

Monologue

It will go something like this....

Have you ever had a conversation with someone and you're sure the connection is good, you dialed the right number, you're speaking clearly but there is just no response. You're pouring your heart out, you're begging for comfort, and nothing is coming back to you. "Can you hear me now" has become a catch phrase for a bad cellular connection. But often times it is the truest phrase we can say when not getting a response. God can feel like this. We start to wonder, are you there, can you hear me or do you even care? Please talk to me! Did I not pay my bill? Have I broken this connection some how? Please talk to me!! Dial tone...nothing...Please, talk to me.
