus is likely to hear the sirens during the test. The sirens will sound an alert tone in conjunction with a brief pre-recorded voice message. When testing is complete, a different siren tone and voice message will signal "All clear. Resume normal activities." Samples of the alert and "all clear" tones are available at alertcarolina.unc.edu.

The sirens will sound only for an imminent, life-threatening emergency:

* An armed and dangerous person is on or near campus.
* A major chemical spill or hazard has been reported.
* A tornado has been sighted.

If the sirens sound during an actual emergency, go inside and seek shelter immediately. The sirens also will broadcast brief pre-recorded voice announcements with instructions.

When the sirens sound - or during a test - the University also sends a text message to cell phone users who registered their numbers for text-capable phones in the online campus directory. Because the text messages are being sent simultaneously to more than 20,000 currently registered phone numbers, it may take anywhere from five minutes to 20 minutes after the "send" button is activated for you to receive the text message. As soon as you hear the sirens, it is critical that you go inside and take shelter immediately. Do not delay taking action even if you have not received a text message. Following a siren activation or a test, the University also sends an "all clear" text message.

The University may also communicate in an emergency using means including campus-wide e-mail and voice mail (campus phones with land lines), the Adverse Weather and Emergency Phone Line, 843-1234 (recorded information), the University Access Channel (Chapel Hill Time Warner Cable Channel 4), and other campus or local media.

The University is reviewing additional ways to use text messages to communicate about situations that are serious, but do not warrant sounding the sirens. Any text messages will direct people to alertcarolina.unc.edu for updates.

For more details, see alertcarolina.unc.edu, the go-to source for information in an immediate life-threatening or serious situation involving campus safety. The University will post safety-related announcements at this site, along with updates and resource information. People should remember that it can take time to have new information to share even after law enforcement and other emergency responders arrive on the scene. People should not call 911 or the Department of Public Safety for updates - those officials need to be able to devote their full attention to the situation at hand. The Alert Carolina Web site will provide any new details as quickly as possible.

This can be used for purchase of materials, for summer salary, or for travel to a language-related conference such as ALTA. We will need, by August 15, a record of all materials you have developed or purchased, such as a copy of revised syllabus, a list of new readings, etc. You can coordinate how you would like to used these funds with Debby and Peter, and send me an email with your plan. Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: Message from the Chancellor: Campus Budget Update

Dear Carolina community,

I write to summarize comments that I made today at the Faculty Council meeting and that I will make again at the Employee Forum community meeting on March 2.

As everyone knows, we are in extraordinary financial circumstances that have profound implications for the University. Nevertheless, I remain confident that Carolina has what it takes to get through these difficult times and emerge stronger.

There are a number of reasons why it is still very difficult to discern precisely how we will be affected. The first is that no branch of state government has yet submitted its budget. The Governor will be the first to prepare a budget, and we will find out about that at the same time as it appears in the newspapers.

The second is that - even once the Governor and two houses of the General Assembly start releasing budgets - it is not known for sure what the income tax receipts will be until some time after April 15.

Finally, although the federal stimulus bill has been signed, it will be a while before the precise details of how those funds will be managed and distributed are known.

Despite all these caveats, we feel we must prepare and take preliminary actions to manage cuts to our state appropriations and reductions in endowment income.

The first point I would like to make is that we do not foresee circumstances that would lead to the elimination of tenured faculty positions, the canceling of fixed-term contracts in the middle of their terms, or alteration of tenure decisions based on budget concerns. These measures would require that we declare financial exigency, which I will not do.

Next, I commit to you that the administration will undergo budget cuts that are at least as large as those faced by the campus. We have already begun making changes in South Building and the offices of the vice chancellors. Although we must await legislative authority to do so, the vice chancellors are willing to generate savings through furloughs and believe that any furloughs that occur should result in larger percentage decreases for higher-paid employees. General Administration is working with state government to pursue furlough authority.

I know that some managers are already contemplating layoffs as they plan for next year's anticipated cuts. Knowing that, I've talked with Associate Vice Chancellor for Human Resources Brenda Malone about creating an Employee Assistance Fund. It will be funded, in part, by the savings we are able to achieve centrally, by an unrestricted gift from a donor and a generous donation from the Department of Athletics. The primary purpose of the Employee Assistance Fund will be to provide enhanced outplacement services for employees who are laid off. We also are exploring ways to broaden the services offered through our Employee Assistance Program for those employees who need support during these challenging times.

Finally, I want to point out that many of the difficult decisions that lie ahead of us will be made over the summer, since we will know much more about the tax revenues and the legislative budget process at that time. The Faculty Executive Committee has procedures for meeting over the summer, and in fact, this is partly why the Faculty Executive Committee was established. So faculty input will be gathered through the Faculty Executive Committee as needed during the summer since there will be no regular meetings of the full Faculty Council. We will continue to work with the Employee Forum and Student Government to get staff and student input.

I'd like to end by pointing out that we realize the serious circumstances we face and that lives are being impacted. We will continue to work tirelessly to make the right choices for Carolina while maintaining the spirit and morale that have always been part of our great university.

Sincerely,

Holden Thorp

Dear Students, Faculty and Staff:

You received this e-mail as part of a TEST of the University's sirens. The message coincided with the end of the siren test. The sirens have sounded the "all clear" tone. That means resume normal activities. It typically takes at least two hours for a campus-wide e-mail to be delivered to everyone. In an emergency, we plan to use all available communication methods including e-mail as part of a multi-layered strategy to reach as many people, including those who may not be on campus when a real siren activation occurs, as quickly as possible. Dear Friends, [illegible] His dear wife [illegible] telephoned Bonita Summers to share the news. [illegible] I spoke a little while ago with his son [illegible] who said that the family has not yet begun to make funeral arrangements.

As many of you know, John grew up in modest circumstances in Pasadena, California. He was a brilliant member of the first wave of modern African American students to attend Stanford University (BA '67) and Harvard Law School (JD '71) where he met many future civil rights leaders and scholars who became friends and admirers over the succeeding 35 years. He was selected as a Reginald Heber Smith Fellow after graduation, serving at the Legal Aid Foundation of Los Angeles ('72-'74). He then joined the Western Center on Law & Poverty in 1975 and served there for two years. Thereafter, beginning in 1977, he became staff attorney at the National Housing Law Project's West Coast office in Berkeley. Five years later, in 1982, he was then invited to become Director of Litigation for the Legal Aid Foundation of Los Angeles. Throughout his distinguished academic career, which began at North Carolina Central University School of Law in 1985, John drew on a profound first-hand knowledge of the worlds of poverty law, racial injustice, and social policy to frame a unique view of 'critical race theory' and to deve;p[a social justice lawyering method, which informed both his teaching and his many works of scholarship.

John moved from NCCU to Loyola Law School in Los Angeles in 1987, where he was promoted to full professor in 1994. He first came to UNC School of Law as an invited speaker for a /North Carolina Law Review /special symposium issue on /The Kerner Commission Report /Revisited in 1993. A year later, UNC invited John to join our faculty, where he became Reef C. Ivey Professor of Law in 1999. John taught civil rights, critical race theory, local government law, social justice lawyering, and torts to UNC students for a dozen years. He became coauthor, with Martha Mahoney and Stephanie Wildman, of an innovative law school text, /Social Justice: Professionals, Communities, and Law /(2003),/ /which has been widely adopted.

John also served as a program officer with the Ford Foundation from 1990-92, and as a member of the Board of The New World Foundation and the National Asian Pacific American Legal Consortium, and Oxfam America.

Beyond his legal scholarship and teaching, John maintained a remarkable network of admiring colleagues and former students nationwide, including many of the most important social justice voices of his time. Many of those gathered in Chapel Hill in the fall of 2006 for a symposium, devoted to John's work, which led to a special issue of the /North Carolina Law Review/, published/ /in March of 2008, with articles by Charles Daye, Derrick Bell, john a. powell, Florence Roisman, and others. John responded to this outpouring of admiration with wit, grace, and dignity, all suffused with his characteristic self-deprecation.

Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: Message from the Chancellor: Budget Clarification

Dear Faculty Members,

It has come to my attention that a portion of my Feb. 20 message, which I intended to allay the concerns of tenure-track faculty members, may have had the opposite effect.

The confusion stems from the fact that, while I referred to tenured faculty and contract faculty explicitly, no reference was made to tenure-track faculty. Thus, with this addendum, I want to emphasize that we have no plans to discharge tenure-track faculty members because of the economic situation, nor do we intend to use the current economic downturn as a basis for tenure decisions.

Sincerely,

Holden Thorp

Dear Carolina community,

I write to summarize comments that I made today at the Faculty Council meeting and that I will make again at the Employee Forum community meeting on March 2.

As everyone knows, we are in extraordinary financial circumstances that have profound implications for the University. Nevertheless, I remain confident that Carolina has what it takes to get through these difficult times and emerge stronger.

There are a number of reasons why it is still very difficult to discern precisely how we will be affected. The first is that no branch of state government has yet submitted its budget. The Governor will be the first to prepare a budget, and we will find out about that at the same time as it appears in the newspapers.

The second is that - even once the Governor and two houses of the General Assembly start releasing budgets - it is not known for sure what the income tax receipts will be until some time after April 15.

Finally, although the federal stimulus bill has been signed, it will be a while before the precise details of how those funds will be managed and distributed are known.

Despite all these caveats, we feel we must prepare and take preliminary actions to manage cuts to our state appropriations and reductions in endowment income.

The first point I would like to make is that we do not foresee circumstances that would lead to the elimination of tenured faculty positions, the canceling of fixed-term contracts in the middle of their terms, or alteration of tenure decisions based on budget concerns. These measures would require that we declare financial exigency, which I will not do.

Next, I commit to you that the administration will undergo budget cuts that are at least as large as those faced by the campus. We have already begun making changes in South Building and the offices of the vice chancellors. Although we must await legislative authority to do so, the vice chancellors are willing to generate savings through furloughs and believe that any furloughs that occur should result in larger percentage decreases for higher-paid employees. General Administration is working with state government to pursue furlough authority.

I know that some managers are already contemplating layoffs as they plan for next year's anticipated cuts. Knowing that, I've talked with Associate Vice Chancellor for Human Resources Brenda Malone about creating an Employee Assistance Fund. It will be funded, in part, by the savings we are able to achieve centrally, by an unrestricted gift from a donor and a generous donation from the Department of Athletics. The primary purpose of the Employee Assistance Fund will be to provide enhanced outplacement services for employees who are laid off. We also are exploring ways to broaden the services offered through our Employee Assistance Program for those employees who need support during these challenging times.

Finally, I want to point out that many of the difficult decisions that lie ahead of us will be made over the summer, since we will know much more about the tax revenues and the legislative budget process at that time. The Faculty Executive Committee has procedures for meeting over the summer, and in fact, this is partly why the Faculty Executive Committee was established. So faculty input will be gathered through the Faculty Executive Committee as needed during the summer since there will be no regular meetings of the full Faculty Council. We will continue to work with the Employee Forum and Student Government to get staff and student input.

I'd like to end by pointing out that we realize the serious circumstances we face and that lives are being impacted. We will continue to work tirelessly to make the right choices for Carolina while maintaining the spirit and morale that have always been part of our great university.

Sincerely,

Holden Thorp

Hello All,

I am writing to inform everyone that we have discovered a manufacturer defect in the Denon DVD players that we currently use in general purpose classrooms across campus.

We are currently working quickly with Denon and others to get a solution in place so that we can repair these units as quickly as possible. The main buildings that we have seen these issues have been Dey, Gardner and Saunders.

If you rely heavily on DVD's for your instructional agendas, I would like to offer an alternative solution so that you don't find yourself in a situation with no media for your class. If you have access to a laptop for your class period, then you could play your DVD through that (and still use the installed projectors).

We apologize for any inconvenience this may cause and we are working quickly to resolve the issue. Please contact the Hotline or myself directly if you have any questions or issues about any of the multimedia rooms across campus.

Thank you for your patience and support!

Faculty invited to apply for First Year Seminars in Entrepreneurship course-development grants

Chapel Hill, N.C. — UNC-Chapel Hill faculty in the College of Arts and Sciences who are interested in exploring the impact and relevance of entrepreneurship in their disciplines in a First Year Seminar format are invited to apply for $5,000 course-development grants funded by the Carolina Entrepreneurial Initiative (CEI).

"The entrepreneurial goal of creating enterprises, products or services that are financially sustainable based on the value they provide to others is an increasingly difficult but important challenge in the ongoing economic crisis," says Steve Reznick, associate dean for First Year Seminars and Academic Experiences, who manages the CEI grant program. Proposed seminars can focus on any aspect of entrepreneurial endeavor or look more broadly at topics such as the history of entrepreneurship, the psychology of entrepreneurs, the role of innovation in the arts or factors influencing the evolution of institutions.

"The key goal is to inform and engage undergraduates regarding issues related to entrepreneurship in a course format that is appropriate for a First Year Seminar," Reznick says.

The program awards grants to selected faculty who agree to offer the seminar at least three times during the next four years. The program awards grants to selected faculty who agree to offer the seminar at least three times in the next four years. Faculty interested in applying should visit http://www.unc.edu/fys, select the "For Faculty" tab and "FYS Funding" to download an application. Use the "Policies and Procedures" tab to learn more about the FYS program. Applications will be reviewed beginning March 21.

For more information or questions, contact Reznick at reznick@unc.edu or (919) 962-9720.

The First Years Seminar in Entrepreneurship grant program is a signature offering of the Carolina Entrepreneurial Initiative (CEI), a university-wide program that helps UNC students, faculty and staff learn to transform their ideas into new ventures of all kinds. The $11-million program is funded in part by the Ewing Marion Kauffman Foundation, managed by the Frank Hawkins Kenan Institute of Private Enterprise and led by faculty and staff across the university from an array of disciplines. Successful entrepreneurs, many of them Carolina alumni, serve as advisors, lending their real-world expertise. For more information, visit www.unc.edu/cei.

Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: Budget Update: 5% State Budget Cuts for Next Fiscal Year

Dear Faculty, Staff and Students:

I promised to keep you informed as we cope with inevitable budget cuts for fiscal 2009-2010. We're still in a stronger position than most universities, but the cuts that we are facing will be painful.

The state budget remains in flux. This week, Governor Perdue released her budget. President Bowles has praised the proposal's support of enrollment growth and need-based financial aid. He also has pledged to continue advocating for holding next fiscal year's state budget cuts to the campuses to 5 percent because of our vital role in preparing the North Carolina workforce. The president also is pushing for full flexibility in how we manage those cuts to protect the academic core.

We support the president's positions as the General Assembly prepares for the next steps in the state budget debate. We're hopeful that cuts to the UNC system ultimately will be minimized. But even so, we already know that what we at Carolina do - and how we do it - will be significantly affected.

Given the state's estimated $3.4 billion budget shortfall, it's not in the University's best interest to delay the tough decisions required in making cuts for next fiscal year. The longer we wait to enact inevitable cuts, the deeper the cuts likely would be. Earlier today, I instructed vice chancellors, deans, associate provosts, center and institute directors, and the director of the Area Health and Education Centers Program to make cuts for programs, operations and staffing equivalent to a 5 percent recurring state budget reduction to coincide with the start of the new fiscal year. Units must move forward now to carry out plans for a July 1 effective date. Regrettably, we know this means eliminating some positions of employees subject to and exempt from the State Personnel Act (SPA and EPA non-faculty).

Regarding faculty, I want to reiterate that we don't foresee circumstances that would lead to the elimination of tenured faculty, the canceling of fixed-term contracts in the middle of their terms, or alteration of tenure decisions based on budget concerns. And we have no plans to discharge tenure-track faculty because of the economy.

This fiscal year, all UNC campuses have made one-time budget reductions that total 7 percent of state appropriations - roughly $36 million at Carolina. All along, we've asked the vice chancellors and deans to do everything possible to reduce expenses before eliminating positions and laying off or terminating employees. I affirm that position today. But some units will find that job cuts are unavoidable because we face at least a 5 percent recurring state budget reduction that would total nearly $29 million.

Please understand that the timing reflects how long it will take managers and our human resources staff to work through state and University policies - which provide benefits to our affected employees - so the University can achieve cost savings beginning July 1.

Last month, I authorized Brenda Malone, associate vice chancellor for human resources, to create the Employee Assistance Fund to enhance the outplacement services we provide for people who have been laid off. We expect those services to be in place soon.

Many of you have advocated for temporary furloughs, which we still support if the General Assembly grants the UNC system that authority. But that decision isn't likely to come soon, and the resulting short-term savings wouldn't be sufficient to cover the University's state budget shortfall. People also ask why we can't use other funding sources since state dollars represent less than a quarter of our total budget. Those other funds - federal research grants for faculty research, tuition and fees, and private gifts, which generate endowment income - are restricted in how they can be used. Our endowment earnings, like those at other universities, have been negatively affected by the global economic downturn and are also a factor in our budget planning at the unit and campus levels.

When we posted redacted state budget cut scenarios on the Carolina Budget Information Web page, we said these were strictly for planning purposes and didn't reflect actual decisions. That's still true. Please don't assume that those scenarios are the basis for the next steps that I've announced today. Our vice chancellors and deans have continued to refine - or make wholesale changes - to those original scenarios. They have and will continue to communicate within the units about what their plans mean for schools and departments.

I understand the pain that this information will bring to people who have devoted themselves to this University, and I am sorry that we have to take this step. I ask for your support and patience as we navigate this economy, and I promise to keep you informed. I also encourage you to continue sharing any creative cost-cutting suggestions via e-mail at budgetideas@unc.edu.

Sincerely,

Holden Thorp

Hello Stacey,

I'm a student in the Department of I plan to take SWAH , the , this summer as part of I have received. I have Dr. Mutima's permission to attend the class. I am having a difficulty registering for the class and am hoping you can assist me. Can you please assist me in adding my name to the class or contacting the relevant person who can assist in this regard. I am unable to log onto the class registration page on my student central account. The registrar of my department could not locate this class on her system; hence she was unable to assist me either.

Any assistance in this regard would be greatly appreciated.

Thank you,

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Final Four Parking and Transportation

ATTENTION UNC STUDENTS, STAFF, AND FACULTY:

Beginning 3 p.m., Saturday, April 4, 2009, several campus parking lots will be affected by the Men's Basketball Final Four operations. Beginning as early as 9:45 p.m., several streets may be affected. Consequently, it is highly recommended that students, staff, and faculty take a few moments to familiarize themselves with the overall parking and transportation plan. Advance planning and preparation on the part of everyone will go a long way toward making the operations plan work better and toward making the evening as pleasant as possible.

If UNC advances to the final game on Monday, April 6, 2009, several campus parking lots will be affected as early 5:30 p.m. and streets may be affected as early as 9 p.m.

MEN'S FINAL 4 BASKETBALL OPERATIONS (and potentially the Final Championship Game):
All normal campus parking regulations will be in effect for Saturday, April 4, 2009 and Monday, April 6, 2009. Parking Control Officers and tow trucks will be on campus to enforce the parking and road restrictions. Per regulations, any vehicle parked in any kind of violation may be towed, so motorists are encouraged to park legally. Tow fees range from $90 to $110 and citations range from $20 to $250. All fees must be paid prior to release of any towed vehicle.

STREET CLOSURES:
Several of the downtown streets may close to vehicular traffic following the games should UNC win. They are: (1) Franklin Street - from Raleigh Street to Roberson Street; (2) Columbia Street - from Rosemary Street to Cameron Avenue; (3) Raleigh Street - from East Franklin to Cameron Avenue (for a shuttle bus stop); (4) Cameron Avenue from Raleigh Street to Columbia Street; and (5) Residential streets near downtown will be closed except to residents of those streets and their guests.

If streets are closed, valid campus permit holders will be allowed access to the parking lots along Cameron Avenue if a valid parking permit for those lots is displayed and shown to the officers working at the intersections.

RESTRICTED PARKING:
To accommodate the Town of Chapel Hill's plan, campus employees working on north campus, and campus residents, several lots will be restricted or closed the Saturday night of the National Semifinal game. If the Tar Heels advance to the Final game on Monday, April 6, the same restrictions will be put into place.

* Bynum Circle (Bynum Lot, Caldwell Lot and Steele Lot) - restricted for NG3 permit holders and night parking.

* Swain Lot--restricted to EMS and Police vehicles only after 3 p.m. on Saturday and 5 p.m. on Monday. NG1 permit holders will need to relocate from the lot by 4 p.m. on Saturday and 6 p.m. on Monday. to allow EMS & Police to set-up. Non-emergency vehicles remaining in the lot after the noted times will be towed at the owner's expense. Normal operations resume at 7:30 a.m. the following morning(s).

* Morehead Lot--restricted beginning 4 p.m. on Saturday and 6 p.m. on Monday. All vehicles remaining in the lot after the noted times will be towed at the owner's expense. Normal operations resume at 7:30 a.m. the following morning.

* International Relations (Coates Lot) --- restricted beginning 4 p.m. on Saturday and 6 p.m. on Monday. All vehicles remaining in the lot after the noted times will be towed at the owner's expense. Normal operations resume at 7:30 a.m. the following morning.

* Utility & Porthole Lots-- restricted beginning 4 p.m. on Saturday and 6 p.m. on Monday. All vehicles remaining in the lot after the noted times will be towed at the owner's expense. Normal operations resume at 7:30 a.m. the following morning.

* Park Place Lot--restricted to "N5" or "A" permit holders 7:30 a.m. Friday morning until 7:30 a.m. on Sunday morning and again from 7:30 a.m. on Monday morning until 5 p.m. on Tuesday. Vehicles without valid "N5 or A" permits will be cited and towed at the owner's expense.

* Public Safety Lot - Reserved for public safety operations staff and emergency vehicles only beginning 7:30 a.m. Saturday, April 4, 2009 until Sunday at 5 a.m. and Monday, April 6, 2009 from 7:30 a.m. until Tuesday, April 7th at 5:30 p.m..

SMITH CENTER PARKING:
The Bowles Lot, Business School Deck, Craige Deck, and Manning Lot are designated as public parking for patrons going to the Smith Center to view the Final 4 Semifinal game on Saturday and again for Monday, April 6, 2009, if the Tar Heel men should advance to the Final game. The Williamson Lot will be designated as disability parking. Parking will be $5.00.

POINT-TO-POINT SHUTTLE SERVICE:
The Point-to-Point Express campus shuttles will run during their normal hours during the Final 4. However, on Saturday night, April 4, the route will be modified due to the closing of portions of Raleigh Street, Franklin Street, and Columbia Street. Consequently, the P2P Express shuttles will run in the opposite direction (clockwise) than on all other nights. Also, rather than traveling on Rosemary and Franklin Streets, the route will travel east along Cameron Avenue before turning right onto Raleigh Street. It will also run counter-clockwise on Bowles Drive due to the parking operation in effect for the showing of the Semifinal game in the Smith Center.

P2P Express will NOT serve the following normal stops:
* Swain Hall
* Stops along Franklin or Rosemary Streets
* Stops along Raleigh Street north of Cameron Avenue
P2P WILL stop at the following stops during the Final Four operations only:
* Cameron Avenue across from the Old Well

Riders may experience delays at times throughout the evening due to increased traffic on campus and the anticipated higher than normal demand for service. Riders are asked to be patient, and head normal safety precautions throughout the evening as they wait for service. Additionally, riders should note the Town of Chapel Hill is prohibiting certain items from the Franklin Street area, so it is suggested riders not board the bus with the items the Town will prohibit. Town prohibited items include alcoholic beverages, glass bottles, fireworks and explosives and / or flammable substances, paint, weapons, and animals.

*Note: P2P will follow the plan listed above following Carolina wins in the Final Four Semifinal game on Saturday, April 4 and again on Monday, April 6, if UNC advances to the Final game.

GENERAL PARKING INFORMATION:
For more campus Final Four parking and transportation information (including P2P Express service), call (919) 962-3951, weekdays, 7:30 a.m. - 5:00 p.m. or visit the "Final Four Transportation and Parking" link from the UNC Department of Public Safety main homepage at:

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: UNC Behavioral Weight Control Program - Now Enrolling

On the Weight Rollercoaster and Want to Get Off?
"The Empowerment Solution for Permanent Weight Control"

NOW ENROLLING FOR SPRING. ONLY 5 SPOTS REMAINING.
GROUP DAY AND TIME: WEDNESDAYS 11:00 - 12:00.
LOCATION: UNC Hospitals.

Weight loss is a gradual process. Speedy diets may work in the short-run but typically do not result in long-term weight maintenance. Long-term behavioral weight control programs usually result in a weight loss of 1-2 pounds per week, depending on several factors (e.g., initial body weight, adhering to the lifestyle change).

Based on the evidence, the UNC Eating Disorders Program offers a 5-month (20-week) Behavioral Weight Control Program which incorporates the important behaviors associated with long-term weight control. This program focuses on BEHAVIORAL strategies for weight control and HEALTHY NUTRITION.

Groups contain 10-12 participants who meet for one-hour per week to learn several skills and strategies to produce a permanent lifestyle change. All groups are facilitated by Dr. Jennifer Shapiro, Clinical Assistant Professor and licensed clinical psychologist.
Topics include:

* Balanced diet
* Exercise
* Learning the relationship between mood and eating
* Restaurant eating
* Meal planning
* Managing cravings
* Mindful eating
* Identifying triggers and cues
* Handling obstacles
* Goal setting
* Time management
* Weight maintenance.

Enrollment includes:

* 20 one-hour weekly group sessions
* Two sessions facilitated by a registered dietitian
* Book: Runaway Eating by Cynthia M. Bulik, PhD and Nadine Taylor, MS, RD
* CD-ROM: "The Empowerment Solution for Permanent Weight Control"
* Program materials.

Fee:

* $440 includes the 20-week course and all enrollment materials (equates to $22 per session).
* $50 deposit (included in the $440 fee) to hold your place and full payment due at first meeting.
* The UNC Health Care Flexible Spending account may be used with a letter from your physician. Check with your insurance company to determine if you could receive reimbursement for this course.

Contact Information:

To receive more information, please contact Dr. Jennifer Shapiro, Clinical Assistant Professor at 919-966-5262 or JShapiro@med.unc.edu.

Check with your physician before starting any weight control program.

Subject: [asc_faculty] Religion, Culture and Politics -- Talk by Fatou Sow

---

Hello Everyone,

As I'm sure you're aware, the African Studies Center is hosting a conference this week:

Gender, Islam, and Health in Africa
Thursday, April 16, 2009 - Saturday, April 18, 2009
Fedex Global Education Center, UNC-Chapel Hill

Funded through Title VI and more than 10 departments, colleges, and centers at UNC, this conference will assemble scholars and activists from the U.S. and Africa to participate in panels that will explore four different venues of public engagement for African Muslim women: literature, health, law, and politics. If you would like to attend the conference and have not already done so, please register by either emailing me or visiting or online registration site (link below)

We hope you will encourage your students to attend the keynote address, which is open to the public and will be given by Fatou Sow, head of the international coordination office of the Network of Women Living under Muslim Laws. Her talk, "Religion, Culture and Politics: Isn't My Body Mine?" will be given Thursday, April 16, 5:30 pm in the Nelson Mandela Auditorium, with a public reception to follow. Students are invited to attend both the talk and the reception, and we are looking forward to an interesting event. Dr. Sow's talk will deal with religion and culture, and the experience of African women under Muslim law. Dr. Sow has held faculty positions at University Paris Diderot and University Chiekh Anta Diop in Dakar, Senegal. She is currently a researcher at Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique (CNRS) in Paris and head of the international coordination office of the Network of Women Living under Muslim Laws.

More Information and Conference Registration Please Note: Registration is only required when attending the panel sessions - no registration is needed to attend the keynote. Co-sponsors include: African Studies Center, Department of African and Afro-American Studies, College of Arts and Sciences, Center for Global Initiatives, Women's Studies, Curriculum in International Studies, Asian Studies, Institute for African American Research, Odum Institute, Office of Diversity and Minority Affairs, and the Carolina Women's Center. Free. Please Contact: Barbara Anderson b_anderson@unc.edu for more information.

Subject: Faculty Elections Ballot 2009

Dear Colleague,

Welcome to the 2009 UNC-Chapel Hill faculty elections. This message is being sent to you because you are a member of the UNC Voting Faculty. The annual faculty elections are one of the best ways for you to influence policy on a host of issues affecting the university's core teaching, research, and service missions. This year's elections are especially important as we will choose a new Chair of the Faculty.

Please take a few minutes to cast your ballot. Complete instructions for voting follow below.

Balloting opens today and will close on Monday, April 20, 2009 at 5:00 p.m. To be sure that your ballot is tabulated, please observe the deadline.

Instructions:

1. PREPARING TO VOTE. The Faculty Governance office has set up two web pages to help you prepare for voting:

A short sample ballot, which shows all candidates for all positions, in an easy-to-read list: (http://www.unc.edu/faculty/faccoun/Elections/2009/2009voterguideshort.shtml)

A full voter information guide, which includes credential information for all candidates, links to departmental or personal web pages for those who have one, and statements from all candidates who chose to submit one: (http://www.unc.edu/faculty/faccoun/Elections/2009/2009voterguidefull.shtml),

Once you enter the official ballot site (via a third and separate link provided at the end of this email), it may be difficult to return to either the sample ballot or the voter information guide. Therefore, I suggest that you print the short sample ballot, and then browse the full voter information guide for more information about the candidates. Mark the sample ballot with your choices and refer to it as you complete your official electronic ballot.

2. TO ENTER THE OFFICIAL BALLOT SITE: Please click the link below and then enter the Ballot ID Number listed under the link to access the ballots. The ID number is unique to you and may be used only once.

The positions for which you are eligible to vote will appear in a series. You may vote for fewer than the number of positions to be filled. Finish voting for one position before you continue to the next one. If your browser supports paging back and forward and you have not yet clicked the Submit button, you can return to any page. If you change your vote on a position, please use the Continue button at the bottom of that page to record your change.

You will not be able to change any of your votes once you have clicked the Submit button.

Link to the Official Ballot Site:

http://ir.unc.edu/facultyelections/facultyballot09.htm

Ballot ID Number: 577454848

If you have any problems accessing the ballot site, please reply to this email address for assistance. Thank you for helping keep faculty governance strong at UNC!

Attach: Fall 2009 Textbook Submission Report April 13 2009.xls; Guaranteed Buyback Report.doc

Dear Chair and department Liaison,

Here is an update on the progress for Fall 2009 percentage of on-time adoptions of textbooks and/or notification of No Text Needed for UNC Chapel Hill. As well as the current list of courses participating in Guaranteed Buyback.
Attached are the two reports reflecting submissions made to Student Stores through 4/13/2009.

Guaranteed Buyback report reflects large introductory courses and their notification to Student Stores regarding the Guaranteed Buyback Program. We continue to encourage and accept Guaranteed Buyback textbook commitment forms from UNC Chapel Hill departments. Please note that several of the large introductory courses' previous commitment periods have expired. Please let me know if your department wishes to renew participation in the Guaranteed Buyback Program.

Fall 2009 Textbook Submission Report lists the percentage of course submissions and/or No Text Needed notification to Student Stores. As well as additional worksheets listing each department's courses which have not placed an order or notified Student Stores that no text is needed. Please review your department's course worksheet indicated on the bottom tab of the excel report. Please let us know if any changes need to be made. G.A's due date is April 27, 2009.

To date, we have received 41.8% of Fall 2009 course submissions.

I will be out of the office until April 20th. Please send questions, updates to our Textbook Buyers (copied above) George Morgan or Frank Bellamy.

Quick summary review:
As required in the BOG recommendations, tuition and fee requests must also include submission stating the percentage of on-time adoptions of textbooks. The Board of Governor's is requiring all stores affiliated with the sixteen North Carolina campuses to submit a report on the percentage of on-time adoptions of textbooks for their campus.
General Administration Board of Governors Textbook Requirements Summary:
All campuses must have a guaranteed buyback or rental program for required textbooks for large, introductory classes for the Spring 2008 semester.
. This option must be available in addition to traditional purchase option.

. "Campuses must offer this option for introductory texts that are hardcover and will withstand a two to three year adoption cycle."

. "Campuses must make an effort to implement this system for courses that are introductory level and taken by a relatively high percentage of students."

. "A response to this recommendation must also be reported to the VP for Finance in any future requests for increases in tuition and fees."

Best,

Kelly

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Faculty Elections: Vote This Week!

Dear Faculty Colleagues,

The annual faculty elections will be conducted during the week of April 13-20 via an electronic survey that will be emailed to all members of the Voting Faculty. A highlight of this year's elections will be selection of a new Chair of the Faculty to succeed Joe Templeton, whose term ends June 30. The candidates for Chair of the Faculty are McKay Coble, Professor of Design and Chair of the Department of Dramatic Art; and Arne Kalleberg, Kenan Distinguished Professor of Sociology. The winner will serve three years in this post.

Faculty-wide elections will also be held for positions on the eleven elected faculty standing committees, while voters will also select Faculty Council representatives from their respective divisions.

We have a strong tradition of shared governance here at UNC, starting with faculty involvement in decision-making at the departmental and school level. The leaders that will be elected help the faculty's voice be heard in decision-making at the university level.

Complete information about the elections, including a sample ballot, links to a Q&A with the candidates for Faculty Chair, and a voter guide with personal statements from most of the candidates for other offices, may be found online at the elections page of the Faculty Governance website: http://www.unc.edu/faculty/faccoun/Elections/2009/index.shtml.

Voting-eligible faculty includes all tenured and tenure-track faculty, professional librarians, as well as fixed-term faculty whose terms of appointment meet certain criteria spelled out in Article 1 of the Faculty Code of University Government (see http://www.unc.edu/faculty/faccoun/code/code2008.shtml#article1).

Last year, 800 of 3294 distributed ballots were returned, for a "turnout" rate of 23%. This year we'd like to see turnout go way up! We encourage you to consider the issues and positions expressed. Your vote counts!

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Call for Proposals - C. Felix Harvey Award to Advance Institutional Priorities

The C. Felix Harvey Award to Advance Institutional Priorities 2009: Applied Innovation of Scholarly Expertise in the Humanities and Social Sciences
REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS
Deadline: September 25, 2009

Purpose: Each year, the C. Felix Harvey Award to Advance Institutional Priorities seeks to recognize exemplary faculty scholarship that reflects one of the University's top priorities. For the 2009 competition (with a 2010-2011 project period), the $75,000 award is again focused on engagement and outreach. Complete project description and application guidelines are available at http://giving.unc.edu/harvey/ or the C. Felix Harvey Award link at http://provost.unc.edu/. If you have questions, please contact Mark Meares, Director of Corporate and Foundation Relations for Academic Affairs at 962.3420 or mark_meares@unc.edu.

The C. Felix Harvey Award will be given to the faculty member or members whose project proposal best reflects "Applied Innovation of Scholarly Expertise in the Humanities and Social Sciences" through the creative and substantive application of faculty scholarship to serve constituencies outside the University. To provide broad consideration across the eligible disciplines, projects should focus on at least one of the following themes:

Technology
Economic Development
Arts and Culture
Improvement of K-12 Public Education

Award: One award of $75,000 will be given to support a project of up to 15 months that may commence as early as June 1, 2010, and must conclude by August 31, 2011.

Eligibility: All UNC Chapel Hill full or part-time faculty (excluding adjuncts) in the humanities and social sciences are eligible to apply.

Award Criteria: Proposed projects in the 2009 award cycle will be judged primarily on four factors that define the Applied Innovation of Scholarly Expertise:

Creativity: the degree to which the project exhibits the inventive application of scholarship beyond the traditional boundaries of its discipline.

Collaboration: the degree to which the project involves faculty and students across disciplines within the university and with community stakeholders outside the university.

Applicability to Real-World Challenges: the degree to which the project addresses present day challenges facing constituencies outside of the university.

Sustainability and/ or Degree of Adoption: the likelihood that the engaged scholarship will have a continued presence or impact outside of the university.

Application Requirements: Please submit the attached one-page award application and a brief project narrative (maximum of 3 pages) and budget (maximum of 1 page) in accordance with the application guidelines below.

Deadline: Each award application, narrative and budget must be submitted electronically (PDF format or MSWord) to HarveyAward@unc.edu by September 25, 2009. Applications will be reviewed by the Harvey Awards Committee, consisting of the Chancellor, the Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost, the Vice Chancellor for University Advancement, the Senior Associate Vice Chancellor for Development, and two members of the Harvey family. Three finalists will be selected to make presentations to the Committee in November, and outcomes will be communicated no later than December 1, 2009.

Project Reporting: Recipients of the C. Felix Harvey Award to Advance Institutional Priorities must submit a final narrative and financial report to the Harvey Awards Committee within three months of the conclusion of the project.

Restrictions: Award funds cannot be used to support research that is solely academic in nature, curriculum development, special events or speaker series, or surveys.

The enclosed message from Dean Carney is being sent to all faculty and staff in the College of Arts and Sciences.

To: College of Arts & Science Faculty and Staff
From: Bruce W. Carney, Interim Dean
Re: Budget Cuts and Lay-Offs

In a time of budget reversions and looming permanent cuts to our state budget, all of us are understandably anxious about what the future holds. As promised, I am writing to share the latest information we have about budget cuts and how they are affecting faculty and staff in the College.

We have already suspended 30 searches for new College faculty in anticipation of permanent state budget cuts for 2009-2010. This has "saved" our future budget about one-third to one-quarter of the expected dollar amount of the cuts. However, these savings alone are not enough to absorb the anticipated reductions to our permanent state budget.

We have tried to minimize other cuts to instructional budgets, which pay salaries for some fixed-term faculty and stipends for many graduate students, who play a direct role in fulfilling our primary mission: the instruction of our undergraduates.

Now we are following the Chancellor's requirement to begin implementing a 5% permanent reduction to our state budget. In order to meet our instructional obligations, this has necessitated budget cuts exceeding 5% in some areas. Some of these cuts affect staff members who are also vital to our academic mission.

After consultation with selected chairs, we have determined that some staff lay-offs are necessary. At this time we expect to lay off approximately 20 staff members in the College; with few exceptions, most have already been informed. We have also decided to eliminate about five to ten vacant staff positions.

These unfortunate cuts directly affect valuable employees, including some who have been working here for many years. Their loss indirectly affects all of us as we strive to fulfill our academic mission with fewer staff and faculty.

We believe that the current lay-offs will enable the College to satisfy the 5% budget cut. However, the total cut to the College will not be known for several months. In the meantime, news coverage may include a range of confusing possibilities, none of them certain until the General Assembly approves the budget later this year. And if there are ongoing shortfalls to the state's budget, we expect that further "one-time" cuts will be required. Let us all hope for the best for the state's economy and its employees.

If you have any questions about budget cuts in your department and how they may affect your responsibilities, please contact your department chair. We will continue to keep you informed about the overall College budget by sharing any new information as soon as we are able.

Thank you again for your patience and cooperation in these difficult times.

The enclosed message from the Institute for the Arts and Humanities is being sent to all faculty in the College of Arts and Sciences, with a copy to administrative managers.

The INSTITUTE for the ARTS and HUMANITIES is pleased to announce:

FACULTY FELLOWSHIPS 2010-2011

The Institute for the Arts and Humanities is offering UNC-Chapel Hill faculty members a unique opportunity: a semester-long, on-campus fellowship to work on projects for publication, exhibition, composition or performance.

The fellowship centers on a weekly three-hour seminar at Hyde Hall where Fellows exchange ideas with eight to 12 peers from various disciplines. Faculty may apply for either the fall or spring semester. Faculty who previously held any fellowship at the IAH may apply again, but only in the fifth year after any previous fellowship at the Institute for the Arts and Humanities.

Two fellowships are available: IAH Faculty Fellowships and Chapman Family Faculty Fellowships.

Faculty may apply for only one of the two available fellowships.

I. IAH Faculty Fellowships

Projects: Proposals should be related in some vital way to the arts, humanities or social sciences. Joint proposals from two faculty members are also acceptable.

Eligibility: We encourage applications from faculty at all ranks in tenure-track or tenured positions. Tenured or tenure-track faculty may apply as early as their second year at UNC-Chapel Hill. In each group of Fellows we seek a blend of ranks and disciplines. We may also take into account applicants' leaves of absence for research during the three years prior to the IAH fellowship. Applicants require endorsement from their department chairs.

Deadline for IAH Applications:

Wednesday, September 23, 2009 at noon

II. Chapman Family Faculty Fellowships for outstanding teachers who regularly teach undergraduate students

Projects: The IAH is interested in a variety of projects: outreach, internships or fieldwork related to your teaching or research; a reading program to revitalize a field of your teaching; research; or performance or exhibition in the fine arts. The Chapman Family Faculty Fellowship includes a stipend of $5,000 that the Fellow may use to support teaching, research and service activities.

Eligibility: Applicants must have been at UNC-CH for at least three full years of teaching, long enough to establish a record of distinguished teaching at UNC-CH. Faculty in all units of the University may apply for a Chapman Fellowship if they regularly teach undergraduate courses. In addition to project proposals, Chapman applicants must submit supporting materials about their teaching and may be interviewed and/or observed (with advance notification) by members of the selection committee.

Deadline for Chapman Applications:
Wednesday, October 21, 2009 at noon

Fellows must attend weekly seminar meetings during the semester of their leave. IAH Faculty Fellowships are a key part of the College of Arts and Sciences' efforts to retain the best faculty at Carolina.

Applications are now available at Hyde Hall. To request an application by phone, call Martha Marks at 843-2651.

For more information about our fellowships or programs, feel free to talk with IAH Director John McGowan (jpm@email.unc.edu or 962-6831), Executive Director Megan Granda (mgranda@unc.edu or 843-2653), or staff at Hyde Hall. You can also visit our Web site: iah.unc.edu.

MEMORANDUM
TO: Summer School Faculty
FROM: Bernadette Gray-Little
Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost
DATE: April, 2009
SUBJECT: Summary of Procedures Pertaining to Faculty Responsibilities and Final Exams – Summer School Courses 2009

1. ORGANIZATION: Faculty should announce course requirements, including quizzes and written papers, to students at the beginning of the session and should distribute them as part of every course syllabus. Students should not be given unexpected assignments during the final week of a session, especially if the assignments involve lengthy research papers or large amounts of new reading. During the last two days of classes, do not give quizzes or written assignments that are not a part of or the equivalent to a current daily recitation period.

2. CALENDAR: Summer class meetings are not to be cancelled. Each class in this concentrated calendar is required to provide students the total contact hours specified for credit courses.

3. HONOR CODE: Please familiarize yourself with the expedited processes and provisions of the Honor Code (http://instrument.unc.edu). Also, you are expected to help improve awareness and compliance of the Honor Code among your students. One way is to convey a clear message of high expectations by including a statement similar to the following in your syllabi.

"The Honor Code is in effect in this class and all others at the University. I am committed to treating Honor Code violations seriously and urge all students to become familiar with its terms (http://instrument.unc.edu). If you have questions, it is your responsibility to ask me about the Code's application. All exams, written work, and other projects must be submitted with a statement that you have complied with the requirements of the Honor Code on all aspects of the submitted work."

4. FINAL EXAMINATION:

Undergraduate courses taught on campus must include a final examination unless the provost grants an exception. A traditional final examination is written. Only the provost can grant exceptions to the scheduled time and location of a traditional examination after review and approval of the appropriate department head and the dean.

The final examination schedule is posted on the Registrar central web sites and at summer.unc.edu/quickreference/schedule. Examinations must be held at the time shown on the schedule. Final examinations for a full course should ordinarily cover a minimum of two hours and should not exceed a period of three hours.

Students should not be encouraged to believe that they will be granted earlier examination times.

An instructor may, due to highly unusual circumstances, petition for a change in the examination schedule. The petition should be made before the third class day of the summer session and, if approved, announced to students at least three weeks before the first day of final examinations. The petition must be cleared by the department head and the appropriate dean before consideration by the provost. The change could be made only to one of the other exam periods in the schedule. Such changes will be granted only under the most extenuating circumstances. Departmental chairs must give permission for faculty to use nontraditional examinations, such as a portfolio of a semester's work or a take-home examination. Assignments that are a part of the final examination should be clearly announced in the course syllabus and should be due on the scheduled date of the examination.

5. GRADES: Please submit course grades to the University Registrar within 72 hours of the completion of an examination and keep your course records for at least one year. If you leave the University, give your course records to your department chair and provide an address where you can be reached if questions should arise.

6. EVALUATION: It is recommended that each summer course for undergraduates include a student evaluation. The survey instrument, its distribution, and reporting are responsibilities of each respective School or College unit.

CONTEMPORARY AFRICAN AMERICAN FICTION & FILM: STUDIES IN TRANSTEXTUALITY

MAYMESTER 2009: ENGL 124 (Mae Henderson)

This course will examine contemporary African American fiction and film, focusing particularly on the issues of genre and "transtextuality" (translating literary texts into cinematic texts). Although our primary focus will be on the novel, we will consider what happens when the verbal narrative is adapted into a visual medium. We will consider the structures, techniques, limitations and possibilities of fiction and film as distinct genres, along with how the (Hollywood) film system (re)shapes novelistic construction and meaning in the process of adaptation from a print to a visual medium. Because no text can be understood in a cultural vacuum, we will historicize both literary and filmic texts by situating production and consumption in relation to cultural and historical contexts. Our aim is to explore the significance of these texts as they reinscribe and challenge contemporary social, sexual, gender, and racial structures. And although this is not, strictly speaking, either a course on adaptation theory or film studies, we will begin to develop a general familiarity with the concepts, grammar, and syntax of film theory and criticism. Our course objective is to develop skills in close reading, cultural criticism, and an enjoyment of what the great French critic Roland Barthes calls "le plaisir du texte."

Coble elected Chair of the Faculty

McKay Coble, Professor of Design and Chair of the Department of Dramatic Art, was elected Chair of the Faculty in the annual faculty elections, which concluded Monday afternoon, April 20. She will take office July 1st, succeeding current Chair Joe Templeton. Nine hundred and twenty-five faculty members voted in the elections this year, up from 800 last year. This represented a turnout rate of 26%. Complete election results for Faculty Council seats and all other faculty committees will be announced Friday at the Faculty Council meeting and posted to the Faculty Governance website immediately afterward.

Faculty Council and General Faculty will meet Friday, April 24

The final Faculty Council meeting of the year will take place tomorrow (Friday, April 24) at 3 p.m. in the Multipurpose Room of the Sonja Haynes Stone Center for Black Culture and History. This meeting is also a meeting of the General Faculty, which convenes with the Faculty Council once each semester. All faculty members are invited to attend.

The packed agenda will include a presentation by representatives from Bain & Company about the study they are currently conducting of university operations. Also on tap is discussion of a draft report from the Provost's Task Force on Future Promotion and Tenure Policies and Practices, chaired by Prof. Jane Brown. Other agenda items include annual reports of the Faculty Committee on Research and the Faculty Council Committee on Fixed-Term Faculty.

The complete agenda, including links to all reports, is now online here: http://www.unc.edu/faculty/faccoun/agendas/2008-09/A09FC04.shtml.

Minutes for the March 20 meeting are now online at

Faculty invited to participate in Commencement Weekend events, May 9-10; Inclement Weather Ticket must be obtained in advance

The schedule of events for Commencement Weekend 2009 has been set.

The Doctoral Hooding ceremony will be held May 9 at 10 a.m. in the Dean Smith Center. Dr. Adron Harris, professor at the University of Texas in Austin, will be the guest speaker. Non-hooding faculty members should assemble in the Press Room at the Smith by 9:30 a.m., for the processional.

University Commencement will be held May 10 at 9:30 a.m. in Kenan Stadium. This year's speaker is Archbishop Emeritus Desmond M. Tutu, winner of the Nobel Peace Prize and renowned South African anti-apartheid campaigner. Faculty are asked to gather at the old Kenan Field House at 9 a.m. Faculty Marshal Trudier Harris will lead the faculty processional. Parking will be available in the Craige Deck. New this year is the need to obtain, in advance, an Inclement Weather Ticket to admit you to the Smith Center in the event of rain. Contact David Thompson in the Faculty Governance Office to request your ticket. He can be reached at dthomps3@email.unc.edu or at 962-2147.

Full information for faculty about commencement may be found here.

State funds spending freeze now in place

Updated Emergency Budget Guidelines for the University were announced Tuesday, April 21. The new guidelines elaborate tight restrictions on the expenditure of state funds in four areas: personnel expenses; travel expenses; other non-personnel expenses; and capital expenses. With regard to "other non-personnel expenses," for example, the guidelines prescribe that "departments are not allowed to pay for office supplies (e.g. legal pads, pens/pencils, paper clips), cleaning supplies or similar supply type items from state funds unless the entire campus is completely out of supplies." To read the guidelines, visit http://universityrelations.unc.edu/budget/documents/2009/Emergency%20Budget%20Guidelines-Amended.pdf.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Carolina Family Scholarship application

Dear Carolina Faculty and Staff,

The UNC-Chapel Hill Family Scholarship committee is pleased to announce that Fall 2009 scholarship applications for children of UNC-Chapel Hill employees are now being accepted. For more information about the scholarship, see http://gazette.unc.edu/archives/09apr01/fundraising.html

PLEASE NOTE: The application deadline is May 15th, 2009.

This need-based scholarship fund was created by Carolina employees to provide financial support to the children of our full-time colleagues to attend ANY of the 16 UNC campuses as well as any of the accredited community and technical colleges in North Carolina.

Additional information about this program, including how to apply for the scholarship, is available at www.unc.edu/familyfund on the web.

Please note: Applicants must file the necessary financial aid forms with the institution they wish to attend and notify the Office of Scholarships and Student Aid at UNC-Chapel Hill with the contact information for that institution's financial aid office, as well as provide a detailed summary of the financial aid package offered by that institution.

Want to help children of Carolina employees go to college? Check out www.unc.edu/familyfund to arrange for a $1 (or more) weekly tax-deductible payroll deduction or a one-time donation.

The UNC-Chapel Hill Family Scholarship Fund committee offers their sincere thanks for your support and welcomes your suggestions.

Respectfully,

UNC-Chapel Hill Family Scholarship Fund committee

TO: Members of the Faculty

FROM: Bernadette Gray-Little, Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost

DATE: April 23, 2009

SUBJECT: Director of the Center for Faculty Excellence

I am very pleased to announce that Ruth Walden, the James Howard and Hallie McLean Parker Distinguished Professor of Journalism and Mass Communication, will become director of the Center for Faculty Excellence beginning July 1.

The center was created last summer to provide the academic support necessary to promote faculty development in the key areas of teaching, research and leadership. Dr. Walden, a longtime Carolina faculty member, is an accomplished scholar with an in-depth understanding of the issues related to enhancing success for faculty members in their various roles.

As she provides leadership for the center, Dr. Walden will continue to teach and conduct research in mass communication law and First Amendment theory. She serves on the editorial boards of "Communication Law and Policy" and "Journalism and Mass Communication Quarterly" and is the author of "Insult Laws: An Insult to Press Freedom," a worldwide study commissioned by the World Press Freedom Committee.

Both within the School of Journalism and Mass Communication and in the broader University community, Dr. Walden has been recognized for outstanding teaching. She has worked extensively with graduate education and tailored an existing pedagogy class designed to help graduate students prepare for academic careers. Dr. Walden has served on several advisory committees for the Graduate School, and within the journalism school she has been coordinator of the master's and doctoral programs, and director and associate dean of graduate studies.

Throughout her tenure, Dr. Walden has served the University community on multiple levels. As the current chair of the University Committee on Appointment, Promotion and Tenure, she is widely respected by colleagues and is regarded as an excellent role model and mentor.

We are fortunate to have someone of Dr. Walden's stature agree to lead the next phase of the Center for Faculty Excellence. Until Dr. Walden assumes her role, the center will be led by Dr. Todd Zakrajsek, who was appointed executive director last August. Dr. Zakrajsek came to Carolina from Central Michigan University, where he was the inaugural director of the Faculty Center for Innovative Teaching from 2001 to 2008.

Under the leadership of Dr. Walden, and with the strong support of Dr. Zakrajsek, the Center for Faculty Excellence is well positioned to contribute to the development of faculty members, both in directing them to appropriate existing resources and creating new or expanded opportunities to meet their needs.

The Environmental Protection Agency (on the UNC campus) and the UNC Center for Environmental Medicine, Asthma and Lung Biology are seeking individuals ages 18 to 50 with mild asthma. The purpose of this research study is to learn if volunteers who have asthma and have a particular genotype, known as the GSTM1 null genotype, have increased response to ozone compared to volunteers with asthma who have the GSTMI sufficient genotype. Volunteers will be studied for six days, approximately 18 hours, over about 1 month. Following screening and training sessions, there will be one 3-day study session and a brief follow up visit 5 to 10 days later. Experiments will involve breathing tests, light exercise, blood samples, sputum induction, genetic testing and exposure to ozone. For more information, please call Westat EPA Recruiting at 966-0604. Subject: [african-and-afro-american-studies-faculty] [all-college-faculty] College Annual Report/Info Due May 15

This message is being sent to all faculty in the College of Arts and Sciences with a copy to unit chairs/directors and administrative managers

The College Annual report system is now open for faculty to summarize their activities and accomplishments.

https://apps.college.unc.edu/cocoon/oasis-apps/car/login.xml

All faculty in the College of Arts and Sciences are required to prepare for their department or curricula an annual report of some of your activities and accomplishments for the period 1 May 2008 to 30 April 2009. These reports are used for a variety of assessment and evaluation purposes within your units, but they are also an important component of the units' required report to the College of Arts and Sciences. The deadline for completing your report for this year is May 15, 2009.

You may also be prompted to complete a tab labeled "Stewardship." This section is included if you have received funding from private sources.

The Arts and Sciences Foundation produces letters to donors on the use of these funds. These reports benefit your department and the College of Arts and Sciences in future fund-raising efforts.

If you have questions about the Stewardship section, please contact one of the following staff members at the Arts & Sciences Foundation: Del Helton, del.helton@unc.edu, 962-8216, Jim Magaw, jim.magaw@unc.edu, 962-6123, or Joanna Worrell, joanna.worrell@unc.edu, 962-8342.

Please note that your contributions last spring helped the Arts and Sciences Foundation produce nearly 600 letters to our generous College donors. This annual "stewardship report" explains how the fund was used and includes information about the fund's investment performance. Donors often respond with a thank-you note in appreciation.

We very much appreciate your assistance with another round of outstanding stewardship letters.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR ACCESSING THE ANNUAL REPORT SYSTEM AND STEWARDSHIP

1) https://apps.college.unc.edu/cocoon/oasis-apps/car/login.xml

2) You can access the Carolina First system through a tab on the Annual Report.

*The system also allows access to previous years' responses.

YOUR ONYEN

Website:

http://onyen.unc.edu

Your ONYEN is the first part of your email address, e.g. for an email address of jdoe@email.unc.edu your ONYEN is "jdoe" without the quotes.

If you lose or forget your ONYEN password, you can get a new one by taking your UNC One Card (or another picture ID) to IT Response Center at Wilson Library suite 300. It is not possible to recover your old password. For security reasons, you can get a new password only with a picture ID.

If you have forgotten your ONYEN you may look it up by selecting the "Forgotten Onyen" button and supplying your last name and your PID.

ANNUAL REPORT ASSISTANCE

If you require additional help or have problems accessing or using the web site, please submit a Remedy Ticket to OASIS. Website:

http://oasis.unc.edu/remedy

Policy questions should be directed first to your unit Chair/Director or Administrative Manager, followed by the Dean's Office.

Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: Furlough Program Announcement

Dear Staff and Faculty:

Earlier today, Governor Perdue announced a new flexible furlough program for state employees as part of her strategy to balance the state budget by the end of the fiscal year, which ends June 30, 2009. We do not know the details about how this program will be implemented for University employees.

For now, we have posted the governor's executive order and an accompanying memorandum from the North Carolina Office of State Budget and Management to the Carolina Budget Information Web site, accessible from www.unc.edu. As soon as we have additional details we will share them.

Sincerely,

Brenda Malone
Associate Vice Chancellor for Human Resources

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: TO UNC RESEARCHERS WHO USE HUMAN GENETIC SPECIMENS

A message from Terry Magnuson
Director, Carolina Center for Genome Sciences and Chair, Department of Genetics

I am writing to request your participation in a 16-question, anonymous survey on research using human genetic specimens at UNC. It is being conducted by the UNC Center for Genomics and Society (http://genomics.unc.edu/genomicsandsociety/), which is part of the Carolina Center for Genome Sciences.

Your participation will support an important effort to understand the defining characteristics of genetic specimen collections. I am making a special request for 10 minutes of your time. Please do not delete this message, and when you have a moment, complete this brief survey using the link below.

This study has been reviewed and approved by the University of North Carolina IRB, Study #08-1800.

If you have trouble accessing the survey by clicking on the link, please copy and paste the complete URL into your Internet browser address bar and hit enter.

Contact us at cgs@unc.edu if you have any questions or trouble accessing the survey.

Detailed information about this survey and our research appears below:

Survey on the Use of Human Genetic Specimens in Research

What am I being asked to do?
You are being asked to participate in a research study regarding the acquisition, use, and management of human genetic specimens and related data. The web-based survey contains general questions about the collection, use, and maintenance of specimens in your research. It will take about 10 minutes to complete. Participation is voluntary and anonymous. However, you can choose to give us your contact information at the end of the survey, making your participation confidential rather than anonymous. Contact information is kept secure and separate, only used to contact you about related studies.

Why is this study important?
While there is a growing body of literature concerned with the growth and governance of human genetic specimen collections used for research, little is known about their defining features. This survey is part of a larger project examining these features to create a typology of such collections.

What are the possible benefits to participating in this study?
You will not personally benefit from participation, but your responses will help provide new knowledge on the full range of characteristics associated with human genetic specimens and associated data.

What are the possible risks from being involved in this study?
If you complete this survey anonymously, no risks are associated with participation. If you choose to give us your contact information, your participation and your individual survey responses will be kept confidential. Study results will be reported in the aggregate. Hence, there are no risks associated with participation in this case either

How will my privacy be protected?
If you provide any personal information, it will be kept separate and secure in a protected file available only to members of the research team.

Will I be compensated for my participation?
No.

Will it cost anything for me to participate?
No.

What if I have additional questions about this study?
Please contact the Principal Investigator with any questions:

Has this study been reviewed by an Institutional Review Board (IRB)?
This study has been reviewed and approved by the University of North Carolina IRB, Study #08-1800 If you have questions or concerns about your rights as a research subject you may contact the UNC Institutional Review Board at (919) 966-3113, or by e-mail at IRB_subjects@unc.edu.

Who has provided funding for this study?
Funding is provided by UNC's Center for Genomics and Society (http://genomics.unc.edu/genomicsandsociety/) which is supported by the ELSI Research Program of the National Human Genome Research Institute of the National Institutes of Health.

Une autre chose. Comme vous le savez probablement déjà, les bureaux vont être remodelés pour installer un nouveau système d'air dans le plafond. Selon le programme, les travaux vont commencer ce VENDREDI, 8 mai, et les techniciens commenceront les travaux au troisième étage (notre étage). Il faut donc préparer le bureau. Les techniciens veulent que chacun de nous enlève les choses qui se trouvent SUR nos bureaux (ordinateur, imprimante, etc.) et SUR nos étagères (en haut) (livres, etc.). Les autres choses peuvent rester en place.
À bientôt.

Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: State Health Plan Annual Enrollment

TO: All Employees

FROM: Brian Usischon, Senior Director, Benefits Services
Office of Human Resources

The State Health Plan has announced that the annual enrollment for health care plan changes will run now through May 29, 2009. During this enrollment period, employees can change plans, or choose to add, change or drop coverage for their spouse and/or dependent(s). Changes made during the annual enrollment will be effective July 1, 2009.

Enrollment kits are currently being mailed to employees; however, given the shortened time frame for this enrollment, we encourage you to access the Enrollment Kit online. Here's a link to the kit:
http://www.shpnc.org/pdf/hbr-ae-non-beacon-retirees-schools-kit.pdf

Here are the highlights of the changes for the 2009 State Health Plan annual enrollment:

Benefit Changes (effective July 1, 2009, unless otherwise noted)

-- The PPO Plus (90/10) plan will no longer be offered.

-- Deductibles, copays, and the coinsurance out-of-pocket maximums will increase under both the PPO Basic (70/30) Plan and the PPO Standard (80/20) Plan. Please refer to the Benefit Changes chart at http://hr.unc.edu/Data/benefits/health-dental/09shpenroll/09-shp-changes.pdf for details.

-- Routine vision exams will no longer be covered as of Jan. 1, 2010.

Prescription Drug Changes (effective July 1, 2009)

-- The days supply for one copayment will change from 34 days to 30 days.

-- Generic drug copay will remain at $10.

-- Diabetic supply copay will remain at $10 for preferred brand and $25 for non-preferred brand.

-- Preferred brand copay (without a generic available) will increase to $35.

-- Non-preferred brand copay will increase to $55.

-- Specialty Drug Copays - a coinsurance of 25 percent will be charged for specialty prescription drugs up to $100 for each 30-day supply. Members currently taking a specialty medication will receive additional information in the mail from the State Health Plan.

-- The preferred brand copay tier (with generic available) will be eliminated effective July 1, 2009.

-- Please note: If a generic equivalent is available and a member chooses to have the brand name drug, or their doctor prescribes "Dispense as Written" (DAW), you will be required to pay the difference between the actual cost of the brand name drug and the amount the Plan would have paid for the generic equivalent, in addition to the generic copayment.

Rates

-- On July 1, 2009, there will be an 8.9 percent increase on all coverage tiers. Since premiums are paid one month in advance of coverage, you will actually see the premium increase for dependent coverage in your June 2009 paychecks. See the rate chart at http://hr.unc.edu/Data/benefits/health-dental/09shpenroll/SHP_Rates_2009-2010.pdf.

-- On July 1, 2010, there will be another 8.9 percent increase on all coverage tiers. Since premiums are paid one month in advance of coverage, you will actually see the premium increase for dependent coverage in your June 2010 paychecks. Rates will be published in 2010.

 Enrollment

-- The PPO Plus (90/10) Plan will no longer be available effective July 1, 2009. Employees currently enrolled in the PPO Plus Plan will automatically be enrolled in the PPO Standard (80/20) Plan. If you are enrolled in the PPO Plus Plan, you DO NOT need to complete a State Health Plan enrollment form, unless you are adding/removing dependents from your plan or you wish to change to the PPO Basic (70/30) Plan. Employees who have employee-only coverage under the PPO Plus Plan and are moved to the PPO Standard (80/20) plan will no longer have to pay for employee-only coverage.

-- If you are enrolled in either the PPO Basic (70/30) or PPO Standard (80/20) plan and are NOT making any changes, you DO NOT need to complete a form. If you want to change plans, or are adding or removing dependents, please complete the State Health Plan enrollment form at http://hr.unc.edu/Data/benefits/health-dental/09shpenroll/09-enrollform.pdf and return it to Benefits Services by May 29, 2009.

Because the legislation for the State Health Plan was just signed into law on April 23, this annual enrollment is being conducted later than normal for a July 1 effective date and with a very short timeframe. Return your completed form AS SOON AS POSSIBLE.

State Health Plan annual enrollment forms must be returned to Benefits Services via interoffice mail to CB# 1045 or by US Mail to 104 Airport Drive, CB#1045, Chapel Hill NC 27599.

For your convenience a green drop box marked "Benefit Programs" is located at the front doors of the Administrative Office Building (AOB) so forms can be dropped off after business hours.

Healthy Lifestyles Initiatives

In addition to the benefit changes and rates increases outlined in this email, the State Health Plan will implement comprehensive wellness initiatives to support healthy lifestyles, focusing on tobacco use and unhealthy diet/physical inactivity. According to the State Health Plan, these areas are the two leading causes of preventable deaths in North Carolina.

The recent legislation includes a provision for the Plan to ask members to self-report tobacco use and weight status during annual enrollment. The Plan is currently assessing procedures and rules around the tobacco and weight management programs, and will make these available for public comment prior to program implementation. Privacy and respect will be important values in all aspects of the member wellness initiatives. The legislation requires the Plan to inform members about the specifics of the initiatives no later than October 1, 2009.

Health Plan ID Cards

It is likely that not all members will receive their ID card by July 1, 2009. However, the ID number does not change, so providers and pharmacies will accept members' current ID cards. Therefore, members should continue to use their current ID cards until they receive their new ID card.

Questions

If you have any questions about the enrollment, contact your Benefits Specialist. You can look up your Benefits Specialists in HR Connect at http://hrconnect.unc.edu. You can also call the Benefits Services main line at 962-3071 or email benefits@unc.edu.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Medication Trial for Fragile X Syndrome

Is your child often irritable and frequently touchy?
Are these behaviors interfering with your family's daily routine?
Do you know a child or adult who has been diagnosed with Fragile X Syndrome?

The ASPIRE Research program at the UNC-Chapel Hill's Department of Psychiatry is recruiting children and adults for a Fragile X Syndrome clinical research study. The study will look at the effects of study treatment vs. placebo, specifically related to irritable behaviors. All patients will receive both placebo and active medication. Examples of irritable behaviors may include:

* Aggression to other children or adults
* Screaming inappropriately, tantrums or outbursts
* Whiny or impatient
* Depressed mood or rapid mood changes
* Self injurious behaviors

Your child will receive a comprehensive diagnostic assessment at the beginning of the study. Your child will also receive behavioral and cognitive assessments throughout the study. If your child meets criteria and has no medical contraindications to treatment in the study, they can receive study medication. Appointments with child psychiatrists who specialize in developmental disorders, and the study medication, are provided at no cost to research participants.

If you think this study may be appropriate for your child, please contact us. We are happy to tell you more about our program and answer any questions. Please call the ASPIRE Research Hotline (1-800-708-0048) or email us at aspire@unc.edu.

Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: Flexible Furlough Program Information

FROM: Brian Usischon, Senior Director, Benefits Services
Office of Human Resources
Elizabeth C. (Betsi) Snipes, Director, UNC Payroll Services
Finance Division

In response to state budget shortfalls, Gov. Beverly Perdue issued Executive Order #11, which calls for a "Flexible Furlough Program" for all state workers, including higher education employees. The Governor's mandate will result in a 0.5 percent (one-half of one percent) decrease in annual salary for all University employees, regardless of salary funding source.

The State does not want one employee to be furloughed because he/she is on State funds and another employee not to be furloughed because he/she is on non-State funds. This does not mean the Office of State Budget and Management (OSBM) plans to capture the savings generated by trust funds that result from the furlough. At this point, OSBM does not intend to capture the savings from non-State funds.

In order to minimize the effect on employees, it is currently anticipated that for permanent SPA employees (full- and part-time) this reduction will occur as three deductions during the last three bi-weekly pay periods of this fiscal year (May 22, June 5 and June 19). For permanent EPA (full- and part-time) employees, we anticipate this reduction to occur on the May 31 and June 30 monthly pay periods. (While we anticipate that the reductions will occur as noted above, please note that we have not yet received final implementation instructions. If changes occur, we will let you know as soon as possible.)

For example: an SPA employee who earns $42,000 will be subject to a $210 reduction in gross earnings ($42,000 X .005 = $210). The $210 deduction will be spread over three pay periods, resulting in a $70 reduction in gross earnings on May 22, June 5 and June 19.

Permanent full-time employees will be credited with 10 hours of flexible leave which, according to the Executive Order, may be taken between June 1 and Dec. 31, 2009. The flex leave time is pro-rated for permanent part-time employees. This will be recorded as flex leave in the same method as other leave. It will not be paid out in cases of separation from the university and will be forfeited if not taken by Dec. 31.

Non-leave earning employees, including temporary employees, are also subject to the Flexible Furlough Program. At this point, it is anticipated that temporary employees who are paid on an hourly basis will be required to reduce their hours by an amount proportionate to their average weekly hours.

Please be assured that University Human Resource and Finance staff are working to minimize the effect on employees while complying with the Governor's Executive Order. Questions may be directed to furlough-questions@unc.edu.

The University continues to seek clarity about details with officials from OSBM, the Office of State Personnel and UNC General Administration. Our intent is to tell you what we know and to continue updating you as important information is available. We will continue to post information to the Office of Human Resources Web site at http://hr.unc.edu/Data/benefits/flex-furlough.

TO: Carolina Faculty and Staff

DATE: May 6, 2009

I am very pleased to announce that Dr. Karen M. Gil, Lee G. Pedersen Distinguished Professor of Psychology and professor of psychiatry, will be recommended to the Board of Trustees at their meeting later this month as the next dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. If the recommendation is approved, Dr. Gil's appointment will be effective July 1.

The University conducted a national search to fill this position, and Chancellor Thorp and I selected Dr. Gil following the deliberations of an advisory search committee headed by Dean Jack Boger. We felt that Dr. Gil was a perfect fit for Carolina in many ways.

She has been on the faculty since 1995 and twice has served as senior associate dean in the College. Currently she is senior associate dean for social sciences and international programs, where she oversees all of the College's social sciences departments as well as its international programs based in the FedEx Global Education Center. From 2001 to 2004, she served as senior associate dean for undergraduate education, and from 2004 to 2007, Dr. Gil chaired the Department of Psychology in the College. She is a fellow of the American Psychological Association and the Society of Behavioral Medicine, and has been the author of numerous publications on health psychology, acute and chronic pain, stress and coping, and childhood medical illness.

We are fortunate to have someone with Dr. Gil's impressive credentials and stature as a candidate to head our University's largest and oldest academic unit. With her background as a faculty member, researcher and administrator within the College, she is ideally suited to lead our faculty, staff and students in addressing future challenges, not only on our campus but also around the world.

I also want to thank Dr. Bruce Carney, Samuel Baron Distinguished Professor of Physics and Astronomy and senior associate dean for the sciences, who has served as interim dean since last July. Dr. Carney is a true citizen of the University and one of the College's strongest advocates. The Carolina community is grateful to him for stepping into this crucial role and keeping the College moving forward during the search process.

It looks like there is a good chance that we will be able to secure funds to hire a Swahili instructor to teach two classes over the coming year. I have disucussed this with Julius and he supports the idea. The funds have to be used in a way that will make it possible for us to teach our advanced Swahili classes. There are various ways this can be done and, of course, the plan will have to be approved by Julius. We will need to find someone who is able and willing to teach Swahili so keep your ears and eyes open.

SEEING YOUR WORLD
A SUMMER ART PROGRAM FOR CHILDREN

June 22 - June 26

This summer the Ackland presents Seeing Your World, a week-long summer art program for children ages nine to twelve. The program runs June 22 - June 26, 9:00 AM - 12:00 PM daily.

Participants will investigate original art in the Ackland's galleries, practice the techniques used to make them, and learn new ways to see and understand through art. Time will be spent exploring the ways different artists depict the world around them, and children will create their own collages, multi-media boxes, and poetry. Daily snacks are included.

The program is $100 for Museum members, $125 for non-members. Pre-registration is required. Limited scholarships

VOLUNTEER GALLERY TEACHERS NEEDED

See art in new ways as a volunteer gallery teacher at the Ackland. Interactive, learner-centered teaching, primarily for kindergarten – twelfth-grade students, is the core of our program. Ackland educators are now interviewing candidates for the upcoming training class beginning September 2009. This two-year sequence includes intensive training about works of art in the Ackland Collection, teaching strategies to use in the galleries, mentoring with an experienced gallery teacher, and teaching independently in the galleries. To learn more about the Ackland's volunteer gallery teacher program, attend an information session at the Museum on Wednesday, May 13, 10:00 AM - 12:00 PM, or Tuesday, June 2, 10:00 AM - 12:00 PM. Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Families First Research Project

We are conducting confidential one-on-one interviews to learn more about how we can help families with a problem drinking parent raise healthy children. Our goal is to design a program aimed to help such families and their children, and we want to get input from family members themselves.

Eligible participants will be invited to take part in one private interview (about 1.5 hours). These interviews will be held on UNC's campus in a convenient and confidential location. During the interview, participants will be asked to share their thoughts about the difficulties faced by families in raising young children, current services that address these concerns, desirable features of a new program, and potential barriers to participating in such a program. Participants will be paid $30 each.

You may be eligible for the study if you:
- -Are at least 18 years old
- -You or your partner have a problem with drinking
- -You have a child under the age of 18

Subject:	INFORMATIONAL: Sign up now: Carolina Blood Drive, Tuesday, June 2, 2009

The 21st annual Carolina Blood Drive (www.unc.edu/blood) is set for Tuesday, June 2 from 7am-6pm in the Dean E. Smith Center. It's time for blood donors at UNC-Chapel Hill to reclaim our title as one of the largest single-site, single-day American Red Cross Blood Drives on the East Coast. We lost the crown last September, when Appalachian State University rose to the Carolina Blood Drive challenge and collected 1,060 units of blood in one day. That's 94 more than the 966 collected at last June's Carolina Blood Drive. We can't let their record stand. Attention Tar Heel donors! Beat ASU at this year's Carolina Blood Drive. We need all the players in the game!

We encourage you to please take time from your schedule to help those individuals who so desperately need you. Time spent donating blood is considered work time (See exception under Community Service Leave, on the Human Resources website for details). For detailed information, including the on-line donor form, donor eligibility, transportation information, and the opportunity to donate double red cells, visit www.unc.edu/blood to sign up under your departmental recruiter or dial 96-BLOOD (962-5663). By participating in our Carolina Blood Drive, you will not only be representing the University's concern and interest in this program, but you will also be providing that valuable gift of life to someone in need.

The American Red Cross is urging everyone to celebrate the beginning of summer by donating blood. Donors may give blood every 56 days. Traditionally, blood donations decrease in the summer due to vacations, holidays and summer breaks for schools. Unfortunately, the need for blood often increases during this same time period because of travel-related injuries and elective surgeries. Approximately 1,500 units of blood are needed each day by patients in the more than 100 local hospitals served by the American Red Cross in this area. Eligible blood donors must be at least 17 years of age, weigh a minimum of 110 pounds and be in general good health. Donors must have photo identification with them at the time of donation.

Thank you in advance for your support of this important UNC-Chapel Hill service endeavor to give the gift of life to others. If you cannot donate at this drive, we encourage you to donate blood throughout the year by visiting www.unc.givesblood.org to find out about Blood Drives sponsored by the American Red Cross Club on campus. Thanks again.

Dr. Mutima,

I'm forwarding a message from June Blackwelder, the head of our instructional design team. I had given her the post-it note with the isbn number for your textbook but that evidently isn't the isbn number for the version with the CDs. There are also some other isbn's she'll need from you which she lists in her message.

Could you or Debby please forward those to me as soon as possible so that June can assign the Swahili course to one of our instructional designers?

Thanks very much!

Judith

Judith,
I think I'm correct that you were going to ask Debby Crowder if she could help us clarify which texts are required and which of the optional ones listed in the course description should be stock in FC Books & Gifts. You had given me your sticky note with the ISBN Dr. Mutima gave you for the primary text, but that ISBN is for the version without CDs, and students need the version with CDs. There is also a required workbook; I think I found the correct ISBN for it. The list of optional books includes several Swahili-English dictionaries, a grammar reference, an intermediate course textbook, and an additional "foundation" book. It would be helpful to have a clear list that indicates which books are required (with their ISBNs) and which are optional, and for the optional ones, which we should stock in Friday Center Books & Gifts (for those we will also need ISBNs).

Children with Reading and/or Attention Issues Needed for Research Study!

UNC-Chapel Hill's Center for Development and Learning (CDL) is studying an approved, on the market, medication for attention deficit/hyperactivity disorder (ADHD), in an investigational use, for children who have the symptoms of ADHD with dyslexia or dyslexia alone.

Your child may be eligible if:

* He or she has symptoms like overactivity, distractibility, inattention, difficulty reading, problems in school
* is 10-16 years old
* currently weighs between 25 and 70 kg (between 55 and 154 lbs.)

Children who qualify for and enroll in the study will receive study-related neuropsychological evaluations, study medication at no cost, and ongoing follow-up by a Pediatrician for the duration of the study.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: TO UNC RESEARCHERS WHO USE HUMAN GENETIC SPECIMENS

Note: This email repeats a survey invitation originally sent on April 28. If you have already participated, thank you!

A message from Terry Magnuson
Director, Carolina Center for Genome Sciences and Chair, Department of Genetics

I am writing to request your participation in a 16-question, anonymous survey on research using human genetic specimens at UNC. It is being conducted by the UNC Center for Genomics and Society (http://genomics.unc.edu/genomicsandsociety/), which is part of the Carolina Center for Genome Sciences.

Your participation will support an important effort to understand the defining characteristics of genetic specimen collections. I am making a special request for 10 minutes of your time. Please do not delete this message, and when you have a moment, complete this brief survey using the link below.

This study has been reviewed and approved by the University of North Carolina IRB, Study #08-1800.

Contact us at cgs@unc.edu if you have any questions or if you have trouble accessing the survey.

Detailed information about this survey and our research appears below:

What am I being asked to do?
You are being asked to participate in a research study regarding the acquisition, use, and management of human genetic specimens and related data. The web-based survey contains general questions about the collection, use, and maintenance of specimens in your research. It will take about 10 minutes to complete. Participation is voluntary and anonymous. However, you can choose to give us your contact information at the end of the survey, making your participation confidential rather than anonymous. Contact information is kept secure and separate, only used to contact you about related studies.

Why is this study important?
While there is a growing body of literature concerned with the growth and governance of human genetic specimen collections used for research, little is known about their defining features. This survey is part of a larger project examining these features to create a typology of such collections.

What are the possible benefits to participating in this study?
You will not personally benefit from participation, but your responses will help provide new knowledge on the full range of characteristics associated with human genetic specimens and associated data.

What are the possible risks from being involved in this study?
If you complete this survey anonymously, no risks are associated with participation. If you choose to give us your contact information, your participation and your individual survey responses will be kept confidential. Study results will be reported in the aggregate. Hence, there are no risks associated with participation in this case either

How will my privacy be protected?
If you provide any personal information, it will be kept separate and secure in a protected file available only to members of the research team.

Will I be compensated for my participation?
No.

Will it cost anything for me to participate?
No.

What if I have additional questions about this study?
Please contact the Principal Investigator with any questions:

Gail E. Henderson, Ph.D.
Director, UNC Center for Genomics and Society
Professor, Department of Social Medicine
347A MacNider Hall, CB # 7240
UNC School of Medicine
Chapel Hill NC 27599-7240

Has this study been reviewed by an Institutional Review Board (IRB)?
This study has been reviewed and approved by the University of North Carolina IRB, Study #08-1800 If you have questions or concerns about your rights as a research subject you may contact the UNC Institutional Review Board at (919) 966-3113, or by e-mail at IRB_subjects@unc.edu.

Who has provided funding for this study?
Funding is provided by UNC's Center for Genomics and Society (http://genomics.unc.edu/genomicsandsociety/) which is supported by the ELSI Research Program of the National Human Genome Research Institute of the National Institutes of Health.

Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: Bernadette Gray-Little Selected as Next Kansas Chancellor

Colleagues:

With very mixed feelings, I write to tell you that Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost Bernadette Gray-Little has been selected to be the new chancellor of the University of Kansas, effective Aug. 15.

This is a huge loss for Carolina and a great gain for Kansas. Bernadette made her career here at Carolina for more than three decades - as a professor of psychology, as a senior associate dean for undergraduate education, executive associate provost, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, and, most recently as executive vice chancellor and provost. In every role, Bernadette has served with the highest level of integrity and the best interest of the University in mind. Carolina is better because of her.

While we are losing a great colleague, I take pride in knowing that one of our own has been tapped to lead a sister AAU institution.

On a personal note, I will especially miss Bernadette. I've had the good fortune to work with her over the years, and in my first year as chancellor, I have leaned on her for her knowledge of the University, her wise counsel and her friendship. These are difficult times to be without her leadership. Along with Dick Mann, Bernadette has been helping us capably navigate through this very challenging financial environment.

This is a big job: The executive vice chancellor and provost serves as chief academic officer and oversees all academic operations, including 13 schools and the College of Arts and Sciences, the University Library, a variety of centers and several cultural and educational units. So I know how important it is to have an effective interim provost and, ultimately, to identify a new executive vice chancellor and provost.

That's why I'm so pleased to tell you that Bruce Carney, currently interim dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, has agreed to serve as interim executive vice chancellor and provost. Bruce, who is the Samuel Baron Distinguished Professor of Physics and Astronomy, has been a member of our faculty since 1980. Before he served as interim College dean, he was senior associate dean, overseeing a dozen academic departments and programs in the sciences. Bruce and I have worked together in previous administrative roles, and I'm confident that his skills and integrity will serve us well. He has indicated that he will not be a candidate for the permanent position.

I will move quickly to form a search committee to identify a permanent executive vice chancellor and provost, and I promise to keep you informed.

In the meantime, please join me in thanking Bernadette for her service to Carolina and in wishing her the best in Kansas and in thanking Bruce Carney for helping us once more during a transition period.

