Title: August "Garry" Herrmann papers

Inclusive dates: 1887-1938, bulk 1902-1927

Name of Creator: Herrmann, August, 1859-1931.

Extent: 90 linear feet (140 five-inch boxes, 2 two-and-one-half-inch boxes, 9 oversize boxes)

Abstract:

This collection contains the papers of August "Garry" Herrmann who was President of the Cincinnati Reds and Chairman of the National Commission during the years 1902-1927. Herrmann's papers consist of correspondence, newspaper articles, contracts, ledgers, maps, blueprints, drawings, and memorabilia which offer insight into the operations of an early twentieth-century baseball club and the first ruling government of baseball. Although Herrmann is regarded as a peacemaker and the father of the World Series, he is best remembered as a colorful and jovial baseball magnate.

Language: Most of the materials are in English. Occasionally, there are materials in German.

Biographical History:

August "Garry" Herrmann was the president of the Cincinnati Reds baseball club from 1902 to 1927. For seventeen of those years, he also was the chairman of the National Commission, the ruling body of Organized Baseball (1903-1920).

A native of Cincinnati who was born to German immigrants on May 3, 1859, Herrmann gained the nickname "Garry" from the foreman of the printing shop where he first apprenticed. The shop printed the official newspaper of the courts of Hamilton County, The Law Bulletin, and Herrmann soon became involved in Cincinnati's political machine. Herrmann rose in the ranks of the Ohio Republican party quickly, and became one of political boss George B. Cox's most important men. Herrmann was on the Cincinnati Board of Education, as well as a court clerk, before being named to the city's Board of Administration. He later served as chairman of Cincinnati's Water Works Commission before leaving City Hall for the ballpark.

Herrmann's affiliations went beyond bossism and baseball. He was involved in a plethora of groups, including the Benevolent and Protective Order of the Elks, the Shriners, the Masons, the International Typographical Union, the Republican Party, the American Bowling Congress, and the local Turner Society, to name a few. These connections led Herrmann to positions of national prominence in areas beyond the ball field, for instance as president of the American Bowling Congress for two terms in 1907 and 1908, as chairman of the national gathering of Turner Societies in 1909, and as Grand Exalted Ruler of the Elks for the 1910 to 1911 session.

The interest Herrmann garnered from his involvement in those organizations paled in comparison with the attention he received as President of the Cincinnati Reds and as Chairman of the National Commission. He became involved with the Reds in 1902 when he negotiated with John T. Brush to purchase the team. Herrmann, Cox, and Julius Fleischmann, of yeast and gin fame, equally split the purchase price. Herrmann's administrative abilities and outgoing personality led the new owners to install him as president of the club. He remained at that position for a quarter of a century.

One of Garry's first efforts in baseball was brokering the peace agreement between the American and National Leagues in early 1903. He chaired the National League Peace Committee, and influenced the meetings with the American League representatives enough that they signed the Cincinnati Peace Agreement. Herrmann also was on the National League Board of Directors for many years, and he chaired many of the League's committees over the years.

Herrmann oversaw remodeling projects at Palace of the Fans and the construction of Redland Field, the two Cincinnati ballparks where the Reds played between 1902 and 1927. He administered the ballpark concessions, which included the Coca-Cola Company, Fleischmann Company, Jung Brewing Company, and Philip Morris; and advertising, which included hotels, restaurants, railroads, lumber stores, and shoe companies. He also approved arrangements for renting the grounds for movies and other baseball games, including teams such as the Long Branch Cubans, Cuban X Giants, American Giants, American Bloomer Girls, and Texas Bloomer Girls. In addition, Herrmann arranged for the Reds to play exhibition games with many semi-professional and minor league teams.

The Reds were a mediocre team for most of the time that Herrmann ran the club. Even with notables like Joe Kelley, Edward "Ned" Hanlon, Clark Griffith, Hank O'Day, Joe Tinker, and Charles "Buck" Herzog managing the team, the Reds usually finished in the lower half of the standings. The Reds climbed into the first division and remained there with greater regularity between 1917 and 1926, under managers Christy Mathewson, Pat Moran, and Jack Hendricks. Their greatest accomplishment during Herrmann's tenure was winning the 1919 World Series. Unfortunately, the "Black Sox" scandal tarnished the luster of that victory.

