Producers here are the latest version of the wheat ratings, which are looking pretty good as of now. The markets have seemed to find a momentum to start moving in the right direction but we still have a way to go to get back where we were but it is a start for now.

On the corn side of life it seems as if prices are not the best but if we go back and look at the last five years in April we are not too far out of line with where December corn futures have been average for the month of April. With that in mind and if the corn belt keeps getting weather to delay planting maybe there will be an opportunity to lock in a good cash price for new crop corn.

Avg price of CZ during April