Sincerely,

Holden Thorp

Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: Campus Budget Update

Dear Faculty and Staff:

I'm writing to share an update on the state budget process and how it may affect Carolina. The House of Representatives continues to deliberate over a proposal that currently calls for an 11.1 percent cut totaling $337 million across the UNC system for 2009-10. The House proposal reflects one approach to addressing an expected state budget shortfall for next year that is nearing $5 billion.

UNC President Erskine Bowles has articulated well his concerns. While the 11 percent cut level is still less than in other states like Florida, the effect would be severe and long-lasting, especially for students' access and for the quality of the education they would receive.

It's not a surprise that the House proposal includes new sources of revenue such as a $200 tuition increase for our students. (On other UNC campuses, students would face a $200 hike or 8 percent, whichever is lower.) This proposal is in lieu of increases previously approved for Carolina by the UNC Board of Governors, including a 4.3 percent, or $160 increase, for resident undergraduates. While half of the revenues from the Board of Governors-approved increase would be set aside for need-based financial aid, all proceeds from the proposed House proposal would flow directly to the General Fund to help close the state budget shortfall.

We're also particularly concerned about the scrutiny over research centers and institutes across the UNC system. Our faculty working in those units study real-world problems that affect North Carolinians. At the same time, they help the state's economy by attracting hundreds of millions of dollars in grant funding.

We've tried to be as proactive as possible in anticipating the inevitable permanent cuts for next fiscal year. That's what drove our decision in March to enact cuts at the 5 percent level - nearly $29 million - effective on July 1.

At a cut level of 11 percent or higher, we'd slice much deeper into programs and eliminate about 500 class sessions, resulting in much larger classes for our students. Without additional enrollment growth funding, we'd also be forced to accept about 500 fewer students in fall 2010.

Our trustees and the administration are working very closely with President Bowles and the Board of Governors to advocate vigorously with legislators on behalf of all the UNC campuses including Carolina. We're seeking flexibility in implementing our fair share of the cuts. Our deans and vice chancellors know best how to achieve the necessary savings while imposing the least amount of harm to our students' classroom experiences and University operations.

I can't stress enough that the House deliberations are just the next step in this five-part process. President Bowles and the Board of Governors shared the UNC system budget request with the General Assembly. Governor Perdue and the Senate released their budget plans, which contained differences. After the House budget proposal is finalized, the Senate and House will appoint members of a joint conference committee to negotiate over a final state budget package. That process could continue well into the next fiscal year. Members of the House and Senate conference committee will face some very difficult choices for state government and our University system during their negotiations.

Meanwhile, thanks for all of your support and understanding about the uncertainty of this budget process. We're in a state of flux until we have firm numbers from a final state budget. That's likely to continue evolving over the next several weeks. I ask for your patience as we continue to work through this difficult period.

Sincerely,

Holden Thorp

Dear Peter -

Thanks for this information. Here's what I ferreted out about the FSI tapes. See especially the part on free.

Foreign Service Institute language texts and tapes

Two vendors sell digital versions of these materials:
http://www.foreignserviceinstitute.com/
http://multilingualbooks.com/fsi.html

But a group of people have been working to post them for free:
FSI Language Courses
http://www.fsi-language-courses.org/
At this web site, the Yoruba Basic and Intermediate Courses and the Swahili Basic Course are really impressive - 150 lesson units for Swahili.

The site also offers links to other free online teaching materials for each language (e.g., an ERIC document on newspaper Swahili). The Amharic page (with 11 lesson units) links to Indiana University's "Languages Online" page, which provides free online 60 FSI lesson units:
http://languagelab.bh.indiana.edu/amharic_a400.html
I cannot figure out a quick way to see what IU offers for free: some of their languages online are free, others are proxied from URL:
http://www.indiana.edu/~celtie/portal.html
For example, Swahili and Hausa have free materials, Zulu doesn't.

There's also a great web site that provides links to free online language-instruction books:
http://soyouwanttolearnalanguage.googlepages.com/
The Somali language e-books list, URL: http://soyouwanttolearnalanguage.googlepages.com/languagee-books4 points to ERIC PDF versions of Pia's Peace Corps text book.

Is your child often irritable and frequently touchy?
Are these behaviors interfering with your family's daily routine?
Do you know a child who has been diagnosed with autism spectrum disorder?

The ASPIRE Research program at the UNC-Chapel Hill's Department of Psychiatry is recruiting children and adolescents for an autism clinical research study. The research study will look at the effects of an investigational medication as it specifically relates to irritable behaviors. All patients will receive active medication. Examples of irritable behaviors may include:

* Aggression to other children or adults
* Screaming inappropriately, tantrums or outbursts
* Whiny or impatient
* Depressed mood or rapid mood changes
* Self injurious behaviors

Your child will receive a comprehensive diagnostic assessment at the beginning of the research study. Your child will also receive behavioral and cognitive assessments throughout the research study. If your child meets criteria and has no medical contraindications to treatment in the study, they can receive study medication. Appointments are with child psychiatrists who specialize in developmental disorders. The research study medication is provided at no cost to research participants. Participants will be reimbursed for travel expenses for office visits.

If you think this research study may be appropriate for your child, please contact us. We are happy to tell you more about our program and answer any questions. Please call the ASPIRE Research Hotline (1-800-708-0048) or email us at aspire@unc.edu.

Hi Dr. Mutima,
Today Judith Benowitz forwarded to me two documents that Debby Crowder sent relating to your SWAH 401 course. These documents were supposed to be three different versions of the final exam, but instead we received two documents, and they are exactly alike. In addition, they appear to be the last part of an exam--they start with Roman numeral XV, so sections I through XIV are missing. I noticed that the final exam review found at the end of the nine lessons of the course ends with section XIV, so I'm wondering if what we received today is actually the last part of the final exam review document. In any case, I don't believe we received a complete final exam, and we didn't receive multiple versions, so I need to ask you to send three complete versions of final exams so that we can process your payment and begin work on course production.
Thanks!
June

Hi folks. I just had a conversation with Prof. Mutima. He did not realize that he was to submit actual final exams for his SWAH course. No wonder he didn't understand why he would have to submit three versions of reviews of the final. Sorry, Prof. Mutima. I must not have made that clear. So, one question: should there be a "sample" exam and then 3 actual exams. Or should there be a review instead of the "sample." I apologize for my ignorance, but I'm not sure how you do these things. I can help facilitate the process more if I understand it myself. Thanks in advance. Debby

Subject:	INFORMATIONAL: Recruiting for a study about Web Search

Do you conduct searches that span across multiple days or weeks?

If so, we want to talk to you!

We are conducting a research study to learn about how people conduct searches for information on the Web that take place across multiple days or weeks and that involve collaborating with other people.

We are looking for people in these groups:

* UNC academic researchers (faculty, post-doc, Ph.D. candidate - post proposal, research scientist)

* Corporate workers who have a business role that involves searching for and sharing information

In order to qualify for the study, you must meet the following criteria:

* Be at least 18 years old
* Speak English fluently
* Be in one of the three groups listed above
* Have conducted on-going searches for information on a topic across multiple days or weeks and shared the results of these searches with collaborators.

The study consists of a questionnaire and an interview that will take about one hour.

For participating in the study, you will receive a $20 Visa gift card.

If you qualify and are interested in being in this study, please email:

Are you expecting or know someone who is? Do you have a newborn younger than one month old?

As part of the Early Brain Development Studies at UNC-Chapel Hill's Department of Radiology, Psychiatry, and Psychology, we are recruiting newborns to participate in the The MAP* Brain Imaging Study [*The Multi-visit Advanced Pediatric Brain Imaging Study.

What is the purpose of this study?
The purpose of this research is to document the rapid and critical growth of normal brain development in the first three years of life. The information gathered is essential to shed light on our understanding of brain development. This information not only offers profound scientific implications regarding our understanding of how the brain functions but also provides great insights into developmental disorders.

What does this study involve?
Your child will have magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) of his/her brain eight times between the ages of 2 - 4 weeks and 3 years at the MRI research center located at 106 Mason Farm Road.

Scans will be performed while your child sleeps. No medicines or sedation will be used.

You will also be asked medical history questions by a study coordinator or nurse.

Will I be paid for participating?
You will receive $75 for each study MRI (for a potential total of $600). You will also be reimbursed for reasonable travel/gas and parking expenses as well.

Are there any risks?
MRI has no known risks and does not use radiation or x-ray.

Why participate in this study?
You and your child's participation in this study may benefit society by gaining new insights into our understanding of infant/early child brain development. It may also increase our knowledge into the possible causes of neurodevelopmental disorders.

Remember,
* This is a voluntary study
* You will be compensated
* No medicines or sedation are involved
* All information regarding you and your child's participation in this study will be kept strictly confidential.

How can I learn more about joining this study?
Please contact Megan Artis at mbartis@email.unc.edu or call 919-843-9245 for more information.

Subject: [african-and-afro-american-studies-faculty] [all-college-faculty] MESSAGE FROM THE DEAN

The enclosed message from Dean Karen Gil is being sent to all faculty and staff in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Dear Faculty and Staff Colleagues,

I am honored and thrilled to be the new dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. With a total of five years as a senior associate dean, I know that we have outstanding colleagues, students, alumni and friends. Yet, as I transition to my new role, I am learning more every day about the world-class people and programs across the College that distinguish Carolina as an exceptional place to learn, innovate and tackle global and local problems.

I am also impressed by the extraordinary team we have in the Dean's Office. I am grateful that such colleagues are willing to give their time and expertise to College administration.

I am pleased to announce that Mike Crimmins, chair of the department of chemistry, and Jonathan Hartlyn, former chair of the department of political science and former director of the Institute for the Study of the Americas, have joined our senior leadership team. Mike is the new senior associate dean for the natural sciences. He replaces Tom Clegg who served as interim senior associate dean for the past year. Jonathan is taking over my former post as senior associate dean for the social sciences and international programs. I am delighted that they have agreed to join the team, and I am thankful to Tom for his outstanding service during the past year.

I am also pleased that the rest of the dean's senior leadership team will continue in the Dean's Office, including senior associate deans Bill Andrews (fine arts and humanities), Bobbi Owen (undergraduate education), Tammy McHale (finance and operations) and Jamie May (Arts and Sciences Foundation), and communications director Dee Reid. Their experience will continue to serve us well.

Of course we still face significant economic challenges for the coming year. With additional state budget cuts on the horizon, all of us in the College, like everyone else across our nation, will have to tighten our belts again. Though we will not know what our final state budget allocation will be until later this summer, we know that we will have to find additional cuts in our operating budget.

Our senior management team will continue to work closely with our department and program chairs throughout the budget process and we will share information with you as soon as we can.

Fortunately we are facing this recession, from a position of strength, thanks to the N.C. bond revenues that gave us several new state-of-the-art facilities over the past decade, and to generous colleagues, alumni and friends who pledged $387 million to the College during the Carolina First campaign to support faculty, students, facilities and programs. Private funds will be more important to the College than ever before as we are asked to do more with less state funding.

All of us also owe a debt of gratitude to Bruce Carney, for his extraordinary leadership as interim dean during a most challenging year. Though Bruce deserves a long-deferred research leave, he has agreed to serve as interim executive vice chancellor and provost, as the university searches for a replacement for provost Bernadette Gray-Little, who is becoming chancellor of the University of Kansas. Please join me in thanking Bruce for his exceptional contributions to Carolina and the College.

Finally, I want to thank you for all that you do every day for the College of Arts and Sciences, especially in these hard times. Your continued dedication to our academic mission will help the College overcome difficult challenges and continue to be the vital heart of the campus.

I look forward to working with you.

With my best regards,

Karen M. Gil
Dean

Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: Campus Budget Update

Dear Students, Faculty and Staff:

Many of you are aware that the state budget for next fiscal year remains unclear. Legislators worked this week to enact a temporary spending bill to start fiscal 2009-2010, which began today. The joint Senate-House conference committee also continues negotiations about a spending package for the biennium for consideration by the full Legislature and Governor Perdue. When a final budget may be approved is unknown. But we do know that the budget picture in Raleigh remains bleak. Revenue projections haven't improved during the fourth quarter. Nothing has changed expectations that significant cuts will be necessary for all state agencies in the new fiscal year.

To be prudent, the UNC system is moving forward at the direction of General Administration and President Bowles with permanent cuts totaling 10 percent of state appropriations for 2009-2010. For our campus, that's an additional 5 percent on top of the recurring state budget cuts of 5 percent announced as a proactive step in March that take effect this week. We've been saying all along that additional cuts were possible and that permanent cuts would be unavoidable.

Neither the UNC system nor our campus is approaching this new challenge as an across-the-board proposition. Our campus Budget Committee will spend the next two weeks determining exactly how we'll take the additional 5 percent. Vice chancellors and deans worked diligently last spring to make realistic budget plans. We'll take those efforts into account. Our top priority remains protecting students in the classroom and academics. We still anticipate cuts for research centers and institutes reflecting recent legislative scrutiny, but we expect to have some flexibility in how we take those reductions.

To put these new developments in perspective, keep in mind that the original 5 percent cuts for the new fiscal year equated to nearly $29 million in state funding. Now we're facing a total reduction of almost $60 million for the entire campus, including the Area Health Education Centers program, during this fiscal year.

Even if cuts at these levels don't fully materialize in the final state budget, we're expecting a difficult year that could include additional reversions in the coming months. We're treating these targets as actual cuts because they are realistic given the state's current dire situation.

On a positive note, we have secured $2 million in outside funding for faculty support as part of a new contract with Nike Inc. to supply apparel and equipment to our athletic teams. One provision stipulates that Nike will send $2 million to the Chancellor's Academic Enhancement Fund. I'm designating that funding for use by campus units to support fixed-term faculty and instructors.

I wish that I had better news to share about the University's state funding prospects. President Bowles has made the right decision to take these actions now as the UNC system deals with its share of state budget cuts.

As I've said many times before, thank you for all you do for Carolina. The Carolina spirit has served us well in these difficult times, and I remain inspired by the extraordinary work that we do and the way we help each other in the face of these challenges. We'll provide additional updates as details become available.

Sincerely,

Holden Thorp

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: ONLINE Diarrhea Prevention Study

The Center for Functional GI and Motility Disorders invites you to participate in an online research study on the symptoms of diarrhea. The purpose of the study is to learn whether a person can predict when they are going to have an episode of diarrhea.

The study will involve filling out several questionnaires online about your bowel symptoms.

To participate, you must be 18 years of age or older and have daily access to the internet. You must also have experienced diarrhea for at least the last 6 months, and you must have had at least one mushy or watery stool per month for the past 3 months.

If you are eligible, you may also be invited to participate in an online diary study which involves keeping track of your diarrhea symptoms by logging into a secure website each day. You will have a unique study ID and password to ensure your responses are anonymous and confidential. There are no visits to UNC required. The study lasts for 60 days (2 months). You will receive $60 each month for completing the study. In addition, if you complete your diaries without skipping any days, you will receive an additional $60/month. Therefore, you may receive up to $240 for participating in this study.

To determine if you are eligible, please click on the following link and respond to the screening questions:
https://uncfunctionalgi.net/dipstudy.html

If you have any questions, please contact Marsha Turner 919-962-9787.

Thank you for your interest in our study.

AMAZING ALPHABETS

AN ACKLAND-KIDZU COLLABORATION
4:30 - 5:30 PM

Celebrate the alphabet through art! On display now at the Ackland is a series of boxes created by the artist Aldwyth, who decorated each with images beginning with a single letter of the alphabet. Wouldn't it be fun to make your own? During this program, kids will do just that. First they'll examine Aldywth's boxes at the Ackland, then they'll travel to the Kidzu Children's Museum, where four- and five-year olds will select a letter of the alphabet and embellish boxes with images for that letter, and six- to eight-year-olds will use the collage technique to decorate their boxes with the letter of their choice.

Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: Adoption of New Energy Use Policy

To: Carolina Faculty, Staff and Students

From: Richard Mann, Vice Chancellor for Finance and Administration

Date: July 8, 2009

Subject: Adoption of New Energy Use Policy

In response to the grave global economic situation, the University's commitment to climate neutrality by 2050 and state legislation that mandates reductions in energy consumption, the University has adopted a new Energy Use Policy. As a result, the University is implementing campus-wide Energy Conservation Measures (ECMs) that will achieve significant and relatively immediate reductions in energy consumption and reduce the University's utility costs.

Space temperatures in campus buildings will be optimized for energy conservation during the times the buildings are occupied, and will not exceed 78 degrees during summer months or drop below 69 degrees during cooler weather. Further, most buildings will be programmed to relax these set temperatures during times of low occupancy when buildings are unoccupied.

Certain campus facilities such as labs, animal facilities, museums, libraries and computer server spaces that require strict, consistent temperatures may be exempt from many of the planned ECMs. The Facilities Services Division is working to accommodate the needs of facilities in these buildings while identifying other energy-saving measures that can be implemented.

Although building occupants could notice some change in their comfort levels because of the temperature adjustment, the University is committed to keeping facilities within safe and reasonably comfortable temperature ranges at all times. The temperature and humidity standards to be implemented are in accordance with the American Society of Heating, Refrigerating and Air-Conditioning Engineers (ASHRAE) recommendations for occupied spaces.

The technical work involved in reprogramming and adjusting building control systems is complex and can be time-consuming. Facilities Services is making implementation of this policy a priority, and the division has committed Energy Management engineers and maintenance staff to this effort. Most of their work will be done "behind the scenes" and with as little disruption as possible to building occupants, the work environment and building operations. During the process to implement these energy-saving measures, several maintenance technicians will be temporarily taken away from their regular duties, potentially resulting in delayed response times for trouble calls.

University-wide support of the energy policy will save both energy and money, and there are many ways individuals across campus can make a difference. People should always dress appropriately for the weather and for temperatures inside buildings. Because lighting consumes a considerable amount of energy in most buildings, simply turning off unnecessary lights when there is adequate daylight and turning off lights whenever people step out of their offices will help conserve energy. It is critical to turn off all lights and nonessential computers and equipment at the end of the day.

The University community is asked to be tolerant of any discomfort as a result of adjusted room temperatures or other ECMs and to recognize the importance of taking such steps. Beyond reducing the University's utility bills, careful energy management benefits the environment and preserves natural resources.

Energy conservation is an ongoing commitment. Facilities Services will update the University community about the latest developments in implementing these measures. Information will be posted on a new Web site, www.save-energy.unc.edu, and people can send energy-saving ideas to a specially designated e-mail address, save-energy@unc.edu.

Subject:	INFORMATIONAL: Research on Social Networking Sites

UNC-Chapel Hill researchers are conducting a study of privacy behaviors in social networking sites (Facebook, Myspace). We seek individuals who maintain multiple profiles, and purposefully keep their profiles separate on social networking sites. For example, people who maintain a "work profile" and a "personal profile" on a social networking site. If you meet this criteria, we are interested in your opinions about privacy, as well as the social implications of maintaining multiple profiles.

To qualify for this research, you must be age 24 or older, have started using social networking sites within the last two years, and maintain multiple profiles (e.g. a "work profile" and a "personal profile") on social networking sites. Participation is entirely voluntary. Individuals who wish to participate will be interviewed for one hour, and will be compensated $10.00 for their time. Interviews can be in person, or remote (over the phone, via Skype, etc.). To volunteer for participation, or ask any questions about the project, please email Principal Investigator Fred Stutzman at fred.stutzman@unc.edu. If you prefer, you may call 919-260-8508.

This research has been approved by the University of North Carolina Institutional Review Board, IRB-09-1078. Gary Marchionini, Ph.D., Cary C. Boshamer Distinguished Professor in the School of Information and Library Science, is faculty supervisor of this study.

Please excuse the duplication if you already received this. The following message originated from ITS Teaching and Learning and was sent to those who have used or are currently using Blackboard. So that this information is more widely distributed, OASIS is resending this message to all College faculty as a notification/reminder of the upcoming Blackboard upgrade.

Major Blackboard upgrade and associated outage

Blackboard will undergo a key upgrade this summer resulting in a major planned outage from July 28 through August 6. This upgrade will optimize Blackboard's performance, increase its stability and incorporate the addition of new features to enhance learning and instruction. To learn more about the new features coming in August and beyond, please visit http://its.unc.edu/BBNews/blackboard_upgrade/ .

Faculty may start developing fall courses in the current Blackboard 6.3 environment from now until July 28 when the system becomes unavailable.

Extract Blackboard content prior to outage
The scope of this upgrade requires a total Blackboard outage (July 28-August 6). Blackboard and its content will be completely unavailable during this period. If any Blackboard materials will be needed during the outage period, these materials must be downloaded or extracted prior to the outage. For assistance downloading a Gradebook or extracting course materials with the tool, bFree, please visit http://its.unc.edu/BBNews/blackboard_upgrade/keeping_content_accessible/ or contact 962-HELP.

If you are teaching during the outage window and are worried about accessing the system during the planned outage, please contact the UNC Blackboard Team at bb8upgrade@unc.edu.

Training on new features now available
This upgrade will result in some interface changes and new features. Training is available now through help documentation, online tutorials/videos and instructor-led sessions. For information on training opportunities, please visit http://its.unc.edu/BBNews/blackboard_upgrade/tutorials/

For additional information
For additional information on the Blackboard upgrade, as well as status updates, timelines and training opportunities, please visit http://its.unc.edu/BBNews/blackboard_upgrade/ regularly.

Do you or someone you know have severe PMS mood symptoms?

Some women experience PMS mood symptoms that interfere with work, activities and relationships.

The UNC Department of Psychiatry research team is conducting a clinical research study for women with severe PMS and Premenstrual Dysphoric Disorder (PMDD) to see whether combining an anti-depressant with an additional study-related medication aids in the relief of this reproductive mood disorder.

Volunteers must be:
* At least 18 years old
* In good health
* Currently treated with an anti-depressant

All office visits, medical evaluations, and investigational medications related to this study will be provided at no cost to patients.

ACERIP, the Association for Carolina Emergency Response and Injury Prevention, is a student group on campus that works to provide volunteer opportunities and classes for students interested in emergency services.

In the past the group has provided volunteer opportunities with the UNC Hospitals Trauma Program and has sponsored Emergency Medical Technician (EMT) classes on campus for interested students.

Next semester the group plans to offer two EMT classes on campus. The EMT-B certification classes will begin during the first week of UNC classes in August. There will be a Monday/Wednesday class and a Tuesday/Thursday night class, both of which start at 6pm and go until about 10pm. The cost is $145 plus the price of the book. To apply for the Fall 2009 class and for more information, please go to http://studentorgs.unc.edu/acerip/.

ACERIP is always looking for new people interested in taking leadership roles. If you are interested in heading up a project, please send an email expressing your interest. Thanks for your time.

Researchers in the Department of Pathology and Laboratory Medicine at UNC-Chapel Hill are looking for subjects to participate in a study examining risk factors that lead to blood clots in the deep veins of the arms and legs or clots in the lungs (venous thromboembolism). To be considered for this study you must meet the following criteria:

1. Have been diagnosed with a blood clot in your arms, legs, or lungs (deep vein thrombosis or pulmonary embolism)
2. Not be on anti-coagulation therapy such as Coumadin/Warfarin or Heparin (Aspirin is OK)

Participation includes:
- A visit to our research lab in Brinkhous Bullitt Building
- A brief (2 page) oral questionnaire to acquire relevant medical information
- One blood draw of approximately 20 mLs (4 teaspoons) from a vein in your arm
- Compensation of $10 for time and effort of participating

Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: Message from the Chancellor: Video Highlights of Final Bain Study

Dear Carolina community:

We've just posted the final report from Bain & Company, the global business consulting firm that's been working with us over the past several months. It's on the Carolina Budget Information Web page off www.unc.edu. The posting includes a follow-up video presentation to our interim report in April with the major highlights and a printable summary. We've also included a link to the complete 100-plus page report, which is the focus of a presentation by the consultants this week to our Board of Trustees.

Bain has provided us with a series of potential strategies to streamline operations and become more effective. Now it's up to us to study these proposals and determine our plans for implementation.

The Bain study is an important tool for us now as we continue to deal with the economic crisis. If we take this report seriously and follow up on its advice, I think we'll be better positioned for the future.

The video presentation and Web page provide details about how we plan to move forward in assessing these recommendations, take action and track the results. I hope you'll take the time to watch the presentation and scan the full report. Please let us know what you think by sending your feedback via e-mail to budgetideas@unc.edu.

Thanks for all you do for Carolina.

Sincerely,

Holden Thorp

UNC INSTITUTE OF AFRICAN AMERICAN RESEARCH

The Carolina Catalyst

THE OFFICIAL E-NEWSLETTER OF THE INSTITUTE OF AFRICAN AMERICAN RESEARCH UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA AT CHAPEL HILL

VOLUME 1 NUMBER 1, SUMMER 2009

IAAR HAS NEW DIRECTOR AND NEW DIRECTION

Dr. Fatimah L.C. Jackson
Professor and Director IAAR, UNC-CH

In July 2009, Dr. Fatimah Jackson joined the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill as Professor of Biological Anthropology and Director of the Institute of African American Research. Dr. Jackson brings a wealth of research experience on African Americans and Africans and an inclusive, multidisciplinary orientation to the Institute. Dr. Jackson is a native of Colorado. Her family was part of the historic post-Reconstruction westward migrations of African Americans that led to the formation of numerous Black towns on the American Plains. Dr. Jackson received her undergraduate and graduate training at Cornell University and went on to professorships at University of California at Berkeley, University of Florida at Gainesville, and the University of Maryland at College Park. Her primary research areas include human biodiversity, African and African American population histories, chronic disease disparities, phytochemicals, and anthropological genetics.

At UNC-Chapel Hill, Dr. Jackson hopes to develop the research capacity of the IAAR through two new research units and a Research Technology Laboratory. The Endogenous Knowledge Unit or EKU (managed by Dr. Tomeiko Carter) will conduct research on African American perspectives and insights on a diverse array of topics and will sponsor NC and African American community-focused programs and workshops. The mission of the EKU is to collect, analyze, and disseminate data on the indigenous knowledge of African Americans and Africans of the Atlantic Diaspora; to catalogue these emic insights on diverse topics, and to serve as an archive of African American worldviews, and a major reference of African American indigenous knowledge and wisdom. The EKU will sponsor Fellows with research interests compatible with EKU's mission, seek funding in support of the mission, conduct seminars, conferences, and workshops that promote the accumulation and analysis of African American endogenous knowledge and produce publications consistent with the unit's mission.

The Integrated Research Liaison Unit or IRLU will collaborate with existing UNC academic and professional units to conduct high quality research on African Americans and particular medical/dental, public health, legal, business, and educational issues. In facilitating research collaboration, the IRLU will increase the visibility of the Institute in all research concerning African Americans and African descended peoples of the Atlantic Diaspora. The IRLU will sponsor Fellows, seek funding in support of the unit, conduct seminars, conferences and workshops consistent with IRLU's mission, and produce publications. We hope to have a research manager for the IRLU on board before the end of the year.

The Research Technology Laboratory or RTL will develop unique and commercially viable Institute databases and software to enhance research on African Americans. Its mission is to provide sophisticated computation research to the IAAR for the purposes of facilitating data collection, analysis, and distribution. We anticipate that the RTL will serve as a center for the Institute's geospacial, biostatistical, simulation, and related computation-assisted research. We hope to hire the RTL manager by Fall 2010.

Under Dr. Jackson's leadership, a number of innovative and unique programs are planned for the IAAR. The next issue of The Carolina Catalyst will publish a schedule of these events. We welcome all of our readers and supporters to actively participate in the Institute's programs as we launch a new season for the IAAR.

IAAR Hosts Genealogy Workshop

"Any historian seeking demographic data regarding a specific group of people...probably ...will be dealing with genealogy."
Dr. Lolita Gutierrez Brockington, Professor Emerita of History, North Carolina Central University and IAAR Fellow

IAAR sponsored an International Scholars Genealogy Workshop on March 26, 2009 that attracted widespread campus and community interest. The workshop offered practical suggestions for the purposes of successfully conducting genealogical studies on family, historical, community, and scholarly research in the US and beyond. Topics covered included "How to Conduct Family Tree Searches", "Library Resources for Conducting Genealogical Research", and "How to Conduct Genealogical Searches for the Purposes of Scholarly Research" Teresa Artis, Clara Sue Kidwell, Holly Smith, Biff Hollingsworth, Shauna Collier, Heather Williams, and Lolita Brockington made important contributions to the success of the Workshop. According to Dr. Brockington, who conducts research on colonial Latin American history, the IAAR Workshop was "interactive scholarship at its best, offering both broader perspectives and relevant case models of many disciplines." She also noted that the "vast differences of time, geographical location, and socio-cultural traditions of our respective [presenter's] projects made little difference in terms of the successful results of our methodologies." Many disciplines rely upon genealogical research. Dr. Brockington continued to say that "Any historian seeking demographic data regarding a specific group of people (in my case, enslaved Africans and their descendants in the eastern Andes), probably knowingly or not will be dealing with genealogy. In fact, my own research in Bolivian archives led me to estate records, census data, parish records, and even court cases, all rich in genealogical data." It is through efforts like the Genealogy Workshop that the depth and breath of the field are made accessible to both campus and community scholars.

IAAR hopes to extend research opportunities with NC HBCUs

IAAR is very interested in working collaboratively on research with faculty, students and staff from the many local NC HBCUs. If you are interested, please contact Dr. Jackson at 919-843-1898 or by email at: fatimahj@email.unc.edu

Conference Examines Families

The topic of IAAR's 2008 African American Studies Conference was "Examining African American Families." The conference was held on November 6-7, 2008 in Hyde Hall. The conference explored issues that both cohere and divide black families and analyzed how African American families function in contemporary America. Papers and presentations surrounded the following topics: Faith, Social Justice: Crime and Incarceration; Finances and Economic Development; Family Relationships, and Marriage and Class; Children: Raising Boys vs. Girls, Mentorship, and Community Parenting; and Literature that examines black family structures.

Symposium Focuses on Folklore

"Myths and Tall Tales: Folklore in African American Culture" was an IAAR symposium on African American Folklore. The symposium was held on Friday, September 12, 2008 10AM - 3PM in the Pleasants Family Assembly Room of the Wilson Library. This event explored the role of folklore as a tradition and staple in African American culture and history. The keynote speaker was Dr. Valerie A. Johnson. Panelists included: Dr. William Ferris, Dr. Trudier Harris, and Michelle Lanier.

Graphic Artist Needed

IAAR seeks to employ a graphic artist to contribute to several projects. If you have graphic arts skills and are interested in a part-time position with the Institute, please contact the Director, Dr. Fatimah Jackson, 305 Stone Center, 150 South Road, fatimahj@email.unc.edu
Be sure to write "Graphic Artist Position" in the subject heading of your email. This is a part-time, temporary position.

Teachers' Workshop a Success

By: Jamie Lathan, Humanities Instructor, North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics (New Address: School of Education, UNC)

During IAAR's July 2008 teachers' workshop on African American history and culture, Dr. Reginald Hildebrand's discussion of the hope and strength that enslaved Africans found in Negro spirituals was especially helpful. The thoughts and resources offered by Dr. Donna Wiggins in her talk about "African-American Music Through Literacy" proved to be useful as well. Reading a children's book and creating a timeline about the life of Duke Ellington gave me a lot ideas about enrichment activities in my class. The later workshop discussions of "Diversity" with Dr. Cookie Newsome and "Standardized Tests and Assessments" with Dr. Wanda Coneal provided me with a macro-level understanding of the larger forces at work in the education of African-American youth. Libby Chenault arranged an exhibit on rare African American documents.

"The...workshop discussions... provided me with... [an] understanding of the ...forces at work in the education of African -American youth."

FRIDAY TEAS AT THE IAAR BEGIN 9/11/09 3 PM TO 4 PM

Please join us for Friday Teas at our newly remodeled reception area, 309 Stone Center, at 3 pm. Teas will be on alternate Fridays, beginning September 11, 2009. The purpose of these Teas is to provide an informal, relaxed setting for collegial discussion and interaction. We hope to continue Friday Teas throughout Fall 2009. Welcome!

Consortium Connects UNC & Community Researchers

IAAR hosted the 2009 UNC African American Studies Consortium on Wednesday, April 22, 2009 from 4:00 to 6:00 pm in the Anne Queen Faculty Lounge at the Campus Y. The gathering was in the form of a southern desserts reception. Featured presenters included Rebecka Rutledge Fisher, Assistant Professor in the Department of English and Comparative Literature, who presented on the European Collegium for African American Research (CAAR); and Joseph Cooper who presented on black student-athletes. The Consortium is a continuing networking initiative that seeks to connect UNC faculty, postdocs, staff, graduate students, and established community members who conduct research especially on African Americans and on comparative, black Diaspora studies.

Consortium members (above) talk avidly about their research.

IAAR and BSM Collaborate

By: Donovan Livingston, Education Co-Chair, Black Student Movement

In an attempt to quell anxieties that first-year students may experience in adjusting to campus life, the Black Student Movement in conjunction with the IAAR hosted a panel, "Avoiding the Pitfalls of College Life" on August 18, 2008. This panel discussion and informational session was instrumental in helping the Class of 2012 get their collective "foot in the door."
The panel featured primarily sophomores, merely one year removed from their freshman experience, who offered various takes on their lives as they became active members of the Chapel Hill campus community.

EDITOR'S NOTE: In 2009/2010 the IAAR hopes to engage BSM year round in various activities. Please consult our website for more information.

ATTORNEY ARTIS DONATES TO IAAR

Teresa Carol Artis, VP and General Counsel of Capitol Broadcasting Company, Inc. in Raleigh, N.C., has been a donor to the Institute of African American Research since the Fall of 2007. Artis is a graduate of the College of Arts & Sciences (Economics & Public Policy) at UNC and an alumna of both Harvard School of Business and School of Law. She has served as VP of Business Affairs at Turner Broadcasting System, Inc. (Atlanta) and VP of Licensing at online retailer Art.com (Raleigh). Prior to her media work, Artis practiced corporate law at Kilpatrick Stockton (Atlanta). Currently, she serves on UNC 's Alumni Committee on Racial and Ethnic Diversity. Her primary areas of support at UNC -CH are the IAAR, the Sonja Haynes Stone Center for Black Culture and History, the American Indian Center, and the Center for the Study of the American South. Among other things, Attorney Artis enjoys researching her family's genealogy.

Undergraduate and Graduate Student Internships Available at IAAR

Are you a student interested in learning more about research on issues related to African Americans? IAAR now has year-round internships available for undergraduate and graduate students. Applications for Student Internships for 2009-2010 can be obtained from Ms. Veronica Bellamy, 307 Stone Center or online at: www.unc.edu/iaar

IAAR Humanities Writing Competition

The Institute of African American Research (IAAR) will offer a $500 prize for the best cross-disciplinary, collaborative effort in the Arts and Humanities that yields a historically-grounded script on a topic of African American research. Established and aspiring scholars and writers with expertise in creative writing, literary criticism, philosophy, history, communications, performance studies, and other relevant disciplines are encouraged to apply. Submitted scripts will be considered for production. There are no limits on the historical time frame or genre of writing. Scripts should be submitted electronically and in hardcopy format to the IAAR by March 1, 2010. Acceptable submissions should reflect African American sensibilities, cultural norms, and perspectives. Submissions should be no more than 50 pages in length, double-spaced. Contributions become the property of IAAR, which will retain exclusive rights for subsequent distribution and use. Entries will be judged by a panel of experts in the Arts and Humanities. Faculty, staff, students, and community members are welcome to apply. The contest is sponsored by the Endogenous Knowledge Unit (EKU) of the IAAR. Two hardcopies of each submitted script along with a completed copyright transfer form should be sent to EKU, IAAR, 150 South Road, Campus Box 3393, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, NC 27599-3393, USA. An electronic version of the same submission should be sent to: cookee@email.unc.edu. Winners of this contest will be acknowledged during the Spring 2010 reception of the African American Studies Consortium hosted by the IAAR. There are no limits to the number of entries that can be submit-

Black Women in the Academy

By: Dr. Kia Caldwell
Assistant Professor
African & Afro-American Studies

IAAR co-sponsored a symposium, called Black Women in the Academy: Strategies for Survival, Success, and Transformation, which was held at the UNC William and Ida Friday Center for Continuing Education on January 30 and 31, 2009. This year's symposium included nearly 200 participants, ranging from undergraduate and graduate students to faculty, staff, administrators and members of the general public. The keynote speakers included Dr. Judith Holder Cooper (Duke University), Dr. Beverly Guy-Sheftall (Spelman College), Dr. Yolanda Moses (University of California, Riverside), and Dr. Rhonda Sharpe (University of Vermont). The keynote speakers addressed topics such as the role of black women in transforming academic institutions and how to achieve work/life balance.

Participants (above) enjoy discussion during BWA symposium workshop.

The Carolina Catalyst is published and distributed electronically six times annually, in July, September, November, January, March, and May of each academic year. Contributors are welcomed to submit research summaries, job announcements, essays to: Editor, The Carolina Catalyst, iaar@unc.edu The IAAR retains the rights to all submissions.

CONGRATULATIONS!

Bravo to IAAR office assistants Alysa Campbell, Parfait Gasana, Chelsea Ginyard, and Tiffany Okafor; to Dr. Ann Dunbar, former Professor of African Studies; and to Dr. Bernadette Gray-Little, former UNC Provost; on their respective graduations, retirement, and new position. We quite proud of each of you!

Student Research Assistant Position (EKU-IAAR)

The Institute of African American Research seeks an organized, motivated, and personable graduate or advanced undergraduate student assistant to work 10 to 20 hours a week to help coordinate various duties of its Endogenous Knowledge Unit. These responsibilities include, but are not limited to: conducting bibliographic research, summarizing articles, and assisting in making arrangements for events associated with the EKU (e.g., lectures, programs, symposia, conferences, workshops). Duties may also include making phone calls, facilitating guest travel, surveying event sites, identifying funding resources in support of the Unit's mission, managing confidential files, transcribing meeting notes, creating reference databases, and taking digital photos. The student assistant may work with IAAR's webmasters to coordinate technology efforts for relevant blogs, listserves, electronic databases, newsletters, online journals, press releases and other forms of research and publicity, the maintenance of personalized web sites (e.g., Twitter and Facebook), the development of web site sections, and the maintenance of personal digital assistants (e.g., cellular phones). The successful student will assist generally with the EKU's mission, especially in collecting, analyzing, and disseminating data on the insights, perspectives, and indigenous knowledge of African Americans and Africans of the Atlantic Diaspora; helping to catalogue emic insights on diverse topics; helping to develop and manage an archive of African American worldviews; and assisting in the creation of a major reference of African American indigenous knowledge and wisdom. The selected applicant must have a good knowledge of MS Word Suite, especially Word, Excel, and Publisher. HTML language is a plus. All majors are welcome, especially those with specific disciplinary interests in African American Studies. Must have great interpersonal skills and superior oral and writing skills. Honed research skills are also desirable. Please contact Dr. Tomeiko Carter, EKU Research Manager, tashford@email.unc.edu. Be sure to indicate "EKU Student Assistant Post." in the subject heading.

MURAP Completes Another Successful Year of Student Mentorship and Research

For the twentieth consecutive year, IAAR's Minority Undergraduate Research Apprentice Program (MURAP) has successfully mentored twenty-two students through a simulated summer graduate research program, with students producing thesis-level papers at the end of their ten-week tenures. Students, their mentors, and their projects include: Dyana Boxley, under the mentorship of Dr. Rachael Murphey-Brown, "From Soul to Hip-Hop: Changing Representations of Women of Color in the American Music Industry and Its Impact on the Formation of Self-Image in Young Girls of Color"; Camille Cabalo, mentored by Dr. Jennifer Ho, "The Importation of Chinese as Contract Laborers to the Southern Plantations: Why Did This Experiment Fail?"; Ashley Cameron, directed by Dr. Enrique Neblett, "Coping Strategies and Race/Ethnicity: The Effects of Racial Identity, Africentric Worldview, and Ethnicity on Coping Strategies"; Sierra Carter, under the directorship of Dr. Enrique Neblett, "Relationship Between Race, Racism and Hypertension among African Americans"; Justine Connolly, Dr. Lorraine Taylor, "Diminishing the Cycle of Intergenerational Incarceration: From a Developmental Perspective"; Shannon Davis, directed by Dr. Reginald Hildebrand, "Redefining Liberty: African American Conceptions of Liberty from the American Revolutionary Period through the Early American Republic"; Janeria Dunlap, directed by Dr. William A. Darity, Jr., "The 'Obama Effect': A Reexamination"; Kimberly Fisher, mentored by Dr. William A. Darity, Jr., "Undisciplined Subjects Before the Law"; Whitney Garrison, Dr. Reginald Hildebrand, "Enslaved Women's Political Decision-Making in the Face of White Domination: Where Did Their Loyalties Lie?"; Collier Johnson, Dr. Isaac Unah, "Civic Engagement and Political Participation in Presidential Elections"; Rachel Lopez, Dr. Oswaldo Estrada, "Women in Sendero Luminoso: Terror Along the Path to Equality"; Andrew Martinez, Dr. Ashley Lucas, "The Ugly Duckling's Plight: The Coevality of Queer Performance in Matthew Bourne's Swan Lake and Sociopolitical Discourse"; Tressie McMillan, Dr. William A. Darity, Jr., "Legacy and Memorialization of Reaganism and Its Relationship to African Americans"; Esme Murdock, Dr. Alan Redick, "Ambivalent Power in Haitian Voodoo"; Keyana Parks, Dr. Jennifer Ho, "Boundaries of Black Masculinity: Post-Racial or Not?"; Kristen Smith, Dr. Rachael Murphey-Brown, "Race, Reality and Politics: The Future of North Carolina Historically Black Colleges and Universities"; Brianna Suarez, Dr. Oswaldo Estrada, "African American and Latino Community Tensions Around Issues of Education in Detroit and Their Aspirations Toward an 'American Ideal'"; Jesus Valles, Dr. Ashley Lucas, "How Else Are They Suppose to Know They Are Still Alive: Domesticas and Documentation in Lisa Loomer's Living Out; Jennifer Villanueva, Dr. Alan Redick, "Marketing Playboy in Indonesia"; Ashley Whitehead, Dr. Isaac Unah, "The Effects of Zero Tolerance on Juvenile Justice: A Quantitative Analysis"; Izaak Williams, Dr. William A. Darity, Jr., "Post-traumatic Stress Disorder and Urban Community Trauma"; and Katherine Wright, Dr. Lorraine Taylor, "Family Falling through the Cracks of the Incarceration System: The Influence of Parental Incarceration on Family Development." Indeed, the 2009 Cohort of MURAP students have demonstrated their intellectual prowess through innovative research, presentations, and their participation at their annual conference.

15th Annual MURAP Conference Announcement

July 24-25, 2009

Conference Theme: "The State of Faculty Diversity in the U.S. in the 21st Century"

Each year, the MURAP program culminates with an Academic Conference where invited scholars and some of our students present their research and engage with the entire student cohort, faculty mentors, alumni and the general public. This year's program features two keynote speakers, two panels of distinguished scholars, and presentations from MURAP alumni and MURAP and MMUF current student scholars (

Conference events will be held in Hitchcock Multipurpose Room, Sonja Haynes Stone Center on the campus of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Free and open to the public.

MURAP is in its 20th year of existence and the conference is in its 15th. The program aims to increase the representation of ethnically diverse Ph.D.s in the humanities, fine arts and social sciences in the United States. Participating in a ten-week program, student fellows are expected to work on a full-time basis on a research project of their own design in close consultation with a faculty mentor, attend a GRE review course and several workshops aimed at preparing them for graduate school and beyond. The program's objective is to aid students in developing graduate-level work and encourage them to apply to graduate school upon graduation.

We are very excited about the potential impact of our 2009 conference and trust that it will have a wide reach given its anticipated diverse audience of scholars, students, community leaders and the public in general. We hope that you will be able to join us for what promises to be two full days of stimulating presentations and lively discussion!

Stone Center and IAAR to Co-Host African American Studies Consortium Program & Reception

On Monday, September 21st the Stone Center and the IAAR will jointly sponsor a program and reception for the African American Research Studies Consortium. The gathering will include a program in the Hitchcock Room and a reception in suite 309 of the Stone Center. This is a continuing networking initiative that seeks to connect UNC faculty, postdocs, staff, graduate students, and community members who conduct research on African Americans and peoples of African-descent throughout the Diaspora. The reception will allow Consortium members to meet IAAR's new Director, Dr. Fatimah Jackson as well as become informed about new initiatives at the Stone Center, the IAAR, and the Stone Center Library. For more information, please see www.unc.edu/iaar and click on the Consortium icon on the right-hand side of the page. The Consortium is a joint effort between IAAR, the Sonja Haynes Stone Center for Black Culture and History, and the Department of African and Afro-American Studies. This year we are especially keen to invite a broad cross-section of regional faculty, staff, students, and community members to the Program and Reception. We hope that you will be sure to join us! More details on the Program and Reception to follow in the next issue of The Carolina Catalyst.

IAAR Research Fellowships Available

The IAAR is currently soliciting applications for Research Fellows for 2009-2010. Beginning this academic year, Research Fellows will be associated with either of the Institute's two research units: the EKU (Endogenous Knowledge Unit) or the IRLU (Integrated Research Liaison Unit). Applicants should have an earned doctorate in any field and a research project relevant to the African American experience. Special consideration will be given to applicants with research interests that coincide with the Institute's programmatic objectives for 2009-2010 or 2010-2011. IAAR Research Fellows are offered research space, a small research stipend, and computer access for the duration of their residency at the Institute. Research Fellows are expected to give a public seminar at the Institute on their research topic, participate in various Institute activities and programs, credit the Institute on all publications associated with their fellowship, and to use their residency at the Institute to apply for additional extramural research funding. Applications will be available on the IAAR website August 1, 2009.

Stone Center Library and IAAR to Collaborate on Projects in

In mid-July Shauna Collier and Fatimah Jackson met to discuss ways in which the Stone Center Library and the IAAR could collaborate. Not only did they discover many shared interests, their shared residence on the third floor of the Stone Center will greatly facilitate their planned cooperation. A number of specific projects were discussed and as these negotiations continue, it is anticipated that this collaboration will yield a greatly enhanced research agenda for both the Library and the Institute. Some projects under consideration include research presentations on the Gullah peoples of the Carolinas, the historical impact of Black towns in the US, and the Afro-Latino presence in the Americas. As these discussions continue and more details emerge, look to The Carolina Catalyst for reports!

Subject:	INFORMATIONAL: Child Participants Needed for Hearing Research Study

The Human Auditory Development Laboratory is currently recruiting children between 5-14 years old to help us learn more about how children hear in noisy environments.

During the testing, your child will sit in a sound-treated room and will listen to sounds presented over earphones. Your child will be asked to indicate when they hear sounds by either touching a picture on a touch-screen monitor or telling an assistant who sits inside the booth with your child during testing. The sounds we use are not loud.

One to three visits to the laboratory are required. Each visit lasts about one hour. You will receive $15/hour and give you a parking pass for parking if you drive to the lab.

If you are interested please call (919) 843-3672 or email childhear@med.unc.edu and leave your first name, and a number by which we can reach you (indicating the best times to call).

The principal investigator for this study is Lori Leibold, PhD, Department of Allied Health Sciences.

Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: Message from the Chancellor: Vice Chancellor for Human Resources Announcement

Dear Faculty and Staff,

During my first year in office, I have seen time after time the critical role that the University's employees play in Carolina's success. They are the University's most important asset and resource. That is why I have decided to elevate the position currently held by Brenda Richardson Malone to vice chancellor. I want the senior administrator with principal responsibility for our staff (the head of the Office of Human Resources) to report directly to me and to serve in my Cabinet, along with the senior administrator with the comparable responsibility for our faculty (the Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost). This move increases Brenda's access and involvement in the administration's daily activities while at the same time reducing layers of management devoted to our human resources function. Our Board of Trustees approved the change this morning, effective August 1.

Brenda has been associate vice chancellor for human resources for the past two years. She came to Carolina with 30 years of experience in human resources, including 14 years as vice chancellor for faculty and staff relations at The City University of New York.

During her time here, Brenda has shown great judgment in applying her knowledge of the best human resources practices to the complex issues that we face in North Carolina and within the University. In these difficult economic times, she has recognized the challenges posed by budget cuts across the University and has reinforced the Office of Human Resources' commitment to providing a broad range of quality workplace benefits and services for managers and our more than 12,000 faculty and staff.

Because of our budget situation, Brenda's salary will remain the same.

Please join me in supporting Brenda in this new role.

Sincerely,

Holden Thorp

Colleagues,

I am pleased to let you know that Joe Templeton, immediate past Chair of the Faculty and former chair of the Department of Chemistry, has agreed to a part-time role as special assistant to the chancellor for planning and initiatives.

Joe's primary charge is to manage our response to the Bain & Company report. I think it's imperative that we move quickly to analyze the options presented in the report and to act on those that will help us be a more efficient, effective institution. You know as well as I do that the economic situation isn't getting any better. The Bain report has given us insight into ways to save and possibly redirect those savings into our academic mission.

Joe's knowledge of the University is extensive, and I can't think of a better colleague to have working next to me. His deep understanding of Carolina's operations and culture is especially important as we examine the Bain report.

Joe will continue to teach and direct graduate students. While his nine-month salary will not change, he will be paid a stipend for this work.

As we develop our response to the Bain report, I pledge to keep you informed. And please keep e-mailing us your ideas about the budget and the Bain report to budgetideas@unc.edu.

Sincerely,

Holden Thorp

Subject: Honoring Debby's Service

Colleagues,

Although Debby's impending retirement is coming fast, we would be seriously remiss if we did not create a significant occasion to recognize and honor her more than 30 years of service to our department. It has been suggested that such an occasion might take place in the week prior to the start of classes (Wed. Aug. 19 is a date that has been suggested), perhaps reserving the Faculty Lounge in the Campus Y building.

Do colleagues have ideas or suggestions as to what might be appropriate, or how we might recognize Debby?

Subject: Honoring Debby's Service

Dear Perry and other FODs (Friends of Debby),

In my conversation with Debby I came to the same conclusion as Kenneth. In fact, I got the impression that her original plan to leave at the end of July was in part to make it impossible for us to organize a traditional send-off event. And as you know, she has managed to be "unable to attend" all of the receptions we have had for our majors at the Stone Center, even though she must have known that she would have received more accolades than any of us. So, I agree that maybe we should come with some other kind of send-off, or tribute, or gift...something meaningful, but not traditional. -Reg

Hey DJ,

Update me on the current status of showing DVD's in classrooms like CP 201 and 211.

If I remember correctly, there was some problem with the players last year.
Has that been resolved?

Dear Marie Donahue:

On behalf of the Center for Global Initiatives, I am very pleased to inform you that your Foreign Language and Area Studies application [ID: 429022] has been recommended for funding in the amount of $15000.0.

The award is conditional and may be based on the verification of various factors.

To accept this award, please login to our online application system and accept or decline your award: http://gi-apps.unc.edu/appcenter.

If you accept your award, a CGI Program Officer will contact you regarding the administrative, accounting and reporting procedures associated with the award. In the meantime, if you have any questions regarding this notification, please do not hesitate to contact us.

Hey Marie,

I should have sent you this a while back! This is just our formal way of tracking our online applications. Just login and accept the award!

Thanks,

~Beth-Ann

Congratulations on your award!

Sincerely,

Niklaus Steiner

Subject: FORMAL NOTICE: H1N1 Flu Update: University Issues New Guidelines for Fall 2009

Dear Faculty and Staff:

As the H1N1 influenza A continues circulating widely worldwide, health officials expect cases to keep increasing in the United States in the next few months since influenza transmission typically spreads more rapidly during the fall and winter. Those patterns suggest that University students, faculty and staff could be exposed to someone with H1N1 flu -- either on or off campus - and contract the illness.

On Aug. 5, 2009, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) issued new guidelines about the best ways to prevent spreading the H1N1 flu. Based on that information, the University has developed new recommendations for when University students, faculty or staff should stay home from work or school. These recommendations supersede the guidance provided by the University on June 30, 2009. (The University will communicate separately with students and parents.).

Guidelines for Faculty, Staff and Health-Care Workers

* University faculty and staff who are well but have a family member at home with H1N1 flu: Can go to work as usual. These employees should monitor their health every day. If they become ill, they should notify their supervisors and stay home using available leave (sick leave, vacation, bonus leave or flexible furlough program). Employees who have an underlying medical condition or who are pregnant should call their health-care providers for advice or care - including whether they should receive influenza antiviral drugs to prevent illness - before reporting to work.

People who are at high risk of complications from H1N1 infection - for example, persons with certain chronic medical conditions, children less than 5 years or adults 65 years or older and pregnant women - should consider their risk of exposure if they attend public gatherings in communities where influenza A virus is circulating.

* Employees who are experiencing an acute respiratory illness with a fever greater than 100.4 degrees along with cough, nasal congestion or sore throat: Should not come to work and should stay away from others (self isolate). Those who wish to seek medical care should contact their health-care provider to report illness by telephone or other means before seeking care. If persons with these symptoms must leave their home (for example, to seek medical care or other necessities), they should cover their nose and mouth when coughing or sneezing. A surgical loose-fitting mask can be helpful, but a tissue or other covering is appropriate, too. They should stay home from work, school and any community gatherings for 24 hours after their fever resolves. Their fever should be gone without the use of a fever-reducing medicine (antipyretic). Employees should use available leave (sick leave, vacation, bonus leave or flexible furlough program) if they need to stay home from work.

University health-care workers

* University health-care workers who have exposures at home to known or suspected novel H1N1: Should take their temperature each day and NOT come to work if they develop a fever with sore throat or cough.

* Health-care workers who develop a fever at work with a sore throat or cough: Should immediately go home.

* Health-care workers with a fever and cough or sore throat: Should remain home for 24 hours after their fever resolves. Their fever should be gone without the use of a fever-reducing medicine (antipyretic) before they may return to work. If they still have respiratory symptoms they should wear a mask while providing patient care until asymptomatic.

* Health-care workers may work with a cough or other upper respiratory symptoms in all units except the Neonatal Critical Care, Pediatric Critical Care and Bone Marrow Transplant Units: Employees in these units who develop respiratory symptoms even if without a fever should be evaluated by the University's Occupational Health Clinic. In other units, health-care workers with respiratory symptoms without a fever may work if they wear a mask at all times while providing patient care and practicing appropriate hand hygiene.

* If a UNC Health Care employee is exposed to a patient with novel H1N1 (for example, within three feet without wearing a mask): The UNC Health Care System will offer post-exposure prophylaxis only if the employee's immune system is compromised, the employee is at high risk for complications if they develop influenza or the employee is pregnant (after consultation with the employee's obstetrician). Such employees should take their temperature before coming to work and should not come to work if they develop a fever as well as any respiratory symptoms.

CDC Tips to Fight H1N1 Flu

Although H1N1 flu has proven to be relatively mild and responsive to anti-viral drugs, the CDC recommends that everyone take the following actions to stay healthy:

* Cover your nose and mouth with a tissue when you cough or sneeze.
* Throw the tissue in the trash after you use it.
* Wash your hands often with soap and water, especially after you cough or sneeze. Alcohol-based hand sanitizers can be used if soap and water are not available.
* Avoid touching your eyes, nose or mouth. Germs spread this way.
* Avoid close contact with sick people.

The University's Department of Environment, Health and Safety, http://www.ehs.unc.edu/healthy/h1n1.shtml, is leading Carolina's response to the H1N1 flu in collaboration with the UNC Health Care System, UNC General Administration, the N.C. Department of Health and Human Services, and the Orange County Department of Public Health.

Information about H1N1 is updated as conditions warrant on Alert Carolina, http://alertcarolina.unc.edu, and on the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention Web site, http://www.cdc.gov/h1n1flu/.

Subject:	INFORMATIONAL: Tuition Waiver Policy Change

FROM: Brian Usischon, Benefits Services
Office of Human Resources

The Governor has signed into law Senate Bill 202, the Appropriations Act of 2009. The Act changes the University's tuition waiver policy by reducing the number of free courses a full-time faculty or staff member may enroll in per academic year, from three to two. This change is retroactive to July 1, 2009, and impacts the 2009-2010 academic year.

Employees who completed a Tuition Waiver form for the fall 2009 semester that included three courses should contact the Cashiers' Office at 962-1368 to make arrangements to either pay for a class or to follow the necessary drop/add procedures.

The Tuition Waiver form has been updated and is posted to the Office of Human Resource Web site. Please begin using the new version of this form. The Tuition Waiver deadline for the Fall 2009 semester is Monday, Aug. 31.

Questions concerning the tuition waiver program can be directed to Benefits Services at 962-3071 or benefits@unc.edu.

RESERVE READINGS
Make sure your reserve and e-reserve readings are ready for the beginning of the semester by submitting them now. The Library can also assist in obtaining copyright permissions.
Reserves information: http://library.unc.edu/reserves/instructors.html or reserves_reading@unc.edu.

CAROLINA BLU CAMPUS DELIVERY SERVICES
The Library introduces its Carolina BLU ("Bring the Library to You")campus delivery service. Have the books you need delivered to your campus box or a campus library near you. The articles you need will be scanned and emailed to you.
Carolina BLU: http://library.unc.edu/circ/doc_delivery/

LIBRARY TOURS AND INSTRUCTION SESSIONS
Introduce students to library resources and research techniques by scheduling a tour or hands-on instruction session with a library subject specialist. Use the online request form; a librarian will contact you to confirm the date and time and discuss your goals for the tour or class.
Tour/Instruction request form:

Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: Message from the Chancellor: Campus Budget Update

Dear Faculty and Staff:

Many of you know that the General Assembly has finalized the North Carolina budget for 2009-2011 after making tough decisions about new tax increases, spending cuts and reduced services. Earlier this month, Governor Perdue signed the new budget into law. Carolina is taking about a 7 percent cut following the Board of Governors action last week on the system budget.

Considering the state's still uncertain revenue picture and this budget's impact on other state agencies, legislators treated the UNC system very fairly overall. Governor Perdue has also understandably signaled her intention to conservatively manage the state's resources in the coming months. She has rescinded the emergency budget restrictions for state funds that have been in place since last month. But she also instructed the Office of State Budget and Management to withhold 5 percent of each state agency's monthly allotment starting next month. While this is another reduction for us to manage, we understand that the governor needs to proceed with caution in this environment.

Because of the steps we have taken since March, we won't seek any additional cuts from campus units to handle the 5 percent holdback. If revenues continue to decline, the governor may take additional steps that would require additional cuts in campus units. Nevertheless, we are hopeful that our current measures may, in fact, hold us for the fiscal year.

Keep in mind that we already enacted a total 10 percent permanent cut for state appropriations effective in July. We didn't want to wait for a final state budget to activate those plans, and this enabled us to accommodate what is effectively a 12 percent cut by getting started when we did. Our focus has remained on protecting core academic and teaching programs. By keeping cuts away from the classroom, we limited campus reductions to instructional units to just over 5 percent.

Overall, we have much to be grateful for in the new state budget.

* We expect to receive about $5 million from the UNC system's share allocated for enrollment growth, and another $2 million for need-based financial aid.

* General Administration will receive $2 million in permanent funding for faculty recruitment and retention. Historically, we have fared well when President Bowles distributes those funds.

* The University Cancer Research Fund, which supports basic interdisciplinary research across campus through the Lineberger Comprehensive Cancer Center and the School of Medicine, will receive the full $50 million installment originally committed to in 2007.

* A related longtime capital priority, the Biomedical Research Imaging Center, has been approved for construction. This is great news as UNC Health Care prepares to formally dedicate the North Carolina Cancer Hospital next month.

Our research centers and institutes, which have played such a vital role in fueling the success of the entire campus in attracting federal research grants, are being cut between 17 percent and 23 percent. That's still not as severe as we had feared earlier in the legislative session, and it's coming with some management flexibility. While I know this is a hardship for our faculty and staff engaged in the hard work of conducting research to help people, please understand how difficult a job our legislators had in balancing competing interests. We've made every effort to minimize the impact, as much as possible, on the campus-wide research enterprise. Moving forward, our focus should be on continuing to inspire the confidence of legislators in this important work so that it results in more, rather than less flexibility in making our own decisions about spending reductions.

Uncertainty about final tuition rates for the academic year has been a concern for our students. The General Assembly authorized the tuition increases for this year already approved by the UNC Board of Governors. However, legislators also signaled that campus-based tuition increases in 2010-2011 will be off the table. Our campus typically uses this revenue to support faculty compensation, graduate teaching assistant stipends, need-based financial aid to offset any tuition hikes, and other academic priorities.

The state budget and support of North Carolina taxpayers is very important to our overall operations, but it's roughly a quarter of the total budget. We've seen some recent bright spots. The faculty just set a new record for external research funding in 2009 (more than $716 million), and we are well positioned for continued success in attracting federal research dollars available through the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act. Our development office just recorded the second highest total of cash gifts ($271 million) in University history. Our alumni and friends are providing a remarkable level of private support for Carolina despite the economy. This is not to suggest that we still won't have difficult financial decisions to make and issues to grapple with in the coming months. We will. But we can't let the state's financial condition paralyze us from advancing the work of the University.

I want to thank those of you who have taken the time to watch and read about the final report from Bain & Company, the global consulting firm that has been helping the University look for ways to streamline operations and be more effective. [If you haven't seen it yet, check www.unc.edu for a link to the University's Budget Information Web page.] I appreciate the feedback many of you have shared about that report and encourage you to share comments about the Bain report or other budget issues at budgetideas@email.unc.edu.

Thank you for all that you do to make Carolina such a great place. I continue to be so appreciative of the commitment of our employees and faculty to Carolina and the spirit with which we have faced these challenges. With our students about to return for another academic year, I'm excited about what a new semester will bring for our campus community.

Sincerely,

Holden Thorp

From Carolina Blue to Carolina Green

Every worthy accomplishment begins with a great idea - what's yours?

Have you recognized ways to cut costs, increase environmental sustainability, or reduce resource consumption within your department or somewhere else on campus? If so, your idea might earn you a great prize like dinner and an overnight stay at the Carolina Inn or lunch with the Chancellor!
The University Management Development Program (UMDP)'s "From Carolina Blue to Carolina Green Team" is sponsoring a contest for permanent UNC Faculty and Staff to come up with the most innovative, practical, and creative solutions to help make UNC a little more green. All ideas, regardless of scale, are welcome; however, preference will be given to those ideas that are achievable in a short period of time, and reasonably inexpensive to implement. Winners will be selected and announced in late fall, and the best ideas will be presented to top decision-makers at the University.

Submissions should be emailed to: CarolinaBlueToCarolinaGreen@unc.edu
Include the following:

Your Name
Email
Phone Number
Department
Job Title
A brief, typed summary of your idea.

Submission Deadline is October 15, 2009.

Don't delay, UNC needs your ideas! Good luck, and think green!

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Nature Education for young children

This fall, the North Carolina Botanical Garden is growing educational enrichment opportunities for young children. From an after-school nature club for Kindergarten and 1st Graders, to weekly exploration times for pre-schoolers, the Botanical Garden is welcoming young ones to join our environmental educators for fun and learning in our gardens and along our nature trails. Classrooms in the spacious, brand new Education Center on site will welcome children and their parents on rainy days. Following is a partial list of opportunities to foster your child's sense of wonder. Visit our website for registration and other information: http://ncbg.unc.edu/pages/24/ or call 962-0522.

"BLUETS--PRESCHOOLERS EXPLORING NATURE" For ages 4 to 5. Two 6-week sessions, Wednesdays or Thursday afternoons (fee for 6-week session). Preschoolers will discover the marvels of changing colors, flying seeds, and migrating animals through hands-on activities, nature walks, stories, crafts, and group play. Two instructors guide activities for a group of 10 children. Snack provided.

"BOTANICAL SWEET PEAS" For ages 2 to 3 with a parent. Tuesday mornings (fee per Tuesday). Share a morning of discovery with your growing "sweet pea" and nurture his/her natural curiosity for the world around us. Little ones will use sight, smell, hearing, and touch to explore the garden and trails, enjoy stories, and make simple crafts. Each Tuesday focuses on a different theme in nature.

"BLAZING STARS AFTER-SCHOOL NATURE CLUB" For Kindergarten through 1st Grade. (Fee for 6-week session). Calling all young nature enthusiasts! Join us for a new after-school series on Tuesday afternoons designed for children interested in learning about nature first-hand. We'll explore habitats, trek the trails, discover native plants and animals, play games, conduct experiments, and create nature-inspired art projects. This program offers an exciting complement to your child's education and an opportunity to experience and enjoy the outdoors.

Subject:	INFORMATIONAL: Call for Burch Seminar proposals (international or domestic)

Call for Proposals
Burch Field Research Seminars
"Education in the Classroom and Out in the World"
http://www.burchseminars.unc.edu

Overview of Burch Field Research Seminars

Burch Field Research Seminars showcase the relationship between faculty research and undergraduate education. Burch Seminars offer undergraduate students the opportunity to participate in UNC faculty-led off-campus programs that combine traditional course work with active, experiential learning. A changing roster of seminars is offered each year in destinations foreign and domestic. The Office of Burch Programs invites faculty members from all UNC departments to submit proposals for the development of Burch Seminars following the guidelines outlined below.

Guidelines for Burch Faculty Proposals

Faculty interested in leading a Burch Field Research Seminar are invited to submit proposals outlining the program, including the courses that students will take and the "hands-on" experience in which they will be engaged. Since these seminars typically require extensive planning, proposals must be submitted a minimum of 18 months in advance of the scheduled launch date. Proposals are reviewed by the Burch Field Research Seminars Faculty Advisory Board, which recommends four to five seminars each year to the Director of Burch Programs and Honors Study Abroad and the Associate Dean for Honors.

Burch Field Research Seminars provide 12-15 hours of academic credit in a mix of independent study and formal course work. In addition to the course(s) offered by the faculty director, additional courses can be arranged through partner institutions or adjunct faculty at the program site. While the majority of Burch Seminars are semester programs, proposals for summer programs (minimum of six weeks, six credit hours) are also welcomed.

Proposals should include the following:

* Detailed description of the program and academic goals
* Choice of program location and affiliations
* Program dates
* Outline of program itinerary
* Course description(s) and suggestions for additional course work (semester programs)
* Description of cultural immersion activities and additional excursions
* Outline of program budget
* Curriculum vitae

A number of successful models have been used to deliver the "hands-on" experience of the Burch Field Research Seminars, and new models are always welcomed. Proven models include:

* Internships: Students work with businesses, non-governmental organizations, or governmental agencies.

* Unique Observation and Experience: Students are invited to observe and experience first-hand unfolding world events.
* Documentary Projects: Students investigate and document the history or culture of the field site.
* Performance: Students are provided a special opportunity to engage in an artistic endeavor.
* Archaeological Excavations
* Service-learning (with substantial research component)

The faculty director should be familiar with the intended program site. Previous experience in developing a study abroad program is not required. Faculty directors will receive training and logistical support from Friederike Seeger, Director of Burch Programs and Honors Study Abroad and the UNC Study Abroad Office. Burch Seminars that enroll at least 12 students can generally support a position for a teaching assistant. The Honors Program will pay the department $15,000 plus benefits (the standard two-course buy-out rate in the College of Arts and Sciences) for faculty leading semester programs.

For additional information, or to discuss ideas for a seminar proposal, please contact Ms. Friederike Seeger, Director of Burch Programs and Honors Study Abroad at fseeger@email.unc.edu or 919-962-9680.

Title: New Student Convocation
Date: Sunday, August 23, 2009
Time: 4 p.m. Eastern Time (US and Canada) Time

Description: New Student Convocation is a formal welcome to the University, designed to engage students in the intellectual endeavors of our University and to introduce them to the proud traditions of Carolina. By attending this ceremony and representing your department and the work it does with undergraduates, you play a critical role in exposing new students to your field and the opportunities of the academic community from the very start.

Your participation enhances New Student Convocation and helps it to more closely mirror the formal graduation ceremony. Thus, you are invited to join the Chancellor, and others, in the formal processional of the New Student Convocation that will be held this year on Sunday, August 23, 2009, at 4:00 p.m. in the Dean E. Smith Center. College faculty and others will be recognized during the ceremony.

We request that all members of the faculty wear academic regalia. The stage party will process at 4:00 p.m. but please plan to arrive by 3:30 p.m. and meet in the Memorabilia Room on the second floor for robing. Parking will be available in the lot adjacent to the Smith Center (Koury Lot).

Dear Alphonse and Julius,

I hope this finds you well and happy after a nice summer break.

I write to see if it's possible for me to informally sit in on the Swahili 401 class from Noon to 1 here in the GEC? I am working on a documentary about Carolina for Kibera and hope to travel to Kenya within the next year. I would have enrolled officially but I have some conferences and other work related functions that will require that I'm away from campus and fear that I would have missed exams and too many classes.

I certainly understand if you don't have room. If you do, I would be very pleased to attend.

Thank you for your consideration,

~Beth-Ann

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Distinguished Alumna/us Awards Nominations Sought

Dear Colleagues:

The Faculty Committee on Honorary Degrees and Special Awards invites nominations for Distinguished Alumna and Alumnus Awards to be presented at the October 12, 2010, University Day ceremony. A maximum of five awards is authorized by the enabling faculty legislation. Those so honored are nominated by the committee, recommended by the Faculty Council, and approved by the Board of Trustees.

Awards are not conferred in absentia or posthumously.

Please include appropriate biographical information and a statement in support of the nomination. Your statement should demonstrate that the nominee has made an outstanding contribution to humanity in any walk of life. Nominators often seek supporting letters from others, but the content of such letters, not their number, is what counts. Go to http://www.unc.edu/faculty/faccoun/honorary/DAA/DAAroster.shtml for the roster of previous recipients.

Nominations must be received in the Office of Faculty Governance no later than Wednesday, October 14, 2009. Please send materials to:

Office of Faculty Governance
CB# 9170
Fax: 919-962-5479
Email: anne_whisnant@unc.edu

Nominees must be alumni of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. This is defined as including all persons who were registered for at least one full academic year as a student in residence in any college or school of the University. In general, anyone listed in the General Alumni Association's Alumni Directory is eligible except members of the University faculty, staff, and administration. They become eligible two years after separation from the University.

Members of the Committee on Honorary Degrees and Special Awards are Professors Jan Yopp, Chair; Bland Simpson, Etta Pisano, Robert Anthony, Gene Nichol, Werner Reiss, and Joseph Ferrell (ex officio). Please contact me or any other member of the committee if you have questions about eligibility or process.

Sincerely yours,

Joseph S. Ferrell
Secretary of the Faculty

Subject:	INFORMATIONAL: Volunteers Wanted for Nutrition Research Study

The Nutrition Department at UNC-Chapel Hill is enrolling participants for a study to examine the effects of estrogen and certain gene variations on human choline requirements.

Choline is an essential nutrient and is found in many foods. We recently found that the human choline requirement differs from person to person and is influenced by estrogen and common gene variations. The purpose of this study is to improve our understanding of how these factors change a person's need for choline.

We are looking for healthy women, with a BMI range of 18-38, who are 18-85 years of age, with no liver problems, no history of heart disease or blood clots, and no history of breast or endometrial cancer.

All participants will ingest diets that are low in the nutrient choline.

Participants who are eligible must only eat food provided by the General Clinical Research Center (GCRC). They must also live and stay at the GCRC in UNC Hospital for up to 63 days and will receive their meals there during this time. The entire study will last up to 9 weeks. Participants will NOT be able to attend school or go to work during their participation in this study.

Participants will receive up to $3500 for completing the study.

For more information, please call (919) 408-3320 x32 or send an email to: Adult_Choline_Study@unc.edu

Subject:	INFORMATIONAL: Excellent resource for your class

Dear Professor,

My name is Ben Saypol, and I run Interactive Theatre Carolina, a program out of Counseling and Wellness Services. I just want you to know that we are an excellent resource for you here on campus.

We perform interactive theatre scenes or provide interactive theatre workshops, free of charge, on a variety of health, wellness, and social justice issues, including race, class, gender, sexual identity/orientation, sexual assault, drugs/alcohol, eating disorders, and other topics. You can use us in two ways: we can come to your class and present a 75-minute engaging performance or workshop with extensive class participation. Or you can send your students (as part of an assignment or extra credit) to one of our public performances. We consistently receive incredible feedback from our student audiences, which you can read on our website.

To learn more, please visit our website at:
http://campushealth.unc.edu/itc . To request a performance or workshop for your class, or for more information, please contact me at (919) 966-2999 or saypol@unc.edu.

Have a wonderful semester!
Ben

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: In a romantic relationship?Participate in a UNC research study with your partner

---

What makes romantic relationships work? Help us find out!

You are invited to participate in a new scientific research study designed to understand what makes relationships work. Whether you are in a blissful relationship, think your relationship could use a boost, or if you think you have a perfectly "normal" relationship, we are interested in what you have to say.

People who have been involved in a heterosexual romantic relationship for at least one year (no upper limit), and have been living with their partner for at least 6 months are eligible to participate in the study with their romantic partner. Each couple will be compensated with up to $120 for their participation, with chances to receive gift certificates ($50 to $100) to a local restaurant.

After an initial online questionnaire (20-30 minutes), the study involves two 75-90 minute visits to our laboratory on the UNC campus, four weeks apart. In the lab, at the beginning and end of the study, we will record your physiology and interactions with your romantic partner, and will collect samples of your saliva to measure your naturally-occurring hormone levels. During the intervening four week period, we'll ask you to provide a snapshot of your everyday life by responding to a brief (3-5 minute) questionnaire online each night. Finally, on 4 to 6 occasions during this four week period, we will ask you to supplement your normal, everyday interactions with your partner by setting aside 20-30 minutes to talk alone together. The second lab session will allow us to assess the role that these different factors play in your relationship, and to answer any additional questions you have. We anticipate that time spent in this study with your partner and in answering private questionnaires will average less than 6.5 hours over the course of the month.

We would love to hear from you, and we would be more than happy to give you further information about the study. Please do not hesitate to contact us if you would like more information, or would like to sign up for the study: UNC.Relationships.Study@gmail.com, or 919-843-0092.

For measurement purposes, in addition to the above, you are NOT eligible for this study if you:
- Are under 24 years old.
- Are currently taking antidepressants or have been recently diagnosed with depression or an anxiety disorder.
- Are a woman who is: over 40, postmenopausal, pregnant (or plan to become pregnant during the course of the study), within 6 months postpartum, nursing (lactating), or have had an oophorectomy (i.e., ovaries must be intact).
- Are a man on steroid medication.

We look forward to hearing from you, and will return your email or phone call as soon as possible. Sessions will begin immediately.

Sincerely,
Sara Algoe, Ph.D. and Barbara Fredrickson, Ph.D.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: 2009-2010 Men's Basketball Season Tickets

---

Dear Carolina Basketball Fan:

As fall approaches, it's time for another exciting year of Carolina Men's Basketball. In addition to eight ACC opponents, the Tar Heels will host ten non-conference opponents.

As a member of the Carolina family, we would like to extend to you the opportunity to purchase season tickets or an attractive half-season package. Season tickets (18 home games) for the 2009-2010 season are $610.00 and the nine game package (4 conference/5 non-conference games) costs $425.00. No more than two tickets may be purchased per family, even if both husband and wife are employees of the University or UNC Hospitals.

If you ordered season or half-season basketball tickets in 2008-2009, a renewal application has been mailed to the address to which last year's season tickets were sent. If you are new to UNC or did not order season or half-season basketball tickets in 2008-2009, you may pick up an application at the Smith Center Ticket Office by presenting your UNC OneCard or UNC Hospitals ID. Please note that the UNC Athletic Ticket Office is now located in the ground floor of the new Ernie Williamson Athletic Center, adjacent to Koury Natatorium. You may also use the renewal application to purchase tickets to the exhibition game versus Belmont Abbey, which is not a part of the season ticket package. You may also purchase tickets for the Coaches vs. Cancer tournament to be played at Madison Square Garden in New York City on November 19 and 20. Tickets are $100 a piece and will include a ticket for both semifinal games, the consolation game and the championship game. The Tar Heels will be joined by Ohio State, Syracuse and California-Berkeley in the tournament.
Faculty and staff season tickets are not guaranteed. The Ticket Office will make every attempt to fulfill each order. Orders may be reduced from a full-season to a half-season or may not be fulfilled at all, based on faculty/staff priority points. You will be refunded the difference if your order is unable to be completely fulfilled. The Ticket Office will contact you after the September 11th deadline if your order is adjusted or cancelled. Faculty and staff tickets are assigned based on a points system that takes into account years of service at the University and years of ordering tickets.

Please do not use campus mail to send your application and payment. In order to receive your faculty/staff ticket priority, the UNC Athletic Ticket Office must receive your ticket order form no later than September 11, 2009. For after hours delivery, please use the secure drop-box to the right of the ticket windows.

We look forward to seeing you at the Smith Center this season as we tip-off a new season of CAROLINA BASKETBALL!

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: ACL injury research

The UNC-CH Neuromuscular Research Laboratory is conducting a study on how the hamstring muscles protect the knee joint. Specifically, we're interested in how hamstring muscle stiffness potentially protects the anterior cruciate ligament. We are recruiting volunteer subjects for participation in this study. Subjects will receive $25 for participation which will involve three different tests lasting approximately one hour. These tests include 1) maximal contraction of the hamstrings muscles, 2) hamstring muscle stiffness, and 3) knee joint stability. There are some risks associated with participating in this study, but they are not greater than those associated with normal physical activity such as running or playing basketball.

If you choose to participate, you will have small sensors attached to your right leg while you perform the three different tests. These devices will be used to measure muscle activity and joint motions during each activity.

To be eligible to participate in this study, you must meet the following criteria:
1. Age 18 - 30
2. No history of lower extremity surgery
3. No history of ACL injury
4. No history of neurological disorder
5. No history of injury to either leg within 6 months prior to data collection
6. Physically active, participating in at least 20 minutes of physical activity a minimum of 3 times weekly

If you have any questions regarding this study, or if you meet the aforementioned inclusion criteria and are interested in participating please contact us at troyb@email.unc.edu.

This study was approved by the UNC-CH Biomedical Institutional Review Board on August 5, 2009 (IRB# 09-1275).

Subject: FORMAL NOTICE: 2010-11 COMPETITIVE RESEARCH & SCHOLARLY LEAVES

TO: Members of the Faculty

FROM: Bruce Carney, Interim Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost
Chair, Committee on Faculty Research and Study Leaves SUBJECT: Competitive Research and Scholarly Leaves

DATE: August 28, 2009

The University will accept applications this fall for competitive research leaves. The leaves are to be taken in the period beginning July 1, 2010, and ending June 30, 2011. Funds supporting these leaves in 2010-11 will pay a full salary for half of the annual service period of the applicant or a half salary for the full annual service period up to a maximum amount of $60,000.

The competition for these leaves is very intense because the funds available have been substantially reduced. Leaves are paid from Kenan, Pogue, William R. Kenan, Jr., William N. Reynolds, and R.J. Reynolds Industries. Thus faculty are strongly urged to apply outside the University for support for their research and creative projects. Further, faculty who expect any kind of leave consideration will buttress their case if they have applied for both the University leaves and those awarded by outside agencies.

I. The following terms apply to the leaves:

A. Any full-time salaried member of the faculty is eligible to apply unless fewer than five years have elapsed since the applicant's return from one of the leaves listed in the second paragraph of this announcement.

B. Preference will be given to applicants who have tenure and to those who have not had an off-campus assignment during the past three years. Individuals holding fixed-term appointments will generally be considered as less competitive. Length and distinction of the service of the applicant may be recognized by the Committee in making its recommendations for leave awards, but the quality of the research proposal itself will be the paramount consideration. The Committee will be influenced by the research experience of the applicant and by the prospect that work done during the leave will make a significant research contribution or, in the case of proposals dealing with the creative arts and letters, creative contribution. The Committee may also consider the contribution which the research is likely to make in furthering the career of the faculty member and the research interests of the University.

C. Proposals dealing with creative activity and study by artists, musicians, and writers will be considered together with proposals for scholarly research.

D. While on leave with full pay, successful applicants may not receive through the University payroll office any salary payments other than leave pay from one of the sources mentioned above (e.g. Kenan, Pogue, etc.); or in cases where the rate of pay exceeds the predetermined maximum, another non-state (i.e. trust funds) source of funds. Persons receiving half pay while on leave may not also hold half-time teaching posts in the University.

II. Announcement of leave awards will be made before December 31, 2009.

Applicants should submit the original and seven copies of the application to the Office of the Provost, CB #8000, 218 South Building. Completed applications must be received in the Office of the Provost before 5:00 p.m. on Friday, October 2, 2009, in order to be considered by the Committee.

III. Applications should consist of the original and seven copies of:

A. a letter to the Chair of the Committee on Faculty Research and Study Leaves

B. a description of the work to be undertaken during the leave. The description should provide some detail, but under no circumstances should the description exceed two pages in length.

