Veteran director recalls interviewing Titanic survivor

By Lee Elliott

The Scotland Road production that recently closed at the Little Theatre of Tuscarawas County generated a great deal of renewed interest in the Titanic. Among those with real stories to tell was Rex Huffman, veteran theater director and former features editor for the Times Reporter, who actually interviewed a survivor of the famed ship.

"If I hadn't chosen journalism as my life's work, I never would have had such an opportunity," Huffman said. "I was a writer for 42 years and an editor for 20 of those, and that was one of my most memorable assignments."

After graduating from Strasburg High School in 1969, Huffman majored in journalism and minored in political science and history at Kent State University. Just out of college, he applied for a job with the first paper in Tuscarawas County, The Evening Chronicle, based in Uhrichsville.

"I was accepted in that job and moved with the paper wherever it went," he said. "I never had to interview for another job."

When the Chronicle was bought by the Times Reporter, Huffman took his job there as assistant to the state editor in charge of 40 correspondents. Until his retirement he served at different times as editor of many of the sections of the paper including Showcase, the Sunday Magazine, Arts and Leisure, Food, Seniors, and then as features editor.

The opportunity to interview someone from the Titanic presented itself unexpectedly in 1998 when a member of the advertising department at the Times Reporter asked Huffman if he would be interested in talking to a survivor. She gave him the phone number.

"Of course I accepted right away," Huffman said, "but this was such a unique situation that I began to second guess myself and almost turned it down. I wasn't sure whether I should intrude on this woman's life. When I realized that this was a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity, I called her, and we had a wonderful phone interview."

Huffman said the survivor, Eleanor Johnson, was in her 80s when they talked. She said all her information came from her mother Alina Vilhelmina Johnson because she was only 18 months old at the time of their rescue. Her mother refused to talk about it anywhere but at home because it was too painful for her.

Eleanor Johnson related the following story: She, her mother and 4-year-old brother Harold had traveled from the U.S. to Finland to visit Alina's dying father. They were scheduled to return to the U.S. on a smaller ship, but there was a coal strike, and all the available coal was given to the newer, larger ships. Thus, on April 14, 1912, the little family was transferred to the Titanic with a space in steerage. She did not remember how they were able to get to the boat deck, but they were among the last of the survivors to be put into a lifeboat.

Shortly after the ship struck the iceberg, Alina and a cabin mate went out on deck and kicked around pieces of ice until an officer told them to get back to their room as the ship would be on its way quickly.

Soon they were taken on deck by a group of Swedes and tossed into the lifeboat. After being rescued by the RMS Carpathia, they arrived in New York City on April 18. Friends they had met on board died on the ship. When Eleanor Johnson's father in Illinois heard of the tragedy and the rescue, he is said to have fainted. Friends raised $100 to send him to New York to meet his family.

Into her 80s Johnson remained active in Titanic-related activities. Her family members were honored guests at the screening of the 1953 film, "Titanic," and the 1958 screening of "A Night to Remember."

She was the only survivor Director James Cameron met with while filming the newer version of "Titanic" in 1997. After the movie's release, she had to change her phone number to an unlisted one after receiving so many phone calls every day.

In her 80s Johnson visited her son in Florida — the first time she had seen the Atlantic Ocean since 1912. She also joined other survivors on an expedition cruise to the site of the Titanic's wreck. Johnson died March 7, 1998, a few short months after Huffman's interview.

There is a strong connection between Huffman's interest in the Titanic as a child and his second career as a theater actor and director.

"We didn't live in a neighborhood full of children when I was growing up," he said, "so my mother encouraged me to watch quality movies on television and often took me to the theaters. I developed a love of story then. One of my best experiences was in fifth grade where my teacher Verna Brown introduced her students to acting. On Columbus Day we presented a radio play over the PA system for the whole school to hear. I played Christopher Columbus's father. Later, I was assigned the part of Squire Holly in a one-act play. It was my first experience with costumes and memorizing lines. My first audition netted me the part of the coroner in 'Night of Jan. 16.'

