Ten Excuses to Get Out of Packing

1. Develop carpal tunnel syndrome by overusing the remote control.
2. Ask your spouse if it's OK to pack the Swedish steel cutlery with the heirloom lace tablecloth.
3. Mention you are checking to make sure the cat doesn't jump into a packing box. Hide in a remote room with a TV or a book, emerging periodically to say, "Here kitty, kitty, kitty!"
4. Be pregnant. This takes some advance planning, but so does every great strategy.
5. Offer to go to the post office to fill out change-of-address cards. Do not specify which post office.
6. Donate your belongings to the Salvation Army. Shopping is more fun than packing.
7. Say you need to buy a bungee cord. People who pack always think they need one.
8. Get a haircut. Wash the car. Say you need to make a good impression on the new neighbors.
9. Start measuring at the new house. This is an important step – it's not necessary to have any real purpose. It's the act of measuring that's important.
10. Return video tapes, library books or wallpaper sample books. This takes some pre-planning, but not nearly as much commitment as #4.
