

Moving Day

What an amazing trip to Romania I had on Sept. 27-Oct.7th. We lead a women's training weekend in Arad with 35 women leaders. I spoke on sharing your story as evangelism. The women were so eager to learn and engage. Many of them responded with ways they will directly use the training we taught in their ministries. I traveled with 3 other women teachers who spoke on "conflict management, self-care and Bible study tools". I was greatly blessed by these women I now know well and have become very fond of. They even sang me a wedding song at the end of the weekend and gave me a special gift.

My friend Dora above insisted on giving me her scarf which was a gift to her from her friend in Turkey. "We cannot do great things on the earth, only small things with great love" -Mother Theresa

As I write this I am closing up ministry here and packing my vehicle for the long journey to Michigan. Bill will fly in this Sunday (10/17) and we will drive my car and possessions to his home town in Battle Creek. I now feel like my home is in Michigan and I'm very excited to build new relationships and start a life with him. God has been faithful to meet my needs here and I'm grateful to say that I will be leaving GRM with an even account which really is a testament to his power. Thank you for your faithfulness to help me in that process.

To be real honest with you I will not miss the stresses of support raising but I will truly miss the way God's hand was always so obvious as he provided for me every need as they arose and sometimes the same day. I can't tell you how much my faith has grown in this process and I will forever be one who prays and supports world missions.

After they sang the wedding son

Above I am teaching with translation. I also traveled back to the boys Orphanage I spent a week in this summer. They were so excited to see me and hear about my engagement. To the left are some girls from our training...they were so proud to receive the teaching. Below is the team I traveled with. They were each a blessing and gifted at what they do.
