

P. 415. Thirteenth line from top, add: This group includes his second set of the signers.

P. 424. Owing to a misapprehension, Dr. Fogg did not, as he supposed, secure the Lynch signature from Mrs. Ely's incomplete collection—it has since been added to Dr. Emmet's fourth set; hence this notice of Dr. Fogg's second set is, in that particular, erroneous; both Dr. Fogg's and Mrs. Ely's second collections should be relegated to their proper places, Mrs. Ely's to precede Mr. Greenough's among the incomplete sets. The collection of the Pennsylvania Historical Society ranks, therefore, as No. viii, and those following should in their order be corrected accordingly.

P. 436. At the end of the third line, in notice of the second set of Mr. Gratz, add: It contains some 1776 letters, is illustrated with portraits, and forms part of the series of members of the old Congress.

P. 436. Dr. Emmet's fourth collection no longer lacks Lynch and Gwinnett, having obtained Mrs. Ely's Lynch from her incomplete set, and a Gwinnett, it is understood, from Col. C. C. Jones. The Lynch is simply signed "Lynch," without the initial "T.," or the supplementary "Jr." The Lynch in Col. Jones' second set is a similar specimen, yet its genuineness is well attested.

Page 438. Following the notice of Rev. Dr. Dubb's collection, add: James W. Howarth, of Glen Riddle, Pa., has fifty of the signers, of which nineteen are A. L. S.; while Paine, Floyd, Stockton, Ross, Rush, Wilson, Chase, Stone, and Rutledge are A. D. S.; Whipple, and Livingston, L. S.; Bartlett, S. Adams, Hopkins, Huntington, Hart, Franklin, Morton, Smith, McKean, Harrison, Nelson, Hooper, and Heyward, D. S.; Lewis, L. Morris, Rodney, Read, F. L. Lee, and Middleton, signatures, and Wythe, a specimen of writing. The lacking autographs are Clark, Hewes, Penn, Lynch, Gwinnett, and Hall. Nine of the full letters are of the Revolutionary period, of which Taylor's was written in 1776. The set is illustrated with forty-four portraits, and forty-eight views.

Besides a partial set of the signers of the constitution, Mr. Howarth lacks only four of all the generals of the Revolution, including eight specimens of Washington; the presidents and vice-presidents, with the cabinet officers, all illustrated with portraits, views, etc. He has also eighteen of the declaration signers in duplicate.

Mr. Howarth is a native of Delaware Co., Pa., born in 1837, and commenced gathering autographs in 1864, and his varied collections now run up into the thousands.

P. 443. Last paragraph, transfer the names of Moreau, Ingraham, and Keeler, to the list of dispersed collections, following Joseph B. Boyd's name at the head of the page.
