The interior project in the church includes repair of plaster and wood damage. The plaster and wood damage has been completed. Installation of top plaster coats with pigment matching the colors selected by the "Design Team" and approved by the Vestry has been completed on the apse ceiling, apse walls as well as the nave north and south walls. The nave side walls and bell tower room plaster will be completed next Tuesday. The scaffolding has been removed from the interior. The plaster and wood repair projects should be complete by October 28th. Cushions and needle point items are being repaired and cleaned along with reconditioning of the hymnals and prayer books by Rie Linton with help of son, Bartlee and daughter, Dorothee. Over 60 Books of Common Prayer are being replaced thanks to the generosity of parishioners.

SPAFER 2011 Lecture Series presents Bishop John Shelby Spong—Friday, Nov 4th and 45h Southside Baptist Church, Birmingham

The pre-eminent voice for liberal Christianity, John Shelby Spong, 79, was the Bishop of the Episcopal Church of Newark for 24 years before his retirement last year. His admirers acclaim his legacy as a teaching bishop who makes contemporary theology accessible to the ordinary lay person—he's considered a champion of an inclusive faith by many both inside and outside the Christian church. For tickets: www.spafer.org

[September 20, 2011] The Episcopal Church of Bishops, meeting in Quito, Ecuador, issued the following Pastoral Teaching.

A letter to all Clergy, from Bishop Parsley, asked that this Pastoral Teaching be made available to each parish. It addresses issues of the environment and earth stewardship. Below is a portion of the letter. The letter in its entirety is available from Nativity's website and hard copies may be attained from the church office.

We, your bishops, believe these words of Jeremiah describe these times and call us to repentance as we face the unfolding environmental crisis of the earth: How long will the land mourn, and the grass of every field wither? For the wickedness of those who live in it the animals and the birds are swept away, and because people said, "He is blind to our ways." (Jeremiah 12:4) The mounting urgency of our environmental crisis challenges us at this time to confess "our self-indulgent appetites and ways," "our waste and pollution of God's creation," and "our lack of concern for those who come after us" (Ash Wednesday Liturgy, Book of Common Prayer, p. 268. It also challenges us to amend our lives and to work for environmental justice and for more environmentally sustainable practices.

Christians cannot be indifferent to global warming, pollution, natural resource depletion, species extinctions, and habitat destruction, all of which threaten life on our planet. Because so many of these threats are driven by greed, we must also actively seek to create more compassionate and sustainable economics that support the well-being of all God's creation...

The Church as always had as one of its priorities a concern for the poor and the suffering. Therefore, we need not agree on the fundamental causes of human devastation of the environment, or on what standard of living will allow sustainable development, or on the roots of poverty in any particular culture, in order to work to minimize the impact of climate change. It is the poor and the disadvantaged who suffer most from callous environmental irresponsibility. Poverty is both a local and a global reality. A healthy economy depends absolutely on a healthy environment...

In assuming with new vigor our teaching office, we, your bishops, commit ourselves to a renewal of these spiritual practices in our own lives, and invite you to join us in this commitment for the good of our souls and the life of the world. Moreover, in order to honor the goodness and sacredness of God's creation, we, as brothers and sisters in Christ, commit ourselves and urge every Episcopalian:

- To acknowledge the urgency of the planetary crisis in which we find ourselves, and to repent of any and all acts of greed, overconsumption, and waste that have contributed to it;
- To life up prayers in personal and public worship for environment justice, for sustainable development, and for help in restoring right relations both among humankind and between humankind and the rest of creation;
- To take steps in our individual lives, and in community, public policy, business, and other forms of corporate decision-making, to practice environmental stewardship and justice, including (1) a commitment to energy conservation and the use of clean, renewable sources of energy; and (2) efforts to reduce, reuse, and recycle, and whenever possible to buy products made from recycled materials;
- To seek to understand and uproot the political, social, and economic causes of environmental destruction and abuse; [iii]
- To advocate for a "fair, ambitious, and binding" climate treaty, and to work toward climate justice through reducing our own carbon footprint and advocating for those most negatively affected by climate change.

May God give us the grace to heed the warnings of Jeremiah and to accept the gracious invitation of the incarnate Word to live, in, with, and through him, a life of grace for the whole world, that thereby all the earth may be restored and humanity filled with hope. Rejoicing in your works, O Lord, send us forth with your Spirit to renew the face to the earth, that the world may once again be filled with your good things: the trees watered abundantly, springs rushing between the hills in verdant valleys, all the earth made fruitful, your manifold creatures, birds, beasts, and human, all quenching their thirst and receiving their nourishment from you once again in due season. (Psalm 104.)

[iii]We are indebted to the Episcopal Bishops of New England for their earlier 2003 Pastoral Letter, "To Serve Christ in All Creation." Several of the "commitments" and other phrases herein are quotations of adaptations of their work.____