"A cousin told me the movie 'Titanic' was going to be on TV. As luck would have it, I was enjoying one of my weekend visits with grandparents and was able to talk them into letting me stay up after 11 o'clock to watch it. I was enthralled and could talk of nothing else the next day. That year was the 50th anniversary of the sinking of the ship, and I read the story in a copy of Weekly Reader at school. Now I couldn't get enough of the Titanic. After reading 'A Night to Remember,' I was completely hooked."

In 1977 Huffman's theater and writing interests began to coincide. While performing in "January Thaw" in Strasburg, he had to miss a week of rehearsals to cover the Miss America pageant in Atlantic City.

His first acting experience at Little Theatre was as Sitting Bull in "Annie Get Your Gun." It was during that show he met his future wife Karen, who shared his interest in the Titanic. Together they attended exhibits and programs around the country including the Broadway musical where they discovered the walls covered with passenger lists from the Titanic and found the names of Johnson and her family. They collected books and mementos. Huffman prizes a small piece of coal taken from the ocean floor near the broken ship. Karen, always his partner in their Titanic adventures, passed away in 2016.

"Probably my favorite show of the many I have directed is the musical, 'The Unsinkable Molly Brown,'" Huffman said. "It is a fictionalized story of survivor Molly Brown and had been presented by the theater years earlier at Dover High School. It was the very first show I directed at the theater, in the winter of the 1986-87 season, and was attended by more than 2,000 people. I had chosen it because of its connection with the Titanic."

He has been directing musicals ever since.

Huffman continues his interest in the Titanic and the theater today, though he is not currently writing.

"It's hard to believe I thought I wanted to be a history teacher," Huffman said. "Just imagine if I hadn't chosen to be a writer. I never would have had the opportunity to meet so many fascinating people and tell their stories. It was a good decision on my part."

FormYou3 offers different weight loss programs tailored to each individual, but they all feature well-balanced nutrition and realistic goals, along with support, motivation, and spa services. And coming soon...Medically Assisted weight loss!

HERE WE

Grow Again

E By Mary Malik
veryone's goals and strategies to lose weight, keep it off and feel good in their skin are unique and individual. The team at FormYou3 not only understands that, but also they formulate a plan just for you and then guide you through it with the education, counseling and support necessary for success now and in the future.

"We've been successful for 41 years because our programs and products help you make positive, long term lifestyle changes," owner Vickie Evans said. "We stick to the core basics of weight loss and wellness, and that's nutritionally sound, well-balanced nutrition based on realistic goals and eating plans combined with support, motivation and spa services that provide that something extra to keep you on track. Our goal is to help you lose the weight, then slowly build your favorite foods back into your diet while retaining what you have learned to keep the weight off and stay balanced."

FormYou3 takes a non-fad diet approach to weight loss developed by doctors, dietitians and nutritionists and has recently added medically assisted weight loss to its plans.

"We provide the perfect complement to medically assisted weight loss," Evans said. "These Weight Loss Medications will help you lose weight, but you can also lose muscle, will gain the weight right back once you stop taking the medication and may suffer significant side effects. This is where we help make a difference so those things DO NOT HAPPEN. We have thoroughly researched these medications and understand how to incorporate them into one of our nutritionally sound weight loss plans for success by actually making positive changes in eating habits, now and for a future without the medications. They become part of the solution, not just a temporary solution. That's the FormYou3 difference."

Weight-loss programs

FormYou3 offers two programs, Traditional and Aggressive, both tailored to meet different goals and lifestyles.

- The Traditional Program

"We've been successful for 41 years because our programs and products help you make positive, long term lifestyle changes"

integrates the grocery store foods you already enjoy plus four FormYou3 products designed to curb cravings. This program works well for the home cook who still wants to enjoy his/her favorites, and you can expect to lose 1-2 pounds per week.

- The Aggressive Program is customized to each client and includes one regular meal per day along with three to five FormYou3 meal replacements. Expect to lose 2-3 pounds per week.

Medically assisted weight loss

Formyou3 will SOON offer Medically assisted weight loss options as part of its current programs to help enhance your overall fat loss.

"These medications are a great tool for weight loss, but they can cause side effects like nausea, diarrhea, muscle loss and nutritional deprivation if not used properly," Evans said. "We use them as part of a responsible and integrated plan so you can stop the medications without gaining the weight back."