The description should also indicate what the research leave would do for the applicant and for the institution, describe the significance of the research work to the field, and relate the significance of the research work to the applicant's overall research and career development. The applicant should specify the time period proposed for the leave and should identify any non-University sources of support which may be available during the period of the proposed leave;

C. a curriculum vitae of the applicant with indications of past leaves or released time or reassignment of duties;

D. a supporting statement from the immediate superior of the applicant. When there is a case of more than one application from a department or school, the chair or dean/director will be asked to rank the applications.

IV. The Committee on Faculty Research and Study Leaves will consist of the following individuals for the 2009-10 Academic Year: the Deans of the School of Medicine and the College of Arts and Sciences, two faculty members (one from Academic Affairs, one from Health Affairs), the Executive Associate Provost, the Associate Provost for Academic Initiatives, and the Int. Provost as Chair.

The INSTITUTE for the ARTS and HUMANITIES announces:

FACULTY FELLOWSHIPS 2010-2011

The Institute for the Arts and Humanities is offering UNC-Chapel Hill faculty members a unique opportunity: a semester-long, on-campus fellowship to work on projects for publication, exhibition, composition or performance.

The fellowship centers on a weekly three-hour seminar at Hyde Hall where Fellows exchange ideas with eight to 12 peers from various disciplines. Faculty may apply for either the fall or spring semester. Faculty who previously held any fellowship at the IAH may apply again, but only in the fifth year after any previous fellowship at the Institute for the Arts and Humanities.

Two fellowships are available: IAH Faculty Fellowships and Chapman Family Faculty Fellowships.

Faculty may apply for only one of the two available fellowships.

I. IAH Faculty Fellowships

Projects: Proposals should be related in some vital way to the arts, humanities or social sciences. Joint proposals from two faculty members are also acceptable.

Eligibility: We encourage applications from faculty at all ranks in tenure-track or tenured positions. Tenured or tenure-track faculty may apply as early as their second year at UNC-Chapel Hill. In each group of Fellows we seek a blend of ranks and disciplines. We may also take into account applicants' leaves of absence for research during the three years prior to the IAH fellowship. Applicants require endorsement from their department chairs.

Deadline for IAH Applications:

Wednesday, September 23, 2009 at noon

II. CHAPMAN FAMILY FACULTY FELLOWSHIPS for outstanding teachers who regularly teach undergraduate students

Projects: The IAH is interested in a variety of projects: outreach, internships or fieldwork related to your teaching or research; a reading program to revitalize a field of your teaching; research; or performance or exhibition in the fine arts. The Chapman Family Faculty Fellowship now includes a stipend of $5,000 that the Fellow may use to support teaching, research and service activities.

Eligibility: Applicants must have been at UNC-CH for at least three full years of teaching, long enough to establish a record of distinguished teaching at UNC-CH. Faculty in all units of the University may apply for a Chapman Fellowship if they regularly teach undergraduate courses. In addition to project proposals, Chapman applicants must submit supporting materials about their teaching and may be interviewed and/or observed (with advance notification) by members of the selection committee.

Deadline for Chapman Applications:
Wednesday, October 21, 2009 at noon

All Fellows must attend weekly seminar meetings during the semester of their leave. IAH Faculty Fellowships are a key part of the College of Arts and Sciences' efforts to retain the best faculty at Carolina.

Applications are now available at Hyde Hall. To request an application by phone, call Martha Marks at 843-2651.

For more information about our fellowships or programs, feel free to talk with IAH Director John McGowan (jpm@email.unc.edu or 962-6831), Executive Director Megan Granda (mgranda@unc.edu or 843-2653), or staff at Hyde Hall. You can also visit our Web site: iah.unc.edu.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: UNC Men's Crew RentaRower

Dear UNC Faculty and Staff,

The UNC Men's Crew Team is a student run athletic team with over 60 student athletes. Due to significant costs of our sport, the team participates in various fund raising events throughout the year including the Rent-a-Rower Program. The Rent-A-Rower program was designed to provide our team the opportunity to become involved with our community while simultaneously working towards achieving our fundraising goals.

For anyone who is unfamiliar with our program, crew members provide you with extra labor in exchange for your donation to help support our club. We are happy to offer assistance to anyone who needs help moving, has extra yard work, or has odd jobs around the house. We charge $15 / hour per rower. To schedule your rower (or for more information), email rentarower@gmail.com and please provide the following:

* Your Name
* Phone Number
* Address
* Desired Jobs
* Number of crew members
* Approximate number of hours
* Date(s) you'd be available

If you choose to support our program, please make out checks to "UNC Men's Crew." Also, unless you ask otherwise, we only supply labor and assume that you can provide the necessary tools.

We always appreciate your support. Thank you.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: UNC Continuing Education Opportunities

University employees have access to a wide variety of continuing education programs, many of which are available at no cost within the terms of the tuition waiver program. UNC's Friday Center for Continuing Education has historically served as a channel for information about these programs through various publications and events, and has recently increased efforts to offer comprehensive adult learning program information to the public and to the University community.

Employees who are interested in exploring the range of UNC's continuing academic, professional, and enrichment education offerings are invited to browse the links on the Friday Center's Continuing Education Showcase Web page (http://www.fridaycenter.unc.edu/showcase). As University units continue to expand their continuing and distance learning programs, the Center will work towards developing additional resources to assist adult learners in identifying programs of interest.

Subject:	INFORMATIONAL: Research study for individuals with mild asthma and allergies.

The purpose of this research study is to learn more about the effect of inhalation of a component of air pollution on airway responses in allergic individuals with mild asthma. The component being studied is called endotoxin and can be found in a number of different workplaces. It is even found in homes. The purpose of this research study is to identify a dose of inhaled endotoxin that is safe (does not cause prolonged cough, shortness of breath or other problems), but which causes changes in sputum cell samples. Information from this study will be used to identify a safe range of endotoxin for use in inhalation challenge studies. This study will also help determine how endotoxin affects mucociliary clearance (MCC) which is a measure of how quickly mucus clears from the airway.

Subjects must be otherwise healthy, have mild asthma and allergies. Pregnant or nursing females are excluded as well as individuals with a recent respiratory infection or an average of more that 2 asthma exacerbations per week. Study participation will include 6 visits over a 3 week to 3 month period based on participants available.

Interested individuals may call 919-966-2879 for additional information.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Chairs and Faculty in the College of Arts & Sciences

FROM: Bobbi Owen, Senior Associate Dean for Undergraduate Education

DATE: September 4, 2009

SUBJECT: Request for Nominations for Bowman and Gordon Gray Professorships in Undergraduate Teaching

You are invited and strongly encouraged to nominate an outstanding faculty member to be considered for one of four Bowman and Gordon Gray Professorships in the College of Arts & Sciences. Two of the professorships will be effective July 1, 2010 and two on July 1, 2011. These extraordinary awards are made possible by the generosity of the late Mr. Bowman Gray, Jr. and Mr. Gordon Gray, former President of the University, as well as members of the Gray families. The Gray Professorship program is designed:

- To recognize and support outstanding undergraduate teaching.
- To help retain the best teachers and scholars.
- To enhance undergraduate teaching.

The Terms of the Professorships:

1. Any tenured associate or full professor in the College of Arts & Sciences is eligible.
2. The awards are for a period of five years and are not renewable.
3. There is an annual stipend to supplement salary of $10,000.
4. Recipients will receive a $3,000 annual research/teaching fund to support their activities as a Gray Professor.
5. Recipients may also receive a one-time teaching and technology award of up to $10,000, upon approval for a proposal.
6. During the duration of the award recipients will be designated as Bowman and Gordon Gray Professor or Bowman and Gordon Gray Associate Professor, as appropriate.
7. During the term of their award, each Bowman and Gordon Gray Professor will be provided a semester's leave at full pay to advance their research and teaching. The timing of this leave must be approved by the professor's department chair. The department will receive one half of the professor's annual base salary up to $50,000 during the semester leave.

Selection Process:

<!--[if !supportLists]-->1. <!--[endif]-->Department or unit chairs should make nominations.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->a. <!--[endif]-->Chairs may normally send forward no more than one nomination from a list of recommendations provided by an appropriate department or unit screening committee appointed by the chair to consider potential nominees. In the event that chairs (normally in larger departments) believe that the qualifications of recommended faculty are so close that a second nomination is justified, they may submit two candidates for consideration.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->b. <!--[endif]-->Chairs should also notify their faculty of the opportunity to nominate colleagues or themselves to the screening committee.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->2. <!--[endif]-->Individual faculty may also nominate a colleague or themselves directly to this position. If this occurs, a letter of support from the department or unit chair will be sought at a later point in the process.

To be eligible for consideration, a nominee cannot be the current holder of any other distinguished term or permanent chair. Former Bowman and Gordon Gray Professors are eligible for nomination, 10 years after the end of a previous term, unless they are current holders of any other distinguished term or permanent chair.

Nominees must be teaching one or more undergraduate courses during the current academic year. Please check this requirement carefully before submitting a nomination.

Nominations Should Include:

<!--[if !supportLists]-->(a) <!--[endif]-->A persuasive letter of nomination explaining in some detail why the nominee is particularly worthy of consideration for a Bowman and Gordon Gray Professorship. If retention of the nominee is a consideration, it should be noted in the letter.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->(b) <!--[endif]-->The nominees' current c.v.

<!--[if !supportLists]-->(c) <!--[endif]-->The nominees' statement of teaching philosophy

<!--[if !supportLists]-->(d) <!--[endif]-->A list of courses taught to undergraduates for the last six regular semesters

<!--[if !supportLists]-->(e) <!--[endif]-->A summary of teaching evaluations for two undergraduate courses taught in the past two years. These can include peer and student evaluations.

Nominations should be sent by Friday, October 2 to the attention of:

Faye Lewis, College of Arts & Sciences Dean's Office, CB 3100, 205 South Bldg.

Questions should be directed to Bobbi Owen, Senior Associate Dean for Undergraduate Education, at owenbob@unc.edu.

THE CLOSING DATE FOR NOMINATIONS IS FRIDAY OCTOBER 2, 2009.

The enclosed message from Dean Karen Gil is being sent to all faculty and staff in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Dear Colleagues,

I am delighted to announce that Kim Abels has returned to Carolina as Director of the Writing Center effective September 1, a post that she held for 13 years before going to Duke in 2008. For the past year she has served as Assistant Director for Education, Outreach and Administration at Duke's Kenan Institute for Ethics, an experience that will be valuable in her leadership role in the College.

Kim will develop and oversee all of the Writing Center's programs including tutoring, ESL instruction and workshops. She also will collaborate with other units across campus that support undergraduates, graduate students, faculty and staff.

She has M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in English from Ohio State University and undergraduate degrees in English and Education from Miami University in Oxford, Ohio.

We are pleased to have her back in the College.

With best regards,

Karen

Center for Faculty Excellence

Fall Semester Explorations in Teaching Workshops

Good afternoon!

The semester is off to a great start, and we have had teachers participating in the Center for Faculty Excellence's first round of Explorations in Teaching workshops this week.

We want to alert you to a special offering coming up Wednesday, September 9, titled, "A Different World: Understanding the Millennial Generation and the Different Ways They Live and Learn." Winston Crisp, Assistant Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs, will be the presenter. Mr. Crisp has presented to several groups on campus, and his presentations on this topic are informative, entertaining, and well received. The session is scheduled for 2:30 to 4:00 p.m. in the Pleasants Family Assembly Room in Wilson Library.

Please forward this email to your faculty, graduate students, and post-docs. Registration is available at http://tinyurl.com/ld6uvm.

I have attached a pdf of our Explorations in Teaching brochure for the fall semester. Please also share that with faculty, graduate students, and post-docs in your department. If you would like hard copies to post in your department, just give us a call at 919-966-1289 or email trisha@email.unc.edu.

We also are collaborating with several other campus groups to provide workshops for faculty and graduate students; you can check out these additional events by going to the CFE Events page at http://cfe.unc.edu/events.html.

Explorations in Teaching Series ◆ CENTER FOR FACULTY EXCELLENCE

WORKSHOPS ARE OPEN TO ALL UNC-CHAPEL HILL TEACHERS AND INSTRUCTIONAL STAFF.
TO REGISTER FOR EVENTS AND TO REVIEW OTHER OFFERINGS FOR FALL 2009, GO TO OUR ONLINE CALENDAR AT CFE.UNC.EDU/EVENTS.HTML

Overcoming Teaching Anxiety

Wed., Aug. 26 | 12–1:00 | 219 Davis Library
Wed., Aug. 26 | 3–4:00 | 527 Health Sciences Library
Mon., Nov. 9 | 12–1:00 | 219 Davis Library
Mon., Nov. 9 | 3–4:00 | 208 Carrington Hall

A classroom full of students may seem a little intimidating. Participants in this workshop will explore strategies that may help inexperienced teachers develop in their new roles in the classroom, set the tone for learning from the first day of class, avoid low participation in class discussions, and overcome any fears they may have.

Student Learning Outcomes: The Basis for Instruction

Thurs., Aug. 27 | 12:30–1:45 | 219 Davis Library
Thurs., Aug. 27 | 3:30–4:45 | 208 Carrington Hall
Tues., Nov. 10 | 12:30–1:45 | 219 Davis Library
Tues., Nov. 10 | 3:30–4:45 | 208 Carrington Hall

How do we expect students to be different as a result of taking our courses? How confident are we that our goals, classroom activities, and assignments are closely aligned? Participants will learn how to use learning outcomes as a framework for providing instruction and monitoring the effectiveness of their teaching.

Creating a Dynamic Syllabus

Mon., Aug. 31 | 12–1:00 | 219 Davis Library
Mon., Aug. 31 | 3–4:00 | 527 Health Sciences Library
Wed., Nov. 11 | 12–1:00 | 219 Davis Library
Mon., Nov. 11 | 3–4:00 | 527 Health Sciences Library

A syllabus is the foundation of a course. A dynamic syllabus provides the structure for learning and serves as a learning tool itself. In this interactive workshop, participants will identify the multiple purposes of a syllabus; examine the design of a student-centered syllabus; and review the processes of reflection, analysis, and selection that result in a common plan and reference for a course.

Lesson Planning

Tues., Sept. 1 | 12:30–1:45 | 219 Davis Library
Tues., Sept. 1 | 3:30–4:45 | 208 Carrington Hall
Thurs., Nov. 12 | 12:30–1:45 | 219 Davis Library
Thurs., Nov. 12 | 3:30–4:45 | 208 Carrington Hall

The process of lesson planning involves more than simply deciding what material to cover in class. In this workshop, we will discuss key elements of designing a lesson plan that will engage and involve your students. Participants are invited to bring a previous, current, or future lesson plan for discussion and analysis.

Creating Effective Assignments

Thurs., Sept. 3 | 12:30–1:45 | 219 Davis Library
Thurs., Sept. 3 | 3:30–4:45 | 208 Carrington Hall
Fri., Nov. 13 | 12–1:00 | 219 Davis Library
Fri., Nov. 13 | 3–4:00 | 1305 McGavran-Greenberg

Assignments can create the opportunity for deep learning when students use the material covered in class to practice the processes of professional engagement in the discipline in a structured context. Students can also benefit from the feedback provided by the teacher and/or their peers when assignments are reviewed. This workshop will cover the basics of assignment development, use and evaluation that result in effective assignments.

"A Different World": Understanding the Millennial Generation and the Different Ways They Live and Learn

Wed., Sept. 9 | 2:30–4:00
Wilson Library Pleasants Family Assembly Room
Presented by Winston Crisp, Assistant Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs

This session will dramatize how the current generation of students views education and learning and will suggest effective pedagogical approaches that address some of the common challenges today's students bring to the classroom.

Teaching with Primary Sources

Fri., Oct. 2 | 10–11:00
Wilson Library, Pleasants Family Assembly Room
Presented by Laura Brown, Manuscripts; Elizabeth Chenault, Rare Books; Jason Tomberlin, North Carolina Collection; Jacqueline Solis and Tommy Nixon, Davis Research and Instruction Services

Teaching with primary sources engages students and improves their critical thinking and analytical skills. The University Library has a wealth of physical artifacts, as well as digitalized cultural heritage resources available to instructors. This session will provide an overview of the library's rich collections and discuss some of the innovative ways primary sources can be used in the classroom.

PowerPointed: Slide Design for Non-Designers

Mon., Oct. 5 | 12–1:00 | 124 Undergraduate Library

Love it or hate it, PowerPoint is with us. If you use it yourself and aren't a design professional, how do you make design decisions that help inform or persuade an audience? In this session, we will learn some basic design principles and use those principles to step through the process of revising some sample PowerPoint slides—with an eye toward focusing an audience's attention and minimizing distraction. Although the demonstration will be using PowerPoint 2007, the basic design concepts will extend to any slideware application.

PowerPointed: Real-Time Revisions

Mon., Oct. 12 | 12–1:00 | 124 Undergraduate Library

In the October 5th session, participants were given an overview of some basic design principles for PowerPoint slide design. Some of the issues that we'll explore in this session will include: 1) Making edits to the master slide templates; 2) Revising text-heavy slides; 3) Deciding if including images is appropriate and; 4) Positioning images on a slide.

Teaching with Images and Media

Wed., Oct. 28 | 12–1:00 | 246 Davis Library
Presented by Heather Gendron, Art Librarian and Winifred Metz, Media Resources Librarian

Incorporating images, film, and other media into the classroom encourages students to question what they see, watch, and hear and develops their critical thinking skills. This session exposes participants to a wide variety of image and media collections and tools available at UNC. It also covers the pedagogical, legal and technical issues that surround the use of copyrighted materials in a classroom that has become as much digital as physical.

Teaching Portfolios

Thurs., Nov. 5 | 12:30–1:45 | 219 Davis Library
Thurs., Nov. 5 | 3:30–4:45 | 208 Carrington Hall

Teaching portfolios are becoming increasingly important for marketing one's teaching credentials for new positions and for promotion and tenure in many schools. In this workshop, participants will learn the basic format of a teaching portfolio and develop ideas for their own portfolios whether they are beginning a job search or are under consideration for tenure or promotion in a current position.

Developing and Evaluating Student Presentations

Thurs., Dec. 10 | 10:00–11:30 | 208 Carrington Hall

Many courses include presentations by students or student groups. This workshop is designed to familiarize teachers with the structure of student presentations, to explore innovative and effective use, and to suggest ways to involve the entire class during student presentations.

Creating Writing Assignments That Promote Better Student Papers

Fri., Dec. 11 | 10–11:30 | 207 Undergraduate Library
Presented by Vicki Behrens, The Writing Center

Many instructors wish their students were stronger writers but aren't sure how to help. We'll discuss how you can use in-class writing activities, peer writing groups, brief consultations, and other techniques to help students write better papers—without spending hours writing comments.

Customized Workshops

The Center for Faculty Excellence has a team of talented individuals and collaborative relationships with many other professionals possessing a wide range of knowledge and experience in teaching, research and leadership. Please let us know if your department or area has a specific need and we will tailor a workshop for you. You will select the topic, provide the participants, and pick the day and time. We will build the content, secure presenters, and deliver the session.

About CFE

The Center for Faculty Excellence provides support to Carolina faculty and teaching assistants across the entire spectrum of professional development: research, instruction, and leadership skills. The CFE has been specifically designed to be dynamic in the programs offered and the resources made available to instructors. This is accomplished by a talented team of professionals, augmented by close collaborations with faculty and offices throughout the university.

To learn more about how the Center can support you in your teaching, research or leadership efforts, we invite you to drop by our offices on the ground floor of Wilson Library between 8:30 A.M. and 4:30 P.M., or contact us at 919.966.1289.

CFE Events

The Center for Faculty Excellence offers a wide range of events designed to stimulate your thinking about important issues and ideas in teaching and learning. Events are free and open to all Carolina teachers, including faculty members, graduate students, and instructional staff.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Participants needed for Prenatal Stretching Exercise Research Study

If you are a healthy pregnant woman and do not exercise regularly, you may be eligible to participate in a research study evaluating the effect of prenatal stretching exercise on the autonomic nervous system.

Study participation will require just one 90-minute-lab visit.
You will be asked to sit quietly while we record your heart rate before and after a 30-minute prenatal stretching exercise.

Participants will receive $50 for completing the study.

Subject:	INFORMATIONAL: Message from the Chancellor: Mike Patil Joins Bain Study Response Team

Colleagues,

In July, I let you know that Professor Joe Templeton, past Chair of the Faculty and former chemistry chair, would lead our response to the Bain & Company report. Joe took on that role part time as special assistant to the chancellor for planning and initiatives.

Joe has recruited a great colleague, Mike Patil, associate dean for integrated business management in the Eshelman School of Pharmacy, to join this effort as full-time program director. Mike's expertise in business processes complements Joe's extensive knowledge of Carolina and our culture. Mike will help prioritize projects, develop a methodology to evaluate the options identified in the Bain report, and monitor progress. His work will aim to encourage broad participation on campus and to identify related policy issues.

Mike has more than 25 years of experience as a senior executive who has led and managed business process, information technology, and organizational and strategic consulting for corporations including Ericsson, IBM and AMS American Express. His passion for simplifying and streamlining business processes while providing information to front-line employees already has benefitted our pharmacy school.

You can expect to hear more from Joe and Mike as they engage with the people in schools, units and departments on campus who can best delve into the options identified in the Bain report and what it could mean for future University operations. Please join me in offering the campus community's support for their vital work. We will keep you informed about the progress. Keep sending any suggestions you have to budgetideas@unc.edu.

Sincerely,

Holden Thorp

Subject: [african-and-afro-american-studies-faculty] [all-college-faculty] FROM THE DEAN: Thank You and Budget Update

The enclosed message from Dean Karen Gil is being sent to all faculty and staff in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Dear Faculty and Staff Colleagues,

Welcome to the start of another academic year. As classes get underway, I want to thank you for making it possible for our students to fulfill their academic goals this term, despite state budget cuts. All of us in the Dean's Office are aware that you are working harder than ever as the College teaches more students with fewer resources.

Let me bring you up to date on the budget. As a result of our share of the permanent state budget cuts, the College had to eliminate about 25 staff positions (including 15 filled positions) and reduce state funding to several important centers. We also had to decrease our instructional budget, resulting in less funding for graduate teaching assistants across the College. Most of these difficult cuts have already been made or are underway.

Last year, we suspended 30 faculty searches. Thanks to a combination of grants, private funds and collaborations with campus partners, we were able to hire outstanding teachers and scholars in a few strategic areas this year and we authorized some searches for new faculty for the coming year.

You may have read that the Governor has asked all state agencies, including the University, to withhold an additional 5% of their state funds. At least for now, that request will not affect the College because the University planned in advance for a larger budget cut.

However, because the cost of higher education has soared nationwide, the University is being asked to examine its administrative procedures and costs. Carolina has been recognized for years as a national leader in providing a first-rate education at a reasonable price. It makes sense that the University should continue to lead in finding solutions to the increased cost of higher education. The College will do its part by seeking more cost-efficient ways to administer our programs.

For a fuller picture of the economic realities we face, please see the Chancellor's budget page online (the link is enclosed below).

We're proud of all that the College contributes to Carolina's academic stature. Most of all we are thankful for all that you do every day to make this possible.

With best regards,

Karen M. Gil
Dean

Subject: Two Great Events THIS WEEK at the Bull's Head
Attach: Upcoming_Events_bullymail.pdf

Greetings Bull's Headers,

This semester's chocked full of great authors appearing at the Bull's Head. And it starts this week...

Wednesday at 3:30pm, Michael Taeckens, Margaret Sartor and Patty Van Norman will read from their contributions to Love is a Four-Letter Word: True Stories of Breakups, Bad Relationships, and Broken Hearts, a contemporary collection of true stories of seduction, heartbreak, and regret.

and then...

Thursday at 3:30pm, Mac McCaughan and Laura Ballance, founders of indie record label Merge Records and popular pop-punk band Superchunk, will play a few songs and share from their new book Our Noise: The Story of Merge Records, the Indie Label that Got Big and Stayed Small.

More info about each event is below. All events are free and open to the public.
Attached is a .pdf of all upcoming events for the Fall Semester.

September 16th, 3:30pm: Michael Taeckens, Margaret Sartor and Patty Van Norman will read from their contributions to Love is a Four-Letter Word: True Stories of Breakups, Bad Relationships, and Broken Hearts, a contemporary collection of true stories of seduction, heartbreak, and regret.

"Man, if you're one of the people who broke up with one of these sweet kids, you must feel so stupid right now, on so many levels." – Bookslut

Fearlessly revealing their shattered hearts and crushed egos; their indiscretions and indignities; their delusions, desperation, and disappointments, these talented writers capture the dark side of love in prose ranging from comic to poetic, poignant to cringe-inducing. Also featuring three cartoon/graphic essays as a sixteen-page color insert, this anthology is perfect for anyone who's ever loved and lost.

September 17th, 3:30pm: Mac McCaughan and Laura Ballance, founders of indie record label Merge Records and popular pop-punk band Superchunk, will play a few songs and share from their new book Our Noise: The Story of Merge Records, the Indie Label that Got Big and Stayed Small.

“One of the most respected imprints in an often disreputable industry, Merge has defied the odds by releasing some of the finest rock and pop music of the last 15 years." - Chicago Tribune

Author John Cook traces the inception of Merge through the bumpy roads that led to its success and importance today, told through first-hand interviews with Mac, Laura, their friends, families and band mates, and other key players in the formation and growth of the label. Featuring photographs of a wide range of the label's bands, as well as concert memorabilia, record label art, and a link to a streaming Internet soundtrack for the book, Our Noise tells Merge's story in an intimate and entertaining package.

September 14, 2009

MEMORANDUM

TO: All Faculty
FROM: Bruce W. Carney
Interim Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost
RE: Clarification on H1N1 Written Excuses

The number of flu cases on campus has been rising significantly, and our expectations are that a large number of students, as well as a large number of you, will contract it. The campus has been told repeatedly that the best behavior is for "self-isolation". Stay home, in other words. For you and your faculty colleagues, this presents challenges on teaching your courses, but you're creative and collegial and can presumably arrange to alter the structure of your courses or cover for each other.

I ask each of you, however, to also consider that the flu may strike students in unusually large numbers at inconvenient times, such as exams. About two weeks ago, I sent out a memo about H1N1, and I am reiterating my request to each of you to be as flexible as you can in administering make-up exams. I ask as well that you not _require_ written proof of illness. Health authorities expect that most affected individuals will recover without seeking medical care. Requiring a written proof of illness would place additional pressures on health care facilities- such as Campus Health Services- whose primary focus should be on providing medical care rather than documentation of illness in these extraordinarily busy times.

Please recall that our students have all taken an oath to uphold the honor system, and while a small number may betray the Code, our students as a whole deserve our trust.

Ever wanted a way to volunteer that didn't involve can drives, soup kitchens, or cleaning highways? Be a part of BOLD--Building Opportunities through Language Development. BOLD is a group of all men who work one-on-one with immigrants in the community who want to learn English, meet Americans, and gain a better understanding of American life. Volunteers of BOLD also get the same chance to learn from people of other cultures, step outside of the UNC-CH bubble, and to see a broader picture of the people who make up the Triangle.

Volunteers of BOLD can gain hours towards volunteer credit, as our group is an officially recognized UNC orgnaization.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: UNC Behavioral Weight Control Program

On the Weight Rollercoaster and Want to Get Off?
"The Empowerment Solution for Permanent Weight Control"

NOW ENROLLING FOR FALL

LOCATION: UNC Hospitals.

Weight loss is a gradual process. Speedy diets may work in the short-run but typically do not result in long-term weight maintenance. Long-term behavioral weight control programs usually result in a weight loss of 1-2 pounds per week, depending on several factors (e.g., initial body weight, adhering to the lifestyle change).

Based on the evidence, the UNC Eating Disorders Program offers a 5-month(20-week) Behavioral Weight Control Program which incorporates the important behaviors associated with long-term weight control. This program focuses on BEHAVIORAL strategies for weight control and HEALTHY NUTRITION.

Groups contain 8-12 participants who meet for one-hour per week to learn several skills and strategies to produce a permanent lifestyle change. Groups are facilitated by Dr. Millie Maxwell, licensed professional counselor and clinical instructor at UNC School of Medicine.

Topics include:

* Balanced diet
* Exercise
* Learning the relationship between mood and eating
* Restaurant eating
* Meal planning
* Managing cravings
* Mindful eating
* Identifying triggers and cues
* Handling obstacles
* Goal setting
* Time management
* Weight maintenance.

Enrollment includes:

* 20 one-hour weekly group sessions
* Two sessions facilitated by a registered dietitian
* Book: Runaway Eating by Cynthia M. Bulik, PhD and Nadine Taylor, MS, RD
* CD-ROM: "The Empowerment Solution for Permanent Weight Control"
* Program materials.

Fee:
* $440 includes the 20-week course and all enrollment materials (equates to $22 per group session).
* $50 deposit (included in the $440 fee) to hold your place and Full payment due at first meeting.

* The UNC Health Care Flexible Spending account may be used with a letter from your physician. Check with your insurance company to determine if you could receive reimbursement for this course.

Contact Information:

To receive more information, please contact Dr. Millie Maxwell, millie_maxwell@med.unc.edu or 966-7662.

Check with your physician before starting any weight control program.

The enclosed message from the Carolina Center for Jewish Studies is being sent to all faculty in the College of Arts and Sciences with an information copy to administrative managers.

*Faculty Course Development Awards

The Carolina Center for Jewish Studies is accepting proposals for faculty course development awards. The awards support faculty who are interested in developing new Jewish Studies courses in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Courses should be open to enrollment by undergraduate students (though graduate students may also be included) and may be in any department. There is particular interest in courses that will be regularly taught. Proposals may also focus on expanding or enhancing the level of Jewish Studies content in an established course.

Course development awards will range from $2,000-5,000 and may be used for travel and research; for purchasing or development of print, electronic or audiovisual course materials; and for summer salary stipends. The deadline for proposals is November 2, 2009.

To submit a course development proposal please send:

* An abbreviated CV

* A project proposal (no more than four double-spaced pages, 12 pt font), which must be signed by your chair. This proposal should:
  1. describe the course that is to be developed and its relation to the field of Jewish Studies;
  2. explain the importance of the grant to developing the course and include a budget;
  3. explain the importance of the course to the undergraduate curriculum and your home department, with a statement as to the likelihood that this course will be regularly offered; and
  4. estimate the anticipated enrollment of the course

/_Three_/ copies of each application should be directed to:

Jonathan M. Hess, director
Carolina Center for Jewish Studies, Coates Hall, CB 3152.

For further information regarding the course development awards, please email ccjs@unc.edu <mailto:ccjs@unc.edu> or call 962-1509. For more

The Guardian and the Avant-Garde
Members Preview

Friday, October 2
7:00 - 9:00 PM

Ackland members and their guests are invited to an exclusive preview of our special fall exhibition, The Guardian and the Avant-Garde: Seymour Lipton's Sentinel II in Context. The exhibition opens to the public the following day. Celebrating the recent acquisition of the sculpture Sentinel II by Seymour Lipton, this special two-part exhibition explores the American avant-garde as it developed between 1900 and 1960 in one gallery, while an adjoining space presents a cross-cultural survey of works expressing mythic ideas of heroism and protection as evoked in Lipton's writings and in the work itself.

Thursday, September 24
1:00 - 4:00 PM

Every other month, the Ackland invites the public to bring in a work of art for consideration by an Ackland expert. While Ackland staff is unable to appraise works of art, curators may offer insight into the significance of the piece as well as the techniques used by the artist, condition, and subject matter. Only one work per person allowed. Please call 919.843.3677 to make an appointment.

Registration required | Free to members | $10 non-members

Sunday, September 27
1:15 PM

From an Indian sculpture of a dancing elephant to Do-Ho Suh's contemporary sculpture Floor (made for viewers to walk upon), the Ackland is filled with art that will fascinate and inspire even the youngest visitor. Explore these works and more with a child you care about on a Family Fun Tour at the Ackland. These interactive gallery tours are led by Ackland educators and are designed for six- to twelve-year-olds and their families.

Family Fun Tours are the perfect way to spend a Sunday afternoon with your children. Come explore with us!

FLAIR E-mail Announcement
SUBJECT: INFORMATIONAL: Research Study About People with Allergic Rhinitis (Hay Fever), Flu Vaccine and Diesel Exhaust.

People with allergic rhinitis often have symptoms of sneezing, runny or stuffy nose, post nasal drip, scratchy or itchy throat or itchy nose or ears. The purpose of this study is determine if individuals with these kinds of symptoms have increased inflammatory responses to flu virus following exposure to diesel exhaust as compared to individuals who are exposed to plain air. Volunteers will be exposed for 2 hours to either diesel exhaust or plain air inside a chamber for two hours. Three hours after exposure an FDA approved influenza vaccine called FluMist^{TM} will be administered as a nasal spray. Volunteers must be healthy people with allergies, ages 18 to 45. There are a total of 8 visits, about 10-12 hours, over 5 to 7 weeks. If all visits are kept and procedures completed the study pays $435.

Please see www.epastudies.org.

ATTENTION UNC STUDENTS, STAFF, AND FACULTY:

The Town of Chapel Hill Police are investigating a sexual assault that occurred Monday evening, Sept. 21, a Wednesday report stated.

Chapel Hill Police reported that a female was walking northbound along Martin Luther King Boulevard when she was approached by a male near Municipal Drive. The suspect allegedly forced her into a vehicle and sexually assaulted her. No description of the suspect or vehicle was available.

UNC Public Safety asks that anyone with information that could help the investigation to call 962-8100 or Carrboro-Chapel Hill-UNC Crime Stoppers at 942-7515. All conversations with Crime Stoppers are confidential; no one must identify themselves or appear in court.

Public Safety also reminds the campus community to be vigilant about personal safety and to report any suspicious activity. For a list of safety tips, see alertcarolina.unc.edu.

Thank You,

Subject: Spring 2010 textbook submissions deadline

09/24/08
Re: Spring 2010 Textbook Orders

Dear Liaison,

Just a reminder: tomorrow, September 25, is the deadline for textbook order submissions . We would like to ask your help in reminding your faculty. Early submissions give us more time to find used books, where appropriate; in addition, knowing which books are being adopted for Spring allows us to buy back these titles, if appropriate, from students. This means lower textbook prices and higher buyback value for students.

We would also like to remind you of our incentives. Each faculty member who submits textbook adoptions by the due date will receive a $1.00 coupon to the Daily Grind, the espresso café located by the Bull's Head Bookshop in Student Stores, for each order submitted, up to four courses. In addition, you, as your Department Liaison, will receive a special Daily Grind coupon in appreciation for your help.

More importantly, if your faculty submit on time, your department is eligible to win a $500 textbook grant for your graduate students. To qualify, a minimum of 75% of faculty members from your department must submit textbook adoptions by Friday, September 26. The three departments with the highest percentage of on-time adoptions within their category will win. The categories are based on the number of courses being offered: departments with less than 30 courses, departments with 30-80 courses, and departments with more than 80 courses.

Five Easy Ways to Order Textbooks

1) Use the Student Stores website:
http://www.store.unc.edu/textbooks/

2) Fax your order to: 962-3334

3) Email:

Textbook Office	textbook@unc.edu
George Morgan	gfmorgan@store.unc.edu
Frank Bellamy	fbellamy@email.unc.edu

4) Send your order by campus mail to the Course Materials Department at Campus Box #1530

5) Stop by the Textbook Office, 1st floor, Student Stores

Thanks for your help!

Opening this Weekend!

The Ackland's special fall exhibition, The Guardian and the Avant-Garde, opens to the public this Saturday, October 3. Celebrating the recent acquisition of the sculpture Sentinel II by Seymour Lipton, this two-part exhibition explores the American avant-garde as it developed between 1900 and 1960 in one gallery, while an adjoining space presents a cross-cultural survey of works expressing mythic ideas of heroism and protection as evoked in Lipton's writings and in the work itself. The whole weekend is filled with great chances to see the exhibition and engage with a world of art and ideas!

MEMBERS PREVIEW: Friday, October 2, 7:00 - 9:00 PM
Ackland members and their guests are invited to an exclusive preview of the exhibition. Light refreshments and cash bar. RSVP to Kyle Fitch at kyle_fitch@unc.edu or 919.843.3676.

A CONVERSATION WITH THE CURATORS: Sunday, October 4, 3:00 PM
Celebrate the opening of The Guardian and the Avant-Garde by joining Director Emily Kass, Curator of Collections Timothy Riggs, Chief Curator Peter Nisbet, and moderator Amanda Hughes for a discussion of Lipton, the avant-garde, collecting, and the making of an exhibition. In Hanes Art Center Auditorium. Free.

Parents and Mental Healthcare Providers: Researchers are currently seeking participants (ages 12-16) for an important study of adolescent friendship and development called Project ARCH (Adolescents, Relationships, Coping, and Health). Specifically, we are seeking adolescents who have ever been assessed or received treatment for depressed mood, anxiety, or other mental health concerns.

Participants would complete questionnaires and discuss several adolescent-oriented topics with a close friend. We can schedule visits to our near-campus location on Finley Golf Course Road any afternoon or evening during the week and anytime on the weekend. Participants earn up to $80 for participating and we offer driving reimbursement for long-distance participants.

For more information, please contact Amanda van Scoyoc at 919-843-2352 or by email at project.arch@unc.edu.

Subject: FORMAL NOTICE: University Teaching Awards Deadline

September 28, 2009

TO: Faculty, Staff and Students

FROM: Dr. Joe Lowman, Chair
University Teaching Awards Committee

SUBJECT: Teaching Award Nominations Deadline is October 1

Each year, we acknowledge the central role of teaching at UNC-Chapel Hill by recognizing faculty, staff and students for outstanding teaching and mentoring. The University Committee on Teaching Awards values your nominations of deserving faculty members and graduate teaching assistants for distinguished teaching awards. Please take a moment to think of those who are deserving of these awards and nominate them via the website

http://provost.unc.edu/teaching-awards

The committee will review the nominees, collect additional information about their teaching and recommend winners to the Chancellor. This year, we will select recipients for five types of awards:

Board of Governors' Award for Excellence in Teaching: This award is given by the Board of Governors to a tenured faculty member on each UNC campus for excellent and exceptional teaching at the undergraduate level over a sustained period of time.

Distinguished Teaching Awards for Post-Baccalaureate Instruction Four awards are given to faculty members for exceptional teaching of post-baccalaureate students.

Awards to Faculty for Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching: Five Tanner Awards, one Friday Award, one Sanders Award and one Sitterson Award are given to full-time faculty members.

Tanner Awards to Graduate Teaching Assistants: Five Tanner Awards are given to graduate teaching assistants for excellence in undergraduate teaching.

Mentor Award for Lifetime Achievement: This award acknowledges lifetime contributions to teaching, learning and mentoring beyond the classroom and is not limited to traditional faculty. If you nominate someone for this award, please focus on his or her long-term impact on students.
University Professor of Distinguished Teaching: Two three-year term professorships established to recognize career-long excellence in teaching. One will be for tenured faculty in Academic Affairs (including professional schools) and one for tenured faculty in Health Affairs.

Please submit all nominations online.

http://provost.unc.edu/teaching-awards

No individual may receive more than one award.

NOTE: YOUR NOMINATION MUST INCLUDE A LETTER TELLING US WHY THIS TEACHER DERSERVES THE AWARD. IF ONLY A NAME IS SUBMITTED IT IS INVALID AND CANNOT BE CONSIDERED.

Your comments will become part of the nominee's departmental personnel file. You may address questions me (962-3993/ jclowman@email.unc.edu or Ms. Debbie Stevenson in the Office of the Provost: (962-7882 / debbie_stevenson@unc.edu).

The deadline for submitting nominations is October 1.

FROM: Diane Strauss
Associate University Librarian for Collections and Services

SUBJECT: Requests for Expensive Library Materials Supporting Research and Teaching

In addition to the funding supplied to individual librarians for the purchase of library materials in your discipline, the University Library has at its disposal special funds, such as the Research Fund and the Library Discretionary Fund, specially designated to support your research and teaching needs. We invite you to submit requests by Friday, October 23rd for any item costing $500 or more.

Because available funding in any year is never sufficient to acquire all materials requested, each request should be accompanied by a detailed description using the attached form. Faculty members of the Library Administrative Board and librarian members of the Collection Development Council will carefully review and discuss these submissions before deciding how the available funds should be spent. They will also set priorities for filling unfunded requests should additional funds become available later in the year.

Please send your requests to me no later than October 23rd.

As always, any suggestions you have for improving our collections or services are most welcome.

Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: 2010 Annual Benefit Enrollment Information

FROM: Brian Usischon, Benefits Services
Office of Human Resources

It's time to take a look at your benefits. During this year's enrollment period, Oct. 5-30, 2009, you have the opportunity to enroll or change your existing benefit elections for 2010 in the NCFlex and University benefit programs.

You must re-enroll in the health care and dependent day care flexible spending accounts each year. Other benefits, including dental, vision, life insurance, cancer and accidental death and voluntary dismemberment insurance, do not require annual re-enrollment.

In addition, NCFlex is introducing a new $10,000 "core" accidental death & dismemberment (AD&D) benefit, but you must log onto the NCFlex system and select this benefit during the enrollment period.

You will receive a detailed University enrollment guide via campus mail, along with a copy of the NCFlex enrollment booklet. You can also find these resources, as well as other information, tools and links, at the University annual enrollment Web site, http://hr.unc.edu/Data/benefits/enroll.

Assistance from the Office of Human Resources

Benefits specialists in the Office of Human Resources will be available to provide enrollment assistance and to answer questions about any of these benefit plans during the enrollment period. Call the Benefits Office main line at 919-962-3071.

Enrollment Options

-- NCFlex Benefit Program

For NCFlex benefits and coverage, including the new "core" AD&D benefit, select the link to the NCFlex Online Enrollment site (www.ncflexonline.org). The online enrollment tool is available from any computer with Internet access.

In addition to the online enrollment tool, telephone enrollment is also available. Call 888-860-6118 (Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. - 8 p.m.). Interpreters are also available via phone for more than 30 languages, including Spanish and Burmese.

Paper enrollments will NOT be accepted for the NCFlex benefit program for 2010.

-- University Benefit Program

For University benefits, select the link to the University's enrollment Web site at http://hr.unc.edu/Data/benefits/enroll, print the appropriate enrollment/change form(s) and send to Benefit Services by Oct. 30. Forms can be sent via interoffice mail to Campus Box 1045 or by US mail to Office of Human Resources, Benefits Services, 104 Airport

Drive, Chapel Hill NC 27599-1045.

For your convenience a green drop box marked "Benefit Programs" is located at the front doors of the Administrative Office Building so forms can be dropped off after business hours.

Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: Summer Reading Book Nomination Priority Deadline

Dear Member of the Carolina Community:

As a reminder, the 2010 Summer Reading Program Book Selection Committee--comprised of faculty, staff, and students--will soon begin the process of selecting next year's book.

We invite all members of the UNC-Chapel Hill community to recommend books for our consideration. Criteria for book selection include the following desirable qualities:

* Intellectually stimulating: stretching students' minds, causing students to think about things they might not have thought about previously.
* Enjoyable, engaging, relatively short, easy to read, and of current interest.
* Able to provoke interesting discussion.
* Appropriate for the level of maturity of incoming students.
* Having a theme or topic applicable to students' lives (for example, societal, political, or ethical issues).

Do you have a favorite book that meets these criteria? What book do you think will stimulate critical discussion among incoming students next summer? To make your suggestion, visit the Carolina Summer Reading Program website: http://www.unc.edu/srp/. Full consideration will be given to all book recommendations received by October 7, 2009.

Thanks for your consideration of this matter.

Subject:	INFORMATIONAL: Thursday, Oct. 22 Football Transportation and Parking

ATTENTION UNC STUDENTS, STAFF, AND FACULTY:

On Thursday, Oct. 22, 2009, the North Carolina Tar Heels will host the Florida State Seminoles at 8 p.m. for a nationally televised football game at Kenan Stadium. Although this Thursday night game falls during UNC students' Fall Break, large crowds are expected to begin arriving on campus late that afternoon and throughout the evening.

IN HOPES THAT CAMPUS EMPLOYEES WILL EXPERIENCE LESS INCONVENIENCE LEAVING CAMPUS, THE UNIVERSITY HAS ALREADY ANNOUNCED THAT EMPLOYEES' REGULAR WORKDAY HOURS WILL BE CHANGED FROM 8-5 P.M. TO 8-3 P.M. ON OCTOBER 22.

Consequently, transportation and parking for this weeknight game will be slightly different than normal weekdays/weeknights and different from typical Saturday football games.

* Campus employees working regular day hours should plan on exiting parking lots by 3:30 p.m. Towing will commence in designated lots beginning 3:30 p.m., 4:30 p.m. and 5:30 p.m. Game operations WILL BEGIN at 3:30 p.m.

* Off-campus lots will open to game night patrons at 4:30 p.m.

* On-campus lots will open to game night patrons at 5:30 p.m.

* Chapel Hill Transit plans to adjust schedules accordingly (see website listed below for details)

* Parking permit regulations will be enforced as normal in resident student lots. For example, most student lots require a campus weekday / weeknight permit, Monday-Thursday, 7:30 a.m. until 9 p.m. and Friday, 7:30 p.m. - 5 p.m. These regulations will remain in effect during fall break, unless otherwise noted on our website or via special lot signs.

For a complete listing of IMPACTED PARKING LOTS, TRAFFIC PATTERNS, AND TRANSIT INFORMATION, please familiarize yourself with the information posted through a special Thursday, October 22 Football Transportation and Parking link located on the main Department of Public Safety homepage:

http://www.dps.unc.edu

Employees may contact their department Parking Coordinators for questions regarding the Thursday Night Football Website or to make special parking arrangements if they are considered critical employees. Questions regarding information on DPS Thursday Night Football parking and transportation operations may also be directed to UNC Public Safety at (919) 962-3951 during normal business hours.

For information on other scheduled special events on campus, including remaining football games, log onto the Public Safety website and visit the special events link.

Thank You,

UNC Public Safety

UNC Study of Home Lighting and Aging

Research has shown that lighting can improve mood and sleep for adults. In order to learn more about the effects of home lighting for older adults with Alzheimer's disease and other memory problems, researchers at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill are conducting a four month study of home lighting.

To participate in this study, you must be the live-in caregiver for someone with Alzheimer's disease or a related memory disorder. Participants will receive reimbursement for all study-related costs, and also will receive $300 for their time.

To learn more about this study, please call Lauren Cohen toll-free at (866) 687-9342 or locally at (919) 843-8874.

The study `Home Lighting and Aging' (IRB # 08-1249) was reviewed and approved by the Office of Human Research Ethics at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill on February 3, 2009.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: MINDFULNESS-BASED CLASSES FOR STRESS & PAIN MANAGEMENT-REGISTER NOW!

Do you want to learn to slow down and enjoy your life?

Are you looking for a new way to deal with stress, anxiety, pain, difficult interactions with others?

Mindfulness can make a difference.

The UNC Mindfulness-based Program for Stress and Pain Management offers training in meditation and mind-body awareness that will teach you how to slow down, set priorities and stay calm, focused and relaxed in the midst of a busy life. These practices will enhance your body's natural adaptive healing ability and will cultivate the mind's clarity and insight. This program follows Jon Kabat-Zinn's model and is offered by the Program on Integrative Medicine at UNC (Department of Physical Medicine & Rehabilitation).

FALL 2009 MINDFULNESS CLASSES ON CAMPUS:
1) Monday evenings beginning October 12 (required orientation) through December 7, taught by Susan Head, PhD

FALL 2009 MINDFULNESS CLASSES AT HILLSBOROUGH YOGA & HEALING ARTS:
1) Thursdays evenings, beginning October 15(required orientation) through December 10, taught by Paula Huffman & Susan Gaylord

Two graduate courses will be offered this fall for those who have taken the basic foundation course:
1) "Deepening Your Mindfulness Practice in the Pressure-Cooker of Daily Life"
Held on campus Tuesday evenings, November 17 through December 8, 2009
2) Our newest graduate course, "Mindful Parenting" will be held at UNC Wellness Center at Meadowmont on Tuesday mornings, beginning November 17 through December 8, 2009.
Both classes are taught by Mary Love May.

SPRING MINDFULNESS CLASSES FOR 2010:
1) Tuesday mornings and evenings beginning January 5 (required orientation) through March 2, 2010, taught by Mary Love May.

For additional information about classes, tuition, and tuition reductions for research participation, visit the Program on Integrative Medicine website at http://pim.med.unc.edu/mindfulness.html

To register for these mindfulness courses, complete the registration form on the Program on Integrative Medicine website, http://pim.med.unc.edu/mindfulness.html. Contact the Program by phone at 919-966-8586 or by email at mindfulness@med.unc.edu

Subject:	INFORMATIONAL: Message from the Chancellor: Stay Tuned for an Annual University Address

Dear Students, Faculty and Staff:

In conjunction with University Day on October 12, I'll share my thoughts about how we're doing at Carolina and what lies ahead. We're instituting a new tradition - an online video address. We didn't want to interrupt your busy schedules to ask you to attend an event. And we didn't want to incur any expenses in doing so at a time when we're focused on operational efficiency.

But it's important that we celebrate our accomplishments from this past year and think about how the University can be successful in the future. That's the reason for the speech, which you can watch or read by going to www.unc.edu early on the morning of October 12.

I'd appreciate your feedback afterward at chancellor@unc.edu.

Thanks to all of you for your commitment to Carolina.

Sincerely,

Holden Thorp

I'd use a bike to commute to work/school except there is that one big hill ...I get too hot to commute by bike in the summer ...I'd have to get in shape first ...

We're doing formative research to help develop a commuting vehicle that meets the needs of Chapel Hill area commuters. The project is sponsored by the Centers for Disease Control. Please tell us what your commuting needs, preferences and interests are by following this link or copying it into your browser:

http://qtrial.qualtrics.com/SE?SID=SV_0llknWR1TsXxlEU&SVID=Prod and completing an anonymous survey.

There are no personal risks, costs or benefits to you associated with responding to this survey. By clicking on the survey link, you are giving your consent to participate. Your participation is voluntary. Your responses will be treated confidentially and securely.

If you have questions about the project, please call Phyllis Fleming at 919-966-7075 or email Phyllis_fleming@unc.edu. The procedures for this survey have been reviewed and approved by the Institutional Review Board of the University of North Carolina. You may contact the Institutional Review Board, anonymously if you wish, at 919-966-3113 or by email to IRB_subjects@unc.edu if you have questions or concerns about your rights as a participant in this formative research project.

If, after completing the survey, you are interested in talking more about commuting, you are invited to participate in a one-hour focus group discussion for which you'll receive a $25 thank you gift. At the end of the survey, there is a link to a site where you can give your name and information on how to contact you. We have a separate site rather than asking for this information on the survey so that we can keep your responses anonymous.

Subject: SECOND NOTICE: Survey to Update Personal Data

Please respond by October 13, 2009

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is an Equal Opportunity Employer with a commitment to recruitment and retention of a diverse and inclusive campus community. Federal regulations require that we solicit and report information on gender, ethnicity/race, disability and veteran status for compliance reporting purposes. The categories for race and ethnicity have recently been modified by federal regulations, and therefore we must change our data to reflect the new groupings. We will need you to update your personal information using the revised categories. Additionally, we are asking employees to take this opportunity to update and/or provide information regarding disability and veteran status.

We urge you to complete this important 5 minute survey. While this is a voluntary survey, your participation is critical. Proper self identification allows the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill to provide a clear and accurate picture of our employee composition, to monitor progress regarding diversity and maintain accurate records for reporting. The information that you submit will remain confidential and will be used only for statistical purposes.

Thank you for your cooperation!

Sincerely,

Ann E. Penn, Equal Opportunity/ADA Officer

Brenda R. Malone, Vice Chancellor for Human Resources

https://s4.its.unc.edu/hrweb/getHRSurveyDataAct.do?surveyId=11660

This survey asks questions to collect demographic information for University use only. Submission of this information is voluntary. The information obtained will be kept confidential and will only be used in accordance with the provisions of applicable laws, executive orders, and regulations, including those that require information to be summarized and reported to the federal government for civil rights enforcement. The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is an Equal Opportunity Employer. UNC-Chapel Hill strongly encourages employees to participate in this voluntary survey to assist us in meeting our federal compliance obligations.

Subject:	INFORMATIONAL: Message from the Chancellor: Attend University Day; Watch the Video Address

Dear Students, Faculty and Staff:

Monday, October 12, is University Day and a time when we celebrate our accomplishments and consider Carolina's future. Everyone is invited to participate.

I hope to see you at 11 a.m. in Memorial Hall for the annual University Day convocation. Gov. Bev Perdue is our featured speaker. We'll also present Distinguished Alumna and Alumnus Awards and enjoy performances by student musical groups. For details, see http://www.unc.edu/universityday/. Classes will be canceled from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m. Attendance is considered work time for staff employees, who are encouraged to seek advance approval from their supervisors.

Also on Monday, we'll post my video address to the campus community on the University's Web site, www.unc.edu. The speech will reflect on Carolina's accomplishments and challenges over the past year, and will outline what will be important to remain successful as one of America's great universities in the future.

Sincerely,

Holden Thorp

As UNC-Chapel Hill faculty, you have a wealth of knowledge and experience in your field of study. But designing a course can be challenging, even for experienced instructors. ITS Teaching and Learning Interactive (ITS-TLI) works with you to design new courses, modify existing courses, and convert face-to-face courses to online formats.

Our team includes instructional media specialists (instructional designers, flash animators, graphic designers, and video specialists) who combine proven educational approaches and instructional theory with cutting-edge technology to produce effective and sustainable courses that meet instructional goals and fulfill student needs. For every course, ITS-TLI employs our systematic production process and Online Planning Workbook to ensure consistency and quality.

Contact ITS Teaching and Learning's Kim Eke [kim_eke@unc.edu|919.445.9472} or Megan R.Bell [megan_bell@unc.edu|919.445.9474] to get started.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Research study for individuals with mild asthma and allergies.

The purpose of this research study is to learn more about the effect of inhalation of a component of air pollution on airway responses in allergic individuals with mild asthma. The component being studied is called endotoxin and can be found in a number of different workplaces. It is even found in homes. The purpose of this research study is to identify a dose of inhaled endotoxin that is safe (does not cause prolonged cough, shortness of breath or other problems), but which causes changes in sputum cell samples. Information from this study will be used to identify a safe range of endotoxin for use in inhalation challenge studies. This study will also help determine how endotoxin affects mucociliary clearance (MCC) which is a measure of how quickly mucus clears from the airway.

Subjects must be otherwise healthy, have mild asthma and allergies. Pregnant or nursing females are excluded as well as individuals with a recent respiratory infection or an average of more that 2 asthma exacerbations per week. Study participation will include 6 visits over a 3 week to 3 month period based on participants available.

Interested individuals may call 919-966-2879 for additional information.

Dear Carolina Faculty:

I am writing to encourage you to participate in the survey of faculty perceptions of students who speak English as a second language (ESL). Thank you to those of you who have already completed the brief online questionnaire. The deadline for responses is Tuesday.

As part of the University's internationalization effort, we would like to gain faculty perspectives on the needs of Carolina undergraduates, graduate students and graduate teaching assistants who speak English as a second language (ESL).

If you teach, advise, or supervise anyone in this population, please take a moment to complete the survey below. This brief online survey asks you to:

* rate the importance of certain language tasks for success in your courses and labs

* estimate how many of your students struggle with these language tasks

* describe your experiences working with these populations

The survey takes approximately 5 minutes to complete.

Survey responses will be kept strictly confidential and will be used only for the evaluation and improvement of the University's English language support for non-native English speaking students. At no time will your responses be used to determine your job performance or your position with the University.

Please use the following link to complete the survey before November 10, 2009.

http://ir.unc.edu/ESL/ESL.htm

Thank you very much for taking the time to complete this survey.

Sincerely,
Bobbi Owen, Distinguished Professor and Senior Associate Dean of Arts and Sciences
Steve Matson, Professor and Dean of The Graduate School

Subject: Few comp tickets available for Bruckner Orchestra Linz and UNC's Carolina Choir TONIGHT

Dear colleagues:

I happen to have a few comps available for tonight's performance by the Bruckner Orchestra Linz and the Carolina Choir.

This orchestra is led by Maestro Dennis Russell Davies and our friendship dates back to 1992. He has been the greatest champion of the works of minimalist composer Philip Glass and we are thrilled that they will be performing two of Glass' works, the violin concerto no. 1 with renowned French violinist Renaud Capucon and Glass' Symphony No. 7 (Toltec) featuring our own student choir, The Carolina Choir.

We are the only venue on their short US tour to be presenting the Symphony No. 7 and we are thrilled we can give our student choir an opportunity to perform with such a distinguished orchestra.

They perform on Monday night at Avery Fisher Hall and have a great write up in today's New York Times.

Subject: Fred Chappell poetry today at 3:30!

Hey folks!

Legendary Southern writer Fred Chappell will be here at 3:30pm to read from his new collection of poetry Ancestors and Others.

http://us.macmillan.com/ancestorsandothers

"A richly varied collection of short fiction…A heaped literary plate with something for every taste..."
--Kirkus Reviews

In this collection, Fred Chappell shows his mastery across a range of genres. Featuring folk fables in the Twain tradition, realistic stories of growing up in remote Appalachia, stories of family, kin, and community, and tales of the fantastic and spooky, this book will delight fans and surprise new readers.

"Chappell's newest culls from a lengthy, productive career; the result, a broad, richly textured anthology that exquisitely captures the author's contribution to Southern literature."
-- Publishers Weekly

Fred Chappell is the author of more than twenty books of poetry and fiction. He was North Carolina's Poet Laureate from 1997 – 2002 and has received dozens of major prizes, including the Bollingen Prize in Poetry from Yale University and the Award in Literature from the National Institute of Arts and Letters.

Subject:	INFORMATIONAL: American Indian Heritage Month

Dear Fellow Tar Heels:

As we gather with family and friends for the Thanksgiving holiday season, I would like to remind our campus community that November is officially American Indian Heritage Month. Both Governor Perdue and President Obama have issued proclamations affirming the nation's debt to the indigenous peoples of North America - the first Americans.

North Carolina is home to the largest Native American population east of the Mississippi River. In addition to an academic major in American Indian Studies, UNC has established the American Indian Center to be a focal point for discussion of American Indian cultural, social and economic issues on campus. The Center also works with the State's American Indian Tribes and urban organizations to link them to campus resources for research and technical assistance.

I urge you to learn more about Native Americans, and participate in recognizing and celebrating their many achievements and contributions. You can find out more about events taking place this month and throughout the academic year at http://americanindiancenter.unc.edu/.

Subject: [carolinaforkibera] Leadership Transition and Exciting Expansions

Carolina for Kibera (CFK) is an international, nonprofit organization based in the Kibera slum of Nairobi, Kenya. CFK's primary mission is to fight abject poverty, promote ethnic and gender cooperation, and provide access to quality healthcare and educational and entrepreneurship opportunities through innovative community-focused development

CFK Co-Founder Salim Mohamed Moves from Kenya to U.K. to Pursue Master's Degree

In a bittersweet bon voyage party at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Robert and Jennifer Breiman of CDC-Kenya in September, we celebrated CFK co-founder and former Executive Director Salim Mohamed's many achievements and wished him well in his new status as a Master's student pursuing a degree in the Management and Implementation of Development Projects (MIDP) at the University of Manchester. Fortunately for CFK, Salim's deep compassion and conviction for the community of Kibera knows no geographical boundaries. Even with the demands of student life, Salim generously offers insight and advice as needed. Sharing his thoughts about this educational opportunity, Salim said, "I feel so blessed to be able to take this time to improve my own skills for my betterment and of the people in my community."

George Kogolla Takes the Reins as CFK's New Executive Director

Selected from more than 100 applicants in an exhaustive 7-month search, George Kogolla is CFK's new Executive Director. A seasoned social entrepreneur, George leads a staff of fourteen employees and thousands of volunteers committed to the promise of holistic youth empowerment and provision of quality health care in Kibera. Prior to joining CFK, George was Executive Director of Youth Alive! Kenya, a youth advocacy and empowerment organization that he founded in 1999 as a student at the University of Nairobi. Youth Alive! Kenya is now one of the pre-eminent youth advocacy organizations in Nairobi. CFK's Salim Mohamed served as one of the first members of the Youth Alive! Kenya Board of Directors. Reflecting on his first few months with CFK, he noted that "CFK is blessed to have talented and committed people on our team. I am energized to help CFK grow as an organization that reaches even more young people in Kibera."

CFK's New Satellite Office

Assistant Program Officer Kennedy Juma leads a training on drug-abuse and healthy relationships in the new CFK satellite office.

While CFK reaches tens of thousands of Kiberans each year, the sprawling landscape of Kibera makes it difficult for the residents of all villages to access CFK's programs. CFK has sought to expand its reach but the politically charged nature of working in Kibera made it difficult to find office space. Fortunately, when the Tabitha Clinic moved into its new building in March, it presented an opportunity to transform the old clinic. CFK refurbished the old seven-room Tabitha Clinic into offices for the Sports, Jamii ya Kibera and Sexual Reproductive Health (SRH) programs – making them more accessible to local youth. The modest office welcomes youth and community members seeking VCT and other services and is equipped with wireless internet, offices, and two meeting areas. Weekly, and since late summer, the space hosts 12 planning and training meetings for 240 youth weekly with the number increasing during school holidays. Over the next year, we plan to open additional satellite offices in Kibera to ensure broader access to CFK's innovative programs and trainings.

Tabitha Clinic's New Building Has Improved Quality of Healthcare

Opened in March, the new building for the Tabitha

Clinic has greatly improved our quality and efficiency of service delivery to residents of Kibera. The increase in consultation rooms has decreased patients' wait time while increasing the quality of the doctor-patient visit and the number of patients seen daily. Previously, the clinic saw a maximum of 250 patients per day; the new clinic sees as many as 300 daily. Clients who may have waited as long as 3 hours to see a doctor now wait a maximum of 1.5 hours. The new clinic also boasts enhanced on-site lab services which have reduced the results waiting time from 2 weeks to 4 days –allowing our doctors and clinicians to treat patients more quickly and effectively. In recent weeks, the Tabitha Clinic, CFK, and CDC staff have worked closely with the Kenya Power and Light Company to oversee the installation of a high tension electrical line. This new line will provide consistent electricity to the clinic, further enhancing our quality control measures in the lab and preparing the clinic for an x-ray machine which will be installed in the coming months.

CFK's new Tabitha Clinic offers high quality health care to Kiberans

Harvard Business School Teams up with CFK on Case Study and Business Development

CFK is honored to be the subject of a case study by Harvard Professor of Business Administration and Senior Associate Dean, Kathleen McGinn and Research Associate, Cailin Hammer. Dr. McGinn, a widely published expert in negotiations and organizations, has studied CFK's leadership and structure over the last few months. With insights gained from the study, CFK hopes to contribute to a knowledge base of real-world illustrations from which practitioners and educators can learn.

Additional assistance from Harvard Business School's Student Association enabled MBA 2009 graduates Zach Clayton, Kate Gulliver, and Maura Sullivan to travel to Kibera this July to work one-on-one with CFK staff on developing reporting and data tracking tools. Skilled and generous volunteers like these further our efforts to support initiatives in Kibera through cross-cultural collaboration.

Above all, CFK remains grateful for support from the Kibera community and our friends around the world. It is only with all of you that we can do this work.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: USATF Officials Certification

The Opportunity to Officiate and the Certification Clinic may be of interest to your readers

The UNC Track & Field Program is looking for individuals interested in becoming UNC Track & Field Officials. We host 6-8 track meets per year at the Eddie Smith Field House and the Fetzer Field-Belk Track. This is a great activity for all those who are interested in track and field. We will provide the necessary training to become a certified USA Track & Field Official. Certified officials are compensated for working our meets - generally $50 per meet -- and can choose to work as few or as many meets as desired.

We will offer a certification clinic this year, to be held at the Eddie Smith Field House indoor track.
For more information including date and time visit:
http://tarheelblue.cstv.com/sports/c-track/unc-c-track-body.html.

There are two fees involved: USATF Membership ($30.00 per year) and USATF Officials Certification ($25.00 good till 2012). Officials who work a certain number of meets per year at UNC may be eligible to have the official's certification fee reimbursed. Questions can be forwarded to Anthony Parker at 843-8358 or at aparker@uncaa.unc.edu

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Research subjects needed - win iPod Nanos and iTunes gift cards!

Hello,

My name is and I am a doctoral candidate at SILS, UNC Chapel Hill. The purpose of this email is to request your participation in a research study investigating the usage of an online collaborative information seeking system.

This study requires you to sign up for a free account on Coagmento, a system that allows one to keep track of one's browsing, collaborate with others, and compile reports in a unique way. Coagmento is a plug-in for Firefox browser, which provides support for recording your browsing, bookmarking sites, making annotations on webpages, and collecting text snippets and other objects from the Web. The study requires one to download and install this plug-in on their personal computers (Mac or PC) with Firefox browser, use it as often as desired, and provide feedback at different times. The study is planned to run for about three months. The participant can participate for as much of this time as he/she wishes. There is no need to appear at any place or use this plug-in at any specific time. Each action performed while using this plug-in, such as visiting a website and collecting information, will earn one certain number of points. At the end of the first month of this study, all the participants with more than a certain number of points will be entered into a drawing for three iTunes gift cards of $25 each. The same procedure will be used for the second month. At the end of the third month (end of the study), the participants with more than a certain number of points will be entered into a drawing for three iPod Nanos.

To participate in this study, please visit http://www.coagmento.org/ to create a free account. More details about the requirements, points system, and the prizes can be found there.

Choosing or declining to participate in this study will not affect your class standing or grades at UNC-Chapel Hill. You will not be offered or receive any special consideration if you take part in this research; it is purely voluntary. This study has been approved by the UNC Behavioral IRB (IRB Study 09-2033, Approval Date 11/30/2009), and will be supervised by Prof. Gary Marchionini (march@ils.unc.edu) at SILS.

Subject: [generalfaculty] December Commencement 2009, Invitation to Faculty

December 2, 2009

Dear Colleagues,

Our mid-year commencement ceremony will be held on Sunday, December 20, 2009 at 2:00 p.m. at the Dean E. Smith Center. There are fewer graduates in December than in May, and the number of associated family and friends present is correspondingly smaller. As a result you can play a large role in the life of December 2009 UNC graduates by joining the faculty who attend this climactic event.

As has been the campus tradition, one of our own will be the commencement speaker. Dr. Lisa Carey, associate professor of medicine, UNC Breast Center medical director, and clinical faculty member in the UNC Lineberger Comprehensive Cancer Center, will deliver the commencement address.

Carey earned both her M.D. and master of science in clinical research at Johns Hopkins University. Her research focuses specifically on why younger, premenopausal, black women are more likely to develop aggressive types of breast cancer. Carey is involved in a number of clinical and laboratory studies, including a multi-institutional National Cancer Institute-sponsored trial examining genetic and molecular markers in breast cancer as predictors of response to chemotherapy. She is also the principal investigator of a collaborative study investigating how genes impact a woman's risk of developing breast cancer and several clinical trials testing novel targeted treatments for breast cancer subtypes. In 2008, her work with UNC colleagues to identify and tailor treatment for molecular subtypes of breast cancer was recognized when she was one of 15 new inductees into the Johns Hopkins University Society of Scholars.

The conferral of degrees is the culmination of years of investment by everyone associated with the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. We invite you to participate in the faculty procession with or without regalia. Faculty members will assemble at 1:30 p.m. in the Press Room of the Smith Center. Use Entry D and take the elevator down to the main floor. Marshals will direct you to the room. Parking is available in the Koury Lot adjacent to the Smith Center. Full details are online at http://www.unc.edu/commencement/. If you have questions, please contact Jane Smith at jane_smith@unc.edu.

As the curtain falls on another successful semester, please consider joining in this December commencement celebration.

Sincerely yours,

McKay Coble

Investigators at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill are leading a world-wide effort to understand why some people have an increased risk of developing an eating disorder. We are currently gathering information and genetic material (DNA from a blood sample) from women who have had anorexia nervosa at any time in their life. Information from this study will advance our understanding of the causes of anorexia nervosa and further our ability to develop more effective treatments and prevention strategies.

If you are female and have had anorexia nervosa at any time in your life, you are invited to participate in this study. Participation only takes 15 minutes and includes a blood draw.

Please contact Colie Taico at (919) 843-9207 or ctaico@med.unc.edu if you wish to participate or have any questions.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: ONLINE Diarrhea Prevention Study

The Center for Functional GI and Motility Disorders invites you to participate in an online research study on the symptoms of diarrhea. The purpose of the study is to learn whether a person can predict when they are going to have an episode of diarrhea.

The study will involve filling out several questionnaires online about your bowel symptoms.

To participate, you must be 18 years of age or older and have daily access to the internet. You must also have experienced diarrhea for at least the last 6 months, and you must have had at least one mushy or watery stool per month for the past 3 months.

If you are eligible, you may also be invited to participate in an online diary study which involves keeping track of your diarrhea symptoms by logging into a secure website each day. You will have a unique study ID and password to ensure your responses are anonymous and confidential. There are no visits to UNC required. The study lasts for 60 days (2 months). You will receive $60 each month for completing the study. In addition, if you complete your diaries without skipping any days, you will receive an additional $60/month. Therefore, you may receive up to $240 for participating in this study.

To determine if you are eligible, please click on the following link and respond to the screening questions:
https://uncfunctionalgi.net/dipstudy.html

If you have any questions, please contact Marsha Turner 919-962-9787.

Thank you for your interest in our study.

Subject:	INFORMATIONAL: Give gift of life on Dec. 15

During the holidays, blood donations typically decrease, yet the demand for blood at health facilities in our region does not.

We are all busy, whether with baking, shopping or traveling; and students who donate regularly are away from UNC. Yet patients still need transfusions.

You and UNC can close the gap, celebrating the holidays with the gift of life to patients in our area. Donate blood from 7:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Dec. 15 in Fetzer Gym at this year's winter Carolina Blood Drive.

Besides the feel-good buzz from a good deed, you'll get free food afterward, a free aluminum water bottle from the American Red Cross and a chance to win airline tickets. And drive time is work time with permission from your supervisor.

So help the American Red Cross collect the 1,600 units of blood that are needed every day to give second chances to folks who need our help. Visit http://www.unc.edu/blood/ or call 962-1483 for details and to register.

Thank you and happy holidays,

Invitation to Provide Input to the Administrative Review of Tracy Heenan, Director, Office of Animal Care and Use

A committee has been appointed to conduct a regular administrative review of Tracy Heenan, Director, Office of Animal Care and Use. With this email, the members of the committee are inviting your comments about Dr. Heenan's leadership and about the unit itself.

You may communicate with the committee in the following ways:

*You may write or email any member(s) of the committee. Please note that any written communication, including email, becomes a part of the permanent record and can be accessed by Dr. Heenan if she so chooses. University guidelines prevent us from accepting unsigned or anonymous letters.

*You may contact any committee member(s) by phone. Any notes members take during phone contacts are not part of the permanent record and cannot be seen by the subject of the review.

*You may meet with the committee in person on December 15, 2009, from 3:00-5:00pm, in room 104 Carrington Hall, School of Nursing. If you wish to meet with the committee at this time, please contact Philip Smith (see below) by December 14 to indicate your interest.

As with phone contacts, oral comments are not part of the permanent record. Persons may declare at the beginning of their appearance their wish to remain anonymous, insofar as attribution in the committee minutes of specific comments. However, a list of all persons who provided oral comments to the committee will become part of the official record.

You may also relay this invitation to anyone you think has an interest in the Office of Animal Care and Use and its services. The deadline for receiving comments is December 31, 2009.

Subject: Recycling Textbooks

Dear Faculty, Department Coordinators and Chairs,

On Wed, Dec 9th and Thurs, Dec 10th, 2009, I will be available to buy recent/current (particularly 2004-2011) editions of books that faculty and departments are no longer using. Books such as:

*Student editions
*Duplications
*Clean workbooks and study guides
And more!...

Books I do not buy consist of:
*Answer Keys
*Test Banks
*Resource Manuals, etc.

These books are then made available to students at a major discount! Recycling textbooks saves people money, helps our environment, gives you more shelf space and raises money for your school or department. There are many other benefits to recycling that I am happy to discuss upon meeting you!

If you would like to schedule an appointment, please respond with the following information:

1.Your name.
2.The time(s) you are available on the dates stated above.
3.Your office phone #.
4.Office location including building name, office #, and if available the address.
5.Campus you are on if your school has more than one.

Please do not hesitate to schedule even if you are just looking for more info on recycling. It's anonymous and I am happy to share my view on the subject.

Thank you and I hope you give me the chance to meet with you and buy your books! My assistant Jennifer will confirm the appointment via email after receiving your reply.

Sincerely,
Mike Sues

Your privacy is respected and I only work by appointment. If you wish to no longer be informed of my future visits, please reply and type "remove" in the subject field. You will be removed immediately!

Hello Fabulous Folks!

I just wanted to take this opportunity to wish you a happy holiday season and to remind you to RSVP for the BFSC event being held on the 17th at the Ackland Art Museum. This is going to serve as both our holiday get together and our farewell to Elmira Mangum as she leaves us to take the position of Vice President at Cornell University. Please let Debra Watkins know if you are going to be attending so that we can get the caterer count as accurate as possible.

I also am asking you to think of either nominating someone or agreeing to have your name put forward for the elections next spring for new officers for the BFSC. We need to elect a chair, and several other officers at the next election which will be held in April. It is time for new leadership to take the BFSC to new heights of influence and activity. I hope you will consider offering your time and talents to serve the entire campus community.

Subject: FORMAL NOTICE: Administrative Review of Mr. Emil Kang, Executive Director of the Arts

TO: UNC-Chapel Hill Faculty, Staff and Students

FROM: Bruce Carney, Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost

December 7, 2009

RE: Administrative Review of Mr. Emil Kang,Executive Director of the Arts

On behalf of the committee appointed to review the performance of Mr. Emil Kang, I am pleased to invite your participation in the review process.

The committee is being chaired by Professor John McGowan. Other members include: Terry Rhodes, Emily Kass, David Sontag, McKay Coble, David Blackmon, Douglas Zinn and Priscilla Bratcher.

As required by University regulations, the Provost has requested a review of Mr. Kang's performance as the Executive Director of the Arts over the last five years. Areas for review include vision, long-range planning, day-to-day management of the program, and leadership in actualizing the ideals and goals of the Arts. The committee invites your comments on these and related issues. It is important for the committee to learn how Mr. Kang's performance as Executive Director is viewed by students, staff, and faculty at UNC-Chapel Hill.

We encourage you to contribute to this review in the following different ways:

1. The committee has scheduled two open sessions to receive comments. These times are:

January 12, 2010 - 3:30 - 5:00 - 2nd floor seminar room, Hyde Hall
January 13, 2010 - 3:30 - 5:00 - 2nd floor seminar room, Hyde Hall

If you wish to meet with the committee, please contact Debbie Stevenson in the Office of the Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost (debbie_stevenson@unc.edu or 962-7882), and she will schedule a specific time (usually about 10-15 minutes) within that time period. Note that while all comments during these sessions will be kept strictly confidential, a master list of attendees will be kept as part of Mr. Kang's personnel file. Requests must be made no later than January 8, 2010.

2. You may provide written comments to the chair or other committee members. The review committee will treat your comments as strictly confidential. By law, all written communication - whether on paper or by email - becomes a confidential part of Mr. Kang's personnel file. As such, comments are open to examination by him. University regulations prohibit considerations of anonymous letters in the review process. All written comments should be sent to: Professor John McGowan c/o Debbie Stevenson, 104 South Building, CB # 3000, or by emailing debbie_stevenson@unc.edu

3. You may telephone or meet privately in person with committee members. Oral communications (by telephone or in person) and the committee's notes generated from these conversations do not become part of Mr. Kang's personnel file but may be reflected in the committee's report without identifiers.

The deadline for submitting written comments regarding Mr. Kang's performance to the committee is January 6, 2010. Thank you very much for your help in this important task.

Hi Everyone,

As a follow up to my earlier email about the African Languages web page, Barbara would also like to include a short description on our center's website of each language faculty member's area of interest, and any professional development/involvement that is relevant to language instruction. Much of that I can learn from your CV and global faculty expertise database entry, but if there are particular items relevant to language instruction that you would like to highlight, I would very much appreciate your help in compiling a short paragraph of this nature.

Thank you again!

Hi Everyone,

I hope you're all having a good semester. I'm writing because Prof. Seck has asked me to put together a web page for each African Language taught here at UNC, to be part of the African and Afro-American Studies departmental website. He would like each language's page to have the following info (that I'm hoping all of you can help me gather) photos of instructors information on the textbook(s) used in the class(es) list of the countries where the language is spoken a syllabus representative of each class/level a CV for each instructor short audio clip of the language being spoken

Would it be possible for you all to send me the relevant information for your language? I appreciate your time. Please let me know if you have any questions or concerns (or ideas for the web page).

Thank you!
Stacey

Dear All,

I thought that having such a website, entirely devoted to African languages, would make a big difference for us, the Department, and our students. So, as we say in French, "A vos plumes!" meaning "pick up your pens or keyboards!"

Enjoy the end of the semester!

Student Stores Textbook Department

Re: Spring 2010 Textbook Requests

Professor Mutima,

Please pardon the intrusion. This is a friendly reminder that, according to our records, we have not yet received the book order(s) for your courses for Spring 2010. Please take a moment to review the course listings and send us your list of books to be adopted and ordered (or kindly inform us there will be no textbooks). Our records show these courses include:

- SWAH 402 section 001
- SWAH 404 section 001
- SWAH 406 section 001

The result of your submission allows Student Stores to offer students the best monetary value for the ever increasing prices on textbooks. We work to lower the cost of course materials to students, both at the time of purchase (by having as large a selection of used textbooks as possible) and at buyback (by paying students the highest price possible for their books). We would be unable to accomplish this goal without your course adoption requests. The earlier we have adoptions, the earlier we can go to wholesale book companies to buy short supply used textbooks for resale, increasing the number of used titles to sell. And, the earlier the adoption, the more frequently we can pay students the highest price at buyback, 50% of retail, which also increases the number of used titles to sell.

At UNC Student Stores, we are proud to be a part of the UNC Campus Community. All earnings go to student scholarships.

You can place your order in one of 6 easy ways:

1) Use the Student Stores website: http://www.store.unc.edu/textbooks/

2) Fax your order to: 962-3334

3) Email:
   Textbook Office textbook@unc.edu
   George Morgan gfmorgan@store.unc.edu
   Frank Bellamy fbellamy@email.unc.edu

4) Send your order by campus mail to the Course Materials Department at Campus Box #1530

5) Stop by the Textbook Office, 2nd floor, Student Stores

6) Reply to this reminder.

Dear Mr.Penn:

Thank you for your note.Actually, I personally came to your office to confirm that I was going to use the same textbooks for Swah 402 (Russell
Joan 2003 Swahili Chicago) and Swah 404 (Muaka & Muaka 2006 Tusome Kiswahili Madison NALRC Press).What I forgot to order a textbook for was Swah 406.The textbook for the course is  Omar S.Alwiya & Rushubirwa 2007.Tuwasiliane kwa Kiswahili.Madison NALRC Press.In other words, the last textbook is what you need to order.

Best.

Does your child soil or poop in his or her pants?

Soiling in children is a common condition that is difficult for the child and the family. We are conducting a research study at UNC to find out what parents think are the causes of soiling in their children and what kind of therapies and strategies they use to help their children with the soiling.

We are looking for parents of children 4-18 years old who regularly soil or poop in their underwear. You will be asked to complete the same online questionnaire twice, 2 weeks apart. You will be paid $10 for participation.

Dear Subscriber,

We just posted a variety of new material on our website (http://www.unc.edu/depts/diplomat/).

 New Commentary & Analysis articles on national security reform and the State Department's "new" communications system.

 There is a new compendium of recent poll results on public opinion on global issues from the Council on Foreign Relations.

 A USIS veteran recalls how public diplomacy was carried out "back in the day."

 A retired U.S. intelligence officer and author explores the impact of Afghanistan's history on U.S. policy options.

 A reader comments on what he calls myths about Afghanistan that have appeared in our pages and makes some modest suggestions for improving U.S. policy.

 Links to a Foreign Policy article by political scientists analyzing the "fall" and "recovery" in U.S. image abroad since 9/11; and to a Human Rights Watch report on Cuba.

 Links to video of a Carnegie Endowment panel on U.S. – India relations held just before PM Singh's Washington visit; and to the text of remarks by a Hoover Institution fellow on "The Future of Western War."

 And a review of "Journalism's Roving Eye: A History of American Foreign Reporting," by Professor John Maxwell Hamilton

With this posting we will take a holiday break and next post new material on January 18, 2010. We wish all of our readers a happy holiday season and a healthy, prosperous 2010!

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: MINDFULNESS-BASED COURSES FOR STRESS & PAIN MANAGEMENT-REGISTER NOW!

Are you or someone you know looking for a new way to deal with stress, anxiety, pain, difficult interactions with others during and following the holidays?

