Formula #1: The Ultimate Benefit – FAST & EASY!

When you've taken the time to list all the benefits of your product or service, it's much easier to begin formulating some excellent headlines. Decide on the most attractive benefit your product offers. What one great advantage does your product give customers? What unique advantage does your product offer? Don't just guess at it—talk to prospects and customers. Give them a short list of 2 to 5 solid benefits your product delivers on, and then ask them to choose just one.

What you hope to achieve with this little exercise, is to get actual prospects and customers to identify the one benefit that is of supreme importance to them . It could be a single benefit or, more likely, the “ultimate benefit” of your product. Try to narrow it down to one powerful benefit and then use that as your starting point.

A headline that's centered around the most appealing benefit has a good chance of attracting far more interest and attention than any non-benefit headline.

Step #1: Identify Your Big Benefit

Step #2: Provide A Quick & Easy Way For Prospects To Experience The Big Benefit

“Quick and easy” satisfies the craving for instant gratification with little or no work. What could be better than that? Not only are you promising the one thing customers want most, but... you're also offering this in rapid time and without much, if any effort on the part of the prospect. This is how you present the ideal dream solution to your customers and prospects. Make sure your promise is believable.

Specific solutions attainable in less time and with less effort. That's what prospects want... your job is to give it to them up-front in the headline. One way to do it is to simply add the words “quick and easy”. Another technique is to quote specific figures in terms of the time required, such as “10 days to...”, “30-day plan for...”, “...in just six weeks” or “overnight”.

Formula #2: The “Borrow It” Approach

This technique “borrows” ideas, words, phrases, and formats from other headlines and adjusts these to suit. It takes individual components from existing headlines and re-packages them to suit your product, service, or offer. Here, you choose different headlines that you like, combine features of several to create a hybrid. This technique works for both simple and complex headlines. You simply string together a few parts that you like, and substitute your benefit or offer to suit.

Never copy someone else’s headline, word for word. That’s theft. But no one can take exclusive ownership of any word or phrase. You’re always free to use any word or description in your own unique way.

It’s an easy way to put together a solid headline in just minutes. The key is to find lots of headlines that you like and to have them ready, in front of you. You’ll find plenty of examples within this manual package, but remain on the lookout for others.

You never know when you’ll want to adapt a phrase or technique for a headline of your own. With your own file of collected headlines, commonly referred to as a “swipe file”, you’ll have a virtual resource center of adaptable ideas and techniques.

Following are some examples of simple adaptations from original headlines:

Original: “They Laughed When I Sat Down At The Piano But When I Started To Play!~” (John Caples)

Adaptation:

“They Laughed When I Sat Down At The Piano. They Stopped When I Picked It Up.” (Gold’s Gym)

Original: Breakfast Of Champions! (Wheaties cereal)

Adaptation:

Breakfast of Millionaires. (Barron’s financial magazine)

Original: “What Four-Letter Word Do You Use When You Have To Write A Check For Your High Healthcare Premium?” (Jerry Fisher)

Adaptation:

“What Four-Letter Word Do You Use After Stepping On To The Bathroom Scale?”

Original: “To People Who Want To Write—But Can’t Get Started”

Adaptation:

“To People Who Want To Own A Beautiful House—But Can’t Get Started With A Regular Savings Plan”

Original: “10 Ways To Lose Extra Weight And Keep It Off!”

Adaptation:

“3 Ways To Rid You Home Of Pests And Keep Them Away For Good!”

You can take virtually any effective headline and adapt it to your own product or service. Try different options and arrangements. Insert a new word or phrase. Try it out. You’ll see how easy it is to develop a great headline by using parts of others to develop one that fits your purposes well.

You can add a new and interesting twist to this formula by substituting a few words with powerful, provocative, eye-catching replacements. (Refer to Chapter 9 for specific examples) Sometimes just one word can make a substantial difference in readership and results.

Formula #3: The Brainstorm Technique

The brainstorming technique is an excellent way to generate innovative, breakthrough headlines. This technique can be performed as a group exercise, or individually. Both applications can work well to produce original ideas and concepts that can lead to awesome headlines.

The idea of brainstorming is to completely free the minds of all participants and to simply let the ideas flow --unrestricted and unencumbered—without limitations of any kind. This free-wheeling, creative activity lets you generate an infinite amount of possibilities.

The best way to brainstorm a headline is to think in terms of customer benefits and stick to short descriptions of one to five words. Open up your mind and let the creativity flow. Try to think of single words and phrases that describe the benefits of your product or service.

It's a liberating experience, one that can often provide a fresh new horizon from which to base your promotional efforts upon.