Lasers

Are you doing the work necessary to lose weight but still struggle with stubborn pockets of fat? A muffin top? Saddlebags on your thighs? Back rolls or bra overhang? FormYou3's noninvasive, painless Laser Lipogenics body contouring targets these specific areas that don't respond to diet and exercise without damaging body tissue or cells.

"The low-level laser removes 40-60 grams of fat per treatment, resulting in measurable fat loss, reshaping and even smoothing out cellulite," Evans said. "It can truly transform the body."

Herbal body wrap

Herbal body wraps at FormYou3 result in a 3- to 7-inch loss in just one treatment for most clients. Body wraps also offer relief from the symptoms of fibromyalgia, arthritis and varicose veins and can be used in tandem with other services like laser treatments.

Manual lymphatic drainage massage

Manual lymphatic drainage massage is a medical offering that relieves the symptoms of chronic fatigue syndrome, diabetes, fibromyalgia, migraines and sinus headaches and even helps with the side effects of cancer treatments, Parkinson's disease, MS, lupus and lymphedema.

"These massages are also used for surgical recovery including joint replacements, face lifts, and BBL's in order to aid in blood flow," Evans said.

The Form You 3 Difference

FormYou3 offers free consultations to start you on the weight-loss and wellness journey that matches your specific needs. Whether it's 3 pounds or 300 pounds you'd like to shed, FormYou3 has a program option just for you. With Form You 3, you are not just on your own. Historian to speak at library

The Tuscarawas County Public Library System will host local historian Noel Poirier on Thursday, Feb. 8 at 6:30 p.m. at the Tuscarawas County Main Library. Poirier will discuss the 1928 New Philadelphia White Bridge Murder.

Communication boards installed at Tuscora Park

By Teri Stein

Two new communication boards installed at Tuscora Park were unveiled recently by Lacey Herbert-Stephen and her 5-year-old son Cash Stephen, who is nonverbal. The boards feature photos and drawings to help people who are nonverbal.

The signs are printed in English on one side and Spanish on the other. They are located near the playground by the main parking lot and by the merry-go-round.

“Cash and I frequent the park a lot. And we had started to notice that he was having meltdowns and not able to really communicate to me what it was he needed or what he wanted to do next,” Herbert-Stephen said.

Herbert-Stephen learned about communication boards placed at other parks. They used generic photos and drawings, but she wanted to make one that was specific to Tuscora Park.

“I went ahead and started brainstorming about making one,” Herbert-Stephen said. “Cash uses a talking device, a tablet. He points at the button that he wants, and it speaks for him. I thought it’d be so cool if we had something like that here because I knew some other parents who didn’t even bring their kids to the park because of the communication barrier and it being so much.”

Herbert-Stephen began putting the boards together, and she met with members of the Tuscora Park board who agreed the communication boards would be a welcome addition to the park if funding could be found.

After contacting Chris Call, owner of Lightning Signs in New Philadelphia, he offered to reduce the price of completing the signs and split the costs of funding with Herbert-Stephen. Had he not been willing to help, the cost of the two signs would have probably been around $5,000.

“It’s very expensive. And it’s a lot of material, a lot of time. It took me about 2 1/2 months to get all the pictures I wanted on there,” Herbert-Stephen said. “After I got the pictures I wanted including going and taking some of the pictures at the park, I wanted it to be relatable. I wanted the kids to be able to say, ‘I want to go to the ducks.’ It’s all pictures of the park; it’s all specific to the park.”

Assisting with the project were Farrah Raines and Shelby Montgomery, who helped determine which activity and other selections would be most important to have on the board. Jenny Miller of Lightning Signs created the layout of the boards.

Future plans are to help people who are nonverbal with making other selections.

“We’re also going to be doing ones for the food stand so that they can go up and pick what they want and point to the food they want,” Herbert-Stephen said. “This was the first step.”

Herbert-Stephen is pleased with the way the board design turned out.

“It is beautiful, and if you look, there’s an arrow at the bottom that explains that the Spanish version is on the other side,” Herbert-Stephen said. “We wanted to make sure that we got the English and Spanish versions so that we could (include) everybody — all ages, all adults, all ethnicities — and try to make sure that the park is a welcoming place for the nonverbal community as well.”