Some of the more notable players that passed through the Reds organization during Herrmann's tenure included John "Rube" Benton, Hal Chase, Lew Fonseca, Henry "Heinie" Groh, Miller Huggins, John "Hans" Lobert, Adolfo Luque, John "Larry" McLean, Eppa Rixey, Edd Roush, Ivy Wingo, and two of the first Cubans to play major league ball, Armando Marsans and Rafael Almeida.

Herrmann's tenure as the chairman of the National Commission was initiated by the National Agreement that was signed on 11 September 1903 by the American League, National League, and National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues. This document provided for a ruling body of three men consisting of the presidents of the American and National Leagues, and a third member who would chair the Commission, elected annually by the clubs. The Commission gave decisions regarding player and teams disputes, and administered the finances and planning of the World Series. The chairman, who presided at the meetings, would cast the deciding vote and became the default chief justice of the three-member panel. The first man elected to chair the National Commission was also the only man to hold the position, August Herrmann. The baseball executives recognized his efforts in negotiating the peace agreement and rewarded him with the chairmanship, citing his broad views of justice and unquestioned honesty.

Widely recognized as fair and equitable in his decisions, Herrmann still incurred the wrath of particular owners. Team presidents like Charles Murphy (Chicago Cubs, 1906-1913), Horace Fogel (Philadelphia Phillies, 1909-1912), and Barney Dreyfuss (Pittsburgh Pirates, 1900 -1932) were vocal in their displeasure with any decision of the Commission that they perceived as unjust. There were also heated exchanges between members of the Commission themselves as they were deciding cases. American League president Ban Johnson at times had an acrid pen, as did National League presidents Harry Pulliam, Thomas J. Lynch, John K. Tener, and John Heydler.

While most of the decisions of the National Commission were perceived as just and fair, a few contributed to the downfall of the Commission in 1920, including the George Sisler and Scott Perry cases. The George Sisler case was complicated, but boiled down to a dispute between the Pittsburgh National League team and the St. Louis American League team. Each claimed contractual rights to Sisler, and it took three years for the Commission to mull the evidence and come to a decision. When the Commission sided with St. Louis in 1916, Dreyfuss exploded and worked continually to overthrow Herrmann as chairman.

The Scott Perry case was a feud between the Boston National League club and the Philadelphia American League club as to which club owned the rights to Perry's services. The panel sided with Boston, but Philadelphia disregarded the ruling and secured an injunction from the civil courts to keep Perry. The AL club's failure to comply with the decision resulted in fractured relations with the National League, and furthered the movement to remove Herrmann.

Other factors conspired to bring an end to the National Commission. These included the legal fight against the Federal League, which lasted from 1914 to 1922, and the "Black Sox" scandal of the 1919 World Series. The court case involving the Federal League was expensive and time consuming, and while the decision eventually supported Organized Baseball, it added to the growing displeasure with the current administration of baseball.

The "Black Sox" scandal involved eight players of the Chicago White Sox who were reportedly involved in a deal to purposely lose games in the 1919 World Series in exchange for money. While the gambling scandal mainly came to light after Herrmann's resignation as chairman in early 1920, it accelerated the demise of the National Commission and paved the way for the Office of the Commissioner.

With the end of the National Commission, Herrmann remained involved in the search for a baseball commissioner. Once Kenesaw Mountain Landis took office, Herrmann devoted his remaining years in baseball to the Reds. He officially resigned as president of the Reds after the 1927 season due to deteriorating health and increasing deafness. He died on 25 April 1931, one week shy of his seventy-second birthday, and one month after the deaths of Ernest S. Barnard and B. Bancroft Johnson, presidents of the American League.

Scope and Content:

The papers of August "Garry" Herrmann is made up of two parts; Part I. Cincinnati Reds, and Part II. National Commission. Part I. contains all the material associated with Herrmann as President of the Cincinnati Reds, 1902-1927. Part II consists of material related to Herrmann as Chairman of the National Commission, 1903-1920. The papers were arranged in this fashion due to the great difference in the functions of the two positions. In effect, the arrangement unveils the inner-workings of an early twentieth-century baseball team as well as the first ruling government of baseball, which allows the researcher to see more clearly the relationships between the two.

