Consider the limitations of your child's school and how they may affect what your child needs to succeed. While it is still the school's responsibility to accommodate your child, being aware of these limitations can help you generate solutions.

Check all that apply to your child's school:

- Increased government requirements and standards
- Large class size
- Limited resources
- More students with special needs than the school can handle
- New staff
- Staff shortages
- Teachers not trained to work with brain injury
- Tight budgets

Limitations unique to my child's school:

These limitations create the following obstacles for my child:
(Be specific. For example: Recent budget cuts mean less money for one-to-one math tutors.)

Some possible ways to overcome these obstacles:
(Example: Ask the school if there are volunteers from the local college who might be willing to do some math tutoring.)
