Battig retiring after long career with city

By Elizabeth Schuster

Jeff Battig has dedicated his multi-decade career to supporting parks and recreation in Wooster. Going back to his childhood, his entire life within and outside of his job has revolved around sports and recreation.

Battig is now set to retire from his job as recreation manager with the city at the end of December.

"Sports have always been a huge part of my life," said Battig, a 1978 graduate of Wooster High. "When I was young, I did football, track, baseball. Even as early as fourth grade, I got into biking. By age 13 I had my first good bike. By high school I also got into cross country and downhill skiing."

Battig's career started with four years in the Army in aviation with a focus on maintenance of helicopters. But as soon as Battig returned to his hometown, he jumped back into his passion of recreation as the Wooster YMCA youth director.

After a stint with the YMCA, Battig went back to work for the City of Wooster, where he also had worked part-time while in high school. His new role was recreation coordinator, overseeing all three aquatic facilities, the soccer and volleyball programs, and various other community programs. His job was busy, at times hiring and overseeing as many as 45 seasonal staff for the pools.

About 10 years ago, Battig was promoted to recreation manager. A couple of his biggest successes include launching the Wayne Trails Committee and revamping the Wooster soccer program.

The Wayne Trails Committee was established by Battig and Mayor Bob Breneman in 2016 under the purview of the City of Wooster. The purpose of the committee is creating new bike trails, and Battig said the goals include bike trail connections across Wayne County. Committee accomplishments in the past five years include all the new bike trails around Wooster and the signed route to Fredericksburg.

The committee also hosted a fundraiser that was a ride to Fredericksburg and resulted in enough donations that they were able to open a fund at the Wayne County Community Foundation. The existing committee is a group of about 20 members who continue to meet every other month.

Current Wayne Trails Committee co-chair Bill Buckwalter has worked with Battig many times over the years.

"I had the privilege of serving with Jeff for a number of different events and committees," said Buckwalter, a co-owner of Ride On in Wooster.

"Jeff's leadership, vision and 'get it done' mentality will be sorely missed as he heads into retirement. He's been a strong supporter of projects and events that have benefited Wooster. No detail was overlooked under his guidance."

Battig's other major area of success was around the soccer program in Wooster with the creation of 17 acres of soccer fields at Oldman and Burbank roads, a monumental task that took from the mid-1990s to 2010 to be completed.

"When I started, our games were all over the city," Battig said. "There were games at Schaeffler, one in a farmer's field and the rest scattered about the city. Then myself and the president of the Wooster Soccer Association said we needed a set location. We started expanding the soccer complex with the city, WSA and county."

Battig's dedication has been appreciated by the City of Wooster.

"Jeff has been a critical member of the management team for the last nine years and a great Wooster team member for his entire career. He has always brought a high level of energy and professionalism to the position and the department," city administrator Joel Montgomery said. "He was always very dedicated to exploring new partnerships and ways to be more efficient while still providing the best recreation services possible to the community. I have greatly enjoyed working with Jeff and wish him the best in his retirement."

Battig also somehow found time to work for six years as the assistant girls high school soccer coach at Wooster High and also served for 10 years as a soccer referee.

"There were countless soccer meetings when I was president for three years of the Wooster Soccer Association," said Mitch Sleet, a current member of the Wooster Parks and Recreation Commission, serving alongside Battig. "I don't think a month has passed for the past 18-plus years that Jeff and I haven't worked on something together. He has always kept things fun and kept us organized on everything I've worked on with him."

Looking forward, Battig plans to spend his retirement in his dad's woodshop and to do more biking and kayaking. He already has several trips planned with his wife.

Battig will be replaced by Ashley Hershberger, also a longtime employee of the department.

New county deputy dog warden sworn in

By Dan Starcher

Dakota Snure was sworn in as deputy dog warden by commissioner Sue Smail during a regular commissioners session recently.

Snure will work with the dog warden and staff to enforce dog license laws, impound dogs running at large, and deem dogs a nuisance, dangerous or vicious.

