Expert advises Facebook to re-think policies

A social media expert believes Facebook needs to take a look at how its technology can be used to the wake of Strommer’s brutal murder.

“I think Facebook’s role in the book Live and Facebook is being debated as weddings, birthdays, sporting events, anything, anything with a violent culture, I think this will bring about some changes to their policy,” said Stevens.

Stevens, 27, and killed 74-year-old Florence “Win” Sr., a 74-year-old for¬ mer foundry worker.

In the video, Stephens said, “I snapped, he woke up last week and blamed a former girlfriend as authorities posted a video killing

‘Tech and Trek’ wants students to go mobile

This fall, Hiram College will give students a new iPad and a pair of top-end hiking boots to encourage them to get out into the world and use technology in non-traditional ways while they’re out doing field research or study abroad, Varlotta noted.

“We’re really trying to challenge the stereotype that technology is for people in the library,” she said.

“With our college, we’re looking at algorithms and this kind of thinking, this kind of how our learning is out there,” Cross said.

“We have so many outdoor activities and field re¬ search excursions that we want to bring the iPad out,” Cross said. “It’s a good op¬ portunity to be out in the field, get in the woods.”

Ravennan sentenced for ramming cruiser

By DAVE O'BRIEN

A judge on Monday sentenced a Ravennan to six years in prison for ramming a police officer’s cruiser.

Brittany Clement, 22, of Ravenna, pleaded guilty in January to count one each of receiving a stolen firearm, failure to comply with the order of a police officer and failure to comply with the signal of a police officer.

Clement’s attorney, Eric Fink, said Clement was a first-time offender who was not involved in a gang or drugs. He said Clement rammed a cruiser as he tried to pass a car during a chase that started near S.R. 14 near Knapp Road.

After tire-puncturing “stop sticks,” police learned that her friend, Eric Fink, was driving the vehicle.

Clement has been given six years on the assault charge and one year on the failure to comply charge. She will run consecutively to each other.

Assistant Portage County Prosecutor Eric Finegan said the maximum penalty for 14 years in prison. He said Deputy Wilson Kuechky noted minor injuries after the incident. He said Clement rammed his cruiser as he tried to pass her on S.R. 14 near Bridge and Ash streets in the township, and ended on S.R. 14 near Knapp Road.
