

formally taken of the river. What drew the English to that country. Pretensions of the English, their designs and attempts. French refugees offer to settle in the country. Their offer rejected. Conduct of the Spaniards in regard to Louisiana. French errors. Object of Louisiana trade. The King's interest in the instruction of the Louisiana Indians. Character of the Illinois. First settlement among the Illinois. Mission among these Indians. Fruitless mission among the Mascoutins. De Callieres' measures for a general peace. New collisions between the Iroquois and the Ottawas. The Iroquois complain to de Callieres. New complaints of the Iroquois. De Callieres' reply. The English again traverse the peace. Father Bruyas' address to the Iroquois. Reply of those Indians. Several ill-disposed. The deputies of the cantons at Montreal. Followed by the deputies of our allies. The disposition of our allies. De Courtemanche's journey. Preliminary conference. De Callieres gives audience to several deputies. First public conference. Kondiaronk's address. His death and eulogy. His obsequies. The Iroquois complain that they are distrusted. Sickness among the Indians. To what it was ascribed. Last general assembly. De Callieres' address. Strange attire of some of the deputies and their speeches. Audience given to the upper tribes and to the Iroquois. The Mohawks accede to the treaty. Death of Garkonthié. Missionaries to the Iroquois. English hostilities. Various ineffectual projects for Acadia. The English menace New France. Movements among the Indians against our interests. Death of the Chevalier de Callieres. The Marquis de Vaudreuil succeeds him. Seneca delegation. Teganissorens at Montreal. What he effects. Expedition into New England. Exploits of a French officer in Newfoundland. Ineffectual English attempt on Placentia. Our allies seem ill disposed. English intrigues among the Iroquois. The Detroit Indians ill disposed. Conduct of the Iroquois on that occasion. New efforts of the governor of Albany to draw the Iroquois Christians to New York. Sieur de Montigny's expedition against the English. Several Abénaquis settle at Bekancourt. Policy of the Iroquois. Advice given by the court upon the subject. Reparations made to the cantons for an Ottawa hostility. Exploit of a French partisan. The English attack Port Royal. They retire. Death of Mr. de Brouillon. Mr. de Subercase succeeds. The latter's expedition in Newfoundland. Capture of the Bishop of Quebec and a royal ship. Negotiations for an exchange of prisoners.

---

BOOK XIX.

De Vaudreuil reconciles the Ottawas and Iroquois. Project for trade and the relief of the people. The Ottawas make reparation to the Iroquois. Hostility of the Miamis against the Ottawas. The Ottawas take umbrage at the French. Indiscretion of two officers. Vengeance of the Ottawas on the Miamis. A Recollect Father killed by the Ottawas. Embarrassment of de Vaudreuil. His course. La Motte Cadillac's imprudence. Ottawa deputies at Montreal. Speech of the chief of the delegation. De Vaudreuil's reply. De la Motte Cadillac's conduct disapproved. New attempt of the English on Acadia. Gallant conduct of de Subercase. The English everywhere defeated. They open the trenches before Port Royal. They raise the siege and retire. Why their expedition failed. Resolution of the Council of Boston. The English fleet, much reinforced, return to Port Royal. The