A 2012 Electronic Classroom of Tomorrow graduate, Snure grew up in New Philadelphia and moved to Wayne County at the age of 13. He studied veterinary technology at Brown Mackie College and has been employed by the Wayne County Dog Shelter for two years prior to becoming deputy warden.

"This is a wonderful opportunity," Snure said about the promotion. "It is very rewarding to be able to make a difference in this area. I love Wayne County, and I want to ensure that residents get amazing service from us."

One of the lesser-known responsibilities of the office is investigating livestock harmed by coyotes.

"If any livestock is attacked by a coyote," Snure said, "the dog warden is obligated to investigate that to determine if the livestock owner is eligible for state reimbursement."

For additional information or to adopt a dog, visit www.waynedogshelter.org.

Ballet Wooster back with 'Nutcracker' on Dec. 18-19

Ballet Wooster will bring the traditional holiday presentation of "The Nutcracker" back to the Wooster stage on Saturday, Dec. 18 at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. and Sunday, Dec. 19 at 2 p.m. at the Wooster High School Performing Arts Center.

Nearly 90 Ballet Wooster dancers and guest performers will take the stage. Featured roles include Advanced Company Dancers Lauren Segura as Clara, Max Miyashita as the Nutcracker Prince, Persis Yoder as Snow Queen, Darianne Davidson as the Mouse Queen and Lanie Meyer as Guardian Angel. Terry Sustar, community member and Ballet Wooster supporter, will be reprising his role as the eccentric Herr Drosselmeyer for a third time.

With choreography by co-artistic directors Stephanie Evans, Zelig McLain and Brenda Schwinn, Ballet Wooster's interpretation of "The Nutcracker" is unique yet traditional. Providing professional talent for Ballet Wooster are lighting designer Julie Summy and stage manager Shannon Sustar, along with many volunteers. This will be Ballet Wooster's first live production on stage since December 2019.

Tickets are $15 for adults and $10 for children, students and senior citizens and can be purchased online

Morgan home provides window into the past

By Dave Mast
TheBargainHunter.com

Roger and Nancy Real may live in the home built by James Morgan in 1815, but they prefer to think of themselves more as caretakers of history who just happen to reside in one of Wayne County's more famous homes.

The Morgan homestead is believed to be one of the earliest, if not the earliest, homes built in Franklin Township in Wayne County, and recently, the Reals joined Morgan's direct descendant Tom Morgan to present several tours of the home.

Roger Real served as the tour guide for several different parties that came through, taking guests room by room through the large Federal or Adam style house, which typically is rectangular with little décor on the outside of the home.

"The Adam style is a continuation of the Georgian style but far simpler," Real said.

In giving his presentation and slide show of the home in the event, Tom Morgan said it has enlightened him to the plight of his ancestor.

"I've gotten to know this house from visits starting in 2001," Tom Morgan said. "With each visit I learn more and more, and it is enjoyable to gain insight into the history. It's really fascinating knowing that this is a major part of this area's history. It's really interesting to stop and think about who might have walked the halls or sat in the parlor of this incredible home."

“With each visit I learn more and more, and it is enjoyable to gain insight into the history.”

The home features many of the typical styles, but Morgan altered the home by creating four great rooms rather than making them two rooms deep.

While there are no known facts about the construction of the home, Real has delved deeply into the history as much as possible, and he said he believes the home wasn't built by a professional architect.

Real's knowledge of the home and of that type of architecture helped paint a picture of a vibrant homestead two centuries ago, and Morgan picked a beautiful setting to call his home.

"Mr. Morgan picked a very simplistic style for his home, probably to build it as efficiently and cheaply as possible," Real said.

The College of Wooster did a dendrochronology on the hand-hewn beams downstairs. The beams were cut in 1812, and they would have had to dry for some time, thus the 1815 date is an estimate.

