

NASAP

North American Society of Adlerian Psychology

NASAP was founded in 1952 as a society to promote research, knowledge, training, and the application of Adlerian Psychology. The organization includes professionals from a wide variety of fields, including education, psychology, psychiatry, counseling, social work, pastoral care, business, and family education, while also encouraging community participation. Each year, NASAP hosts a national conference as a means to connect professionals and scholars, and to encourage the sharing of knowledge and research. It also disseminates bimonthly newsletter, publishes the Journal of Individual Psychology, and supports training opportunities throughout the year.

ICASSI

International Committee of Adlerian Summer Schools and Institutes

ICASSI is a non-profit organization that is dedicated to helping professionals, students, and lay persons learn about the teachings of Adler and Dreikurs. ICASSI organizes the annual Rudolf Dreikurs Summer Institute, which is held in a different country each year. Throughout the year, ICASSI faculty members deliver lectures and presentations, and provide support for training programs that encourage the development of Adlerian associations. Faculty members also provide support for publication and translation of Dreikurs' original work.
