

CONTENTS.

---

BOOK XVI.

Various opinions as to the expedition against the Iroquois. Louvigny's expedition over the ice. The Iroquois appear in the Colony. Death of the Chevalier de Crisasy. Preparations for the coming campaign. Arrangement of the army. It moves from La Chine. Its march. It is in great peril and saved by de Callieres' ability. It arrives at Onondaga. Onondagas notified by a deserter. Stratagem of the Chevalier de Callieres and its result. The Onondagas burn their great village. No one found there. Negligence of the enemy. The Oneidas ask peace. Mr. de Vaudreuil marches to Oneida. Fortitude of an old man burned by our Indians. Vaudreuil at Oneida. Consultation as to further course. Frontenac, against general advice, leaves his expedition imperfect. Suspicions against him. Army returns to Montreal. Why our allies did not join. Frontenac wishes to force the Iroquois to ask peace. Preparations to attack Fort Pemkuit. New treachery of the English towards the Abénaquis. Iberville and Bonaventure in Acadia. They take an English ship. Attack on Fort Pemkuit. It capitulates. Part of the prisoners sent to Boston. The two French ships elude an English squadron. They arrive at Placentia. Villebon is taken by the English. They commit many hostilities in Acadia against the law of nations. They besiege Fort Naxoat. De Villebon prepares for defence. Courage of the garrison. Attack on the fort. The siege is raised. Position of the English and French in Newfoundland. Character of the Governor of Placentia. He sets out to attack St. John. He is unable to enter. He takes several posts. He quarrels with d'Iberville. The Canadians rise in favor of d'Iberville. The two commanders are reconciled. They set out for St. John. Quarrel again. Another reconciliation. Bad faith and new claims of de Brouillan. They are again mutually appeased. The army marches on St. John. Vigorous action of d'Iberville. Montigny's exploits. Defeat of a body of the enemy. Siege of Fort St. John. The governor seeks to amuse the French in hopes of speedy relief. He surrenders. Condition of the place. Position of St. John. It is burned and abandoned. Conquests of the Canadians in Newfoundland. Faults of the English and French in their colonies. Why Iberville did not complete the conquest of Newfoundland. Several fruitless projects against the Iroquois. The French receive some checks. Some Oneidas come to settle in the colony. Their reception. The other cantons take umbrage. Why Frontenac refuses to permit the Iroquois Christians to go to war. Information sent him from the Court. The Iroquois renew hostilities. The English take Fort Bourbon. They violate the capitulation. Mr. d'Iberville sails to Hudson Bay. He loses a vessel in the ice. He is separated from the rest. He engages three English ships. Success of this engagement. Combat between three English ships and a French storeship. Shipwreck of d'Iberville. He is joined by his three ships. D'Iberville returns to France. Importance of this conquest.