Over the years the Morgan homestead has been owned by several people. Samuel Mitchel owned the home in the late 1800s while the home exchanged hands from Isaac Johnson and J.V.B. Taylor to John W. Fry in the early 1900s. In 1939 Charles J. Franks and his family purchased the home, and in 1945 Lloyd and Belle Plant called it home. Amy Smith purchased it in 1954, and while records are hazy, the home was purchased by Mike and Lillian Huizd in 1983.

According to Real, Lillian Huizd hated the house so much she refused to go inside when they visited, and they eventually let it become somewhat run-down.

From the six fireplaces to the formal parlor, great rooms and the kitchen, Real took patrons throughout the home, describing the unique construction and some of the different work that went into erecting the house.

While Mike Real knows a great deal about the homestead, he admits there are some mysteries surrounding the home that will probably never be told or learned. One of those is the fact there are no windows on the east side of the home.

"That is not a classical look," Real said. "One thing I came up with was that they saved some money in not putting in windows there. Perhaps James Morgan just didn't have the money to put in windows that would have probably been shipped in from Pittsburgh. Also, in some places tax on the house was based on the number of windows. Of course, this is all supposition, and there are a number of unknown mysteries that went into the building of the home that we will probably never know."

Another question concerning the home was where did all the bricks come from to build the house. The addition of uniform floor boards would tend to lead one to believe Morgan didn't hand-hew each board. When were the first sawmill and brick kiln built in this area where he would have gotten the bricks and boards? Another unique fact is the home didn't have indoor plumbing until the 1950s.

History shows Morgan came to the area traveling up the Cheat River in West Virginia and settled near Moreland, crossing the Allegheny River. Morgan was born in 1755 and was married in 1778. He had 10 children and chose to migrate to Ohio when that territory opened.

"It would have been a trip to endure," Morgan said of his ancestors. "We are talking pioneer days with log cabins and a very simplistic lifestyle. For him to build a house like this means he must have done well for himself, and with Wooster growing, he must have found some reason to settle here."

Real said the belief was Morgan was an educated man, believed to have served as one of the first Wayne County commissioners.

Real said the house was basically empty from the mid-1950s to the 1990s when it was owned by a couple that let it go into some disrepair. However, in the mid-1990s, David and Stephanie Livingston purchased the house, renovated it and turned it into a living history museum, bringing the Morgan House back to life. Later, Russ Burt, whose wife was a Morgan descendant, found out about the house. They made it their mission to really bring it back to its former glory, dividing some of the great rooms into two smaller rooms.

"There are very interesting stories to be told and many more that we will never know about this house," Real said. "We are caretakers of the home, and our goal is to maintain its beauty and history."

Engineer's office employees turn to bike building

By Dan Starcher

Wayne County Engineer's Office employees recently turned into Santa's helpers when they dedicated an afternoon to assembling 21 bikes to be given to children during the Shop with a Hero event on Dec. 11. Three of the bikes will be delivered to the domestic abuse treatment center, OneEighty.

Shop with a Hero is an annual collaboration on

"It is just amazing to see the joy that these bikes bring to the kids. They go to children all over Wayne County. We load them up in our trucks and deliver them alongside resource officers. The drivers get to see the reaction first-hand."

— Wayne County highway superintendent TJ Shamp

the second Saturday of December through the Fraternal Order of Police and Wayne County Children Services. Each year 100 area children are matched with a hero who treats them to breakfast and then participates in a motorcade to Walmart for a shopping spree.

The idea to build bikes for the event can be traced back to the Wayne County Fair.

TJ Shamp, Wayne County highway superintendent and fair board member, brought the idea to his department two years ago after recalling an Aaron Tippin performance at the fair in 2014 in which the singer built a bike on stage and donated it. He then challenged the fair board to do the same.

"It is just amazing to see the joy that these bikes bring to the kids," Shamp said. "They go to children all over Wayne County. We load them up in our trucks and deliver them alongside resource officers. The drivers get to see the reaction first-hand."

According to administrative assistant Pam Brown, the Wayne County Engineer's Office employees entirely funded the effort.

