Students participate in Souper Bowl of Caring

Students in the preschool, pre-k and third grade at Immaculate Conception School participated in the National Souper Bowl of Caring recently. For two weeks the students collected canned soup or other canned foods and monetary donations. These items were then counted, sorted, boxed up and donated to the local Twin City Christian Service Center in Uhrichsville. The totals were then recorded with the National Souper Bowl of Caring project.

The Souper Bowl of Caring is an event centered around the energy of the the Super Bowl. Its goal is to inspire people to give locally and make a collective

Life Lessons

Roxanne Dunn is moving forward with life

By Teri Stein

Roxanne Dunn of Sugarcreek doesn't like to plan ahead; life is too uncertain. Once a standout pole vaulter in high school and in college at Slippery Rock University, her life came to a sudden standstill after a tragic traffic accident on March 21, 2021. The vehicle she was a passenger in went off the road, hit a stump and careened down an embankment in Western Pennsylvania.

Dunn endured multiple surgeries, and due to the accident, she lost full use of her legs, although she can walk with a walker and uses a wheelchair when she's in the classroom with her students. Now the 2015 Garaway High School graduate is living her life helping students after taking a teaching job in the East Central Ohio Bridges Classroom at Starlight School, and she will soon move into her own apartment.

Her face lights up when she talks about her students — Amber Lynn Lavies, Braxton Harlan, Junior Tomas, Grayson Johnson, Connor Smith and Colten Riel, who are all in second grade through fourth grade — and what they have been able to achieve together.

"We do focus a lot on academics, but we focus just as much on working on how do we communicate appropriately? How do we interact with people? Do we want to push someone just because we're mad at them? We're working on appropriate behaviors and learning how to do those on our own," Dunn said, "because the goal would be ideally after they are here for a few years in our classroom that they would be able to reintegrate back into local districts."

Dunn has a degree in early childhood education and special education. She has tweaked the classroom schedule throughout the year to come up with one that works best for her students. On a typical academic day, the students come in and have breakfast, they watch a science video or science experiment videos, then the students go to the gym, and afterward they do math for about an hour.

"That's either worksheets or hands-on math games," Dunn said. "Then after that, we do centers, and that also varies. Sometimes it's art; sometimes it's some studies or science work."

Somewhere in all the activity, the students have a snack, and Dunn tries to finish up 20-30 minutes before lunch so the students can have some downtime to decompress before lunch because the academics can be challenging for them. The students then have lunch, go to recess, watch a short daily news segment aimed at children, and finish up any science or social studies work they didn't get finished in the morning.

"Then we have our English/language arts in the afternoon. We do English/language arts for over an hour, usually every day," Dunn said. "And then again, at the end of the day, I like to try to give them 15-20 minutes to play with some toys or play with Play-Doh Sand and just come back down from the academics before they go home. We have found that that schedule works very well for our kids."

Fridays are a little less scheduled with more Fun Friday activities to end the week.

Right in the middle of her first year with the class, Dunn had to take a few days off. She traveled, along with her parents Ryan and Marlene Dunn, to Phoenix, Arizona to receive the 2024 National Collegiate Athletics Association Inspiration Award. The award honors a person who has persevered to overcome a life-altering situation and a person whose determination gives inspiration to others. She was nominated for the award by Jon Holtz, director of athletic communications at Slippery Rock University.

"It was like a business trip is the best way to explain it," Dunn said. "But we got there on Tuesday night, and I was able to go to dinner with my parents and my coach (Bill Jordan) and with Jon (Holtz), and that was really nice. And that was pretty relaxed."

Dunn received her award on Jan. 10, a day that was packed with activities.

"The NCAA basically gave me my itinerary and was like, here's where you need to be, and here's what you need to do. And we were doing that like 8 a.m. to 1 a.m.," Dunn said. "And then we flew back out the next day, which was Thursday, and we traveled all day. And I was right back here on Friday."

Dunn is thrilled with the support she has received from the staff at Starlight School, the Tuscarawas County Board of Developmental Disabilities and the Educational Service Center. A couple of weeks after she received her award, a surprise party was planned to congratulate her.

