

Strecker's Chorus Frog is one of the first frogs to call in western and central Oklahoma. This burrowing frog uses its front legs to dig a burrow and will go in head first. Much of its life is lived in the burrow except during breeding but even then it can be hard to find this tiny frog which measures from 1" to 1 ½ " in length and is active only at night. But you will hear its distinct high-pitched "ka week" sound.