"All of our employees donated to the bike fund," Brown said. "This year our staff donated a combined total of $1,186."

Due to supply shortages, getting the bikes posed a challenge, but Brown was persistent and found other options.

"We needed to get different sizes of bikes," Brown said. "The FOP knew how many of each size to get, but getting them from the stores didn't work out this year, but I was able to find them online and get them shipped for free."

Second-term Wayne County engineer Scott Miller is appreciative of his department's efforts.

"This is a worthwhile project for the betterment of Wayne County," Miller said. "Last year and today, I was able to watch all of our employees come together and build bikes and share in fellowship while giving back to our community. I appreciate the efforts of our employees to not only maintain our transportation system, but also to recognize others in our community need our support over the holidays."

Kidron landscape artist J N Salsburey will hold an art show on Dec. 11 at Salem Mennonite, located between Dalton and Kidron.

Kidron artist to hold solo show

With the annual Dalton Arts and Crafts Show canceled again, local artist J N Salsburey will host his own show on Saturday, Dec. 11 at the Salem Mennonite Gallery, located in the church at 3363 Zuecher Road between Dalton and Kidron.

Salsburey, from Kidron, is a landscape artist who works in oils, acrylic and watercolors. All are welcome to stroll through the gallery from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. to view the art on display, and Salsburey will be on hand to guide quick tours of the large nursery murals he has painted.

The artist also will work onsite with some paintings to view as he works.

Most of Salsburey's work is self-generated from his imagination, but he also considers commission ideas, based upon photos and artist license.

To see his work online, go to www.JNSalsDesign.com.

Career Center hosting open house for students, adult ed

The Wayne County Schools Career Center will host an open house on Thursday, Dec. 9 from 5-7:30 p.m. The public is invited to attend with a special invitation extended to all Wayne County eighth-, ninth- and 10th-graders and their families. Juniors also are invited to tour the RAMTEC facility and learn about two half-day programs for seniors only: machining technologies and robotics and automation.

Students interested in engineering technologies should go to Orrville High School from 5-7:30 p.m.

The career center offers 27 high school programs in manufacturing, agriculture, healthcare, public service, technology, construction and mechanics.

Some college, university and career-technical school partners and military, business and industry representatives will be in the commons to answer questions about colleges and advanced training. Additional information about college credit, certification or licensure opportunities will be available from career-technical instructors. Student organizations will have displays describing their activities.

School counselors will host College Credit Plus Night at 6 p.m. in the Student Assistance Center and also will be available to answer questions about the application process. The Extra Help Area will be open with information related to the career center's Extra Help programs.

Building tours will be led by staff guides, but maps will be available for those who want to tour on their own. There will be a drawing for prizes including wireless earbuds and gift cards for eighth-, ninth- and 10th-graders.

Adult education will hold an open house at the same time. Adults interested in full-time, part-time or Fast Track classes can tour classrooms and labs, discuss financial aid and grant options, and even attend an information session that evening. Staff also will be available to discuss the free Aspire classes and adult diploma programs.

The career center is located at 518 W. Prospect St. in Smithville. For more information call 330-669-7000 or go to the school website at www.wcsc.org.

Applications for H-W Electric Co-op scholarships due soon

Holmes-Wayne Electric Cooperative Inc. recently reminded area high school students that applications are still being accepted for its 2022 scholarship program. The member-owned electric utility will award 10 area graduating seniors pursuing higher education a total of $22,200 in scholarships.

"Concern for our community is essential to who we are as a cooperative," President/CEO Glenn Miller said. "We serve our community not only by being an essential service, but by helping to power our local economy. Whether through volunteering, donating to local causes or promoting our local youth development, we invest in our corner of the world because it's our home too."

The co-op encourages all eligible students to apply. The contest is open to high school seniors who have a GPA of 3.6 or better on a 4.0

Upcoming Winter Olympics may need shot in the arm

The Buckeyes and the Browns have successfully put themselves on football's back burner. So let's all take a deep breath and move forward, just like the National Broadcasting Corporation wants us to.