Uncertain of what to get loved ones for the holidays?

What better way to say "I care" than giving a class in mindfulness-based stress relief after the "hectivity" of the holidays! This can be the perfect gift for yourself or for someone who is dear. Enter the New Year with new skills for dealing with life stresses!

The UNC Mindfulness-based Program for Stress and Pain Management offers training in meditation and mind-body awareness that will teach you how to slow down, set priorities and stay calm, focused and relaxed in the midst of a busy life. These practices will enhance your body's natural adaptive healing ability and will cultivate the mind's clarity and insight.

This program follows Jon Kabat-Zinn's model and is offered by the Program on Integrative Medicine at UNC (Department of Physical Medicine & Rehabilitation).

Subject: [ackland-e-news] Make a Gift this Year

You Make It Possible

Dear friends,

For over half a century, the Ackland Art Museum has provided access to world class exhibitions, rich community programming, and innovative educational opportunities - all free of charge. University funding only covers about half of our annual operating costs. The rest comes from supporters like you. This holiday season, please consider giving to the Ackland and helping us continue to bring a world of art and ideas to our community.

There are several convenient ways to give:

1. Make a secure gift over the internet. Indicate that you wish to give to the Ackland Art Museum Annual Giving Fund #5041.

2. If you prefer to make a donation by check, make it payable to the Ackland Art Museum and indicate that it is designated for Annual Giving Fund #5041. Mail to:
Kyle Fitch, Director of Annual Giving
Ackland Art Museum
The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
Campus Box 3400
Chapel Hill, NC 27599-3400

Your gift to the Ackland is 100% tax deductible. If you would like to speak directly with Kyle Fitch, Director of Annual Giving, about your gift, contact her at 919.843.3676 or kyle_fitch@unc.edu.

Read more about what your support made possible at the Ackland this year.

Remember, a gift to the Ackland not only rewards you and your family, but also the community at large. Thank you for giving to the Ackland!

Happy Holidays,

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Recognize those who've made a difference at Carolina!

To all UNC students, faculty, and staff,

Look around. Do you see students, faculty or staff or know of programs that have made a significant difference in the lives of people and communities in North Carolina? Although few of them dedicate themselves to public service and engaged scholarship for the recognition, don't you think they deserve to be honored? If so, nominate them for a 2010 Public Service Award!

The Carolina Center for Public Service (CCPS) announces its call for nominations for three awards: the Ned Brooks Award for Public Service, the Robert E. Bryan Public Service Award, and the Office of the Provost Engaged Scholarship Award. These prestigious awards recognize individual students, faculty, staff and University units for extraordinary public service and engaged scholarship. Winners receive a monetary award and will be honored at the annual Public Service Awards reception scheduled for Friday April 16, 2010.

Nominations may be submitted by students, staff, faculty, and/or community members and are due by 5:00 PM on Friday February 5, 2010. Nominators are cautioned to review the criteria for each award to ensure their nomination is aligned with stated requirements for the award.

To obtain detailed information on each award and access the on-line nomination form, go to the Carolina Center for Public Service website:
http://www.unc.edu/cps/public-service-awards-index.php
You can also get tips on writing effective nominations at this site.

Due to underground utilities construction, through traffic on South Road through the campus will be limited to one-way westbound between Country Club Road and Bell Tower Drive from Monday, December 21, 2009 through Saturday, January 9, 2010. Two-way access will be allowed from McCauley and South Columbia Streets only as far east as Bell Tower Drive. Northbound motorists on Stadium Drive must turn left (west) on South Road. Pedestrian traffic will be detoured and routed to avoid the construction areas.

During this same time period, there will be no access to Raleigh Street via South Road. Raleigh Street will be blocked at its intersection with South Road. Two-way access to facilities along Raleigh Street north of the blockage will be maintained from the north via the Cameron Avenue / Country Club Road intersection. For more information or to see a map of the affected area and related detours, visit the following link:

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Unity Conference--Call for Workshop Proposals

The Unity Conference is now seeking workshop proposals for the eighth annual conference to be held April 9 - April 11, 2010 at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Last year's event welcomed over 500 participants from ten different states. We fully expect to grow our event this spring and invite you to participate!

The Southeast Regional Unity Conference is an annual gathering of progressive lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, intersex, and queer identified people and their allies in the Southeast. It was founded to create dialogues about the intersections of gender and sexuality with ability, age, class, faith, health, and race/ethnicity, to explore strategies for effective grassroots organizing, and to share work that we and other LGBTIQ activists are doing in the Southeast. In generating these conversations, the Unity Conference serves to foster a progressive Southeastern LGBTIQ movement that affirms and reflects all aspects of the identities of LGBTIQ people.

With the theme "Intersecting Identities: Performance, Politics, Power" the 2010 Unity Conference Steering Committee has chosen to use this year's conference as an opportunity to more explicitly engage the concept of intersectionality as an ethic of theorizing and organizing. The multiple sites of difference that inform our experience of queer and allied communities will not be placated or contested. Rather, we wish to explicitly take up difference as a primary and generative site of social change.

To focus our topic, we have developed three primary sub-themes:
1)How do we perform and theorize our intersecting identities?
2)How do assimilationis and anti-assimilationist politics operate within LGBTQ communities?
3)How do we build and sustain diverse communities committed to social justices?

To that end, we have invited a broad range of performers, educators, and human rights advocates from diverse activist backgrounds to lead workshops and address the full conference. We have reserved space for 30 different workshop sessions over the weekend. With this year's theme we hope to provide a wide range of workshops dealing with both practical and theoretical issues.

Submissions for workshop proposals must be received by February 1, 2010 and will be accepted on a rolling basis. Those workshops relating to the theme "Intersecting Identities: Performance, Politics, Power" and received earliest will receive highest priority. Please visit <http://unityconference.webs.com/> to access the necessary workshop proposal form. Submit completed workshop proposal forms unityconference2010@gmail.com

Thank you, and we look forward to seeing you in Chapel Hill!

Cheers,

Subject: swahili expertise

Hi Alphonse,

I hope the new year is starting well for you. We are currently working on a grant to study foreign language acquisition for students with learning disabilities (what are the barriers and what are successful accommodations?). In addition to some disabilities specialists, I'm looking for some language specialists to serve on an advisory board and hope you'd be willing to play this role. This board would only meet twice a year for for an hour or two, and the grant would last 2 years starting in August 2010. The budget is not yet final but we hope to be able to offer board members a small honorarium for their expertise.

We have to submit this early next week so there's a bit of time pressure for you to let me know.

Thanks for considering and I'm happy to send the draft narrative if you are interested.

Best, Niklaus

A Phase III Randomized Double Blind Placebo Controlled Trial of LUMINENZ-AT^{TM} (CM-AT) In Children with Autism IRB # 090678 Biomedical Research
Approved: 04-DEC-2009

The ASPIRE team is currently conducting a research study involving children (ages 3-8 years) with autistic disorder. We are currently looking to enroll children experiencing irritable behaviors who wish to take an investigation medication for three months. The medication is a tasteless sprinkle to be added to food, and participants will either take placebo (fake medicine) or the actual medication.

Participation will include:
* Six appointments at UNC Hospitals with a doctor who specializes in autism
* Appointments may include any of the following: physical exam, diagnostic and cognitive assessments for child
* Stool samples taken from your child

Participants receive study medication or placebo (fake medicine) clinical evaluations, medical tests and physical exams at no cost. Compensation for travel will be provided.

INFORMATIONAL: Participants needed for alcohol use and attention study

Do you currently drink alcohol, or have you quit drinking due to a drinking problem?

We are currently looking for participants for a research study on attention and alcohol use. Your participation would require you to come to our laboratory in Davie Hall on the University of North Carolina campus and complete some questionnaires and cognitive tasks. The study will take about 1-1.5 hours. For your participation, you will be compensated with $10/hour. Study requires participants to view images and accurately detect visual targets.

We are primarily looking for participants who either drink infrequently or who have sought treatment for alcohol abuse, are currently seeking treatment, or think that they may have a drinking problem.

You are eligible if:
1. You are between the ages of 18-40 years old
2. You are NOT taking illicit drugs
3. You are NOT taking psychoactive medications
4. You have normal or corrected to normal vision
5. You are a native English speaker
6. You have graduated high school or earned a GED
7. You have no known psychiatric or neurological problems

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Research subjects needed - win iPod Nanos and iTunes gift cards!

Hello,

My name is and I am a doctoral candidate at SILS, UNC Chapel Hill. The purpose of this email is to request your participation in a research study investigating the usage of an online collaborative information seeking system.

This study requires you to sign up for a free account on Coagmento, a system that allows one to keep track of one's browsing, collaborate with others, and compile reports in a unique way. Coagmento is a plug-in for Firefox browser, which provides support for recording your browsing, bookmarking sites, making annotations on webpages, and collecting text snippets and other objects from the Web. The study requires one to download and install this plug-in on their personal computers (Mac or PC) with Firefox browser, use it as often as desired, and provide feedback at different times. The study is planned to run for about two more months. The participant can participate for as much of this time as he/she wishes. There is no need to appear at any place or use this plug-in at any specific time. Each action performed while using this plug-in, such as visiting a website and collecting information, will earn one certain number of points. At the end of the first month of this study, all the participants with more than a certain number of points will be entered into a drawing for three iTunes gift cards of $25 each. At the end of the second month (end of the study), the participants with more than a certain number of points will be entered into a drawing for three iPod Nanos.

To participate in this study, please visit http://www.coagmento.org/ to create a free account. More details about the requirements, points system, and the prizes can be found there.

Choosing or declining to participate in this study will not affect your class standing or grades at UNC-Chapel Hill. You will not be offered or receive any special consideration if you take part in this research; it is purely voluntary. This study has been approved by the UNC Behavioral IRB (IRB Study 09-2033, Approval Date 11/30/2009), and will be supervised by Prof. Gary Marchionini (march@ils.unc.edu) at SILS.

Hi Alphonse, and Happy New Year!

Your course is being edited by Lynn Davis. Our instructional designers are very busy. Our programs have grown but our staff has not, so editing new and existing courses can take a while. They have to focus on the CCO courses (semester-based online courses) three times a year before and during each new semester, but once those courses are up and running, they can spend more time on the SPC courses. Lynn and all of us are as anxious as you to get your course finished because we think it will be popular!

Thank you for your patience.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Research study for individuals with mild asthma and allergies.

The purpose of this research study is to learn more about the effect of inhalation of a component of air pollution on airway responses in allergic individuals with mild asthma. The component being studied is called endotoxin and can be found in a number of different workplaces. It is even found in homes. The purpose of this research study is to identify a dose of inhaled endotoxin that is safe (does not cause prolonged cough, shortness of breath or other problems), but which causes changes in sputum cell samples. Information from this study will be used to identify a safe range of endotoxin for use in inhalation challenge studies. This study will also help determine how endotoxin affects mucociliary clearance (MCC) which is a measure of how quickly mucus clears from the airway.

Subjects must be otherwise healthy, have mild asthma and allergies. Pregnant or nursing females are excluded as well as individuals with a recent respiratory infection or an average of more that 2 asthma exacerbations per week. Study participation will include 6 visits over a 3 week to 3 month period based on participants available.

Interested individuals may call 919-966-2879 for additional information.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Participate in study on social thinking

We are seeking participants for a study on social cognition. Social cognition research examines how people make judgments about the thoughts, feelings, and intentions of other people.

Participation will take 3.5 to 4 hours, and will involve completing a set of paper-and-pencil questionnaires, computer- and video-based tasks, and a brief, video-taped conversation.

Participants will be COMPENSATED at a rate of $10 per hour (pro-rated at $5 per 30 minutes).

For more information, please email Joshua Davis at josh23@email.unc.edu.

Participants must be 18 to 65 years old, have no current problems with alcohol or drug use, and have no history of schizophrenia or bipolar disorder themselves, or in first-degree relatives.

Information collected in this study will be compared to data already collected from individuals with schizophrenia and autism in previous studies.

Subject:	INFORMATIONAL: Message from the Chancellor: Response to the Haiti Earthquake

Dear Carolina community,

Whenever disaster strikes, Carolina faculty, staff and students immediately ask, "What can we do to help?"

The people of Haiti are suffering enormously as a result of the massive earthquake that hit there. We know of one doctoral student who was there, and we understand that her injuries are not serious. We also know that we have four students who are from Haiti, and our thoughts are with them as they seek information about their loved ones back home. If you have information about other members of our community who have been affected, please let us know.

Carolina schools and organizations are already coming together to respond to the disaster, and we'll keep you updated in the coming days. The Extended Disaster Relief Committee of the Campus Y, with support from Student Government, will be organizing centralized collection resources in the community. And the Carolina Center for Public Service will collect information about efforts across campus. You can send information to: ccps@unc.edu. The center will begin posting information tomorrow on its web site at http://www.unc.edu/cps/.

The Gillings School of Global Public Health also has an excellent web site (http://www.sph.unc.edu/disaster/earthquake_disaster_in_haiti_13371_8287.html) that highlights examples of its work in disaster preparedness and response.

Campus offices can provide resources and support for people who have been affected in some way by the earthquake and its aftermath. Students may contact the Dean of Students Office, 919-966-4042, as well as Counseling and Wellness Services, part of Campus Health Services (http://campushealth.unc.edu/), 919-966-3658. Faculty or staff may call the Employee Assistance Program, 919-929-2362.

Many of our faculty members have expertise in fields related to the disaster and can provide context for the media. If you know of faculty who should be listed as related experts, please contact News Services at news@unc.edu or 919-962-2091.

We will post updated information about Carolina and the relief efforts in Haiti regularly, so please check back for updates.

Sincerely,

Holden Thorp

Carolina Women's Center 2010 Women's Advocacy Awards
Deadline for Nominations:
Monday, March 1, 2010 at 5:00 p.m.

The Carolina Women's Center (CWC) announces its call for nominations for the 2010 Women's Advocacy Awards. This award recognizes faculty, staff, postdoctoral scholars or students at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill who have made a substantial contribution to the climate for gender equity on campus as a result of their leadership in advocating for women. Awards will be given in three categories: faculty/staff, postdoctoral scholars/professional and graduate students, and undergraduate students. All members of the campus community are eligible for nomination, regardless of gender, gender identity, or gender expression.

Nominations should describe the nominee's contribution to leadership in advocating for women. Special consideration will be given for service to underserved or under-recognized populations and service above and beyond one's job assignment. Please be as specific as possible about your nominee's accomplishments and identify whether the nominee is faculty, staff, postdoctoral scholar, graduate student or undergraduate student. Nominations must be limited to one page or approximately 250 words. Please provide the nominee's name and address, as well as your name, campus address, phone number and email address. Anonymous nominations will not be considered.

Neither CWC staff nor members of the CWC Program Advisory Council are eligible to be nominated or to submit nominations. [See http://womenscenter.unc.edu/?p=about for a listing.]

Former award recipients are:
Mary Turner Lane, 2001 Laura Gasaway, 2002
Etta Pisano, 2003 Carol Lautier, 2004
Jan Boxill, 2005 Cynthia Bulik, 2006
Sherryl Kleinman, 2007 Lillie Searles, 2008

The deadline for nominations is Monday, March 1, 2010 at 5:00 p.m.
Please send your nomination via campus mail to Dr. Donna M. Bickford, Director, Carolina Women's Center, CB #3302, via e-mail at dbickford@unc.edu, or drop it off at the CWC at 215 W. Cameron Avenue.
For questions, call Dr. Bickford at 919-843-5620.

B.A.M. (Behavior, Attitude, Motivation)...Are you ready to change your life? Get Fit in 2010!

Are you ready to make a change but don't know how to get started? How do you stay motivated? Every year many of us make New Year's resolutions to adopt healthy lifestyles and after a few weeks we are back to old habits. Join us as we hear how North Carolina residents and hit reality TV show The Biggest Loser?s Season 6 finalists Ed Brantley and Heba Salama describe their experience, share their struggles and talk about how they continue to stay motivated.

For more information about UNC's B.A.M. program, please see http://campusrec.unc.edu/special_events/index.html#biggestloser.

About Ed & Heba
Ed and Heba shot to fame as weight loss winners on TV's "The Biggest Loser" by losing a combined total of 277 pounds. On the show, Heba became the first woman to win the "at home" prize of $100,000 for the highest percentage of weight lost overall. Her husband, Ed, finished the season in second place. Since then, the couple has been busy writing a cookbook of healthy recipes, working with non-profit organizations to prevent childhood obesity and promote fitness, as well as appearing regularly as guest speakers. Their cookbook will be available in the spring of 2010.

The Office of the Dean of Students, the Interpersonal Violence Prevention Coordinator, and the Carolina Women's Center offer HAVEN (Helping to Advocate Violence Ending Now) training opportunities throughout the semester. HAVEN helps UNC Faculty, Staff, and Students learn how to respond in a meaningful way to sexual and relationship violence in our campus community and to become informed allies. By attending HAVEN training, you help to create multiple safe spaces around the campus for Carolina students to obtain information, engage in discussion, and receive referrals.

You will leave the training with basic information about sexual and relationship violence, how to respond in a helpful way, what resources are available on campus, and what you can do about sexual violence in the Carolina community. You will receive a sign for your door which identifies you as a HAVEN member.

Training schedules and registration information are available at http://womenscenter.unc.edu/index.php?p=haven.

Note: Spaces are still available in the January 27 training! See the web site for details and register ASAP if you are interested!

Faculty Development in International Business (FDIB): "Understanding Business Challenges in Sub-Saharan Africa"
(May, 10-26, 2010)

Intended Audience*: Faculty from any discipline committed to incorporating international business content into their curriculum and/or research

This program provides participants with an opportunity to experience first-hand the business challenges of sub-Saharan Africa as they travel to Kenya, South Africa, and Tanzania, as well as participate in numerous business visits, culture tours, and academic seminars. The objective of the FDIB-Africa program is to raise faculty awareness of the economic, political, and cultural environments that exist in sub-Sahara Africa today, and, ultimately, to leverage that first-hand awareness into competence and expertise in classrooms and research campuses throughout the United States.

This program is organized by the CIBER at the University of South Carolina. For more details, visit http://mooreschool.sc.edu/UserFiles/moore/Documents/CIBER/2010%20FDIB-Africa%20Brochure.pdf

UNC-CIBER receives funding from the Department of Education to promote international business education and training for students, faculty, and firms in order to contribute to the ability of U.S. businesses to prosper in an international economy. Hi,

My name is . I am the current of the Arts Advocacy Committee which is apart of the Executive Branch of Student Government. One of the goals of the committee is to try and increase the number of students who attend the performances that take place within Memorial Hall. One way we would like to do this is by encouraging professors to integrate relevant performances into the classroom and encourage their students to go see them as a component of the class. Attached is a document which lists a few performances they we felt might interest your department. If you could please forward this message to the professors of your department it would greatly be appreciated.

Thank you,

The Shipment- Young Jean Lee's Theater Company

When: Friday, February 12, 2010 - 8:00 PM
Saturday, February 13, 2010 - 8:00 PM
Pricing: Students: $10

Korean-American playwright and director Young Jean Lee applies her acid wit to The Shipment, taking the audience on an awkward and volatile roller coaster ride through the discomforts and absurdities that arise when people start trying to talk about the black experience in America.

With brutal honesty and humor, The Shipment dares to ask embarrassing questions and seek solutions to impossible problems.

Tinariwen

When: Monday, February 15, 2010 - 7:30 PM

Icons of freedom and resistance, Tinariwen's edgy, bluesy sound has earned them fans like Robert Plant and Carlos Santana, whose music inspired Tinariwen's members when they first picked up electric guitars.

Formed in rebel training camps in Libya, these exiled nomads-turned-rock-stars of the Sahara have become the soundtrack for Touareg independence and reconciliation, combining traditional Touareg melodies with blues, rock, pop, Berber and Arabic influences to create spare, hypnotic songs.

Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater

When: Saturday, April 10, 2010 - 8:00 PM
Sunday, April 11, 2010 - 2:00 PM
Pricing: Students: $10

For half a century, Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater has served as this country's dance ambassador, bringing African American cultural expression and the American modern dance tradition to the world's stages.

The legacy continues with Judith Jamison's remarkable vision and the extraordinary artistry of the company's beautiful dancers. The superb technique, passion and inimitable style that are the hallmarks of the Ailey tradition continue to dazzle audiences around the globe.

Baaba Maal

When: Tuesday, April 27, 2010 - 7:30 PM
Pricing: Students: $10

Senegalese world music giant Baaba Maal's unique blend of traditional West African song, Senegalese pop, reggae and dance has established him as a seminal artist in his field.

An explosion of sound, singing and dancing, his intense and awe-inducing stage shows and his spine-tingling vocals have inspired devotion around the world for nearly two decades.

Using Weight Watchers' new Momentum program, you will learn to choose food that keeps you full longer, so you don't eat for the wrong reasons -- which means you can lose weight and keep it off. Weight Watchers meetings include practical strategies to help you reach your goals, comprehensive plan materials that help you follow the program step by step, and guidance and information from trained leaders who have lost weight with Weight Watchers and have kept it off.

If you're interested in joining the next 17-week series or getting more information, come to the Weight Watchers open house meeting on Friday, Jan. 22, at 11:30 at the Giles Horney Building in the Magnolia Conference Room. The Giles Horney Building is located off of Airport Drive, across from the Administrative Office Building. This Weight Watchers at Work group meets every Friday from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

For more information concerning cost, program features and start times review the flyer at http://hr.unc.edu/sys/emaillist/20358/158801/0119_ww.pdf. For additional information or questions, or if you're interested in joining this series, contact benefits@unc.edu.

Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: Alert Carolina Siren Test on Tuesday, January 26

Dear Students, Faculty and Staff:

The University will TEST the emergency sirens and text messages on Tuesday, January 26th, between noon and 1 p. m. You don't need to do anything for the test, part of our ongoing Alert Carolina safety awareness campaign. We test the sirens each semester to make sure the equipment works and to remind everyone what happens and what to do in a real emergency.

Anyone outside on or near campus is likely to hear the sirens during the test. The sirens will sound an alert tone along with a brief pre-recorded voice message. When testing is complete, a different siren tone and voice message will signal "All clear. Resume normal activities." To hear samples of the alert and "all clear" tones, go to http://alertcarolina.unc.edu.

The sirens sound only for a life-threatening emergency on or near campus such as:

- An armed and dangerous person is on or near campus.
- A major chemical spill or hazard has been reported.
- A tornado has been sighted.

Then the University also sends a text message to cell phone users who registered their numbers in the online campus directory. In addition, the University communicates in an emergency using campus e-mail and voice mail (campus phones only with land lines), the Adverse Weather and Emergency Phone Line, 843-1234 (recorded information), and cable television (on campus and Chapel Hill Time Warner Cable, Channel 4). For details, see http://alertcarolina.unc.edu, the go-to source for information in an immediate life-threatening or serious situation involving campus safety.

Announcing Nature Explorers 2010: A Summer Day Camp Celebrating Life Forces

This summer, the North Carolina Botanical Garden is again offering exciting opportunities for young nature explorers. And it's better than ever! Our new Education Center provides comfortable indoor space when the weather brings us inside. But most of the time, we'll be out and about in the Botanical Garden's natural areas, encouraging your children in exploration and discovery of the natural world. Fostering a sense of wonder and appreciation of life forces--earth, air, fire, water, and spirit--that's what it's about!

Five one-week-long sessions, for two different age groups:
4-5 year olds, half day -- June 14-18 and June 21-25
6-8 year old, full day -- July 12-16, July 19-23, July 26-30

Weekly Tuition:
4-5 year olds (half day) -- Members $110, Public $130
6-8 year olds (full day) -- Members $225, Public $250
(Some scholarships available)
Registration begins January 26 for Botanical Garden members, and February 2 for everyone else. Call 962-0522 (http://ncbg.unc.edu).

LECTURE: POET/PERFORMER MARC BAMUTHI JOSEPH

Wednesday, January 27
12:30-1:30 PM

Mark your calendars now. In connection with the current Ackland exhibition Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown and in collaboration with the Office of the Executive Director for the Arts, the Ackland hosts spoken word poet/performer Marc Bamuthi Joseph for a lecture about the break/s: a mixtape for stage.

ABOUT THE SHOW:
A multimedia trip through planet hip-hop, the break/s: a mixtape for stage dramatically represents the hip-hop generation through the personal narrative of Marc Bamuthi Joseph. Challenging, funny and touching, it looks at Bamuthi's public identity as a spoken word artist and his private identity as a young man coming of age in our globalized, multi-everything era. In this "mixtape for stage," Bamuthi performs a call-and-response with turntablist DJ Excess and beatboxer/percussionist Tommy Shepherd (aka Soulati), with video projections by Eli Jacobs Fantauzzi. It will be performed at Memorial Hall on January 29 at 8:00 PM.

Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines

Color Balance presents fourteen large-scale abstract paintings by Felrath Hines (1913-1993). In 2009, the artist's widow, Dorothy Fisher, donated a selection of his paintings to three North Carolina cultural institutions: the Ackland Art Museum at The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University, and the North Carolina Central University Art Museum. These luminous paintings are significant additions to the collections of each museum. The Ackland premieres the exhibition of these pieces, which will travel to the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University and the NCCU Art Museum in 2010-2011.

Jacob Lawrence
and The Legend of John Brown

One of "the most impassioned visual chroniclers of the African American experience," (New York Times, June 10, 2000) Jacob Lawrence (1917-2000) created a series of gouache paintings in 1941 to illustrate the life of abolitionist John Brown. More than thirty years later, because the fragile paintings were deteriorating, the Detroit Institute of Arts commissioned him to revisit the series. The result was a limited edition portfolio of twenty-two hand-screened prints. This year, in honor of the 150th anniversary of the raid on Harpers Ferry, the Ackland presents this outstanding series for the first time.

Promotional support provided by North Carolina Public Radio-WUNC. Public programming for* Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown *was supported by the N.C. Arts Council, a division of the Department of Cultural Resources, with funding from the National Endowment for the Arts.

Subject: Charles Price reading, Becoming Rasta: Origins of Rastafari Identity in Jamaica

Charles Price, associate professor of Anthropology at UNC, will be at the Bull's Head Bookshop on Tuesday, February 2nd at 3:30pm to read from his new book Becoming Rasta: Origins of Rastafari Identity in Jamaica.

The Bull's Head would like to invite you to this free reading event. Feel free to pass this along to others and to your classes, thank you.

So much has been written about the Rastafari, yet we know so little about why and how people join the Rastafari movement. Although popular understandings evoke images of dreadlocks, reggae, and marijuana, Rastafarians were persecuted in their country, becoming a people seeking social justice. Yet new adherents continued to convert to Rastafari despite facing adverse reactions from their fellow citizens and from their British rulers.

"In an otherwise voluminous literature on Rastafaria, Price fills a void by presenting and critically analyzing the testimonies of Rastafarian men and women that narrate how they discovered, why they entered, and how they sustained membership in the culture, resistance, and theater that is Rastafaria. This book is one of the most important additions to the discourse on the Rastafarian movement to appear in years. Price reveals himself to be both a skilled cultural anthropologist and superb storyteller; the volume reads as much like a piece of literature as social scientific treatise."
- William E. Cross, Jr., author of Shades of Black: Diversity in African American Identity

"A cutting edge exploration of the complex process of black identity transformation, Becoming Rasta also brings us emotionally closer to the diverse individuals who share their life stories with the reader."
- Serena Nanda, author of Neither Man Nor Woman: The Hijras of India

Charles Price is an associate professor in the Department of Anthropology, University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill. His research interests revolve around identity formation, community organizations and community organizing, social movements, ethnographically-grounded oral history, welfare and access to higher education, and advocacy, participatory, and collaborative research projects. The primary geographical focus of Charles's current research is Jamaica and the American South.

The Bull's Head Bookshop is located in the UNC Student Stores on the campus of UNC-CH. All events at the Bull's Head are free and open to the public. Call 919-962-5060 for questions.

TREATMENT FOR OBSESSIVE-COMPULSIVE DISORDER (OCD)

Are you anxious about germs, mistakes, harm, numbers, or unpleasant obsessive thoughts? Do you have problems with compulsive checking, washing, asking for reassurance, or repeating rituals?

If you or your partner experiences any of these problems and are between 18 and 75 years of age, you and your partner might be eligible to participate in a research study on couples therapy for OCD. We are trying to improve upon existing treatments for OCD by including the sufferer's partner. This treatment that we are testing is offered at no cost through a research study being conducted by the UNC-Chapel Hill Anxiety Disorders Clinic. The study will include cognitive-behavior therapy and will not require you to go on any medication, or change any existing medication.

Dear Dr. Mutima,

SWAH 401 is nearing completion! The instructional design team is ready to proof it, and then we will send it to you so you can let us know if anything needs to be corrected before we print it.

One thing we still need is the picture that is referred to in the Unit 5 assignment. Can you send that to me? The assignment says:

> Describe the content of the next picture featuring a young couple and a waiter who are eating in restaurant. Describe what they are wearing, and imagine the colors of their clothes.

We are also missing the picture referred to in section IX of the Practice Exam. It says:

IX. Describe the content of the next picture

Also, in both Units 8 and 9 the assignment sections ask students to describe the picture on page 141, which is in Unit 9. Did you want them to describe a different picture for Unit 8?

Thank you,

Subject: [generalfaculty] Weather advisory for Monday, UNC-CH

Dear Faculty Colleagues:

I wanted to make you aware that a bulletin about university operations tomorrow (Monday February 1) just went up on UNC's "Alert Carolina" website: http://www.piersystem.com/go/doc/1395/467923/

The bulletin is also included below:

Sunday, January 31, 2010

adverse weather alert

Classes canceled until 10 a.m.; offices open

01/31/10, 4:00 p.m.

Classes are canceled until 10 a.m. on Monday, February 1, 2010.

Offices are open on a regular schedule. (Condition 2)

Classes will resume at their normally scheduled time. Classes prior to 10 a.m. will not be held. Arrangements to make up missed classes are at the discretion of the faculty member.

Employees (SPA and EPA non-faculty) are reminded of the University's Adverse Weather Policy. Emergency employees should report for work. Other employees are responsible for their regular duties, making up any missed work time, and making their own decisions about work based on personal safety.

UNC uses three main adverse weather operating conditions: Condition 1 (open), Condition 2 (classes canceled; offices open) or Condition 3 (classes canceled; offices closed). Reports of state government closings do not apply to the University. The University generally announces adverse weather news on www.unc.edu, the campus information sources listed below, and through the news media. Unless a change is announced, the University always operates under Condition 1 – regular schedule.

Other information sources:

- (919) 843-1234. Adverse Weather and Emergency Phone Line for recorded information and announcements about campus operations.
- UNC Traveler's Information System Radio, 1610 AM, near campus.
- UNC Department of Public Safety for details including parking lot conditions.
- Chapel Hill Transit inclement weather news and routes and schedules.

The Ackland celebrates the contributions of two of the most significant African American artists of the twentieth century:
Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines and Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown on view through May 9, 2010.

Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines
Color Balance presents fourteen large-scale abstract paintings by Felrath Hines (1913-1993). In 2009, the artist's widow, Dorothy Fisher, donated a selection of his paintings to three North Carolina cultural institutions: the Ackland Art Museum at The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University, and the North Carolina Central University Art Museum. These luminous paintings are significant additions to the collections of each museum. The Ackland premieres the exhibition of these pieces, which will travel to the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University and the NCCU Art Museum in 2010-2011.

Jacob Lawrence
and The Legend of John Brown
One of "the most impassioned visual chroniclers of the African American experience," (New York Times, June 10, 2000) Jacob Lawrence (1917-2000) created a series of gouache paintings in 1941 to illustrate the life of abolitionist John Brown. More than thirty years later, because the fragile paintings were deteriorating, the Detroit Institute of Arts commissioned him to revisit the

Subject: Becoming Rasta by Charles Price today at 3:30 at the Bull's Head

Charles Price, associate professor of Anthropology at UNC, will be at the Bull's Head today at 3:30pm to read from his new book Becoming Rasta: Origins of Rastafari Identity in Jamaica.

So much has been written about the Rastafari, yet we know so little about why and how people join the Rastafari movement. Although popular understandings evoke images of dreadlocks, reggae, and marijuana, Rastafarians were persecuted in their country, becoming a people seeking social justice. Yet new adherents continued to convert to Rastafari despite facing adverse reactions from their fellow citizens and from their British rulers.

"In an otherwise voluminous literature on Rastafaria, Price fills a void by presenting and critically analyzing the testimonies of Rastafarian men and women that narrate how they discovered, why they entered, and how they sustained membership in the culture, resistance, and theater that is Rastafaria. This book is one of the most important additions to the discourse on the Rastafarian movement to appear in years. Price reveals himself to be both a skilled cultural anthropologist and superb storyteller; the volume reads as much like a piece of literature as social scientific treatise."
- William E. Cross, Jr., author of Shades of Black: Diversity in African American Identity

"A cutting edge exploration of the complex process of black identity transformation, Becoming Rasta also brings us emotionally closer to the diverse individuals who share their life stories with the reader."
- Serena Nanda, author of Neither Man Nor Woman: The Hijras of India

Charles Price is an associate professor in the Department of Anthropology, University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill. His research interests revolve around identity formation, community organizations and community organizing, social movements, ethnographically-grounded oral history, welfare and access to higher education, and advocacy, participatory, and collaborative research projects. The primary geographical focus of Charles's current research is Jamaica and the American South.

The Bull's Head Bookshop is located in the UNC Student Stores on the campus of UNC-CH. All events at the Bull's Head are free and open to the public. Call 919-962-5060 for questions.

The ASPIRE research team is currently conducting a research study involving children and adolescents with autism spectrum disorder (including Pervasive Developmental Disorder-NOS and Asperger's Disorder). We want to compare children (ages 2.5-17 years) who are not taking medication to children who are taking medication.

We are currently looking to enroll children who do not want to take any medication for the next year.

Participation will include:
* A comprehensive diagnostic assessment of autism spectrum disorder
* Physical exam and cognitive assessments for child
* Questionnaires for a parent/legal guardian to complete
* Appointments at UNC Hospitals with a doctor who specializes in autism

Dear (soon-to-be) Global Studies faculty

I am sure by now you have seen the announcement for launch of Global Studies at UNC on Friday February 12th.

5:30pm in the FedEx Global Education Center's Nelson Mandela Auditorium.

Speakers:
Robert Keohane (International Institutions) Peter Godwin (Africa) Pierre Barker (Global Health)

Reception and book signing to follow.

Many of the leaders of the University will be attending the panel launch and I do hope that many CIAS/Global Studies faculty can attend as well.
We shall reserve the front rows for our faculty. I would like to pack the auditorium to illustrate the popularity and importance of Global Studies to this University. Could you please strongly encourage your students to attend.

Many thanks,

Andy Reynolds

Subject: Book Reading Today on the Truth About Starbucks - Free Coffee from the Daily Grind!

"Starbucks is selling status", says Bryant Simon, a UNC-CH alum, Temple University professor of American Studies and author of the recently released Everything But the Coffee: Learning About America from Starbucks.

Simon will be reading from his book at the Bull's Head Bookshop today at 3:30pm, free coffee from The Daily Grind coffee shop will be provided courtesy of the Bull's Head. This event is free and open to the public.

Everything but the Coffee casts a fresh eye on the world's most famous coffee company, looking beyond baristas, movie cameos, and Paul McCartney CDs to understand what Starbucks can tell us about America.

"Simon knows more about Starbucks—and about why so many Americans find perfection in their lattes—than anyone. He connects our deepest desires to be good, smart, ethical consumers with our equally strong yearning to consume in an authentic way. Our coffee, Simon shows, is us."
—Sharon Zukin, author of Naked City

Bryant Simon visited hundreds of Starbucks around the world to ask, why did Starbucks take hold so quickly with consumers? What did it seem to provide over and above a decent cup of coffee? Why at the moment of Starbucks' profit-generating peak did the company lose its way, leaving observers baffled about how it might regain its customers and its cultural significance?

Everything but the Coffee probes the company's psychological, emotional, political, and sociological power to discover how Starbucks' explosive success and rapid deflation exemplify American culture at this historical moment. Most importantly, it shows that Starbucks speaks to a deeply felt American need for predictability and class standing, community and authenticity, revealing that Starbucks' appeal lies not in the product it sells but in the easily consumed identity it offers.

Link to News & Observer article titled "Professor gives Starbucks a roasting":
http://www.newsobserver.com/life/food/story/254709.html

Bryant Simon is Professor of History and the Director of American Studies at Temple University and the author, most recently, of Boardwalk Dreams: Atlantic City and the Fate of Urban America.

The Bull's Head Bookshop is located in the UNC Student Stores on the campus of UNC-CH. All events at the Bull's Head are free and open to the public. Call 919-962-5060 for questions.

Community Day

TOMORROW: Bring the whole family!
One of the Ackland's most popular events, Community Day is a day-long exploration of art and ideas from around the world. Artists will lead workshops, gallery teachers will host guided tours, dancers will help get you moving, and more! Free admission. Detailed schedule below:

TOUR: The Language of Color
10:00 AM
Meet in Lobby
Why do some subjects always wear the same color? What materials do artists use to make the colors we see in a finished work? Explore these and other questions in this tour for families. Recommended for children ages five and above and their families.

Moving with Art
10:30 AM
Gallery 6
Great family fun unfolds as dancer Jody Cassell and musician Jude Cassedy make Felrath Hines' art come alive for young children. We'll swoop out into the shapes and dab along the smooth curves and sharp lines of his designs. Come join! Recommended for children ages one to four years with an adult. Spaces limited. Free tickets available at the front desk on a first come, first serve basis.

Moving to the Art of Felrath Hines
11:30 AM
Meet in Lobby
Work with dancer Jody Cassell and musician Jude Cassedy to make the art of Felrath Hines come alive. Use your body to recreate the shapes and pathways of his paint and explore the smooth and sharp lines of his designs. This workshop is child-parent pairs and people of all ages who can follow directions and be open creatively.

TOUR: Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown
12:00 PM
Meet in Lobby
Explore how different artists delve into history through their work. Investigate how Jacob Lawrence tells John Brown's life story through a series of twenty-two silkscreen prints. Learn how he and other artists share the past through their works. Recommended for children ages eleven and above, teens, and adults.

Pick up a guide at the front desk or the Education Resource Center to explore the galleries on your own or with friends and family. There is a guide for kids ages six and above and another for teens and adults.

Silkscreen Printing Demonstration
10:00 AM-12:00 PM | 1:00 - 2:00 PM
Hanes Art Center, Room 222
Artist Vidabeth Bensen will demonstrate making a silkscreen print and guide you through the process of making one for yourself. See how artists like Bensen and Jacob Lawrence build their prints screen by screen, color by color. Pull a print to take home! Recommended for kids ages five and above.

HANDS-ON ART: Seeing in Color
10:00 AM- 2:00 PM
Hanes Art Center, Room 219
Felrath Hines experimented with a broad range of colors and shapes. Make your own see-through abstract compositions using tissue paper and the other materials provided, and Felrath Hines' paintings as inspiration. Recommended for all ages. Younger children will need a parent's assistance. Recommended for all ages; younger children may need a parent's assistance.

HANDS-ON ART: Universal Art
10:00 AM- 2:00 PM
Hanes Art Center, Room 219
Jacob Lawrence and Felrath Hines sought to show universal ideas and values in their works, but in different ways. Who or what do you want everyone in the world to know or see? Make a collage that brings your ideas to light. Recommended for children ages seven and above. Younger children will need assistance from an adult.

The Ackland celebrates the contributions of two of the most significant African American artists of the twentieth century: Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines and Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown on view through May 9, 2010.

Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines
Color Balance presents fourteen large-scale abstract paintings by Felrath Hines (1913-1993). In 2009, the artist's widow, Dorothy Fisher, donated a selection of his paintings to three North Carolina cultural institutions: the Ackland Art Museum at The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University, and the North Carolina Central University Art Museum. These luminous paintings are significant additions to the collections of each museum. The Ackland premieres the exhibition of these pieces, which will travel to the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University and the NCCU Art Museum in 2010-2011.

Jacob Lawrence
and The Legend of John Brown

One of "the most impassioned visual chroniclers of the African American experience," (New York Times, June 10, 2000) Jacob Lawrence (1917-2000) created a series of gouache paintings in 1941 to illustrate the life of abolitionist John Brown. More than thirty years later, because the fragile paintings were deteriorating, the Detroit Institute of Arts commissioned him to revisit the series. The result was a limited edition portfolio of twenty-two hand-screened prints. This year, in honor of the 150th anniversary of the raid on Harpers Ferry, the Ackland presents this outstanding series for the first time.

Promotional support provided by North Carolina Public Radio-WUNC. Public programming for* Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown *was supported by the N.C. Arts Council, a division of the Department of Cultural Resources, with funding from the National Endowment for the Arts.

Subject: Comp tickets to upcoming performances of "The Shipment"

Dear UNC colleagues:

As you know, the creation and presentation of new work is an important part of our program at Carolina Performing Arts. In the past, we have had the privilege of partnering with groups like BAM (Brooklyn Academy of Music), Lincoln Center, Melbourne Festival, Edinburgh International Festival, Salzburg Festival, and our fellow presenters at Dartmouth, Ann Arbor, Berkeley, UCLA, etc…

We are presenting another such work this weekend. "The Shipment" is a work by ground breaking Korean-American playwright and director Young Jean Lee. With brutal honesty and humor, The Shipment takes audiences on an awkward and volatile roller-coaster ride through the discomforts and absurdities that arise whenever people start trying to talk about the black experience in America.

I saw the NYC premiere of this work at The Kitchen last year and its discussion of race will make you uncomfortable but I hope you'll agree that's exactly the kind of provocation that can spark the richest dialogue.

I am pleased to be able to offer tickets to each of you for the upcoming performances on this Friday and Saturday, February 12 and 13. Please let me know if we can have you as our guests. Please email me directly if you are interested!!!

Charles Isherwood in The New York Times and Hilton Als in The New Yorker both gave brilliant reviews of the work.

LECTURE: PLAYWRIGHT/DIRECTOR YOUNG JEAN LEE

Friday, February 12
12:30-1:30 PM

Mark your calendars now. In connection with the current Ackland exhibition Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown and in collaboration with the Office of the Executive Director for the Arts, the Ackland hosts Korean-American playwright and director Young Jean Lee for a free lecture about the forthcoming Chapel Hill performance of her play The Shipment.

ABOUT YOUNG JEAN LEE:
Young Jean Lee is the artistic director of Young Jean Lee's Theater Company, who creates and produces new, experimental performances written and directed by Young Jean Lee. Lee has directed her plays at Soho Rep, The Kitchen, The Public Theater, P.S. 122, HERE Arts Center, and the Ontological-Hysteric Theater. She is the recipient of a 2007 Emerging Playwright OBIE Award.

ABOUT THE SHOW:
Korean-American playwright and director Young Jean Lee applies her acid wit to The Shipment, taking the audience on an awkward and volatile roller coaster ride through the discomforts and absurdities that arise when people start trying to talk about the black experience in America. It will be performed at Memorial Hall on February 12 and 13, at 8:00PM.

"...a subversive, seriously funny new theater piece."

HUTCHINS LECTURE: JOHN BROWN IN AMERICAN MEMORY

4:00 PM
Alumni Center

Zoe Trodd and Robert Gilipin, Post-Doctoral Fellows at the Center for the Study of the American South, will deliver a talk about John Brown in African American Memory. December 2009 marked the 150th anniversary of John Brown's execution. On December 2, 1859, the abolitionist was hanged in Charles Town, Virginia, after his raid on Harpers Ferry was judged an act of treason. To mark the occasion, Gilpin and Trodd will discuss Brown's long legacy for African American activists, writers, and artists over the past 150 years. Trodd will focus on black protest writers and artists of the late 19th and early 20th centuries. She will show that they turned Brown into a protest ancestor and put him at the center of their own calls for social change. Gilpin will discuss the conflicts over Brown's memory that emerged in the 1940s and 1950s, particularly the contrasts between white and black opinions of the abolitionist.

For more information or questions, please contact 919.962.0503, lbeavers@unc.edu, or www.uncsouth.org.

The Ackland celebrates the contributions of two of the most significant African American artists of the twentieth century:
Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines and
Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown
on view through May 9, 2010.

Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines

Color Balance presents fourteen large-scale abstract paintings by Felrath Hines (1913-1993). In 2009, the artist's widow, Dorothy Fisher, donated a selection of his paintings to three North Carolina cultural institutions: the Ackland Art Museum at The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University, and the North Carolina Central University Art Museum. These luminous paintings are significant additions to the collections of each museum. The Ackland premieres the exhibition of these pieces, which will travel to the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University and the NCCU Art Museum in 2010-2011.

Subject: [asc_faculty] Requests for information for Title VI grant

Dear Colleagues:
First a note of thanks for the many expressions of support to me over the last several months. I am back in the office, filled with fire for the world, and my sleeves are rolled up!

As you may know, the RFP for our Title VI grant was released last week, and so the loyal and hard-working staff of the African Studies Center is now working at a fevered-pitch to complete our proposal in the next three weeks. This email has one purpose:

In the coming days Stacey, Mike, and I may be sending emails to both individuals and the listserv asking for information.

PLEASE respond quickly to these requests!

The 100+ pages of proposal includes hundreds of bits of data, each type central to our ability to secure another 4 years of funding. And the majority of this funding is distributed directly to our faculty for research in Africa, conference travel, bringing speakers to campus, conferences, library acquisitions, course development, etc.

This competition promises to be challenging--there are several new Africa applications that will be submitted. You can help us by responding right away to any requests you receive from us; answering "later" will not matter.

Thanks very much, folks! Barbara

Subject: [asc_faculty] talks to government

Dear Colleagues:
Please provide me with information on talks or consulting you may have done with state or federal government officials, including defense work. You may give as much detail as you like, but I will aggregate this in the report without faculty names or specific agencies. For example, "Between 2006 and 2010 17 of our core faculty members gave 43 talks to 392 government officials in the State Department, the Defense Department, the US Institute for Peace, etc."

Please let me know, between 2006 and 2010, how many talks you have given, the agencies to which you delivered, and how many folks attended these sessions (approximations fine). If you can only remember this last year, that is fine, just tell me your time reference.

Many thanks! Barbara

Jacob Lawrence
and The Legend of John Brown

One of "the most impassioned visual chroniclers of the African American experience," (New York Times, June 10, 2000) Jacob Lawrence (1917-2000) created a series of gouache paintings in 1941 to illustrate the life of abolitionist John Brown. More than thirty years later, because the fragile paintings were deteriorating, the Detroit Institute of Arts commissioned him to revisit the series. The result was a limited edition portfolio of twenty-two hand-screened prints. This year, in honor of the 150th anniversary of the raid on Harpers Ferry, the Ackland presents this outstanding series for the first time.

Promotional support provided by North Carolina Public Radio-WUNC. Public programming for* Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown *was supported by the N.C. Arts Council, a division of the Department of Cultural Resources, with funding from the National Endowment for the Arts.

The Preservation Society of Chapel Hill located in the historic Horace Williams House (owned by UNC and leased to the Preservation Society) at 610 East Rosemary Street is holding a lecture on Wednesday evening that I wanted to make you aware. It could be of interest to both African-American Studies, Anthropology and Archeology students.

You may have seen in last Friday's Daily Tar Heel the article about the work our society has done in the African-American section of the Old Chapel Hill Cemetery. Much of this section of the cemetery was vandalized over the decades, many never had permanent markers and during one UNC football game fans even parked in this area causing much damage. Ground penetrating radar was used to identify disturbed ground areas to identify where deceased are located in unmarked areas of Section B of the cemetery. Members of the company that did the work will be part of the presentation.

Please pass this notice along to students and classes that may want to attend this informative lecture. There is parking at the Horace Williams House.

Thank you for your assistance,

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Anorexia Genetics Study; Help Us!

Investigators at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill are leading a world-wide effort to understand why some people have an increased risk of developing an eating disorder. We are currently gathering information and genetic material (DNA from a blood sample) from women who have had anorexia nervosa at any time in their life. Information from this study will advance our understanding of the causes of anorexia nervosa and further our ability to develop more effective treatments and prevention strategies.

If you are female and have had anorexia nervosa at any time in your life, you are invited to participate in this study. Participation only takes 15 minutes and includes a blood draw.

Please contact Colie Taico at (919) 843-9207 or ctaico@med.unc.edu if you wish to participate or have any questions.

Do you have a child between 12-14 months of age who has recently had a well-child checkup?
We are looking for parents whose 12-14-month-old child recently had a well-child checkup to take part in a two-hour focus group for a research study. The study is gathering information about what takes place during 12- month well-child checkups.
You may be able to participate in a Focus Group if:
* your child is 12-14 months old
* your child has had a well-child doctor's checkup in the last two months Parents who participate in the focus group will be given a $50 gas card, a meal, and free child care if needed for sharing their experiences about their child's recent 12-month well-child checkup. For information about participating in this focus group and for more information about the study, please call or email us.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Research subjects needed - win iPod Nanos!

Hello,

My name is and I am a doctoral candidate at SILS, UNC Chapel Hill. The purpose of this email is to request your participation in a research study investigating the usage of an online collaborative information seeking system.

This study requires you to sign up for a free account on Coagmento, a system that allows one to keep track of one's browsing, collaborate with others, and compile reports in a unique way. Coagmento is a plug-in for Firefox browser, which provides support for recording your browsing, bookmarking sites, making annotations on webpages, and collecting text snippets and other objects from the Web. The study requires one to download and install this plug-in on their personal computers (Mac or PC) with Firefox browser, use it as often as desired, and provide feedback at different times. The study is planned to run for about a month. The participant can participate for as much of this time as he/she wishes. There is no need to appear at any place or use this plug-in at any specific time. Each action performed while using this plug-in, such as visiting a website and collecting information, will earn one certain number of points. At the end of the first month of this study, all the participants with more than a certain number of points will be entered into a drawing for three iPod Nanos.

To participate in this study, please visit http://www.coagmento.org/ to create a free account. More details about the requirements, points system, and the prizes can be found there.

Choosing or declining to participate in this study will not affect your class standing or grades at UNC-Chapel Hill. You will not be offered or receive any special consideration if you take part in this research; it is purely voluntary. This study has been approved by the UNC Behavioral IRB (IRB Study 09-2033, Approval Date 11/30/2009), and will be supervised by Prof. Gary Marchionini (march@ils.unc.edu) at SILS.

Subject: Adriane Lentz-Smith Book Reading- Freedom Struggles: African Americans and World War I

Attach: Lentz-Smith_Press.doc

Greetings from the Bull's Head Bookshop in UNC Student Stores. I invite you to attend an upcoming book reading at our store, please feel free to invite others, including your classes, thank you.

Adriane Lentz-Smith, Assistant Professor of History at Duke University, will be at the Bull's Head Bookshop on Thursday, February 25th at 3:30pm to read from her new book Freedom Struggles: African Americans and World War I.

Brimming with energy and insight, this rich and powerful book opens new vistas on the early civil rights movement, and adds knowledge and texture to the history of World War I and the African American experience. —Jane Dailey, author of Before Jim Crow

During World War I, black and white soldiers clashed as much with one another as they did with external enemies. In Freedom Struggles: African Americans and World War I Adriane Lentz-Smith explores how African Americans experienced the war on both sides of the ocean, connecting what happened overseas to what happened at home.

Inspired by President Woodrow Wilson's rhetoric of self-determination but battered by the harsh realities of segregation, African Americans fought their own "War for Democracy" in the streets of Texas and Alabama as well as in the ports and villages of wartime France. Race wars within the military and race riots in the North and South demonstrated the lengths to which white Americans would go to protect the hierarchy they had so carefully constructed. Yet African Americans' overseas encounters with French civilians and colonial African troops drove them to imagine a world beyond the reach of Jim Crow. As the war progressed and white recalcitrance intensified, African Americans redoubled their efforts to create that ideal world.

Freedom Struggles reclaims World War I as a critical moment in the African American freedom struggle and gives both white supremacy and black politics their place within international history. Following a cast of civilians and soldiers as they moved through the nation and across the ocean, Lentz-Smith explores their reaction to the disillusion of military service alongside the complex racial promise of imperial France. In a Jim Crow Army on foreign soil, Lentz-Smith argues, African American soldiers reworked their notions of nation and belonging, empire and diaspora, manhood and citizenship. At home in the United States, many black soldiers and civilians did the same.

Tracing the battles between African Americans bent on seizing equal rights and the segregationists committed to denying them, Lentz-Smith demonstrates how World War I served as a crucible for the activism of the interwar years and beyond.

The Bull's Head Bookshop is located in the UNC Student Stores on the campus of UNC-CH. All events at the Bull's Head are free and open to the public. Call 919-962-5060 for questions.

Subject: [survey2] UNC Organizational Effectiveness Survey

Dear Faculty and Staff,

With the Bain report, and now the Carolina Counts initiative, we undertook an effort to gauge how effectively we operate as a University. Now, we're ready to take the next step -- asking all Carolina employees, both faculty and staff, to respond to a survey that will directly collect your thoughts about our organizational effectiveness.

The link to this survey is here: http://www.surveymonkey.com/s/68TW9DJ. I assure you that all individual responses will be anonymous and completely confidential. We will publish the full results later this spring, and we plan to use them to guide further action by the administration. They will also be a helpful benchmarking tool so we can determine if we're making progress later.

I strongly encourage everyone to take the survey. We can't consider your opinions about how well -- or not -- the University is run if you don't complete the questionnaire. Everyone's perspectives are needed as part of this process.

Here's an opportunity to let your voice be heard. The deadline to submit your responses is March 5.

Sincerely,

Holden Thorp
Chancellor

Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: Message from the Chancellor: Budget Update

Dear Faculty, Staff and Students:

It's been awhile since you've heard from me on the topic of the budget, so I wanted to share what we know so far as we plan for next fiscal year.

Clearly North Carolina is not out from under the economic downturn. Legislative leaders expect at least a $500 million gap in the state budget for next year. We'll know more in April when the impact of income tax payments on the state revenue picture becomes clearer as the General Assembly prepares for the short session in May. But we are preparing for the likelihood of more cuts in our state appropriations on top of the total 10 percent reduction we took as a campus last year.

In the meantime, I wanted you to know where we are in the University's budget planning cycle. Interim Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost Bruce Carney is leading the deliberations of our Budget Committee during the annual hearings in which the vice chancellors and deans present their proposals. Starting last December, those administrators were asked to develop proposals that assumed new cuts at the 5 percent level as well as continued declines in funding from endowment earnings. Those budget hearings are not yet complete, but it's clear already that the vice chancellors and deans are responding thoughtfully in making plans for more possible difficult decisions about people, programs and operations. The provost's directions specifically asked units to pay close attention to senior management positions in considering proposed reductions. Once the hearings are over, the committee will refine our plans for next year and take into account the potential need for cuts of more than 5 percent. That process will continue over the next several weeks. (Refer to the "Recent Budget Communications" section of the Carolina Budget Information Web site to see the directions the vice chancellors and deans received in late December.)

We hope to continue protecting our teaching mission and keep offering the same number of courses we have this year. Our academic units took a lower cut last year than our support and administrative units to support that principle. We have also asked the vice chancellors and deans to show how they are already drawing from ideas generated by the final Bain & Company report in their budget plans. That's an important consideration now even as the work of the Carolina Counts initiative continues in charting our course to make major long-term improvements to how we manage and operate the University. (To learn more about Carolina Counts, see the new Web site, http://carolinacounts.unc.edu/)

We're already becoming a more efficient campus. We've begun reducing duplication of finance, IT and human resources in some research centers and institutes. Our information technology division is partnering with NC State on central software for human resources and finance as part of ConnectCarolina. That campus-wide initiative continues to make progress in changing student information systems. Beginning April 1, the Health Sciences Library and the University Libraries will be combined under University Librarian Sarah Michalak. The change will help our overall library operations better support the University's teaching, research and public service missions. These are just a few examples.

I am reminded every day how much everyone pulls together to make this University successful, even when faced with budget adversity. It's been true since the economic downturn began, and I'm confident that will remain the case in the coming weeks and months.

Sincerely,

Holden Thorp

From Felrath Hines' luminous explorations of color to Do-Ho Suh's sculpture Floor (made for viewers to walk upon), the Ackland is filled with art that will fascinate and inspire even the youngest visitor. Explore these works and more with a child you care about on a Family Fun Tour at the Ackland. These interactive gallery tours are led by Ackland educators and are designed for six- to twelve-year-olds and their families. This weekend will focus on Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines and Richard Westall's painting The Sword of Damocles. Family Fun Tours are the perfect way to spend a Sunday afternoon with your children. Come explore with us!

Free | Walk-ins welcome

The Ackland celebrates the contributions of two of the most significant African American artists of the twentieth century:
Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines and
Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown
on view through May 9, 2010.

Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines
Color Balance presents fourteen large-scale abstract paintings by Felrath Hines (1913-1993). In 2009, the artist's widow, Dorothy Fisher, donated a selection of his paintings to three North Carolina cultural institutions: the Ackland Art Museum at The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University, and the North Carolina Central University Art Museum. These luminous paintings are significant additions to the collections of each museum. The Ackland premieres the exhibition of these pieces, which will travel to the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University and the NCCU Art Museum in 2010-2011.

Jacob Lawrence
and The Legend of John Brown
One of "the most impassioned visual chroniclers of the African American experience," (New York Times, June 10, 2000) Jacob Lawrence (1917-2000) created a series of gouache paintings in 1941 to illustrate the life of abolitionist John Brown. More than thirty years later, because the fragile paintings were deteriorating, the Detroit Institute of Arts commissioned him to revisit the series. The result was a limited edition portfolio of twenty-two hand-screened prints. This year, in honor of the 150th anniversary of the raid on Harpers Ferry, the Ackland presents this outstanding series for the first time.

Subject: [generalfaculty] Msg from Faculty Chair about reducing paper use in classes

Monday, March 1, 2010

Dear Faculty Colleagues,

I would like to call your attention to a thoughtful document recently presented to the Faculty Executive Committee by senior student Conor Farese and first year students Sophie Yang and Kunlin Wang on behalf of the the Environmental Affairs Committee of Student Government.

The document outlines some facts and suggestions that can save Carolina money and preserve many trees. By a few simple adjustments to term paper formatting requirements, we can move away from our current paper use of over 500 tons a year, which will result in positive impacts on UNC's waste management and on the environment.

The document does not represent a resolution or mandate.

Please consider the suggestions and help keep Carolina green.

Best regards,
McKay

Lunch with One

Wednesday, March 3
1:00 - 2:00 PM

Bring lunch and enjoy an hour of inspiration and information with Daniel Sherman, Professor of Art History, as he discusses the political, cultural, and art historical context for the making of Edouard Manet's 1871 lithograph The Barricade (seen above), currently on view in the exhibition War on All Fronts: Art, War and Revolution, curated by the students in his first-year seminar last fall. The talk will explore recurring questions about Manet's "ambiguity," his relationship to traditional history painting, and his attitudes towards the turbulent politics of his time.

VIRGIL MARTI

Hanes Visiting Artist
Tuesday, March 2
5:30 PM
Hanes Art Center Auditorium

Hanes Visiting Artist Virgil Marti is a Philadelphia-based multimedia artist whose work investigates the spaces between "fine" art, design and decoration, refinement and excess, good and bad taste, the high and the low, and inserting high décor into fine art contexts. His immersive installations of ornate color, light, and texture - installations rich in humor, satire, shrewd observation, and questionable "good taste" - humorously engage a range of social issues: gender, class, self-image, popular culture, sexuality, and adolescence. Marti received an M.F.A. from the Tyler School of Art and a B.F.A. from Washington University and also studied at the Skowhegan School of Painting and Sculpture. He was featured in the 2004 Whitney Biennial and has shown in additional group and solo exhibitions at numerous venues, including Participant Inc., The Fabric Workshop and Museum, Thread Waxing Space, Vox Populi, Momenta Art Alternatives, Levy Gallery for the Arts at Moore College of Art and Design, the

The Ackland celebrates the contributions of two of the most significant African American artists of the twentieth century:
Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines and Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown on view through May 9, 2010.

Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines
Color Balance presents fourteen large-scale abstract paintings by Felrath Hines (1913-1993). In 2009, the artist's widow, Dorothy Fisher, donated a selection of his paintings to three North Carolina cultural institutions: the Ackland Art Museum at The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University, and the North Carolina Central University Art Museum. These luminous paintings are significant additions to the collections of each museum. The Ackland premieres the exhibition of these pieces, which will travel to the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University and the NCCU Art Museum in 2010-2011.

Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown
One of "the most impassioned visual chroniclers of the African American experience," (New York Times, June 10, 2000) Jacob Lawrence (1917-2000) created a series of gouache paintings in 1941 to illustrate the life of abolitionist John Brown. More than thirty years later, because the fragile paintings were deteriorating, the Detroit Institute of Arts commissioned him to revisit the series. The result was a limited edition portfolio of twenty-two hand-screened prints. This year, in honor of the 150th anniversary of the raid on Harpers Ferry, the Ackland presents this outstanding series for the first time.

Promotional support provided by North Carolina Public Radio-WUNC. Public programming for* Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown *was supported by the N.C. Arts Council, a division of the Department of Cultural Resources, with funding from the National Endowment for the Arts.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Call for Nominations: Thomas Jefferson Award

March 1, 2010

Dear Colleagues:

On behalf of the faculty Committee on Honorary Degrees and Special Awards, I invite your nominations for the 2010 Thomas Jefferson Award.

The Thomas Jefferson Award was established in 1961 by the Robert Earll McConnell Foundation. It is presented annually to "that member of the academic community who through personal influence and performance of duty in teaching, writing, and scholarship has best exemplified the ideals and objectives of Thomas Jefferson."

Any active member of the faculty is eligible, including those who are participating in the phased-retirement program.

Nominations, together with supporting statements, should be submitted to me no later than Wednesday, March 31, 2010. Materials may be sent by email to jsferrel@email.unc.edu or mailed to CB# 9170.

The Award will be presented at the April 23 meeting of the General Faculty and Faculty Council.

The roster of former recipients is included below.

Information about the award may also be found online at:
http://www.unc.edu/faculty/faccoun/honorary/JeffersonAward/2010jeffawardinvite.shtml

Sincerely yours,

Joseph S. Ferrell

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Treatment for OCD

TREATMENT FOR OBSESSIVE-COMPULSIVE DISORDER (OCD)

Are you anxious about germs, mistakes, harm, numbers, or unpleasant obsessive thoughts? Do you have problems with compulsive checking, washing, asking for reassurance, or repeating rituals?

If you or your partner experiences any of these problems and are between 18 and 75 years of age, you and your partner might be eligible to participate in a research study on couples therapy for OCD. We are trying to improve upon existing treatments for OCD by including the sufferer's partner. This treatment that we are testing is offered at no cost through a research study being conducted by the UNC-Chapel Hill Anxiety Disorders Clinic. The study will include cognitive-behavior therapy and will not require you to go on any medication, or change any existing medication.

For more information, please contact the study coordinator, Laura Fabricant:

Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: Violence in the Workplace Policy Reminders

FROM: Gena Carter, Senior Director, Employee & Management Relations
Office of Human Resources

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is committed to providing a workplace that is free from all types of workplace violence. In the wake of recent workplace violence events on college campuses across the country, the Office of Human Resources wants to remind all faculty and staff about the University's Violence in the Workplace policy. The policy has been recently enhanced to include guidance for reporting threats of workplace violence:

FOR VIOLENCE IN PROGRESS OR IMMEDIATE THREATS OF VIOLENCE, CALL 911 (UNC PUBLIC SAFETY)

FOR POTENTIAL THREATS OF VIOLENCE, CALL 919-843-3444 (EMPLOYEE & MANAGEMENT RELATIONS IN THE OFFICE OF HUMAN RESOURCES)

The policy has been enhanced further to describe the role of the new Employee Threat Assessment and Response Team (ETART), which is charged with assessing and responding to immediate and potential threats of workplace violence. The team will be responsible for receiving threat reports, conducting thorough assessments, determining appropriate responses, tracking and reporting workplace violence information, and conducting related training.

-- To view the Workplace Violence policy in its entirety, and to learn more about the Employee Threat Assessment and Response Team, visit the HR Web site at http://hr.unc.edu, keyword: workplace violence. If you have questions about the policy, contact your supervisor, your department's HR Facilitator, or Employee & Management Relations in the Office of Human Resources.

-- To learn more about the warning signs of potential workplace violence situations, access the Workplace Violence Reference Guide located under the "Related Forms" section of the policy. A copy of the Reference Guide is available here:
http://hr.unc.edu/sys/emaillist/20358/159581/wpv-refguide.pdf.

As a reminder, employees are encouraged to use the University's Employee Assistance Program to help deal with both personal and work-related concerns. This free, confidential service provides access to support and counseling services. An EAP counselor can be reached during normal business hours by calling 919-929-2362, or toll-free 24 hours a day at 877-327-7658.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Summer Internship Opportunities

The Association for Carolina Emergency Response and Injury Prevention (ACERIP) in conjunction with the Orange County Emergency Support Unit is looking for individuals interested in summer internships with Orange County Emergency Services.

Orange County Emergency Services is the agency dedicated to ensuring the appropriate and efficient response to emergencies throughout Orange County operating twenty-four hours each day, year round.
Orange County Emergency Services consists of:

* 9-1-1 Communications
* Emergency Management (Planning and Logistics)
* Emergency Medical Services
* Life Safety Management (Fire Marshal)

In addition, Emergency Services also plans for the Orange County response to a disaster and other complex emergencies. Disaster planning integrates all of the critical Orange County departments with the local municipalities as well as state and federal agencies.

The internships would last the length of the summer and allow individuals to learn more about Emergency Services, EMS, Logistics/Planning, Telecommunications, and Emergency Management. For more information please email Darshan Patel at dpatel@co.orange.nc.us or 919-245-6138.

Thank you!

---

Tea at Two

The Ackland cordially invites you to an exclusive new program for Museum members.

On selected Wednesdays, Tea at Two will feature special a guest speaker followed by tea and refreshments in the Yager Gallery. Each event begins at 2:00 PM and is uniquely designed to offer a special presentation on the Ackland and related projects. This program is free to members, but members are encouraged to bring guests ($10 for non-members). Advanced notice and opportunity to RSVP given to members at the Contributor Level and above. Space is limited. Please RSVP to Kyle Fitch at kyle_fitch@unc.edu or 919.843.3676.

Wednesday, March 10
Join Amanda Hughes for a conversation about the publication of A Place for Meaning: Art, Faith, and Museum Culture.

In 1996, the Ackland embarked on a multi-year investigation of the limits and potentials of engaging works of art to teach and learn about world religions. Combining academic research with conversations with local and national representatives of Hindu, Jewish, Buddhist, Christian, and Islamic faith traditions, the Ackland applied new strategies for approaching works of art with sacred content. Exhibitions, public programs, and resources for public educators combined to create increased interest in the potential of museums to serve as locations for respectful interfaith dialogue. With support from the Henry Luce Foundation, the Museum gathered scholars, faith leaders, and museum professionals to consider the implications of these ideas. This year, the Ackland published its findings in A Place for Meaning (2009, distributed by UNC Press).

In addition to her contributions to A Place for Meaning, co-authored with Carolyn Wood, Ph.D., Hughes is the author of Lost and Found: Adolescence, Parenting, and the Formation of Faith (Cowley Books, 2004) and Five Voices, Five Faiths: an interfaith primer (Cowley Books, 2006). She is director of external affairs at the Ackland.

Wednesday, April 14
Join the artists and curator of the exhibition
New Currents in Contemporary Art for a conversation and tour.

Each spring, the Ackland Art Museum has the pleasure of presenting work by UNC-Chapel Hill's graduating Master of Fine Arts (MFA) class. The MFA degree is a two-year program designed to develop professional artists and teachers. This year's exhibition features the work of four students: Emily Scott Beck, Kia Mercedes Carscallen, Jessica Dupuis, and T. Coke Whitworth. Moreover, the curator of the exhibition, Lauren Sanford, is also a graduate student pursuing her PhD in Art History and working as the current Ackland Graduate Intern. The exhibition contains objects that the MFA students feel best represent themselves and their mission as emerging artists. The media ranges from photography and ceramics to video projection and audio installation. These artists push the envelope to demonstrate how these materials, some traditional, some more cutting-edge, can be employed in new and thought-provoking ways. Please join the artists and the curator for an informal tour and discussion of the exhibition.

Wednesday, May 12
Join Director Emily Kass
and Chief Curator Peter Nisbet for a lively discussion of why and how the Ackland collects.

As the Museum prepares to mount a major exhibition showcasing works of art from the collections of Carolina alumni, our speakers will explore the relationship between private and institutional collecting, present thoughts about collecting in general, and offer a behind-the-scenes look at decision-making in the museum.

If you are not already a member but would like to be, please join online.

Recruiting Individuals for a Research Study

A research study at FPG Child Development Institute (FPG) at UNC is recruiting individuals over the age of 18 to participate in a research study looking at how likely it is for people to offer support to others.

As a participant in the study, you will be asked to read several transcripts of interviews conducted with parents who recently received a diagnosis of autism for their young children. You will then be asked to rate your reaction.

The study has been approved by the Committee on the Protection of the Rights of Human Subjects at UNC.

If you want more information about this project or have any questions, please contact Emily Dillon by email at edillon@unc.edu or call the study toll-free number: 1-877-696-5797 (local: 919-843-4618). Please share this message with any friends or family who may be interested in this study.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: MINDFULNESS-BASED COURSES FOR STRESS & PAIN MANAGEMENT-REGISTER NOW!!!

Do you want to learn to slow down and enjoy your life?

Are you looking for a new way to deal with stress, anxiety, pain, difficult interactions with others?

Mindfulness can make a difference.

The UNC Mindfulness-based Program for Stress and Pain Management offers training in meditation and mind-body awareness that will teach you how to slow down, set priorities and stay calm, focused and relaxed in the midst of a busy life. These practices will enhance your body's natural adaptive healing ability and will cultivate the mind's clarity and insight. This program follows Jon Kabat-Zinn's model and is offered by the Program on Integrative Medicine at UNC (Department of Physical Medicine & Rehabilitation).

SPRING 2010 MINDFULNESS COURSES ON CAMPUS:
1) Thursday evenings beginning April 15 (required orientation) through June 10, taught by Paula Huffman

2) Tuesday evenings beginning May 4 (required orientation) through June 29, taught by Mary Love May

SPRING 2010 MINDFULNESS COURSES AT UNC WELLNESS CENTER AT MEADOWMONT
1) Friday mornings, beginning April 16 (required orientation) through June 11, taught by Paula Huffman (Location TBD)

2) Tuesday mornings, beginning May 4 (required orientation) through June 29, taught by Mary Love May

Two graduate courses will be offered this spring for those who have taken the basic foundation course:
1) "MINDFUL PARENTING" will be held at Balanced Movement Studio on Tuesday mornings, beginning March 23 through April 13, 2010

2) Our newest graduate course, "NAVIGATING RELATIONSHIPS THROUGH MINDFULNESS" will be held on campus at the Tate-Turner-Kuralt Building (School of Social Work) on Tuesday evenings, beginning March 23 through April 13, 2010

Both classes are taught by Mary Love May.

Subject: FORMAL NOTICE: Change in Campus Drinking Water for the Month of March

Important Water Quality Alert

TO: UNC Campus Community

FROM: Mary Beth Koza, Director of Environment, Health & Safety

RE: Important Notice: Change in Campus Drinking Water for the Month of March

The Orange Water and Sewer Authority (OWASA) supplies drinking water to campus. As described in the notice below, OWASA will temporarily change their disinfection process from March 1 to March 31, 2010. This may change the taste or smell of campus water. If you use water for a special purpose in which residuals or other water characteristics are important, please carefully read the following information to understand how this change may affect you.

Also during the month of March, OWASA crews will be releasing water from some fire hydrants. The purpose of this "flushing" of water mains is to ensure that water with chlorine goes through the entire water system. This flushing may cause discoloration or air bubbles. If you experience this please run cold water for about 5 minutes to clear it up.

The full text of OWASA's notification to the University is reprinted below. It is also posted at the UNC Department of Environment, Health and Safety's (EHS) web site: http://ehs.unc.edu.

Orange Water and Sewer Authority

OWASA will temporarily change its drinking water disinfection process by using chlorine instead of chloramines in March, 2010

From March 1st through 31st, OWASA will use chlorine instead of chloramines to disinfect drinking water in accord with a State requirement. The purpose of the chlorine disinfection in March is to help ensure a high level of disinfection in the community's network of water mains.

Chloramines are a compound of chlorine and ammonia which OWASA uses for disinfection in months other than March.

OWASA asks customers to be aware of the following:

* Some customers may notice that OWASA water will have a chlorine taste or odor in March. However, OWASA's drinking water will be safe to drink as at other times of year.

* Customers may see OWASA crews releasing water from some fire hydrants in March. The purpose of this "flushing" of water mains is to ensure that water with chlorine goes through the entire water system.

* The flushing of water mains may cause some discoloration of OWASA drinking water because iron and manganese particles that have settled in water mains over time may be stirred up. Air bubbles, which can make water look milky, may also get into the water system. Customers who notice discoloration or air bubbles are encouraged to run cold water through a bathtub faucet, etc. for about 5 minutes to clear up the water.

* OWASA will use special equipment and a chemical to neutralize the chlorine and ammonia in the water that is released during flushing so that it will not harm fish in streams and creeks.

* Customers with fish or amphibians in aquariums filled with OWASA water should continue to use chemicals as recommended by pet supply stores, etc. to neutralize chlorine and ammonia.

* Customers who use OWASA water for special purposes or processes involving careful control of water characteristics, such as kidney dialysis, are encouraged to get advice from an appropriate technical source such as a filter vendor or service company about whether and how to make adjustments to their use or filtration of OWASA water during March. With chlorine disinfection in March, OWASA expects that the pH of its drinking water at the treatment plant will be 7.1 to 7.3, compared to the pH of 8.1 to 8.3 in months with chloramine disinfection.

OWASA will resume the use of chloramines for disinfection on April 1, 2010.

Customers are invited to contact OWASA with any questions or comments about the use of chlorine in March, the characteristics of OWASA drinking water, etc.

Background information regarding disinfection with chloramines

In January, 2002, OWASA began using chloramines to disinfect drinking water. Disinfection with chloramines has improved the taste and odor and the overall quality of drinking water by reducing the levels of certain disinfection byproducts (please see additional information below). Before 2002, OWASA used chlorine in the form of sodium hypochlorite (bleach) for disinfection.

OWASA made the change from chlorine to chloramine disinfection in 2002 in order to reduce the levels of certain disinfection byproducts which may be harmful at high levels over a lifetime. The disinfection byproducts, which result from the chemical reaction of chlorine with organic material, are called trihalomethanes (THMs) and haloacetic acids (HAAs). Small particles of organic material are naturally present in the water from lakes.

In the Triangle region, water utilities including OWASA, the City of Durham, the City of Raleigh and the Town of Cary use chloramines for disinfection except for one month of the year (March or a similar period), under normal conditions.

Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: Message from the Chancellor: Provost Announcement

Dear Carolina community:

I know that it's spring break and you likely won't get this email until next week, but I wanted to let you know that we have a new Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost. I'm thrilled to tell you that Bruce Carney, our current interim provost, has agreed to take the position permanently. The appointment is pending approval by the Board of Trustees later this month.

As you know, the search committee brought three excellent candidates to campus for public lectures and Q&A. But ultimately, there just wasn't a match. Rather than reopening the search, we prevailed upon Bruce to stay in his role. When he took on the interim role, he had made it clear that he wasn't interested in the position permanently. But fortunately for us, he was willing to reconsider. Not only has he come to enjoy the job, but we've come to rely on him. He's done an outstanding job, and appointing him allows us to continue moving forward without skipping a beat.

Through the years Bruce, who is the Samuel Baron Distinguished Professor of Physics and Astronomy, has held a number of key leadership roles at Carolina. Most recently he was interim dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. He also has been associate dean, overseeing a dozen academic departments and programs in the sciences. He's been a member of the faculty since 1980.

The executive vice chancellor and provost has a big job, overseeing all academic operations, including 13 schools and the College of Arts and Sciences, the University Library, a variety of centers and several cultural and educational units. And Bruce has clearly shown he's up to the task.

I want to thank the search committee. National searches are hard work, and they are a big investment of time. In this case, we found our best candidate right here.

Please join me in congratulating Bruce.

Sincerely,

Holden Thorp

The Ackland celebrates the contributions of two of the most significant African American artists of the twentieth century: Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines and Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown on view through May 9, 2010.

Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines

Color Balance presents fourteen large-scale abstract paintings by Felrath Hines (1913-1993). In 2009, the artist's widow, Dorothy Fisher, donated a selection of his paintings to three North Carolina cultural institutions: the Ackland Art Museum at The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University, and the North Carolina Central University Art Museum. These luminous paintings are significant additions to the collections of each museum. The Ackland premieres the exhibition of these pieces, which will travel to the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University and the NCCU Art Museum in 2010-2011.

Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown

One of "the most impassioned visual chroniclers of the African American experience," (New York Times, June 10, 2000) Jacob Lawrence (1917-2000) created a series of gouache paintings in 1941 to illustrate the life of abolitionist John Brown. More than thirty years later, because the fragile paintings were deteriorating, the Detroit Institute of Arts commissioned him to revisit the series. The result was a limited edition portfolio of twenty-two hand-screened prints. This year, in honor of the 150th anniversary of the raid on Harpers Ferry, the Ackland presents this outstanding series for the first time.

Promotional support provided by North Carolina Public Radio-WUNC. Public programming for* Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown *was supported by the N.C. Arts Council, a division of the Department of Cultural Resources, with funding from the National Endowment for the Arts.

Hi Dr. Mutima,

Please see June Blackwelder's inquiry below. I assume that we should go with whatever name the Registrar lists since our courses are supposed to have the same title as those on campus.

Judith,
We're proofing SWAH 401, and I looked up the course description in the Undergrad Bulletin and noticed that the title used there for all SWAH courses is "Kiswahili I" or II or III, etc. The Registrar's site seems to use that also. Should we make that change?

Curators Clinic

Thursday, March 18 | 1:00 - 4:00 PM

Every other month, the Ackland invites the public to bring in a work of art for consideration by an Ackland expert. While Ackland staff is unable to appraise works of art, curators may offer insight into the significance of the piece as well as the techniques used by the artist, condition, and subject matter. Only one work per person allowed. Please call 919.843.3677 to make an appointment.

Registration required | Free to members | $10 non-members

Art & Literature in the Galleries

Thursday, March 18 | 7:00 - 8:30 PM

Start reading now for Art & Literature in the Galleries! This program connects works of literature with art on display in the Ackland. This week's selection is The Tribunal: Black Responses to John Brown, edited by Zoe Trodd, which will be discussed in connection with the exhibition Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown. Trodd, editor of the book and Post-Doctoral Fellow in Southern Studies at the Center for the Study of the American South, will facilitate the discussion with Leslie Balkany.

Registration required
Free to members and high school students | $5 non-members

KIBERA ILLUMINATED

Thursday, March 18 and Friday, March 19 | 6:00 - 10:00 PM

In collaboration with Carolina for Kibera (CFK), the Students for CFK, and Student Friends of the Ackland, the Ackland is pleased to host the exhibition Kibera Illuminated: Lives in East Africa's Largest Slum, an outdoor evening installation showcasing photographs taken by adolescent girls living in Kibera, the largest slum in East Africa. Carolina for Kibera is an affiliated entity of UNC-Chapel Hill based at the Center for Global Initiatives that inspires and nurtures youth leaders in Kibera, Kenya, through a unique model of participatory development. Kibera is often portrayed in the media as a sprawling slum plagued by unemployment, HIV/AIDS, endemic poverty, and violence. While Kibera's challenges are real, there are young people in Kibera ready to lead with ambition and compassion. With no formal training and simple point-and-shoot cameras, a team of girls from Carolina for Kibera's Binti Pamoja Program set out to capture images of Kibera as they see it. Kibera Illuminated presents these singular images, allowing the viewer to encounter East Africa's largest slum through the unique perspective of these amazing young women. Kibera Illuminated will be on display on the front lawn of Ackland during the evenings of Thursday, March 18 and Friday, March 19. There will be a reception at 6:00 PM both nights featuring Kenyan-inspired food and speakers from Carolina for Kibera sharing their approach to community development and the power of participatory photography. Both evenings, the Museum will remain open until 8:00 PM. Selected photographs from the exhibition are included in the book LightBox: Expressions of Hope From Young Women in the Kibera Slum of Nairobi, which will be available for sale.

Sunday, March 21 | 2:00 - 4:00 PM

Every third Sunday of the month, enjoy free music in the Ackland galleries. A wide variety of performers can be found - from classical quartets to live DJs - to enhance your museum experience. This Sunday, enjoy the music of the UNC Woodwind Quintet, a prestigious group of undergraduate players featuring Katie Stuwe (flute), Stephen Rouse (oboe), Andy Warwick (clarinet), Caresse Bridge (french horn), and Jessica Kunttu (bassoon). They will be performing a number of works ranging from the classical to the modern, including quintets by Anton Reicha and Malcolm Arnold's Three Sea Shanties.

