		FILE IN:	BULLETIN BINDER

It has been reported to Strattec that a large number of Chevrolet Cobalt's are coming in with ignition problems. The cause appears to be the new ignition locks that have a plastic plug. The ignition lock just stops turning even though the proper key is used. Strattec is not the OE manufacturer of these ignitions.

The OE replacement ignitions come completely unassembled and the assembly requires the lock face to be staked at four locations around the circumference. The sidebar, sidebar actuator springs and sidebar holder tabs must also be installed and staked into position in the outer plug housing.

Strattec has an ignition lock (part #706770) that can be used as an alternative to the dealer only ignitions. Strattec ignition lock cylinders have a solid, all-zinc cylinder and the tumblers are supported by zinc tumbler wards instead of plastic housings. These locks have sidebars pre-assembled. All a locksmith must do is code the locks with tumblers and springs.

The Strattec 706770 ignition can be used as an alternative to dealer only ignitions. The chart below identifies which vehicles can accept the 706770.

Please contact your local Strattec distributor for this ignition.