Indeed, you may have noticed NBC is running a lot of promos for the 2022 Beijing Winter Olympics, which don't actually begin until Feb. 4. They must think if they can spoon feed us enough Mikaela Shiffrin, Shaun White and "Miracle on Ice" reruns between now and then, they'll be able to ring up some blockbuster ratings once the Olympic flame roars to life in Beijing National Stadium.

Tom Rife
Livin' the Team

Frankly, I don't see these Winter Games as being blockbuster at all.

For the record, a total of 109 medal events including seven new events will be contested in 15 disciplines of seven sports. Among them, there are 50 events for men, 46 events for women, 11 events for mixed teams and two open events. An open event allows athletes of both genders to participate against each other.

In addition to the mother network, the action also will be shown on NBCSN, CNBC, USA and Peacock.

If only NBC could convince the IOC to step up to the plate, to spice up the menu, to add more icing to the cake, put a cherry on top and remove all the calories. Perhaps it's a bit late at this stage, but why not throw in some "exhibition" sports that would play off the traditional events and grab some more eyeballs for NBC?

Take, for example, ice hockey. All that down time between periods would be much more entertaining if they put six or seven Zamboni machines out there on the ice all at once for a little Whammo Zambo Rambo Demo Derby! It could be one of those aforementioned "open" events for both male and female drivers. Invite that "Yung Money" guy named Larson. Give Hailie Deegan a chance. She's popular on social media.

Here's another suggestion: Reverse Bobsleigh.

Just have the teams turn their sleds around backward before they shove off down the icy chute. Should make for some thrilling GoPro camera angles.

Along that same vein, add Reverse Luge to the docket. The athletes must start at the finish line and lay on their backs like they normally would. Start the stopwatch and see how long it takes them to get up to the starting line at the top. Ever seen a beetle on its back?

The slalom events could use some improvement too. The solution? Downhill Shaving. The competitors trade their skis for Norelco Rotary Razor tubs, complete with those celebrated "floating heads." Remember those adorable TV commercials back in the mid-'70s with the animated Santa zooming down the snow-covered slope? Of course you do. Everybody does.

By the way, there was a Norelco Lady Bug model deliver the perfect sales pitch. Ka-ching!

NBCSN has gone to great lengths to make the sport of curling watchable, even creating the "Curling Night in America" series. Women seem to be just as skilled as the men. Just think: "Curling Iron Night in The People's Republic of China." Wand-a-ful, wouldn't you agree?

Isn't there some way to make the biathlon more intriguing? In this event the athletes must combine the endurance and intensity of cross-country skiing with the precision and skill of rifle shooting. It stands to reason that Blindfolded Biathlon would result in more drama.

Why not mix the always-popular figure skating segments with speed skating? The hybrid blend of Figure-8 Speed Skating would be something akin to the figure-8 auto racing made famous by the daredevils at the tiny Islip Speedway in New York in the late '60s. This would definitely redefine the double Axel and triple Salchow maneuvers.

Speaking of hybrid Olympic events, who really and truly tunes in to watch the Nordic Combined, which is made up of two separate sports: ski jumping and cross-country skiing.

Just axe that entire mess and replace it with the Vaccine Combined.

Given the temperament of COVID variants these days, I'd say it's worth a shot.

It was a big family weekend for both man and beast

In a tradition that began when they were still in the military, our daughter Charlotte and her husband Andrew threw their doors wide open once again to welcome both sides of the family to a Thanksgiving weekend feast and fest.

The logistics of the event have always been straightforward: We drive to wherever they happen to be living at the time, and the kids take care of the rest. With daylong drives to Fort Bragg, Fort Lee and Fort Drum in our rearview mirror, the four-hour hop to Kentucky would be a piece of cake.

We knew that for Frankie, our recently adopted mutt, the trip would be yet another test of his puppy patience, but we reassured him throughout the journey with the promise of big, big fun once we got there. Dogs are family in our gang, and no one gets left behind. It's no stretch to say the mutts

John & Kristin Lorson
Drawing
Laughter

have had as much fun with these get-togethers as the rest of us over the years.

