

well inclined to this district, and we have experienced no injury from them.

The Rencor Tribe [Foxes]

This tribe is composed of three hundred or three hundred and fifty warriors. The name of the principal chief of this tribe is Macata Uchen.<sup>86</sup> They are located on the shores of the Misisipy itself, at a distance of two hundred leagues from this village. This tribe has been, and is, very greatly affected to this district, and it has never been experienced, according to our information, that they have caused any harm to it, and we can, at any time, put our trust in them, under any circumstances.

The Sac Tribe

This tribe is composed of four hundred warriors. The name of the principal chief of this tribe is Kakieguemeec. They are located on the banks of the Misisipy at a distance of two hundred and thirty leagues from this village. This tribe has always shown itself well inclined to this district, and it has never been found that they have done any harm to the habitants in the frequent bands that have come to this village, or to the hunters who are wont to go by the Misisipy to hunt. On the contrary it has been experienced that they aid and protect the latter whenever it has been necessary; and they do not do that with the hunters of the English district, notwithstanding the more liberal presents generally given from there.

Tribe of the Pueans [Puans]

This tribe is composed of one hundred and fifty warriors. The name of the principal chief of this tribe is Lepy. They are located one hundred and forty leagues from this village at <sup>86</sup> Possibly this was the Fox chief called by Pike in 1806, "the Raven;" the first syllables of his name correspond to the first part of the Indian name of Black Hawk. Raven's village was on the west side of the Mississippi, in the neighborhood of the mouth of Wapissipinicon River, which was an ancient seat of the Foxes. See Wis. Hist. Colls., xvii, p. 206.—Ed.