HANES VISITING ARTIST OLIVER HERRING

Gerrard Hall
Saturday, March 20 | 5:00 - 11:00 PM

German-born experimental artist Oliver Herring will lead a free public "TASK" party, an event with a simple structure and few rules in which people are invited to express and test their own ideas. Participants write down tasks on pieces of paper and add them to a pool; people then pull random tasks from the pool and interpret them in any way they want, using whatever props and materials are available. Herring provides items that may include cardboard, plastic bags, pencils, tables, plastic wrap, tape, markers, or ladders. New tasks are then written down and performed, and the process goes on. The open-ended structure creates opportunities for people to interact with one another and their environment. His work has been shown at the Museum of Modern Art, the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum, the New Museum of Contemporary Art in New York, and the Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden in Washington, DC.

Free

The Ackland celebrates the contributions of two of the most significant African American artists of the twentieth century: Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines and Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown on view through May 9, 2010.

Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines

Color Balance presents fourteen large-scale abstract paintings by Felrath Hines (1913-1993). In 2009, the artist's widow, Dorothy Fisher, donated a selection of his paintings to three North Carolina cultural institutions: the Ackland Art Museum at The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University, and the North Carolina Central University Art Museum. These luminous paintings are significant additions to the collections of each museum. The Ackland premieres the exhibition of these pieces, which will travel to the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University and the NCCU Art Museum in 2010-2011.

Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown

One of "the most impassioned visual chroniclers of the African American experience," (New York Times, June 10, 2000) Jacob Lawrence (1917-2000) created a series of gouache paintings in 1941 to illustrate the life of abolitionist John Brown. More than thirty years later, because the fragile paintings were deteriorating, the Detroit Institute of Arts commissioned him to revisit the series. The result was a limited edition portfolio of twenty-two hand-screened prints. This year, in honor of the 150th anniversary of the raid on Harpers Ferry, the Ackland presents this outstanding series for the first time.

Promotional support provided by North Carolina Public Radio-WUNC. Public programming for* Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown *was supported by the N.C. Arts Council, a division of the Department of Cultural Resources, with funding from the National Endowment for the Arts.

Subject:	[african-and-afro-american-studies-faculty] [all-college-faculty] Important - Annual Report open for faculty (changes, instructions, & deadlines announced)

This message is being sent to all faculty in the College of Arts and Sciences with a copy to unit chairs/directors and administrative managers.

The College Annual report system is now open for faculty to summarize their activities and accomplishments. To make the information reporting process easier and more efficient for faculty, chairs and administrators, we have streamlined the annual report survey tool by editing or removing some questions and by asking faculty to upload their full curriculum vitae.

All faculty in the College of Arts and Sciences are required to prepare for their department or curricula an annual report of some of your activities and accomplishments for the period May 1, 2009 to April 30, 2010. These reports are used for a variety of assessment and evaluation purposes within your units, but they are also an important component of the units' required report to the College of Arts and Sciences.

The deadline for completing your report for this year is April 16, 2010.

Stewardship:

You may also be prompted to complete a tab labeled "Stewardship." This section is included if you have received funding from private sources.

The Arts and Sciences Foundation produces letters to donors on the use of these funds. These reports benefit your department and the College of Arts and Sciences in future fund-raising efforts.

If you have questions about the Stewardship section, please contact one of the following staff members at the Arts & Sciences Foundation: Del Helton, del.helton@unc.edu, 962-8216, Jim Magaw, jim.magaw@unc.edu, 962-6123, or Joanna Cardwell, joanna.cardwell@unc.edu, 962-8342.

Please note that your contributions last spring helped the Arts and Sciences Foundation produce nearly 600 letters to our generous College donors. This annual "stewardship report" explains how the fund was used and includes information about the fund's investment performance. Donors often respond with a thank-you note in appreciation.

We very much appreciate your assistance with another round of outstanding stewardship letters.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR ACCESSING THE ANNUAL REPORT SYSTEM AND STEWARDSHIP

1) https://apps1.oasis.unc.edu/car/

2) Login with your onyen and onyen password

3) You can access the Stewardship system through a tab on the Annual Report.

*The system also allows access to previous years' responses.

Your Onyen

Website: http://onyen.unc.edu

Your ONYEN is the first part of your email address, e.g. for an email address of jdoe@email.unc.edu your ONYEN is "jdoe" without the quotes.

If you lose or forget your ONYEN password, you can get a new one by taking your UNC One Card (or another picture ID) to IT Response Center at Wilson Library suite 300. It is not possible to recover your old password. For security reasons, you can get a new password only with a picture ID.

If you have forgotten your ONYEN you may look it up by selecting the "Forgotten Onyen" button and supplying your last name and your PID.

Annual Report Assistance

If you require additional help or have problems accessing or using the web site, please submit an Online Help Ticket to OASIS. Website: http://oasis.unc.edu/remedy

Policy questions should be directed first to your unit Chair/Director or Administrative Manager, followed by a Help Ticket to the Dean's Office at http://tinyurl.com/College-Annual-Report-Help.

Thank you.

Many adolescents and young adults who suffer from chronic abdominal pain report food sensitivities; which may result in avoidance of certain foods. A research study at UNC investigates which foods teens avoid and what kind of symptoms these cause.

We are currently recruiting adolescents and young adults, ages 15-21, diagnosed with recurrent abdominal pain, Irritable Bowel Syndrome, functional abdominal pain, unexplained or idiopathic chronic abdominal pain by a physician to take part in this research study. You can take part in the study whether or not you avoid eating certain foods.

You will be asked to complete three daily food diaries over the phone as well as a questionnaire on eating and symptoms. No visits to UNC are required. You will receive $40 for completing the study. If you are interested in participating or would like more information, please contact:

Subject: FORMAL NOTICE: Campus migration to Microsoft Exchange

TO: Faculty and staff
FROM: Larry D. Conrad, vice chancellor for information technology and chief information officer
DATE: March 22, 2010
SUBJECT: Campus migration to Microsoft Exchange

The UNC-Chapel Hill campus community has expressed the need for an improved, seamless, and integrated messaging and calendaring user experience with a more robust integration of mobile devices. In response, Information Technology Services (ITS) plans to migrate campus units currently using ITS' central e-mail service (@email.unc.edu) to a centrally supported Microsoft Exchange platform.

Microsoft Exchange is a robust solution that includes integrated e-mail and calendaring and is designed to provide anywhere access, deliver rock-solid PDA integration, improve quality of service and security and be more operationally efficient to deploy, manage and maintain. In addition, it provides an improved base for collaboration tools (such as SharePoint) and universal messaging (integration of multiple message forms, such as voice mail).

This transition provides a messaging and calendaring service under one central ITS-supported platform as strongly urged by the Carolina Counts initiative charged with implementing the Bain Report recommendations.

Another factor in the decision to change is that the Oracle Calendar will no longer be supported as of August 2010. Migration to a new e-mail and calendaring system is a complex undertaking. There are several challenges to accomplishing this, but we believe the benefits of providing a more robust platform for the campus far outweigh the migration effort. We plan to migrate all active Oracle Calendar users to the Exchange Calendar simultaneously in mid-October 2010. This mass migration will allow us to keep intact the `spider web' of connections associated with meetings.

E-mail migration will take place on a schedule chosen by the individual units. ITS will work with campus units to identify unit coordinators who will determine the e-mail transition timeline for their organization and act as the communication channel between ITS and the migrating unit. ITS and the unit coordinators will work together to facilitate the transition to the Exchange platform, clearly communicate the migration process and resolve challenges as they arise.

In March 2011, all remaining mail flow to the current central e-mail service will be stopped, and all new e-mail will be delivered to Exchange, so all units need to be transitioned by that date.

This month, ITS will complete its own migration to Exchange. The experience has been an overwhelmingly positive one and the knowledge we have gained will benefit other campus units as they transition to Exchange.

A Web site at www.unc.edu/Exchange has been created to provide additional information, resources and FAQs.

If you have any questions or concerns, please feel free to contact Kathy Kyzer who is coordinating the migration effort at kathy_kyzer@unc.edu.

A FIRE DEPT. PRODUCTION

ABOUT THE PLAY:

The stage comes alive with Gabrielle Maisels' remarkable portrayal of two girls, Lindiwe, black, and Corinne, Jewish, struggling against injustice, determined to see change, not just for themselves, but for their country. As with the stories of Anne Frank, and child soldier Ishmael Beah, we see both trauma and fierce hope through the eyes of children. As the miracle of the first democratic election in 1994 gives way to political reality, the New South Africa dawns…and each girl must renew her fight for the dream that she envisioned.

ABOUT THE ACTOR/PLAYWRIGHT:

Gabrielle Maisels is the granddaughter of Israel Aaron Maisels, leader of the defense team that secured Nelson Mandela's acquittal in the Treason Trial of 1956-61. Gabrielle studied Political Theory at Harvard and Columbia, acting with Carol Fox Prescott, and playwriting with Matt Hoverman. Member of Actor's Equity. This is Gabrielle's playwriting debut.

ABOUT THE FIRE DEPT. THEATRE COMPANY:

THE FIRE DEPT is dedicated to creating work that cannot be replicated inside a television box or on a movie screen, work of visceral and heightened theatricality that not only entertains, but also wrestles with questions of importance to our society and our world. We believe in combining the rigor and structure of great narrative storytelling with the vitality of formal experimentation, and are committed to the development of new plays and theatre pieces, as well as vital re-interpretations of existing works. We utilize alternative as well as traditional theatre spaces, and hope to encourage dialogue among audiences of diverse cultural and socio-economic backgrounds, reaching out beyond the traditional theatre audience to address issues of relevance to the culture at large, igniting questions, sparking controversy, and responding to the urgency of our times. www.thefiredept.org

The Ackland is honored to co-sponsor a visit to UNC-Chapel Hill by artist William Christenberry, who will present a free public lecture entitled Southern Photography. Considered by many to be one of the primary innovators of modern color photography, Christenberry is best known for his iconic work recording the passage of time in the Southern landscape. Of Christenberry, the writer Reynolds Price has said, "No piece of America has undergone so rapid a rise, high noon, and death as the rural Deep South. In a mere two hundred years, an entire civilization flourished and all but vanished. And no such spectacle has called forth a more eloquent witness and recorder than William Christenberry - eloquent and truthful and brilliantly witty."

This lecture is co-sponsored by The Center for the Study of the American South at UNC-Chapel Hill, UNC-Chapel Hill's Program on Folklore, UNC-Chapel Hill's Department of American Studies, and the Ackland Art Museum. Limited parking available in the Global Education Center's parking garage.

Thursday Talks

Photography and Painting: A Mixed Marriage
Thursday, March 25 | 6:00 PM

Thursday Talks is a new program that brings artists, scholars, and art lovers together during the Ackland's Thursday evening hours. This Thursday will feature artist and professor Peter Filene discussing the complex relationship between painting and photography. Filene's photographs have been exhibited throughout North Carolina and as far away as Virginia and Florida. As a professor of American history at UNC-Chapel Hill, he won six teaching awards. He has published a novel and has hopes for his next one.

JEFFREY T. SCHNAPP, STANFORD UNIVERSITY
WORKSHOP AND PUBLIC LECTURE

FedEx Global Education Center

Tuesday, March 23

Jeffrey T. Schnapp is the Rosina Pierotti chair and professor of French and Italian and Comparative literature at Stanford University. He is also the founder and director of the Stanford Humanities Lab. Though primarily anchored in the field of Italian studies, Professor Schnapp has played a pioneering role in several areas of transdisciplinary research and led the development of a new wave of digital humanities work. His research interests extend from antiquity to the present, encompassing the material history of literature, the history of twentieth century architecture and design, and the cultural history of science and engineering.

Workshop: The Digital Humanities Manifesto
3:00 - 5:00pm | Room 3009
Professor Jeffrey T. Schnapp will meet with students and researchers and discuss his Digital Humanities Manifesto and the projects that he has developed at the Stanford Humanities Lab.

Lecture: The Statistical Sublime: Futurism and Numbers
5:30 - 7:00pm | Room 4003
Numbers have always been integral to poetry, from the quantitative metrics of ancient verse to Dante's definition of poetry as numeri regolati and beyond. Likewise, they have forever undergirded compositional principles in the visual arts with their golden sections and metaphysical ratios. Yet it is only in the 20th century that they move from the backstage out onto the catwalk of cultural communication. Futurism plays a decisive role in this shift, insisting from the outset that it will sing a world of human multitudes navigating a sea of that newest fruit of the contemporary physical and social sciences: statistics—statistics regarding productivity, mobility, opinion, speed. The Statistical Sublime sketches an overall portrait of number and mathematical notation in Futurist theory and practice, Italian and Russian. It tells the tale of how, extending Kant's mathematical sublime, Futurism enacts a détournement of the tools of the new positivist rationality. Reception to follow lecture.

Sponsors: The Center for European Studies, The Department of Romance Languages and Literatures, The Department of Communication Studies, The Interdisciplinary Program in Cinema, ScreenArts Media Makers Series, Student Congress, and The Department of English and Comparative Literature at UNC-Chapel Hill as well as The Department of Romance Studies, Information Science + Information Studies, and The Program in Literature at Duke.

Free admission
Free parking available after 5:00 PM at the FedEx Global Education Building.

The Ackland celebrates the contributions of two of the most significant African American artists of the twentieth century: Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines and Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown on view through May 9, 2010.

Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines

Color Balance presents fourteen large-scale abstract paintings by Felrath Hines (1913-1993). In 2009, the artist's widow, Dorothy Fisher, donated a selection of his paintings to three North Carolina cultural institutions: the Ackland Art Museum at The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University, and the North Carolina Central University Art Museum. These luminous paintings are significant additions to the collections of each museum. The Ackland premieres the exhibition of these pieces, which will travel to the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University and the NCCU Art Museum in 2010-2011.

Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown

One of "the most impassioned visual chroniclers of the African American experience," (New York Times, June 10, 2000) Jacob Lawrence (1917-2000) created a series of gouache paintings in 1941 to illustrate the life of abolitionist John Brown. More than thirty years later, because the fragile paintings were deteriorating, the Detroit Institute of Arts commissioned him to revisit the series. The result was a limited edition portfolio of twenty-two hand-screened prints. This year, in honor of the 150th anniversary of the raid on Harpers Ferry, the Ackland presents this outstanding series for the first time.

Promotional support provided by North Carolina Public Radio-WUNC. Public programming for* Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown *was supported by the N.C. Arts Council, a division of the Department of Cultural Resources, with funding from the National Endowment for the Arts.

Subject: [generalfaculty] Survey: Faculty Input Sought for UNC System President Search

To the General Faculty

Dear Colleagues:

I'm writing at the request of UNC Faculty Assembly leaders to ask you to participate in an upcoming survey regarding the criteria relating to experience, skills, characteristics, and philosophy that should guide the selection of the next UNC system president.

The UNC "Leadership Statement Committee" has begun the process of mapping the criteria that should guide the search for a new UNC system president to succeed the current president, Erskine Bowles. We are happy that there are three faculty representatives on this committee (UNC Faculty Assembly Chair Judith Wegner, from UNC-Chapel Hill; UNC Faculty Assembly Chair-Elect Sandie Gravett, from Appalachian State; and UNC Faculty Assembly Executive Committee member Raymond Burton, from UNC Wilmington). Other members of this committee include leaders of the UNC Board of Governors, leaders of various UNC campus Boards of Trustees, and representatives of UNC staff and students.

The faculty representatives have now completed and launched a survey designed to seek insights from all faculty on all campuses. Responses must be submitted no later than Friday April 2 at 5 p.m. in order to be considered. Because materials related to the search fall within state public records requirements, data collected may be subject to disclosure upon request. You may therefore include your name and affiliation with your response, or you may respond without doing so to preserve confidentiality.

The survey can be accessed at http://www.surveymonkey.com/s/DRMBC22. It is important that we have a strong faculty response, and I urge you to participate so that we can convey the message that faculty members are deeply committed to helping guide the educational mission on our campuses, and very much wish to be heard.

Please help us guide this important search process. If you have questions, you can contact UNC Faculty Assembly Chair Judith Wegner (judith_wegner@unc.edu).

Sincerely,

McKay

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: UMA Manager of the Year Award

The University Managers Association (UMA) is pleased to announce that we are currently accepting nominations for the 2010 Manager of the Year award. Selection is based on University career accomplishments, both inside and outside normal job responsibilities, or a specific accomplishment made within the past twelve (12) months that has been of major significance. The specific accomplishment cited may be inside or outside of the nominee's primary area of responsibility. Any current UNC Chapel Hill faculty or staff may submit a nomination. UMA membership is not a requirement for the nominee. With the exception of current UMA Board Members (http://uma.unc.edu/directors.php) nominations are open to all permanent full-time managers with two or more years of University service.

The nomination form can be found online (http://uma.unc.edu/documents/ManageroftheYearaward2010.doc) and nominations are due by 5:00 p.m. on Friday, April 16, 2010.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Call for Nominations 2010 AWFP Mary Turner Lane Award

Dear Faculty, Staff, and Students:

It is time to send your nominations for the 2010 Mary Turner Lane Award, given annually by the Association for Women Faculty and Professionals to a woman who has made an outstanding contribution to the lives of women on the UNC-Chapel Hill campus. "Outstanding contribution" is interpreted broadly, touching all areas of the lives of women, including students, faculty, staff, and administrators, on our campus. It includes, but is not limited to, achievements that enhance women's lives through the following: scholarship, teaching, leadership, health services, social services, political activism, professional advancement, program development, and staff support.

The award is named to honor Mary Turner Lane, founding director of the Curriculum in Women's Studies and the first recipient of the award.

The nomination deadline is Friday, April 9, 2010. Please send nominations by email to Brooke Church at brooke_church@unc.edu that include:

* The nominee's name
* A paragraph (or two) describing the nominee's contributions to women at UNC and why she is deserving of the award
* Nominator's name, department name and contact information (email, phone)

This year's recipient will be honored at our annual AWFP Spring Luncheon, which will be held on Thursday, April 29, 2010 from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in the Carolina Inn, Hill Ballroom.

ATTENTION UNC STUDENTS AND EMPLOYEES:

On the morning of Saturday, April 10, the UNC Campus and the Town of Chapel Hill will play host to the Wachovia Tar Heel 10 Miler road race and Fleet Feet Sports Four-mile Run, beginning and ending on the UNC Campus. Because runners will be following a race course that traverses campus and town roadways, there will be numerous temporary road closings, detours, and delays between 7:30 a.m. and 10 a.m. that morning.

Staged by Endurance Magazine, the race will begin on South Road near Carmichael Arena and finish inside UNC's Kenan Stadium. Athletes will run through areas including the Gimghoul Road neighborhood east of campus, downtown Chapel Hill including Franklin Street, the Battle Park area, and campus roads, including Stadium Drive and Ridge, South, and Country Club Roads. Motorists can expect traffic congestion on these and adjacent thoroughfares and should plan accordingly. Transit service will also be impacted.

Another email will be sent to the campus community the week prior to the race, and further details will be posted online through a Breaking News link on the UNC Public Safety website:

http://www.dps.unc.edu

For more information on the race course and other logistics, visit the event website:

Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: State Health Plan Annual Enrollment

State Health Plan Annual Enrollment

To: Faculty and Staff

From: Brian Usischon, Senior Director, Benefits Services
Office of Human Resources

Annual enrollment for the State Health Plan begins April 1 and continues through April 30. All employees who wish to enroll in or continue to be covered under the PPO standard (80/20) plan must take action during this year's enrollment. You can access the University's enrollment Web site from the Human Resources home page at http://hr.unc.edu and searching keywords "State Health Plan enrollment."

Here are important points about this year's enrollment:
-- Employees must enroll online. Paper enrollment forms will not be accepted. The link to enroll online is available from the HR Web site. You cannot enroll online until April 1.
-- The State Health Plan will move all employees, and their covered dependents, currently enrolled in the PPO standard (80/20) plan to the PPO basic (70/30) plan.
-- Employees must complete the questions concerning use of tobacco products and/or participation in a tobacco cessation program to be eligible to re-enroll in the PPO standard plan.

This will be the first year that we have used online enrollment for the State Health Plan. To safeguard employees' Social Security numbers, the University has chosen to use an alternate password convention for the online enrollment process. This is different from the login instructions provided in the enrollment booklet.

To log onto the enrollment website you will need a login ID and password. Your login ID is your first name, the first initial of your last name and the last four digits of your Social Security number. Please note that if you first name is more that 10 characters in length, you will be limited to only the first 10 characters of your first name. Each employee's initial password will be their University PID, preceded by Unc (the letter U is capitalized and case sensitive). Your PID is printed on your UNC OneCard or can be obtained from logging into the UNC Campus Directory and looking under the Account Information - Update Personal Information section of the directory.

Example
Employee John Doe with SSN XXX-XX-3333 and UNC PID 1212-34343 would have the following login ID and password:

Login ID: JohnD3333
Password: Unc121234343 (only the "U" is capitalized)

Once you have logged in the system will prompt an employee to select a new password and answer a secret question in the event they forget their password.

This is the first in a series of notifications you will be receiving from Human Resources. You will receive another e-mail next week once the enrollment period starts.

For employees who need assistance during this enrollment, Human Resources will provide opportunities to work with the Benefits Services staff. There will also be several informational meetings and computer stations available at Human Resources during designated business hours -- look for more information soon.

In the meantime, if you have any questions about enrollment, please contact Benefits Services at 919-962-3071.

Dear Colleagues,

Please share this message with your students. This course will be offered as a Maymester course for the first time this year.

AFAM 254 "Blacks in Latin America" will be offered as a Maymester course in May 2010. This course examines the development of African descendant communities in Latin America and the Caribbean. We will focus on the cultural, social, and political dimensions of slavery and race relations in countries such as Brazil, Mexico, and Cuba. We will also explore the impact of nationalist ideologies on contemporary racial dynamics and the ways in which members of Afro-Latin and Afro-Caribbean communities have struggled for full citizenship and social justice.

The class will meet on a daily basis from 9:00 to 12:15 from May 11-27, 2010.

Thanks,
Kia

Monday, March 29
12:00 PM (rebroadcast at 9:00 PM)

Tune into The State of Things this Monday (on WUNC 91.5 FM, North Carolina Public Radio) and listen in as Ackland Director Emily Kass spends the hour with host Frank Stasio.

The Ackland celebrates the contributions of two of the most significant African American artists of the twentieth century: Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines and Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown on view through May 9, 2010.

Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines

Color Balance presents fourteen large-scale abstract paintings by Felrath Hines (1913-1993). In 2009, the artist's widow, Dorothy Fisher, donated a selection of his paintings to three North Carolina cultural institutions: the Ackland Art Museum at The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University, and the North Carolina Central University Art Museum. These luminous paintings are significant additions to the collections of each museum. The Ackland premieres the exhibition of these pieces, which will travel to the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University and the NCCU Art Museum in 2010-2011.

Jacob Lawrence
and The Legend of John Brown

One of "the most impassioned visual chroniclers of the African American experience," (New York Times, June 10, 2000) Jacob Lawrence (1917-2000) created a series of gouache paintings in 1941 to illustrate the life of abolitionist John Brown. More than thirty years later, because the fragile paintings were deteriorating, the Detroit Institute of Arts commissioned him to revisit the series. The result was a limited edition portfolio of twenty-two hand-screened prints. This year, in honor of the 150th anniversary of the raid on Harpers Ferry, the Ackland presents this outstanding series for

Advocates for Human Rights presents John Prendergast, a noted human rights activist and author, has been working on conflict and in conflict zones for 25 years. During this time, he claims to have never seen such human devastation as that in Eastern Congo. He says the violence there is worse than anywhere else in the world. The war in Eastern Congo is the deadliest conflict in the world since WWII and has the highest rates of sexual violence in the entire world. Prendergast firmly believes that there "is a direct connection between our consumer appetites and the violence in Eastern Congo."

Techno Wars: The Scramble for the Democratic Republic of the Congo's Minerals.
March 30, 2010, 7pm, Nelson Mandela Auditorium

Advocates for Human Rights is proud to host John Prendergast as this year's keynote lecturer for Human Rights Week. John Prendergast is a noted human rights activist and author. Mr. Prendergast has spent his career educating his peers about genocide and mass atrocity. He has worked tirelessly to bring attention to the conflicts in Darfur and Northern Uganda, and raise awareness about violence against women and girls in the Congo. Mr. Prendergast's lecture will address "conflict minerals" in the Congo.

The Enough Project, launched in 2007 by Gayle Smith and John Prendergast, conducts intensive field research in countries plagued by genocide and crimes against humanity, develops practical policies to address these crises, and shares sensible tools to help empower citizens and groups working for change. Initial work focused on grave challenges in a number of African countries: Sudan, eastern Congo, northern Uganda, Somalia, Chad and Zimbabwe.

Dear Fulbright Reviewers -

I wanted to take the chance to thank you again for all of your help this year with our unprecedented number of Fulbright applicants. I've heard only from a few students as to their final selections, but should have official notices sometime in April and will share with you then.

As we've done in the past, we're hosting a Picnic for the whole CGI community, of which we consider you a vital part. On April 29th starting at 12 noon, Thrills from the Grill catering will be grilling burgers, veggie burgers, and hot dogs on the lawn of the Global Education Center with all of the fixings.

We will be inviting all Fulbright applicants that made it past the first National Screening round, so it will be a good chance to chat with them again and meet the other faculty and students that have received funding from us or participated in our programs.

If you can join us, please fill out this simple RSVP form so we know how many to plan for (and how many veggie burgers): http://cgipicnic2010.eventsbot.com/ The event password is: cgi2010

Thanks again,

Thursday, April 1st at 6pm for UNC's Sawyer Seminar, UNC Global Education Center:

Dr. John Hanson, "The Ahmadiyya Muslim Community in West Africa: the case of Ghana."

John Hanson is an Associate Professor of History and former Director of the African Studies Program at Indiana University-Bloomington, as well as the editor of the journal History in Africa. He teaches on a variety of themes in African history, with an emphases on social and cultural transformations in the 19th and 20th centuries, and focuses his research primarily on Muslim communities in West Africa. Dr. Hanson is the author of /Migration, Jihad and Muslim Authority in West Africa: The Futanke Colonies in Karta/, published in 1996, and the co-author of a collection of translated and annotated Arabic documents called /After the Jihad: The Reign of Ahmad al-Kabir in the Western Sudan/, published in 1991. His current research examines Muslim African engagements with modernity in the twentieth century, particularly those of the Ahmadiyya community, a trans-national Islamic movement with a south Asian genesis but a large following in West Africa. He focuses on the experiences of African converts in the Gold Coast (contemporary Ghana) who played leading roles as missionaries and teachers in Ahmadi schools, and in doing so, he works with a diverse variety of sources, including oral reminiscences, Arabic correspondence, and colonial documents. Prof. Hanson has been awarded the Trustee's Teaching Award for the College of Arts and Sciences at Indiana University and has received research fellowships through the Fulbright-Hays program, the National Endowment for the Humanities, and the Rockefeller Foundation program at the Library of Congress.

Dr. Hanson's seminar will take place in the fourth floor conference room at UNC's FedEx Global Education Center. Please RSVP to vierra@email.unc.edu to receive a chapter by Dr. Hanson in preparation for his presentation. Dinner will be served.

"A Fortunate Age, Joanna Smith Rakoff's sweeping debut novel about 20-something Oberlin grads living in New York City, may turn out to be the long-awaited book that perfectly captures the '90s, that time of social and financial excess that set the stage for the current economic collapse."
— Laurel Maury for NPR.org

Instantly compelling and immensely satisfying, A Fortunate Age details the lives of a group of Oberlin graduates whose ambitions and friendships threaten to unravel as they chase their dreams, shed their youth, and build their lives in Brooklyn during the late 1990s. At the center of their orbit is wry, charismatic Sadie Peregrine, who coolly observes her friends' mistakes but can't quite manage to avoid making her own. As they begin their careers, marry, and have children, they must navigate the shifting dynamics of their friendships and of the world around them—from the decadent age of dot-com millionaires to the sobering post–September 2001 landscape. Smith Rakoff's deeply affecting characters capture a generation.

---

Dear Faculty Colleagues,

As we hope you are now aware, the annual faculty elections will take place via emailed ballots from April 12-19, 2010. Voter information will be forthcoming within the next few days, both online and in the University Gazette.

On behalf of the Office of Faculty Governance, we would also like to invite you to our 2010 faculty elections kickoff coffee hour! This event will take place Tuesday, April 6, from 10:00 to 11:00 a.m. in the Faculty Commons at the Campus Y. We're inviting all faculty members to drop by the Y during that time for some light midmorning refreshments, including coffee, fruit, and pastries.

The event will provide an opportunity to learn something about faculty governance from Chair of the Faculty McKay Coble and Secretary of the Faculty Joe Ferrell, pick up a sample ballot and the elections issue of the University Gazette, and get a copy of the Faculty Code of University Government. Many of your colleagues who have agreed to run for faculty offices this year will be there as well, and this is a chance to thank them for their willingness to serve you and the university in this way.

We look forward to seeing many of you at the Campus Y on Tuesday next week.

Subject: FORMAL NOTICE: State Health Plan Annual Enrollment Begins April 1

To: Faculty & Staff
From: Brian Usischon, Senior Director, Benefits Services
Office of Human Resources

The University's enrollment period for the State Health Plan is April 1-30. Enrollment for active employees must be completed using the online web portal. You can access the enrollment site from the Human Resources home page at http://hr.unc.edu. Paper enrollment forms will not be honored during this enrollment period.

Beginning with the 2010 annual enrollment, the State Health Plan will move all employees, and if applicable, their covered dependents, to the PPO Basic (70/30) plan. Employees will be required to attest that they are eligible to re-enroll in the PPO Standard (80/20) plan by completing the questions concerning the use of tobacco products or participation in a tobacco cessation program. You MUST TAKE ACTION during this enrollment period to be eligible to re-enroll in the PPO Standard (80/20) Plan.

* Login ID & Password (SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS -- PLEASE READ)
You will need a login ID and password to access your online enrollment account. To safeguard employee data, the University has chosen to use an alternate login and password format that do not include your Social Security number. The alternate password is each employee's University PID number, preceded by Unc (case sensitive). Follow the instructions below to log onto the site:

Your login ID is your first name, the first initial of your last name and the last four digits of your Social Security number. Please note that if you first name is more that 10 characters in length, you will be limited to only the first 10 characters of your first name.

Your initial password is your University PID number preceded by Unc (please note the "U" is capitalized in Unc; the "nc" is lower case). There are no dashes or spaces used with your PID. Your PID is printed on your UNC OneCard or can be obtained from logging into the UNC Campus Directory and looking under the Account Information - Update Personal Information section of the directory.

* Example
Employee John Doe with SSN XXX-XX-3333 and UNC PID 1212-34343 would have the following login ID and password:

Hi Everyone,

I am sorry for the delay in getting this out as my week has been interesting to say the least. Please review the following updates:

40Th Anniversary Kick off (Student/Faculty Mixer) – The date has been set for Thursday April 8th from 5-7 PM in the GEC 2nd floor atrium. There will be food from McAllister's and please let me know of anyone who we should be sending an invitation to.

Graduate Program Proposal - I have placed Perry's Report in our departmental shared drive for review and also as a repository for storing your comments via word doc.. To get there press the start / windows button, go to computer, then Y shared drive, and to the Graduate program folder. If anyone is having trouble please contact Travis or I and we will be glad to help. We have booked a room at the GEC from 3-5 PM prior to the celebration on the 8th for further discussion of this topic.

I-9 and Annual Report Deadlines – At the meeting we had mentioned that the deadlines for completing these two items is Friday 4/16. The I-9 form can be found at http://www.uscis.gov/files/form/i-9.pdf . Please read carefully when completing. If you have a US passport, it satisfies all requirements. If you do not have one, a combination of column B and C on the form will work just as well. Please arrange with Travis or myself to submit the form and photocopies of the verification items. I hope to be up to speed on the Annual Report process by Monday to provide assistance if needed.

Please contact me with any questions and / or concerns (or if I forgot something). Thank you in advance for all of your help.

Subject:	INFORMATIONAL: Carolina Transportation Program Pilot Grants Announcement

The Carolina Transportation Program (CTP) is soliciting seed grant applications from faculty and researchers at UNC-Chapel Hill to support transportation-related research activities and pilot projects. This second round of application requests is part of a two-year effort to encourage new and continuing transportation research at UNC-Chapel Hill.

Two different grant programs are available for work to be conducted during the summer and/or fall: (1) a small grants program (grants up to $2,000) will support existing efforts to incorporate or examine a relevant transportation-related question or sub-analysis; and, (2) a pilot grants program (grants up to $7,000) will support efforts to collect pilot data, conduct analyses or review literature, all with the aim of developing a research proposal for external funding that would be run through the UNC-Chapel Hill Center for Urban and Regional Studies (CURS). Previous grant awards can be identified by visiting the "Pilot and Small Grants" page at ctp.unc.edu.

Applications are due on April 20, 2010. A faculty committee will evaluate applications based on the quality and feasibility of the work relative to the funds requested, the record of scholarly achievement of the applicant(s) given the(ir) career stage, and, for pilot grants, the project's likelihood to receive future funding. Individuals funded previously by CTP are not eligible to apply for additional funding. Up to two small grants and one pilot grant will be awarded this cycle.

To apply, please remit the following (submission instructions below):
* Curriculum vitae (C.V.) of faculty researcher(s) involved;
* Description (three pages or less) of the project, including the approach and methods, timeline, budget and justification, and if appropriate, a list of potential future funders.

Please submit proposals by email to Brika Eklund, Program Assistant (breklund@email.unc.edu). For more information about CTP, please visit ctp.unc.edu.

Professor Mutima
I hope you are doing well, getting to enjoy some of this beautiful weather!
I wanted to ask if we could do SI again this summer in your Swah 112 course. I know a group of student-athletes have signed up for your course, and we have had success in the past with doing SI. Would it be okay if we did it again? (SI leader will be Whitney Read)
If so, the SI permission letter is attached. If you could sign and return to me, I would really appreciate it.
Thanks!

Dear Professor Mutima,

The Academic Support Program for Student Athletes will continue to have a Supplemental Instruction program for our student-athletes during Summer 2010. The program has been well received and successful since it started in the Fall of 2004. We are constantly trying to improve our support programs in order to better help our students academically.

Supplemental Instruction (SI) is a learning enhancement program and is designed to organize and improve the ways in which students prepare for class outside of the classroom. SI is attached to courses to provide students with a systematic and disciplined approach for processing the course material assigned by the professor. We will be assigning SI leaders to each of the courses selected. These leaders have been identified through our tutor interview process.

The SI program is not intended as a substitution for regular attendance at class. The SI leader attends all lectures, takes notes, reads assignments and is trained in study skill strategies. The SI leader does not re-lecture, but rather facilitates and encourages the group to process the material. The SI meetings will be held during regular study hall hours at the Academic Center. SI will be open to all of the students in the class.

We will maintain records of attendance and use a systematic research-based approach to evaluate our program at the end of the semester (for more information visit the SI website at www.umkc.edu/cad/si.htm). Please let us know (by returning the completed form below) if it would be possible for an SI leader to attend your class. Thank you for allowing us to work with you to help our students succeed academically.

Sincerely,

Beth Bridger

Art after Dark

Join us this Friday to celebrate the opening of New Currents in Contemporary Art: UNC-Chapel Hill Master of Fine Arts Exhibition. Marking the culmination of a two-year program, this exhibition introduces four emerging artists who interpret ideas ranging from the personal to the political in a wide variety of media, styles, and approaches. Curated by Lauren Sanford, Graduate Intern at the Ackland who is pursuing her PhD in Art History at UNC-Chapel Hill, New Currents in Contemporary Art features the work of artists Jessica Dupuis, Emily Scott Beck, T. Coke Whitworth, and Kia Mercedes Carscallen. Have a drink with friends, enjoy live music, and of course - take in the art!

> Music: Lake Inferior | 5:00 - 6:00 and 7:15 - 8:30 PM
> Lake Inferior is an indie band on student-run label Vinyl Records. Their "infectious mix of pop and electronic music" (The Daily Tarheel) will be sure to bring added spunk to this evening's special opening reception. The group features Nasir Abbas, Bo Beard, Dax Beaton, Logan Hornebuckle, and Derek Torres.

The Ackland celebrates the contributions of two of the most significant African American artists of the twentieth century: Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines and Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown on view through May 9, 2010.

Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines
Color Balance presents fourteen large-scale abstract paintings by Felrath Hines (1913-1993). In 2009, the artist's widow, Dorothy Fisher, donated a selection of his paintings to three North Carolina cultural institutions: the Ackland Art Museum at The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University, and the North Carolina Central University Art Museum. These luminous paintings are significant additions to the collections of each museum. The Ackland premieres the exhibition of these pieces, which will travel to the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University and the NCCU Art Museum in 2010-2011.

Jacob Lawrence
and The Legend of John Brown
One of "the most impassioned visual chroniclers of the African American experience," (New York Times, June 10, 2000) Jacob Lawrence (1917-2000) created a series of gouache paintings in 1941 to illustrate the life of abolitionist John Brown. More than thirty years later, because the fragile paintings were deteriorating, the Detroit Institute of Arts commissioned him to revisit the series. The result was a limited edition portfolio of twenty-two hand-screened prints. This year, in honor of the 150th anniversary of the raid on Harpers Ferry, the Ackland presents this outstanding series for the first time.

Promotional support provided by North Carolina Public Radio-WUNC. Public programming for* Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown *was supported by the N.C. Arts Council, a division of the Department of Cultural Resources, with funding from the National Endowment for the Arts.

For more information on the Ackland visit www.ackland.org.

These and other public programs are made possible by generous support from Ackland Art Museum members and friends like you!

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Seeking Engaged Faculty

The Carolina Center for Public Service announces the call for applications for the 2010 cohort of the Faculty Engaged Scholars Program to begin this Fall. Selected scholars will participate in an interactive, experiential curriculum (eight to nine sessions over a two-year period) designed to advance their engaged scholarship. Each scholar will receive funds of up to $5,000 per year to support their work for each of the two years (maximum $10,000).
http://www.unc.edu/cps/faculty-engaged-scholars.php

Application deadline: May 14, 2010.
Apply here: http://ccps.unc.edu/database/nomination/fesp/login.jsp

Priority for participation will be given to tenure-track faculty with any length of service at UNC-Chapel Hill, and fixed-term faculty who have been at Carolina for at least five years. Preference will be given to faculty who demonstrate interest and/or experience in applying their scholarship to addressing practical problems of the state, with the potential to establish long-term benefits to North Carolinians. Additional support may be available for those scholars working with Caswell and/or Lenoir counties.

If you have questions after reviewing the online materials, please contact Lynn Blanchard, Director of the Carolina Center for Public Service, at ccps@unc.edu or 919-843-7568.

Dear Students, Faculty and Staff:

As part of our ongoing efforts to enhance campus safety, we'll conduct an emergency drill off campus on Wednesday, April 21, between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. Our Department of Public Safety is coordinating the exercise, which will include local law enforcement and response agencies.

The drill will simulate our response to a shooter on campus. The drill will be confined to our Outdoor Education Center, located off Country Club Road. Actors from EnviroSafe Consulting and Investigations Inc., a firm under contract with UNC General Administration, will play the role of armed gunmen. Others will portray hostages and victims from the campus community.

In conjunction with the drill, we're asking you to practice your own emergency preparedness on April 21. Shortly before 8:45 a.m., the emergency sirens will sound as a test. If you're outside, you'll likely hear the sirens. If you're inside, you may not. But students, faculty and staff who have registered for emergency text messages in the online directory will receive a test text message shortly after the sirens go off.

Between 8:45 a.m. and 8:50 a.m., your assignment is to do what you should do in an emergency:

* Stay inside or go inside.
* Close windows and doors.
* Wait for updates.

We hope faculty and students who are in class at 8:45 a.m. will use those five minutes to talk about the things you would do if the siren warning was real. At 8:50 a.m., everyone will resume their normal activities.

For the rest of the day, emergency vehicles and personnel will be visible in the immediate drill area, which will be clearly marked with yellow tape, barricades and signs saying an exercise is in progress. Neither regular traffic nor Chapel Hill Transit service in the area will be affected. We'll also communicate well in advance with nearby neighbors.

Unfortunately, we live in a world where bad things occasionally happen. We haven't been immune on our campus, and you only have to scan the headlines to see examples of tragedies on college campuses. It's our job to be ready for that worst-case scenario.

You'll receive more details and reminders about the drill in the coming days. And please check out alertcarolina.unc.edu for useful information about campus safety and to register for emergency text messages.

Thank you in advance for your participation on April 21.

Sincerely,

Holden Thorp

"Buried Alive: The Concept of Race in Science"

Dr. Troy Duster

Professor of Sociology, New York University and Chancellor's Professor, University of California at Berkeley

Troy Duster publishes widely across the fields of the sociology of law, race, and education. He shattered conceived notions of ethnicity in genetic research by raising the issue of race identification at the DNA level. His work proves that race continues to matter, biologically and socially. As a public intellectual, Dr. Duster serves on committees for the National Academy of Sciences, the National Science Foundation, and the Legal and Social Issues Committee of the Human Genome Project. He is Chair of the Board of Directors of the Association of American Colleges and Universities, and a member of the Board of Directors of the Social Science Research Council. From 1996-99, he served on the National Advisory Council for Human Genome Research, and during the same period served as a member and then chair of the joint advisory committee on Ethical, Legal and Social Issues in the Human Genome Project (The ELSI Working Group) to the National Institutes of Health and Department of Energy. He has written extensively on the social implications of advances in molecular biology and genetics, including Backdoor to Eugenics (Routledge, 1990) and "The Social Consequences of Genetic Disclosure," in Ronald Carson and Mark Rothstein, eds., Culture and Biology (Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press, 1999). Duster received his Ph.D. from Northwestern University.

Subject: Spring Schedule 2011

Dear Colleagues,

Tim and I need your teaching preferences for the Spring 2011 because we will need to start working on that soon. Keep in mind that the majority of the classes need to be taught out of "prime time" Please email your preferred courses and dates/times to Tim tjm1@email.unc.edu and me stgore@email.unc.edu We will consult with you about your actual schedules soon.

Thank you,

Travis

Dear Georges,

Thanks so much for affirming the work of the committee. In addition, I like the title you suggest for the program. In one of our meetings, we played around with the idea of naming it 'Global Africa' studies, in attempts to capture what we were trying to conceptualize, thus it is wonderful to see the new title for it does a better job in this respect. Finally, your suggestions for streamlining the thematic concentrations embody the core ideas of the proposal very well. Thanks.

Best wishes, Eunice

Yoga in the Galleries

Tuesday, April 13
12:00 - 1:00 PM

Namaste! Take a break from your day and explore the world of yoga in the beautiful setting of the Ackland. Yoga mats and cushions are provided. Please wear comfortable clothing that will allow you to stretch. Since the galleries can be cool, long sleeves are recommended. Sessions led by Joanne Marshall. Beginners are welcome.

Registration recommended | Free to members, $5 non-members

Tea at Two

Wednesday, April 14
2:00 - 4:00 PM

On selected Wednesdays, Tea at Two features a special guest speaker followed by tea and refreshments in the Yager Gallery. This program is free to members, but members are encouraged to bring guests ($10 for non-members). Space is limited. Please RSVP to Kyle Fitch at kyle_fitch@unc.edu or 919.843.3676.

This Wednesday's presentation will feature the exhibition curator and artists whose work is now on view in New Currents in Contemporary Art: UNC-Chapel Hill Master of Fine Arts Exhibition. Join artists Emily Scott Beck, Kia Mercedes Carscallen, Jessica Dupuis, and T. Coke Whitworth - along with curator Lauren Sanford, Graduate Intern at the Ackland - for an informal tour and discussion of the exhibition.

Thursday Talks

Thursday, April 15
7:00 - 8:00 PM

Thursday Talks bring artists, scholars, and art lovers together during the Ackland's Thursday evening hours. This Thursday features a tour of the exhibition Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown with Zoe Trodd and Blake Gilpin, postdoctoral fellows at UNC-Chapel Hill's Center for the Study of the American South, who have written about both John Brown and Jacob Lawrence. Their tour will examine the artistic, historical, and literary contexts in which Lawrence made his narrative series, and will include brief presentations and opportunities to ask questions and look closely at the art together.

The Ackland celebrates the contributions of two of the most significant African American artists of the twentieth century: Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines and Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown on view through May 9, 2010.

Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines

Color Balance presents fourteen large-scale abstract paintings by Felrath Hines (1913-1993). In 2009, the artist's widow, Dorothy Fisher, donated a selection of his paintings to three North Carolina cultural institutions: the Ackland Art Museum at The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University, and the North Carolina Central University Art Museum. These luminous paintings are significant additions to the collections of each museum. The Ackland premieres the exhibition of these pieces, which will travel to the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University and the NCCU Art Museum in 2010-2011.

Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown

One of "the most impassioned visual chroniclers of the African American experience," (New York Times, June 10, 2000) Jacob Lawrence (1917-2000) created a series of gouache paintings in 1941 to illustrate the life of abolitionist John Brown. More than thirty years later, because the fragile paintings were deteriorating, the Detroit Institute of Arts commissioned him to revisit the series. The result was a limited edition portfolio of twenty-two hand-screened prints. This year, in honor of the 150th anniversary of the raid on Harpers Ferry, the Ackland presents this outstanding series for the first time.

Promotional support provided by North Carolina Public Radio-WUNC. Public programming for* Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown *was supported by the N.C. Arts Council, a division of the Department of Cultural Resources, with funding from the National Endowment for the Arts.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Carolina Family Scholarship application - 2010

Dear Carolina Faculty and Staff,

The UNC-Chapel Hill Family Scholarship committee is pleased to announce that Fall 2010 scholarship applications for children of UNC-Chapel Hill employees are now being accepted. To apply, go to www.unc.edu/familyfund and select the Scholarship Application & Renewal Application option on the left side of the screen. It may take a minute to retrieve the Application.

PLEASE NOTE: The application deadline is May 15th, 2010.

This need-based scholarship fund was created by Carolina employees to provide financial support to the children of our full-time colleagues to attend ANY of the 16 UNC campuses as well as any of the accredited community and technical colleges in North Carolina.

For more information about the scholarship, see http://gazette.unc.edu/archives/09apr01/fundraising.html

PLEASE NOTE: Applicants must file the necessary financial aid forms with the institution they wish to attend and notify the Office of Scholarships and Student Aid at UNC-Chapel Hill with the contact information for that institution's financial aid office, as well as provide a detailed summary of the financial aid package offered by that institution.

Want to help children of Carolina employees go to college? Check out www.unc.edu/familyfund to arrange for a $1 (or more) weekly tax-deductible payroll deduction or a one-time donation.

The UNC-Chapel Hill Family Scholarship Fund committee offers their sincere thanks for your support and welcomes your suggestions.

There is one week left to nominate a deserving Carolina faculty member for the 2010 Board of Governors Award for Excellence in Public Service! This award was created in 2007 to encourage, identify, recognize and reward public service by faculty of the University.

As stated in the description, "The award recognizes sustained, distinguished and superb achievement in university public service and outreach, and contributions to improving the quality of life of the citizens of North Carolina. The creativity and impact of a nominee's achievements are of a magnitude that greatly exceeds the normal accomplishments of a productive faculty."

The Carolina Center for Public Service is coordinating selection of the UNC-Chapel Hill nominee for this prestigious award. Each nomination should be accompanied by biographical information and a statement of the nominee's public service and sent to ccps@unc.edu by 5:00 PM on April 20, 2010.

The enclosed message and attachment are being sent on behalf of Chancellor Thorp and Dean Gil to all faculty in the College, with a copy to administrative managers. Please read and share with graduate student teaching assistants.

Dear Deans, Directors,Department Chairs and Faculty:

We need your help getting the word out about the emergency drill on Wednesday, April 21. Attached are discussion points to help guide faculty members or graduate students who are teaching classes at 8:45 a.m. on April 21.

We ask that faculty or graduate students in class at that time spend five minutes – until 8:50 a.m. – talking with students about what to do in a real emergency. During the drill, the emergency sirens will sound shortly before 8:45 a.m. The sirens are designed to be heard by people outside. If you are in class and if you've signed up for emergency text messages, you'll receive a test text message shortly after the sirens sound. (If you haven't signed up, please do. Go to "Register Your Cell Phone" on Alert Carolina, http://alertcarolina.unc.edu/go/doc/1395/194468/).

Please share the materials this week with faculty and graduate teaching assistants. We want to be sure that everyone knows that we take emergency preparedness seriously, and we think it's important for them to take five minutes of class time to talk about it.

Additional background about the drill, including a two-minute video featuring Chief McCracken discussing the exercise, is now available at the Alert Carolina Web site, http://alertcarolina.unc.edu.

Thanks in advance for your help.

Sincerely,

Holden Thorp

Subject:	INFORMATIONAL: Podcast of Employee Forum Community Meeting

---

This is a reminder that the Employee Forum Community Meeting will be this Friday, April 16th, from 9:30-11:30 in the Great Hall of the Student Union. Chancellor Thorp will first address employees and give an update on current budget issues the University is facing. There will be a short period of questions and answers for him. After that, Brian Usischon (Senior Director for Benefits) will give an update on the many changes taking place with the state health plan. There will also be a period of questions and answers for him.

Anyone having questions may submit them in advance to forum_office@unc.edu or by calling 962-3779. Following the meeting, employees will have a chance to enroll in the state health plan from 11:30 - 1:30 pm.

Attendance at an Employee Forum Community Meeting is considered work time when it occurs during an employee's work schedule. However, employees must get approval from their supervisor to attend.

The meeting will also be broadcast live via podcast at http://carolinaunion.unc.edu/podcast . A copy of the podcast will be available for viewing beginning Monday on the Employee Forum's website http://forum.unc.edu/ and the Human Resources website http://hr.unc.edu/ . We hope everyone will take advantage of these opportunities to learn about these important benefits updates.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: UNC-CH Proteomics-Reorganized and Open for Business

The UNC-CH Michael Hooker Proteomics has undergone a significant reorganization to enhance services for proteomics. The facility is currently accepting samples for protein and peptide identification and the analysis of protein post-translational modification (i.e. phosphorylation). Our goal is to provide outstanding service and to work effectively with laboratories needing proteomic mass spectrometry in their research. Services include isolation of proteins from SDS-PAGE, trypsin digestion, peptide separation and analysis by either ABI 4800 MALDI TOF/TOF or ThermoScientific LTQ OrbiTrap mass spectrometers. Differential expression or modification of proteins can also be analyzed by application of quantitative proteomics methods (SILAC, ITRAQ) methodologies. In addition, there is now on-site training in MALDI TOF/TOF mass spectrometry is available for interested users. This is an opportunity for students and fellows to have hands on experience using mass spectrometry in their research.

For further information contact Dr. Lee Graves (Faculty Director; LMG@med.unc.edu) or Dr. Maria Hines (Facility Director; maria_hines@med.unc.edu, 6-8318 or 6-9990) or visit the Proteomics Web site (http://cancer.unc.edu/proteomics/index.html).

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Research study for individuals with mild asthma and allergies.

The purpose of this research study is to learn more about the effect of inhalation of a component of air pollution on airway responses in allergic individuals with mild asthma. The component being studied is called endotoxin and can be found in a number of different workplaces. It is even found in homes. The purpose of this research study is to identify a dose of inhaled endotoxin that is safe (does not cause prolonged cough, shortness of breath or other problems), but which causes changes in sputum cell samples. Information from this study will be used to identify a safe range of endotoxin for use in inhalation challenge studies. This study will also help determine how endotoxin affects mucociliary clearance (MCC) which is a measure of how quickly mucus clears from the airway.

Subjects must be otherwise healthy, have mild asthma and allergies. Pregnant or nursing females are excluded as well as individuals with a recent respiratory infection or an average of more that 2 asthma exacerbations per week. Study participation will include 6 visits over a 3 week to 3 month period based on participants available.

Interested individuals may call 919-966-2879 for additional information.

Subject: [asc_faculty] University of Liberia

Dear Colleagues:

As you are probably aware, from time to time African universities send requests for meetings with high-level UNC leadership in order to create interest in future collaborations, usually having to do with building institutional/faculty capacity there. When we know of faculty interest, we direct those inquiries accordingly. The African Studies Center wants to become more systematic about how we deal with these requests, so that is the purpose of this email.

UNC has had a query from the president of the University of Liberia, hoping to establish contact with our institution. I am not aware of any of our faculty with substantial interest there. If that is not the case, and you do in fact have a desire for a project there (and one that you would like to take the lead on), please contact me as soon as possible. If you are not trying to begin a project there, no need to reply.

Thanks. Barbara

Dear Carolina Colleagues,

I write to encourage you to support the 2010 Faculty-Staff Campaign.

This campaign enjoys a long record of success - just last year, we raised $1.47 million, with more than 1,750 employees contributing. Those totals came despite the economic downturn, but they didn't come as a surprise.

That's because our employees can always be counted on to support worthy causes. And Carolina is a worthy cause. From the Carolina Covenant and patient care to study abroad and faculty outreach, our campus changes lives and engages the world for the better.

Your gifts make much of that possible. They provide scholarships for our undergraduate students and fellowships for our graduate students. They fund lab equipment in the Science Complex and clinical research in the Lineberger Comprehensive Cancer Center. They bring performers to Memorial Hall and visiting writers to Greenlaw. They also help your department carry out its mission.

Moreover, private gifts support programs designed specifically to benefit Carolina faculty and staff. These include the Carolina Family Scholarship Fund (http://www.unc.edu/familyfund/index.html) and the Emergency Loan Program (http://hr.unc.edu/Data/benefits/emerg_loan/emerg-loan-policy).

You can choose to support any of these areas - and many more - in this year's Faculty-Staff Campaign.

I know that times remain uncertain. But I also know that, in typical Carolina fashion, you all have continued to get the job done, and that's why we continue to do great things. I thank you for your hard work, and I hope you'll make 2010 another great year for the Faculty-Staff Campaign.

Visit http://annualfund.unc.edu/facultystaff to learn more about the campaign, as well as to see an honor roll of last year's campaign donors. To give online or by payroll deduction, go to http://giving.unc.edu/gift.

Subject:	INFORMATIONAL: Redesigned Human Resources Web Site Launched

FROM: Brenda Richardson Malone, Vice Chancellor for Human Resources

I am pleased to announce that the redesigned Web site for the Office of Human Resources launched this weekend. It is available at http://hr.unc.edu. Any bookmarks you may have to various pages of the previous HR Web site should be reset.

This site redesign is a direct result of feedback from the campus community and research into best practices. It includes many features requested by campus, including:

-- topics and policies grouped by functional areas
-- improved search abilities
-- recent news and upcoming events calendars available from the home page
-- enhanced benefits information
-- user-friendly structure and design
-- additional information for those interested in careers at Carolina
-- the ability to subscribe to HR news and information using the popular RSS feed mechanism
-- increased ability to host multimedia communications, including video and podcasts

We hope you find this new site both useful and easy to navigate. The site will continue to develop, and we plan to add additional resources and information over the coming weeks.

We welcome your feedback as you review the new site; click "Email Webmaster" in the bottom navigation bar, or email directly to hr@unc.edu.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Community Survey on Sexual Assault

The purpose of this research study is to learn about UNC-CH community members' beliefs and attitudes around gender, sexual relationships, and sexual assault. This study is being completed as a part of a grant funded by the Department of Health and Human Services in the state of North Carolina for the NC Rape Prevention and Education (RPE) Program.

The results of the study will be used to understand the attitudes and beliefs supporting sexual violence in order to develop programs and education on campus to prevent sexual violence. If you would like to participate in this study, clicking on the link below will bring you to a consent page as well as the survey itself, which will likely take you 10-15 minutes should you choose to complete it. If you choose, at the end of the survey, you may enter to win one of thirty-five (35) I-pod shuffles.

Dear Faculty and Staff:

Please consider joining us as a discussion leader for the Carolina Summer Reading Program. The program invites all first-year and transfer students to read a book and participate in small group discussions facilitated by faculty and staff volunteers with college teaching or group facilitation experience. Discussions will take place on Monday, August 23rd from 1:00p.m. - 3:00p.m.

This year's selection is Picking Cotton, the true story of an unlikely friendship between a woman and the innocent man she sent to prison. Picking Cotton (St. Martin's Press, 2009) was written by the reconciled pair, Jennifer Thompson-Cannino and Ronald Cotton - both of North Carolina - with help from ghost writer Erin Torneo. For additional information about Picking Cotton and the authors, please visit the Carolina Summer Reading website at http://www.unc.edu/srp

If you are interested in serving as a discussion leader, please complete the online sign-up form at http://www.unc.edu/srp/. You are welcome to facilitate a group on your own or collaborate with a faculty member, staff member, or student of your choosing. The priority date for signing up to serve as a discussion leader is Friday, April 30, 2010.

If selected to serve as a discussion leader, you will receive a confirmation email by the end of May with instructions on how to obtain your free copy of the book. Throughout the summer, the Carolina Summer Reading website will be updated with inter-disciplinary materials to assist you in planning and conducting your session. We will also conduct two discussion leader training sessions, the first of which will take place on Sunday, August 22rd from 1:00 p.m. - 3:00 p.m. The second training session will take place on Monday, August, 23rd from 10:00a.m. - 12:00p.m.

Thank you for your continued support of this exciting intellectual endeavor!

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Town of Chapel Hill Police Request Assistance

ATTENTION UNC STUDENTS, STAFF, AND FACULTY:

The Town of Chapel Hill Police has responded to reports of four armed robberies occurring since March 21. These armed robberies of individuals have occurred at the following Chapel Hill locations, all between 1:30 a.m. and 3:40 a.m.:

-- The 300 block of West Rosemary Street;
-- The 600 block of Sykes Street;
-- Caldwell Street near Cotton and Church Streets.

Money, credit cards, and cell phones / cameras were reportedly taken during the robberies.

Chapel Hill Police reported that a handgun has been displayed in two of the robberies and implied in the other two. Suspect descriptions vary slightly, and in two of the robberies only one suspect was seen:

Black Male, 18-22 years of age, 5-8 to 6-0. One description alluded to short hair; the other noted possible cornrows or (small) dreadlocks not quite touching the neck.

If anyone has information about the identity of these individuals, please call either the Chapel Hill Police Department at 968-2760 or CrimeStoppers at 942-7515. Calls to CrimeStoppers are confidential and anonymous, and the caller may be eligible for a cash reward up to $2,000 for information that leads to arrest.

UNC Public Safety also reminds the campus community to be vigilant about personal safety and report any suspicious activity. For a list of safety tips, visit alertcarolina.unc.edu.

Hello Marvelous Peeps!

First, let me remind you to plan to attend the University Diversity Awards Recognition and Reception at the Johnston Center on April 27th from 3-5. It is in Room 039.

Second, let me remind you to let Debra Watkins know if you want one of the limited number of places at the end of the year banquet at Spanky's which will be at 5:00 on May 4th. We will be honoring Dr. Frank Brown and Dr. Carolyn Cannon and enjoying each other's company. We will also be welcoming our new officers!

Third, look for your ballots to select new officers towards the end of this week if you are a dues paying member.

Fourth, please consider signing up to be a discussion leader for the Summer Reading Book "Picking Cotton." For those of you unfamiliar it is the story of a black man falsely identified by a white woman as the man who raped her. After spending years in jail he was exonerated. The story has lots of nuances from forgiveness to racism to flaws in the justice system and your insight could be useful. The application does not take but a minute or two to fill out. Here is the info

Dear Faculty and Staff:

Please consider joining us as a discussion leader for the Carolina Summer Reading Program. The program invites all first-year and transfer students to read a book and participate in small group discussions facilitated by faculty and staff volunteers with college teaching or group facilitation experience. Discussions will take place on Monday, August 23rd from 1:00p.m. - 3:00p.m.

This year's selection is Picking Cotton, the true story of an unlikely friendship between a woman and the innocent man she sent to prison. Picking Cotton (St. Martin's Press, 2009) was written by the reconciled pair, Jennifer Thompson-Cannino and Ronald Cotton - both of North Carolina - with help from ghost writer Erin Torneo. Fifth, contact Joe Green if you would like tickets to the NAACP Chapel Hill-Carrboro Branch, Freedom Banquet, Saturday, May 29, 2010 at 6PM. The tickets are $50. The Annual Banquet will be held this year at the Friday Center, The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.Joe's email is josephg@email.unc.edu

Finally, I (Cookie) have had a book chapter accepted for the two volume set Women as Leaders in Education: Succeeding Despite Inequity, Discrimination, and Other Challenges. I am going to be highlighting the stories of black women professors, k-12 administrators and college administrators and the unique challenges they face by having to deal with both sexism and racism. The title of my chapter is "Slaying two dragons: For black women leaders in education gender equity is only half the battle." If you would like to have your story be part of the chapter I can send you a brief questionnaire about your experiences and perceptions. You will be given a pseudonym and neither you nor your institution will be identified. If you would like to share your story to let the mainstream culture know about some of the issues black women in education face let me know and I will send you a questionnaire. If you have any colleagues or friends at other institutions feel free to share. I have ten women from seven colleges and one high school administrator participating so far. I will need the questionnaires back by May 15th since the chapter is due to the editor by August 1.

Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: Message from the Chancellor: Reminder About April 21 Emergency Drill

Dear Faculty, Students and Staff:

We will conduct an emergency safety drill off campus on Wednesday, April 21, between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. Our Department of Public Safety is coordinating the exercise, which will simulate our response to a shooter on campus.

In conjunction with that, we're asking everyone to practice emergency preparedness that day. Shortly before 8:45 a.m., the emergency sirens will sound as a test, and people who have registered for emergency text messages in the online directory will receive a test text message shortly after the sirens go off.

Between 8:45 a.m. and 8:50 a.m. - whether you're in class, on a quad or in your office - do what you should do in a real emergency:
- Stay inside or go inside.
- Close windows and doors.
- Wait for updates.

At 8:50 a.m., you can resume your usual activities.

An ad in The Daily Tar Heel, http://alertcarolina.unc.edu/posted/1395/dthad042110.520283.pdf, includes information about the drill and the five-minute practice. You can also find details at http://alertcarolina.unc.edu.

Subject: a few important things

Hi Everyone!

Here are a few important things that I wanted to mention:

1) I have all of your course evaluations for you to give to your students. You can come by the office to pick them up. We are short on pencils this semester so it would be great if you could tell your students to bring a number 2 pencil to class on evaluation day.

2) Final exams are right around the corner so if you could please get them to me for copying as soon as you can I would appreciate it greatly.

3) The graduation reception will be held on Saturday, May 8th from Noon until 2pm at the Stone Center in the Hitchcock room. I am told (by Julius and Tim) that all faculty members must attend.

4) As you know this morning's alert was only a test. If this had been an actual emergency it would be good for everybody to send an email letting me know that you are alright and not in any danger.

Thank you,

Travis

The Ackland celebrates the contributions of two of the most significant African American artists of the twentieth century:
Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines and
Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown
on view through May 9, 2010.

Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines
Color Balance presents fourteen large-scale abstract paintings by Felrath Hines (1913-1993). In 2009, the artist's widow, Dorothy Fisher, donated a selection of his paintings to three North Carolina cultural institutions: the Ackland Art Museum at The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University, and the North Carolina Central University Art Museum. These luminous paintings are significant additions to the collections of each museum. The Ackland premieres the exhibition of these pieces, which will travel to the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University and the NCCU Art Museum in 2010-2011.

Jacob Lawrence
and The Legend of John Brown

One of "the most impassioned visual chroniclers of the African American experience," (New York Times, June 10, 2000) Jacob Lawrence (1917-2000) created a series of gouache paintings in 1941 to illustrate the life of abolitionist John Brown. More than thirty years later, because the fragile paintings were deteriorating, the Detroit Institute of Arts commissioned him to revisit the series. The result was a limited edition portfolio of twenty-two hand-screened prints. This year, in honor of the 150th anniversary of the raid on Harpers Ferry, the Ackland presents this outstanding series for the first time.

Promotional support provided by North Carolina Public Radio-WUNC. Public programming for* Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown *was supported by the N.C. Arts Council, a division of the Department of Cultural Resources, with funding from the National Endowment for the Arts.

Subject: New Material on "American Diplomacy"

Dear Subscriber,

We have just posted new material on our website (http://www.unc.edu/depts/diplomat/).

Commentary & Analysis articles on a NATO nuclear free zone and on the Iranian regime's fear of free speech;

A note recognizing the U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee's action approving a bill to require the Peace Corps director to develop a strategic plan for improving and expanding the Peace Corps;

Links to the text of a speech by Adm. Michael Mullen, Chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff on U.S. military strategy, and to a speech by the President of the Foreign Policy Research Institute on the foreign policy of Abraham Lincoln;

Reviews of books on Russia's Atlantic agenda and a history of U.S.-China relations.

We hope you enjoy these new postings. As always, we welcome your comments and submissions.

Regards,
Michael Cotter, Publisher, American Diplomacy

Dameron will lead a free writing workshop investigating methods of writing in response to art.
Free. Reservations required. RSVP to kyle_fitch@unc.edu.

Funding provided by the N.C. Arts Council, a division of the Department of Cultural Resources, with funding from the National Endowment for the Arts.

The Ackland celebrates the contributions of two of the most significant African American artists of the twentieth century: Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines and Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown on view through May 9, 2010.

Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines
Color Balance presents fourteen large-scale abstract paintings by Felrath Hines (1913-1993). In 2009, the artist's widow, Dorothy Fisher, donated a selection of his paintings to three North Carolina cultural institutions: the Ackland Art Museum at The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University, and the North Carolina Central University Art Museum. These luminous paintings are significant additions to the

Jacob Lawrence
and The Legend of John Brown

One of "the most impassioned visual chroniclers of the African American experience," (New York Times, June 10, 2000) Jacob Lawrence (1917-2000) created a series of gouache paintings in 1941 to illustrate the life of abolitionist John Brown. More than thirty years later, because the fragile paintings were deteriorating, the Detroit Institute of Arts commissioned him to revisit the series. The result was a limited edition portfolio of twenty-two hand-screened prints. This year, in honor of the 150th anniversary of the raid on Harpers Ferry, the Ackland presents this outstanding series for the first time.

Promotional support provided by North Carolina Public Radio-WUNC. Public programming for* Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown *was supported by the N.C. Arts Council, a division of the Department of Cultural Resources, with funding from the National Endowment for the Arts.

The UNC Center for Neurosensory Disorders is conducting a research study investigating the biological, psychological, and genetic factors that may cause Temporomandibular Muscle and Joint Disorder (TMJD). We are looking for volunteers with chronic pain in the face and jaw. We are seeking people with TMJD/TMD/ TMJ to participate in a study lasting several years.

Participation will include 1 clinic appointment lasting 3 hours. During that time participants fill out various questionnaires and receive a clinical exam and sensory testing. Individuals who meet the study criteria will be complete brief health updates for the next 4-5 years.

You must be between the ages of 18 and 44, and not have diabetes, epilepsy, hyperthyroidism, drug or alcohol abuse, chronic respiratory diseases, high blood pressure, heart disease, kidney failure and have not required hospitalization for a psychiatric disorder within the last 6 months.

You should not participate if you are pregnant, nursing a baby, currently involved in orthodontic treatment, chemotherapy or radiation therapy.

People who complete all data collection aspects will be paid $270 (this includes $90 for the clinic appointment mentioned above).

We are looking for healthy males and females between the ages of 18 and 70 who:
* Are Caucasian or African American
* Are fluent English speakers
* Have normal vision and hearing or vision/hearing impairments that are corrected to within normal limits.

Participants will undergo a series of tests to measure how they recognize tactile input. Participants may be asked to complete self-evaluation questionnaires and a cognitive assessment.

These tests can take from 30 minutes to 2 hours to participate. Participants may be called back for an additional two hours of testing. Testing will be completed on UNC Chapel Hill Campus in MacNider or Bondurant Hall. Participants will receive $25.00 per hour for participating in this study (up to $100).

If you are interested in participating please reply to this email and indicate the days and times you may be available. In addition, please include your name, age, race, occupation, education level, and contact information in your response.

We are currently recruiting children, ages 2 to 12 years, with Down syndrome and genetic syndromes associated with developmental delay to participate in our study about brain waves. We study children's brain waves to learn more about the potential causes of sound sensitivities.

* Children will complete developmental assessments and an EEG
* Parents will complete a packet of questionnaires and interviews about their child
* You will receive a summary of results of the developmental assessments and a certificate with a picture of your child's brain waves
* We provide financial incentives up to $200 if your child qualifies for all parts of the study. Mileage reimbursement is available for families who are traveling more than 20 miles each way
* Time commitment is approximately 6 hours

Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: Message from the Chancellor: We Need Your Ideas for the Next Academic Plan

Dear Students, Faculty and Staff:

The University's YouTube Channel, http://www.youtube.com/UNCChapelHill, just posted a short video with a message from me asking for your ideas and suggestions for the University's academic plan. The plan is a strategic statement of our objectives and priorities. It's the roadmap for the future. And it's a big deal. It's time to create the to-do list for the next period in Carolina's history. We need everyone to participate.

Please take just a few minutes to watch the video and communicate with the steering committee, led by Professors Bill Andrews and Sue Estroff, over the summer. The e-mail address is academicplan@unc.edu. Next fall, we plan community meetings, and the committee will be asking everyone lots of questions. We're looking forward to an important discussion about the academic plan.

Sincerely,

Holden Thorp

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: A Research Study for Babies of Mothers with Depression

---

Are you or is someone you know currently pregnant and has been diagnosed with depression?

We are conducting a prospective, longitudinal research study to better understand early brain development in the children of women who have been diagnosed with depression and who were treated with a common type of antidepressant, called a selective serotonin reuptake inhibitor (SSRI), during their pregnancy.

Participants receive:
- $50 per child for each postnatal visit (potential total of $300)
- Reimbursement for mileage and parking

What the study involves
- An MRI scan and developmental assessment of the baby at 1-4 weeks after birth (unsedated)
- Follow-up MRI scans and developmental assessments at 1 and 2 years

Who is eligible?
- Women who have been diagnosed with depression
- Are currently pregnant or have recently given birth
- Treated with an SSRI starting in the 1st trimester or prior to pregnancy through birth

We need your help! By participating, you may be helping mothers with depression in the future by improving our understanding of how factors such as severity of depression and treatment with antidepressants relate to early brain development. (The current literature indicates that SSRI antidepressants do not have long-term negative affects on brain development.)

Remember
- This is a voluntary study
- No medicines or sedation are involved
- You will be compensated
- All information gathered is confidential.

To learn more about this study please call Brittany Lindsay (919) 843-3608 or (866) 849-0541 (Toll Free), or send an email to brittany_lindsay@med.unc.edu with your name, phone number and times that you can be reached.

The principal investigator for this study is Rebecca Knickmeyer, PhD, UNC School of Medicine, Department of Psychiatry. Co-investigators are Samantha Meltzer-Brody, MD, and John Gilmore, MD, also of the UNC Department of Psychiatry.

The accomplishments of Carolina's students are remarkable, and their friends and families value your roles as teachers, mentors, and scholars. Commencement events are central to building a sense of community within our University. You're invited to wear academic regalia, but you are welcome regardless.

The Doctoral Hooding ceremony will take place on Saturday, May 8, at 10 a.m. in the Dean Smith Center and will feature remarks by Dr. R. Barbara Gitenstein, President of The College of New Jersey, scholar of Jewish and American literature, and influential spokesperson for women's leadership in higher education.

Each graduate will be called to the stage to receive the doctoral hood from his or her advisor. Non-hooding faculty members who wish to march in the academic processional should arrive at the Smith Center (Entrance A) no later than 9:30 a.m. and take the elevator or stairs down to the first floor. Marshals will be there to direct you to the line-up site.

University Commencement is on Sunday May 9 at 9:30 a.m. in Kenan Stadium. This year's speaker is novelist John Grisham. We will honor our graduating students and the following other outstanding recipients of honorary degrees: Paul Rizzo (business and financial industry leader, former dean of Kenan-Flagler Business School), Fred Robinson (foremost North American scholar of the earliest recorded period of English language and literature), Eugene Roberts (crusading progressive journalist and influential editor at both the Philadelphia Inquirer and the New York Times), and Patricia Timmons-Goodson (first African-American woman justice, North Carolina Supreme Court) .

Faculty will gather on the second floor of the Kenan Football Center at 9:00 a.m. Faculty Marshal Valerie Ashby will lead the faculty processional. In case of inclement weather, the ceremony will move to the Smith Center (faculty should use Entry A and go directly to the court level for seating). Regardless of the location, faculty parking will be available in the Craige Deck.

If you plan to participate in the May 9 Commencement ceremony you will need to obtain, in advance, an Inclement Weather Ticket to admit you to the Smith Center in the event of rain. Inclement weather tickets may be obtained by contacting David Thompson in the Faculty Governance Office at 962-2147 or by email at dthomps3@email.unc.edu.

Many of you have attended Commencement in the past and are welcome to do so again. For those who have not yet participated in this venerable academic tradition, please consider this invitation and join your colleagues for this very special event.

UNC Study of Home Lighting and Aging

Research has shown that lighting can improve mood and sleep for adults. In order to learn more about the effects of home lighting for older adults with Alzheimer's disease and other memory problems, researchers at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill are conducting a four month study of home lighting.

To participate in this study, you must be the live-in caregiver for someone with Alzheimer's disease or a related memory disorder. Participants will receive reimbursement for all study-related costs, and also will receive $300 for their time.

To learn more about this study, please call Lauren Cohen toll-free at (866) 687-9342 or locally at (919) 843-8874.

The study `Home Lighting and Aging' (IRB # 08-1249) was reviewed and approved by the Office of Human Research Ethics at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill on January 5, 2010.

Dear Colleagues:
If you have made a conference presentation or given an invited lecture since last spring, please forward the details to me by the end of the day tomorrow (Monday, May 3). We would like to include as much information on recent faculty presentations in the newsletter as possible. I've only received this information from a couple of people so far.

Thanks,

Hello --

Unfortunately we cannot offer the Swahili 234 in the summer because we would have to pay someone to teach the class and that is impossible with only one student and one professor who could teach the class. You should speak to your adviser about alternatives based on the summer school offerings that currently exist.

Good luck with your schedule and with your graduation.

The Ackland celebrates the contributions of two of the most significant African American artists of the twentieth century: Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines and Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown on view through May 9, 2010.

Color Balance: Paintings by Felrath Hines

Color Balance presents fourteen large-scale abstract paintings by Felrath Hines (1913-1993). In 2009, the artist's widow, Dorothy Fisher, donated a selection of his paintings to three North Carolina cultural institutions: the Ackland Art Museum at The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University, and the North Carolina Central University Art Museum. These luminous paintings are significant additions to the collections of each museum. The Ackland premieres the exhibition of these pieces, which will travel to the Nasher Museum of Art at Duke University and the NCCU Art Museum in 2010-2011.

Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown

One of "the most impassioned visual chroniclers of the African American experience," (New York Times, June 10, 2000) Jacob Lawrence (1917-2000) created a series of gouache paintings in 1941 to illustrate the life of abolitionist John Brown. More than thirty years later, because the fragile paintings were deteriorating, the Detroit Institute of Arts commissioned him to revisit the series. The result was a limited edition portfolio of twenty-two hand-screened prints. This year, in honor of the 150th anniversary of the raid on Harpers Ferry, the Ackland presents this outstanding series for the first time.

Promotional support provided by North Carolina Public Radio-WUNC. Public programming for* Jacob Lawrence and The Legend of John Brown *was supported by the N.C. Arts Council, a division of the Department of Cultural Resources, with funding from the National Endowment for the Arts.

The Educational Policy Committee and the Committee on Student Conduct are interested in learning instructors' experiences and perceptions of the Honor System as it pertains to academic misconduct such as plagiarism and cheating. If you have ever taught a course at UNC, we are interested in your experiences and impressions. We plan to use the results of this survey to report to Faculty Council and, potentially, to recommend reforms to the Honor System.

We estimate the survey should take around 10 minutes to complete. Your survey will remain anonymous; we will only use your responses in aggregate form. We would greatly appreciate your completing the survey in the next two weeks, by May 21, 2010. Of course, you are not required to fill it out if you would prefer not to do so.

The enclosed message is being sent on behalf of Professor David Pfennig and the Polanyi Lectureship Committee to all faculty in the College of Arts and Sciences, with a copy to administrative managers. Please send nominations to him at the email address enclosed in the message.

=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=

Dear Colleagues,

I write to request your input on whom we should invite for the College of Arts and Sciences' Polanyi Lectureship Series.

The Michael Polanyi Visiting Lectureship in the History and Philosophy of Natural Science was established in 1981 by an endowment in the College of Arts and Sciences. The funding, which was provided by the late Prof. Waldo Haisley and his wife, allows us to invite a distinguished lecturer to UNC every two or three years.

The purpose of the lectureship is to stimulate interest in the history and philosophy of the scientific disciplines and to foster interdisciplinary collaboration. The lecturer spends several days at UNC, giving a public lecture for a general audience, holding seminars and giving lectures related to his or her specialty, and consulting with faculty and students.

Previous Polanyi Lecturers include Freeman Dyson, physicist (1983); Clifford Grobstein, biologist (1985); Herbert Simon, psychologist and computer scientist, (1988); Dudley Herschbach, chemist (1991); Phillip Morrison, physicist (1994); Francesca Rochberg, historian (1996); Peter Galison, physicist (2003); and Michael Ruse, philosopher and evolutionary biologist (2007).

We hope to invite a visitor to Chapel Hill in either fall 2010 or spring 2011. If you have a suggestion on whom we should invite, please send the name of your nominee, together with a short statement supporting your choice and any other information you think the committee may find helpful, to David Pfennig, Chair of the Polanyi Lectureship Committee at: dpfennig@unc.edu.

Thank you.

We're looking for parents to comment on a research survey about what they and their sons think about HPV vaccine. It's a quick process. You take a brief survey and then simply talk with us about how you came up with your answers. Your responses will help us make our survey better.

You can participate if you are a parent with a son aged 11-17. If you give permission, we are also interested in speaking with your son in this age group. You can still participate even if you don't give permission for your son to participate. No specific knowledge about our survey topic is necessary.

We will be paying $20 for about 30 minutes of your time. Your son will also receive $20 for about 30 minutes of his time, if he also participates. We will conduct the interview at your convenience on campus at the UNC Gillings School of Global Public Health.

If you are interested in getting more information or participating, please send an email to our research assistant, Morgan Lee at healthstudy@unc.edu. Include potential times that work for you in the next week or so. Thank you!

The HPV Immunization in Sons (HIS) Study was approved by the Public Health-Nursing Institutional Review Board (IRB) at the University of North Carolina on 4/28/2010 (Study #: 10-0614).

Subject:	INFORMATIONAL: Volunteer for Carolina Family Scholarship

Dear Carolina faculty and staff,

An email was recently sent out announcing that Carolina Family Fund scholarships for the 2010/2011 academic year are now being accepted.

The Carolina Family Scholarship is a need-based scholarship for children of UNC-Chapel Hill employees. The scholarship provides financial support for our children to attend ANY of the campuses in the UNC system, as well as state community and technology colleges.

The scholarship selections are made by a committee which changes membership every year, and consists of two faculty and two staff members. It is led by a representative from the UNC-Chapel Hill Office of Scholarships and Student Aid.

So, I'm looking for two faculty and two staff members who would be willing to volunteer to commit to one or two 1-hour meetings to review and select the scholarship winners for this year.

Please email me at bruce_egan@unc.edu if you are interested in volunteering to be on the committee which will probably meet sometime towards the end of May.

More information about the Carolina Family Scholarship can be found at www.unc.edu/familyfund.

Thank you!

WebEvent Reminder

Title: Deadline for Applications for Faculty Engaged Scholars Program
Date: Friday, May 14, 2010
Time: Unspecified

Description: Faculty Engaged Scholars Program
Application deadline: May 14, 2010
Website: http://www.unc.edu/cps/faculty-engaged-scholars.php

Program Description:

The Faculty Engaged Scholars Program is an initiative of Carolina Center for Public Service to advance faculty involvement in the engaged scholarship.*

Through a competitive application process, at least five faculty members from UNC- Chapel Hill will be selected to participate in the two-year program. This will be third class of scholars since the program began in 2007. More information about prior classes of scholars can be found at http://www.unc.edu/cps/faculty-engaged-scholars-current-scholars.php. In the first year of the program, Scholars will take part in an experiential advanced curriculum on engaged scholarship as they work on their own projects in partnership with the community. In the second year, Scholars participate in a learning community that focuses on their own efforts and also are asked to produce a product from their scholarship for dissemination. Scholars will receive funds of up to $5,000 per year to support their work for each of the two years (maximum $10,000).