One particularly memorable holiday meet-up saw a household filled with 10 people, six dogs and a pair of cats who likely thought they'd died and descended directly into hell. That year the turkey ended up on the floor, compliments of Parker — the one dog we felt we could trust to remain inside during the family feast. His credentials were impeccable. Turns out Parker was a secret agent.

Back to this year's adventure. Frankie rode the highway like a champ. Even with the backseat all to himself, he chose to lounge above the luggage in the rear window just to prove he was cool.

Frankie's reward was lined up at the living room window when we pulled in the drive, and within moments of our arrival, he was cavorting through the yard with three other slobbering goofballs. Charlotte's dogs were a known quantity coming into the weekend, but Frankie had not yet made the acquaint-tance of the comely young Labrador, Belle La Belle, who had traveled the whole way from New England with Andrew's mother. Butts were sniffed, tails were wagged and the two were instantly smitten.

With the canine crew seemingly set, we humans ventured out for a few hours on Friday night to take in the local flavor. As a precautionary measure, of course, we made an effort to remove all possible temptations before we left — sort of like locking up the liquor cabinet when the teenagers are home alone. Pies on top of the refrigerator, crackers and snacks in the kitchen cupboard and all other items stuffed safely in the fridge, we set out for the evening.

A few hours into our adventure, Andrew said, "Hey, anybody want to see what the dogs are up to?"

The image from the baby monitor Andrew had relocated to the living room just for this occasion came into focus on the small screen. The scene unfolded to utter chaos.

Antibiotic stewardship in calves, part 1 of 3

You've likely heard of Beef Quality Assurance, but what about Veal Quality Assurance? Essentially, it is the same type of certification for the well-being and proper handling of veal calves.

However, a new addition to the certification training is antibiotic stewardship — a concept translatable to almost every livestock operation out there. The goal of the program is for farm personnel to correctly identify calves for treatment using a treatment protocol written by the herd veterinarian, thus improving responsible use of antibiotics. Drs. Jessica Pempek and Greg Habing put together a three-part training, of which I'll summarize each with their own article.

Part 1 of the Antibiotic Stewardship in Calves is titled "Antibiotic Use and Resistance." Before we jump into details, do you know the specifics on different types of medication? What do antibiotics treat? If you answered viral, fungal, protozoal or parasitic infections, unfortunately, you'd be wrong. An antibiotic is a medicine that inhibits the growth of or kills bacteria. Antibiotics are not to be used to treat any other type of infection.

How about vaccines? They're a hot topic right now in human medicine, but their purpose is the same in livestock. They introduce a viral or bacterial pathogen in an inert form to prime the immune system to attack it, should the animal be exposed to the pathogen in real time later. Vaccines can be a modified-live form, killed form or conjugate form and cause the body to recognize and make antibodies against that specific disease-causing organism. Vaccines prevent disease, not cure it.

Lastly, what do you know about non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs or NSAIDs? These drugs are the parallels to our ibuprofen or acetaminophen. These drugs do not prevent disease or cure infections but instead reduce fever or inflammation that may be associated with an infection. Examples include flunixin meglumine, phenylbutazone or meloxicam.

Haley Zynda

Now, back to antibiotics. It's important to remember not all bacteria are bad. There are very good bacteria that live in the digestive tract of calves and mature cows (the rumen wouldn't function without them). The bad bacteria are referred to as pathogens, and these bacteria cause the naval infections, pinkeye, and some pneumonia and diarrhea cases we see in calves.

When using antibiotics, the medication does not pick and choose which bacteria it kills other than using its mode of action (way of prohibiting bacterial growth). That means good bacteria along with pathogens are impacted when administering an antibiotic. Bacteria in the digestive tract unfortunately may take a hit too. This will likely cause a disruption to the gut microbiome and digestion efficiency, and those good microbes will need to be repopulated again.

