This 1890s enclave has been authentically rebuilt as a gracious wilderness retreat in a peaceful river valley midway between Aspen and Telluride, overlooked by some of the highest peaks in the Rockies. Accommodations consist of cozy cabins and a two-story log guest-house with five bedrooms. Wonderful River House rooms, situated on a high bank above a tumbling stream, are ideal for families. The main lodge evokes the Old West with a massive stone fireplace, leather sofas and a fine array of Native American artifacts. Excellent cuisine is served in a fireside dining room and canvas-topped open-air pavilion. Half-day and full-day horseback riding excursions, plus a spa, guided hikes and superb fly-fishing for trout on streams, ponds and nearby Gunnison River (famed for its mid-June salmon fly hatch). Seasonal closure from November to mid-May.
