100,000 Australians Campaign

Earthworker Cooperative is a social enterprise with a mission to create realistic solutions for transitioning Australia's workforce into a low carbon economy.

It aims to create jobs, build social capital and protect the environment in local communities by building workers cooperatives engaged in the manufacture of renewable energy infrastructure.

The cooperative factories are to be established in regional areas where large proportions of the workforce are dependent on carbon intensive industries/energy generation.

Joining the Earthworker Cooperative is simple and can be done using this membership form, or at the blog site: www.earthworkercooperative.com.

Getting involved is easy: first, have a look at the single set of aims and objectives – and second, contribute a $20 membership fee.

Aim: To facilitate the establishment of manufacturing workers cooperatives throughout our regions through membership of the Earthworker Cooperative.

Objective: Build the membership of Earthworker Cooperative; finance the workers cooperatives with $20.00 membership fees;
support the factories to manufacture the best renewable energy products;
and provide the workers cooperatives with marketing tools and other forms of support asked for by the manufacturing cooperatives.

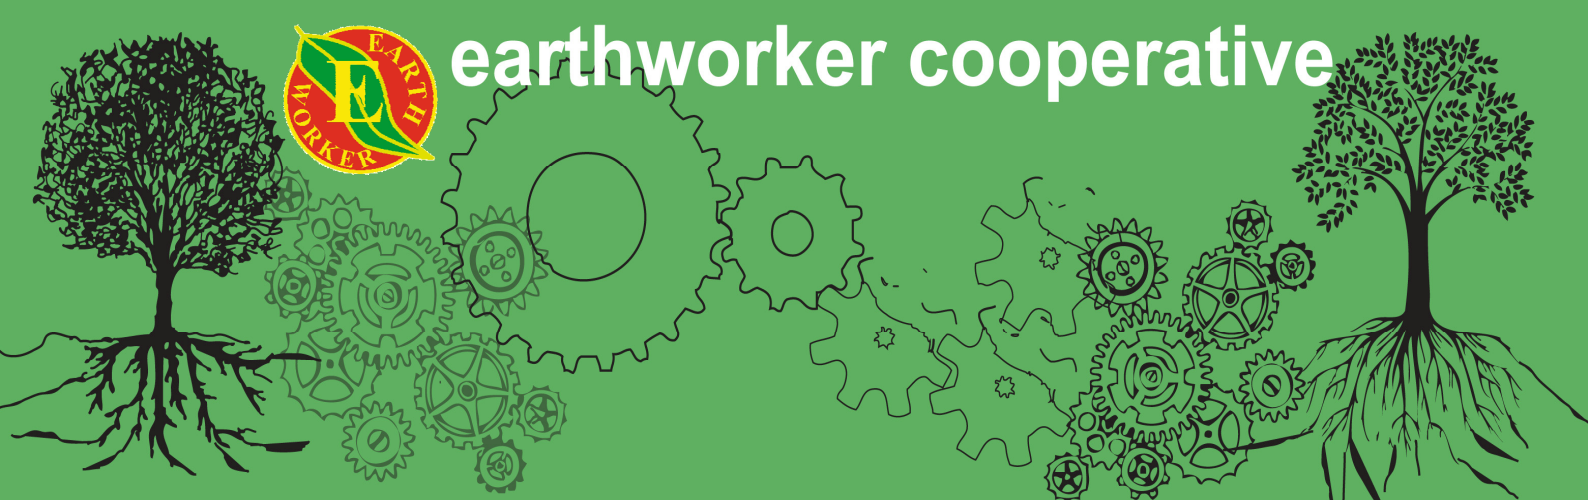

Earthworker Cooperative's immediate objective is to enlist 100,000 Australians to contribute $20 per member to establish the first workers cooperative in Morwell, Victoria.

Eureka's Future Workers Cooperative will manufacture and then sell solar hot water systems collectively through union-employer Enterprise Bargaining Agreements, or other bulk purchasing arrangements.

Please join us in this, our country's work.
