This morning we will be studying and discussing the second coming and the judgment day. These events, for the Christian, should bring about a feeling of confidence and joy, but sadly for many, it brings anxiety and fear. As we study together this morning, consider how you currently view this certainty and how is that impacting your life choices and your conversations?

This evening we will focus on our graduating seniors. As Alex presents thoughts from God's Word to encourage and challenge these young men and women, I encourage us all to take inventory of how far we have grown in our years since our own graduations and consider what lessons we have learned that we can (and should) impart on these soon-to-be graduates?

My list:

- 1) Put God first in everything you do and are involved in.
- 2) Be kind.
- 3) Lead by example. Use words if necessary.
- 4) Call home.
- 5) Be ok with being different.
- 6) Take a course or two that might be unexpected. (In college or not)
- 7) In all things, remember who you are to God, the price He paid for you, and what He wants you to be.

There are probably dozens more things I could write, but these are a good start. May God continue to richly bless you all as you grow and mature. -- Scott