This collection consists of correspondence, newspaper articles, contracts, maps, blueprints, and memorabilia. Nearly all of the correspondence in this collection was received by Herrmann as either President of the Cincinnati Reds or Chairman of the National Commission. When viewing correspondence grouped by teams and leagues, keep in mind that they were writing Herrmann and not each other. Arranging the material by team allows the information to be better connected. Most of the material is organized by name, position, organization/team/league, additional information, and date(s). Some of the folder numbers are followed with an "a" because the material was discovered after the final arrangement (for example, see Box 63, Folder 71a). Information contained within parentheses refers to subject matter in the particular correspondence. When "pl:" is located in parentheses, such as (pl: Cobb), this means that the writer of the correspondence is writing about a player with the last name of Cobb. This does not mean, however, that all the information is about that player, but that a portion of it is.

The design of the finding aid is best researched if used in conjunction with a website search engine. However, when viewing this as a MS-Word file, a researcher can search the finding aid using the Find command located under Edit on the toolbar. Search the finding aid using last names, city of team, league names, and various subject terms such as "World Series," "World War I," "Sunday baseball," "Cuba," etc. Not all material associated with a particular player, manager, president, etc., is located in the same place. Material associated with a certain player may be located in multiple areas depending on what teams the player was representing at the time he was writing Herrmann or with what cases he was involved in either the National Commission or American and National Leagues. This arrangement decision was made because a straight alphabetical listing (by last name) could not show the relationships between player-manager-president-league-subject. When arranging material by league, team, player, etc., a researcher has the opportunity to find more on the subject by seeing like material in close proximity. For example, if a researcher wants information on Ty Cobb and the Detroit Tigers, search Cobb and it will bring you to the Detroit/AL section. Not only does one find correspondence from Cobb to Herrmann, but also material from Navin to Herrmann and players Dalton, Dauss, and Lowe each writing to Herrmann. Because Cobb was such a prominent player, he was probably mentioned in their correspondence to Herrmann. This information will only substantiate the information sought by a researcher.

System of Arrangement:

Part I. Cincinnati Reds is made up of series I-XXV each containing a scope note that explains what the series contains.

Series I contains material relative to the business and administrative aspects of the early twentieth-century Cincinnati Reds.

Series II contains correspondence Herrmann received from people and business representatives from Cincinnati, Ohio.

Series III contains correspondence from writers, editors, journalists, etc., representing a newspaper, journal, magazine, movie, or radio station.

Series IV contains fan mail received by Herrmann from "fans" of the Cincinnati Reds.

Series V contains material from manufacturers of baseball equipment and uniforms that either contracted with Cincinnati or advertised to do so.

Series VI consists of surveillance reports from detective agencies that investigated players from the Cincinnati Reds.

Series VII-VIII contain material relating to spring training trips and winter training.

Series IX contains correspondence from hotels and transportation companies.

Series X contains material related to the various activities that would have taken place at an early twentieth-century ballpark while the team was there or away.

Series XI contains material related to the construction and maintenance of the ballpark and includes maps, drawings, and blueprints related to the construction of Redland Field.

Series XII contains material from Cincinnati Reds officials, secretaries/treasurers, business managers, and office staff.

Series XIII contains correspondence from individuals who, during Herrmann's era, played or managed for the Cincinnati Reds.

Series XIV contains correspondence from individuals who served as scouts or trainers for the Cincinnati Reds during Herrmann's era.

Series XV contains correspondence from scout and statistician Louis Heilbroner who provided the Cincinnati Reds with information on players from minor and semi-professional baseball clubs.

Series XVI contains correspondence related to the Office of the Commissioner of Major League Baseball, notably Kenesaw Mountain Landis.

Series XVII contains correspondence and material from National League officials that Herrmann received as a team president in the National League.

Series XVIII contains material Herrmann received as a team president in the National League and offers a view of how he responded when confronted with league matters.

Series XIX contains material from National League team officials, managers, and players received by Herrmann as President of the Cincinnati Reds.

Series XX contains correspondence and material from American League officials that Herrmann received as president of a major league baseball team.

Series XXI contains material from American League team officials, managers, and players received by Herrmann as President of the Cincinnati Reds.

Series XXII contains material from David L. Fultz, President of the Baseball Players' Fraternity (BPF).

Series XXIII contains correspondence from the President and Secretary/Treasurer of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues. This organization was responsible for all matters of the minor leagues.

Series XXIV contains correspondence from minor leagues and minor league teams.

Series XXV contains correspondence from semi-professional baseball clubs.

