Two months later, CCAI had the great privilege of hosting 14 key judicial and governmental child welfare leaders from Guatemala. As we worked to provide them with the knowledge base necessary to help them transform their child welfare system into one that provides family-based over institutional care, I could not help but think about Maria, a 15-year-old victim of incest I met while visiting Guatemala’s “City of Children.” Raped by her uncle since she was ten-years-old, Maria admitted she still feels fearful around the boys who live with her in the giant orphanage. She had tears in her eyes as she told me how soon she would need to find somewhere else to live because the orphanage only provides care until she turns 16.

And two months after that, I came to know a beautiful young woman named Athena, one of our 2013 Foster Youth Interns, who at 20, eloquently described what she would do to have a family to love her. Having grown up in foster care, wishing for a family of her very own became a daily routine.

CCAI exists because of children like Samrin, Maria and Athena, children whose human potential is being unnecessarily limited by the absence of a parent who will love them unconditionally. For children like Samrin, CCAI works to educate global policymakers on why international adoption is a worthy and effective way to find homes for children whose domestic adoption options are limited. In cases like Maria’s, we seek to inform world leaders about the backstories of institutional care and advocate for laws that place children in families. And we are proud to give young leaders like Athena a voice so that they can explain why having a family matters to them.

Fighting for all children to have a safe, loving and permanent family is not only the right thing to do, but the smart thing. Every day scientists learn more and more about how important a family is to the development of a child’s brain. Simply put, children who have a nurturing relationship throughout their childhood excel, and those who do not, struggle. The consequences of this reality are not limited to the lives of these children. Failing to realize the full potential of every child has consequences for the world as a whole.

The mission of CCAI is a vital one. We are so proud of the progress we have made this year. These achievements simply would not have been possible without our many partners. We look forward to continuing to make progress until the dream of a family for every child is fulfilled.

A message from the Executive Director // A YEAR IN REVIEW

In February 2013, CCAI coordinated a Congressional delegation to Cambodia, Vietnam and South Korea. It was not long before I was in a Cambodian orphanage cuddling with a two-year-old, legally blind child named Samrin. Despite his inability to see, Samrin was an endearing, typical little boy.

KEY ACHIEVEMENTS

1. CCAI worked diligently to help the U.S. Government move toward its goal of reducing the number of children living outside of family care as one of its key foreign policy objectives and is engaged as it selects six target countries to pilot these family-focused strategies.

2. CCAI focused efforts to help Congress commit to putting in place the U.S. Government leadership and resources necessary to realize the goal of a family for every child. Legislation was introduced in support of this goal and money was appropriated for pilot programs in target countries.

3. CCAI promoted permanency for older youth in foster care as policymakers introduced several pieces of legislation and $4.5 million was appropriated to support innovative, child-focused recruitment programs.

2013 CCAI PARTNERS

IT IS ESTIMATED THERE ARE OVER 20 MILLION CHILDREN IN THE WORLD WITHOUT FAMILIES

The Congressional Coalition on Adoption Institute (CCAI) exists to educate Members of Congress and policymakers and to raise awareness of the needs of children who do not have families to call their own. By convening policymakers, issue experts and individuals with direct foster care or adoption experience, CCAI seeks to ensure that every child avoids these risks and benefits from the love and support of a family.
CARE for a Racially diverse adoption and foster care community. As such, our Congressional Resource Program seeks to educate and engage policymakers on information critical to federal adoption and foster care policy.

The Congressional Coalition on Adoption Institute has been an incredible advocate for the millions of children worldwide in need of loving homes.

As a member of Congressional Coalition on Adoption, I’m proud of and grateful for CCAI’s initiatives. I applaud the group’s tireless advocacy and its important role in addressing the challenges facing the adoption and foster care systems. Its staff and board members are valuable resources to me and to my staff, and its programs have precedent offices with some of the most articulate, passionate, and well-qualified students I’ve seen throughout my 17 years in Congress. Through its dedicated leadership, CARE has been successfully in mobilizing stakeholders in the adoption and foster care community. Its staff, board and partners are not only enthusiastic champions of adoption, they are also experts and effective in their fields. They not only educate stakeholders about the work to be done, but through events like the Angels in Adoption Gala, they also celebrate and recognize those who are making a difference in our communities. As a member of Congressional Coalition on Adoption, I’m proud of and grateful for CCAI’s initiatives. I applaud the group’s tireless advocacy and look forward to continued collaboration with CCAI and its partners.

“CCAI has been an important ally and leader in the effort to raise awareness about the challenges facing the adoption and foster care systems.”

SEN. ROY BLUNT (R-MO)

The Congressional Coalition on Adoption Institute has been an incredible advocate for the millions of children worldwide in need of loving homes. As the parent of an adopted son, this cause is particularly close to me. CCAI has been an important ally and leader in the effort to raise awareness about the challenges facing the adoption and foster care systems. Its staff and board members are valuable resources to me and to my staff, and its programs have precedent offices with some of the most articulate, passionate, and well-qualified students I’ve seen throughout my 17 years in Congress. Through its dedicated leadership, CARE has been successfully in mobilizing stakeholders in the adoption and foster care community. Its staff, board and partners are not only enthusiastic champions of adoption, they are also experts and effective in their fields. They not only educate stakeholders about the work to be done, but through events like the Angels in Adoption Gala, they also celebrate and recognize those who are making a difference in our communities. As a member of Congressional Coalition on Adoption, I’m proud of and grateful for CCAI’s initiatives. I applaud the group’s tireless advocacy and look forward to continued collaboration with CCAI and its partners.

