
Delta Sigma Pi-Gamma Pi

Edition XII

Loyola University Chicago, Chicago, Illinois-November 2017

The Semester is Coming to a Close!!!

The Gamma Pi Chapter is excited for the upcoming initiation of our pledges!

Alumnus Teaches Brothers About Financial Planning

On October 29th, the Gamma Pi Chapter was given a presentation by Brother Lucas Therp to learn about financial planning. Lucas graduated this past spring with his MBA and is an analyst at Ninth Street Capital Partners. He showed the class a excel spreadsheet which he uses to budget out his expected expenses for the next 2 years. Lucas explained the importance of making both an accrual and cash budget, so one always knows how much cash he or she has on hand for purchases. Lucas touched on the importance of using separate tabs for loans and assumptions while also color coding every tab to avoid confusion. Every tab should have a description as well and the assumptions should be used as a reference for income and expenses to make changes easier. Lucas said this budget took him a short amount of time to make, and the time and worry saved by doing it was well worth the effort. The chapter certainly appreciated Lucas's presentation and his ability to make something seemingly time intensive and complex, simple.

Supply and Value Chain Professional Event

On October, 11th the Gamma Pi Chapter hosted a Supply and Value Chain Professional Event. This event was planned by the Vice-President of Professional Activities, Brother Zichen Yu. Harry Haney from Loyola University Chicago's Supply Chain and Value Center gave a presentation about what the center does and ways for students to get involved in the projects the center is working on. Harry also gave advice to students who are thinking about going into careers for supply chain. This event was extremely beneficial in the fact that the chapter does not often have events specifically for supply chain majors.

Cincinnati Lead
School Fall 2017
Summary

From October 13th-15th, three brothers from the Gamma Pi Chapter attended the Lead School in Cincinnati, Ohio. The event was good balance of fun, networking, and informative presentations. The Lead School began with registration and fun networking event with a DJ and games on Friday night. The day after began with breakfast and then a speech from Adam Carroll, a nationally recognized business speaker, about focuses efforts on what is most wanted. The first breakout session began afterwards, offering topics on networking, officer transitions, fundraising, conflict management, and actualizing ideas. This was proceeded with a lunch designed to increase networking and idea generation by having participants split up based on what chapter improvement ideas they were most interested in. This was followed by three additional break out sessions which had topics on everything from positive thinking to an overview of correct ritual practices.

This was followed with an awards, recognition, and giveaways ceremony along with a Grand Officer installation ceremony. The day ended with with a networking event for