Part II. National Commission is made up of series XXVI-XLIV each containing a scope note that offers more detailed content information than what is provided below.

Series XXVI consists of correspondence and material associated with the Chairman's office inhabited by Herrmann for the duration of the National Commission.

Series XXVII contains material from the National League president as a representative on the National Commission, one of the three men composing the ruling body.

Series XXVIII contains material from the American League president as a representative on the National Commission, one of the three men composing the ruling body.

Series XXIX contains material from the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues (NAPBL).

Series XXX contains the meeting minutes and financial material of the National Commission.

Series XXXI contains material relevant to Herrmann's involvement in the Cincinnati Peace Compact, which resolved the differences between the American and National Leagues, and the National Agreement that created the National Commission.

Series XXXII consists of bulletins from the National Commission, National League, American League, and NAPBL, and also National Commission Notices.

Series XXXIII contains material from the Baseball Players' Fraternity. The BPF was an early player union with the purpose of protecting the financial interests of players.

Series XXXIV contains correspondence between National Commission officials about subjects with which they dealt on a routine basis.

Series XXXV contains "fan mail," which is correspondence from baseball fans and small-town teams, most of which are in the form of questions posed to Herrmann as Chairman.

Series XXXVI contains material relating to the post-season of Organized Baseball.

Series XXXVII contains correspondence from officials (presidents, managers, secretaries, etc.) and individuals associated with Organized Baseball during Herrmann's tenure as Chairman.

Series XXXVIII contains correspondence from writers, editors, journalists, etc., representing a newspaper, journal, or magazine who wrote Herrmann regarding an issue or topic relating to the National Commission.

Series XXXIX contains team and league cases on which the National Commission decided.

Series XL material relates to cases involving the Federal League and Organized Baseball between 1913 and 1922.

Series XLI contains material related to the cases caused by World War I.

Series XLII contains material related to other cases involving gambling, draft rules, and Sunday baseball.

Series XLIII is made up of cases and reinstatements of players and officials, which the National Commission decided between 1903 and 1919.

Series XLIV contains oversize material too large to fit in manuscript boxes. When going through the physical collection, a researcher will find separation sheets. Material that was too large was moved to an oversize box and replaced with a separation sheet. The separation sheet is always located in the exact physical location of the original item. But when viewing the microfilm version of the collection the original oversize item will be imaged in its original location.

Series I. Administration & Business Material, 1877-1927

Scope note:

This series contains material relative to the business and administrative aspects of the early twentieth-century Cincinnati Reds. Cincinnati Board Material consists of some of the earliest records of the Cincinnati Reds regarding the sale of the Kentucky-based group, headed by John T. Brush, to the Cincinnati Exhibition Company, headed by Herrmann. There is also correspondence from team officials (including Herrmann) about player salaries, a 1911 recounting of the club purchase, and a position-by-position analysis of the Reds in 1927. Stock Certificate Ledgers contains bound material in the form of stock certificates issued to shareholders for the years represented. Shareholders contains correspondence from company shareholders. Financial Records contains tax records, banking statements, and records related to financial gains and losses. Legal & Insurance Material is made up of correspondence from lawyers employed by the club regarding cases and insurance matters. Ticket Sales contains not tickets but correspondence from the ticket companies used by the club for games and events. During Herrmann's era (1902-1927) the club contracted its tickets mainly from the Ansell Ticket Company. There are also rain check reports for 1909 and letters from various officials thanking Herrmann for season passes. Post Season -- Cincinnati-Cleveland Series contains material related to the Cincinnati-Cleveland Series, also called the Ohio Championship.

Series IV. Fan Mail, 1902-1927

Scope note:

This series contains correspondence received by Herrmann from "fans" of the Cincinnati Reds. General contains "fan mail" from individuals who wrote about issues ranging from showing support of the team or complaining of game experience to proposing changes to how the team was run. Position Applicants is "fan mail" from individuals asking for a position with the Cincinnati Reds as an office worker, manager, owner, trainer, mascot, etc., but who never played or participated in professional baseball. Prospects & Amateur Scouting Reports is "fan mail" from individuals asking for a tryout with the Reds as a player, referred to as "prospects," or writing about a potential prospect, called "amateur scouting reports." Ticket & Schedule Requests is "fan mail" from individuals and businesses/agencies requesting tickets for Cincinnati Reds games. In addition to requests, there are thank you letters to Herrmann from those grateful for receiving tickets. Uniform & Equipment Requests is "fan mail" from individuals representing small-town, independent baseball teams requesting uniforms and equipment from the Cincinnati Reds. Of interest are letters from a prison baseball team, and photographs of a team wearing used Reds uniforms. All correspondence is organized chronologically within each folder.

