

Upside Down
(Brent Newcomb)

The winter is toasty hot this year. The lakes are parched and dry.
Lightning jumps and thunder bumps. Mountains cower from the sky.
Deserts are wet and gales are calm. The flowers just don't get along.
Trees are squat and the grass is tall. Lilly pads croon childish songs.

(chorus) - (pieces or lines of chorus can be repeated for effect)

At day's end the wind whistles its tune.
Then the sun comes up and I think of you.
 You turn everything upside down.
The stars give a wink and then go to sleep.
Fireflies buzz and it all repeats.
 You make my world go round.

Banks and bogs walk hand-in-hand. The moon is lavender gray.
Spring comes right before the fall. The rain just melts away.
The sky is low and full of cheer. Storms are hoping all is clear.
Ocean waves lie flat and smooth. The horizon is too close, I fear.

(chorus)

The clouds are hiding in the park. Skinny shadows light the way.
Fires are frosty to the touch. The leaves have quite a lot to say.
Fluffy caterpillars love romance, up and down on twigs do prance.
Rainbows have become quite shy, while drunken bubbles laugh and dance.

(chorus repeat to end)