Eligibility:

Priority for participation will be given to tenure-track faculty with any length of service at UNC-Chapel Hill, and fixed-term faculty who have been at Carolina for at least five years. Faculty who demonstrate interest and/or experience in applying their scholarship to addressing practical problems of the state, with the potential to establish long-term benefits to North Carolinians, will receive preference in the selection. Particular consideration will be given to applicants working in (or interested in working in) the Community Campus Partnership counties of Caswell and/or Lenoir. In addition to the usual scholar funding, there may be additional opportunities for funds for projects in these counties. (More information about Community Campus Partnership can be found at http://www.sog.unc.edu/programs/ccp.)

An online application will be available starting March 24. To learn more about the program in general, please visit our web site: http://www.unc.edu/cps/faculty-engaged-scholars.php

If you have questions after reviewing the online materials, please contact Lynn Blanchard, Director of the Carolina Center for Public Service, at ccps@unc.edu or 919-843-7568.

Curators Clinic

Thursday, May 13 | 1:00 - 4:00 PM

Every other month, the Ackland invites the public to bring in a work of art for consideration by an Ackland expert. While Ackland staff is unable to appraise works of art, curators may offer insight into the significance of the piece as well as the techniques used by the artist, condition, and subject matter. Only one work per person allowed. Please call 919.843.3677 to make an appointment.

Registration required | Free to members | $10 non-members

Art after Dark

Friday, May 14 | Museum open until 9:00 PM

Join us this Friday during our special evening hours. Have a drink with friends, enjoy music from Andrew Robbins-Pollack, and of course - take in the art!

> Music: Andrew Robbins-Pollack | 5:00 - 6:00 and 7:00 - 8:30 PM
> This Friday, Holly Springs based musician Andrew Robbins-Pollack will return to the Museum for Ackland after Dark. He will be sharing more of his innovative electronica compositions and will debut the some of his latest work off his new album Tautochrone.

Free | Cash bar (beer and wine)

Music in the Galleries: Cantari, May 16

Sunday, May 16 | 2:00 - 4:00 PM

Join us for a very special Music in the Galleries.

Elite chamber choir Cantari will offer a musical meditation on the relationships between music, poetry, and art. Director Sue Klausmeyer will lead the group as they explore music Through the Eyes of the Poet - from the lyricism of William Shakespeare in love to the witticism of Ogden Nash toasting the animal kingdom. Ackland Director of Academic Programs Carolyn Allmendinger will offer insights into the artistic context of the choral compositions that range from the Renaissance to the twentieth century. Music by Orlando Gibbons, Benjamin Britten, Robert Schumann, Stephen Chatman, and Eric Whitacre.

Following the concert, we invite you to stay for a reception. Enjoy light refreshments and a chance to mingle with fellow art and music lovers!

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Community Survey on Sexual Assault

Greetings UNC community members! Your participation is requested for a brief survey.

The purpose of this research study is to learn about UNC-CH community members' beliefs and attitudes around gender, sexual relationships, and sexual assault. This study is being completed as a part of a grant funded by the Department of Health and Human Services in the state of North Carolina for the NC Rape Prevention and Education (RPE) Program.

The results of the study will be used to understand the attitudes and beliefs supporting sexual violence in order to develop programs and education on campus to prevent sexual violence. If you would like to participate in this study, clicking on the link below will bring you to a consent page as well as the survey itself, which will likely take you 10-15 minutes should you choose to complete it. If you choose, at the end of the survey, you may enter to win one of thirty-five (35) iPod shuffles.

http://studentvoice.com/uncch/sexualassaultassessment10

All members of the UNC Chapel Hill community are invited to participate. Whether or not you choose to take the survey, attached is a sheet with information about interpersonal relationship and sexual violence resources for your convenience. Thank you for your interest in this research! If you have any questions or concerns about this study, please contact Kelli Raker (raker@email.unc.edu) or Robert Pleasants (bpleas@email.unc.edu).

This study has been approved by the Public Health-Nursing IRB on 4/15/2010, Study # 10-0597.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: AWARD-1 Diabetes Type 2 Study

AWARD-1 - Diabetes Type 2 Study

The UNC Diabetes Care Center is currently seeking adult volunteers with type 2 diabetes to investigate a medication for blood sugar control.

You may be eligible if:
 You have diabetes type 2 and are currently taking oral medications to control your blood sugar.
 You have been on the same medications for your diabetes for the past 3 months
 Your weight has been the same for the past 3 months
 You are open to trying an injectable medication for blood sugar control

You are not eligible if:
 You have diabetes type 1
 You are pregnant, breastfeeding, or planning a pregnancy within the next 2 years.
 You are taking insulin or a GLP-1 analog (exentatide (Byetta) or liraglutide (Victoza)
 You are allergic or sensitive to metformin, pioglitazone (Actos), or exenatide
 You have had a stroke or a heart attack in the past 2 months
 You have a history of thyroid cancer
 You have an auto-immune disease (e.g. lupus, rheumatoid arthritis)

Duration of Study: 12 visits over the course of approximately 1.5 years.

Study Specifics: Participants will be asked to discontinue their current anti-diabetes medications and begin taking metformin and pioglitazone. Participants will then be randomized to receive the investigational medication, a placebo, or exenatide. Those initially in the placebo group (for the first 26 weeks of the study) will be crossed over to receive the investigational medication for the remainder of the study (26 weeks or more).

Benefits: You may not receive any medical benefit. However, you will receive compensation for your time, as well as study medication (both oral and injectable), a glucose meter (and testing supplies), study related labs, ECGs, physical exams, and diabetes education/management throughout the duration of the study (all at no cost to you).

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Get involved with the Community Nutrition Partnership

Are you interested in nutrition, sustainable agriculture, food access or public health research? If so we invite you to learn more about the Community Nutrition Partnership (CNP). CNP is a new non-profit organization, founded by UNC grad students, that works to increase access to healthy, local and organic foods among low-income families and individuals in Orange County, NC. CNP is working to find creative ways to make fresh, healthy food available to people of all incomes (including college students). We want to change the perception that eating healthy is expensive. We are looking for additional volunteers and board members to help with some of our newest endeavors. There are also research and service opportunities available in conjunction with UNC-CH. We are seeking enthusiastic people who are excited about our mission and want to help this organization grow.

Seeking Female Adolescent Participants (ages 12-16) for UNC Friendship Study

Parents and Mental Healthcare Providers:
Researchers are currently seeking participants (ages 12-16) for an important study of adolescent friendship and development called Project ARCH (Adolescents' Relationships, Coping, and Health). Specifically, we are seeking adolescents who have ever been assessed or received treatment for depressed mood, anxiety, or other mental health concerns.

Participants would complete questionnaires and discuss several adolescent-oriented topics with a close friend. We can schedule visits to our near-campus location on Finley Golf Course Road any afternoon or evening during the week and anytime on the weekend. Participants earn up to $190.00 for participating, parents earn $40.00, and best friends earn $40.00. We also offer driving reimbursement for long-distance participants.

For more information, please contact our Scheduling Coordinator at 919-843-2352 or by email at project.arch@unc.edu.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Carolina Blood Drive June 8

Dear Tar Heels,

I'd like to tell you the story of Davis De Clerque, son of Julia De Clerque of UNC's Sheps Center for Health Services Research. Davis was born 17 weeks -- almost four months -- premature. He weighed a pound and a half.

Davis received 17 blood transfusions in his first 109 days of life. He wouldn't have survived without them.

Today, Davis is 10 years old and doing well in school, despite a type of autism prevalent among children born prematurely.

Soon, you will have the opportunity to help children like Davis, as well as cancer sufferers, accident victims and other patients in our region. Please give on June 8 at the 22nd annual Carolina Blood Drive, set for 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the Dean E. Smith Center.

Appointments to give or volunteer can be made at www.unc.edu/blood. Both are work time if a supervisor approves. Employees also may use community service leave with their supervisors' permission. (For more information on community service leave, go to http://hr.unc.edu and search "community service leave.")

Special guests thanking donors from midday to early afternoon will be Chancellor Holden Thorp and Patti Thorp, Butch and Tammy Davis, Woody and Jean Durham, School of Medicine Dean William Roper, also CEO of UNC HealthCare, Eric Montross, Carla Overbeck, UNC football players and Rameses.

Walk-ins will be welcome, but appointments are requested -- they help the American Red Cross know how many technicians to send. And appointments help cut the process to about an hour.

Door prizes given randomly during the day will include UNC football and basketball tickets. After giving, donors may choose from pizza, cookies, sandwiches and more, and will receive commemorative 22nd anniversary T-shirts donated by UNC Student Stores and the American Red Cross.

Donors can register for chances to receive a gift card for a cruise on the line and dates of your choice. The drawing for the tickets will be for donors from across the Carolinas Blood Region of the Red Cross.

Please sign up at www.unc.edu/blood today. Take this opportunity to help those who won't survive without the generosity of blood donors. Give at the Carolina Blood Drive.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Research Study about Metabolic Syndrome and Air Pollution

The Environmental Protection Agency (on the UNC campus) is seeking individuals ages 25 to 70 with "metabolic syndrome" for research. Metabolic syndrome is defined by having at least 3 of the following 5 criteria: 1) waist size greater that 40" for men or 35" for women; 2) blood pressure greater than 130/85 (but, for this study, less than 160/100) or blood pressure controlled on certain medications; 3) HDL cholesterol less than 40 for men or less than 50 for women; 4) fasting blood sugar between 100 and 126; and 5) triglycerides 150 or above. Many people with metabolic syndrome also have a parent or sibling with diabetes, although individuals who themselves have diagnosed diabetes will not be eligible.

The purpose of this study is to determine if people with metabolic syndrome who are exposed to ultra-fine air particles develop temporary changes in their blood vessels, heart rhythm, blood cells and blood proteins. To do this, the EPA will expose volunteers to Chapel Hill air that is collected and concentrated on the day of the study. Levels of pollution will not be higher than those in many major cities around the world. Study procedures include blood draws and exposures to concentrated and clean air. Participants will be asked to wear ECG leads during the study and a heart rate monitor over night. Total time commitment is about 26 hours, 7 visits, over a 4 or 5 week period. For more information, please call Westat EPA Recruiting at 966-0604. Approved Feb 22, 2007, by the Office of Human Research Ethics Biomedical Institutional Review Board. IRB # 04-1677 (formerly GCRC 2067).

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Concerned About Drinking Too Much?

IRB# 09-0939

Are you drinking too much?

* Have you tried to cut down your alcohol use but can't?
* Have you increased the amount of alcohol you drink?
* Is your alcohol use creating problems in your life?

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is seeking volunteers for a research study using an FDA approved medication for the treatment of heavy alcohol drinking. The research study will involve a free evaluation interview and, if you qualify, free counseling sessions. If you're between the ages of 18 and 65 and are having problems with alcohol, you may be able to participate in this new clinical research study.

You are assured of strict confidentiality.

Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: Message from the Chancellor: Tony Waldrop Named Provost at UCF

Dear Faculty and Staff,

I am writing to let you know that Tony Waldrop will leave the University this summer to become provost and vice president for academic affairs at the University of Central Florida. While this is a huge loss for us, it is a great move for Tony and for higher education. UCF is an exciting university and undoubtedly will benefit from Tony's extensive skills and experience.

Tony has served as Carolina's vice chancellor for research and economic development since 2001 and has led the growth of our research enterprise from $438.7 million to $716 million last year. The $168 million in federal stimulus money the University has received to date also can be attributed to the strength of our faculty's research endeavors, and Tony has played an instrumental role in those efforts.

Tony also helped guide the development of the new Carolina Physical Science Complex, the largest construction project in the University's history, so we are well positioned to take our research efforts to the next level.

I will announce an interim vice chancellor soon, along with plans for a search committee. Until then, please join me in congratulating Tony and wishing him all the best in his new post. We will always be proud to claim Tony as a Tar Heel.

Sincerely,

Holden Thorp

Wolof literature

This course introduces students to Wolof literature (written and oral) through reading and analyzing Wolof novels, plays, poetry (songs, poems and epics), and folklore. We will read and analyze famous novelists such as Buubakar Boris Jóob, playwrights such as Seex Aliw Ndaw; and oral poetry, short stories, proverbs, riddles, and modern popular songs. We will focus on the content and form of these works of art, while contextualizing them in the socio-political and economic context from which they emerged. [Upper-level seminar course]. Pre-requisite: Should have taken advanced Wolof or the equivalent, or be fluent speaker of Wolof.

Topics include:
a) Historical overview of Wolof literary works
b) Content (message, themes, philosophy, context, etc.)
c) Form (language, linguistic style, plot, characters, etc.)

Choice of material: not too complex for the target level
Variety of topics: movies, plays, riddles, proverbs, newspapers, short poems, etc.
Course progression: move from least challenging material to more complex items
Proverbs, prose, plays, poems, movies, etc
Target skills: oral proficiency, written skills, creativity
Final written project: play, poem, narrative, etc.
Weekly assignment and quiz based on readings and class discussions

The possessives are explained on text pages 35–37. Their roots are

-angu: my, mine
-ako: your, yours
-ake: his, her
-etu: our, ours
-enu: your, yours
-ao: their, theirs
-a: of.

Study the -li-. It is the affirmative past tense marker. Its negative counterpart is ha-ku-. Here are some examples:

Mtoto wangu alicheza besiboli.: My child played baseball.
Yeye hakucheza mpira wa miguu.: He/she did not play soccer.
Or in Kenya, it is said:
Yeye hakucheza kandanda.: He/she did not play soccer.

Study the adjectives on text pages 39 and 44.

Study the personal independent pronouns on text page 45:

mimi: I, me
wewe: you
yeye: he, she, him, her sisi: we, us
ninyi, nyinyi: you (pl.)
wao: they, them.

The personal pronouns are used for emphatic purposes. The subject-prefixes (sometimes called verb-prefixes) are most used in regular speech. They are ni-: I u-: you

a-: he/she tu-: we m-: you
wa-: they.

shades such as chai ya maziwa (tea with milk), chai ya rangi (tea without milk), and others.

Grammar

Dialogue 1 includes a number of the (JI)/MA class nouns. They are shown in the boxes on text pages 54–56. Study them and learn how to use these prefixes with adjectives.

Read the top of text page 60 to learn how adjectives are made with -a (of). Example: nyama ya ng'ombe: beef (meat of cow).

Read text pages 60–61 and learn how to express the concept of "doing things for other people." Examples:

-pika: cook	-pikia: cook for
-soma: read, study	-somea: study for

Read text pages 62–63 to learn how object-markers are formed. Here are some examples:

Amani anapenda mayai: Amani likes eggs.
Amani anayapenda: Amani likes them.

Notice that the object marker -ya- is not a separate word like in English. It is part of the conjugated Kiswahili verb.

These are object markers for the inanimates:

Noun class prefixes	Object markers
m-/mi-	-u-/-i-
j-/ma-	-li-/-ya-
Ø/ma-	-li-/-ya-
ki-/vi-	-ki-/-vi-
n-/n-	-i-/-zi-
u-	-u-
ku-	-ku-.

The noun classes v- and ku- have no plural.

Subject:	INFORMATIONAL: Chancellors Award for Excellence Nominations

TO: All Permanent University Employees

FROM: Holden Thorp, Chancellor

Spring is one of the most beautiful times of the year in Chapel Hill. For the University, it is also a time to celebrate the accomplishments of University employees. I am pleased to announce that nominations are now being accepted for the 2010 Chancellor's Award for Excellence and invite you to submit a nomination.

The University established the Chancellor's Award Program to mirror the criteria for the Governor's Award for Excellence. Employees who are selected for the Chancellor's Award for Excellence are automatically nominated for the Governor's Award for Excellence.

The Chancellor's Award criteria are based on meritorious or distinguished accomplishments that are "clearly above and beyond that which would be expected from dedicated employees who are fully and competently discharging all of the duties and satisfying all of the requirements of their jobs" while a University employee. The awards categories are:

-- Outstanding State Government Service
-- Innovation(s)
-- Public Service
-- Safety/Heroism
-- Human Relations
-- Other achievements.

Each year a selection committee comprised of staff and faculty reviews nominations and recommends five employees for recognition. The five Chancellor's Award recipients are honored at a recognition reception and each receive a monetary award of $1,000 and a special leave award of 24 hours.

Any permanent employee may recommend a University employee for the Chancellor's Award. The nomination process includes submitting a nomination form along with up to a maximum of three letters of recommendation (letters of recommendation are optional and not required). You can complete a nomination form by clicking on the link provided in this email or by searching for the form on the Office of Human Resources Web site at http://hr.unc.edu and using the keywords "Chancellor's Award."

Chancellor's Award Nomination Form:
http://hr.unc.edu/form-finder/recognition-program-forms/CCM3_015745

The deadline for submitting nominations is July 2. Letters of recommendation can be sent to the Office of Human Resources. Please indicate the employee's name and "2010 Chancellor Award Nomination" in the subject line of the reference. Letters of recommendation can also be sent via interoffice mail to:

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Message to University Community

Dear University Community,

Our colleagues in the Office of Undergraduate Admissions have done an outstanding job recruiting and selecting the best and brightest students to attend our University. In the coming weeks, these new students and their families will arrive on campus to attend one of our New Student Orientation Programs (CTOPS/TSOP). These orientation programs are designed to allow new students and their families an opportunity to experience Carolina's welcoming and diverse community by:

- Learning about the Carolina curriculum
- Connecting with current students, faculty & staff
- Discussing expectations and responsibilities of the Carolina Honor Code and the Carolina Community
- Interacting with fellow Tar Heels of the Class of 2014
- Living in a residence hall and dining in one of the on-campus dining facilities
- Learning about opportunities related to undergraduate research, student organizations, leadership development, service, study abroad, the arts and more

Whether or not you have a formal role in the orientation program, each of us has the opportunity to be part of ensuring that our newest Tar Heels have a positive and enriching experience. While our Orientation Leaders and staff are honored to interact with our new students and serve as the official hosts for the University, you may receive the occasional question or visit from a new student or family member, and you may find it helpful to be aware of the following information:

The Orientation Help Desk is located on the 1st floor of the Student Union and is staffed from 8:00a.m. - 6:00p.m. during the Orientation Sessions. The Office of New Student and Carolina Parent Programs can be contacted at 919-962-8304 from 8:00a.m. - 5:00p.m.

I also encourage you to visit the New Student and Carolina Parent Programs website at nscpp.unc.edu to learn more about the Orientation program.

On behalf of the Division of Student Affairs, thank you for your participation and help in welcoming our newest Carolina Family members.

Have you been told you have chronic bronchitis, COPD (Chronic Obstructive Pulmonary Disease)? Are you a current or ex-smoker? Are you 40 to 82 years of age?

If you can answer yes to these questions the Pulmonary Division and Cystic Fibrosis Center of UNC would like to talk with you.

We are looking for volunteers to participate in a study to evaluate mucus clearance from the lungs and airways during states of wellness and during exacerbations. If you qualify you will receive free study related physical exams, lung function testing, EKG, chest x-rays, and education about your illness.

This study could last up to several years and involves 12 outpatient visits to UNC hospitals. You will be compensated for your time, effort and travel to UNC.

Subject:	INFORMATIONAL: Participate in a weight loss study using mobile phones

Are you interested in losing weight? Are you looking for a way to stay motivated? We are conducting a research study at UNC-Chapel Hill to help people lose weight over a 6-month period.

To enroll in this study, you must be between the ages 18-60, have access to a computer with Internet capabilities, and be overweight (Body Mass Index of 25-40--see http://www.nhlbisupport.com/bmi/ to calculate your BMI). You must also have access to a scale (to weigh yourself) and an internet-capable mobile device (like an iPhone, iPod Touch, or BlackBerry).

Participants who qualify will receive weight loss information via a podcast. A podcast is an audio file that is downloaded to your MP3 player, internet-capable mobile phone, or computer. You must attend 2 introductory meetings in July. These meetings will last approximately 2 hours and will be conducted at UNC's Weight Research Center (1700 Martin Luther King Jr. Blvd.). You will then participate in the study for 6 months, returning for follow-up meetings at 3- and 6-months

Participants will receive a $10 at the 3-month assessment and $10 at the 6-month assessment.

To see if you qualify, please complete the screening survey at:

The INSTITUTE for the ARTS and HUMANITIES is pleased to announce:

FACULTY FELLOWSHIPS 2011-2012
Application Deadline: Thursday, September 30, 2010

The Institute for the Arts and Humanities offers UNC-Chapel Hill faculty members a unique opportunity: a semester-long, on-campus fellowship to work on projects for publication, exhibition, composition or performance. The fellowship centers on a weekly 3-hour seminar at Hyde Hall where Fellows exchange ideas with eight to twelve peers from various disciplines over a shared meal.

Eligible faculty may apply for either the fall or spring semester for one or both of the two available fellowships:

I. IAH Faculty Fellowships

Projects: Proposals should be related in some vital way to the arts, humanities or qualitative social sciences. Joint proposals from two faculty members are also acceptable.

Eligibility: We encourage applications from faculty at all ranks in tenure-track or tenured positions. Tenured or tenure-track faculty may apply as early as their second year at UNC-Chapel Hill. In each group of Fellows we seek a blend of ranks and disciplines. We may also take into account applicants' leaves of absence for research during the three years prior to the IAH fellowship. Applicants require endorsement from their department chairs.

II. Faculty Arts Fellowships

Projects: Proposals should advance research and/or engage in creative endeavors in the arts and arts-related fields. Proposals should also include plans to incorporate artistic performances on the Carolina campus or the resources of the Ackland Art Museum into the faculty member's courses.

Eligibility: The Fellowship is open to all tenure-track and fixed-term faculty at UNC-Chapel Hill. Special consideration will be given to junior faculty members and specifically to projects that incorporate interdisciplinary collaboration. Applicants require endorsement from their department chairs.

Additional Information
Fellows must attend weekly seminar meetings during their semester leave. Faculty members who have previously held any fellowship that provides a semester's leave at the IAH may apply again, but only in the fifth year after any previous faculty fellowship at the IAH.

Please note: We've moved our applications online. Application materials and instructions are available at http://iah.unc.edu/programs/fellowships/apply.

The IAH will host a two-part Grants Mentoring Workshop, set for September 1 and September 22, during which applicants may share their proposal and receive feedback. Because IAH Fellowships have become increasingly competitive, we strongly encourage applicants to participate in the workshop. Visit the IAH website for RSVP information.

For more information about our programs or our new application process, contact Director John McGowan (jpm@email.unc.edu or 962-6831), Executive Director Megan Granda (mgranda@unc.edu or 843-2653), Associate Director Julia T. NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE HUMANITIES
SUMMER STIPENDS 2011

Deadline: September 1, 2010

NEH Summer Stipends support individuals working full-time on a humanities project at any stage of development by providing $6,000 for two consecutive months of full-time research and writing. Faculty members teaching full-time at colleges and universities must be nominated by their institutions to apply for a summer stipend. At UNC-Chapel Hill, the Institute for the Arts and Humanities' Faculty Advisory Board will again serve as the nominations committee.

To be eligible for a summer stipend, applicants must turn in applications to the Institute for the Arts and Humanities, located in Hyde Hall, by Wednesday, September 1, 2010.

Full information about the stipend and the application materials are available on the NEH website: http://www.neh.gov/grants/guidelines/stipends.html.

INTERNAL APPLICATION PROCESS
The application and submission information are available at the NEH website (at the above link).

If you intend to apply, please contact Kirsten Beattie (843-2654, iah@unc.edu) before bringing the completed application to Hyde Hall. Submit an original and four copies (five total) of the application by 4:30 p.m. on September 1, 2010. Read all application instructions carefully: Only complete applications will be considered.

The Institute's nomination committee will review all applications for UNC-Chapel Hill faculty and select two faculty nominees who will then apply directly to the NEH. The Institute will notify the two nominees in time for them to submit their applications online at www.grants.gov directly to the NEH prior to the September 30 deadline.

If you have further questions about the internal application process, contact Kirsten Beattie (843-2654, iah@unc.edu) at the Institute for the Arts and Humanities. For questions about the Summer Stipend program, contact the NEH at stipends@neh.gov or visit the NEH website.

Subject:	FORMAL NOTICE: New Associate Provost for Finance and Academic Planning

Dear Faculty and Staff,

I am very pleased to announce that Dwayne Pinkney will become the University's new associate provost for finance and academic planning, effective Aug. 1. In this crucial role, he will lead the efforts to develop new strategies for allocating resources to support the University's existing and emerging academic priorities, and he will provide leadership for the finance, institutional research, general academic administration and strategic planning efforts of the Office of the Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost.

Among his many responsibilities, Dwayne will manage the annual and biennial budget processes, the annual raise process and long-term financial commitments, and he will analyze our academic policies for their financial implications. He also will oversee the allocation of start-up funds as well as activities related to tuition increases, financial reporting, enrollment data collection and reporting, and financial planning for technology and special projects.

Dwayne brings to this position a rich background in finance and administration, and we are very fortunate to have someone with his knowledge and experience ready to step into the post. For the past 16 years, Dwayne has held key leadership roles in finance and administration - not only in higher education, but also in state government and the private sector.

Dwayne came to Carolina in 2004 as assistant vice chancellor for finance and administration. In that position, he supported the budget process for the Division of Finance and Administration and has led University-wide initiatives such as our response to PACE, the UNC President's Advisory Committee on Efficiency and Effectiveness. He also has taken a lead role on many internal committees and community-related efforts.

In 2008, Dwayne took on additional responsibilities as special assistant to the chancellor for local and state relations, serving as the point person for campus legislative initiatives. His efforts helped secure $50 million for the planning of new capital facilities at Carolina. And last year, Dwayne was named associate vice chancellor for enterprise services, assuming additional oversight responsibilities for Student Stores and the Trademark Licensing Program.

Outside Carolina, Dwayne has served as associate vice president for finance for the UNC system, where he established, analyzed and approved budget policy for the system and executed the $2.5 billion capital program. He also has been a senior fiscal analyst for the N.C. General Assembly's Fiscal Research Division and deputy secretary for administration of the N.C. Department of the Secretary of State.

He holds a bachelor's degree cum laude in English and journalism from N.C. A&T University, a master's degree in public administration from the University of Pittsburgh and a doctorate in political science from Carolina. As you can see, Dwayne is well suited to lead the funding efforts for the University's academic priorities in the coming years.

I also want to thank search committee chair Jim Dean, dean of the Kenan-Flagler Business School, and the search committee members for their work in identifying an excellent successor to Elmira Mangum, who left the University for a position at Cornell earlier this year.

Please join me in welcoming Dwayne to his new role later this summer.

Sincerely,

Bruce Carney
Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost

UNC Study of Home Lighting and Aging

Research has shown that lighting can improve mood and sleep for adults. In order to learn more about the effects of home lighting for older adults with Alzheimer's disease and other memory problems, researchers at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill are conducting a four month study of home lighting.

To participate in this study, you must be the live-in caregiver for someone with Alzheimer's disease or a related memory disorder. Participants will receive reimbursement for all study-related costs, and also will receive $300 for their time.

To learn more about this study, please call Lauren Cohen toll-free at (866) 687-9342 or locally at (919) 843-7811.

The study `Home Lighting and Aging' (IRB # 08-1249) was reviewed and approved by the Office of Human Research Ethics at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill on January 5, 2010.

Subject: INFORMATIONAL: Do you have chronic jaw pain?

The UNC Center for Neurosensory Disorders is conducting a research study investigating the biological, psychological, and genetic factors that may cause Temporomandibular Muscle and Joint Disorder (TMJD). We are looking for volunteers with chronic pain in the face and jaw. We are seeking people with TMJD/TMD/ TMJ to participate in a study lasting several years.

Participation will include 1 clinic appointment lasting 3 hours. During that time participants fill out various questionnaires and receive a clinical exam and sensory testing. Individuals who meet the study criteria will be complete brief health updates for the next 4-5 years.

You must be between the ages of 18 and 44, and not have diabetes, epilepsy, hyperthyroidism, drug or alcohol abuse, chronic respiratory diseases, high blood pressure, heart disease, kidney failure and have not required hospitalization for a psychiatric disorder within the last 6 months.

You should not participate if you are pregnant, nursing a baby, currently involved in orthodontic treatment, chemotherapy or radiation therapy.

People who complete all data collection aspects will be paid $270 (this includes $90 for the clinic appointment mentioned above).

For more information about the study, visit the website at http://www.oppera.org

Please contact us if you are interested in learning more about our study (Biomedical IRB number 05-DENT-777).

MEMORANDUM

TO: ALL TEACHING ASSISTANTS & TEACHING FELLOWS
FROM: JAN BOXILL, Teaching Coordinator
DATE: March 20, 2006

RE: TEACHING ASSIGNMENTS FOR FALL 2006

I. TEACHING ASSISTANT ASSIGNMENTS

Attached is the Teaching Assignment request form for FALL 2006. Please fill out the form giving your preferences, ranked in 1,2,3, 4... order. While every effort will be made to accommodate your first choice, the process is constrained along several directions that limit our ability to be fully successful in that effort. Also, be sure to provide any pertinent information that should be taken into consideration when making assignments. Keep in mind the more information you give me the better I can make the assignments that work for all of us. First and second year grad students are only given teaching assistant assignments, not teaching their own classes.

[Note: For now you only have Fall 2006; the Spring 2007 schedule is not yet done]

Please return the form to me NO LATER THAN FRIDAY, APRIL 7, 2006.
Final assignments will be made after the final faculty meeting in May.
If you have any questions please feel free to talk with me.

II. TEACHING FELLOWS

In keeping with the Department's Teaching Policies, once assignments are made, if you are assigned to teach your own class for the first time, you must choose a faculty mentor to work with on your syllabus, etc. If you have any questions, feel free to talk with me or Nicoletta Orlandi, the Teaching Assistant Coordinator.

The courses are listed by their new numbers with the old numbers in brackets.

TA ASSIGNMENT REQUEST FORM FOR FALL 2006

If you have anyone looking for a GC PHIL Perspective, first summer session, here is a good one. It only has 7 students right now. Instructor is good.

I CANNOT TAKE ANYONE ELSE IN MY CLASS!

Philosophy 30
Applied Ethics
Summer Session I
Mon. - Fri., 11:30 a.m. - 1:00 p.m.
Dr. Ty Raterman

This course will be a lively exploration of a number of troubling contemporary moral issues.

Members of a fundamentalist church in Kansas have been picketing funerals of U.S. soldiers killed in Iraq, shouting that the Iraqi insurgency is God's punishment for American tolerance of homosexuality. This poignantly raises the question: What is within the bounds of permissible free speech?

Judges in several states, including North Carolina, have become concerned by new evidence the lethal injection makes for an agonizing execution. They are insisting that doctors take an active role in supervising executions, even though this is prohibited by the American Medical Association's code of ethics. Is capital punishment via lethal injection moral or immoral?

Factory farms make for the possibility of low-priced meat, but do so in a way that inflicts suffering on the animals and stress on our environment. Most of the more than 10 million hogs living on "factory farms" in North Carolina will spend their entire lives indoors on metal-vented floors, and will produce more waste annually than the entire human population of Charlotte will produce in 58 years. Is eating meat morally permissible, and if so, under what conditions?

Arguments on both sides of each issue will be considered, and students will have ample opportunity to discuss them.

The course satisfies GC Philosohical Perspective.

"The casting aside by Africans of subservience to foreign masters in all its forms, and their confident assertion that African interests are paramount, are expressions… of Pan Africanism" [Pan-Africanism, Colin Legum, p. 14] Pan Africanism is a movement of ideas and emotions which is not about the "homeland" but about the African diaspora. Two figures important to the movement are W.E.B. Dubois and Marcus Garvey. DuBois likened Pan Africanism to Zionism. He wrote, "The African movement means to us what the Zionist movement must mean to the Jews, the centralisation of race effort and the recognition of race fount" [Legum, 14] Marcus Garvey's Pan Africanism centered on his "back to Africa" movement. Garvey's movement had strong emotional appeal, but weak political force. Although there are many important figures in Pan Africanism, the two dominating political figures in the movement were Dr. William E. Burghardt DuBois and Mr. Marcus Aurelius Garvey.

Response Form
Updates to Assessment Plans and Results

The University is preparing a follow-up report to the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS) concerning our ongoing efforts in assessing student learning outcomes. Please return this form via email along with any attachments to your Senior Associate Dean by February 3, 2006.

Department: ___PHILOSOPHY_____

1. Updates to 2004-05 Assessment Reports. The early reporting deadline we followed in order to provide our initial report to SACS this summer did not allow some faculty adequate time to discuss their assessment results within the department or determine how to use the results for improvement purposes. If you have any additions to make to the "Findings" or "Use of Results" you provided in your Assessment Reports this past summer, please update the report(s) and return with this form via email. (If you need copies of the reports you filed, please contact Lynn Williford at lynn_williford@unc.edu)

Check one:

_____ Updated 2004-05 Assessment Report(s) attached.
__X___ We have no additional results or use of results to report at this time.

2. Modifications to Assessment Plans for 2005-06. If you have made any changes to the Assessment Plans you filed last year, please send a revised version to your Senior Associate Dean.

Check one:

_____ Updated Assessment Plan(s) attached.
___X__ We have no changes to make to our Assessment Plans at this time.

3. Assessments being conducted in 2005-06. Every program is expected to assess at least one major learning outcome every academic year. For each of your programs, please list below the assessment(s) that you are conducting this year, unless it is already clearly indicated on your assessment plan.

Check one:

Jan,

Would you please forward this to all faculty, at least those attending the meeting? (I'm sorry I don't have the address list handy.)

Thanks, Tom

To all faculty attending the FFM:

From Tom Hill, DGS

Re: One more request: what to do in your down-time during the FFFM.

Tomorrow at the FFFM we will have before us for many hours the transcripts, up-to-date (I hope), of all our graduate students. I am sure that, as conscientious advisors, you have been keeping close track of your advisee's progress towards completing the distribution requirements for the MA and PhD (as appropriate). I'll be trying to check these as well, but it would be very helpful (and maybe not too much work) if you could double-check your advisees' record re this to date. This should enable you to remind them what more (if anything) is needed, and you can flag for me any special problems you see.

To help with this, I'll attach info re the distribution requirements from the Grad. Program Description.

Many thanks.

Tom

Grad Program Distribution Requirements

7. Distribution Requirements by Degree: To ensure the scope and comprehensiveness of a student's philosophical training, each student is required to include in his or her program of studies courses distributed as follows:

For the M.A. Degree:

- two courses in the History of Philosophy, including one course addressing a significant figure, school, or movement in philosophy prior to 1600 A.D. and one course addressing a significant figure, school, or movement in philosophy within the period 1600-1900 A.D.;
- one course within the area of Metaphysics and Epistemology; and
- one course within the area of Ethics and Value Theory.

For the Ph.D. Degree:

- one additional course in each of the three areas—(a), (b), and (c)—required for the M.A. Degree; and
- two courses within the area of Logic and Philosophy of Science.

PHIL 101 (Symbolic Logic) and PHIL 200 (Proto-Seminar) and PHIL 390 (Current Research Group Seminar) may not be counted toward the satisfaction of these Distribution Requirements. A student who has substituted a more advanced logic course for PHIL 101 (see below #21) may, however, count the substituted course toward the satisfaction of these requirements.

8. Distribution Areas: For the purpose of satisfying a student's Distribution Requirements, the four areas into which his or her philosophical studies are to be divided will be understood as follows:

I. History of Philosophy: courses aiming primarily at understanding and appreciating the distinctive philosophical contributions of a significant figure, school, or movement within philosophy in its historical and dialectical setting, normally including courses bearing the numbers 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 158, 159, 210, 215, 220, 225, 310, 315, 320, and 325.

II. Metaphysics and Epistemology: courses in ontology, the philosophy of mind, philosophy of language, theory of knowledge, philosophy of perception, and the theory of action, normally including courses bearing the numbers 110, 114, 230, 235, 240, 245, 330, 335, and 345.

III. Ethics and Value Theory: courses in ethics, social and political philosophy, philosophy of law, aesthetics, and philosophy of religion, normally including courses bearing the numbers 102, 103, 104, 105, 112, 113, 120, 130, 142, 260, 265, 270, 275, 280, 360, 365, 370, 375 and 380.

IV. Logic and Philosophy of Science: courses in logic, philosophy of mathematics, philosophy of natural science, philosophy of the social sciences, and philosophy of history, normally including courses bearing the numbers 106, 107, 108, 109, 111, 115, 121, 185, 190, 250, 255, 350, and 355. The department may accept, upon petition by individual students, graduate level courses in the history of science, theoretical and methodological courses in the natural and social sciences, and other comparable courses (e.g., the history of medicine, psycholinguistics) taken outside the department toward the satisfaction of this requirement.

9. PHIL 205 and 305: PHIL 205 (Advanced Studies in Systematic Philosophy) and PHIL 305 (Research Seminar in Systematic Philosophy) are courses of variable content and consequently will vary from section to section and semester to semester in its applicability to the satisfaction of students' Distribution Requirements. It shall be the responsibility of the Director of Graduate Studies to determine the area (or areas) to which a specific section of PHIL 205 of PHIL 305 may be applied for the satisfaction of distribution Requirements and to inform each student of this determination at the time of his or her registration or pre-registration. The department recognizes that the specific contents of a course may sometimes render it appropriate to apply that course to the satisfaction of Distribution Requirements in one of two or more areas. In such a case, different students may elect to apply the same course differently to the satisfaction of Distribution Requirements, but in no case may a single section of a single course be applied by an individual student to the satisfaction of more than one of his or her Distribution Requirements.

10. PHIL 290, 311 and 390: PHIL 290 (Colloquium Series Seminar) is a standard part of the program but it does not satisfy course load requirements, nor does it meet any of the department's distribution requirements. PHIL 311 is not a standard part of the program and will count as satisfying the course load requirement only with permission of the Director of Graduate Studies. When offered, 311 normally may not be used to satisfy first distribution requirements.

It may be used to satisfy second distribution requirements only if the content of the course does not substantially replicate that of regular course offerings. The Director of Graduate Studies shall have the authority to rule on questions arising in connection with this policy. PHIL 390 (Current Research Group Seminar) does satisfy the course load requirement but does not satisfy any of the distribution requirements.

11. Application of Distribution Requirements: A student who wishes to apply a particular course to satisfaction of the Distribution Requirements in an area other than those specified by the Director of Graduate Studies has the right to appeal the decision of the Director of Graduate Studies to the full faculty of the department, whose ruling on the question will then be binding. It shall be the responsibility of the Director of Graduate Studies to monitor each student's standing and progress with regard to the satisfaction of his or her Distribution Requirements and to apprise each student of his or her current standing and progress at the time of each annual progress review.

Hi Jan,

Nancy and I would like to meet with you at some point to discuss our Community Genetics Forum project that the Parr Center is helping to sponsor. We want to bring you up to date on our activities and to make sure that we are appropriately meeting Parr Center expectations and hopes in terms of the funding we have received. We would also like to discuss possible future planning for an Adventures in Ideas seminar or some other follow up after our September colloquium days.

The best times for us to meet would be May 17 or some time the week of May 22-26. Are there any times or days in there that suit you?

PHILOSOPHY 66 SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC JUSTICE Jan Boxill

Fall 2004 Office: Caldwell 102B
Tues/Thurs 12:30-1:45 Caldwell 105 Office Hours T/W 9-11
Email: jmboxill@email.unc.edu Phone: 962-3317

The course will consist of readings and class discussions focusing on social and economic issues and their theoretical justifications. The first set of readings will examine classical political theories with a focus on justice and the common good. We will ask questions such as: What is the nature of justice? What is the justification and role of the state? What is the nature of rights? Why do we take rights seriously? Is there such a thing as "the common good"? Do the traditional theories of justice and rights accommodate everyone? The second set of readings will examine current social issues using the theories discussed. The issues we will address are: racism and sexism, affirmative action, capital punishment, business ethics, the environment. We may not, and probably will not, be able to resolve the issues, but we should at least gain a greater understanding of the issues which should serve as beginnings to possible resolutions.

GOALS FOR THIS COURSE:

1. Acquire the basic skills used by philosophers generally and thus the skills we will use in this course; tools and skills needed to appreciate, challenge, reflect, and evaluate both the ideas you have inherited and those you might yet adopt. Philosophical reflection is a matter of engaging actively with ideas. The point throughout is to help you to think clearly, and for yourselves, about positions you would otherwise adopt or reject uncritically; in other words, to give you the skills you need to enjoy intellectual autonomy. With this in mind, by the end of the semester you should be able to:
   - Reconstruct an argument from a given passage or text.
   - Critically analyze an argument presented to you, produced by you, or reconstructed by you.
   - Produce, articulate, and defend reasons for a given opinion and respond to objections raised to this opinion.

2. Gain an understanding of various theories of justice and how they help us understand the current issues in society. For the various issues we will examine, both theoretical and more concrete, you should be able to:
   - Define the important terms and concepts.
   - Gain an understanding of classical and contemporary theories of justice and rights.
   - Apply these various theories to the different issues.
   - Explain the relationship between the larger theoretical issues and the relationship between the various issues.
   - Given a specific issue, demonstrate the ability to supply reasons in favor of a certain resolution and make sure these are consistent with positions you have taken and will take on other issues.

REQUIRED TEXTS:

The Trial and Death of Socrates
The State, Justice, and the Common Good, edited by B.J. Diggs (SJCG)
Contemporary Moral Problems, edited by James E. White (CMP)
Other Readings on Reserve

CLASS REQUIREMENTS:
Keep up with announcements, assignments, outlines and notes for lectures posted on BLACKBOARD.

Assigned Readings: See Schedule
Examinations and Quizzes:
- 5 Quizzes: Dates announced in Class-likely every 2 weeks; lowest quiz will be dropped.
- Two Papers: Paper 1: 2-4 pages; Paper 2: 3-5 pages. Due dates and topics on Blackboard.
- A Comprehensive Final: Format -- Short Answer and essay Thursday, December 16, 9 a.m.

Outside Assignments: Options
1. Volunteer Service: APPLES or 8-10 hours of volunteer service for the semester with a 3-5 page analysis of your service. Submit a short paragraph for approval to begin service. Paper due last day of class. Or:
2. FOUR outside lectures, events, or articles related to the issues or theories discussed. For each you are to write a one-page (typed or handwritten) analysis/reaction giving a brief summary, your reaction and analysis, and how it is relevant to the class. DUE DATES: Two by Fall Break; Two by last day of class.

Class Participation:
Participation makes for a more enjoyable and interesting class. But further, discussion in class is crucial to understanding and reasoning. You should prepare the readings so that you will be able to answer questions about them and use the concepts they introduce.

Class Attendance: A Roll sheet will be passed around for each class.

FINAL GRADE FOR THE COURSE WILL BE DETERMINED AS FOLLOWS:

Paper #1	=15%
Paper #2	=20%
Quizzes	=15%
Outside Assignments/Attendance	=10%

Final Exam =40%

COMPREHENSIVE FINAL EXAM
THURSDAY, DECEMBER 16 at 9 a.m.

THE HONOR CODE

It shall be the responsibility of every student at UNC to obey and to support the enforcement of the Honor Code, which prohibits lying, cheating, or stealing when these actions involve academic processes or University, student, or academic personnel acting in an official capacity.

CAMPUS CODE

It shall be the further responsibility of every student to abide by the Campus Code; namely, to conduct oneself so as not to impair significantly the welfare or the educational opportunities of others in the University Community.

WHAT I EXPECT

The Honor Code is, as always, in effect in this course. The following sections explain what I expect from you in terms of meeting these standards. If you have any questions at all about these matters, please do not hesitate to ask me.

PLEDGE: The Instrument of Student Judicial Governance requires that you sign a pledge on all written work. (On my honor, I have neither given nor received unauthorized aid on this assignment.?) This includes all papers, exams, and quizzes. The first time you hand in an assignment, I expect you to write out the pledge in full. After that, you may simply write ?Pledge? and sign your name.

EXAMS AND QUIZZES: All in-class exams and quizzes in this class are to be taken without the assistance of books, notes, or other people. You may, however, study with classmates. In fact, forming study groups is an excellent way to prepare for exams.

PAPERS: As with exams and quizzes, I encourage you to discuss your papers with your classmates and anyone else, for that matter. The crucial thing to remember is that you must give citations for ideas that are not your own, whether or not those ideas have been written down somewhere. If your roommate comes up with a brilliant example and you use it in your paper, then you must cite him or her in a footnote.

Again, if you are not clear about any of this, ask questions.

Re: Nineteenth Annual Fall Orientation for TAs

As you prepare for the 2006-2007 academic year, we invite you to join us for the nineteenth annual Fall Orientation for New Graduate Teaching Assistants on Saturday, August 19, 2006, 9:30A.M. – 2:45 P.M. The orientation will he held on North Campus in a building TBA in the detailed invitation you will receive over the summer.

The Orientation brings together new TAs, experienced TAs, and faculty from across the university for workshops designed to help you prepare for your responsibilities as a teaching assistant at Carolina. After an informal continental breakfast and short welcome session, participants will meet in small group morning sessions. The morning sessions will offer concrete strategies for managing one's dual role as teacher and student, preparing for the first day of class, and planning an effective lesson. These sessions will also introduce university policies for which all instructors are responsible on issues such as the Honor Code, sexual harassment, and amorous relations. We will have our traditional pizza & animal cracker lunch after the morning session. Following lunch, there will be afternoon workshops to provide you with information and strategies that will help you as you begin your teaching role.

The Center for Teaching and Learning supports the professional development of graduate teaching assistants through a variety of programs and services, beginning with the Fall Orientation and including workshops and seminars throughout the semester, consultations on teaching, and assistance with instructional support materials. Most CTL programs are open enrollment, meaning that anyone interested/involved in teaching and learning may register to attend. Even if you are unable to attend the Orientation, please call or stop by our Wilson Library offices to let us know how we can be of assistance to you in your role as a TA.

We hope you will take advantage of this opportunity to meet your colleagues from across the university, learn about institutional policies and resources, and prepare for your important responsibilities as a graduate teaching assistant at UNC.

See you on August 19th!

PHILOSOPHY 364 Ethics and Economics

Course Description

The first part of this course will examine issues at the intersection of ethics and economics. These include: the concept of value in ethics and economics; the role of rationality in ethics and economics; the relation between values and preferences. The second part of the course will examine some central ethical concepts and their relevance to economic analysis. These concepts will include: rights; distributive justice; future generations; and the value of human life.

Aims of the Course

The primary aim of this course is to stimulate thinking about ethical concepts that are central to political economy and to economic analysis. The course should challenge students to seek a deeper understanding of some central ethical concepts and to seek a deeper understanding of both the robustness or flexibility and also the limitations of economic analyses and the applications of economic techniques to important political and policy issues.

Required Texts

Anderson, Elizabeth, Value in Ethics & Economics (Harvard University Press)
Broome, John, Ethics out of Economics (Cambridge University Press)
Hausman, Dan & Michael McPherson, Economic Analysis and Moral Philosophy (Cambridge University Press)
Sen, Amartya, On Ethics & Economics (Basil Blackwell)

Supplementary Texts

Haslett, D.W., Capitalism & Morality (Oxford University Press)
Nagel, Thomas & Liam Murphy, The Myth of Ownership (Oxford University Press)

Course Requirements

Three short (3-5 page) papers that analyze and evaluate the arguments in the readings.
One class presentation based on one of the short papers.
One longer (7-10 page) paper that explains and defends a position on one of the central themes of the course.
Final Exam: Comprehensive

Class participation will count toward the final grade

Schedule of Topics

Part I: Central Concepts

Value

Readings: Anderson (selections)
Sen
Broome, "Incommensurable Values"

Rationality

Readings: Anderson (selections)
A. Sen, "Rational Fools"

Hi Geoff,
Sorry, I thought I had edited the things to be consistent. I wouldn't have sent you it this messed up!!
I think I have the TA assignment form correct.
That thing that pops up by some of the assignments on the Fall Schedule is something that Susan had. I'm using the excel that she sent and am modifying it. I don't know how to get rid of what she had there!
Nena: I agree, and that is what I told her. If i move her back to Phil 34, then I would put Sven to TA for Bernie.
I would add a third TA to Bernie's class and increase it to 150, but there is no room large enough at that time.
I could increase Doug's environmental ethics to 100 and have Margo TA for that-- it was her 5th choice.

If Margo teaches her own class, i would have to add a PHIL 22. If Nena taught her own 34, then it too would have to be added. So there is no extra course waiting to be assigned an instructor.

I'll call shortly.

Subject:	INFORMATIONAL: Recruiting healthy volunteers for research study

Healthy volunteers are needed for a UNC research study using a FDA-approved drug. The study consists of three 20 minute outpatient visits over 24-36 hours to the UNC general clinical research center (GCRC). You will donate blood during these visits. Volunteers will earn $100 for completing the study.

In order to participate you must:
* Be a male or non-pregnant female.
* Be 18-50 years of age
* NOT have a history or diagnosis of any significant medical condition.
* NOT have taken any prescription drug within 30 days of the study, or over-the-counter medications or herbal products (excluding vitamin supplements) within two weeks of the study.
* NOT have a history of alcohol abuse or use of illicit drugs.
* NOT have a history of tobacco use within the last year.

How to participate:
* e-mail pkstudy@unc.edu
* If you decide to participate, you will be asked to spend approximately 15 minutes to answer a few questions over the phone.
* If you meet the pre-screening criteria we will schedule a one hour screening visit at the GCRC.

Study title: CYP2B6 Genotype-Phenotype and the Influence of Sex and Ethnicity Study number: GCRC#2430
Approved by Biomedical IRB 4/28/06

This course explores ethical questions that arise in the health care professions, such as those concerning patients' right to information and to refuse treatment, confidentiality, informed consent, abortion, euthanasia, physician assisted suicide, genetic screening, stem cell research, cloning, and experimentation with human subjects. Major ethical theories are used as a framework for the discussion. With respect to the issues in each topic we will consider how to apply a particular ethical perspective to each one and then discuss how well it answers important ethical questions. An important aim of the course is to help each student better understand his or her own point of view and its implications, as well as views that are opposed to their own.

TEXTS: (1) Contemporary Issues in BIOETHICS, Wadsworth, sixth edition, edited by Tom L Beauchamp and LeRoy Walters. Abbreviated CIB in the reading list below. WRITTEN WORK FOR THE SEMESTER

1. BLUEBOOK HOUR QUIZ, Monday, Sep. 23 Questions for discussion about issues and cases. A brief study guide will be provided. (Counts 20% of grade).

2. FIRST OUTSIDE DISCUSSION PAPER. Due Friday, Oct. 25 in discussion section. (Counts 20% of grade.)
A written discussion based upon questions assigned earlier by instructor to be prepared outside of class and turned in by class time. No more than 5 typed, double-spaced pages. Typed or computer printed, with a minimum of 1" margin for comments. Fasten the pages together with a staple (best) or paper clip (not loose sheets). As insurance against loss be sure to keep a copy or draft. Ample time will be given to prepare your papers, so no late papers accepted without a satisfactory explanation being given to your section leader and the express permission of your section leader.

3. SECOND OUTSIDE DISCUSSION PAPER. Due Friday, Nov. 22. The requirements for the First Paper apply to this one as well. (Counts 25% of grade).

4. FINAL EXAMINATION. Monday, Dec. 9, 12:00 Noon. This will cover the material of the course, with emphasis on issues that have not been featured in earlier writing assignments. A study guide will be distributed to help you prepare for the final examination. The final is required of everyone, including those taking the course Pass/Fail. (Counts 35% of grade.) BRING BLUEBOOKS.

GROUND RULES

Each student must be assigned to a recitation section. Regular attendance at lecture and recitation is expected, and can make a difference in our final assessment of your grade for the course. In lecture the instructor will explain the significance of the overheads included in your course packet and link them to the relevant readings. The lectures will put the readings into a context designed to make the issues easier to understand and to show how the articles relate to one another. Because of the large size of the class, group discussion in lecture will necessarily be limited. Questions can be asked during the lecture presentation. Recitation sections offer you an opportunity to discuss the issues and to ask questions. Participation in the sections meetings is crucial to your getting all you should from the course. Brief quizzes may be given in recitation sections.

Each assignment must be completed in timely fashion to pass the course. This also applies to anyone taking the course Pass/Fail. If for any reason you cannot meet a deadline for an assignment, please discuss this as soon as possible with Prof. Long or your TA. Do not expect to hand papers in for credit at the end of the course. Do not expect to make up written work that you have missed earlier in the term in a rush just before the final examination. It will count as a zero by then, which is less than an F on an assignment. Pick up work that has been graded so that you know where you stand as the semester progresses. If you have any question about your grade or whether or not you have received credit for work turned in, be sure to check with your assigned teaching assistant.

There are useful guides to the writing of philosophy papers for this course in the Course Pack, Readings 16 and 17. Despite what you may learn in some English writing classes, you may use the first-person singular pronoun to refer to yourself as you express and defend your beliefs. However, you should also keep in mind that announcing what you "feel" about a topic is not particularly persuasive as formal argumentation. Keep your attention focused primarily on facts, on principles that seem to have general applicability, on obligations that are rooted in our various relations to one another, and on important connections between what is of value to human beings and permissible human actions.

Plan to take the quiz and final at the announced times--not at special times.
Office hours for Prof. Long and his assistants will be announced early in the course. Take advantage of those times to answer any questions you may have and to get to know the people presenting the course. We want to be as helpful as possible, but you must also help us to know what your needs and problems are. All of our offices are in Caldwell Hall. Prof. Long's office is 201A on the northeast corner of the second floor of Caldwell Hall. His office phone is (962-3312). Email: dlong@email.unc.edu

COURSE WEB SITE

The course has a Blackboard site on which various announcements, assignments, discussion questions, Web links, and opportunities for discussion will be posted. It is also useful for two-way email communications between instructors and students. The site can be reached at http://blackboard.unc.edu. On that page you will find a portal to course site for Bioethics Phil034002. You can get into the site by submitting your Onyen (name) and your password.

HONOR CODE

The Honor Code is in effect at all times in the course. The first time you hand in an assignment you should include the pledge and sign it. "On my honor, I have neither given nor received unauthorized aid on this assignment." After that first assignment, you may subsequently write "Honor Pledge" and sign it. Keep in mind that it means the same thing ethically as the full statement. All in-class exams and quizzes are to be taken without the assistance of books, notes, or other people. All written work that you hand in should represent your own best work. However, you may study with classmates and discuss your paper ideas with them, or with anyone else who might be of help. That is an appropriate way for you to learn the material and to think about the issues we cover. It is useful to discuss and try out philosophical ideas with other people in any case. However, you should give credit for any ideas that are not your own, whether they come from written sources or from others with whom you have spoken. (Even as unlikely a source as your roommate.) In such cases you get credit for seeing the relevance of the idea and applying it to your discussion. Quoting sentences or paragraphs from other books and articles or the Web without giving your source is plagiarism, which is not just an honor code violation. It represents intellectual dishonesty. It goes without saying that turning in papers copied from other students or from online is academic evil and warrants severe penalties. You may give citations in the text of your paper rather than in footnotes. For instance, after a quotation from our text you may put the reference in parenthesis. Examples: (CIB, Brody 215) or (READING 4, p. 2.)

PHILOSOPHY 280 Morality and Law
Outline of Topics and Readings
Course_Outline_SP04.doc (33280 Bytes)

Course Description

In this course we will explore a number of issues at the intersection of law and morality. To begin we consider the idea that law has some claim on our allegiance, that it is not only prudent to do what law requires of us, but that we have a moral obligation to do so. As we probe this question we will encounter the concept of the Rule of Law, according to which there is some moral value in a society's being governed by law (rather than by men/women) but that this also makes certain strengent demands on what law may properly do. This line of thought seems to be challenged, however, by the sad but obvious fact that law is capable of being outrageously unjust. How is the law's claim to moral value of some sort to be squared with its potential for doing horrendous injustice?

In the next two sections of the course we explore broad moral notions presupposed in the discussion of the first section, in particular the notions or values of liberty, individual rights, and justice. What limits value of liberty place one the scope of law's intervention in our ordinary lives? Is it just to use law to enforce standards of morality? How could it be? Isn't imposing our standards on them? How could it not be? If law cannot enforce morality, what possibly could it "enforce"?

What does justice require anyway? In particular, does justice require of law that it treat everyone equally? What does this involve? Is this requirement respected or is it violated by attempts to undo long decades of systematic oppression and discrimination by devices of affirmative action? On a different matter: when are we required in the name of justice to compensate for this injuries or losses we inflict on others? Finally, is the intentional infliction of pain and harm on another person consistent with justice? If it's "punishment" for a wrong done? When, if ever, is punishment justified?

Course Format

This course will meet Mondays and Wednesday at 11am in plenary session for lecture and (to the extent permitted by a class of 100 students) discussion. On Fridays, smaller discussion sections will meet, some at 11am some at 12 noon. YOU MUST BE ENROLLED IN A DISCUSSION SECTION TO TAKE THIS COURSE. No one will be permitted to continue this course if he or she is not enrolled in a Friday discussion section.

Course Goals

1. Develop confidence and skill in reasoning with others about important moral issues.
2. Improve skills of oral and written communication.
3. Develop and refine analytical and critical reading skills.
4. Gain an appreciation for philosophical thinking, analysis, and for critical and constructive argument.
5. Deepen understanding of ways in which law and justice intersect and influence each other.

Textbook and Readings

The textbook for this course is:
Joel Feinberg and Jules Coleman, PHILOSOPHY OF LAW (7th edition). You can purchase this book at the student stores.

There will be a considerable amount of additional reading outside of the textbook. All these readings will be available on this website.

Course Requirements

1. ATTENDANCE is mandatory. Attendance will be taken each day (including in sections). Five percent of the grade will be determined by level of attendance and participation in class. There is no way that you can have any clue about what this course is about unless you attend the classes. The "textbook" is merely a collection of readings--the starting point for analysis and discussion, raw materials. It does not provide the "information" you need to know for the course. You will do well in this course only if you can do well as we proceed through analysis and discussion of these materials.

2. READINGS AND REGULAR ASSIGNMENTS. Readings will be assigned for each regular lecture class (and some discussion sections). You must take careful, analytical notes on these readings. With these notes in hand, you will be prepared to participate in the discussion. Without them you will be immediately lost. Study questions will often be assigned and sometimes your written responses to these study questions will be collected at the end of the lecture hour.

3. PAPERS: one short (2-3 page) paper and two medium-length (7-10 page) papers will be assigned.

4. EXAMINATIONS: There will be a mid-term exam and a final exam for this class. Both will be in-class.

MID-TERM EXAM: FEBRUARY 23
FINAL EXAM: APRIL 26, NOON

Grading

Attendance/participation: 5%
First short paper: 5%
Second and Third medium-length papers: 20% each
Mid-term exam: 20%
Final exam: 30%

Honor System

Honorcode.doc (22528 Bytes)

All work done for this course is governed by the UNC INSTRUMENT OF STUDENT GOVERNANCE. Attached is a document that sets out the instructor's understanding of academic integrity as it applies to work in this course. Each student must read, sign, and hand in this document.

Note: This outline of topics and readings is tentative. We will try to keep close to it, but it is likely that adjustments will have to be made to accommodate the pace of class discussion. Changes will be announced well in advance in class and on the website at https://blackboard.unc.edu. [Spring 2004 Morality And Law.phil041.001]

Hi Jan -- got your message and am already familiar with Troy and his work. I had suggested to Barbra in the genomics project that we bring him in this fall as our part of the program. It does make sense for us to partner with the Parr Center, although you recommended the spring. Is this your preference? We could probably work with that but we were going to make him our diaspora lecturer for fall '06.

we could work with the spring date if we can get another person to come in for the fall -- you might be interested in this person as well and she is another scholar speaking on the issue of genetics and African-American and other communities of color. I'll call when I get back tomorrow to see what you prefer. But we are in either way!

Best

Scientific and Folk Perspectives on Heredity

Good afternoon. Id like to thank the ladies of Zeta Phi Beta for organizing this very important conference. It is a significant step toward educating the community about the Human Genome Project so that the people can maximally benefit from this major endeavor.

Molecular genetics is having an impact on virtually all aspects of life. Ive been asked to speak today briefly on the topic of scientific and fold perspectives on heredity. This is, of course, a huge subject. What scientific and folk perspectives both have in common, however, is that that are both rooted in preexisting integrated sociocultural constructs.

Scientific insights have a folk background and folk perspectives often have some element of scientific veracity to them. My own training is at the interface of biology and anthropology, of the study of (biological) scientific perspectives and the study of folk perspectives. I am at that interface identified earlier by Dr. Patrinos that promises to yield great insights well into the 21st century.

[joke about still waiting to get 2 salaries for being trained in two fields]

This afternoon we have seen visual depictions of what can go wrong when the genetic information is not faithfully replicated within an individual or between parents and their children. Dr. Pelias has presented this aspect of variation in vivid detail and yet what you have seen is just the tip of the iceberg. Every human group has its share of variation and diversity. Some of this variation will be pathological, as you have seen in the previous speakers slides, while most of the variation with a group will be nonpathological. This latter diversity will not significantly make a difference in ones health or well being. It is simply "noise."

Distinguishing between pathological and nonpathological genetic variation is very difficult without linking particular genetic sequences to specific morphological changes. We are still a long way from understanding these relationships as it is clearly not the case that having an unusual gene automatically mean production of a defective protein and expression of a clinically significant condition. As Dr. Dunston referred to in her presentation this morning, the new molecular genetics is forcing us to rethink many of the old models. We are moving away from linear thinking and away from binary approaches. Molecular genetics is forcing us to think in new, integrative ways.

Tremendous variation exists among African Americans. This variation, which has historical and ecological roots, lay the foundation for the unique insights, inclusive thinking, and increased tolerance that characterizes many African American cultures. Our perspectives on heredity are shaped by historical forces such as the "one drop rule" that meant having only one African ancestor among many non-African ancestors still mandated that one was African American. Our perspectives on heredity are shaped by the diversity of African and non-African (European and Native American) ethnic groups that are part of our ancestral gene pool. Diversity in African origins, in particular, has increased our social and cultural tendency toward inclusiveness and away from exclusiveness.

It is not surprising then that African Americans have tended to view exclusiveness as a step toward disenfranchisement. While African American perspectives do not substitute for other groups, African American insights regarding genetics are important because African Americans have so frequently been the victims of "science" and "quasi-genetic inquiries."

My purpose this afternoon is to give you a population perspective, a cross-cultural orientation to the discussion. African American responses are extremely critical because our responses have tended to highlight areas that remain underemphasized by most academic bioethicists (whose values tend to reflect the folk and scientific perspectives of North Atlantic European Americans.) Academic ethicists have traditionally focused on the individual while African Americans have tended to focus on society and community. Dr. Murray, whom you heard from this morning, has made outstanding contributions in introducing African American-centered ethics and population thinking to the historical examination of sickle cell anemia.

[Give example of group vs. individual dilemma as exemplified in the recent tennis competition of the Williams sisters and the questions posed by the media to the winning sister.]

Regarding the Human Genome Project, African Americans were among the first to call for representative sampling. Dr. Dunston was among the early proponents of the inclusion of African American derived genetic sequences in the template for the Human Genome. Back in the early days of the Human Genome Project, Dr. Dunston and I were afraid that the absence of African Americans from the baseline genes for the Human Genome Project could produce binary models with the potential to concretize an official "human norm". This model would not only represent only a narrow slice of our diverse species, it could end up designation normal African American variation (that fell outside the narrow "norm") as pathological, defective, and in need of genetic remediation.

African American concerns are not a proxy for other ethnic and regional groups, yet they (African American perspectives and issues) serve as an invaluable window into some of the problems associated with American biomedicine. Some of American biomedicine has definitely been part of the "dark side" as Dr. Patrinos spoke of.

In January 1994, a small group of African Americans met to put together a Manifesto on Genomic Studies among African Americans. The six key points on this Manifesto are presented in the handout I brought for your review. This is a recent publication of mine entitled "African American Responses to the Human Genome Project." There are extra copies of this paper on the back table and here are a few reprints up here as well.

African Americans were not the only non-European peoples concerned with the Human Genome Project and will to produce a Manifesto in response. However, unlike the Manifestos of other groups (mainly Native American and other indigenous groups), African Americans were the only groups asking for inclusion in genomic diversity studies. We were asking for the engagement of African Americans at all levels of the research process. We were asking for reciprocity and a genomic research program that would address meaningful health and educational goals among African Americans.

We were not blind in 1994 and we are not blind now to the fact that groups, whose sequences are not represented in the Human Genome Project, are not part of the baseline template, and will not be addressed by the emerging field of pharmacogenomics. Intervention is the real reason for the Human Genome Project. Those missing African American sequences will not be considered by the big pharmaceutical companies intent on making commercial drugs linked to specific genotypes. This morning, a gentleman in the audience asked whose genome is being sequenced and this was treated as a trivial question. It was not and it is not trivial. It matters very much who comprises the Human Genome Project sampling base because these sequences will become the template for pharmacogenomics, toxicogenomics, and other new applied scientific fields dependent upon a sequenced human genome. The mission of the Human Genome Project was never just to sequence an "average" human genome. As I have pointed out many times in my publications, the Human Genome Project was sold to the U.S. Congress as a worthwhile and fundable project because of its direct implications for applied science. To state otherwise is to misrepresent the actual intent of the project. Believe me, the U.S. Congress is not paying for "science for the sake of science."

When we compare the position of African Americans as articulated by the Manifesto with the manifestos developed by other peoples around the world, we see other important differences. Our Manifesto call for the establishment of a National Review Panel a watchdog organization to monitor genetic research to increase the probability that the genetic research conducted on African Americans is consistent with the needs of the African American community. For some outside our community, the idea of being monitored is disturbing. My position is that self-definition and self-control is (respectively) our right and our responsibility. We must educate ourselves about this project so that we can demand of it the information that it is capable of generating. Again, this is one more reason that this conference is so important.

Over the years, as an outside observer of the Human Genome Project, I have noted some important trends that we, as a people, should keep in mind as we seek to understand and have impact on this mega project. The Human Genome Project is a story with a rich and long history. The project is continually transforming and redefining itself in response to external pressures and events. Here are some points I' like all of us to keep in mind as we reflect on the presentations already given and those that will follow mine.

1. Genomic studies can be analyzed at many different levels. Things that are true at the molecular level do not necessarily translate into public health issues. We have to be able to distinguish what genetic variation is an important health concern for the group and what is an important individual health concern and what is just "noise in the system."
2. Inclusiveness cannot be assumed at any stage in the scientific endeavor. Exclusiveness is often the rule in American biomedicine and the pattern of sampling often reflects power relationships. For this mega project to reflect our concerns and priorities, we must make the demand for, as the great orator and abolitionist Frederick Douglass once said, "Power concedes nothing without demand, it never has and it never will"
3. Representativeness (in the Human Genome Project database or otherwise) is not guaranteed by shared financial backing or even clear scientific merit. Scientists are products of their culture. If the culture (which is driven by folk perspectives) does not mandate the inclusion of Black people, then the science generated by members of that culture will not necessarily consider including African American genetic sequences either. For example, consider the case of Celera. Celera, in its race with the Human Genome Project to sequence the human genome, relied on only one individual sequenced three times. Representativeness was clearly not even a consideration! Science is full of imbedded cultural assumptions. Sometimes (actually quite often) folk perspectives drive scientific interpretations. The only way that I know to get around this is to increase the number of "others" doing science. Cross-cultural, multi-ethnic, interdisciplinary dialogue is essential to get around the bias that all of us have.
4. Open competition and private enterprise (associated with the "race to sequence") can have some beneficial effects and can encourage a certain clarity of purpose. As long as there is no competition, the real purposes of mega efforts often become clear. Remember from your geometry, it takes two points to make a line. This competition has allowed us, on the outside, to see more clearly which direction molecular genetics is headed.
5. Institutions often misrepresent themselves when under scrutiny. This is why we need to be engaged as a people in the Human Genome Project and any other project that demands so many resources from all of us. Our engagement can help keep everybody honest and our presence at the table can keep our issues on the research and policy agenda.
6. Finally, we should realize that even highly touted mega projects like the Human Genome Project can make omissions and can shift directions. For years, Dr. Dunston has lobbied our colleagues in both the Human Genome Diversity Project and the Human Genome Project to include African American sequences in their baseline databases. These efforts were not successful at this level, but they did secure the investment, at Howard University, of a National Genome Center that promises to make our issues and our concerns a priority.

Human variation is a paradox. We are diverse, but often not in the ways that we imagine. There is fundamental diversity within our subspecies, but there is also overwhelming essential unity. To suggest that we share 99% of our genes with chimpanzees misses the point. We share 26% of our genes with petunias! All life on this planet is interconnected and shows the signature of a single Creator God. Our task in the 21st century will be to try to understand what both the diversity and similarity of each of us means. We will need the new technological tools of functional genomics and interaction biology but we will also nee fresh perspectives. I believe that these perspectives will benefit from African American insights, honed over generations of overcoming disenfranchisement.

Thank you.

Hi Sarah,
Yeah--this was a really bad quiz!!!
I'm attaching the final quiz. Can you take a quick look and let me know if you think it is too easy for a take home quiz.

Thanks,

Final quiz. I changed the last question, as I figured the English/Moulton essays were included in the last quiz. I've attached it again. I want to put it on blackboard--you think it is okay?

Sarah,
Stop grading them for now. Using notes is okay, but we did warn them not just to cut and paste. Is anyone giving any kind of argument? Or is it just the copying. I have a few on email; I'll take a look at them to see how they are.

MEMORANDUM

TO: All Teaching Faculty

FROM: Senora DeCosta, Assistant University Registrar

DATE: June 19, 2006

RE: First Summer Session Grades

Enclosed are the Official Class Rolls and Grade Reports for First Summer Session 2006. These reports are due at the Office of the University Registrar, 105 Hanes Hall, no later than 72 hours after the scheduled time of the final examination. (See due dates below)

Compliance with the 72 hour deadline is important as it enables us to reliably determine academic eligibility information to report to school Deans. This enables them to assess whether or not a student may continue enrollment for the next term.

To facilitate the timely receipt and entering of grades, please follow these guidelines for returning Official Class Rolls and Grade Reports to the Office of the University Registrar:

- Exams scheduled on Monday, June 19 are due by 5:00 PM on Thursday, June 22
  Exams scheduled on Tuesday, June 20 are due by 4:00 PM on Friday, June 23

  Courses that do not have final examinations are due by 5:00 PM on Thursday, June 22

- When the Office of the University Registrar is closed, you may deposit your grade roll(s) in the GRADE ROLL DROP BOX located in the panel next to the west-facing (handicapped-access) door of Hanes Hall. This is the end of the building closest to Carroll Hall.

- The Report For Assignment Of Temporary Grade Of AB Or IN To Undergraduates can be found on-line at:
  http://regweb.unc.edu/resources/ab_report_form.pdf.

- Use only black or dark blue ink when completing and signing grade rolls. Adherence to this request is imperative, as pencil markings and other colors of ink do not duplicate very clearly. We must be able to microfilm our grade rolls for permanent storage and reference.

- Every registered student must have an appropriate grade designation (no blanks). If a student did not show up for the final examination or has not been attending classes, a grade of "AB" or "FA" must be assigned. Do not line through the name of a student you believe is not registered for your class. Assign that student an "AB" grade. This is the only action that will be recognized by our office. Nor should you write in the name of a student that you believe to be registered for your class. Appropriate actions will be taken when our office receives the official form governing the situation. Only a Post-Semester Registration/Drop/Add Form can remove or add a student to a course after the Official Roll & Grade Reports have been generated for the semester.

- Even if you know an undergraduate student has elected to take your course under the PS/D+/D/F option, you must assign the regular appropriate letter grade for their performance. The computerized grade table will convert grades of "C-" or better to "PS".

Refer to Registrar Procedures Memorandum (RPM) No. 24, for university grading policies and grade definitions at (http://regweb.unc.edu/resources/rpm24.php). Listed below are some tips and definitions to help you determine the appropriate grades to assign.

- All courses numbered 99 and below should use the undergraduate grading system, i.e., A, A-, B+, .., D, F.

- Grades assigned in courses numbered 100 through 199 depend upon the individual student classification. Students with undergraduate classifications should be assigned grades using the undergraduate grading system. Please do not use + and – for any graduate student grade. Pluses (+) and minuses (-) are not valid for H, P, L grades. This consumes an extraordinary amount of time for our staff to mark through every incorrect + or – on the grade roll, before it can be sent to data entry. If you are assigning a graduate grade and would like to make note on the grade roll of a plus (+) or minus (-) associated with the grade, use the "Remarks" column. Please use the following classification tables to help you determine the appropriate assignment of grades.

Undergraduate Classifications:

FR	Freshman
SO	Sophomore
JR	Junior
SR	Senior
FYR	Fifth Year (Pharmacy)
SPU	Special Undergraduate Non-degree
II	Inter-Institutional
SDS	Special Degree Seeking and Off-Campus Nursing Program
FX	Foreign Exchange

Graduate & Professional Classifications:

GD	Grad Doctoral
GM	Grad Masters
GPM	Grad Post Masters
GMD	Grad Masters then Doctoral
GPD	Grad Post Doctoral
SPG	Special Graduate Non-degree
1st	First Year MBA or Professional
2nd	Second Year MBA or Professional
3rd	Third Year Professional
4th	Fourth Year Professional
II	Inter-Institutional
FX	Foreign Exchange
SPP	Professional Non-degree
SDS	Currently used for Off-Campus Professional Pharmacy Program

Note: The classifications that start with "SP" (SPU, SPG, SPP) are used for non-degree students. Classifications that start with "G" (GD, GM, GMD, GPM, GPD) are graduate classifications. Classifications II and FX can be used for undergraduate or graduate students. Also, Continuing Studies post baccalaureate students (CS, SPG) are allowed to choose either the undergraduate or graduate grading system in courses numbered 100 through 199 for grade assignments. The student is supposed to inform the instructor at the beginning of classes as to their choice of grading system.

- The "FA" grade is assigned when an undergraduate student did not attend the final examination, and could not pass the course regardless of performance on the exam. This would be appropriate for an undergraduate student that never attended the course or has excessive absences in the course, as well as missing the exam.

- The "AB" grade is assigned when the student did not attend the final examination, and there is the possibility that the student could pass the course if the exam was taken. The "AB" is computed as an "F" grade in an undergraduate student's GPA. For undergraduate students, an "AB" grade is changed automatically to an "F*" if the grade is not cleared by the end of the next regular semester. For graduate students, an "AB" will revert to an "F*" (administratively assigned grade) if the grade is not cleared within one year from the original examination.

- The "IN" grade is assigned when the student took the final examination but did not complete some other course requirement. The student could pass the course if the assignment was completed. The "IN" is computed as an "F" grade in an undergraduate student's GPA. For undergraduate students, an "IN" is changed automatically to an "F*" if the grade is not cleared by eight weeks into the next regular semester. For graduate students, an "IN" will revert to an "F*" (administratively assigned grade) if the grade is not cleared within one year from the original examination.

- The "SP" grade is assigned for undergraduate students participating in the first course(s) of an approved departmental Undergraduate Honors Program. The Honors Program usually runs for the duration of at least two semesters (Junior and/or Senior Honors/Research). A final permanent grade is not assigned until completion of the second and/or final course. When the final permanent grade is assigned for an Honors Program, any previously assigned grade(s) of "SP" must be changed to the appropriate permanent letter grade by an Official Grade Change Form.

  Note: "IN" and "AB" are temporary grades that can be reported on the Official Class Roll and Grade Report or on an Official Grade Change Form. Instructors can change temporary grades to permanent grades by completing the Official Grade Change Form within the specified deadlines. Once a grade has been changed to an "F*", a dean's signature is also required on the Official Grade Change Form.

For any questions about this material, you may contact me at senora@unc.edu or 962-0495. Thank you.

When Completing Grade Rolls:

- Deadlines for receiving grades in Registrar's Office

  Exams scheduled on Monday, June 19 are due by 5:00 PM on Thursday, June 22

  Exams scheduled on Tuesday, June 20 are due by 4:00 PM on Friday, June 23

  No Final exam -- Thursday, June 22

- Grade Roll Checklist

  - ✓ Leave no student ungraded
  - ✓ Do not line through or add students
  - ✓ Use blue or black ink only
  - ✓ A dedicated workstation is available to receive your Grade Rolls
  - ✓ For after-hours delivery use the Drop Box located at the end of the building nearest Carroll Hall

Bill,
You are so right. I hadn't corrected my spread sheet to reflect his being DGS last year. Jay taught the 6F in his place--maybe we should look at Jay for this. He taught a FYS Spring 05 and Spring 06. I think he would be eligible.

Hi Jan,

Wow, those all sound fantastic, especially Consciousness and Human Nature (because I'll be doing moral stuff with Joshua). I'd be thrilled to teach either, because I'm writing about both topics right now. I don't have a strong preference, so you could let curricular needs decide. If you'd like me to decide, I'm marginally more inclined to human nature, because I think the topic is more important.

Re timing, I'd marginally prefer one session a week because I think it would facilitate discussion and class exercises, but two sessions is fine as well. Whatever works.

Thanks again, Jan. I'm very excited!

PHILOSOPHY 21: Fall 2002 QUIZ #4

USE YOUR OWN PAPER AND BE SURE TO LEGIBLY PUT YOUR NAME ON IT.

DERIVATIONS:

1. $(A \vee E) \supset (B \supset C)$ Derive: $A \supset C$
   $B & D$

2. $A \equiv (B \& C)$ Derive: $A \supset E$
   $B \supset D$
   $(D \& C) \supset E$

3. $B \equiv \sim A$ Derive: A
   $B \supset (D \& C)$
   $D \supset A$

QUIZ # 6: TAKE HOME

DUE: IN CLASS THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 14
NO LATE QUIZZES ACCEPTED

SYMBOLIZE THE FOLLOWING ARGUMENT AND THEN DO A DERIVATION. YOU MAY USE THE RULES IN SD AND SD+
Please use lined paper, and make sure your writing is legible. If I can't read it I can't grade it.

If Saddam doesn't disarm and it is not the case that both Japan and England support the United States; then Japan won't support the US, if China does. It is not the case that both Japan and England support the US, and neither does Russia. England supports the US only if France does. Saddam won't disarm unless Japan and England support the US. But if it is not the case that both England and Japan support the US, then either China or England does. So, either Japan won't support the US or France does.

Use the following scheme of abbreviations:

D: Saddam disarms
E: England supports the US
F: France supports the US
J: Japan supports the US
R: Russia supports the US
S: China supports the US

PHILOSOPHY 21: Fall 2002 NAME: _____
QUIZ #7

I. Symbolize the following in PL:

UD:	People
Fx:	x is female	a: Anne
Mx:	x is male	b: Bob
Txy:	x is taller than y	c: Carol
Lxy:	x loves y	d: David

1. Anne is female.

2. Bob and David are male, while Anne and Carol are females.

3. Bob is taller than Carol, but not taller than David.

4. If David loves Anne and Anne loves Bob, then Anne doesn't love David.

5. Bob is taller than Anne, who is taller than Carol; but David is taller than everyone only if Carol is not taller than Bob.

II. Symbolize the following in PL:

UD:	People
Fx:	x is female	a: Anne
Mx:	x is male	b: Bob
Ox:	x is mortal	c: Carol
Lx:	x is a mammal	d: David

6. Everyone is mortal.

7. No one is not mortal.

8. Females are all mortal, but not all mortals are female.

9. There are some mortal males, but there are some mortals who are not males.

10. If all females and males are mortal, then if Anne and Carol are females, and Bob and David are males, then each of them is mortal.

BONUS: (2 points) Symbolize the following and clearly indicate your scheme of abbreviations. UD: is the universe

If it is raining, then everyone should have an umbrella; but if it is not raining, then no one should have an umbrella unless the sun is shining brightly.

PHILOSOPHY 21: FINAL EXAM F02 NAME: _____

PUT ALL WORK IN BLUE BOOKS

MULTIPLE CHOICE: (2 points each)

1. A valid argument:
   - a: must have a true conclusion.
   - b. cannot have a false conclusion
   - c. may have a false conclusion
   - d. none of the above

2. A sound argument:
   - a. must have a true conclusion.
   - b. cannot be invalid
   - c. must have all true premises
   - d. all of the above

3. An argument with a False conclusion
   - a. must be invalid
   - b. may be sound
   - c. may be valid
   - d. none of the above.

4. If a set of sentences is logically consistent, it:
   - a. can have a logically false sentence in the set.
   - b. must have a logically true sentence in the set.
   - c. cannot have any logically indeterminate sentences in the set.
   - d. none of the above.

5. From the formula ~(A v B), using DeMorgans Rule you can infer:
   - a. ~(A & B)
   - b. ~A & ~B
   - c. ~A v ~B
   - d. all of the above

6. If A=T and B=F, state whether each of the following is true, false, or indeterminate (5 points)

   a. A ≡ B

   b. B ~ C

   c. C A

   d. B v C

   e. (A & ~B) ~(~A C)

II. TRUTH TABLES: Do all work in BLUE BOOK.

1. Explain the procedure in using truth tables, and the theory behind the procedure. Use an example to support your explanation.

