THE COURSES

Suzanne Seaton will be presenting on the topic: A Sacred Dance: Contemplation and Action

We are each called to a deeper relationship with God where we come to know ourselves as accepted and loved unconditionally. As God's Beloved ones, we know the importance of allowing our love to flow outward to all of humanity and the created world. The inward journey of prayer and contemplation sustains and nurtures us in the outward journey of love in action through works of mercy, social justice and peacemaking.

Frank Rogers will be presenting on the topic: Finding Our Compassionate Center in Turbulent Times

We are living in turbulent times. Political and religious divides are threatening the bonds of civil discourse that sustain our communities; all manner of parties are increasingly polarized around competing ideologies; and social and relational tensions are rising to frighteningly violent proportions. The turbulence wars within us as well. Fear, anxiety, dread, and enraged indignation wreak havoc within our souls and psyches. Where, in the midst of the cacophony both within and around us, can we find a center of clarity, peace, and hope for a transformative way forward?

Compassion offers such a restorative center. Compassion directed inward stills the storms within us and discerns the wisdom within our turbulent emotions. And compassion turned toward the other has the potential of relaxing polarized tensions and cultivating the bonds of our common humanity. Our week together at the Academy will explore practices, techniques, and tools that deepen our capacities to experience God as a source of love; to transform difficult emotions and internal drivenness into grounded self-compassion; and to embody genuine compassion toward others, even difficult people, with power, accountability, and empathic care.
