Doreen Garner's sculptures, all invariably lessons in abject art —are the results of her explorations of power, violence, and beauty. As she wrote in a photo essay for BOMB Magazine last year: "I identify, extract, and exploit the tissues that bind the sexual and the grotesque." With exhibitions at VOLTA, a residency at Pioneer Works, and a current show at Essex Flowers in the Lower East Side, the artist has been gaining attention for the visual and psychological impact of her work.
