

25745 Hwy 36 - PO Box 19 - Anton, Co 80801

970-383-2411

970-360-5554 fax

Producers, I have made up some December corn charts from 2016 December corn contract to current on the December 19 contract. I have marked out on all of them where the capture the rally contract would have been ran during that contract before harvest of that year. If you look at these it looks to be a good time to start pricing because more often than not it is working during the historical high times due to planting, pollination and other issues back east.

I have also put in there what the total movement was from the high of the contract to the low. You can see as we keep getting bigger crops the movement in the contract becomes smaller the years with short crops. On the 2016 December contract we had a movement of $2 from the high side to the bottom side and so far for the 2019 contract we have moved 44 cents from top to bottom, not saying it will not change but seems to be running pretty flat right now.

There is a little chatter about a deal with China getting closer but who really knows until there is papers signed and proof that it is done. The markets have seemed to giving up any positive news that comes from these talks and just seems to keep doing what they feel like doing for now.

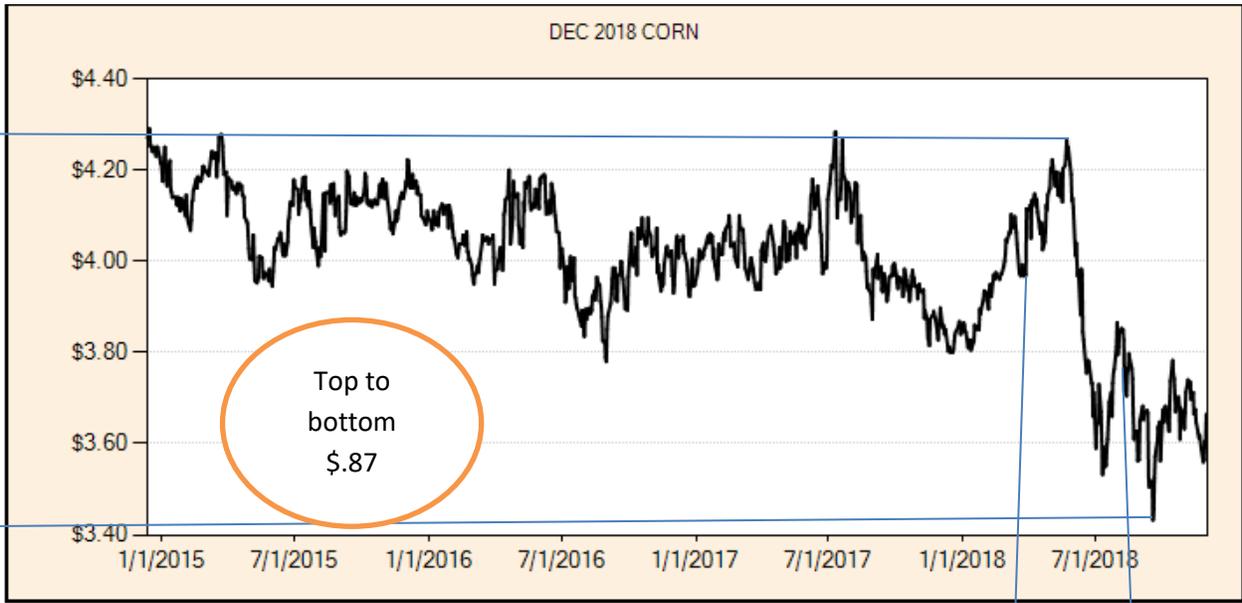

We will be doing the capture the rally contract for corn again starting in April so if you have any questions about this contract feel free to give me a call and I can walk you threw it.

