Comic Books Cost $150

NEW YORK (AP) — Comic books that once sold for 10 cents each now are selling for up to $150 at the first International convention of Comic Art here, which ends Sunday.

In attendance since Thursday have been editors, cartoonists, middle-aged sentimentalists, but mostly teen-agers.

Howard Rogotsky, 21, said he sold a 1939 first edition Marvel Mystery for $330.

Glenn Farley, 15, said, "I like to read 1968 comic books. I get to know what people liked, what they said then."

Some critics contend that current comic books encourage violence. But Stan Lee, an editor and writer of comics, contended: "It's like saying that Jack and the Beanstalk has a lot of violence."