The boards will allow families that include people who are nonverbal the opportunity to enjoy their visits.

“Now we’re going to have more fun at the park,” Herbert-Stephen said of her park visits with Cash.

It’s only been about five months since Herbert-Stephen opened the Lacey PAC Adaptive Movement Center in downtown New Philadelphia for children with disabilities.

“It is growing, and we are currently looking to expand,” Herbert-Stephen said. “And we’re hoping to (expand) sooner rather than later. We have a list of kids from (the Tuscarawas County Board of Developmental Disabilities) that want to attend.”

Plans are to renovate and move the AMC to the second floor of the building that currently houses the Lacey PAC dance studio in downtown New Philadelphia.

With Raines the AMC provides a variety of events like Elvis Week and celebrating holidays like New Year’s and the Chinese New Year with activities that keep the participants moving.

“It’s not just somewhere they go sit and do crafts. They’re up; they’re active. They play kickball,” Herbert-Stephen said.

They exercise and have even started to do some yoga. The center serves people with disabilities of all ages, but they have found many of the participants utilizing the center so far are in the 3- to 5-year-old age group.

Donations for the center, its expansion and in-kind donations to help with construction work to complete the renovation of a new AMC will be accepted. Herbert-Stephen is thankful for the help she has received so far from the community and hopes to have a new AMC open sometime this year.

Knights of Columbus hosts 19th annual fish fries

By Barb Limbacher

Holy Trinity Knights of Columbus Bolivar/Soar will begin its 19th year holding fish fry events during Lent. There will be six fish fry events beginning Feb. 16 from 4-7 p.m. at the Holy Trinity Catholic Church, 1835 Dover-Soar Road NE, near Soar. The dates are Feb. 16, Feb. 23, March 1, March 8, March 15 and March 22. There is no fish fry on Good Friday, March 29. Carryouts are available.

According to Ed Wills, a member of the Holy Trinity Catholic Church, the fish fry events are under direction of Mark Yovanovich, grand knight of the Knights of Columbus, who recently looked over the past records and was able to determine how many dinners they have sold.

Wills said a group of volunteers help at the fundraiser. There are about a dozen who help in the kitchen and another 15-20 who clean the tables. He said since 2006 they have served 55,000 fish dinners. He said they sell from 500-600 dinners each week.

"Our church continues to exist because we all work together and volunteers that offer to help at the dinners," Wills said.

They prepare about a 100 pounds of fish for each Friday. The mothers from Tuscarawas Central Catholic furnish the desserts, which can be purchased separately from the meal. The profits remain with TCC.

The cost of the adult dinners is $10 for two pieces of fried fish or one piece of baked fish or $13 for four pieces of fried fish or two pieces of baked fish. For children under 12, the cost is $6 for a one-piece fried fish dinner or a plate of mac and cheese with a choice of a side. The dinners include hush puppies, choice of French fries, rice pilaf or mac and cheese, as well as coleslaw, a roll, juice or coffee. Soda is $1 extra. This is the same cost as in 2023.

During the COVID-19 pandemic, the church offered a drive-thru option. This practice has continued. The youth of the church take orders and deliver the food to vehicles. The youth also accept tips, which they are permitted to keep.

Currently, Holy Trinity does not have a full-time parish priest. Father Jimmy Hatfield and Father Tomas Carvajal Y Basto are available to hold a mass for the parishioners.

Proceeds from the fish fry events go to charitable organizations such as the soup kitchen for the monthly lunches at the local Salvation Army, the Bolivar Food Pantry, Bolivar Fire Department to provide free smoke alarms, Community Hospice, Fisher House Veterans Home at Cleveland, community Thanksgiving meals, TV Strong Trojan Foundation, Horizons Inc., Tuscarawas County Homeless Center, St. Vincent DePaul Society and several other needs in the community.

Holy Trinity Catholic Church was established when the closing of St. Stephen's Catholic Church in Bolivar, St. Aloysius Catholic Church in Strasburg and St. Patrick's Catholic Church in Mineral City took place.

