

age of sixty-seven years. His early life was spent as a sailor on the seas, visiting many lands, and relating many experiences. He settled in Madison, in 1850, as an attorney at law, and was many years a justice of the peace, and at one time probate judge of Dane County. A few years before his death, becoming a paralytic, he removed west.

Hiram Morley, who died at Oshkosh, May 27th, was born in Cayuga County, N. Y., Oct. 24th, 1826, and settled in Oshkosh in 1847. He was a man of prominence, and served five successive terms in the common council of that city; was connected with several newspaper enterprises, and was twice postmaster of the assembly.

William Brittan, at Platteville, June 4th, aged about ninety-two years. He was born in Philadelphia, about 1790, of German parents—his father having been a soldier of the Revolution. He came to Platteville in 1838, and resided there, unmarried, forty-four years; he was the friend of everybody, and everybody was his friend.

Prof. Milo P. Jewett, in Milwaukee, June 9th, at the age of seventy-four years. Born at St. Johnsbury, Vt., April 27th, 1808, he graduated from Dartmouth College in 1828; and after spending the next year as Principal of Holmes Academy, at Plymouth, N. H., he devoted three years to studies at Andover Theological Seminary. He then engaged in teaching with such success, that he resolved to adopt it as a profession instead of entering the ministry; and, in 1834, he accepted a professorship in Marietta College, Ohio. He aided in the adoption of a new school system in that state. In 1839, he severed his relations with Marietta College, and established the Judson Female Institution, at Marion, Ala., and also published the Alabama Baptist. In 1856, he purchased Cottage Hill Seminary, at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., which resulted in the establishment of Vassar Female College, of which he became the first president, serving with great success for six years, when he resigned in 1867, and settled in Milwaukee, where he devoted his remaining years to furthering religious, educational and philanthropic enterprises.

J. C. Keeney, editor of the Chronicle, at Weyauwega, died at that place June 13th, in his sixty-first year. He came from the State of New York many years ago as one of the attaches of the Wisconsin Chief, and conducted papers at Ft. Atkinson, Sharon and Weyauwega. He was an honest and conscientious citizen and editor.

Alexander Grignon, a native of Green Bay, was thrown from a wagon and killed, near his residence in the town of Howe, Shawano County, July 4th, at about the age of seventy years. He was an early school teacher at Green Bay, and nearly fifty years ago was engaged, with his brother, Charles A. Grignon, in keeping an Indian trading store at Kaukauna. He afterwards lived for many years at Keshena. He was courteous and genial, and possessed of a fund of anecdote and adventure connected with Indian and frontier life.