2. Using a truth table (either complete or shortened), determine whether each of the following is valid or invalid. Be clear in your demonstration.

   A. A C
      B ≡ C

   B. (A & ~ B) A
      ~(A v C) ~A & ~C

$\underline{\sim B}$
$\sim A$

$\underline{(A \& B) \equiv (B \& A)}$
$A \& B \equiv \sim(A \& B)$

III. USING THE FOLLOWING SCHEME OF ABBREVIATIONS SYMBOLIZE THE FOLLOWING:

P:	Patriotism is a virtue	Q:	Iraq is defying the United Nations
S:	John supports the President	R:	John is patriotic
T:	John is virtuous.

1. Either John supports the President or John is not virtuous, unless patriotism is a virtue.
2. John is patriotic if and only if he supports the President.
3. Either John is virtuous, if he supports the President, or he patriotism is not a virtue; but John doesn't support the President
4. If patriotism is a virtue and Iraq is defying the United Nations, then John, who does not support the President is not patriotic nor is he virtuous.
5. Iraq is not defying the United Nations; however, assuming that it is, John is patriotic, supports the President, and is virtuous only if patriotism is a virtue.

IV. DERIVATIONS IN SL/SL+ -- You may use the derivation and replacement rules.

1. Do a derivation of the valid argument in II.

2.
$\sim A \vee \sim B$
$C \quad A$
$\sim B \quad \sim C$
$\underline{C \vee D}$

3.
$B \vee M$
$B \quad C$
$(M \quad G) \& (G \quad Z)$
$\underline{(E \vee R) \equiv (\sim C \& \sim Z)}$
$E \quad \sim K$

V. SYMBOLIZE THE FOLLOWING IN PL USING THE SCHEME OF ABBREVIATIONS:

UD: The Universe

Ax:	x is an animal.	Bxy:	x is better than y.
Cx:	x is a cat.	Dx:	x is a dog.
Lxy:	x loves y.	a:	Alice	b: Bob

1. All cats and dogs are animals.
2. Alice loves cats and Bob loves dogs, provided that not all animals are dogs.
3. No dogs are not animals; moreover cats are animals if and only if dogs are animals.
4. Some animals are cats, and some animals are not dogs; but Alice loves some animals only if they are cats.
5. Alice loves Bob only if Bob loves cats; however, Alice does not love Bob unless Bob is better than all cats.

VI. DERIVATIONS IN PREDICATE LOGIC.

TRUTH FUNCTIONAL CONNECTIVES

A connective is truth functional if and only if we can tell the truth value of the whole sentence given the truth value of its component parts.

DEFINITIONS

Given this feature we can DEFINE a truth-functional connective by defining how the truth value of the parts determines the truth value of the whole, as follows:

Atomic sentences		Negation	Conjunction	Disjunction	Conditional	Biconditional
P	Q	~P	P & Q	P v Q	P ⊃ Q	P ≡ Q
T	T	F	T	T	T	T
T	F	F	F	T	F	F
F	T	T	F	T	T	F
F	F	T	F	F	T	T

A truth table provides an automatic procedure for telling whether a complex sentence is true or false given the truth value of its parts. Examining the table we can see that:

A CONJUNCTION is true if and only if both conjuncts are true.
A DISJUNCTION is true if and only if at least one of the disjuncts is true.
A CONDITIONAL is true so long as the antecedent isn't true and the consequent false.
I.e. a conditional is FALSE only when the antecedent is true, AND the consequent is false; it is true otherwise.
A BICONDITIONAL is true if and only if both components have the same truth value.
A NEGATION is true if and only if the sentence negated is false.

CONSTRUCTING TRUTH TABLES:

Truth tables provide a way of assessing validity, consistence, logical truth, logical falsity, logical equivalence. WE can only construct truth tables for truth-functional sentences. In constructing a truth table, we show whether the sentence under consideration is true or false for every possible truth value of its atomic components. It will be important in constructing the truth table to make sure we have accounted for every possible assignment of truth values to the atomic sentences.

There is an easy way to account for every possible assignment:

First, write each atomic sentence at the top in alphabetical order. Count the number of atomic sentences.
Second, the number of rows should equal 2 (T/F) to the "n" power, where "n" equals the number of different atomic sentences. So with a formula (P & Q) v R, there are 3 atomic sentences, so 2 to the power of 3 would require 8 rows. A sentence with only 2 atomic sentences will require only 4 rows.
Third, beginning at the right fill in True and False alternatively; then move one to the left and fill in true and false alternating by twos; then move one to the left and alternate by fours. If there a more, you continue working to the left by eights, then sixteens, etc. Using this method assures the truth table will be complete.

Hi Barbara,
Yes, I will be honored to serve as the Tanner Graduate Teaching Awards Committee. The awards are something I take very seriously and I enjoy doing it. The time spent is definitely well worth it and rewarding.

Thanks,
Jan

PHILOSOPHY 110 INTRO: GREAT WORKS

Course description:
In this course we will examine a number of exceptionally influential philosophical works starting with Plato (circa 400 BC) and continuing through Locke and Hume of the Early Modern period.

Texts:
Plato: Republic, G.M.A. Grube & C.D.C Reeve. (Hackett 1992)

(Possibly other texts TBA)

Various readings available on the internet, Blackboard, and the University Libraries ereserves.

Grading:

40%	Journal
10%	1st Short Paper
20%	2nd Short Paper
15%	Midterm Exam
15%	Final Exam

JOURNAL: During the course of the semester there will be 20-30 assignments which will comprise your journal grade. You will be allowed to drop 10-15% of those grades which will work out to 2-5 assignments by the end of the semester. These assignments will consist of quizzes, written assignments, and group work assignments.

The grades for non-quiz journal assignments will be 100, 70, or zero. There will be no late assignments accepted and no make-ups. Since many of the assignments will be on material that has not been lectured on or discussed, your grade will depend on the apparent amount of thought and effort demonstrated. Read carefully and think hard and you should do well.

SHORT PAPERS: The first paper will be 3-5 pages in length and the second approximately 5 pages. I realize that writing philosophically takes practice thus the greater weight given to the second paper. Be sure to utilize the feedback on your first paper when writing the second.

On the cover sheet of your papers write the student pledge: "On my honor, I have neither given nor received unauthorized aid on this assignment." Sign your name below the pledge before handing it in. Include your name on the cover sheet and be sure that your name does not appear anywhere except the cover sheet.

EXAMS: The Exams will both be essay exams. Bring a blue book to class with you.

Important Dates:
(Most of these dates are tentative and subject to change – especially the paper dates)

Tue	9	Sept	Drop Deadline
Thu	2	Oct	Miderm Exam
Tue	7	Oct	1st paper assigned
Thu	16	Oct	1st paper due
Thu	23	Oct	Fall Break (no class)
Tue	11	Nov	2nd paper assigned
Tue	25	Nov	2nd paper due
Thu	27	Nov	Thanksgiving Break (no class)
Thu	4	Dec	Last day of class
Tue	16	Dec	Final Exam (8am – regular classroom)

Honor Code:
The Honor Code prohibits lying, cheating or stealing when these actions involve academic processes or University, student or academic personnel acting in an official capacity. PHILOSOPHY 110 INTRO: GREAT WORKS

Course description:
In this course we will examine a number of exceptionally influential philosophical works starting with Plato (circa 400 BC) and continuing through Locke and Hume of the Early Modern period.

Texts:
Plato: Republic, G.M.A. Grube & C.D.C Reeve. (Hackett 1992)

(Possibly other texts TBA)

Various readings available on the internet, Blackboard, and the University Libraries ereserves.

Grading:

40%	Journal
10%	1st Short Paper
20%	2nd Short Paper
15%	Midterm Exam
15%	Final Exam

JOURNAL: During the course of the semester there will be 20-30 assignments which will comprise your journal grade. You will be allowed to drop 10-15% of those grades which will work out to 2-5 assignments by the end of the semester. These assignments will consist of quizzes, written assignments, and group work assignments.

The grades for non-quiz journal assignments will be 100, 70, or zero. There will be no late assignments accepted and no make-ups. Since many of the assignments will be on material that has not been lectured on or discussed, your grade will depend on the apparent amount of thought and effort demonstrated. Read carefully and think hard and you should do well.

SHORT PAPERS: The first paper will be 3-5 pages in length and the second approximately 5 pages. I realize that writing philosophically takes practice thus the greater weight given to the second paper. Be sure to utilize the feedback on your first paper when writing the second.

On the cover sheet of your papers write the student pledge: "On my honor, I have neither given nor received unauthorized aid on this assignment." Sign your name below the pledge before handing it in. Include your name on the cover sheet and be sure that your name does not appear anywhere except the cover sheet.

EXAMS: The Exams will both be essay exams. Bring a blue book to class with you.

Important Dates:
(Most of these dates are tentative and subject to change – especially the paper dates)

Tue	9	Sept	Drop Deadline
Thu	2	Oct	Miderm Exam
Tue	7	Oct	1st paper assigned
Thu	16	Oct	1st paper due
Thu	23	Oct	Fall Break (no class)
Tue	11	Nov	2nd paper assigned
Tue	25	Nov	2nd paper due
Thu	27	Nov	Thanksgiving Break (no class)
Thu	4	Dec	Last day of class
Tue	16	Dec	Final Exam (8am – regular classroom)

From: Senora DeCosta, Assistant Registrar

Date: July 26, 2006

RE: Second Summer Session Grades

The extended version of the Grades Memo to All Teaching Faculty will no longer be included with your grade rolls. Instead, we have enclosed the flyer, When Completing Grade Rolls. As before, you can decide how to convey this information to your faculty.

For those of you on my list to receive the electronic version of the Grades Memo, this flyer, as well as the extended version of the memo will be sent to you electronically. If you are not currently on this list, but would like to be added, please contact me at senora@unc.edu or 962-0495. Remember, the extended memo will only be sent electronically.

As always, I rely on your help to achieve a successful outcome for the grading period. I am available for any questions or suggestions. Thank you.

MEMORANDUM

TO: All Teaching Faculty

FROM: Senora DeCosta, Assistant University Registrar

DATE: July 26, 2006

RE: Second Summer Session Grades

Enclosed are the Official Class Rolls and Grade Reports for Second Summer Session 2006. These reports are due at the Office of the University Registrar, 105 Hanes Hall, no later than 72 hours after the scheduled time of the final examination. (See due dates below)

Compliance with the 72 hour deadline is important as it enables us to reliably determine academic eligibility information to report to school Deans. This enables them to assess whether or not a student may continue enrollment for the next term.

To facilitate the timely receipt and entering of grades, please follow these guidelines for returning Official Class Rolls and Grade Reports to the Office of the University Registrar:

- Exams scheduled on Thursday, July 27 are due by 5:00 PM on Sunday, July 30
  Exams scheduled on Friday, July 28 are due by 4:00 PM on Monday, July 31

  Courses that do not have final examinations are due by 5:00 PM on Sunday, July 30

- When the Office of the University Registrar is closed, you may deposit your grade roll(s) in the GRADE ROLL DROP BOX located in the panel next to the west-facing (handicapped-access) door of Hanes Hall. This is the end of the building closest to Carroll Hall.

- The Report For Assignment Of Temporary Grade Of AB Or IN To Undergraduates can be found on-line at:
  http://regweb.unc.edu/resources/ab_report_form.pdf.

- Use only black or dark blue ink when completing and signing grade rolls. Adherence to this request is imperative, as pencil markings and other colors of ink do not duplicate very clearly. We must be able to microfilm our grade rolls for permanent storage and reference.

- Every registered student must have an appropriate grade designation (no blanks). If a student did not show up for the final examination or has not been attending classes, a grade of "AB" or "FA" must be assigned. Do not line through the name of a student you believe is not registered for your class. Assign that student an "AB" grade. This is the only action that will be recognized by our office. Nor should you write in the name of a student that you believe to be registered for your class. Appropriate actions will be taken when our office receives the official form governing the situation. Only a Post-Semester Registration/Drop/Add Form can remove or add a student to a course after the Official Roll & Grade Reports have been generated for the semester.

- Even if you know an undergraduate student has elected to take your course under the PS/D+/D/F option, you must assign the regular appropriate letter grade for their performance. The computerized grade table will convert grades of "C-" or better to "PS".

Refer to Registrar Procedures Memorandum (RPM) No. 24, for university grading policies and grade definitions at (http://regweb.unc.edu/resources/rpm24.php). Listed below are some tips and definitions to help you determine the appropriate grades to assign.

- All courses numbered 99 and below should use the undergraduate grading system, i.e., A, A-, B+, .., D, F.

- Grades assigned in courses numbered 100 through 199 depend upon the individual student classification. Students with undergraduate classifications should be assigned grades using the undergraduate grading system. Please do not use + and – for any graduate student grade. Pluses (+) and minuses (-) are not valid for H, P, L grades. This consumes an extraordinary amount of time for our staff to mark through every incorrect + or – on the grade roll, before it can be sent to data entry. If you are assigning a graduate grade and would like to make note on the grade roll of a plus (+) or minus (-) associated with the grade, use the "Remarks" column. Please use the following classification tables to help you determine the appropriate assignment of grades.

Undergraduate Classifications:

FR	Freshman
SO	Sophomore
JR	Junior
SR	Senior
FYR	Fifth Year (Pharmacy)
SPU	Special Undergraduate Non-degree
II	Inter-Institutional
SDS	Special Degree Seeking and Off-Campus Nursing Program
FX	Foreign Exchange

Graduate & Professional Classifications:

GD	Grad Doctoral
GM	Grad Masters
GPM	Grad Post Masters
GMD	Grad Masters then Doctoral
GPD	Grad Post Doctoral
SPG	Special Graduate Non-degree
1st	First Year MBA or Professional
2nd	Second Year MBA or Professional
3rd	Third Year Professional
4th	Fourth Year Professional
II	Inter-Institutional
FX	Foreign Exchange
SPP	Professional Non-degree
SDS	Currently used for Off-Campus Professional Pharmacy Program

Note: The classifications that start with "SP" (SPU, SPG, SPP) are used for non-degree students. Classifications that start with "G" (GD, GM, GMD, GPM, GPD) are graduate classifications. Classifications II and FX can be used for undergraduate or graduate students. Also, Continuing Studies post baccalaureate students (CS, SPG) are allowed to choose either the undergraduate or graduate grading system in courses numbered 100 through 199 for grade assignments. The student is supposed to inform the instructor at the beginning of classes as to their choice of grading system.

- The "FA" grade is assigned when an undergraduate student did not attend the final examination, and could not pass the course regardless of performance on the exam. This would be appropriate for an undergraduate student that never attended the course or has excessive absences in the course, as well as missing the exam.

- The "AB" grade is assigned when the student did not attend the final examination, and there is the possibility that the student could pass the course if the exam was taken. The "AB" is computed as an "F" grade in an undergraduate student's GPA. For undergraduate students, an "AB" grade is changed automatically to an "F*" if the grade is not cleared by the end of the next regular semester. For graduate students, an "AB" will revert to an "F*" (administratively assigned grade) if the grade is not cleared within one year from the original examination.

- The "IN" grade is assigned when the student took the final examination but did not complete some other course requirement. The student could pass the course if the assignment was completed. The "IN" is computed as an "F" grade in an undergraduate student's GPA. For undergraduate students, an "IN" is changed automatically to an "F*" if the grade is not cleared by eight weeks into the next regular semester. For graduate students, an "IN" will revert to an "F*" (administratively assigned grade) if the grade is not cleared within one year from the original examination.

- The "SP" grade is assigned for undergraduate students participating in the first course(s) of an approved departmental Undergraduate Honors Program. The Honors Program usually runs for the duration of at least two semesters (Junior and/or Senior Honors/Research). A final permanent grade is not assigned until completion of the second and/or final course. When the final permanent grade is assigned for an Honors Program, any previously assigned grade(s) of "SP" must be changed to the appropriate permanent letter grade by an Official Grade Change Form.

  Note: "IN" and "AB" are temporary grades that can be reported on the Official Class Roll and Grade Report or on an Official Grade Change Form. Instructors can change temporary grades to permanent grades by completing the Official Grade Change Form within the specified deadlines. Once a grade has been changed to an "F*", a dean's signature is also required on the Official Grade Change Form.

For any questions about this material, you may contact me at senora@unc.edu or 962-0495. Thank you.

Hi David,
Thanks for sending the syllabus. What you have is very good. I added the classroom for the course, and the date and time of the final exam. While we recommend the course for prospective majors, it is an introductory course for students who have not decided on their majors and are taking the course to fulfill their general college philosophical perspective. Most of the students in the class are rising sophomore non majors, and this is their very first introduction to philosophy! So lower level would be good.

Hope this helps. I've reattached the syllabus.

Jan,
I am trying to work out timing for the seminary with A Buchanan. Alas, Wed turns out to be bad for him on second thought. So we are back to Tuesday. Here's what would be best for me--I wonder whether you think we can swing it:
Seminar with AB: 4-6.30 [part time at UNC, part time at Duke]
The 4 pm start will give me just a little more time for prep between my 41H, and it would also give students who otherwise think of seminars starting at 3.30 a chance to get to Duke or UNC (as the case may be).
What do you think of this proposal?

Hi Geoff,
I think I'll do a First Year Seminar. The more I thought about it, I think that will work best for what i am doing in the Fall.

Tomorrow I'll call the FYS people to see what they think. If they don't want it as a FYS, then I'll just do a regular class for First year's only!

While we are on courses. I talked to Geoff about this as well.My readings course has only one student in it, so I am going to cancel it and offer a freshmen course, either a regular course, or a First year Seminar for Fall.

What is involved in competition? Is there too much emphasis on winning?

Are college sports getting out of hand? Do competitive athletics belong on campus? This seminar examines ethical issues, including Title IX, gender equity, racism, sexism, cheating, violence, and drug use.

Right-as we just added it. I guess the FYS person hasn't added it to the list.

Revised 12/02

Arts and Sciences Course Form Instructions

Units (departments, curricula or programs) within the College of Arts and Sciences must use the Arts and Sciences Course Form to add a new course, revise an existing course, or delete a course that is no longer offered. If other academic units might offer similar courses on the same topic, faculty submitting proposals should contact colleagues in that other unit to let them know of their intention to offer the new or revised course. Also, check to ensure that your proposal does not delete a course required by another unit or listed as a qualified elective in any unit. Units are strongly encouraged to route all proposals through their departmental Scheduling Officer to ensure accuracy and completeness. Scheduling Officers have access to pertinent course information, which is described later in this document. NOTE: USE OF THE GRADUATE SCHOOL COURSE FORM BY UNITS IN THE COLLEGE OF ARTS AND SCIENCES AND OTHER VERSIONS OF THE FORM (SUCH AS OLDER FORMS AND FORMS CREATED BY UNITS) WILL NOT BE ACCEPTED FOR PROCESSING.

Please keep in mind the following notes when preparing proposals:

- Add
  The Scheduling Officer must check screen 125 (course inventory maintenance) in SIS-'C' to verify that the new course number proposed is not currently used to designate another approved course. A field identified as "TERM FIRST/FINAL" on Screen 125 will contain a beginning date and if applicable an ending date (i.e. 949/989 designates a course's addition in fall 1994 and its deletion in fall 1998). Provisional syllabi and necessary justifications are required for all additions.

- Revise
  The Scheduling Officer must check screen 125 in SIS-'C' and the graduate and undergraduate catalogs to access complete course information. It is imperative to include cross-listed courses with their chair/director's signature on submissions to avoid a delay in processing. The field identified as "CROSSL COURSE" indicates cross-listed courses. Units are encouraged to submit provisional syllabi with significantly revised courses while the necessary justifications are required for all revisions.

- Delete
  The Scheduling Officer must check screen 125 for cross-listed courses. Again, the field identified as "CROSSL COURSE" indicates cross-listed courses. A justification for any deletion is required, along with an indication of whether or not cross-listed courses should be deleted as well.

- Do not combine above actions on one form. Only one course per form is acceptable, excluding cross-listing courses.

- Always use the most recent versions of the graduate and undergraduate catalogs when reviewing and/or retrieving course information.

- The use of a special topics course is encouraged as an initial format for new course proposals. Most units have one or more special topics courses set aside for special or unexpected circumstances. For example, a unit has a UNC faculty member or visiting faculty member wanting to offer a course in a specialized area of study that does not apply to the list of courses already approved. Instead of submitting a proposal for a new course, the course may be offered with a special topics course number. This eliminates the need to delete proposed course numbers after visiting faculty leave the University or UNC faculty member no longer wishes to teach proposed courses that did not fulfill their expectations or the unit's.

- When referencing Screen 125 in SIS-'C', you may position the cursor after a colon in different fields and press PF2 (help key) to reveal answer options. A printout of this screen is also attached.

- Please review all proposals before submission to ensure accuracy.

  Review of the submission process: verify course information for accuracy with departmental Scheduling Officer, obtain the required chair/director signatures, ensure necessary justifications are provided, make FOUR copies (of forms and syllabi), and submit the materials by January 15 or September 15 to Undergraduate Curricula, CB# 3504, 300 Steele Building. Proposals become effective the following fall semester.

Description of Course Form Fields

Name, email, and phone of contact person to resolve any problems with this submission

- Indicate faculty and/or staff contact information to resolve problems with course proposal.

Home unit (Department, Curriculum, Program) and Chair/Director

- Indicate the home unit and chair/director of proposed course.

Cross-listed unit and Chair/Director

- Indicate cross-listed unit and chair/director as needed. A review of screen 125 in SIS-'C' will indicate if proposed course revision or deletion is cross-listed with any other units. Signatures from all units involved are required to process submissions. Proposals without all signatures will be returned to the submitting unit.

Division reviewing course proposal

- Each course proposal is reviewed by one of the four Divisions of the College of Arts and Sciences (Fine Arts, Humanities, Natural Sciences and Mathematics, Social Sciences). If your unit belongs to more than one division, indicate which division you wish to review your proposal. If you are unsure which division you belong, please review the Division of Academic Affairs section in the Undergraduate Bulletin (www.unc.edu/res-aca/catalogs/ugb) for assistance.

Course name and number in home unit

- Course information on the controlling (home) unit. A review of screen 125 in SIS-'C' will indicate if proposed course number is currently available for use. A field identified as "TERM FIRST/FINAL" on Screen 125 will contain a beginning date and if applicable an ending date (i.e. 949/989 designates a course's addition in fall 1994 and its deletion in fall 1998). Indicate whether or not the proposed course number is currently in use. If applicable, also indicate when a deletion proposal will be submitted in conjunction with proposal requesting use of the course number. Screen 125 is a reference only screen.

Cross-listed courses

- Indicate courses cross-listed from other units with proposed submission. A review of screen 125 in SIS-'C' will indicate if proposed course revision or deletion is cross-listed with any other units. The field identified as "CROSSL COURSE" indicates cross-listed courses.

Credit hours for course

- Indicate total credit hours (e.g. 3) or range of variable credit hours (e.g. 1-3). Zero credit hour is not allowed.

Course repeatable for credit

- If proposed or revised course is repeatable for credit, indicate maximum credit hours allowed. Indicate whether or not course credit is repeatable for degree (not within term) or repeatable within a single term.

Course title

- Indicate full course title.

Abbreviated course title

- Indicate title for display in Screen 125 in SIS-'C' and the class directory. This field is limited to only 24 spaces. The field identified as "COURSE TITLE" on Screen 125 indicates the abbreviated title.

Prerequisite course(s)

- Indicate courses required for enrollment in this course.

Lab, recitation, fieldwork

- Indicate whether or not course includes or requires a lab or recitation or fieldwork and the appropriate credit.

Semester offered

- Indicate the semester(s) in which the course will be offered.

Course description

- Please use no more than 30 words for catalog course descriptions. Proposals with a description over this limit will be returned to the submitting unit for editing.

General Education

- Indicate whether or not the course is currently included in the General Education curriculum. If course is desired for inclusion in the General Education curriculum, please complete this section at the end of form. A listing of approved General Education courses is available at www.unc.edu/depts/advising/perspectives/index.html and in the Academic Organization and Undergraduate Requirements section in the Undergraduate Bulletin.

- Please review Thomas Tweed's (Associate Dean of Undergraduate Curricula) memo (www.unc.edu/depts/uc/culturaldiversity.doc) on the cultural diversity requirement to avoid confusion about this requirement.

Instructors

- Indicate faculty member(s) responsible for teaching the course. The instructor must be on graduate faculty if the course is numbered 100 or above.

Class size

- Indicate anticipated enrollment for course.

Justification

- Justifications for course additions, changes, deletions, and inclusion in the General Education curriculum are required. Include syllabi when that might clarify the course proposal. Course deletions do not require a syllabus.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Departmental, Curricular, and Program Chairs
College of Arts and Sciences

FROM: Thomas A. Tweed, Associate Dean for Undergraduate Curricula

RE: Course and program changes

DATE: August 21, 2003

Each August, the Office of Undergraduate Curricula sends out a notice about course and curricular proposals, and we request that units send all proposals to revise, delete, or add a course by September 15, 2003. We again invite submissions of course and curricular changes, and the usual directions for submission are included below.

However, there could be some uncertainty this year since, as the Provost's memo of August 12 indicated, we have begun to put in place two important curricular changes that will take effect in fall 2006: we will begin renumbering all courses and we will start implementing the new general education curriculum, which the Faculty Council approved last April. We will offer more information about these two curricular changes soon—at the chair's retreat, in workshops and information sessions, and in electronic mail. Yet it might be helpful to try to anticipate some of the questions that chairs might have. Do I submit a course form now? Should I just wait until February 1, 2004, when the renumbered courses and new general education offerings are due? Each unit will make its own decision on this matter, according to its needs and interests. But let me suggest a general principle: if you need a new course to be added to the University Bulletin by the next calendar year (fall 2004), then I suggest you follow the procedures described below and submit a course proposal (and syllabus) by September 15 of this year. Many units will want to add new courses because a new faculty member has arrived, a faculty member has revised an approved course, or a new minor or major has been established.

Unfortunately, this will mean that you will also need to propose a new course number for that course when you renumber all your courses by the February 1, 2004 deadline. As annoying as it is, there is no way around that, if we are to make sure that the renumbering process includes all your unit's courses, including those that will be reviewed and approved this fall.

After we pass through this awkward transitional phase, we are convinced that many units will welcome the new renumbering scheme, which allows much more freedom to organize your undergraduate and graduate courses, and we believe that the new general education curriculum will be an important advance. However, the next year or two will be challenging. Please be patient with us, and pass on any ideas you have about how we can make the process easier for you. If you have questions or comments about the submission procedures you may call our office (843-7773) or email Geraldine Taylor (gtaylor@email.unc.edu). If you have questions or comments about the implementation or renumbering implementation process, you can email me (tatweed@email.unc.edu). If you want to see the new course renumbering scheme go to the following web page: http://regweb.unc.edu/official/training/crc/. If you want to want to know more about the General Education Implementation Committee, which begins its work this month, you might visit that page (http://www.unc.edu/depts/uc/implementation/index.html).

To submit a course or curricular proposal that will take effect during the 2004-05 academic year, please follow these instructions:

> To change, delete, or create a course, please complete and submit four signed copies of the attached form. This form (with instructions) is also available via web at http://www.unc.edu/depts/uc. A justification is required for each proposal and a provisional syllabus must be attached for a new course proposal. Please propose program changes (e.g., change in requirements for your major or minor) in a letter and submit four copies.

This office will send your proposals to the appropriate divisional course committee and then (1) to the Administrative Boards of the College of Arts and Sciences and the General College for consideration in February, and, where appropriate, (2) to the Administrative Board of the Graduate School. Post-divisional review observes the following guidelines:

- The College of Arts and Sciences and the General College will review undergraduate program changes and proposals affecting courses numbered below 100 (in February).

- Proposals affecting courses numbered 100 through 199 will be reviewed first by the College of Arts and Sciences and the General College (in February) and then by the Graduate School.

- Proposals affecting courses numbered above 199 will be reviewed only by the Graduate School.

Please share this memo with the appropriate colleagues and administrative staff in your department. Thank you.

PHILOSOPHY 474 Professor Gerald Postema

FOUNDATIONS OF MODERN POLITICAL PHILOSOPHY

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course traces the emergence and development of central themes of modern political philosophy from the Thirteenth through the Seventeenth Century, such as the nature and limits of political authority; the nature of law, the idea of the Rule of Law and constitutionalism; individual rights; the foundations and justification of property; justice, equity and equality. The course will begin with St. Thomas Aquinas' major writings in legal and political philosophy and work of John Duns Scotus on will, reason, and morality. It will then take up two key controversies in the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Centuries—the "Franciscan poverty" debate (setting some of the key terms for later theories of property) and debate over papal authority from which the Conciliarist tradition arose. In this context, works of Masilius of Padua and William of Ockham will be studied, and possibly some work of Nicolas of Cusa and Jean Gerson. Then Reformation theorists, especially Calvin and later Reformed theorists concerning the foundations of political authority and the right of resistance to unjust rulers, will be studied. The "Second Scholastics" attempts to answer the Reformation developments and to reconcile Intellectualist and Voluntarist strains in moral and legal theory will be consider, especially the work of Francisco Suarez. Althusius's unique "federalist" political theory—with the key notion of covenant at its core—will mark the transition to Seventeenth Century (allegedly "modern") political theory and the work of Hugo Grotius, Thomas Hobbes, and John Locke. If there is time, special attention will be paid to the emergence of a distinctive notion of Common Law jurisprudence in the work of John Selden and Sir Matthew Hale, and especially the latter's debate with Hobbes over the nature of law and the foundations and limits of sovereignty.

Students will read mainly carefully selected primary sources, with some support from secondary sources. The format will be a mix of lecture and seminar presentations.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS:

Paper 1: 10-12 pages	30%
Participation	25%
For Graduate Students: Final Paper	45%
For Undergraduate Students: Final Exam	45%

READINGS WILL BE SELECTED FRLOM THE FOLLOWING AUTHORS with some readings on electronic reserve:

Subject: Seminar support

Hi Virginia,
Hope your summer is going well. I can't believe we have only 2 weeks before it all starts again. My daughter got married on Saturday, and I am still exhausted from the preparations, the wedding, and post wedding guests, who just left today!

I don't know if I talked to you about a program that the Parr Center is putting on: The Challenge of Ethics in Sports. The featured speaker is Rev. Joe Ehrmann, former Baltimore Colt, now a Reverend and football coach in Baltimore.
Here is a proposal: Purpose and Description of Proposed Event/Program: We will host a two-hour videotaped panel discussion, The Challenge of Ethics in Sports. It will be free and open to the public, and the discussion will be followed by a reception. The first hour will feature remarks by a diverse panel. The second hour will consist of questions from the audience and answers from the panelists. The panelists will include: Joe Ehrmann, the Gilman School football coach whose coaching philosophy emphasizes empathy, integrity, and affirmation; William Friday, President Emeritus of the University of North Carolina System; Rosalind Fuse-Hall, Executive Assistant to the Chancellor at North Carolina Central University; Richard Baddour, Athletics Director at UNC-CH; Kathleen K. Smith, Professor of Biology and Faculty Athletics Representative at Duke University. Other panelists will be selected closer to the event and include a coach and athletes. Jan Boxill at UNC-CH will moderate. We will advertise this event extensively in the local media, to ensure a diverse audience.

I was hoping that perhaps the Campus Y could help sponsor the event with some help with funding. I'll be in the office a bit tomorrow, and then I am finally able to go away for a week to the beach on Saturday. I will have email access though.

Thanks for any consideration.

Thanks Brent,
If you are looking for a First Year Seminar for your incoming Freshmen, I am teaching my Sport one on Tuesdays 2-4:30, and I am hoping to hold it in the Auditorium of the Academic Center--if that is still available! Doug--is it possible for you to schedule it there? If not, is there another room in the Center available? There are 16 seats left in the class.

Hi Dr. Taft,
I am teaching my ethics in sports class again in the Fall as a Freshmen seminar, and I would like to ask if you would be willing to give your presentation to the class again. Your presentation is always a great addition to the course and a big hit with the students. The class meets on Tuesdays from 2-4:30 and likely in the Academic Center. Let me know if this is possible. Any Tuesday will work--I'll work around your schedule.

Thanks,

CHALLENGE OF ETHICS IN SPORTS

The Challenge of Ethics in Sports, a panel discussion featuring coaches, athletes, an NCAA official and other administrators, will take place on Wednesday, September 20, at 7:00 pm in Fetzer 109, on the campus of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. The event, cosponsored by the Parr Center for Ethics, the UNC Athletics Department, and the North Carolina Humanities Council, is free and open to the public.

Joe Ehrmann, a former NFL football player and coach at the Gilman High School in Baltimore, Maryland, will be a high-profile guest panelist. Ehrmann is the subject of the best-selling book by Jeffrey Marx, Season of Life: A Football Star, a Boy, a Journey to Manhood.

Panelists will include: William Friday, President Emeritus of the University of North Carolina System; Rosalind Fuse-Hall, Executive Assistant to the Chancellor at North Carolina Central University; Richard Baddour, Athletics Director at UNC-CH; Kathleen K. Smith, Professor of Biology and Faculty Athletics Representative at Duke University. Other panelists will include a UNC coach and athlete, yet to be selected.

Jan Boxill, Senior Lecturer at UNC and Director of the Parr Center for Ethics, will moderate the two-hour panel discussion, designed to showcase a broad range of diversity in sports (football, basketball, soccer), playing level (high school and university), race and gender.

Special focus for the event will come from the Carolina Leadership Academy and its program to develop athletes and their coaches as world-class leaders for a lifetime and from the philosophy of Joe Ehrmann.

The panel discussion will include questions and answers from the audience. It will be filmed in its entirety and available on the web page of the Parr Center for Ethics.

A reception will follow the panel discussion.

Stacy,
Thanks. I'm looking for funding sources to bring Joe Ehrmann. We had applied for a grant, but didn't get it, so now I am looking for sources for Ehrmann's honorarium.
Also, you can help to get the word out, once we have the entire event finalized. I'm pretty confident it will have lots of appeal, we just have to let people know about it.

Thanks,

Subject: Program in the Humanities and Human Values at UNC Position

---

Dear all,
The Program in the Humanities and Human Values is looking for a new Associate Director. I am sending along the ad in case you know someone who might be interested and good.

> HUMANITIES CONTINUING EDUCATION, UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA AT CHAPEL HILL
> Associate Director, Program in the Humanities and Human Values, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.
> Offering a series of weekend and week-long programs to a broad and loyal audience of alumni, the general public, and teachers, the Program in the Humanities and Human Values is the principal means of public outreach of the College of Arts and Sciences at UNC Chapel Hill. The heart of the program is Adventures in Ideas, a seminar series taught primarily by UNC Chapel Hill faculty members. The Associate Director has primary responsibility for recruiting faculty speakers and for creating, planning, and budgeting the seminars. With the approval of the relevant department, the Associate Director may have an adjunct academic appointment.
> Qualifications: A Ph.D. in a humanities discipline or an appropriate social sciences discipline; experience in teaching and/or continuing education; an understanding of humanities disciplines; a knowledge of the world of ideas and scholarship; an awareness of current moral, social, and cultural issues and controversies; creativity, strong writing and public-speaking skills; and an interest in fund-raising.
> Salary: Competitive. Deadline: September 8, 2006.
> Send cover letter, resume, and the names and phone numbers of three references to Dr. Gillian T. Cell, Chair, Search Committee, UNC Humanities Program, Campus Box 3425, Chapel Hill NC 27599-3425.
> No applications by e-mail.
> For more information, visit www.adventuresinideas.unc.edu. UNC Chapel Hill is an Equal Opportunity Employer.
> Thank you for your assistance,
> Wayne J. Pond, Director

Dear Jan Boxill,

At the request of Geoffry Sayer-McCord, I am contacting you to find a speaker to give an hour of their time to present on the topic of ethical decision making for the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Leadership program. The Leadership program is designed to empower 25 participants to become leaders in the community. They will hear from numerous speakers on community profile topics that will provide an overview of major issues in the Chapel Hill-Carrboro area. These sessions will be paired with a hands-on leadership skills building sessions, with each presentation lasting about an hour.

Our target date for the ethical leadership session is October 25th from 10:45am – 12:00pm. The class runs from 8:30am – 12:00pm, with the community profile session preceding the leadership skills building session. The leadership session should be designed to be an interactive presentation with activities or break-out sessions for hands-on learning. I am attaching a copy of this year's Leadership brochure to give an outline of the program.

Thank you for helping us identify an experienced speaker on this subject. Please feel free to contact me at the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Chamber of Commerce if you have any questions - (919) 967-7075.

Developing Future Leaders Today

While the profile of Chapel Hill and Carrboro is changing constantly, there remains a constant need for talented leaders. Leadership Chapel Hill-Carrboro is a program designed to ensure that there is a pool of Leadership talent for our future. Participants will learn about the social, cultural, political and economic facets of the community from today's leaders. Through exchange of ideas and community experiences, participants begin to develop specific interests in the concerns on their community and emerge equipped with the skills and knowledge to impact their communities.

Leadership participants also complete the Leadership "Passport," an agenda of community projects and exercises as well as the Small Miracles® project, which pairs Leadership students with area non-profit organizations to learn about their missions and needs.

Personal Faith and Conscience:
How, When, Where and With Whom Can We Speak Our Minds on a Public University Campus?

DISCUSSION GUIDE

Introduction

College communities around the country have in recent days experienced a growing pattern of religious intolerance, threatened restraints on free inquiry, and difficulties in sustaining informed political and civil discourse. As university populations have become more diverse, they are confronting new realities in which differing voices struggle to be heard and respected. Political forces have increasingly highlighted "wedge issues" that pit deeply held religious and moral judgments against emerging social and scientific trends. As polarization has increased outside university walls, it has been increasingly difficult to maintain the long tradition of open and respectful inquiry within university classrooms. New forms and norms for communication seem to fuel tendencies to attack and belittle competing viewpoints rather than to engage in open-minded exploration of ideas.

In 2005, the Ford Foundation announced its "Difficult Dialogues Initiative," inviting colleges and universities around the country to join it in addressing these concerns. As the Ford Foundation's President eloquently stated: "Open and honest dialogue is one of the defining characteristics of a vibrant academic community … [and] is an essential component of a strong civil society on which democracy depends. We must strive to ensure that all members of the community are treated as full and equal partners in the intellectual and institutional life of colleges and universities, especially those who may hold minority political views or religious beliefs. Campus leaders also must create an atmosphere of mutual respect, in which diversity is examined and seen in the context of a broader set of common values. We need to ensure that our discourse not only remains open but civil."

As one of the campus partners in the Difficult Dialogue Initiative, UNC Chapel Hill is endeavoring to make the practice of dialogue second nature on our campus, and invites colleagues elsewhere to do the same. Too often, matters of religious belief and academic inquiry seem to fall prey to a "clash of cultures" and a tendency for students and faculty to engage in verbal sparring matches, to "debate" rather than to discuss and learn from one another's experiences and views. A group of faculty, students, and student affairs leaders has worked intensively to develop a framework in which differing viewpoints on these issues can be engaged and explored in a respectful and open-minded way. Our goals are to foster freedom expression and respectful attention for a wide range of viewpoints, engage in intellectually serious analysis and defense of multiple viewpoints, and exploration of common ground without ignoring genuine differences among diverse viewpoints.

We invite you to engage with us in deep and candid conversation about Personal faith and conscience: how, when, where, and with whom can we speak our minds on a public university campus? This formulation is a powerful one in which each word has a deliberate meaning.

- We hope the conversation will draw forth genuine, personal views that will be respectfully treated and openly considered.

- We seek to grapple with the full range of faith- and conscience-based beliefs since such beliefs are rooted in personal values that include those held not only by individuals committed to traditional Judeo-Christian viewpoints but also by agnostics, atheists, and others with moral vantages that are arise from sources other than traditional religion.

- We emphasize the process of "speaking our minds" by which we intend a focus on oral and written communication (rather than the clothes one wears or other sorts of expression).

- We use the word "we" very deliberately, with the intent to exploring how all members of our campus community interact with each other (for example, students interacting with fellow students of similar or different faith traditions, faculty interacting with faculty and students in the classroom and elsewhere, and staff interacting with the full range of community members).

- Our discussion will explore varied approaches to this question, including some that have emerged from our work to date, but also others that will emerge in this Forum that involves a wider range of participants. We will deliberate--rather than debate--using safe and fair ground rules to be considered at the outset so that we can all speak, listen, and learn from each other. No votes will be taken. All viewpoints will be welcome.

This discussion guide is organized in three parts. Part I provides background information on the growing tensions relating to personal faith and conscience on college campuses. Part II outlines four approaches that members of college communities—individual students and faculty as well as campus leaders--might be taken in response to these tensions. Part III provides supplemental resources including ideas on how best to approach conversations about these difficult issues and sources of information on related topics.

Background

Campus Experiences

One University's Recent Experiences

Evidence of tensions relating to personal faith and conscience and academic inquiry may be found at numerous universities around the country. The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is merely one case in point:

- In 2002 the University chose Approaching the Koran: The Early Revelations by Michael Sells as its summer reading selection. The decision was roundly criticized by many legislators and members of the public. Subsequently the American Family Association's Center for Law and Policy brought suit on behalf of three students, an alumnus and a state citizen, claiming that their First Amendment rights have been violated. The federal district court subsequently concluded that the choice was permissible since it did not advance or endorse religion and did not compel students to engage in "religious exercise."

- In 2003 a three-member Christian fraternity lost its status as an officially recognized student organization when it refused to sign the University's standard non-discrimination policy. The fraternity's law suit in federal court alleging that the University had unlawfully abridged the students' First Amendment rights to freedom of association, freedom of speech, and free exercise of religion was ultimately dismissed as moot.

- In spring 2004 an instructor was disciplined by her department for publicly accusing a student of hate speech after he expressed in her class his objection to homosexuality based on his religious beliefs.

- A "diversity assessment" conducted during fall 2004 gave evidence of related concerns. (excerpts from qualitative comments to be inserted once available)

- In 2005-2006, the campus newspaper ran a student column that cast Arabs in a disparaging light as well as a cartoon featuring a depiction of the Prophet Mohammed. Later a recent graduate drove his SUV into a popular campus gathering spot, injuring nine people. He subsequently explained that he had done so to demonstrate his commitment to Islam and to protest American foreign policy. Some students protested, asserting that his action should be labeled "terrorist" while others held a vigil in sympathy for Muslim students and those who had been hurt.

- In the last several years, the University established programs in Jewish, Islamic, and Christian studies. In 2005 and 2006, many liberal arts faculty protested discussions with a potential donor who was considering a proposal for funding of an initiative in Western Cultures. The donor had ties with other groups with conservative views that had publicly ridiculed faculty members who taught courses that emphasized diversity themes. The University subsequently withdrew the proposal in order to permit additional faculty review.

UNC Chapel Hill has not been alone in facing challenges like these. The discussion guide that follows incorporates experiences reported in news from around the country.

Hate Crime

National statistics also demonstrate problematic levels of tension. For example, the United States Federal Bureau of Investigation indicated that it in 2004 had received reports of 7649 incidents involving 9035 offenses. Of the 7642 single-bias incidents, racially motivated crimes accounted for 52.9%, religious bias accounted for 18.0%, bias against sexual orientation accounted for 15.8% and bias against ethnicity or national origin accounted for 12.7%. Of the 1,374 incidents involving religious bias, anti-Jewish incidents predominated (954 incidents), with anti-Islamic incidents ranking second (156). Anti-Catholic incidents numbered 57, anti-Protestant incidents numbered 38, anti-other-religion incidents numbered 128. There had been 898 hate crimes reported on school or college campuses, including 492 related to race, 184 related to religion, 150 related to sexual orientation, 68 related to national origin, 2 related to disability and 2 with multiple biases.

In April 2006, the United States Commission on Civil Rights held hearings and issued a statement on growing anti-Semitism. The Commission found that

> Many college campuses throughout the United States continue to experience incidents of anti-Semitism. This is a serious problem which warrants further attention. While incidents of threatened bodily injury, physical intimidation or property damage are now rare, they have been alleged on some campuses. On other campuses, students have alleged patterns of threatening or intimidating behavior, derogatory remarks, vandalism, and use of Swastikas and other symbols of hatred or bigotry….On many campuses, anti-Israeli or anti-Zionist propaganda has been disseminated that includes traditional anti-Semitic elements, including age-old anti-Jewish stereotypes and defamation. This has included, for example, anti-Israel literature that perpetuates the medieval anti-Semitic blood libel of Jews slaughtering children for ritual purpose, as well as anti-Zionist propaganda that exploits ancient stereotypes of Jews as greedy, aggressive, overly powerful, or conspiratorial.

Students on college campuses are increasingly diverse even in states where residents have a significant preference in admissions. Economic shifts have resulted in greater mobility of families from other states and other countries so that residency no longer means life-long ties to a particular state. In contrast to their parents' generation, college students today are more likely to encounter others with viewpoints rooted in cultures, faiths, and moral perspectives that differ from those at home. The mixture of religious backgrounds characterizing students may vary depending on the region of the country and admissions criteria. Depending on student characteristics, student viewpoints and controversies may vary.

Students

Student Religious Affiliations and Implications

For example, in 2005 nearly 2/3 of UNC Chapel Hill's entering students reported affiliation with the following religions: Baptist (19.3%), Methodist (13.6%), Roman Catholic (13.1%), Presbyterian (9.6%), and "Other Christian" (9.7%). Fewer than 5% reported Jewish (2.5%), Hindu (1.3%) or Islamic (.9%) affiliation, and16.9% reported no religious affiliation. In contrast, entering undergraduates at public flagship universities a much more heterogeneous mix, with more than double the percentage of Roman Catholics and Jewish students (27.5% and 5.9% respectively), far fewer Baptists, Methodists, and Presbyterians (5.2%, 5.3%, and 5.2% respectively), and even more students reporting no religious affiliation (22.6%).

Patterns of religious preference also appear to correspond in interesting ways with student experiences and viewpoints as demonstrated in the following chart, comparing the responses of undergraduates entering UNC-Chapel Hill in 2005 with their peers at public flagship universities. In particular, UNC-Chapel Hill students are more likely to have attended religious services, discussed religion, and prayed or meditated on a weekly basis during high school. They are also much more likely to regard "integrating spirituality into my life" as a high priority, and to believe that their religious beliefs will be strengthened during college. They are somewhat more socially conservative, and are more inclined to believe that dissent is an important part of the political process.

Questions:
1a: Attended religious service in past year
1b: Discussed religion

2a: Time in high school in prayer/mediation: none + less than one hour/week
2b: Time in high school in prayer/mediation: 1-5 hrs

3a: Very important reason to attend college…: find my purpose in life
3b: Objectives that are "essential" or "very important": integrating spirituality into my life
3c: Objectives that are "essential" or "very important": developing meaningful philosophy of life
3d: Chances "very good" that attending college will strengthen religious beliefs/convictions

4a: "Abortion should be legal" (agrees strongly or very strong)
4b: "If two people really like each other, it's all right for them to have sex, even if they've known each other for only a very short time" (agrees strongly or very strongly)
5a: "It is important to have laws prohibiting homosexual relationships" (agrees strongly or very strongly)
5b: "Same-sex couples should have the right to legal marital status" (agrees strongly or very strongly)

6a: "Colleges should prohibit racist/sexist speech on campus" (agrees strongly or very strongly)
6b: "Dissent is a critical component of the political process" (agrees strongly or very strongly)
6c: "Realistically, an individual can do little to bring about changes in our society" (agrees strongly or very strongly)

Study of Student Spirituality

In addition to the above insights, drawn from the annual American College Freshmen Survey (part of the Cooperative Institutional Research Program in which many universities and colleges participate), UCLA researchers with support of the John Templeton Foundation have been conducting survey research focused on the religious and spiritual lives of college students. An initial phase of the study relied upon surveys in fall 2004 of 112,000 entering students at 236 colleges, using questions that included many similar to those in the annual freshmen survey noted above. Longitudinal studies tracked a smaller universe of students (approximately 3680 at 46 colleges and universities) into their junior years. Some notable findings include the following:

- Among first-year students, 8 in 10 reported attending religious services during the past year. Nearly 8 in 10 said that they believed in God, with more than half perceiving God as "love" or as the "creator" and about half experiencing God as a "protector." Many reported deriving strength, support and comfort from their beliefs. Four in ten students reported that they felt "secure" in their beliefs, with one in four saying that they were "seeking," one in four reporting being "conflicted" or "doubting," and one in seven saying they were "not interested." Forty-seven percent reported that they "seek out opportunities to help [themselves] grow spirituality."

- The researchers also analyzed students with reference to "spirituality," "religiousness" (religious commitment, engagement, religious/social conservatism, religious skepticism, and religious struggle), and four other factors (charitable involvement, compassionate self-concept, ethic of caring, and ecumenical worldview). Using these variables, they found that religious commitment and engagement was closely correlated with religious/social conservatism and negatively correlated with religious skepticism. Those showing high levels of religious engagement tended to be conservative politically (self-identified conservatives outnumbered liberals by 3 to 1). Roughly equal proportions of politically conservative and liberal students earned high scores on either charitable involvement or compassionate self-concept, while liberals "substantially outnumber conservatives among those with high scores on ethic of caring (2 to 1) and ecumenical worldview (3 to 1).

- The researchers reported two clusters of religious preferences among entering students. Those identifying themselves as Mormons, Seventh-Day Adventists, Baptists and "other Christians" emerging as "strongly spiritual, religious, and religiously/socially conservative" and expressing little religious skepticism. A second cluster (including Unitarians, Buddhists, Hindus, Episcopalians, Eastern Orthodox and Jewish students), were found to score low on religiousness and high on religious skepticism, ecumenical worldview, ethic of caring and charitable involvement. Roman Catholics reportedly scored below the overall average on religious commitment, religious engagement, religious/social conservatism, and religious skepticism."

- Longitudinal studies of a much smaller set of college juniors reported a decline in attendance at religious services (52% had reported attending religious services frequently the year before entering college, but only 29% reported attending frequently in their junior year). There was a significant reduction in self-perceived "religiousness" and "spirituality" (only 9% said that their religiousness was much stronger and only 13% said their spirituality was much stronger), yet there was some growth in those who said it was "very important" to integrate spirituality into their lives, develop a meaningful philosophy of life, and help others in difficulty. Students who spend more time partying show larger-than-average declines in attendance at religious services during the first three years of college.

- By junior year, it appeared that levels of religious commitment (measured by finding religion personally helpful, gaining spiritual strength by trusting in a higher power, feeling loved by God and seeking to follow religious teachings in daily life) tracked student choices of major at least to some degree. Those who chose to major in the fine arts, education and humanities had the highest levels of religious commitment, with the lowest levels of religious commitment reported by those in biological sciences, history, political science and sociology. Only about 20% of juniors were "highly religious" while a similar proportion were found to have low levels of religious engagement (defined as a pattern of behavior that includes such things as attending religious services, reading sacred texts, attending religious/spiritual workshops or retreats, and joining a religious organization on campus).

- Among college juniors, religiosity and spirituality also correlated with self-identified political viewpoints. Those who identified themselves as politically conservative, were substantially more likely to show high levels of religious commitment (50% versus 18% for self-identified liberals) and religious engagement (37% versus 10%), and were also more likely to show high levels of equanimity (35% versus 23%) and self-esteem (37% versus 29%). Viewed in a somewhat different light, students who regarded themselves as "highly religious" were divided among 41% who described themselves as conservative or far right, 44% who described themselves as "middle-of-the-road" and 15% who described themselves as liberal or far left. Students who were "least religious" included only 9% of those who saw themselves as conservative or far right, 56% of those who were middle-of-the-road, and 35% of those who were liberal or far left. Substantial differences in views on social issues were also apparent as between highly religious students and least religious students, including differences on views about casual sex, abortion, and homosexuality.

Trends Among Teenagers

There are indications that surveys of entering college students do not tell the whole story or do not fully capture emerging trends, however. In a recent book, Soul Searching: The Religious and Spiritual Lives of American Teenagers, (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2005), Professor Christian Smith and Melinda Lundquist Denton analyzed data and interviews from the National Survey of Youth and Religion begun in 2000. Some of the study's major findings about teenagers aged 13-17 include the following.

- Difficulty articulating beliefs: Very few of the teens interviewed could explain the tenets of their religion or what it means. The researchers concluded that this phenomenon was equally evident in devout and non-religious teens, and judged that it was not due to poor communication skills. Instead, in their view it appeared that, for many of the teens "our interview was the first time that any adult had ever asked them what they believed and how it mattered in their life."

- Religious outlook: The interviews suggested that many teens (whatever their religious affiliation) shared an outlook the researchers dubbed "Moralistic Therapeutic Deism" that embraced five major principles: (1) A God exists who created and orders the world and watches over human life on earth but from a distance; (2) God wants people to be good, nice, and fair to each other, as taught in the Bible and by most world religions; (3) The central goal of life is to be happy and to feel good about oneself; (4) God does not need to be particularly involved in one's life except when God is needed to resolve a problem; and (5) Good people go to heaven when they die. Moral relativism was also common among teenagers interviewed.

- Conversations in school: In school, 65% of religious US teens only express their religious faith only some or a little. 12% of the teens express their faith a lot and 23% do not express their faith at all. Mormons are the most likely to express their faith, followed by conservative and black Protestant teens. Half of Jewish teens and half of Catholics do not express their faith. However, it is not because school is viewed as being a hostile place to religious teenagers—fewer than 20% of teenagers report that schools look down on teens who are openly religious.

- Views of others: The researchers concluded that teens do not talk about religion very often amongst themselves. They tend to see religion as not a particularly contested or conflictive aspect of their lives, but instead something that simply is, that is just not the kind of thing worth getting worked up about one way or the other. In confronting issues of faith difference, most teens take an inclusive religious pluralism stance on the matter of religious truth claims—60% of all respondents state that many religions may be true. The researchers also noted that "nearly all U.S. teens seem to have adopted a posture of civility and a careful and ambiguous inclusiveness when discussing religion with possible 'others,' especially in public," perhaps because of the strong tradition of individualism in America as well as the public school system.

What Happens In College: Theories of Intellectual and Moral Development

Some of differences between teenagers still in high school and students who are nearing college graduation may be explained in part by the dynamics of intellectual and moral development during the college years. Numerous educational theories might be noted, but only a few will be mentioned here.

- Cognitive Development. Benjamin Bloom, of the University of Chicago, is widely regarded as among the foremost theorists of students' intellectual development. He developed a "taxonomy of educational objectives" which he derived based on the educational goals articulated by faculty colleagues and the types of questions posed on comprehensive examinations. His most well-known taxonomy relates to the "cognitive domain" and includes the following elements (listed from the simplest to the most complex): knowledge (the kind of intellectual capability that can be created even by rote memorization); comprehension (the ability to paraphrase, interpret and explain); application (the capacity to transfer ideas learned in one situation to use in another); analysis (the capacity to distinguish between subsidiary ideas that are part of a larger whole); synthesis (the capacity to bring disparate ideas together into a larger whole); and evaluation (the capacity to test or judge ideas against a set of larger standards).

- Affective Development. Bloom also considered the "affective" domain which concerns the way that people deal with emotional dimensions including feelings, values, appreciation, enthusiasms, motivations and attitudes. His five major elements in this taxonomy (ranging from the simplest to the most complex) include: receiving phenomena (awareness, willingness to hear and attend to others with respect), responding to phenomena (active participation with others in learning, willingness to respond and question new ideals and concepts in order to understand them); valuing (acceptance of values, attaching worth to particular values or phenomena, developing more complex commitments, acting on more complex commitments); organization (creates priorities from contrasting or conflict values, compares and synthesizes values); internalizing values (develops a value system that shapes personal behavior in a cohesive way, acts in self-reliant way that evidences commitment to ethical practice, consideration of others, weighing of new evidence).

- Intellectual and Moral Development. A major theory of intellectual and moral development in college students was developed by William Perry, based on interviews conducted among male students attending Harvard College some years ago. Perry focused on how students understand the nature of knowledge and what kinds of knowledge are to be valued. Perry identified several stages of development. The first three stages involve "dualism," a period in which a learner assumes that all questions have or can have "right" answers derived from external authorities; the absence of right answers is attributed to authority figures who lack relevant knowledge or to knowledge that has yet to be discovered. The next two stages involve "relativism," which treats knowledge as non-absolute in most cases, treats dominant knowledge as pertinent but not the absolute truth, sees most things as uncertain, finds no real basis for deciding absolute right and wrong, treats authorities as just individuals with opinions, and regards all ideas as having equal value before ultimately recognizing that learners must take responsibility for using and evaluating non-absolute knowledge in complicated settings. Perry's final three stages involve "commitment" and move beyond cognitive abilities to make judgments regarding one's values and identity, act on and balance associated commitments and responsibilities to self and others. Although Perry's work has been criticized a non-diverse population and as treating development as a linear process when it more likely involves cycles, his approach remains a standard framework for thinking about student development during the college years and beyond.

- Faith Stages. Dr. James Fowler, of Emory University, developed a framework for thinking about the stages through which approaches to faith and spirituality evolve across the lifespan (in contrast to the content of faith-based or spiritual beliefs). His most well-known work is Stages of Faith: The Psychology of Human Development and the Quest for Meaning (HarperCollins, 1981). Fowlerr's work was also influenced by that of other theorists who studied psychological development from childhood through adulthood. In Fowler's view "faith" encompasses an individual's beliefs about their relationship with the universal, something that evolves throughout one's life. Fowler regarded faith as an ongoing activity (rather than something one "has"), reflecting the interplay of "conversion" (major changes in one's values or core beliefs) and "development" (a gradual maturation process).

- According to Fowler, there are six major stages in faith development, which foster insight of one's development, but should not used to evaluate or judge. Stage 1 is the "intuitive-projective" stage in which children are centered on their own experiences, their imaginations and fantasies, and others' actions and stories. At this stage, they lack the internal means of understanding their experiences, the fantasies they develop, or the stories to which they're exposed. Stage 2 is the "mythical-literal" stage in which faith has a more definite cognitive component, which may be drawn from the values of one's family or from exposure to other influences such as those of teachers, peers, and the media. In Stage 2, individuals tend to associate with those who are like them and be critical of those who differ, believe in "justice" insofar as the good are rewarded and the bad punished, often give symbols very literal meanings and engage in little self-reflection.

Stage 3 is the "synthetic-conventional" stage in which individuals attempt to develop an integrated identity, based on values or beliefs typically derived from significant others without much internal examination. Those at stage 3 may have an "ideology" that involves a cluster of beliefs and values but may not be aware of it. They may also have internalized expectations in ways that make it difficult for them to manage the different roles and contexts in which they must function, and may be uncomfortable with conflict and controversy.

- Fowler describes stage 4 as the "individuative-reflective" stage, one that often involves critical assessment of prior experiences, values and beliefs. In stage 4, individuals move toward a grounding within an authentic self rather than relying most heavily on external expectations and roles, while also making explicit personal judgments about commitments based on deliberate examination of their core beliefs. Stage 5, the "conjunctive" stage is generally not reached until mid-life, when individuals experience significant tensions (for example at the point between being old and young), are able to deal with multiple perspectives and ambiguity, are drawn to the deeper levels of myth and symbolism, and are more open to others' faith traditions. Stage 6, "universalizing," takes varied forms but generally involves a more encompassing sense of truth that transcends group-based faith traditions.

- Another theorist, Sharon Parks, has extended Fowler's work in significant ways. She proposes an additional stage of faith development which she calls "young adult" (which includes many college students) and treats faith development as involving three components (the first involving forms of knowing or cognition, the second forms of dependence or affect, and the third forms of community or social interaction). During the early "young adult" stage, individuals facing new environments may regress to previous more comfortable states until they are more comfortable in the new settings. They may also take some time before developing "self-authority" and may need experience with a social group that provides mentoring before trusting their growing sense that they can stand on their own. Parks' approach is helpful in spotlighting both a critical stage of development and by providing a framework that speaks explicitly to the importance of "dependence" and social settings.

- Thoughtful observers also recognize that college students' experiences outside the classroom often help them learn important lessons that may be less easily imparted in the classroom. In his important book, Making the Most of College: Students Speak Their Minds (Harvard University Press, 2001), Richard Light highlights students' own judgments about the importance of religious diversity among their classmates and the ways in which such diversity contributes to their education. Students interviewed emphasized the importance of religious diversity in living arrangements, which allowed them to experience others' traditions and beliefs in ways they were unlikely to have done at home. One student commented: "Everything that I have learned by observing and interacting with my more religious roommates has helped me to decide what is important and not important to me in a belief system, or more generally in a spiritual outlook." Another said: "As a Catholic, I find there is a certain bond that exists for me with observant people of other religions. Inter-faith forums have certainly helped to develop this connection with the other side, such as Jewish students from Hillel with whom we share many events… I definitely feel comfortable talking about certain things, or taking certain things for granted, when I'm with other religious people, whatever their religion."

Political Viewpoints and Student Values

College students do not necessarily express the same blend of faith-based beliefs, social policy judgments, and political affinities as do older citizens, explored in more detail as part of the discussion of the world beyond the campus, below. A recent study by the Harvard Institute of Politics conducted phone interviews of a national sampling of college students in March 2006 provides some important insights about the relationship between these important dimensions of students' lives.

- The vast majority of student respondents indicated that religion played an important role in their lives (70%), and 25% said that they had grown more spiritual while in college. When asked about their top-most concern, 39% of respondents (compared to 20% of the public in general) cited the war in Iraq. On the other hand, 66% of respondents believed that the United States should use armed intervention if necessary in order to address genocide abroad. Respondents indicated that the United Nations should play a more significant role and favored multilateral approaches. Differences in political viewpoint correlated with views on how religion should play out in the public eye. Among Republican respondents, 56% wanted to hear candidates speak about their religious views, in contrast to 21% of Democratic respondents. Republican respondents also wanted religious values to play a more important role in government (38% compared to 16% among Democratic respondents). Republican respondents generally feared that religion was losing its influence in American life (62%) and felt that was a "bad thing" by a 7-1 margin, while 52% of Democratic respondents felt that religion's influence was increasing while concluding by a 2-1 margin that that was a bad thing. A majority of both Republican and Democratic respondents said that they were "concerned about the moral direction of the country," including 50% of white respondents, 74% of African-American respondents, 49% of men and 57% of women.

- The Harvard study found that college students believed that a larger range of issues had "moral" dimensions compared to those generally highlighted as raising questions "values" in recent political discourse. Majorities of both Republican and Democratic respondents regarded abortion (78% of Republican respondents and 59% of Democrats), gay marriage (64% and 54% respectively) and stem-cell research (64% and 54% respectively) as "moral issues." Notably, 38% to 48% of Republican and Democratic respondents believed that the government's response to Hurricane Katrina (48% and 45% respectively) and education (38% and 44% respectively) should also be viewed within a moral context. Other "moral issues" included the environment (30% of Republican and 42% of Democratic respondents respectively), healthcare (35% and 52% respectively), Iraq (44% and 39% respectively), and affirmative action (24% and 37% respectively).

- The Harvard poll emphasized that there appear to be four major clusters of college student political viewpoints (in contrast to traditional conservative/liberal labels) and recognized that faith-based and moral beliefs as well as gender and race have implications for policy judgments among this population. "Traditional conservatives" (16% of respondents) were more likely males from upper income families, are more optimistic about the future, believe the country is on the right track, are comfortable voting for candidates who speak about their religious beliefs and want religious values to play a more important role in government. "Religious centrists" (25% of respondents) included a large concentration of African-American and Hispanic students who are deeply concerned about the moral direction of the country, and regard the response to Hurricane Katrina, universal healthcare and the environment as moral issues. "Secular centrists" (15%) are more likely to be male, tend to optimistic about the future, do not regard abortion or homosexuality as morally wrong, do not factor religion into their world view and do not want religious values to play a more important role in government. Finally, traditional liberals (40%) are more likely female, support Roe v. Wade with regard to abortion, do not regard homosexuality as morally wrong, think universal healthcare should be a right for all, the environment should be protected, and immigration should be permitted.

Faculty

Spirituality and the Professoriate

Data on the viewpoints of college faculty are more limited, but some insight can be gained from periodic surveys of American college faculty and from research on spirituality within the professoriate that is part of the UCLA research on college spirituality noted above.

- Data from the 2004-05 survey of American college faculty found a substantial consensus in views regarding the goals of undergraduate education, with a high proportion of faculty respondents rating the following goals as "very important" or "essential: developing student's critical thinking abilities (99%), helping students master knowledge in a discipline (94%), and promoting students' ability to write effectively (87%). Other goals included preparing undergraduates for employment (73%), and for graduate or advanced study (61%) with substantial variation across types of institutions. Other goals included instilling a basic appreciation for the liberal arts (56%) and the development of moral character (59%), but only 30% believes that the chief benefit of a college education is to increase earning power. Perspectives on educational goals were also framed against a general concern that many students were poorly prepared academically (while 67% of faculty at private universities agreed "somewhat" or "strongly" that "most students are well-prepared academically, only 37% of public university faculty shared that view). In contrast, 70% of freshmen entering college in 2004 rated themselves as "above average" or in the "highest 10%" academically, and about half reported earning "A"s in high school.

- The recent study on "Spirituality and the Professoriate" conducted by UCLA with support of the John Templeton Foundation, surveyed 40,670 faculty at 421 colleges and universities across the country. Only 30% of respondents believed that "colleges should be concerned with facilitating students' spiritual development," but more than half regarded other related goals "essential" or "very important": enhancing students' self-understanding (60%), developing students' moral character (59%) and helping students develop personal values (53%). Academic field and institutional type correlated in interesting ways with faculty viewpoints. The highest level of agreement with the statement that "colleges should be concerned with facilitating students' spiritual development" were found among faculty in the health sciences (41%) and humanities (40%), with the lowest proportions in the biological sciences (22%), social sciences (24%) , physical sciences (24%) and agricultural/forestry (25%). Faculty members at public universities and colleges showed the lowest level of agreement with this statement (18% and 23% respectively).

- In light of the priority purposes of education and the concerns for student academic preparedness noted above, it is perhaps not surprising that emphasis on religion and spirituality is relatively rare in many classrooms. In reports by college juniors in the companion study of student spirituality described above, 62% indicated that their professors "never encouraged discussion of spirituality and religion" while 56% said that their professors "never provided opportunities to discuss the meaning or purpose of life."

- Faculty members' views on the role of religion and spirituality in the classroom differed from those held by faculty members regarding the place of religion and spirituality for faculty members within the academy. When asked to agree or disagree with the statement "the spiritual dimension of faculty members' lives has no place in the academy," 57% disagreed. Once again academic disciplines seemed to shape or reflect respondents' viewpoints, with the highest disagreement reported by those in the health sciences (67%), education (65%) and business (60%) and the lowest levels in social sciences (51%), physical sciences (50%), and biological sciences (49%). The highest level of disagreement was found in public universities (49%).

- Faculty members' reluctance to regard religion and spirituality as appropriate in the classroom or the academy did not, however, indicate that faculty members are not spiritual or religious, or that spirituality and religion does not play a role in their personal lives. Of those responding, 81% described themselves as "spiritual," while 64% regarded themselves as "religious" to some or a greater extent (29% and 37% respectively). Female faculty appeared to have a higher level of spirituality, with 87% of women describing themselves as "spiritual" (in contrast to 78% of male faculty members), endeavoring to integrate spirituality in life (54% of women compared to 42% of men), engaging in self-reflection (74% and 64% respectively), and seeking opportunities to grow spirituality (76% compared to 65%). The highest proportion of self-identification as "spiritual" was found for African-American faculty (66% regarded themselves as spiritual "to a great extent"), in contrast to American Indians/Alaska Natives (60%), Native Hawaiian/Pacific Islanders (59%), Puerto Ricans (59%), Mexican-Americans (53%), white/Caucasians (48%), and Asian-Americans (37%).

Disciplinary Frameworks and Faculty Viewpoints

Faculty perspectives must also be understood in a broader historical and sociological context. In a working paper, Professor Mark Edwards (former President of St. Olaf College and currently associate dean of Harvard Divinity School, and author of a new book entitled Religion on Our Campuses) offers crucial insights.

- Historical trends have shaped the development of colleges and universities in the last 150 years. In the first half of the nineteenth century natural sciences were closely associated with Christian theology. In time the sciences were seen to provide evidence of divine design in the guise of rational thought and inquiry and the study of science was viewed as a means of praising God. By mid-century, scientists were able to discern causal explanations that made it possible to offer explanations of phenomena other than by reference to supernatural intervention. What constituted an explanation changed and scientists turned to scientific inquiry as the best means of explaining natural phenomena rather than simply invoking God. Other disciplines followed suit, as the humanities departed from moral philosophy and social sciences claimed their own identity.

- By the beginning of the 20th century, research universities began to develop, with instructors drawn from those who had sophisticated substantive expertise in specialized fields. As belief in the scientific method grew and the extent of knowledge burgeoned, only those with "disciplined" knowledge had the necessary legitimacy to claim a place in the academy. Such disciplined expertise was provided through advanced education at top research universities which provided intensive mentoring, and required advanced levels of scholarly performance which in time resulted in the award of a Ph.D. Professional legitimacy for scholars awarded teaching positions at universities was increasingly tested by scholarly writing that was reviewed by national and international peers with similarly advanced expertise.

- In Edwards' view, faculty members are now inculcated by intensive experience that can be described as "professional formation," just as is true for those who undergo "formation" to profess their beliefs as members of the clergy. As undergraduates, they choose a major and increasingly assimilate the knowledge, values, and intellectual approaches that characterize the academic discipline in question. They go on to graduate work and spend more years within a specialized academic community that deepens and tests such expert knowledge and ways of knowing through comprehensive examinations and research on the Ph.D. They are evaluated and selected for academic appointments through a process that emphasizes their disciplinary focus. They then pass on their ways of knowing to their own students, and gain professional acclaim based upon their scholarly contributions to their chosen academic field.

- Edwards argues that there may be room to reintroduce religious perspectives within the academy in certain circumscribed respects. He contends that religious views may be most appropriate with regard to moral claims, claims regarding human nature, and claims regarding maximally comprehensive views of reality (certain kinds of "metaphysical" claims). In his view, it may be appropriate for certain religious insights to be offered in as an autobiographical explanation of "where I'm coming from," and suggests that the introduction of religious views in other settings should be undertaken with caution, and only in instances in which they contribute to the conversation and deepen understanding.

Academic Freedom

"Academic freedom," like academic disciplines, plays a central role in faculty members' understandings of the nature of American higher education. Academic freedom rests on core beliefs that the mission of higher education is to seek out and disseminate truth (however unpopular or inconvenient) and that the best way to accomplish this mission is to express ideas freely and subject them and to test them openly without fear of reprisal. It rests on a shared commitment to collegial interchange and a responsibility to maintain an open mind while testing one's own ideas as well as the ideas of others. Despite these core assumptions, the meaning and implications of the phrase and are surprisingly complex.

- The courts have recognized that academic institutions possess institutional academic freedom that is necessary > to provide that atmosphere which is most conducive to speculation, experiment, and creation. It is an atmosphere in which there prevail "the four essential freedoms" of a university--to determine for itself on academic grounds who may teach, what may be taught, how it shall be taught, and who may be admitted to study. (Sweezy v. New Hampshire, 354 U.S. 234, 263 (1957) (Frankfurter, J, concurring)

- Academic freedom for individual faculty members has been described in the following terms:

  > Teachers are entitled to full freedom in research and in the publication of the results, subject to the adequate performance of their other academic duties. . .

> Teachers are entitled to freedom in the classroom in discussing their subject, but they should be careful not to introduce into their teaching controversial matter that has no relation to their subject. . .
> College and university teachers are citizens, members of a learned profession, and officers of an educational institution. When they speak or write as citizens, they should be free from institutional censorship or discipline, but their special position in the community imposes special obligations. As scholars and educational officers, they should remember that the public may judge their profession and their institution by their utterances. Hence they should at all times be accurate, should exercise appropriate restraint, should show respect for the opinions of others, and should make every effort to indicate that they are not speaking for the institution. (Association of American University Professors, 1940 Statement)

- The academic freedom of students has likewise been recognized. In a joint statement issued in 1967, the Association of American University Professors, the United States National Student Association and other professional groups stated:

  > Freedom to teach and freedom to learn are inseparable facets of academic freedom. The freedom to learn depends upon appropriate opportunities and conditions in the classroom, on the campus, and in the larger community. Students should exercise their freedom with responsibility . . . .
  > The professor in the classroom and in conference should encourage free discussion, inquiry, and expression. Student performance should be evaluated solely on an academic basis, not on opinions or conduct in matters unrelated to academic standards.
  > 1. Protection of Freedom of Expression
  > Students should be free to take reasoned exception to the data or views offered in any course of study and to reserve judgment about matters of opinion, but they are responsible for learning the content of any course of study for which they are enrolled.
  > 2. Protection Against Improper Academic Evaluation
  > Students should have protection through orderly procedures against prejudiced or capricious academic evaluation. At the same time, they are responsible for maintaining standards of academic performance established for each course in which they are enrolled.

- The application of these principles is often complicated, in part because of the complexity of underlying legal analysis and because of the need to apply applicable policies to nuanced facts. For example, the academic freedom of individual faculty members and students is to some extent rooted in the First Amendment (which protects against abuse of free speech rights by government entities such as public universities but not to action by private parties). The statements of the Association of American University Professors (an organization founded in the wake of events at Stanford University early in the 20th century, when Mrs. Leland Stanford caused the dismissal of a noted economics professor Edward Lovejoy with whose views she disagreed) have been widely endorsed by academic organizations. They reflect a "professional standard" that is regarded as a statement of good practice within the academy, and thus has policy significance (but not necessarily legal significance) even when the First Amendment might not have application. At the same time, however, most colleges and universities around the country have adopted policies and tenure regulations that incorporate the AAUP standard and in turn give rise to contractual rights and rights to due process hearings by those protected under such policies.

- Longstanding expectations about university autonomy and academic freedom have been challenged in recent years on a number of fronts. For example, David Horowitz and others have argued that legislation called the "Academic Bill of Rights" should be adopted by state legislatures in order to force universities to weigh political ideology as part of their hiring practices and to provide additional legal protection to students who fear that they may be receive poor grades based on ideological views. Several organizations such as Students for Academic Freedom and Campus Watch have also established websites that encourage students to report or "blacklist" their professors based on listed criteria. An initiative by a UCLA alumnus to pay students to record and submit details of classroom conversations was withdrawn in the face of legal challenge.

- There are also instances in which faculty members have also been disciplined or dismissed notwithstanding the protections of academic freedom. For example, a professor at the University of Colorado who made what many regard as irresponsible comments about the 9/11 terrorist attacks was subsequently found by an academic panel to have engaged in research misconduct. That university also recently conducted an extensive review in order to improve its policies on tenure and post-tenure review. Universities are also facing calls for greater public accountability from government leaders including the United States Department of Education and Congress. While academic institutions have traditionally been accorded great autonomy in setting academic standards and making operational decisions, growing concern to curb college costs and increase student learning and graduate rates may put these traditions to the test.

Liberal Education and the Curriculum

Faculty viewpoints on the role of religion and spirituality within the college classroom can also be discerned through academic decisions relating to nature of liberal education and the characteristics of the undergraduate curriculum.

- The American Association of Colleges and Universities defines "liberal education" as "a philosophy of education that empowers individuals with broad knowledge and transferable skills, and a strong sense of values, ethics, and civic engagement." In a 1998 statement, the Association expressed the goals of a liberal education in the following terms:

  > A truly liberal education is one that prepares us to live responsible, productive, and creative lives in a dramatically changing world. It is an education that fosters a well-grounded intellectual resilience, a disposition toward lifelong learning, and an acceptance of responsibility for the ethical consequences of our ideas and actions. Liberal education requires that we understand the foundations of knowledge and inquiry about nature, culture and society; that we master core skills of perception, analysis, and expression; that we cultivate a respect for truth; that we recognize the importance of historical and cultural context; and that we explore connections among formal learning, citizenship, and service to our communities. … Because liberal learning aims to free us from the constraints of ignorance, sectarianism, and myopia, it prizes curiosity and seeks to expand the boundaries of human knowledge. By its nature, therefore, liberal learning is global and pluralistic. It embraces the diversity of ideas and experiences that characterize the social, natural, and intellectual world. To acknowledge such diversity in all its forms is both an intellectual commitment and a social responsibility, for nothing less will equip us to understand our world and to pursue fruitful lives.

- Most colleges and universities adopt and periodically review general education requirements governing undergraduate study as a means of providing students with a shared foundation to guide their overall intellectual development. General education requirements often mandate that students take courses emphasizing moral reasoning, philosophy, history, cultural diversity, public policy, international affairs, psychology, sociology, literature, art or music and many other subjects in order to provide students with exposure to varied ways of thinking and a wide range of ideas. Many such courses touch at some point on the nature and role of faith and religion in the contexts in connection with the topics under consideration.

- Colleges and universities have increasingly incorporated "perspectives" or "diversity" requirements as part of their general education requirements to aid students in preparing for a complex world marked by increasing interchange among those from cultures that vary in language, history, political and religious beliefs and to bring to light the experiences of those who have often been burdened by historical injustice. In the humanities and social sciences, for example, critical analysis has thrown the spotlight on personal identity and scholars have increasingly examined the hidden history of people of color and women and the implications of sexual orientation. Developments in the sciences are also proceeding at a rapid pace. Biological sciences now rely heavily on findings rooted in modern understandings of natural selection and evolution, and new scientific discoveries raise important questions regarding the role of stem-cell research and the nature of the human genome. Expansion of the traditional "canon" to include topics outside students' prior experience with Western culture, local communities, and religious tenets may prove unsettling to those with deeply held traditional values and cultural views.

The World beyond the Campus

There can be little doubt that forces beyond campus walls influence the realities of American college campuses. These realties are therefore worth considering.

American Beliefs about Faith

The United States is a highly religious nation. A Gallup Poll conducted in December 2005 reported that 79% of American respondents said they were convinced that God exists, while an additional 12% said that they think God probably exists but have a little doubt. Regional differences were apparent, with 88% of Southerners expressing certainty about the existence of God, compared to 70% of Easterners, 71% of Westerners, and 77% of respondents from the Midwest. Those who attended church on a weekly basis were particularly likely to be certain God exists (94%) but 61% of those who seldom or never attended expressed similar sentiments. In contrast, however, a CBS News Poll conducted in April 2006, asked respondents whether they believed that traditional religions could answer all or most of today's problems or whether they were largely old-fashioned and out of date. Just over half (54%) of respondents said that traditional religions can answer such problems, while 32% said such religions are old-fashioned and 14% said they didn't know or didn't answer. The same poll also asked respondents how important religious was to their daily lives, and found that 26% of respondents regarded it as extremely important, 33% as very important, 26% as somewhat important, 13% as not at all important, with 2% saying they didn't know or giving no answer.

The United States Census does not collect information on religious affiliation so denominational information must be found by other means. The World Fact Book 2005 indicates that the American population is divided as follows: Protestant 52%, Roman Catholic 24%, Mormon 2%, Jewish 1%, Muslim 1%, other 10%, none 10% (2002 est.). The American Religious Identification Survey conducted using phone surveys by the researchers affiliated with the City University of New York in 2001 found that the proportion of those self-identifying as Christian had declined from 86.2% in 1990 to 76.5% in 2001. In 2001, 1.3% self-identified as Jewish, .5% as Muslim, .5% as Buddhist, .3% as Unitarian/Universalist, and .4% as Hindu. Others self-identified as atheists 9.4%), agnostic (0.5%) or refused to respond (5.4%). More nuanced polls have recently been conducted of those who are affiliated with Christian faiths. A poll conducted for National Public Radio in July 2006 of likely voters in the fall 2006 election found that 12% identified themselves as fundamentalist, 21% evangelical, 10% as charismatic/Pentecostal, 42% as moderate to liberal, 5% as something else, and 11% as unwilling to respond (or responding "don't know").

In contrast, to the United States, the 2005 World Fact Book reported that in the United Kingdom, the proportions are: Christian (Anglican, Roman Catholic, Presbyterian, Methodist) 71.6%, Muslim 2.7%, Hindu 1%, other 1.6%, unspecified or none 23.1% (2001 census). In France, the proportions are: Roman Catholic 83%-88%, Protestant 2%, Jewish 1%, Muslim 5%-10%, unaffiliated 4%. In Canada the proportions are: Roman Catholic 42.6%, Protestant 23.3% (including United Church 9.5%, Anglican 6.8%, Baptist 2.4%, Lutheran 2%), other Christian 4.4%, Muslim 1.9%, other and unspecified 11.8%, none 16% (2001 census).

Deeper insight about Americans' faith-based viewpoints can also be derived from public opinion polls and similar studies.