A Passion to Prepare

Jail reentry program equips inmates to be successful upon release

By Lori Feeney

Anyone meeting Jenna Kanter for the first time might be well advised to buckle up. A talk with Kanter is a high-speed ride as the reentry coordinator for the Tuscarawas County Jail gives a verbal tour of the many services she helps provide to inmates reentering the community.

"I'm passionate about my job and very passionate about this field," the 24-year-old Kanter said.

That passion is on display, not only when she talks about the jail program, but also in the growth Kanter has brought to the program in just two years on the job.

Kanter holds a dual Bachelor/Master of Arts in Forensic Psychology from John Jay College of Criminal Justice through City University of New York. Upon graduation Kanter set her sights on returning to her hometown to serve the inmate population in Tuscarawas County.

The help she provides connects inmates to a wealth of area resources while they are still incarcerated so that upon release they are better equipped to successfully reenter the community, which can reduce the rate of recidivism or reoffending and being returned to jail.

"There are basically three layers of reentry: mental health, substance use and basic needs," Kanter said.

The three are intertwined, according to Kanter. "If someone has a substance-use issue and no housing established for when they leave here, the only thing they know is couch surfing, and that puts them right back with the people they used with."

The river and the life jacket

Kanter said the success of the program relies on the willingness of the inmate to change.

"I always give this analogy to the inmates," Kanter said. "Here at the jail, I'm connecting them with a variety of services. That's putting the life jacket on them that connects them with resources and support. They have to get to the other side of the river, where that life of recovery is. If you take the life jacket off, you're going to drown and end up back in jail or overdosing or who knows what could happen in that river? So the idea is to keep that life jacket so you can get to the other side."

Services offered

According to Kanter, connecting inmates to community resources quickly is important. "Reentry has to be rapid because most people are here for as little as a couple of days or weeks."

Tele-counseling is one of the more important services, Kanter said. "We work with OhioGuideStone and SpringVale for mental health and substance-abuse counseling while they are here. Again, the goal is for them to continuing using those services once they're released."

Any service that includes mental health and substance-abuse treatment is critical. According to Kanter, the majority of crimes for which people are sentenced to the Tuscarawas County Jail are drug-related, either directly or indirectly.

A Medication Assisted Treatment Program also is used inside the jail using a medication that blocks the craving for alcohol and opioids. "Not many inmates are opting into that, but they are aware of it and can take that step when they're ready," Kanter said.

Kanter said all of the services are offered on a "when you're ready" basis. No one is forced to participate in anything or given special privileges for doing so.

Kanter also connects inmates with medical insurance through the State of Ohio, food stamps and employment opportunities through Employment GPS, a service of Goodwill Industries, and Opportunities for Ohioans with Disabilities.

"I can also connect people with housing, and the No. 1 resource for emergency housing is the homeless shelter, mainly because of the lack of affordable housing that can be accessed quickly in Tuscarawas County."

Life 101

Kanter created a program she calls Life 101. For now the program is focused on financial literacy, bringing in counselors from the DoverPhila Federal Credit Union to conduct a three-week class twice a year.

"That's key for some of these folks because they've never known how to control their money or fix their credit or do similar things," Kanter said. "I definitely want to add more lessons on topics like applying for a job, writing a resume and other life skills."

Kanter also established Resource Mondays at the jail. "Every Monday I teach the inmates about a different resource, like housing, transportation, food or clothing," Kanter said.

Kanter is thankful for community groups and individuals who voluntarily provide support inside the jail.

"Different churches come in, AA comes in and Kathy Bazaar provides one-on-one peer support for addiction recovery. We also utilize SMART Recovery, a curriculum-based substance-use treatment program that has been super successful and that the inmates really enjoy," Kanter said.

As the crisis intervention team coordinator for the county, Kanter trains first responders how to intervene in a crisis situation.

"The idea is to help divert people who are in a crisis out of the criminal justice system into where they need to be, and the first responders on the front line have the ability to divert people themselves," Kanter said.

Kanter has created business cards first responders can share with people they encounter in the midst of a crisis. The card includes a phone number, a QR code that can link people to local resources and the local substance-use Hope Line number.

On the horizon

Kanter was excited to learn the jail has secured funding to bring in a staff clinician.