Series VI. Player Surveillance/Detective Agency, 1909-1924

Scope note:

This series consists of surveillance reports from detective agencies that investigated players from the Cincinnati Reds. A detective would follow players who Herrmann suspected were involved in dubious activities outside of baseball. The details of the detective's observations were made into a report, which was sent to Herrmann. Operative Reports are reports of investigation into the off-field lives of players on the Cincinnati Reds during 1923-24. These reports also include investigation of fans' gambling.

Series X. Cincinnati Ballpark-Related, 1903-1926

Scope note:

This series material related to the various activities that would have taken place at an early twentieth-century ballpark while the team was there or away. Advertisement contains correspondence from companies and businesses from Cincinnati, Ohio wanting to advertise in the ballpark or on the scorecard (scoreboard, billboards, etc.). Concessions contains material from companies that either provided a concession item(s) (food, beverage, etc.) that was sold during baseball games or proposed to sell such items. Entertainment consists of correspondence from companies and individuals wanting to use the ballpark for entertainment purposes that included showing movies, performing plays, and music. In addition, this series contains material from "inventors" who proposed a baseball-related invention. Rental of Grounds contains correspondence from a variety of traveling sports teams wishing to rent the Cincinnati ballpark for games. The American Bloomer Girls and Rube Foster's American Giants are just a few of the baseball teams that used the ballpark; other sports included football teams like the Carlisle Indians and the Celts A.C. Football Club. The material is arranged alphabetically by team name or representative's name.

Series XIV. Scouts & Trainers, 1903-1926

Scope note:

This series contains correspondence from individuals who served as scouts or trainers for the Cincinnati Reds during Herrmann's era. The scouts and trainers are arranged alphabetically by last name followed by date(s). Players mentioned are listed when available. A common practice of scouts in this era was to not mention players' names when writing of their talent in order to generate interest. When a scout mentioned a player's name it was usually only the last name.

Series XIX. National League Teams, 1902-1926*Scope note:*

This series contains material from National League team officials, managers, and players received by Herrmann as President of the Cincinnati Reds. The correspondence is organized by team, then arranged alphabetically by individual's last name followed by title, additional information, and date(s). The majority of correspondence relates to player trades and deals between Cincinnati and the NL team. This organization was done to show relationships between president-manager-player and allow the researcher to discover more information. Note: When researching a player or individual who was associated with one of the teams listed below, look at correspondence from the team's president, secretary or other players during the time frame in order to learn more about the topic of interest.

Series XX. American League, 1902-1926

Scope note:

This series contains correspondence and material from American League officials that Herrmann received as President of the Cincinnati Reds. President contains correspondence from American League presidents received by Herrmann. Most of this material is in the form of formal letters addressing player transactions, etc. Herrmann received more correspondence from the National League because of being a president in that league. This is why there is little Johnson material when compared to National League presidents. Most of the Johnson material is located in National Commission (NC) because of Johnson's involvement with the NC. Secretary/Treasurer consists of correspondence from the American League Secretary/Treasurer which involves matters such as trades, player movements, etc. This section is arranged alphabetically, then chronologically, and should be researched in conjunction with President's correspondence. Business/Cases consists of matters that were resolved in the American League. Umpires contains correspondence from an umpire from the American League, who was providing information on players to Herrmann.

Series XXII. The Baseball Players' Fraternity, 1914-1915

Scope note:

This series contains material from David L. Fultz, President of the Baseball Players' Fraternity. Most of the material relevant to the Baseball Players' Fraternity is located in National Commission because of its significance with Federal League matters.

Series XXIII. National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues (NAPBL), 1904-1926

Scope note:

This series contains correspondence from the President and Secretary/Treasurer of the NAPBL. This organization was responsible for all matters of the minor leagues. When a player transaction occurred between a major and minor league club the NAPBL would make the move legal or illegal. Most NAPBL material is located in National Commission because a majority of its responsibility and actions lied with the NC.

