

2019 Midwest Land and Stewardship Peer Gathering

Connect with colleagues, share stories and learn about climate change
May 7-9 | Racine, Wisconsin

Wondering how your land trust can adjust your conservation planning and management activities to address climate change? Looking for creative solutions to address growing land protection and stewardship challenges common to land trusts?

This May 7 through 9, land protection and stewardship staff are gathering at the Siena Retreat Center in Racine, Wisconsin. Come join your land trust peers for a chance to network and learn together. Our time together will be filled with chances to connect and share our collective wisdom with each other.

The Land Trust Alliance and Gathering Waters have organized this peer gathering for land protection and stewardship staff. Discussion and training topics will cover today's pressing priorities, including an interactive workshop on expected climate impacts, climate adaptation techniques for managing land and incorporating climate considerations into strategic conservation plans. As a bonus, join us for a 90-minute climate webinar on April 18.

Whether you are newly hired or highly experienced, come share your skills, expand your knowledge and return to your job with new tools and connections.

Registration goes live in early March