- Views on the role of the Bible and the relationship between religious belief and science vary. In Gallup surveys completed in May 2006, 28% of respondents indicated that they believed that the Bible is the actual word of god and is to be taken literally word for word; 49% said that it was the inspired word of God but not everything in it should be taken literally, and 19% regarded it as an ancient book of fables, legends, history, and moral precepts recorded by man. When asked about their views on the origin and development of human beings, 36% of respondents said that man developed over millions of years with God guiding the process, 13% said man developed over millions of years but God had no part in the process, 46% said that God had created man in his present form, and 5% gave other or no opinion. An April 2006 CBS news poll found that 26% of respondents believed the science and religion agreed with each other, 32% said they generally conflict with each other, 37% said they were not related in a meaningful way, and 5% said they didn't know or gave no answer.

- Americans' views of those affiliated with different religious beliefs vary. A July 2005 study by the Pew Forum on Religion and Public Affairs reported the following patterns regarding how favorably they viewed the following religions: Jews (77% favorable, 7% unfavorable, 16% no opinion); Catholics (73% favorable, 14% unfavorable, 13% no opinion), Evangelical Christians (57% favorable, 19% unfavorable, 24% no opinion), Muslim-Americans (55% favorable, 25% unfavorable, 20% no opinion), and atheists (35% favorable, 50% unfavorable, 15% no opinion).

- Americans' beliefs also appear to contrast with the views of Europeans. A June 2006 report by the Pew Research Center explained that in 2002 60% of Americans thought that belief in God is necessary in order "to be moral and have good values" (slightly smaller proportions expressed that view in 2004). In contrast in 2002 only 1/3 of German and 1/8 of French respondents expressed similar views. A survey conducted in connection with the Spring 2005 Pew Global Attitudes Project found, for example, a substantially higher proportion of respondents from Great Britain viewed Muslims favorably (compared to 72% favorable v. 57% favorable by respondents from the United States and 40% favorable by respondents from Germany).

- Americans' exposure to the religions beliefs and practices of others' also appears limited. A June 2005 poll by CBS News asked respondents whether any of their close friends or family members who were of a different religion had introduced them to different teachings or philosophies that had become part of their own religious or spiritual practices. Of those responding, 23% said yes, 48% said no, 18% said they had no close friends or family members of other religions, 10% said religion wasn't important to them, and 1% said they didn't know or declined to answer.

- Americans also appear to associate religion in certain respects with conflict. In a July 2005 poll by the Pew Research Center for People and the Press, respondents were asked how much of a role religion plays in causing most wars and conflicts in the world. Responses indicated that 40% believed that religion caused a great deal of conflict, 35% a fair amount, 13% only a little, 8% not at all, and 4% refused or said they didn't know. When asked a similar question about the role religion plays in causing political conflict in the United States, 30% responded that it caused a great deal of conflict, 35% said a fair amount, 27% said only a little, 4% said none at all, and 4% said they didn't know or refused to respond.

Legal Principles and Historical Perspectives

Americans are clearly a religious people. Significantly, however, the American constitutional experiment provided for the separation of church and state, a deliberate and unique departure from prior European tradition.

- The First Amendment states that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." The Founders thus rejected the European tradition that taxed all to support a single nationally-affiliated church, and sought to avoid sectarian strife that would likely arise from jockeying among the different religious affiliations prominent in the various states. They also barred government from intruding on individual religious beliefs and thereby protected freedom of conscience. These provisions of the United States Constitution have also been applied to the states, and many states have independently codified protections relation to religion as part of their state constitutions.

- It is helpful to bring a historical perspective to bear in considering how the law in this area has developed and might develop in the future. In his recent book Divided by God (Oxford University Press, 2005) and related writing in the New York Times, NYU Professor Noah Feldman has discussed the core dilemma created by the American constitutional experiment with the relationship between church and state: how to negotiate "the challenge of preserving the unity of the sovereign people in the face of their flourishing spiritual variety and often conflicting religious needs." Feldman traces the waves of immigration that have brought changing patterns of religious diversity to American shores, such as the 19th century influx of Catholics raised issues regarding the underlying tenets of public schools and the potential for funding parochial education that inculcated religious values. He also highlights critical world events such as World War II and the Holocaust which highlighted the risk that religious minorities can suffer discrimination or even persecution when the German government adopted a stance favoring Christianity and opposing those of Jewish faith. Through it all, Feldman believes, we acknowledge our religious diversity while at the same time "we strive to be a nation with a common identity and a common project."

- In Feldman's view, current tensions reflect two conflicting viewpoints about the proper relationship of religion and government On the one hand some people believe that "the right answers to questions of government policy must come from the wisdom of religious tradition." Feldman calls those who share this view "values evangelicals" and explains that "Not every values evangelical is, technically speaking, an evangelical or a born-again Christian, although many are. Values evangelicals include Jews, Catholics, Muslims and even people who do not focus on a particular religious tradition but care primarily about identifying traditional moral values that can in theory be shared by everyone." Feldman believes that "What all values evangelicals have in common is the goal of evangelizing for values: promoting a strong set of ideas about the best way to live your life and urging the government to adopt those values and encourage them wherever possible. To them, the best way to hold the United States together as a nation, not just a country, is for us to know what values we really hold and to stand up for them." Feldman characterizes the second competing viewpoint as one held by "legal secularists" who "see religion as a matter of personal belief and choice largely irrelevant to government and who are concerned that values derived from religion will divide us, not unite us." Such "legal secularists" may be active members of various religious faiths, but believe that government should be secular and be bounded by related legal constraints. According to Feldman, "legal secularists" believe that "full citizenship means fully sharing in the legal and political commitments of the nation. If the nation defines itself in terms of values drawn from religion, they worry, then it will inevitably tend to adopt the religious values of the majority, excluding religious minorities and nonreligious people from full citizenship."

- Feldman believes that neither "values evangelicals" nor "legal secularists" have been very effective in negotiating the core tension between the American desire to recognize religious diversity while also maintaining a sense of unity, particularly in the days since 9/11. In his view, the "values evangelicals want to find shared values, but that leads them to rely on the unexamined assumption that deep down, Americans agree on what matters. The trouble is that 'we' often do not agree." Such disagreement is particularly apparent on issues such as abortion where "values evangelicals" believe that they must stand for something and are generally unwilling to recognize that those with competing views may have legitimate claims to make decisions of their own. On the other hand, the belief by "legal secularists" that religious expression must be removed from the public sphere in order to make those of all faiths and viewpoints welcome has resulted in pressure to keep religious views private or at least outside of public settings associated with government (a matter of concern for example, for those who wish to see the Ten Commandments or Christmas crèches displayed). Banishing religious expressions from the public eye has in Feldman's view made "values evangelicals" feel excluded and undercut the hunger for public expression of shared values, even though that is not the intent. These underlying tensions have been fueled in part by confusing legal developments that have reversed the original intent of the Constitution's provisions on religion by eliminating religious expression in many public settings while at the same time allowing funding of faith-based activities (for example, attendance at religiously-affiliated schools using publicly-funded vouchers and allocation of government funds to religious groups as well as secular non-profit organizations in order to accomplish government objectives).

- Litigation involving the public schools has illustrated the complex application of legal precepts embodied in the First Amendment's "free exercise" and "establishment" clauses when applied to educational settings. One of the fundamental legal tests applied in this setting is that articulated in Lemon v. Kurtz, a 1971 decision by the United States Supreme Court that required government decisions in the schools to be motivated by a secular purpose, to have primarily secular effects and not to entangle the state with religious institutions. Applying this and other tests in ensuing years, the courts have addressed numerous issues. For example, cases have addressed school prayer and moments of silence (permissible if students opt to do so but not permissible if mandated), school-sponsored prayer in public settings (impermissible), religious expression by teachers in classrooms (may be deemed officially sanctioned and impermissible especially with younger students), use of school space for religiously affiliated student organizations (permissible under generally applicable neutral policies), release time for religiously-associated education off-site (permissible), required display of the Ten Commandments in school rooms (impermissible), instruction about religion (permissible), and distribution of flyers (permissible to include information relating to religious activities but impermissible for schools to screen content so as to prohibit religious content if unfettered discretion). Courts have also entered the fray in the "intelligent design" v. evolution controversy, most recently finding that mandates to teach intelligent design represented an impermissible effort to incorporate religious doctrine in the classroom. Many efforts have been made to distill more detailed guidelines from this evolving case law including efforts by the federal Department of Education (http://www.ed.gov/policy/gen/guid/religionandschools/prayer_guidance.html), a group of 17 organizations across the spectrum of faith-based and civil-liberties organizations (http://www.church-state.org/ritps-ajscl.htm), and organizations of journalists such as the Freedom Forum and its affiliated First Amendment Center at Vanderbilt University (http://www.firstamendmentcenter.org/rel_liberty/publicschools/Index.aspx).

- Colleges and universities have also faced litigation about the implications of the Constitution's religion clauses and related "free speech" provisions. For example, the United States Supreme Court has held that a public university must make campus facilities available to student religious groups in the same way and to the same extent that it makes its space available to non-religious student organizations. Public universities must also make student fees available on the same basis for student groups whether they have sponsor or support religious and non-religious activities. On the other hand, the United States Supreme Court has concluded that public universities may deny scholarship funds to college students majoring in theology, in situations where state constitutional provisions dictate such separation (through the Washington "Blaine Amendment" that states that "No public money or property shall be appropriated or applied to any religious worship, exercise or instruction, or the support of any religious establishment"). Current controversies have focused on such issues as the legality of public universities' efforts to limit recognition of student organizations which refuse to comply with non-discrimination policies on the basis of religious beliefs that object to homosexuality or that require that leadership positions be filled by those who comply with certain religious tenets. A variety of organizations have endeavored to keep universities on their toes with regard to civil liberties relating to speech and religious liberty. Such organizations have provided extensive information to interested individuals for example, though the Foundation for Individual Rights in Education (http://www.thefire.org/index.php) and the Anti-Defamation League (http://www.adl.org/civil_rights/ab/free_Exer.asp) among others.

- The First Amendment also affords relevant protections beyond those found in the "free exercise" and "establishment" clauses. It also states that "Congress shall make no law ... abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble." The courts have interpreted these and other constitutional provisions to apply to the states and have also concluded that they protect freedom of association in intimate, expressive, and political contexts. These freedoms have some limitations, however. For example, the courts have said that freedom of speech does not allow someone to "cry fire in a crowded theatre" or to use "fighting words." The right to express oneself may depend on whether the setting for such expression has been established or treated as a "public forum," and whether the governmental entity has established reasonable, content-neutral "time, place, and manner" restrictions.

- Once again, the application of these additional First Amendment freedoms to public university campuses is more complex than might initially appear. For example, the University of Michigan had adopted a "speech code" that prohibited "Any behavior, verbal or physical, that stigmatizes or victimizes an individual on the basis of race, ethnicity, religion, sex, sexual orientation, creed … and that … Creates an intimidating, hostile, or demeaning environment for educational pursuits, employment or participation in University[-]sponsored extra-curricular activities." In a guide explaining its code, the university provided several examples of conduct that it regarded as harassment, such as "You exclude someone from a study group because that person is of a different race, sex, or ethnic origin than you are; …You display a confederate flag on the door of your room in your residence hall; …"You comment in a derogatory way about a particular person or group's physical appearance or sexual orientation, or their cultural origins, or religious beliefs." In 1989, a lower federal court found this policy to be vague and overbroad. In 1991, a University of Wisconsin policy that prohibited addressing a specific individual with "racist or discriminatory comments" was also struck down by a lower federal court because the policy was not narrowly enough stated to prohibit only "fighting words."

- Some colleges have endeavored to establish "free speech zones" in order to situate student protests, allow students to distribute flyers, and hold gatherings in areas that would not disrupt classes. This approach has brought challenges at West Virginia University and New Mexico State University in instances in which the designated areas for such activity were very small. Public universities also face issues regarding the rights of the student press on their campuses. The United States Supreme Court has held that in the context of public high schools, school administrators can treat a student newspaper as a "non-public forum" and can punish or censor students for their expression if necessary for educational reasons. It specifically reserved the question of the status of college newspapers. More recently a lower federal court has said that subsidized college student newspapers should be subject to the same legal framework as applicable in high schools. The United States Supreme Court declined to review the case, and some state legislatures are currently reviewing proposals to provide statutory protections to college student newspapers. Colleges are not, however, required to fund student papers.

While the First Amendment thus restrains government in a number of important ways it does not preclude other actions that interject religious belief or affiliation into the political arena.

Political Realities

The American electorate appears to have grown increasingly polarized and profoundly divided in recent years, with divergent religious beliefs and moral judgments playing significant roles in these developments.

- A study published in 2005 by the non-partisan research organization, Public Agenda, tracked changing attitudes relating to religion and politics over the four years from 2000 to 2004 (just prior to the 2004 Presidential election). One of the survey questions asked whether respondents agreed with the following statement: "Even elected officials who are deeply religious sometimes have to make compromises and set their conflictions aside to get results while in government." In 2000 84% of the general population, 82% of those who attended religious services once a week, and 79% of evangelicals agreed with the statement, but in 2004, only 74% of the general public, only 63% of those who attended services once a week, and only 63% of evangelicals agreed (representing a drop of 10%, 19% and 16% respectively). Another question asked whether respondents believed that deeply religious people should keep their faith private, be very careful about "spreading the word of God" so as not to offend others, or "spread the word of God whenever they can." In 2000, 18% of respondents said that deeply religious people should keep their faith private, while 46% said that people with such beliefs should be very careful, and 35% said that they should spread the word actively. By 2004, the total of those who believed that people should keep their faith private or proceed carefully had dropped to 57% and the number who believed that they should spread the word of God whenever they could rose to 41%.

- In 2005, the Pew Center for Religion and Public Life found that the closely-contested 2004 President election had been marked by a deep faith-based partisan divide. More specifically, they concluded that "Americans who regularly attend worship services and hold traditional religious views increasingly vote Republican, while those who are less connected to religious institutions and more secular in their outlook tend to outlook tend to vote Democratic." In addition, "traditionalists" affiliated with evangelical, mainline Protestant, and Catholic beliefs were particularly inclined to vote Republican, suggesting that the strong partisan divide was "defined by religious outlook rather than denominational labels."

- The Pew study also found that the most important cause of the church attendance gap was the "mix of social and cultural issues that have come to the fore in the modern era" including prayer in schools, abortion, homosexuality, and gay marriage which had a tendency to "push the religiously observant into one political corner and the more secular into the other." Regional differences have also contributed, with a "broad shift to the GOP among white voters in the Evangelical-heavy South." The Pew study cited poll data indicating that "more than 70% Americans want their president to have strong religious beliefs," while "only a quarter of voters said that politicians 'mention religious faith and prayer too much.'" At the same time 65% of poll respondents said they thought that churches should not endorse political candidates.

- Academic observers have debated whether shifts represent a form of "culture war" that will endure or change in coming days. At a recent forum conducted by the Pew Forum on Religion and Public Life, Professors Alan Wolfe and James Davison Hunter highlighted competing viewpoints more fully aired in their new book, Is There a Culture War: A Dialogue on Values and American Public Life (Brookings Institution Press, 2006). Several important questions are worth considering such as: Does a small proportion of Americans (elites on both the left and right of the political spectrum) fuel the divide? What can be said about those situated in the vast center? Is there a growing tendency for religious denominations to splinter along ideological lines? Will there be a return to inter-religious conflicts rather than intra-religious conflicts? Will people of faith conclude that close alliance with political forces is inadvisable in the long run? Other scholars such as Pietro Nivola of the Brookings Institute have suggested that there are a variety of forces that contribute to America's polarization. While religion is one of these forces, others must be considered, including historical circumstances, regional political realignments, parity between the major political parties, the role of the media in fueling an artificial frenzy of attacks and counter-attacks, the tendency of new media and internet communication to provide more vehicles for ideological viewpoints to be expressed and find those of like minds, changing norms of civility, gerrymandering, and the nature of political primaries.

America's "Civil Religion" and Current Challenges

- Robert Bellah, the noted sociologist of religion who authored Habits of the Heart, a study of American values and patterns of interaction in a simpler day, has suggested that developments in the wake of the 9/11 terrorist attacks have deeply challenged Americans' sense of themselves and their country. In his view, an American "civil religion" has characterized America's earlier history. (The term is one term used by Rousseau to connote "the existence of God, the life to come, the reward of virtue and the punishment of vice, and the exclusion of religious intolerance"). In Bellah's view, this "religion" does not correspond to or substitute for Christianity but instead facilitated a "wide sphere of personal piety and voluntary social action… left to the churches… [which] were neither to control the state nor to be controlled by it."

- According to Bellah, America's "civic religion" faced its first crisis during the war for independence, and a second a crucial challenge at the time of the Civil War when the country had to face fundamental questions about slavery and its implications for the nation's core values. At that time, Bellah believes, the "theme of sacrifice was indelibly written into the civic religion." Now, in Bellah's view, the country stands at a third great crisis in which is must confront "the problem of responsible action in a revolutionary world, a world seeking to attain many of the things, material and spiritual that we [Americans] already have attained." For Bellah, the challenge that confronts Americans and our civil religion is how we will use our power and whether we will be able to contribute in a meaningful way to the "attainment of some kind of viable and coherent world order" built upon "an awareness that our nation stands under higher judgment." For Bellah, successful navigation of this third challenge would depend on the recognition that "the American civil religion is not the worship of the American nation but an understanding of the American experience in the light of ultimate and university reality, [resulting in a] reorganization [that] that need not disrupt the American civil religion's continuity" but could instead contribute to a better world beyond our shores.

Part II: CHOICES:

What should we (faculty, students, staff of a public university) do in the face of such tensions?

When it comes to personal faith and conscience: how, when, where, and with whom can we speak our minds on a public university campus?

In the section that follows, four possible approaches are outlined that allow considered discussion about the issues presented in the background reading above. These approaches were developed through repeated discussions that sought to "frame" a core question about what is currently troubling us on public university campuses, and to provide fair-minded alternatives that address some of our concerns. These are not the only alternatives, and there are likely to be ways in which those using this discussion guide will agree and disagree with each. They are presented in this format to facilitate careful consideration of multiple, authentic viewpoints in a deliberate way that informs and enlightens us.

Four principal approaches follow:

Approach 1: Pursue questions of personal faith and conscience in private and maintain the university's neutrality.
Approach 2: Enhance student options and engage outside the classroom.
Approach 3: Engage personal faith and conscience in the classroom, respectfully, if faculty choose Approach 4: Engage questions of faith and conscience widely, actively, and deliberately

The materials that follow develop each of these approaches though a more detailed description, enumeration of pros and cons, references to the background reading, and presentation of illustrative scenarios drawn from real life.

Please probe and weigh these alternative approaches, but remember that the point of this discussion is to illuminate rather than to score debating points or to resolve things by a formal vote. You will also have an opportunity to suggest additional approaches toward the end of this conversation.

APPROACH 1
PURSUE IN PRIVATE AND MAINTAIN UNIVERSITY NEUTRALITY

Description: Speech about personal faith and conscience belongs in private settings or off campus, in keeping with public universities' secular character and obligations of neutrality. Under this approach, individual students and faculty who wish to explore faith-based beliefs and judgments of conscience could do so in private settings with friends and family, in faith-based communities, or in other groups. The university would respect the desire of community members to engage in such discussions, but would not make special efforts to encourage or discourage such discussions. Thus, students and faculty could continue to discuss such their beliefs and views over coffee, or attend gatherings or services with whomever they choose. The university as an institution would maintain its historical neutrality rather than giving more attention to faith-based beliefs or matters of conscience.

Pros: Those who support this approach tend to emphasize the following ideas in support of their views.

- Personal faith-based beliefs and judgments of conscience arise in the innermost hearts and minds of individuals. They're something that should be protected from intrusion and thus should best be addressed in settings that are private and voluntary, as has traditionally be the practice.
- Some students say that they're most comfortable in talking with peers about faith-based beliefs and judgments of conscience when they can do so very informally with those they trust in private settings.
- Many opportunities exist to explore faith-based and conscience-based viewpoints in private conversations with friends and family members, in churches and synagogues, or in other faith-based or community groups. Universities lack relevant expertise and should defer to others in these settings. In light of these options, there's no need for public universities to intervene.
- Public universities should focus on academic matters that are more properly within their expertise and should steer clear or involvement with matters of faith and conscience as they affect individual members of university communities. As a matter of policy, it's best to maintain neutrality in this arena and attempt to steer clear of the "culture wars" that trouble the larger society.
- Constitutional principles relating to the "wall" between church and state should be observed. Members of the public who are taxed to fund public universities expect that such institutions will observe legal requirements relating to separation of church and state, much as they expect such neutrality from public elementary and secondary schools. Faculty and students likewise choose public universities with a full understanding that they are different from other colleges and universities with faith-based affiliations.

Cons. Those who disagree with this approach tend to emphasize concerns such as the following:

- Personal faith and conscience cannot be readily separated from day-to-day life so this approach is artificial and impractical.
- Many students and faculty have deeply held beliefs rooted in personal faith and conscience and this approach would make the campus less hospitable and welcoming for them.
- Artificial efforts to encourage discussions of personal faith and conscience primarily in private settings marginalize such questions. Requiring discussion of personal faith and conscience to take place elsewhere is anti-intellectual since these are important topics that need to be engaged when they arise.
- Critical issues facing society are the proper subject of intellectual inquiry within university settings. Faculty members currently cover topics that raise issues of personal faith and conscience when relevant to their subject matter. More emphatic emphasis on neutrality might make it difficult for them to pursue the issues that they believe in their best judgment are appropriate, and might impinge on the academic freedom of them and their students.
- The "wall" between church and state is not clearly delineated. It is likely that conflicts will arise whether or not the university attempts to embrace "neutrality." The tensions found in the larger society will lead to litigation involving public universities whatever they do.

- Background on American beliefs about faith, legal principles, historical perspectives, and political realities

Scenarios for Discussion: Approach 1

A. Admissions Decisions. A college admissions officer is facing a difficult decision in evaluating several prospective undergraduates' high school transcripts. One student had attended a religiously-oriented high school and sought to apply three courses toward required basic admissions requirements in English, history and government: "Christianity and Morality in American Literature," "Christianity's Influence on American History" and "Special Providence: American Government". Another student's transcript included courses on "Race, Class, and Gender in Modern America," "Feminist Issues throughout U.S. History," and "Introduction to Jewish Thought" toward the high school credits required (though not in required areas such as English, history, and government). (based on issues facing UC-Davis)

B. Personal Advice: A faculty member in a technical field is devout and reveals his own religious background to students on the first day of class. Many of the students write on their information sheets that one of their life goals is to develop a closer relationship with God. In a public forum on religion in his department, he asked whether it would be appropriate for him to suggest prayer to those struggling students who have revealed to him their own desire to connect to God. (based on University of Michigan "Difficult Dialogues" scenario).

C. Living and Learning. A resident adviser at the university has contacted students on her dorm floor inviting them to attend a study group she's created on Buddhism. Other students have decided to organize a standing dinner discussion group at the campus cafeteria to discuss Islam. (based in part on example from UW-Eau Claire)

APPROACH 2
ENHANCE STUDENT OPTIONS AND ENGAGE OUTSIDE THE CLASSROOM

Description: Students should have ample opportunities to explore issues of personal faith and conscience if they choose to do so, but such opportunities should be situated primarily outside the classroom. Consideration of such matters is particularly important during the college years. Many students express serious interest in developing meaningful philosophies of life and in deepening their sense of spirituality. The most suitable setting for such exploration lies outside the standard classroom so that students express their own beliefs without discomfiting challenges from professors and classmates in more formal settings. At the same time, students be provided with support structures and varied occasions in which issues of faith and conscience can be explored. Students could work with those involved in student affairs on campuses to develop additional supportive strategies, for example through public service options, housing choices, additional campus programming, leadership development programs, counseling opportunities, or "safe zone" training.

Pros.

- Students have important educational and developmental needs related to faith and conscience, and should have meaningful opportunities to work with these issues on campus rather than having to pursue them elsewhere.
- This approach allows campus ministries and student organizations to take leadership and to share their expertise, and respects the academic freedom of faculty to address other subjects in the classroom.
- Speech about personal faith and conscience on campus is best situated outside the classroom where faculty are not involved in judging or grading students' views.
- This approach accommodates the views of all members of the campus community, including those of varying faith-based traditions and those who are agnostic, atheistic, or non-religious.
- This approach emphasizes the potential for creative initiatives led by students in order to meet their most substantial interests and needs.

Cons

- People of faith who oppose compartmentalization might find this approach artificial since it precludes conversations about personal faith and conscience in the classroom.
- Faculty who wish to address such issues in the classroom might feel that this approach marginalizes opportunities for engaging with pressing issues in the classroom, or creates false impressions that addressing relevant issues in the classroom is undesirable.
- Those who have a very evangelistic view of their faith and wish to express it in all aspects of their life may believe the university is cutting into or policing their faith by encouraging discussions to be held outside the classroom rather than in classroom settings.
- Giving personal faith and belief an institutional place on campus in non-classroom settings might be seen by some as intruding on the principle of university neutrality.
- Students and student affairs professionals may find it difficult and uncomfortable to deal with the kinds of conflicts and contention that increasingly characterize religious and political debates going on outside campus walls.

Scenarios for Discussion: Approach 2

D. Student Speaker. An elected student government leader has been asked to give a welcoming speech to incoming students at a public university. He urges them to set their sights high and goes on to say that he has accepted Christ as his savior and hopes they will as well. Other students criticized his actions, saying he had been elected to represent the whole student body, including those of diverse faith-related viewpoints. (based on Dartmouth incident)

E. Student Organizations. A university requires every student organization wishing to use university facilities and receive student fees in support of its activities to sign a pledge stating that the organization will not discriminate in its membership based on race, ethnicity, gender, creed, religion, nationality, age, disability, or sexual orientation. A student group affiliated with a particular religious sect refused to sign the statement, saying that its mission required it to admit only those who shared a particular religious faith. The group also approached Student Congress and requested funding for a proposed new student publication designed to encourage others to adopt the faith of its members. (based on examples at UNC-CH, and elsewhere)

F. Residence Hall Choices. A group of students has asked the university to establish a special dorm "theme floor" for students who are Roman Catholics or interested in Roman Catholicism. An evangelical Christian group has met with the dean of students and student government officers to demand that rules that currently prohibit solicitation in dormitories be changed so that their members can go door-to-door to distribute leaflets and talk with students living there about their beliefs. (based in part on example from UW-Madison).

APPROACH 3
ENGAGE PERSONAL FAITH AND CONSCIENCE IN THE CLASSROOM, RESPECTFULLY, IF FACULTY CHOOSE

Description. Speech about personal faith and conscience may occur on campus, including in the classroom, if conducted respectfully and if the professor believes it relevant. Some faculty members teach about topics that are directly relevant to personal faith and conscience, for example in courses in the sciences, literature, philosophy, public policy, gender and queer studies, history, journalism, political science, social work, nursing and medicine. Students would receive a poorer education if issues with implications for personal faith and conscience were not raised and addressed with a critical eye and an open mind in settings such as these. Faculty members have expertise in judging the relevance of topics and the best pedagogical techniques for exploring them. They should therefore be accorded considerable flexibility, in keeping with academic freedom principles, to determine when and in what ways issues of faith and conscience should be engaged. To encourage effective educational engagement in such settings, particularly in contentious times, faculty members should be provided with more extensive faculty development opportunities that help build skill in dealing with controversy in the classroom, and should be able to receive clear answers about their rights and responsibilities in such contexts. Students should also be given opportunities for training in handling "difficult dialogues" in the classroom so that they can actively participate and feel comfortable in doing so. Universities which believe that providing meaningful education on issues that intersect with personal faith and conscience might also find ways to encourage faculty members to incorporate such topics in their classes if relevant, and to flag classes raising such classes so that interested students can more readily enroll.

Pros.

- Faculty members whose courses touch on matters of faith and conscience should have the opportunity to introduce such topics as they believe relevant and wise.
- Classroom discussions provide for powerful learning opportunities by linking teaching with learning that takes place both inside and outside the classroom
- Inclusion of such discussions in the classroom allows faculty and students to engage with each other authentically rather than artificially separating matters of faith and conscience so as to compartmentalize their lives.
- This approach allows students to engage with faculty members if the students are conversant with their faith and ready to talk about it or are struggling with how their faith relates to issues raised in class.
- This approach is most consistent with universities' educational and intellectual mission, which anticipates active efforts to explore difficult questions and current issues including those relating to personal faith and conscience.

Concerns

- This approach may create blurry lines about what is relevant in class or what responses are "respectful," and leaves these decisions in professors' (rather than students') hands.
- This approach may give rise to expectations of in-class discussions when professors are hard-pressed to cover material in courses as it is or may reasonably believe that such discussions are not relevant or may feel that this approach intrudes upon their academic freedom.
- Professors and students may not be skilled in addressing challenging, hot-button issues where issues of faith and intellectual inquiry collide, so that it may be difficult to conduct such dialogues in ways that foster effective learning.
- Students and professors may feel put on the spot if asked to express their views on issues of this sort.
- This approach may result in faculty and students engaging with issues of faith and conscience in the classroom, when such issues might best be addressed in other settings (such as in student settings, dormitories, faith-based communities or with friends)

Scenarios for Discussion: Approach 3

G. Learning to Act. A Mormon woman applied for admission to an actor-training program at a public university. At the time she applied she told program officials that she would not be willing to use profane language or appear in the nude because of her religious beliefs. Initially, when classroom exercises included performing scripts that included profanity, she changed the words. Subsequently, her instructors told her that she needed to perform the scenes as written because copyright words of playwrights could not be changed without written permission for public performances, and because students needed to take on roles with characters unlike themselves (including characters such as a pregnant, unwed prostitute to whose lines the student objected). (based on an incident at the University of Utah).

H. Internship Placement. In a field placement at a faith-based organization, a student became aware that her supervisors understood faith to be an integral part of their patient counseling. The student is from a different faith tradition and not particularly religious. Although she was open to responding to discussions about religion initiated by patients, she felt uncomfortable raising the topic herself as her mentors expected her to do. (based on University of Michigan "Difficult Dialogues" scenario)

I. Recommendation Letter. A student approached the undergraduate adviser in the biology department, and requested a recommendation to medical school. The adviser reviewed her transcript and noted that she had not yet taken a required course in evolutionary biology. The student said that she declined to take the course because of her religious beliefs. The adviser then declined to give the requested recommendation noting that a student who had not taken that course would be poorly prepared for medical school and could not be recommended. (based on incident at Texas Tech)

J. Classroom Dialogues: A group of faculty and students recently began discussing some of the "tips" they'd offer others on dealing with controversy in the classroom. Some of their ideas are listed below. Are there other tips worth noting?
   - ✓ Respect for students is paramount, and it can't be faked. The message should be "feel free to disagree with me and support your point of view." It's important to know students and their backgrounds. It's important to discuss the value of open dialogue and conflict in the marketplace of ideas. Personal discomfort is inevitable are ideas are challenged. That is how we grow and why it is so valuable to engage with different viewpoints in the classroom.
   - ✓ Faculty and students need to work together to create a safe place for open discussion. Some faculty set "ground rules" while others encourage students to reach "group agreements." Students need to know what to expect regarding how controversial topics will be covered. Everyone's perspectives need to be welcomed and treated fairly. Controversial issues can be honored by covering different perspectives. Be sure students know the difference between personal attacks and honest discussion of one's own experiences, values and ideas. Faculty members should also avoid snide comments and should provide students with opportunities to talk with them outside class to raise questions about fairness in treatment of difficult issues.
   - ✓ Faculty members disagree about whether they should disclose their own opinions on controversial topics (some say disclosure dampens discussion, others state their opinion and reasons to encourage others to engage). They also need to appreciate that certain topics are very emotional for students and be prepared to handle such emotions. They should also be ready to deal with students who say something inflammatory.

APPROACH 4
ENGAGE QUESTIONS OF FAITH AND CONSCIENCE WIDELY, ACTIVELY AND DELIBERATELY

Description. Public universities should actively encourage more widespread conversation and engagement with issues of personal faith and conscience throughout their campuses, including in private, student, classroom, and academic settings. Personal faith and conscience are great personal importance as well as increasing social importance yet have led to increasing division within modern societies including the United States. Public universities, no less than their private counterparts, need to engage more actively with related issues and competing viewpoints in order to prepare students for global realities and future roles as citizens. University leaders, faculty and students have worked actively in recent years to engage with issues of multiculturalism and the implications of gender, race, ethnicity, sexuality. Questions of faith and spirituality may in some ways seem more personal, private, and fraught with political overtones. Nonetheless, current conflicts and misunderstandings between those of different faith- and conscience-based traditions unless there are active efforts build bridges that do not currently exist. Special care will be needed to proceed deliberately, creatively, and sensitively in meeting associated challenges. A comprehensive, active approach might include efforts relating to the curriculum, such as: strengthening curricular offerings relating to philosophy, religious studies, or faith-related components of varied courses; developing new courses; or draw on existing models used in other contexts (perhaps a new type of "Great Decisions" course that emphasizes issues of faith and conscience rather than international affairs). It might also be desirable to expand speaker programs focused on issues of faith and conscience featuring either campus-based on visiting speakers. Student affairs programming might be expanded in ways discussed under Approach 2. Campuses might also draw together members of the public from differing faith- and conscience-based viewpoints to engage with those on campus.

Pros

- This approach addresses the range of objectives noted with regard to earlier approaches.
- Public universities are appropriate settings in which to engage with the full-range of pressing social issues and competing viewpoints so that they can be understood more fully. They may be able to bring light (rather than heat) to matters currently confounding the larger society.
- Developing tools for and experience with discussion of deeply-felt differences is important for the future of society and civic life.
- Engaging respectfully with issues of faith and conscience allows students and faculty to learn from others' viewpoints without forcing one's beliefs on others. Issues of faith and conscience are of great importance to students and citizens and it is better to engage with them than to marginalize them in unhealthy ways.
- A multi-faceted, comprehensive approach that engage members of the campus community in a range of contexts are more likely to be effective in broadening understanding and respect than are approaches that limit related discussions to more narrow contexts such as those detailed in earlier approaches.

Cons

- Taking on issues of faith and conscience in a comprehensive way within a public university may create controversy and division. Some faculty, students, parents, and members of the larger community might experience this approach as overbearing and inappropriate in light of their own personal faith and conscience-based beliefs. This approach might also create risks of interference from external forces tied to religious or political viewpoints, or public opprobrium if good-faith efforts prove problematic in execution.
- Some faculty member might worry that this approach could compromise the intellectual ideals and secular nature of the universities or blur important distinctions between the type of critical thinking and intellectual inquiry that is central to a university education and more personal views rooted in conscience and faith-based beliefs. Intermingling issues of faith and conscience in public higher education institutional settings may prove difficult because of the multitude of diverse faith- and conscience-based perspectives or create concerns that such beliefs are not treated with equal respect or attention.
- The University may lack the capacity and competence to undertake such an effort, given other curricular obligations, academic priorities, and resource constraints. Faculty and students may also lack the skills, perspectives, and interests to be navigate challenging topics and conversations effectively.
- Depending on how it would be implemented, this approach might raise legal questions relating to the appropriate roles of publicly funded higher education, faith-based institutions, and individuals' freedom of conscience.
- This approach is less well-defined and may raise expectations that cannot be realized.

K. Learning Tolerance. Members of the faculty at the nation's military academies have significant responsibilities in preparing future military officers to endure the pressures of battle and the challenges of leading troops into harm's way. Recently, several students and faculty who held very strong Christian viewpoints encouraged students in their classes to adopt religious viewpoints similar to their own and began meetings and sports events attended by more junior cadets with prayers. The Academy recently clarified its rules on these issues and implemented a course on "religious tolerance" that is required of all cadets. (based on events at Air Force Academy)

L. Middle East Controversies. In the wake of growing tensions in the Middle East, a number of universities have faced their own Middle East controversies. A faculty member in Middle-Eastern studies was alleged to permit only those sharing his viewpoints on the Palestine/Israeli conflict in his class and to challenge Jewish students who disagreed with him repeatedly. A distinguished junior faculty member in the political science department was openly shunned and criticized on a colleague's blog as a result of her recent scholarship criticizing the role played by religious belief in recent diplomatic history (contrary to her colleague's view). A group of students proposed a very pro-Palestinian art exhibit while another group wanted to bring a very controversial pro-Israeli speaker to campus at the same time. Campus officials believed that these events would create adverse reaction and potential security issues, and accordingly told students they could not use campus facilities for these purposes unless they contributed to the costs of extra security measures (based on events at Columbia, Arizona State, UC-Berkeley and elsewhere).

Dear Jan Boxill :

We are writing to invite you to become a co-sponsor of what will no doubt be one of the major intellectual events at UNC this year. The University Program in Cultural Studies is organizing and co-sponsoring a week long visit to UNC by Professor Gianni Vattimo, an internationally influential Italian philosopher, a leading European public intellectual, and a former (gay) member of the European Parliament. He has written extensively on questions of ethcs in the contemporary world.

His visit, during the last week of November, will include a public lecture entitled "The Post-Enlightenment University: A Meditation on Kant's The Conflict of Faculties." We are organizing a seminar/roundtable discussion with UNC and Duke scholars and students on topics still to be decided. He will also be available to attend classes and meet with individuals or groups interested in his work and/or politics.

The range of Vattimo's interests and publications is wide and includes: postmodernism, post-colonialism, media, ethics, religion, sexuality, critical theory, European politics and contemporary philosophy.

We have attached a more detailed description, including Vattimo's web address, and an estimated budget.

We hope that your unit might be interested in becoming a co-sponsor of this event and contributing some money to the cause. We would appreciate it if you could respond quickly so that we know whether we have enough funds to bring this exciting event to fruition.

Additionally, if you or anyone in your department is interested in arranging a meeting with Vattimo, please contact one us.

Thank you for your time and we hope, your generous support.

Gianni Vattimo is Professor of Philosophy at the Dipartimento di Filosofia, Università degli Studi di Torino (Italy). He is an internationally recognized public intellectual and politician, and a world leading scholar in the following areas: ethics, aesthetics, politics, religion, post-colonial epistemology, postmodernism, technology, literature, art, European studies, and cultural theory.

Vattimo studied with Hans-Georg Gadamer and Karl Loewith in Heidelberg and with Luigi Pareyson in Torino. He has been Dean of the Facoltà di Lettere e Filosofia, Università di Torino and was a member of the European Parliament between 1999 and 2004. He has been a visiting professor at Yale University, University of California at Berkeley and New York University. He holds honoris causa degrees from the universities of La Plata (Argentina, 1996), Palermo (Argentina, 1998) and Madrid (2006). He is Grande Ufficiale of the Italian Republic (1997) and Vice-president of the Academía de la Latinidade. He is also a regular editorialist for the newspapers La Stampa, La Repubblica and Il Manifesto.

Vattimo's philosophical perspective has been characterized as "pensiero debole," or "weak thought." This requires that the foundational certainties of modernity be relinquished for a multi-faceted conception that is both closer to that of the arts and cognizant of the impact of cultural diversity, identity politics, globalization, and interdisciplinary. Vattimo draws on the philosophy of Martin Heidegger – in particular, with his critique of metaphysics – and on the hermeneutical philosophy of his teacher Hans-Georg Gadamer. But his greatest influence is the thought of Friedrich Nietzsche, whose nihilism plays a particularly important role in Vattimo's notion of weak thought.

According to Vattimo, history is a process of weakening – "secularization" and "disenchantment" are other terms he uses – that assumes the form of a decision for non-violence, and thus requires a new political imagination. Nihilism as announced by Nietzsche and Heidegger must therefore be understood as an emancipative reformulation of philosophy that dissolves modernity from within through a twisting, distorting radicalization of its premises. In his dialogues with philosophers such as Jacques Derrida, Jürgen Habermas, Richard Rorty, and Charles Taylor, Vattimo – who is both openly homosexual and an avowed Catholic – has elaborated the cultural, political, and theological consequences of his innovative, interdisciplinary approach.

Jennifer,
Thanks for getting back to me. You know I don't even know these coaches. I'll have to come over and meet them one day. I haven't been over there much in the last year!!!
I am teaching a First Year seminar on Ethics in Sports. Do you think one of them would be willing to come talk to my class sometime?

PHILOSOPHY 273 SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC JUSTICE FALL

The course will consist of readings and class discussions focusing on social and economic issues and their theoretical justifications. The first set of readings will examine classical political theories with a focus on justice and the common good. We will ask questions such as: What is the nature of justice? What is the justification and role of the state? What is the nature of rights? Why do we take rights seriously? Is there such a thing as "the common good"? Do the traditional theories of justice and rights accommodate everyone? The second set of readings will examine current social issues using the theories discussed. The issues we will address are: racism and sexism, affirmative action, capital punishment, business ethics, the environment. We may not, and probably will not, be able to resolve the issues, but we should at least gain a greater understanding of the issues which should serve as beginnings to possible resolutions.

GOALS FOR THIS COURSE:

1. Acquire the basic skills used by philosophers generally and thus the skills we will use in this course; tools and skills needed to appreciate, challenge, reflect, and evaluate both the ideas you have inherited and those you might yet adopt. Philosophical reflection is a matter of engaging actively with ideas. The point throughout is to help you to think clearly, and for yourselves, about positions you would otherwise adopt or reject uncritically; in other words, to give you the skills you need to enjoy intellectual autonomy. With this in mind, by the end of the semester you should be able to:

   Reconstruct an argument from a given passage or text.
   Critically analyze an argument presented to you, produced by you, or reconstructed by you.
   Produce, articulate, and defend reasons for a given opinion and respond to objections raised to this opinion.

2. Gain an understanding of various theories of justice and how they help us understand the current issues in society. For the various issues we will examine, both theoretical and more concrete, you should be able to:

   Define the important terms and concepts.
   Gain an understanding of classical and contemporary theories of justice and rights.
   Apply these various theories to the different issues.
   Explain the relationship between the larger theoretical issues and the relationship between the various issues.
   Given a specific issue, demonstrate the ability to supply reasons in favor of a certain resolution and make sure these are consistent with positions you have taken and will take on other issues.

REQUIRED TEXTS:

The Trial and Death of Socrates
The State, Justice, and the Common Good, edited by B.J. Diggs (SJCG)
Justice, edited by Jonathan Westphal (Justice)
Contemporary Moral Problems, edited by James E. White (CMP)
Nickel and Dimed, Barbara Ehrenreich
Other Readings on Reserve

CLASS REQUIREMENTS:

Keep up with announcements, assignments, outlines and notes for lectures posted on BLACKBOARD.

Assigned Readings: See Schedule

Examinations and Quizzes:

6 Quizzes: Dates announced in Class-likely every 2 weeks; lowest quiz will be dropped.
Two Papers: Paper 1: 3-5 pages; Paper 2: 5-7 pages. Due dates and topics on Blackboard.
A Comprehensive Final: Format -- Short Answer and essay

Outside Assignments: Options

1. Volunteer Service: APPLES or 8-10 hours of volunteer service for the semester with a 3-5 page analysis of your service. Submit a short paragraph for approval to begin service. Paper due last day of class. Or:
2. FOUR outside lectures, events, or articles related to the issues or theories discussed. For each you are to write a one-page (typed or handwritten) analysis/reaction giving a brief summary, your reaction and analysis, and how it is relevant to the class. DUE DATES: Two by Fall Break; Two by last day of class.

Class Participation:

Participation makes for a more enjoyable and interesting class. But further, discussion in class is crucial to understanding and reasoning. You should prepare the readings so that you will be able to answer questions about them and use the concepts they introduce.

Class Attendance: A Roll sheet will be passed around for each class.

FINAL GRADE FOR THE COURSE WILL BE DETERMINED AS FOLLOWS:

Paper #1	=15%
Paper #2	=20%
Quizzes	=20%
Outside Assignments/Attendance	=10%
Final Exam	=35%

COMPREHENSIVE FINAL EXAM

THE HONOR CODE

It shall be the responsibility of every student at UNC to obey and to support the enforcement of the Honor Code, which prohibits lying, cheating, or stealing when these actions involve academic processes or University, student, or academic personnel acting in an official capacity.

CAMPUS CODE

It shall be the further responsibility of every student to abide by the Campus Code; namely, to conduct oneself so as not to impair significantly the welfare or the educational opportunities of others in the University Community.

WHAT I EXPECT

The Honor Code is, as always, in effect in this course. The following sections explain what I expect from you in terms of meeting these standards. If you have any questions at all about these matters, please do not hesitate to ask me.

PLEDGE: The Instrument of Student Judicial Governance requires that you sign a pledge on all written work. (?On my honor, I have neither given nor received unauthorized aid on this assignment.?) This includes all papers, exams, and quizzes. The first time you hand in an assignment, I expect you to write out the pledge in full. After that, you may simply write ?Pledge? and sign your name.

EXAMS AND QUIZZES: All in-class exams and quizzes in this class are to be taken without the assistance of books, notes, or other people. You may, however, study with classmates. In fact, forming study groups is an excellent way to prepare for exams.

PAPERS: As with exams and quizzes, I encourage you to discuss your papers with your classmates and anyone else, for that matter. The crucial thing to remember is that you must give citations for ideas that are not your own, whether or not those ideas have been written down somewhere. If your roommate comes up with a brilliant example and you use it in your paper, then you must cite him or her in a footnote.

Again, if you are not clear about any of this, ask questions.

Personal Faith and Conscience:
How, When, Where and With Whom Can We Speak Our Minds on a Public University Campus?

DISCUSSION GUIDE

Introduction

College communities around the country have in recent days experienced a growing pattern of religious intolerance, threatened restraints on free inquiry, and difficulties in sustaining informed political and civil discourse. As university populations have become more diverse, they are confronting new realities in which differing voices struggle to be heard and respected. Political forces have increasingly highlighted "wedge issues" that pit deeply held religious and moral judgments against emerging social and scientific trends. As polarization has increased outside university walls, it has been increasingly difficult to maintain the long tradition of open and respectful inquiry within university classrooms. New forms and norms for communication seem to fuel tendencies to attack and belittle competing viewpoints rather than to engage in open-minded exploration of ideas.

In 2005, the Ford Foundation announced its "Difficult Dialogues Initiative," inviting colleges and universities around the country to join it in addressing these concerns. As the Ford Foundation's President eloquently stated: "Open and honest dialogue is one of the defining characteristics of a vibrant academic community … [and] is an essential component of a strong civil society on which democracy depends. We must strive to ensure that all members of the community are treated as full and equal partners in the intellectual and institutional life of colleges and universities, especially those who may hold minority political views or religious beliefs. Campus leaders also must create an atmosphere of mutual respect, in which diversity is examined and seen in the context of a broader set of common values. We need to ensure that our discourse not only remains open but civil."

As one of the campus partners in the Difficult Dialogue Initiative, UNC Chapel Hill is endeavoring to make the practice of dialogue second nature on our campus, and invites colleagues elsewhere to do the same. Too often, matters of religious belief and academic inquiry seem to fall prey to a "clash of cultures" and a tendency for students and faculty to engage in verbal sparring matches, to "debate" rather than to discuss and learn from one another's experiences and views. A group of faculty, students, and student affairs leaders has worked intensively to develop a framework in which differing viewpoints on these issues can be engaged and explored in a respectful and open-minded way. Our goals are to foster freedom expression and respectful attention for a wide range of viewpoints, engage in intellectually serious analysis and defense of multiple viewpoints, and exploration of common ground without ignoring genuine differences among diverse viewpoints.

We invite you to engage with us in deep and candid conversation about Personal faith and conscience: how, when, where, and with whom can we speak our minds on a public university campus? This formulation is a powerful one in which each word has a deliberate meaning.

- We hope the conversation will draw forth genuine, personal views that will be respectfully treated and openly considered.

- We seek to grapple with the full range of faith- and conscience-based beliefs since such beliefs are rooted in personal values that include those held not only by individuals committed to traditional Judeo-Christian viewpoints but also by agnostics, atheists, and others with moral vantages that are arise from sources other than traditional religion.

- We emphasize the process of "speaking our minds" by which we intend a focus on oral and written communication (rather than the clothes one wears or other sorts of expression).

- We use the word "we" very deliberately, with the intent to exploring how all members of our campus community interact with each other (for example, students interacting with fellow students of similar or different faith traditions, faculty interacting with faculty and students in the classroom and elsewhere, and staff interacting with the full range of community members).

- Our discussion will explore varied approaches to this question, including some that have emerged from our work to date, but also others that will emerge in this Forum that involves a wider range of participants. We will deliberate--rather than debate--using safe and fair ground rules to be considered at the outset so that we can all speak, listen, and learn from each other. No votes will be taken. All viewpoints will be welcome.

This discussion guide is organized in three parts. Part I provides background information on the growing tensions relating to personal faith and conscience on college campuses. Part II outlines four approaches that members of college communities—individual students and faculty as well as campus leaders--might be taken in response to these tensions. Part III provides supplemental resources including ideas on how best to approach conversations about these difficult issues and sources of information on related topics.

Background

Campus Experiences

One University's Recent Experiences

Evidence of tensions relating to personal faith and conscience and academic inquiry may be found at numerous universities around the country. The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is merely one case in point:

- In 2002 the University chose Approaching the Koran: The Early Revelations by Michael Sells as its summer reading selection. The decision was roundly criticized by many legislators and members of the public. Subsequently the American Family Association's Center for Law and Policy brought suit on behalf of three students, an alumnus and a state citizen, claiming that their First Amendment rights have been violated. The federal district court subsequently concluded that the choice was permissible since it did not advance or endorse religion and did not compel students to engage in "religious exercise."

- In 2003 a three-member Christian fraternity lost its status as an officially recognized student organization when it refused to sign the University's standard non-discrimination policy. The fraternity's law suit in federal court alleging that the University had unlawfully abridged the students' First Amendment rights to freedom of association, freedom of speech, and free exercise of religion was ultimately dismissed as moot.

- In spring 2004 an instructor was disciplined by her department for publicly accusing a student of hate speech after he expressed in her class his objection to homosexuality based on his religious beliefs.

- A "diversity assessment" conducted during fall 2004 gave evidence of related concerns. (excerpts from qualitative comments to be inserted once available)

- In 2005-2006, the campus newspaper ran a student column that cast Arabs in a disparaging light as well as a cartoon featuring a depiction of the Prophet Mohammed. Later a recent graduate drove his SUV into a popular campus gathering spot, injuring nine people. He subsequently explained that he had done so to demonstrate his commitment to Islam and to protest American foreign policy. Some students protested, asserting that his action should be labeled "terrorist" while others held a vigil in sympathy for Muslim students and those who had been hurt.

- In the last several years, the University established programs in Jewish, Islamic, and Christian studies. In 2005 and 2006, many liberal arts faculty protested discussions with a potential donor who was considering a proposal for funding of an initiative in Western Cultures. The donor had ties with other groups with conservative views that had publicly ridiculed faculty members who taught courses that emphasized diversity themes. The University subsequently withdrew the proposal in order to permit additional faculty review.

UNC Chapel Hill has not been alone in facing challenges like these. The discussion guide that follows incorporates experiences reported in news from around the country.

Hate Crime

National statistics also demonstrate problematic levels of tension. For example, the United States Federal Bureau of Investigation indicated that it in 2004 had received reports of 7649 incidents involving 9035 offenses. Of the 7642 single-bias incidents, racially motivated crimes accounted for 52.9%, religious bias accounted for 18.0%, bias against sexual orientation accounted for 15.8% and bias against ethnicity or national origin accounted for 12.7%. Of the 1,374 incidents involving religious bias, anti-Jewish incidents predominated (954 incidents), with anti-Islamic incidents ranking second (156). Anti-Catholic incidents numbered 57, anti-Protestant incidents numbered 38, anti-other-religion incidents numbered 128. There had been 898 hate crimes reported on school or college campuses, including 492 related to race, 184 related to religion, 150 related to sexual orientation, 68 related to national origin, 2 related to disability and 2 with multiple biases.

In April 2006, the United States Commission on Civil Rights held hearings and issued a statement on growing anti-Semitism. The Commission found that

> Many college campuses throughout the United States continue to experience incidents of anti-Semitism. This is a serious problem which warrants further attention. While incidents of threatened bodily injury, physical intimidation or property damage are now rare, they have been alleged on some campuses. On other campuses, students have alleged patterns of threatening or intimidating behavior, derogatory remarks, vandalism, and use of Swastikas and other symbols of hatred or bigotry….On many campuses, anti-Israeli or anti-Zionist propaganda has been disseminated that includes traditional anti-Semitic elements, including age-old anti-Jewish stereotypes and defamation. This has included, for example, anti-Israel literature that perpetuates the medieval anti-Semitic blood libel of Jews slaughtering children for ritual purpose, as well as anti-Zionist propaganda that exploits ancient stereotypes of Jews as greedy, aggressive, overly powerful, or conspiratorial.

Students on college campuses are increasingly diverse even in states where residents have a significant preference in admissions. Economic shifts have resulted in greater mobility of families from other states and other countries so that residency no longer means life-long ties to a particular state. In contrast to their parents' generation, college students today are more likely to encounter others with viewpoints rooted in cultures, faiths, and moral perspectives that differ from those at home. The mixture of religious backgrounds characterizing students may vary depending on the region of the country and admissions criteria. Depending on student characteristics, student viewpoints and controversies may vary.

Students

Student Religious Affiliations and Implications

For example, in 2005 nearly 2/3 of UNC Chapel Hill's entering students reported affiliation with the following religions: Baptist (19.3%), Methodist (13.6%), Roman Catholic (13.1%), Presbyterian (9.6%), and "Other Christian" (9.7%). Fewer than 5% reported Jewish (2.5%), Hindu (1.3%) or Islamic (.9%) affiliation, and16.9% reported no religious affiliation. In contrast, entering undergraduates at public flagship universities a much more heterogeneous mix, with more than double the percentage of Roman Catholics and Jewish students (27.5% and 5.9% respectively), far fewer Baptists, Methodists, and Presbyterians (5.2%, 5.3%, and 5.2% respectively), and even more students reporting no religious affiliation (22.6%).

Patterns of religious preference also appear to correspond in interesting ways with student experiences and viewpoints as demonstrated in the following chart, comparing the responses of undergraduates entering UNC-Chapel Hill in 2005 with their peers at public flagship universities. In particular, UNC-Chapel Hill students are more likely to have attended religious services, discussed religion, and prayed or meditated on a weekly basis during high school. They are also much more likely to regard "integrating spirituality into my life" as a high priority, and to believe that their religious beliefs will be strengthened during college. They are somewhat more socially conservative, and are more inclined to believe that dissent is an important part of the political process.

Questions:
1a: Attended religious service in past year
1b: Discussed religion

2a: Time in high school in prayer/mediation: none + less than one hour/week
2b: Time in high school in prayer/mediation: 1-5 hrs

3a: Very important reason to attend college…: find my purpose in life
3b: Objectives that are "essential" or "very important": integrating spirituality into my life
3c: Objectives that are "essential" or "very important": developing meaningful philosophy of life
3d: Chances "very good" that attending college will strengthen religious beliefs/convictions

4a: "Abortion should be legal" (agrees strongly or very strong)
4b: "If two people really like each other, it's all right for them to have sex, even if they've known each other for only a very short time" (agrees strongly or very strongly)
5a: "It is important to have laws prohibiting homosexual relationships" (agrees strongly or very strongly)
5b: "Same-sex couples should have the right to legal marital status" (agrees strongly or very strongly)

6a: "Colleges should prohibit racist/sexist speech on campus" (agrees strongly or very strongly)
6b: "Dissent is a critical component of the political process" (agrees strongly or very strongly)
6c: "Realistically, an individual can do little to bring about changes in our society" (agrees strongly or very strongly)

Study of Student Spirituality

In addition to the above insights, drawn from the annual American College Freshmen Survey (part of the Cooperative Institutional Research Program in which many universities and colleges participate), UCLA researchers with support of the John Templeton Foundation have been conducting survey research focused on the religious and spiritual lives of college students. An initial phase of the study relied upon surveys in fall 2004 of 112,000 entering students at 236 colleges, using questions that included many similar to those in the annual freshmen survey noted above. Longitudinal studies tracked a smaller universe of students (approximately 3680 at 46 colleges and universities) into their junior years. Some notable findings include the following:

- Among first-year students, 8 in 10 reported attending religious services during the past year. Nearly 8 in 10 said that they believed in God, with more than half perceiving God as "love" or as the "creator" and about half experiencing God as a "protector." Many reported deriving strength, support and comfort from their beliefs. Four in ten students reported that they felt "secure" in their beliefs, with one in four saying that they were "seeking," one in four reporting being "conflicted" or "doubting," and one in seven saying they were "not interested." Forty-seven percent reported that they "seek out opportunities to help [themselves] grow spirituality."

- The researchers also analyzed students with reference to "spirituality," "religiousness" (religious commitment, engagement, religious/social conservatism, religious skepticism, and religious struggle), and four other factors (charitable involvement, compassionate self-concept, ethic of caring, and ecumenical worldview). Using these variables, they found that religious commitment and engagement was closely correlated with religious/social conservatism and negatively correlated with religious skepticism. Those showing high levels of religious engagement tended to be conservative politically (self-identified conservatives outnumbered liberals by 3 to 1). Roughly equal proportions of politically conservative and liberal students earned high scores on either charitable involvement or compassionate self-concept, while liberals "substantially outnumber conservatives among those with high scores on ethic of caring (2 to 1) and ecumenical worldview (3 to 1).

- The researchers reported two clusters of religious preferences among entering students. Those identifying themselves as Mormons, Seventh-Day Adventists, Baptists and "other Christians" emerging as "strongly spiritual, religious, and religiously/socially conservative" and expressing little religious skepticism. A second cluster (including Unitarians, Buddhists, Hindus, Episcopalians, Eastern Orthodox and Jewish students), were found to score low on religiousness and high on religious skepticism, ecumenical worldview, ethic of caring and charitable involvement. Roman Catholics reportedly scored below the overall average on religious commitment, religious engagement, religious/social conservatism, and religious skepticism."

- Longitudinal studies of a much smaller set of college juniors reported a decline in attendance at religious services (52% had reported attending religious services frequently the year before entering college, but only 29% reported attending frequently in their junior year). There was a significant reduction in self-perceived "religiousness" and "spirituality" (only 9% said that their religiousness was much stronger and only 13% said their spirituality was much stronger), yet there was some growth in those who said it was "very important" to integrate spirituality into their lives, develop a meaningful philosophy of life, and help others in difficulty. Students who spend more time partying show larger-than-average declines in attendance at religious services during the first three years of college.

- By junior year, it appeared that levels of religious commitment (measured by finding religion personally helpful, gaining spiritual strength by trusting in a higher power, feeling loved by God and seeking to follow religious teachings in daily life) tracked student choices of major at least to some degree. Those who chose to major in the fine arts, education and humanities had the highest levels of religious commitment, with the lowest levels of religious commitment reported by those in biological sciences, history, political science and sociology. Only about 20% of juniors were "highly religious" while a similar proportion were found to have low levels of religious engagement (defined as a pattern of behavior that includes such things as attending religious services, reading sacred texts, attending religious/spiritual workshops or retreats, and joining a religious organization on campus).

- Among college juniors, religiosity and spirituality also correlated with self-identified political viewpoints. Those who identified themselves as politically conservative, were substantially more likely to show high levels of religious commitment (50% versus 18% for self-identified liberals) and religious engagement (37% versus 10%), and were also more likely to show high levels of equanimity (35% versus 23%) and self-esteem (37% versus 29%). Viewed in a somewhat different light, students who regarded themselves as "highly religious" were divided among 41% who described themselves as conservative or far right, 44% who described themselves as "middle-of-the-road" and 15% who described themselves as liberal or far left. Students who were "least religious" included only 9% of those who saw themselves as conservative or far right, 56% of those who were middle-of-the-road, and 35% of those who were liberal or far left. Substantial differences in views on social issues were also apparent as between highly religious students and least religious students, including differences on views about casual sex, abortion, and homosexuality.

Trends Among Teenagers

There are indications that surveys of entering college students do not tell the whole story or do not fully capture emerging trends, however. In a recent book, Soul Searching: The Religious and Spiritual Lives of American Teenagers, (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2005), Professor Christian Smith and Melinda Lundquist Denton analyzed data and interviews from the National Survey of Youth and Religion begun in 2000. Some of the study's major findings about teenagers aged 13-17 include the following.

- Difficulty articulating beliefs: Very few of the teens interviewed could explain the tenets of their religion or what it means. The researchers concluded that this phenomenon was equally evident in devout and non-religious teens, and judged that it was not due to poor communication skills. Instead, in their view it appeared that, for many of the teens "our interview was the first time that any adult had ever asked them what they believed and how it mattered in their life."

- Religious outlook: The interviews suggested that many teens (whatever their religious affiliation) shared an outlook the researchers dubbed "Moralistic Therapeutic Deism" that embraced five major principles: (1) A God exists who created and orders the world and watches over human life on earth but from a distance; (2) God wants people to be good, nice, and fair to each other, as taught in the Bible and by most world religions; (3) The central goal of life is to be happy and to feel good about oneself; (4) God does not need to be particularly involved in one's life except when God is needed to resolve a problem; and (5) Good people go to heaven when they die. Moral relativism was also common among teenagers interviewed.

- Conversations in school: In school, 65% of religious US teens only express their religious faith only some or a little. 12% of the teens express their faith a lot and 23% do not express their faith at all. Mormons are the most likely to express their faith, followed by conservative and black Protestant teens. Half of Jewish teens and half of Catholics do not express their faith. However, it is not because school is viewed as being a hostile place to religious teenagers—fewer than 20% of teenagers report that schools look down on teens who are openly religious.

- Views of others: The researchers concluded that teens do not talk about religion very often amongst themselves. They tend to see religion as not a particularly contested or conflictive aspect of their lives, but instead something that simply is, that is just not the kind of thing worth getting worked up about one way or the other. In confronting issues of faith difference, most teens take an inclusive religious pluralism stance on the matter of religious truth claims—60% of all respondents state that many religions may be true. The researchers also noted that "nearly all U.S. teens seem to have adopted a posture of civility and a careful and ambiguous inclusiveness when discussing religion with possible 'others,' especially in public," perhaps because of the strong tradition of individualism in America as well as the public school system.

What Happens In College: Theories of Intellectual and Moral Development

Some of differences between teenagers still in high school and students who are nearing college graduation may be explained in part by the dynamics of intellectual and moral development during the college years. Numerous educational theories might be noted, but only a few will be mentioned here.

- Cognitive Development. Benjamin Bloom, of the University of Chicago, is widely regarded as among the foremost theorists of students' intellectual development. He developed a "taxonomy of educational objectives" which he derived based on the educational goals articulated by faculty colleagues and the types of questions posed on comprehensive examinations. His most well-known taxonomy relates to the "cognitive domain" and includes the following elements (listed from the simplest to the most complex): knowledge (the kind of intellectual capability that can be created even by rote memorization); comprehension (the ability to paraphrase, interpret and explain); application (the capacity to transfer ideas learned in one situation to use in another); analysis (the capacity to distinguish between subsidiary ideas that are part of a larger whole); synthesis (the capacity to bring disparate ideas together into a larger whole); and evaluation (the capacity to test or judge ideas against a set of larger standards).

- Affective Development. Bloom also considered the "affective" domain which concerns the way that people deal with emotional dimensions including feelings, values, appreciation, enthusiasms, motivations and attitudes. His five major elements in this taxonomy (ranging from the simplest to the most complex) include: receiving phenomena (awareness, willingness to hear and attend to others with respect), responding to phenomena (active participation with others in learning, willingness to respond and question new ideals and concepts in order to understand them); valuing (acceptance of values, attaching worth to particular values or phenomena, developing more complex commitments, acting on more complex commitments); organization (creates priorities from contrasting or conflict values, compares and synthesizes values); internalizing values (develops a value system that shapes personal behavior in a cohesive way, acts in self-reliant way that evidences commitment to ethical practice, consideration of others, weighing of new evidence).

- Intellectual and Moral Development. A major theory of intellectual and moral development in college students was developed by William Perry, based on interviews conducted among male students attending Harvard College some years ago. Perry focused on how students understand the nature of knowledge and what kinds of knowledge are to be valued. Perry identified several stages of development. The first three stages involve "dualism," a period in which a learner assumes that all questions have or can have "right" answers derived from external authorities; the absence of right answers is attributed to authority figures who lack relevant knowledge or to knowledge that has yet to be discovered. The next two stages involve "relativism," which treats knowledge as non-absolute in most cases, treats dominant knowledge as pertinent but not the absolute truth, sees most things as uncertain, finds no real basis for deciding absolute right and wrong, treats authorities as just individuals with opinions, and regards all ideas as having equal value before ultimately recognizing that learners must take responsibility for using and evaluating non-absolute knowledge in complicated settings. Perry's final three stages involve "commitment" and move beyond cognitive abilities to make judgments regarding one's values and identity, act on and balance associated commitments and responsibilities to self and others. Although Perry's work has been criticized a non-diverse population and as treating development as a linear process when it more likely involves cycles, his approach remains a standard framework for thinking about student development during the college years and beyond.

- Faith Stages. Dr. James Fowler, of Emory University, developed a framework for thinking about the stages through which approaches to faith and spirituality evolve across the lifespan (in contrast to the content of faith-based or spiritual beliefs). His most well-known work is Stages of Faith: The Psychology of Human Development and the Quest for Meaning (HarperCollins, 1981). Fowlerr's work was also influenced by that of other theorists who studied psychological development from childhood through adulthood. In Fowler's view "faith" encompasses an individual's beliefs about their relationship with the universal, something that evolves throughout one's life. Fowler regarded faith as an ongoing activity (rather than something one "has"), reflecting the interplay of "conversion" (major changes in one's values or core beliefs) and "development" (a gradual maturation process).

- According to Fowler, there are six major stages in faith development, which foster insight of one's development, but should not used to evaluate or judge. Stage 1 is the "intuitive-projective" stage in which children are centered on their own experiences, their imaginations and fantasies, and others' actions and stories. At this stage, they lack the internal means of understanding their experiences, the fantasies they develop, or the stories to which they're exposed. Stage 2 is the "mythical-literal" stage in which faith has a more definite cognitive component, which may be drawn from the values of one's family or from exposure to other influences such as those of teachers, peers, and the media. In Stage 2, individuals tend to associate with those who are like them and be critical of those who differ, believe in "justice" insofar as the good are rewarded and the bad punished, often give symbols very literal meanings and engage in little self-reflection.

Stage 3 is the "synthetic-conventional" stage in which individuals attempt to develop an integrated identity, based on values or beliefs typically derived from significant others without much internal examination. Those at stage 3 may have an "ideology" that involves a cluster of beliefs and values but may not be aware of it. They may also have internalized expectations in ways that make it difficult for them to manage the different roles and contexts in which they must function, and may be uncomfortable with conflict and controversy.

- Fowler describes stage 4 as the "individuative-reflective" stage, one that often involves critical assessment of prior experiences, values and beliefs. In stage 4, individuals move toward a grounding within an authentic self rather than relying most heavily on external expectations and roles, while also making explicit personal judgments about commitments based on deliberate examination of their core beliefs. Stage 5, the "conjunctive" stage is generally not reached until mid-life, when individuals experience significant tensions (for example at the point between being old and young), are able to deal with multiple perspectives and ambiguity, are drawn to the deeper levels of myth and symbolism, and are more open to others' faith traditions. Stage 6, "universalizing," takes varied forms but generally involves a more encompassing sense of truth that transcends group-based faith traditions.

- Another theorist, Sharon Parks, has extended Fowler's work in significant ways. She proposes an additional stage of faith development which she calls "young adult" (which includes many college students) and treats faith development as involving three components (the first involving forms of knowing or cognition, the second forms of dependence or affect, and the third forms of community or social interaction). During the early "young adult" stage, individuals facing new environments may regress to previous more comfortable states until they are more comfortable in the new settings. They may also take some time before developing "self-authority" and may need experience with a social group that provides mentoring before trusting their growing sense that they can stand on their own. Parks' approach is helpful in spotlighting both a critical stage of development and by providing a framework that speaks explicitly to the importance of "dependence" and social settings.

- Thoughtful observers also recognize that college students' experiences outside the classroom often help them learn important lessons that may be less easily imparted in the classroom. In his important book, Making the Most of College: Students Speak Their Minds (Harvard University Press, 2001), Richard Light highlights students' own judgments about the importance of religious diversity among their classmates and the ways in which such diversity contributes to their education. Students interviewed emphasized the importance of religious diversity in living arrangements, which allowed them to experience others' traditions and beliefs in ways they were unlikely to have done at home. One student commented: "Everything that I have learned by observing and interacting with my more religious roommates has helped me to decide what is important and not important to me in a belief system, or more generally in a spiritual outlook." Another said: "As a Catholic, I find there is a certain bond that exists for me with observant people of other religions. Inter-faith forums have certainly helped to develop this connection with the other side, such as Jewish students from Hillel with whom we share many events… I definitely feel comfortable talking about certain things, or taking certain things for granted, when I'm with other religious people, whatever their religion."

Political Viewpoints and Student Values

College students do not necessarily express the same blend of faith-based beliefs, social policy judgments, and political affinities as do older citizens, explored in more detail as part of the discussion of the world beyond the campus, below. A recent study by the Harvard Institute of Politics conducted phone interviews of a national sampling of college students in March 2006 provides some important insights about the relationship between these important dimensions of students' lives.

- The vast majority of student respondents indicated that religion played an important role in their lives (70%), and 25% said that they had grown more spiritual while in college. When asked about their top-most concern, 39% of respondents (compared to 20% of the public in general) cited the war in Iraq. On the other hand, 66% of respondents believed that the United States should use armed intervention if necessary in order to address genocide abroad. Respondents indicated that the United Nations should play a more significant role and favored multilateral approaches. Differences in political viewpoint correlated with views on how religion should play out in the public eye. Among Republican respondents, 56% wanted to hear candidates speak about their religious views, in contrast to 21% of Democratic respondents. Republican respondents also wanted religious values to play a more important role in government (38% compared to 16% among Democratic respondents). Republican respondents generally feared that religion was losing its influence in American life (62%) and felt that was a "bad thing" by a 7-1 margin, while 52% of Democratic respondents felt that religion's influence was increasing while concluding by a 2-1 margin that that was a bad thing. A majority of both Republican and Democratic respondents said that they were "concerned about the moral direction of the country," including 50% of white respondents, 74% of African-American respondents, 49% of men and 57% of women.

- The Harvard study found that college students believed that a larger range of issues had "moral" dimensions compared to those generally highlighted as raising questions "values" in recent political discourse. Majorities of both Republican and Democratic respondents regarded abortion (78% of Republican respondents and 59% of Democrats), gay marriage (64% and 54% respectively) and stem-cell research (64% and 54% respectively) as "moral issues." Notably, 38% to 48% of Republican and Democratic respondents believed that the government's response to Hurricane Katrina (48% and 45% respectively) and education (38% and 44% respectively) should also be viewed within a moral context. Other "moral issues" included the environment (30% of Republican and 42% of Democratic respondents respectively), healthcare (35% and 52% respectively), Iraq (44% and 39% respectively), and affirmative action (24% and 37% respectively).

- The Harvard poll emphasized that there appear to be four major clusters of college student political viewpoints (in contrast to traditional conservative/liberal labels) and recognized that faith-based and moral beliefs as well as gender and race have implications for policy judgments among this population. "Traditional conservatives" (16% of respondents) were more likely males from upper income families, are more optimistic about the future, believe the country is on the right track, are comfortable voting for candidates who speak about their religious beliefs and want religious values to play a more important role in government. "Religious centrists" (25% of respondents) included a large concentration of African-American and Hispanic students who are deeply concerned about the moral direction of the country, and regard the response to Hurricane Katrina, universal healthcare and the environment as moral issues. "Secular centrists" (15%) are more likely to be male, tend to optimistic about the future, do not regard abortion or homosexuality as morally wrong, do not factor religion into their world view and do not want religious values to play a more important role in government. Finally, traditional liberals (40%) are more likely female, support Roe v. Wade with regard to abortion, do not regard homosexuality as morally wrong, think universal healthcare should be a right for all, the environment should be protected, and immigration should be permitted.

Faculty

Spirituality and the Professoriate

Data on the viewpoints of college faculty are more limited, but some insight can be gained from periodic surveys of American college faculty and from research on spirituality within the professoriate that is part of the UCLA research on college spirituality noted above.

- Data from the 2004-05 survey of American college faculty found a substantial consensus in views regarding the goals of undergraduate education, with a high proportion of faculty respondents rating the following goals as "very important" or "essential: developing student's critical thinking abilities (99%), helping students master knowledge in a discipline (94%), and promoting students' ability to write effectively (87%). Other goals included preparing undergraduates for employment (73%), and for graduate or advanced study (61%) with substantial variation across types of institutions. Other goals included instilling a basic appreciation for the liberal arts (56%) and the development of moral character (59%), but only 30% believes that the chief benefit of a college education is to increase earning power. Perspectives on educational goals were also framed against a general concern that many students were poorly prepared academically (while 67% of faculty at private universities agreed "somewhat" or "strongly" that "most students are well-prepared academically, only 37% of public university faculty shared that view). In contrast, 70% of freshmen entering college in 2004 rated themselves as "above average" or in the "highest 10%" academically, and about half reported earning "A"s in high school.

- The recent study on "Spirituality and the Professoriate" conducted by UCLA with support of the John Templeton Foundation, surveyed 40,670 faculty at 421 colleges and universities across the country. Only 30% of respondents believed that "colleges should be concerned with facilitating students' spiritual development," but more than half regarded other related goals "essential" or "very important": enhancing students' self-understanding (60%), developing students' moral character (59%) and helping students develop personal values (53%). Academic field and institutional type correlated in interesting ways with faculty viewpoints. The highest level of agreement with the statement that "colleges should be concerned with facilitating students' spiritual development" were found among faculty in the health sciences (41%) and humanities (40%), with the lowest proportions in the biological sciences (22%), social sciences (24%) , physical sciences (24%) and agricultural/forestry (25%). Faculty members at public universities and colleges showed the lowest level of agreement with this statement (18% and 23% respectively).

- In light of the priority purposes of education and the concerns for student academic preparedness noted above, it is perhaps not surprising that emphasis on religion and spirituality is relatively rare in many classrooms. In reports by college juniors in the companion study of student spirituality described above, 62% indicated that their professors "never encouraged discussion of spirituality and religion" while 56% said that their professors "never provided opportunities to discuss the meaning or purpose of life."

- Faculty members' views on the role of religion and spirituality in the classroom differed from those held by faculty members regarding the place of religion and spirituality for faculty members within the academy. When asked to agree or disagree with the statement "the spiritual dimension of faculty members' lives has no place in the academy," 57% disagreed. Once again academic disciplines seemed to shape or reflect respondents' viewpoints, with the highest disagreement reported by those in the health sciences (67%), education (65%) and business (60%) and the lowest levels in social sciences (51%), physical sciences (50%), and biological sciences (49%). The highest level of disagreement was found in public universities (49%).

- Faculty members' reluctance to regard religion and spirituality as appropriate in the classroom or the academy did not, however, indicate that faculty members are not spiritual or religious, or that spirituality and religion does not play a role in their personal lives. Of those responding, 81% described themselves as "spiritual," while 64% regarded themselves as "religious" to some or a greater extent (29% and 37% respectively). Female faculty appeared to have a higher level of spirituality, with 87% of women describing themselves as "spiritual" (in contrast to 78% of male faculty members), endeavoring to integrate spirituality in life (54% of women compared to 42% of men), engaging in self-reflection (74% and 64% respectively), and seeking opportunities to grow spirituality (76% compared to 65%). The highest proportion of self-identification as "spiritual" was found for African-American faculty (66% regarded themselves as spiritual "to a great extent"), in contrast to American Indians/Alaska Natives (60%), Native Hawaiian/Pacific Islanders (59%), Puerto Ricans (59%), Mexican-Americans (53%), white/Caucasians (48%), and Asian-Americans (37%).

Disciplinary Frameworks and Faculty Viewpoints

Faculty perspectives must also be understood in a broader historical and sociological context. In a working paper, Professor Mark Edwards (former President of St. Olaf College and currently associate dean of Harvard Divinity School, and author of a new book entitled Religion on Our Campuses) offers crucial insights.

- Historical trends have shaped the development of colleges and universities in the last 150 years. In the first half of the nineteenth century natural sciences were closely associated with Christian theology. In time the sciences were seen to provide evidence of divine design in the guise of rational thought and inquiry and the study of science was viewed as a means of praising God. By mid-century, scientists were able to discern causal explanations that made it possible to offer explanations of phenomena other than by reference to supernatural intervention. What constituted an explanation changed and scientists turned to scientific inquiry as the best means of explaining natural phenomena rather than simply invoking God. Other disciplines followed suit, as the humanities departed from moral philosophy and social sciences claimed their own identity.

- By the beginning of the 20th century, research universities began to develop, with instructors drawn from those who had sophisticated substantive expertise in specialized fields. As belief in the scientific method grew and the extent of knowledge burgeoned, only those with "disciplined" knowledge had the necessary legitimacy to claim a place in the academy. Such disciplined expertise was provided through advanced education at top research universities which provided intensive mentoring, and required advanced levels of scholarly performance which in time resulted in the award of a Ph.D. Professional legitimacy for scholars awarded teaching positions at universities was increasingly tested by scholarly writing that was reviewed by national and international peers with similarly advanced expertise.

- In Edwards' view, faculty members are now inculcated by intensive experience that can be described as "professional formation," just as is true for those who undergo "formation" to profess their beliefs as members of the clergy. As undergraduates, they choose a major and increasingly assimilate the knowledge, values, and intellectual approaches that characterize the academic discipline in question. They go on to graduate work and spend more years within a specialized academic community that deepens and tests such expert knowledge and ways of knowing through comprehensive examinations and research on the Ph.D. They are evaluated and selected for academic appointments through a process that emphasizes their disciplinary focus. They then pass on their ways of knowing to their own students, and gain professional acclaim based upon their scholarly contributions to their chosen academic field.

- Edwards argues that there may be room to reintroduce religious perspectives within the academy in certain circumscribed respects. He contends that religious views may be most appropriate with regard to moral claims, claims regarding human nature, and claims regarding maximally comprehensive views of reality (certain kinds of "metaphysical" claims). In his view, it may be appropriate for certain religious insights to be offered in as an autobiographical explanation of "where I'm coming from," and suggests that the introduction of religious views in other settings should be undertaken with caution, and only in instances in which they contribute to the conversation and deepen understanding.

Academic Freedom

"Academic freedom," like academic disciplines, plays a central role in faculty members' understandings of the nature of American higher education. Academic freedom rests on core beliefs that the mission of higher education is to seek out and disseminate truth (however unpopular or inconvenient) and that the best way to accomplish this mission is to express ideas freely and subject them and to test them openly without fear of reprisal. It rests on a shared commitment to collegial interchange and a responsibility to maintain an open mind while testing one's own ideas as well as the ideas of others. Despite these core assumptions, the meaning and implications of the phrase and are surprisingly complex.

- The courts have recognized that academic institutions possess institutional academic freedom that is necessary > to provide that atmosphere which is most conducive to speculation, experiment, and creation. It is an atmosphere in which there prevail "the four essential freedoms" of a university--to determine for itself on academic grounds who may teach, what may be taught, how it shall be taught, and who may be admitted to study. (Sweezy v. New Hampshire, 354 U.S. 234, 263 (1957) (Frankfurter, J, concurring)

- Academic freedom for individual faculty members has been described in the following terms:

  > Teachers are entitled to full freedom in research and in the publication of the results, subject to the adequate performance of their other academic duties. . .

> Teachers are entitled to freedom in the classroom in discussing their subject, but they should be careful not to introduce into their teaching controversial matter that has no relation to their subject. . .
> College and university teachers are citizens, members of a learned profession, and officers of an educational institution. When they speak or write as citizens, they should be free from institutional censorship or discipline, but their special position in the community imposes special obligations. As scholars and educational officers, they should remember that the public may judge their profession and their institution by their utterances. Hence they should at all times be accurate, should exercise appropriate restraint, should show respect for the opinions of others, and should make every effort to indicate that they are not speaking for the institution. (Association of American University Professors, 1940 Statement)

- The academic freedom of students has likewise been recognized. In a joint statement issued in 1967, the Association of American University Professors, the United States National Student Association and other professional groups stated:

  > Freedom to teach and freedom to learn are inseparable facets of academic freedom. The freedom to learn depends upon appropriate opportunities and conditions in the classroom, on the campus, and in the larger community. Students should exercise their freedom with responsibility . . . .
  > The professor in the classroom and in conference should encourage free discussion, inquiry, and expression. Student performance should be evaluated solely on an academic basis, not on opinions or conduct in matters unrelated to academic standards.
  > 1. Protection of Freedom of Expression
  > Students should be free to take reasoned exception to the data or views offered in any course of study and to reserve judgment about matters of opinion, but they are responsible for learning the content of any course of study for which they are enrolled.
  > 2. Protection Against Improper Academic Evaluation
  > Students should have protection through orderly procedures against prejudiced or capricious academic evaluation. At the same time, they are responsible for maintaining standards of academic performance established for each course in which they are enrolled.