"The clinician will provide assessments for substance use and mental health so that we get a good foundation of where this person is and what they need,"

Kanter said. "I want the community to know that these are programs and resources that are eventually going to help our community. A decrease in crime is a decrease in individuals coming in here and costing taxpayers money. And if we can help them get back on their feet successfully, they will no longer need public assistance."

Kanter said she feels like it's a punch in the gut when inmates do return. "You're rooting for these people and telling them they can do it, just stay connected, and you feel so motivated for them. It's definitely painful for me when they come back. It's like gosh, I wish you had the same belief in yourself that I do."

Kanter credits Sheriff Orvis Campbell and Capt. Ken Engstrom for what she calls phenomenal leadership.

Campbell said, "I feel like I've hit a home run. We interviewed a lot of applicants, and a lot of them checked all the right boxes in terms of experience. But when Jenna came in, she just blew everybody away, including people from the ADAMHS Board. She's perfect for this position because you have to have the ability to hang tough and stay on mission, and man, nothing seems to get her down. She just keeps going and going and going."

Kanter recalled the interview and the job offer. "I just spewed my passion about working with inmates," she said. "A couple of weeks later, he called and said, 'Out of all the people we interviewed, you are the least experienced but the most passionate, and for that, I'd like to offer you the position.'"

Based on the success of the program, Campbell said the jail has received funding to turn some unused space into a reentry class room and counseling room.

Lori Feeney

As the reentry coordinator for the Tuscarawas County Jail, Jenna Kanter connects inmates with community resources while they are still incarcerated, with a goal of reducing recidivism by helping inmates successfully reenter the community.

Kent State Tuscarawas PAC introduces $15 tickets

The Performing Arts Center at Kent State Tuscarawas is introducing a new PACK the PAC initiative, where every ticket to select shows is $15.

"Each year our educational programs give local students the opportunity to perform side by side with internationally recognized musicians. We'd love nothing more than to enhance that experience and PACK the PAC with over 1,000 audience members, adding energy and excitement to their performance," said David Mitchell, general manager of the Performing Arts Center. "We've created the PACK the PAC initiative, where every ticket has been drastically discounted to only $15. We want the community to enjoy a fantastic show with world-class artists while also supporting local students."

PACK the PAC shows include the following:

—Jonathan Scales Fourchestra on Jan. 30, a steel drum performance.

—Christie Lené on Feb. 10, an international fingerstyle guitar champion.

—Good Shot Judy on Feb. 29, a swing band performance.

"Experience three extraordinary nights of high-quality entertainment with some of the finest musicians in the world," Mitchell said. "Each show is unique and will prove to be a magical night at the PAC."

Tickets for all three shows are on sale at the Performing Arts Center box office, by calling 330-308-6400 or by visiting www.kent.edu/tuscpac. The box office is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Opposing celebrations: love and sacrifice

I am fascinated by the fact Ash Wednesday and Valentine’s Day are both occurring Feb. 14 this year. In my mind two such opposite celebrations happening at the same time should create havoc in the minds of everyone. On the one hand, we have 24 hours of indulgence involving candy, flowers, dinners, great declarations of love, engagements and sometimes marriages, all symbolized by hearts.

On the other hand, a day has been set aside to remind us of our need for sacrifice, penitence, sorrow and solemnity. A cross of ashes is etched on foreheads to remind us we are “ashes to ashes and dust to dust,” where we came from and where we will end up.

I have brought this up in conversation a number of times recently and have found little interest in the topic. Of course, these were mostly people over 50, so I can’t rely just on their choices, but there was strong agreement Valentine’s Day is strictly a Hallmark card holiday, in comparison to Ash Wednesday, which is an established religious celebration.

Both days were important in my upbringing. Elementary schools encouraged us to bare our hearts in the specially prepared Valentine boxes where you were supposed to (but didn’t always) deposit a card for each member of the class. We had special heart-shaped cookies, and if someone received a particularly fancy card, it was fodder for conversation for an entire week. We spent hours trying to find the secret message in a card from a current crush. We, and the schools, passed the traditions on to our children.

Ash Wednesday carried its own weight. Some students were excused from school to go to their churches to receive the symbolic ashes they wore throughout the day, providing plenty of reason for poking fun.