April through July
one year ahead of time

Had a 40 cent
range

DEC 2018 CORN

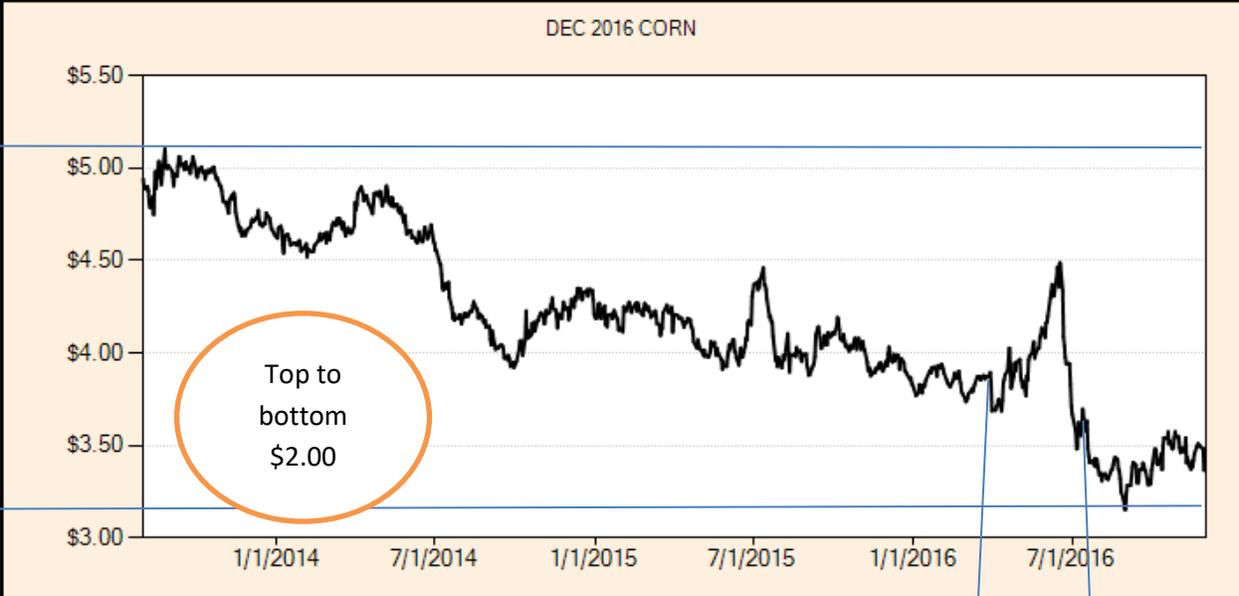

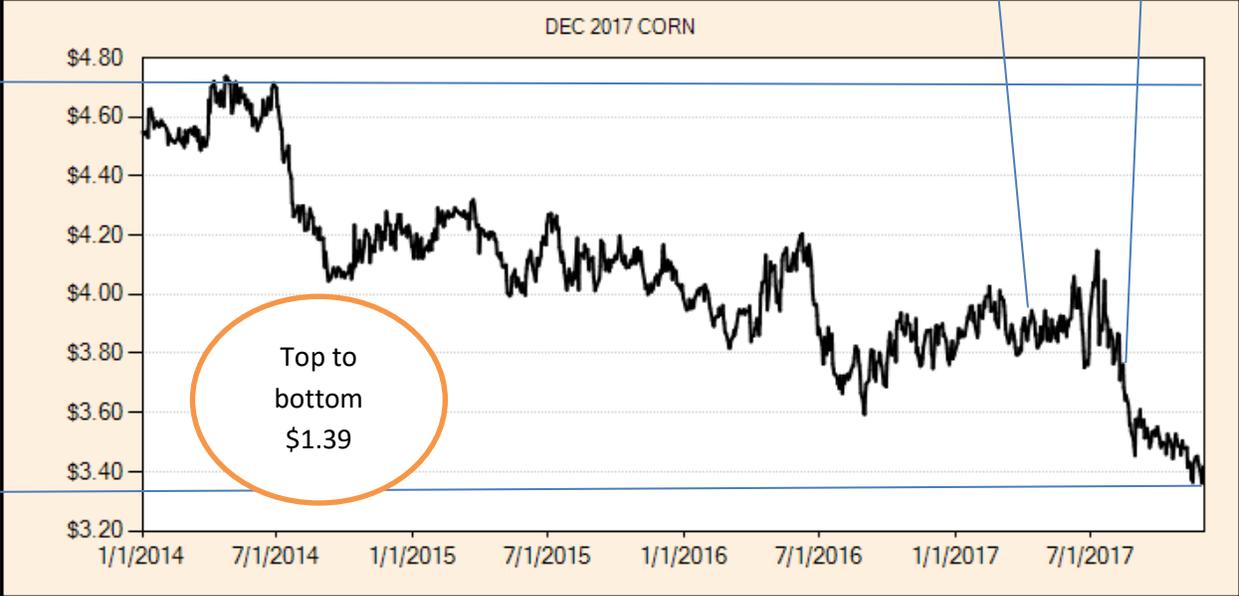

Had a 60 cent
range

Capture the rally was done in this timeline,
averaged $3.96 futures

April through July

Had a 40 cent range

April through July

Had a dollar range