

Join Women and Gender Studies to celebrate the recent publication of Confronting Global Gender Justice: Women's lives, human rights

Thursday, April 21, 2011

4:00PM-6:00PM

Women and Gender Studies Center, Johnson Center, 240K

Join Women and Gender Studies to celebrate the recent publication of Confronting Global Gender Justice, a groundbreaking, interdisciplinary collection of essays, edited by Women and Gender Studies faculty:

Debra Bergoffen, Emerita Professor of Philosophy

Paula Ruth Gilbert, Professor of French and Women & Gender Studies

Connie McNeely, Associate Professor, School of Public Policy

Tamara Harvey, Associate Professor, English

Confronting Global Gender Justice addresses some of the most challenging issues facing academics, practitioners and activists working to define and research women's rights as human rights, and pressing to ensure these rights are realized in the individual lives of women around the world.

Enjoy light refreshments and provocative conversation with the editors and several chapter contributors. Books will be available for sale at the event, faculty members receive 10% discount with valid ID.
