PLEASE BE AWARE:

Inclusion of a program in this guide in no way indicates PASE’s support or endorsement. In addition, because afterschool programs and the services they provide change, we highly recommend contacting the program to learn the most up-to-date information.

The Partnership for After School Education (PASE) is a child-focused organization that promotes and supports high-quality afterschool programs, particularly those serving young people from underserved communities.

Why PASE?

1. For families everywhere, afterschool is not optional, and out-of-school time learning is not a luxury. A decade of research has overwhelmingly demonstrated that effective afterschool programs have a profound, positive, and long-lasting impact on academic success, healthy development, and future achievement.
2. Effective programs are the key to this impact and this same research has shown that program quality correlates directly to youth outcomes. Better prepared adults produce better results for children.
3. PASE helps youth-serving organizations provide more efficient and effective services, and every dollar spent on program improvement yields exponential dividends in positive impact on thousands of kids over many years.

What does PASE do?

PASE...

- Builds Capacity of afterschool programs through expert training and management support;
- Convenes diverse groups of stakeholders to develop consensus on priorities and best practices;
- Advocates for providers, helping their voices reach national groups, policy makers, and the public; and
- Leads efforts to advance the field as a thought leader and innovator.

An investment in PASE is an investment in the entire field: PASE builds more effective and efficient afterschool providers and drives innovation and improvement, resulting in positive outcomes for millions of young people in New York City and beyond.

PASE is...

Effective: Internal and external evaluations, academic research, and feedback from funders and programs alike have all demonstrated that PASE's approach and programs have both short- and long-term impact on the quality of programs and the sustainability of organizations.

Efficient: In the past three years alone, PASE trained over 15,000 afterschool staff and supported hundreds more organizations through management support consultations. This work helped PASE's thriving network of over 1,600 afterschool programs in New York City provide high quality services to the more than 500,000 youth in their programs and will continue to benefit hundreds of thousands more in the years to come.