"They told me that we were having a mandatory meeting at 8 a.m., and I came in for the meeting and everybody was there waiting to surprise me," Dunn said. "It was really awesome."

For the foreseeable future, Dunn plans to stay with her job teaching students. There is not much difference between the way she is able to conduct her classroom than that of an able-bodied teacher.

"The education is the same, and what we do is the same,"

Teri Stein

Dunn said. "I think that it's helpful for me to be at eye level with all my kids. I'm never looking down at them; I'm never towering over them. There are some situations where that's coming in handy. Some of the kids here climb up on my lap when they are in crisis or when they just need a little bit more comforting than usual. And that would not be an option for them as easily if I was able-bodied, so I think, if anything, it's bettered my connection with the children."

Once needing much help from others, Dunn has now turned her life toward others, teaching and helping to encourage people in her spare time who also have suffered life-changing injuries. She hopes to get back to sports as a coach someday, but in the meantime, she will take life one day at a time.

that we were having a mandatory meeting at 8 a.m., and I came in for the meeting and everybody was there waiting to surprise me. It was really awesome. ??

Amy Smith to speak at Women's Success Series

Amy Smith is the featured speaker of the 2024 Women's Success Series on Friday, March 1 from 8:30-11:30 a.m. at Kent State Tuscarawas in the Science and Advanced Technology Center. The cost to attend is $15 when paid in advance and $20 at the door. The fee includes a continental breakfast.

The Women's Success Series is designed to inspire women of all ages to succeed personally and professionally. Each year the leadership series features three women who have enjoyed a measure of success in Tuscarawas County. The sessions also include networking opportunities and a book discussion or TED Talk. The March discussion will feature the book, "Dream More: Celebrate the Dreamer in You," by Dolly Parton.

"We are so excited to kick off this season with Amy," said Wendy Zucal, director of Dennison Railroad Depot Museum and one of the event organizers. "After each session we ask the audience to recommend future speakers, and Amy came highly recommended. She will bring a great message to our audience, which is comprised of women of all ages and from all walks of life. We are blessed in this community to have so many strong women to lead in the business community. It creates an interesting mix and leads to dynamic and thoughtful discussions, fellowship and networking."

Smith is the general manager of WJER Radio, where she began her career as a high school senior in 1996. She held positions as on-air announcer, news reporter, cable TV morning show producer, continuity director and account executive prior to becoming general manager in 2017.

Smith graduated from Dover High School and received her bachelor's degree in public relations from Kent State University's School of Journalism. In her early career, she worked in public relations at Stan Hywet Hall & Gardens in Akron and Stern Public Relations in Cleveland. She also operates a freelance copywriting service, providing copy and storyboards for cable television commercials.

New art initiative enhances the trails at MWCD parks

Staff from the Muskingum Watershed Conservancy District recently attended the Ohio Park and Recreation Association annual conference in Sandusky. During the conference the OPRA Annual Awards of Excellence were presented at a banquet hosted by the association on Feb. 6.

The MWCD accepted a first-place award in the health and wellness category for a new initiative in 2023, Capture the Canvas. The awards are judged by a panel of parks and recreation professionals from around Ohio.

"Parks and recreation professionals throughout Ohio work every day to improve the quality of life of the people they serve," OPRA Executive Director Woody Woodward said. "This effort is a shining example of that kind of work, and we are pleased to be able to present this award."

Capture the Canvas was created with the intention to bring artwork to MWCD trails and increase awareness of the trail system. MWCD also sought participation from local schools to strengthen community partnerships and showcase the artwork of area students.

"I am immensely proud of our organization's dedication to creating and maintaining a trail system throughout the Muskingum Watershed District for the betterment of residents and guests to our area," said Craig Butler, MWCD executive director. "Receiving this award not only recognizes our hard work, but also underscores the profound impact our trails have on communities, recreation and conservation."

Once on the trail, users were encouraged to find the canvas, capture a selfie and upload it to the MWCD website for a chance to win one of three prizes including $1,000 cash donated by Encino Energy, a weekend stay at a deluxe log cabin at Pleasant Hill Lake Park and a full-day pontoon rental from an MWCD-operated marina.