Series XXIV. Minor League Leagues and Teams, 1902-1927

Scope note:

This series contains correspondence from minor leagues and minor league teams. The material is arranged similar to the National and American leagues above with league, president, officials, umpires, and teams each organized alphabetically by name, position, additional information, and date(s). The majority of correspondence relates to player trades and deals between Cincinnati and the minor league or minor league team. This organization was done to show relationships between president-manager-player and allow the researcher to discover more information. Note: When researching a player or individual who was associated with one of the teams listed below, look at correspondence from the team's president, secretary or other players during the time frame in order to learn more about the topic of interest. Most of the material associated with the Federal League is located with National Commission because of most relating to the various court cases between the Federal League and organized baseball.

Series XXV. Semi-Professional Baseball Leagues & Clubs, 1905-1925

Scope note:

This series contains correspondence from semi-professional baseball clubs. The material is arranged by location of the semi-professional club, and then organized alphabetically by name, additional information, and date(s). Of particular interest are the Cuban and Negro semi-professional baseball clubs which consist primarily of correspondence from team officials (to Herrmann) usually discussing exhibition.

Part II. National Commission

Series XXVI. National Commission Officials, 1903-1920

Scope note:

This series consists of correspondence and material associated with the Chairman's office occupied by Herrmann for the duration of the National Commission. Chairman contains correspondence and newspaper articles in scrapbook form about Herrmann's resignation as Chairman of the National Commission in 1920. The material is arranged chronologically. Herrmann's Out-going Correspondence consists of one ledger (much like the ledger correspondence located in Cincinnati Reds) containing the Chairman's outgoing correspondence for the last months of the National Commission. The correspondence is arranged chronologically within the ledger and contains a name key with page numbers. Secretary/Treasurer consists of Secretary/Treasurer John E. Bruce's day-to-day correspondence, when in current use, provided Herrmann with a brief of what was going on in organized baseball. Office Staff contains correspondence from the Chairman's support staff.

Series XXXV. National Commission Fan Mail, 1905-1915

Scope note:

Fan Mail contains correspondence from baseball fans and small-town teams, most of which are in the form of questions posed to Herrmann as Chairman. The person(s) usually had a question about a play or rule and sought an answer from Herrmann. Questions vary from brief accounts of a play to very descriptive renditions of a play.

Series XXXVI. Post-Season, 1903-1922

Scope note:

This series contains material relating to the post-season of Organized Baseball. The National Commission was in charge of planning and running the World Series from 1905-1920. This involved transportation, boarding, ticket distribution, and designing the pin/emblem and pennant, in addition to the actual participation of both teams. The first set of folders in World Series contains officials' correspondence regarding the making of the event. The material contained therein is arranged chronologically to better represent the process of setting up an early World Series event. This is followed by material relevant to motion picture companies, pin/emblem, pennant, and other events that might have taken place. Following World Series is material relating to All-Star Series and Tours. The City Championship section contains material relating to the Chicago Championship Series (Chicago/AL v. Chicago/NL), New York Championship Series (New York/AL v. New York/NL), and Pittsburgh-Cleveland Series (Pittsburgh/NL v. Cleveland/AL). When the regular season ended (unless one of these teams participated in the World Series) these major league teams would compete in a playoff to decide the champion of their city, or region (in the case of Pittsburgh, Cleveland).

Series XXXVII. Officials Correspondence, 1903-1916

Scope note:

This series contains correspondence from officials (presidents, managers, secretaries, etc.) and individuals associated with Organized Baseball during Herrmann's tenure as Chairman. Most of this material is of administrative nature and involves questions about National Agreement rules and regulations. Correspondence from presidents in the American and National leagues resembles social gossip and contains less bureaucratic writing than from minor league officials. In addition, there is material from retired players such as Cal McVey (asking for financial support) and from inventors like Newman Harry Hunt, who designed the "Bottle-Ball" souvenir. The material is arranged by name, followed by position, team/league, subject, and date(s). Any additional information is located in parenthesis. Most of the officials correspondence related to the Federal League is located in the Federal League cases series.

Series XXXIX. Team/League Cases, 1904-1917

Scope note:

This series contains team and league cases on which the National Commission decided. When a team had a problem that could not be resolved by its league, it would be sent to Herrmann and the National Commission. The case, depending how serious, would be investigated and a decision would be made by the three-man Commission. Each case listed below contains correspondence from the individuals involved (presidents, managers, etc.) and from NC officials. The cases are arranged alphabetically.