In our home it was a day to remind us there were 40 days until Easter. We were to choose something to sacrifice for the duration, and we had darned well better not cheat. This usually involved candy for the children and smoking, drinking or some other questionable habit for adults. I believe under the watchful eye of the adults, the children may have done the better job of accomplishing their goals.

There are many explanations for the origins of these two totally dissimilar days. Historical legends range from pagan to Christian, with a little imagination thrown in. Several interesting facts came to light. For example, Valentine’s

Day may have its origins in a pagan fertility festival called Lupercalia, during which Romans sacrificed animals and smacked women with their hides, a practice that was believed to encourage fertility.

Fasting during Lent has a whole bundle of different rules in different countries and religions. They range from one meal a day with no meat, to no meat on Fridays, to fish on Fridays and so on.

Whatever the choices, the strange day is worth pondering. Where do our values lie? It seems they both are connected with love. I leave it to you to figure out. I don’t expect any miracles for Valentine’s Day, and I think my sacrifice for Lent will try to be to take some of the color out of my language when I am angry. Whatever your choices, I wish you Happy Valentine’s Day and Solemn Ash Wednesday. It’s all very good for the heart.

Keeping older drivers safe

Dear Savvy Senior,

What safety tips can you recommend for older drivers? My 86-year-old mother, who still drives herself, had a fender bender last month, and I worry about her safety.

Back Seat Daughter Dear Back Seat,

With more and more older Americans driving well into their 70s, 80s and beyond, there are a variety of things your mom can do to help maintain and even improve her driving skills. Here are some recommendations by driving rehabilitation specialists that work with older drivers:

—Get an eye exam: Because about 90% of the information necessary to drive is received through our eyes, this is a good first step in ensuring your mom's driving safety. So get your mom's eyes checked every year to be sure her vision and eyewear is up to par.

—Get a physical or wellness exam: As people age, it's also very important to monitor changes in overall health as it relates to driving. Medical conditions like arthritis, dementia, diabetes, Parkinson's disease, sleep apnea and stroke can all affect driving.

In addition, many seniors also take multiple medications or combinations of medications that can make them drowsy or lightheaded, which can impair judgment or affect reflexes or alertness necessary for safe driving. So an annual physical or wellness examination and medication review also is a smart way to verify your mom's driving safety.

—Take a refresher course: AARP and the American Automobile Association both have older driver improvement courses that can help your mom brush up her driving skills and understand how to adjust for slower reflexes, weaker vision and other age-related physical changes that can affect driving. Taking a class also may earn her a discount on her auto insurance. To locate a class, contact your local AAA (www.AAA.com) or

Jim Miller
Savvy Senior

AARP (www.AARPdriver-safety.org, 888-227-7669). Most courses cost around $20-$30 and can be taken online.

— Make some adjustments: Adjusting when and where your mom drives are another way to help keep her safe and behind the wheel longer. Some simple adjustments include not driving after dark or during rush hour traffic, avoiding major highways or other busy roads, and not driving in poor weather conditions.

— Evaluate her driving: To stay on top of your mom's driving abilities, you should take a ride with her from time to time, watching for problem areas. For example, does she drive at inappropriate speeds, tailgate or drift between lanes? Does she have difficulty seeing, backing up or changing lanes? Does she react slowly, get confused easily or make poor driving decisions?

For more evaluation tips, AAA offers a senior driver self-rating assessment exercise (Drivers 65 Plus) you or she can access at www.Exchange.AAA.com/safety/senior-driver-safety-mobility.

If your mom needs a more thorough evaluation, you can turn to a driver rehabilitation specialist who's trained to evaluate older drivers and offer suggestions and adaptations to help keep her safe. But be aware this type of assessment can run anywhere from $100-$500 or more. To locate a professional in your area, visit www.ADED.net or www.AOTA.org — search driving practitioner directory.

When it gets to the point that your mom's driving isn't safe anymore and she needs to quit, you may need to help her create a list of names and phone numbers of family, friends and local transportation services she can call on for a ride.

To find out what transportation services are available in your mom's area, call the Eldercare Locator at 800-677-1116, which will direct you to her area agency on aging for assistance.

Send your senior questions to Savvy Senior, P.O. Box 5443, Norman, OK 73070, or visit www.Savvy-Senior.org.
