

governor's firmness and diligence. The English land. Various unsuccessful attacks. Sharp action. The siege raised. Loss of the English and French. Acadia more neglected than ever. New troubles at Detroit. Misconduct of the commandant. Useful services of Joncaire among the Iroquois. The Iroquois Christians are seduced by the Governor of Albany. A great war-party projected. The Iroquois and Hurons abandon the French. The Abénaquis not at the rendezvous. Capture of an English town. The victors fall into an ambushade. It is forced. Noble conduct of some officers. Bad faith of the Christian Iroquois. They atone for their fault. Vaudreuil and the Governor of Albany. The English endeavor to debauch the Louisiana Indians. Projected expedition in Newfoundland. Attack and capture of St. John. After taking it, de St. Ovide sends a courier to Placentia and a ship to France. St. John is abandoned. De Vaudreuil deceived by an Iroquois. The Cantons declare against us. De Vaudreuil's exertions. English preparations to attack the colony. De Ramezay marches against them. The expedition fails. Why? De Vaudreuil encamps at Chambly. The enemy retire. What defeated the English expedition. Iroquois policy. They cause the destruction of the English army. Why the English fleet did not reach Quebec. The Iroquois send deputies to de Vaudreuil. Unsuccessful expedition to Hudson Bay. New expedition fitted out at Boston. The Iroquois refuse to declare against us and the Abénaquis to remain neutral. De Subercase's plan for defending Acadia. The English resolve to take Acadia at any cost. Strange conduct of de Subercase. The English fleet arrives at Port Royal. Condition of the garrison. The enemy besiege him. Murmurs and desertions among the besieged. The governor surrenders the fort. Some expeditions in Newfoundland. Nicholson's letter to Vaudreuil. The Baron de St. Castin commandant in Acadia. The Indians of that part cooled towards us. The Acadians visited by de Vaudreuil's orders. Various other precautions taken by him. De Longueil and Joncaire sent to the Iroquois. Their success. Preparations of the English in New York. Arrival of the Upper Indians. Acadia nearly recaptured. An English fleet prepares to besiege Quebec. De Vaudreuil's address to the Iroquois deputies. Our Indian allies chant the war-song. Zeal of the domiciliated Indians.

---

BOOK XX.

What became of the English fleet. Retreat of the land army. Wreck of the English fleet. Manifesto of the English admiral. What caused the loss of the fleet. God's providence over Canada. Fruitless efforts to recover Acadia. Exploit of an Indian party. Port Royal again missed. Generosity of the people of Quebec. De Vaudreuil treats with the Iroquois. Character of the Foxes. They undertake to burn Detroit. Du Buisson's preparations. Seasonably reinforced by our allies. Their address to du Buisson. The Foxes besieged in their fort. Their vigorous defence. They ask peace. Speech of an Illinois chief to the deputies. The siege continues. The besiegers discouraged. The commandant rallies them. Another deputation of the besieged. The commandant prevents them from massacring the deputies. The besieged escape and are pursued. They are almost all massacred. Fruit of this victory. Reason of the decline of trade in Canada. Territory ceded