b) Experiment with synthetic fuels.
2. 1936/37 a) Krupps report on their contribution to the practical realisation of armed supremacy, to the aims set out by the Four-Year Plan, to the strengthening of the export trade and the foreign currency position.
b) Krupps have set up a plant for the production of fuels in accordance with aims of Four-Year Plan.
c) During post-war period the type of article produced was that which would preserve and improve the workers' skill although this policy involved heavy losses. Thereafter, war production was able to start immediately in 1933.
3. 1937/38 In order to be ready in the event of a later re-armament programme. Production programme after the World War was designed to maintain and improve the skill of the workers, although this programme entailed heavy losses. Losses could be met because of previous creation of reserves and profits of the coal-mines, steel and smelting works. After 1933 KRUPP was able not only to switch to production of War material quickly, but also to place their experience at disposal of other firms.
4. 1939/40. Workmen who have been called up have been replaced by foreign workers and PW.
The construction of important works in various parts of the Reich had been completed as to its greater part when war began.

Sheet 1. para 1. Deterioration of health of Russian PsOW is admitted.

para 3. Reasons for this state of affairs are given, viz:

- (1) Soviet prisoners are not receiving the rations to which they are entitled - In view of the meagre scale of entitlement this is admitted to be serious. Extra rations for heavy work, or overtime are often allotted only after work has been in progress for some time, by which time the damage to health has been done.
- (2) The hours demanded of prisoners have been too long. An improvement in hours of rest, and in billets, is essential if output is to be maintained. The writer of this order emphasizes that these demands for improved treatment of PsOW do not spring from mistaken soft-heartedness but purely from a desire to extract the maximum of work from Soviet PsOW.

Sheet 2. para 3. To overwork Soviet PsOW to such an extent that they die on being returned to their bases or to hospitals, is criticised as "irresponsible".

para 4. (last line) The matter is not to be mentioned in the Pro