Series XL. Federal League Cases, 1913-1922

Scope note:

This series comprises material related to cases involving the Federal League and Organized Baseball between 1913 and 1922. NC Investigation of Federal League consists of correspondence from baseball officials who wrote Herrmann and the National Commission about the threat that the Federal League posed to baseball. This material is arranged chronologically. NC Investigation of Federal League Teams consists of correspondence from baseball officials who reported day-to-day situation of a Federal League team. For example, Barney Dreyfuss, President of Pittsburgh/NL, wrote to Herrmann about the Pittsburgh Federal League team and his concerns as a baseball magnate. Dreyfuss's correspondence includes attendance, ticket sales, and overall fan support in relation to the Pittsburgh/FL team. Also, Chicago/FL-Informer Reports contains letters from an employee at Weeghman Park who was paid to spy on the Chicago/FL team by Charles H. Thomas, President of Chicago/NL. Major League Team Testimony of Federal League Interference contains reports given by AL and NL team officials claiming that the Federal League was in the practice of stealing players from their clubs. These claims were used to bring suit against the Federal League. Peace Conference contains correspondence and newspaper articles that pertain to the Federal League's attempt to make peace with the AL and NL. Federal League v. Organized Baseball contains material regarding the case of the same name, which was the first case between the Federal League and AL/NL. Baltimore/FL v. Organized Baseball contains case material from the suit the Baltimore/FL team filed against the AL and NL. This sub-series also contains the counter suit the AL and NL filed against the Baltimore/FL team. Documents Used In Federal League Cases contains documents and material used in the cases between the Federal League and organized baseball. Player Cases Involving the Federal League consists of player cases between the Federal League and organized baseball. When a player "jumped" his contract from an AL or NL team to a Federal League team a claim would be made to the National Commission. This material is arranged alphabetically by player's name, followed by teams involved, additional information, and date(s). Two of the more prominent cases involved Armando Marsans and George H. "Chief" Johnson. Other Cases Involving the Federal League contains cases between a team associated with organized baseball and one from the Federal League. Officials Correspondence... contains correspondence from baseball officials regarding the Federal League and the cases listed.

Series XLI. Cases Related to World War I, 1917-1918

Scope note:

This series contains material related to the cases caused by World War I. The Work or Fight/Selective Service Case was the main case between Organized Baseball and the U.S. Government. When the U.S. declared war on the Central Powers, a draft was initiated that called for every male (within a certain age range) to fight. Many of the baseball players during this time were eligible for the draft. The National Commission chose to fight this claiming that a baseball player was a legitimate profession and should not have to fight. Also during this time, in an effort to finance the war in Europe, the U.S. Government chose to tax the revenue created by baseball.

Series XLII. Other Cases, 1909-1917

Scope note:

This series contains material related to other cases involving gambling, draft rules, and Sunday baseball. The most important case in this series is the Gallagher Resolution or Baseball Anti-Trust in which organized baseball was accused of being a monopoly. This series is organized by case title.

Series XLIII. Player and Officials Cases and Reinstatements, 1903-1919

Scope note:

This series is made up of cases and reinstatements of players and officials, which the National Commission decided between 1903 and 1919. One of the primary roles of the National Commission was to settle disputes between players and team officials. Player cases occurred when a player, unhappy with his situation, would file a complaint against the team(s) to his league. When the league was unable to reach a decision with his claim it would be sent to the National Commission. The National Commission would investigate this claim, which would then become a case, and decide the outcome of the matter. Sometimes a case could involve many teams and many leagues. A reinstatement would occur when a player or official was suspended for a period of time then reinstated into organized baseball. The cases and reinstatements are arranged alphabetically by name followed by team(s), league(s), additional information, case number in parenthesis, and date(s).

Series XLIV. Oversize Material

Scope note:

This series contains oversize material too large to fit in manuscript boxes. This material has been separated from its original location and replaced with a separation sheet. The separation sheet will have a detailed description of the material removed and what oversize box it is located in. The oversize material in the box can be retrieved by matching the title of the item (found along the bottom edge of the folder) with the title on the separation sheet. The separation sheet is always located in the exact physical location of the original item. When viewing the microfilm version of the collection, the original oversize item will be imaged in its original location. Oversize material from both Part I. Cincinnati Reds and Part II. National Commission is located within these boxes.
