

Superintendent's Report
January 25, 2016

Second semester has kicked off with great speed. Students and staff came back ready to work. I am still very pleased with our math curriculum and its progress. I have had several teachers tell me they like how the program is working. Improvement will come, but it will not be real noticeable until next school year. That is exciting news when changes are made in a positive direction.

With every spring, anticipation of the next school year sets in. Observing how we can make positive changes for the following year is always a challenge. We continue to look at curriculum needs, technology needs and general classroom needs as they arise. Having budget for these items is the next major challenge. Administrators continue to meet and prioritize these needs before decisions are made. It is nice to have a team willing to discuss and challenge each other for what is best within our district. Always having our focus on how these changes will affect our students being our top priority.
