Deep Rock Oil &amp; Gas Inc. (OTC:DPRK)

Issue #112

WE WERE RIGHT LAST WEEK TO THE TUNE OF A FOUR-DAY 435% PROFIT... NOW, AS WASHINGTON MAKES ALL THE WRONG MOVES IN THE WAKE OF KATRINA, DEEP ROCK OIL & GAS COULD LEAD YOU TO PROFITS OF UP TO 1,008%

It's important that you stop counting the big profits you made on your NLST play. There's another big, unattended pile of money on the table today that looks to be in equally easy reach. Though 435% in four days last week should keep us all smiling for a bit longer.

But, turn your focus to today, and you'll see that just as National Storm ripped through the roof - from 55 cents to $3.20 for you last week - this one, DPRK, should also make significant gains because of the tragedy wrought by Hurricane Katrina.

You see, within every crisis hard lessons are learned. And Katrina was a brutal teacher. She exposed the horrible vulnerability of poor people... people with no safety... people trapped by a lack of ready cash. Just as tragically, she taught us that the big oil and gas outfits just can't be trusted anymore to keep up with demand... unless that demand is to line their own pockets.

That's why so many people like you and me are so angry today. It's why politicians and decision makers are suddenly locked in a desperate struggle to lower gas prices at the pump.

This huge political effort is all about protecting U.S. lifestyles (including the politicians)... yet, it's absolutely the wrong way to go about it... still, even as the politicians get the ultimate answer wrong, they'll have created a winning situation for investors. That may end up bittersweet for you, because out of this mess a great Oklahoma oil and gas exploration company such as Deep Rock Oil and Gas (DPRK) and its huge potential reserves could post fat long-term returns... 306% early and as much as 1,008% in a year.

This massive profit potential is created by a situation that is easy to understand. The U.S. will lap up every drop of oil, and every whiff of gas, in its desperate struggle to make it through the coming winter. But that's just the sweet short-term opportunity.

The moves will cause the price of gas to drop a bit... but it's so high now and it's not going to fall very far... all for a simple reason... human nature. In fact, 12 months from now the problem will be worse. Why?

Because, these drastic emergency actions to lower prices just encourage people to continue driving their big-ass SUVs... and to live miles and miles from where they work. It makes them believe government will always be there to take care of them. But no one can take care of us the way the world is set up now. Remember, the big oil companies have shown their colors in the last two weeks.

Add China and Europe to the oil problem, and it's like everyone has their own straws... BUT THEY'RE DRINKING FROM THE SAME CUP. No one is yelling "Stop!", you're sucking us dry." Instead, because they need votes or mass support, politicians across the globe are doing just the opposite... they're helping people and businesses consume more.

To maintain its safe, suburban lifestyle the U.S. is going need oil... oceans and oceans of oil... And, don't count on the Arctic Wildlife Preserve. It will be at least a decade after they start hacking into the tundra before a single drop of oil from there comes to market. Gas will be at $12 a gallon by then.

That's why Deep Rock (DPRK) should be such a killer performer in the long term as well. It's not some Sudanese or Venezuelan producer that will shut down as soon as the next dictator decides to start a civil war. It's not from Iraq, which may not sell oil for years, or Iran, which hates the U.S. No, Deep Rock is from Oklahoma U.S.A. That means when you invest in DPRK today, it should pump steady profits - profits you should come to count on - for years to come.
