Dear Charmin,

Now that Mr. Whipple is dead, is it OK to squeeze the Charmin, or is this behavior we should still avoid?

Thanks,

Christopher L. Jorgensen

Dear Mr. Jorgensen,

Thanks for sharing your interest in Mr. Whipple. Here are some interesting facts:

Dick Wilson did commercials for Charmin for many years as George Whipple. His tag line was . . . "Please don't squeeze the Charmin." He passed away November 19, 2007 at the age of 91. Mr. Wilson made more than 500 commercials as Mr. Whipple. He retired in 1985 but P&G brought him back for an encore commercial in 1999. The single ad showed Wilson "coming out of retirement" against the advice of his golfing and poker buddies for one more chance to sell a new Charmin. Thanks for getting in touch with us.

Sincerely,

Carole

Dear Gorton's, Inc.,

I just saw one of your commercials on TV touting your Beer Batter Fillets, and I am left with a question: What kind of beer? I'm a little torn between hoping it's a really good beer and hoping you're not wasting good beer. I mean, if you wouldn't drink it, why would you cook with it, right? But if you'd drink it, why wouldn't you just drink it? This make sense? I'd hate to think that a bunch of beer that would be better served drunk is going undrunk! Just as I'd hate to think you guys would use an inferior beer. I think this is one of those moral dilemmas I keep hearing about.

Oh yeah, I was also wondering what kind of fish?

Sincerely,

Christopher L. Jorgensen

Dear Christopher,

Thank you for your interest in Gorton's!

Our Beer Batter Fish Fillets are made with high quality beer, sourced from an American beer company. Unfortunately, we are not able to provide detail about the supplier as this information is proprietary. In regards to your question about the type of fish we use in this product, it is Pollock.

We sincerely apologize for the delay in responding to your inquiry. In appreciation of your loyalty, we would like to send you a few coupons redeemable towards your next Gorton's purchase!

Wishing you calm seas,

Your friends at Gorton's

Dear Anti-Monkey Butt Powder,

I have this Canadian friend named Anthony Imperioli, and I was thinking of sending him some of your product. Anthony is nearly legally blind and has quite the hairy hands (if you know what I mean!). He's constantly complaining about friction burns and hand fatigue. I asked at my local pharmacy if there was anything I could send Anthony to alleviate his discomfort and the old pharmacist recommended Anti-Monkey Butt Powder. I'm not completely convinced my leg isn't being pulled!

I'm not sure if Anthony suffers from monkey butt, and you have to admit there's no good way for one man to ask another man if his ass is red! (At least I've found no way to do so. I am open to suggestions.) So I'm not sure if Anthony needs your product unless it also aids in the injuries that come from excessive masturbation. Unless you tell me differently I am going to assume the answer is no and Anthony will have to continue to suffer.

On the bright side Anthony is the only Canadian I know that doesn't need mittens in the winter!

Sincerely,

Christopher L. Jorgensen

Dear Blank Park Zoo,

I heard you had a night where people could come and drink beer and watch the animals getting it on. Is this true? What night is this and how much does it cost?

Also, what kind of beer is there?

Sincerely,

Dear Peanut Butter & Co.,

I love peanut butter! I love my girlfriend! Like chocolate and peanut butter some things just plain go well together. That's my girlfriend and I. The only thing that could make things better would be more peanut butter. I was wondering if there was an easy way to figure out how much peanut butter would be required to cover my girlfriend from head to toe. (I don't want to have to go out for additional jars once I start this project.) I was thinking a layer one inch thick, but have to admit I have no expertise in this area, so don't know what's optimal.

Would 5 or 10 jars be enough?

Sincerely,

Christopher L. Jorgensen

Dear Christopher L. Jorgensen,

Your letter has been received and it definitely made us chuckle. While peanut butter is our area of expertise we do not have any past experience estimating what you've inquired about.

Hope these coupons can help with the project if you've yet to undertake it.

Good luck,

Dear Vent Haven Museum,

Happy Halloween!

I have a need for a monkey puppet. Can you help me out? I want to use it to make commentary on social media. I was going to call it "The Social Media Monkey," but I have to admit that's not a very catchy name. My friend Anthony Imperioli has a puppet. Her name is Nonna Maria and you have to admit that gives the puppet a bit more realism. Maybe you could help me out with naming my monkey puppet too?

I want a monkey puppet so badly that I can taste it (and we all know how bad puppets taste!). I want to dress it up in little outfits and play with it and maybe chase people around. That would be fun! I also plan to make videos for the internet featuring the "The Social Media Monkey!" These would, of course, be informational and educational and would make the world a better place, so if you can help me out you'll be helping the world!

I anxiously await your reply.

Sincerely,

Christopher L. Jorgensen

Dear Mr. Jorgensen,

Thank you for your letter and interest in ventriloquial puppets. Unfortunately, the museum does not have puppets to sell, so I will not be able to help you out with acquiring a figure. I can suggest, if you are looking for a basic, beginner puppet, you might find one at your local toy store as they usually carry a variety of animal puppets. For a more professional figure you might want to do a Google search of ventriloquist puppets and you will find quite a few companies that sell them.

Good luck searching for your perfect figure! I am sure you will greatly enjoy performing with it and bringing a smile to people's faces.

Sincerely,

Jennifer Dawson, Curator

Dear Alpo,

As you know, with the current state of the economy and the declining American dollar, many people on fixed incomes face hard choices about how best to spend their retirement checks. Sadly, an increasing number end up eating Alpo, a product not intended for human consumption. I would like you to address this issue.

Won't you please do the responsible thing and come out with "Alpo for Senior Citizens?" With a properly blended formula it should not be difficult to achieve a nutritionally balanced diet for the elderly.

No more would they be forced to eat food meant for dogs. Instead, with pride, they could buy an affordable can of food meeting the best needs of elder care. After all, why should our pets fare better than our elders?

I hope you will consider this modest proposal.

Thanks,

Christopher L. Jorgensen

Dear Mr. Jorgensen,

Thank you for contacting the Nestlé PetCare Company. We always welcome questions and comments from our consumers.

Pet foods contain no ingredients that are harmful to people when ingested, however, we do not recommend people eating pet food. At this time Purina only manufactures foods for cats and dogs, and do not have any future plans to make human foods. However we will be happy to forward your comments to the appropriate departments for review.

Again, thank you for contacting Nestlé PetCare Company. Please contact our Office of Consumer Affairs in the future if we can provide additional assistance.

Sincerely,

Sandy Seigfried

Dear Century Publishing,

I'm not gay or anything, but sometimes certain men have some kind of hold over me. I mean hot is hot if you know what I mean. Like I have this Canadian friend who's a bit more attractive than he should be. If Anthony Imperioli wasn't so far away, and if we both didn't have girlfriends, I don't know where things would lead! This thought keeps me up at night!

So I was wondering if you had any tips on nipping this burgeoning and burdensome desire right in the bud! Is there a book I should read that will help keep my on the straight and narrow (I'm more worried about the straight part).

Sincerely,

Christopher L. Jorgensen