“Being able to talk to the Senators and Representatives about my adoption and what I see and hear in the adoption community gave me hope that maybe, one day, legislation can be written so that all families resort to finding new homes for their adoptive children, as well as discuss the issues that surround adoption within our own community. Also, I was able to develop partnerships with other organizations and individuals to better serve families facing the barriers and adoption and foster care.”
On November 23, over 4,000 children in the U.S. foster care system found permanent, loving families. CCAI worked with two NFL teams, the New Orleans Saints and the Minnesota Vikings, to promote this important cause at their home games. Additionally, CCAI's Foster Youth Internship (FYI) program hosted 16 current and former foster youth from across the nation at a Congressional office internship placements. The opportunity to work in a dynamic and energetic environment like Capitol Hill has instilled in me a newfound confidence in myself that I, at times, did not know I possessed. In just over two months, we were able to further develop our professional skillset while working closely with staff members in our respective offices throughout 2013.

“Children living in orphanages and foster care need more strong advocates to speak out for their rights and fight to ensure they have the resources needed to live in healthy environments.”

“On November 23, National Adoption Day celebrated its 13th year of finalizing adoptions throughout the nation. Due to these efforts, over 4,000 children in the U.S. foster care system found permanent, loving families. CCAI worked with two NFL teams, the New Orleans Saints and the Minnesota Vikings, to promote the important cause at their home games. Additionally, CCAI successfully engaged Members of Congress at a standing room only Congressional briefing. The report will be used by both Congress and the adoption and foster care community as a resource to improve the child welfare system. Additionally, CCAI’s Foster Youth Internship Program will be a key component to improve the child welfare system.”

“Children living in orphanages and foster care need more strong advocates to speak out for their rights and fight to ensure they have the resources needed to live in healthy environments.”

20/20 VISION PROGRAM

Joining CCAI on a delegation trip in February to South Korea, Vietnam and Cambodia were Rep. Suzan Blumenthal’s staff as a Special Assistant, and I was recently promoted to the Legislative Correspondence position. As a member of the staff, I now have the opportunity to interact with Members of Congress throughout the country. This would not have been possible if CCAI did not first believe in me and my abilities. As I continue my career in public service, I will remain thankful for the experience CCAI afforded me. This unifying goal allowed us to successfully collaborate with one another over the course of the summer, which was arguably the most challenging yet rewarding professional experience of my career. As a group, we united in our individual capacities to use our personal experiences of being cared for to advance systemic change.
BRINGING FIRSTHAND EXPERIENCE TO WASHINGTON, D.C.

CCAI is honored to bring the experiences of children, youth and families to policymakers on Capitol Hill. Our work is to promote the goal of every child having a safe, permanent and loving family throughout the nation and the world.

Kayla and Johnny Craig
(Orange City, IA)

“We were incredibly humbled to share theeland of taking part in the Angel in Adoption experience in Washington, D.C. This allowed us to be among so many compassionate families who are being lifted out of all kinds of adversity. The stories of the children, born and adopted, to be safe and loving families is inspiring and sometimes overwhelming. The phenomenal speakers and CCAI leaders injected a dose of encouragement and perseverance, showing that we can make a difference when we come together and put others before ourselves.”

Alain Datcher
(Los Angeles, CA)

“The FYI program served as a support network for me this summer. I not only worked with colleagues in child welfare, but with individuals who understood my experiences as a former foster youth. CCAI gave me a platform to use my experiences to create real policy recommendations and change. I’m currently utilizing the policy report I created as an FYI to enact policy change in the City of Los Angeles. Without the mentorship and community of CCAI, I would never have been able to achieve this.”

Jason and Brandy Dial
(Springville, UT)

“Being an Angel in Adoption was surreal. It was a chance to rub elbows with many selfless parents with the same goal to raise healthy, happy children and create families. It was a chance to share great successes and express [to Members of Congress] valid obstacles that can slow or prevent adoptions from happening.”

Dr. Charles Zeanah
(Tulane University / New Orleans, LA)

“Dr. Charles Zeanah, child and brain scientist at Tulane University in New Orleans, was able to bring his knowledge to bear as he traveled with CCAI: “In Vietnam, in an institution for young children, we visited the infant, toddler and preschool rooms. In each successive room, the children had resided at the institution longer, and seemed more lost. In Cambodia, we saw children living in a large materially and socially deprived institution, with little hope of feeling appreciated, understood or valued. Seeing these children firsthand created indelible images for the Congressional delegates—images that are magnified by considerable science documenting the toxic effects of these settings on children’s brains and behavioral development.”

Elijah Evans
(Youngsville, LA)

“Receiving the Angels in Adoption award was a life-changing experience not only because of the recognition, but also because of the other advocates that I shared the experience with. It also helped me bring my community outreach in adoption to another level by providing tools to further my advocacy. One example is that my family and I have signed up to be a spokespeople for an organization that we met through Angel in Adoption.”

Dr. Christina Watson
(Key Largo, FL)

“In my five-and-a-half-year long adoption journey to bring my daughter home from Guatemala, there were too many obstacles to name. Hours of waiting for government paperwork, policy changes and paperwork. When CCAI entered the arena, advocating on my behalf, a light was shown in the darkness. They knew about policy and what is right and how to articulate it in a way that everyone could hear. They knew about policy and what is right and how to articulate it for every advocate. I am so grateful for the amazing team that is CCAI!”
Knowledge is power. CCAI’s programs work to provide Members of Congress and policymakers the knowledge they need to use the power they have to make a difference on behalf of children in need of a loving family.
