"Mayflower Place," One of Illinois' most architecturally significant estates on Lake Michigan was restored to perfection in 1987 and 1988 by 70 craftsmen, including Italian artisans and Bavarian stonecrafters. Fittingly for such a regal place, the estate, known as Mayflower Place, entertained royalty at least twice. Laura Shedd Schweppe hosted a crown prince and princess of Sweden, who danced on the eastern terrace and Edward, Duke of Windsor and Wallis Simpson. It would cost $70,000,000 to $80,000,000 to build this estate today and many elements could not be replicated. The superior construction and level of intricate hand-carved architectural details and finishes rival the grand estates on the east coast. Built of durable materials, this concrete, steel and brick structure features intricate hand-carved limestone,