Counters on the trails documented 6,702 people between Memorial Day and Labor Day. The prize winners included Robert Calhoun, Stephanie Brinkman and Kimberly Kress.

Five high schools created original pieces for this program. The canvases were pieces of art ranging from nature, birds, bears and outdoor fantasy.

Capture the Canvas 2024 will kick off May 24 and conclude Monday, Sept. 2. Follow MWCD online at www.mwcd.org and on Facebook and Instagram for more information about how to register and for prize opportunities for the upcoming promotion.

If you are able to speak another language in addition to English, area employers may want to speak with you. A bilingual job fair, the first of its kind for the area, will take place Tuesday, March 19 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Tuscarawas County YMCA. Many area organizations and businesses are expected to attend.

The job fair is the work of a local group called Puentes, which means bridges in Spanish.

"We get together to think about what we can do to better serve the community," Puentes member Sherrel Rieger said, "while also thinking of ways that the community can better interact with its members, especially with students who are coming up through our education system."

spoke of the group's recent house-buying workshop, geared toward area immigrant families.

"The idea of a job fair came up as we realized students who are graduating are beginning to look at possibilities that may be open to them after high school,' she said. "Not everybody has the opportunity to go to college, but there are many great jobs in Tuscarawas County where an agency or business would benefit greatly from having a bilingual person on board."

The job fair is free and open to anyone who is able to speak another language in addition to English.

"It can be Spanish or any other language," Rieger said. "We are inviting those who might speak Spanish or one of the native Guatemalan languages, but we aren't limiting it to that. It's As an example, Rieger for anyone who considers bilingual students who may themselves bilingual, no matter what languages they may speak.'

Puentes has invited area schools to make the day a field trip to the job fair as they are able to identify benefit from the job fair.

"We are inviting high school students, college-age students and young people to attend," Rieger said, "but if a bilingual person is outside that group and is looking for a job, we certainly won't turn anybody away."

Rieger said Puentes is a gathering of about a dozen people who have for many years served the area's Guatemalan community.

'We accompany them when they need help, going along for medical or other appointments and answering questions they may have. We have a network of people we can connect with, and even when we don't have an answer, we can find it out for them. Every Wednesday at Lifebridge Church, we have three people from Puentes who go, and all they do is help with paperwork and answer questions, help with phone calls and filling out applications for things. They're very busy every week.'

Rieger said the job fair is a great opportunity for students whose parents may not be aware of the job opportunities available to their bilingual child.

"They will be able to see that there are jobs available right here in our community, and they can apply for those jobs. It's an eye-opener for both students and area agencies who will find that there are many people available who can step into these jobs successfully," she said. "These students also have been educated in our school systems, and they bring that extra talent or gift, really, of being able to speak an extra language.'

Rieger said the New Philadelphia Fire Department will be on hand, along with Job & Family Services and local health departments. Most area pharmacies are invited, and a few businesses from Stark County also are expected to attend the bilingual job fair.

The Tuscarawas County YMCA is at 600 Monroe St.

Many major towns have home and garden shows when spring is approaching. What makes the Amish Country Home & Garden Show unique is the quality of Amish craftsmanship and furniture and other items that this area has long been known for. This show will feature the finest crafted furniture in the state with all styles from rustic looks to modern decor. Guests will find vendors for all types of home renovation products, including flooring, kitchen cabinets, bath remodeling, siding, replacement windows, gutters and doors.

The Amish Country Home and Garden Show offers an opportunity to find the right contractor and landscaper to handle your spring and summer projects. By the time April rolls around, many of these businesses are already booked with jobs, so this is an ideal opportunity to be among the first to get on their schedules.

This is the number one travel tourist area in the state of Ohio. Because of the reputation of craftsmanship in this area, this show will have over 200 booths and typically draws more than 14,000 people from all over Ohio and surrounding states.

Whatever project you are planning, indoors or out, you will find a solution at this show. From tractors and mowers to gardening equipment, sheds, lawn furniture, and grills you will see it all here!
