

tain chert for implement making. But stone has been quarried here and the land worked so that indications of their work, if they did exist, cannot now be found.

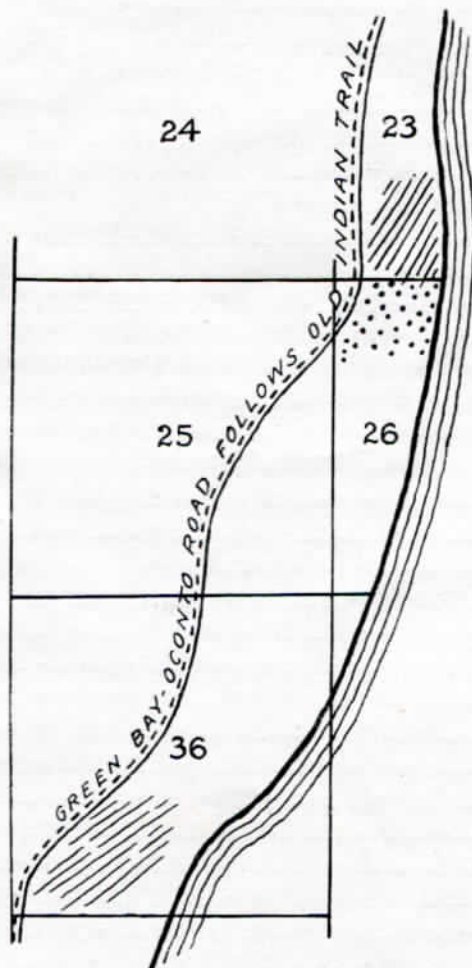

Fig. 4

To the south of this spot was a large cornfield, the hills of which are still faintly discernible in a few spots.