

Reserve your personal copy of our ninth volume!

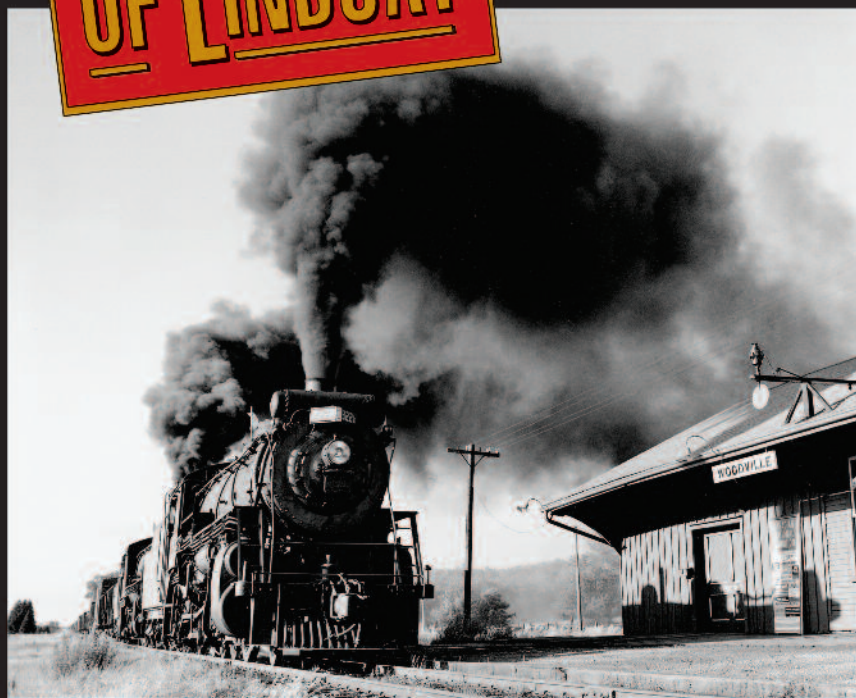

fall 2009 release

by Ian Wilson

Step back to 1954, before the St. Lawrence Seaway and diesel power ushered in the present age. Visit the CNR branchline division point at Lindsay, Ontario, positioned on the busiest grain route between Georgian Bay and Montreal. Witness the massive interaction between steam locomotives and steamships at Midland, king of the wheat and coal ports on the Great Lakes. Behold the constant parade of steam locomotives large and small at Orillia and Blackwater junctions. Watch Mikados wrestle with heavy stone tonnage from Kirkfield and Uthoff. Climb aboard a mixed train and venture to the quiet cottage country at Coboconk, Haliburton or Howland. Avoid disappointment by arranging delivery of a signed copy to your door. Pre-ordered books will be shipped on a first-in, first-out basis in fall 2009.

STEAM MEMORIES OF LINDSAY

Ian Wilson

A CNR branchline division point in the 1950s