Did you know?

From 2005 to 2015, local and regional land trusts in New York permanently conserved an additional 440,000 acres through conservation easements, land acquisitions and re-conveyances – that’s 120 acres a day, every day, for a decade. New York land trusts employ more than 400 full and part time staff and have 85,000 active volunteers, members and supporters.