Overusing antibiotics or misusing them can lead to antibiotic resistance or resistance by the bacteria to the antibiotic. Widespread resistance can eventually lead to bacterial populations unable to be controlled by medication for both livestock and humans. We, as humans, can be infected by the same or similar pathogens as livestock because we share segments of the gene pool (we're all in the mammalian family). Therefore, antibiotic resistance not only affects livestock producers, but the laypeople as well.

Overusing or misusing antibiotics causes resistance by selecting for the bacteria that are not killed or inhibited by the medicine. For example, let's say there is a 5-day-old calf presenting with diarrhea. For this age of calf, the causative pathogens may be E. coli, clostridia, cryptosporidium, rotavirus or coronavirus. While waiting for the fecal culture results, you treat with an antibiotic. Fast forward after you've already given several doses of antibiotic — the culture is negative for bacteria and you're dealing with a viral infection. Unfortunately, the antibiotics have already gotten to work. They've negatively impacted the good bacteria in the gut, and if there are any pathogenic bacteria in the system, they have killed off the susceptible ones but left the resistant bacteria alone.

The "lone rangers" will now have full access to replicate and pass on their resistant genes, potentially causing an issue down the line, especially if the same protocol is followed every time there is a sick calf.

Stopping antibiotic resistance starts with judicious antibiotic use. This means using the proper medication for the issue at hand. Having a veterinary-client-patient working relationship is essential to knowing when and when not to use an antibiotic. Discuss a treatment protocol with your vet. Using antibiotic alternatives also may reduce the chance of resistance. Minor infections may be handled simply using palliative care (giving an NSAID if the animal is in considerable pain, keeping a wound clean, providing fresh and dry bedding, et cetera). Lastly, preventing disease before it occurs eliminates the need to use antibiotics entirely. Farm cleanliness, sick animal quarantine and worker hygiene can all contribute to reduced disease transfer.

Stopping antibiotic resistance can start with anyone. Talk to your vet about antibiotic use on your farm and stay tuned for part 2.

Shop at small businesses, the numbers don't lie

The numbers don't lie. Locally owned businesses may be classified as small, but they have a big impact on the national economy.

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics' Business Employment Dynamics report, small businesses created 10.5 million net new jobs between 2000 and 2019, accounting for 65.1% of net new jobs created since 2000 in the United States.

Supporting locally owned businesses is a great way to support a neighbor, but that's not the only attraction. Here are several reasons to shop small.

The feel-good factor

Doing for others cer-

File

tainly has an impact on the person on the receiving end, but it also benefits the do-gooders. A November 2020 survey by Union Bank found 72% of Americans said supporting small businesses was more important than getting the best deals. That may be due to the feeling of helping out a fellow neighbor.

Create job opportunities

Shopping at small businesses keeps those establishments afloat, and it also keeps their employees afloat. Small businesses are the largest employers in the United States. That's also true in Canada, where 68.8% of the total labor force works for a small business. A person may never know when he or she — or a relative — will need a job. Keeping small businesses viable provides a strong job market for locals.

Keep more money in the community

The Small Business Administration said $48 out of every $100 spent at a small business stays in the community. Spend the same $100 at a national retailer and only $14 stays.

Enjoy a more local flavor

National retailers and other businesses follow a global business model that may not allow for much customization, but small businesses can provide products or services that relate directly to the needs of the communities they serve. These same small businesses also may be more inclined to work with local vendors and start-ups than national companies that have global supply chains.

These are just a few of the many reasons to seek out small businesses when in need of products or services.

FAMILY

Apparently, someone had intended to surprise the rest of us with an entire package of Red Velvet Oreo cookies as a cap to a weekend of food and fun. Unfortunately, only four of us — the ones with sharp teeth, long noses and extremely acute senses of smell — were present to partake of that treat. I can report, however, that the mood appeared incredibly festive in a room filled with blue and pink packaging that had been shredded to confetti.

Family times are the best times — even for the puppy dogs.