There are 4 simple rules to follow for maximum results in brainstorming:

1. Place a time limit of 5 to 10 minutes on the actual idea generation stage. This is the first step where raw ideas are produced and recorded on paper or chalkboard.
2. All answers should be encouraged. No idea is a bad idea at this stage. Every contribution, no matter how outrageous or ridiculous, should be welcomed and recorded. Do not edit. Keep the ideas flowing. Spit out as many as possible.
3. Stop on schedule. Don't try to prolong a creative session. 5 Minutes is plenty of time to gather lots of good ideas to explore.
4. Now, you can start to edit out some answers that don't appear to be on the mark. Take what's left and work with those to formulate a powerful headline.

Formula #4: The Power-Packed Combination

Here's a technique that adds extra power to any single-benefit headline. It can be used in several different ways, all with the multiplied power of several components working hand in hand. A combination headline could include multiple benefits, a benefit plus and offer, even a benefit, offer and a guarantee. With the "Combination" headline, your options are plentiful, and the one you select should be the one that packs the biggest punch and works well in a particular situation.

The benefit combination approach simply stacks one major benefit on to another in a sequence that usually consists of three separate benefits. The result is a headline with three times the power of a single benefit.

The easiest way to begin generating a power-packed combination headline is to begin with a single benefit statement.

Here's one we can start with:

"Learn To Make Money Like A Millionaire!"

This headline promises a benefit, but could it be made stronger using the combination approach? Before deciding, play around with several different options.

Let's try out a few possibilities:

- Learn To Make Money Like A Millionaire... Invest Like A Wall Street Wizard With Average Returns Of 37%, Or More ... And Create A Future Of Style, Comfort And Unlimited Financial Security!
- Learn To Make Money Like A Millionaire! Attend This FREE 2-Hour Seminar And Discover The 13 Key Principles Of Self-Made Riches Guaranteed To Make YOU More Money Than Ever Before! Only 75 Seats Available—Reserve Yours Today!
- Start Your Own Business, Take Complete Control Of Your Future And Learn How To Make Money Like A Millionaire—Starting Today!

See how easy it is? The possibilities truly are endless. But obviously, the angle you take is dependent upon your product the market you're trying to reach, and the venue you're using to communicate your message.

Following are some other combination headlines taken from my collection of ads, sales letters, direct mail packages, brochures and assorted other marketing pieces.

This sample delivers a benefit and offer combination:

- “Free Video Tapes Reveal 11-New Ways To Make Huge Amounts Of Cash... Even During A Recession!”

In the next example, a question is used to first involve the prospect. Next, it's immediately followed-up by an offer and a benefit.

- “Do You Have What It Takes To Succeed At Your Own Business? This Free Book Will Help You Find Out. YOURS FREE! Starting Your Own Business... 12 Steps To Success.”

Here's a quadruple-benefit headline. Watch how much more impact it has vs. any single benefit alone.

- “Maximum Profit Direct Marketing! How To Win Tons Of New Customers, Get Them To Buy More Often, Increase The Dollar Amount Of Every Sale, And Double Your Profits In Record Time!”

In this example, there's a strong benefit, a guarantee, and a special offer.

- “Now You Can Easily Double Your Profits By Learning The Jealously-Guarded Marketing Secrets Of The Richest Service Companies In The Country... And I Guarantee Results! Plus... If You Act Now, You'll Also Get Valuable Free Bonuses Worth Over $975!” (Joe Hammer)

Using the combination technique is an easy way to boost the appeal of any headline. Start by listing a handful of benefits. If you have a strong guarantee, and a compelling offer, list those as well. Then, experiment with different combinations. Vary the order. Try a new angle and soon you'll have the headline you're looking for.

Formula #5: Forget Your Product—Deliver The Dream!

What do your prospects want most? You already know the answer. It's always the benefits that they seek. They want an advantage or a better way of doing things. Solutions to problems and new alternatives that save time, money, and effort. And there's no better option for prospects than the one that does it all. This product is the solution to their dreams.

The idea of this headline technique is to transform your product into an ideal answer to your prospects deepest desires and aspirations.

In order to supply the dream solution, you have to know what your prospects want... their likes and dislikes... their frustrations and disappointments with other apparent solutions. What is it that annoys prospects most regarding your type of product, service or industry?

Armed with this valuable knowledge, it's easy to see what it would take to provide a better alternative. But you don't want to simply settle for being better than the other choices available. You want to be the ultimate solution to your prospect's problem. What would your prospect really like to have, to be, or to accomplish, that his present choices don't provide? What is the perfect solution--the best-case end result?

So... now it's time to play the role of the wizard. Put on your cape, reach for your wand and create a "magical" solution. Pretend that you have almost God-like powers and that you can give your audience the "ultimate solution"—the big benefit they really want.

Your job is to bridge the gap between where your prospects are and the place they want to go. Imagine the perfect end result. Create the vision of the underlying desire your prospects hold within. Then, present your message as the ultimate answer—the ideal solution. Fulfill that desire with your miracle product.

Examples:

In the following example, the writer obviously knew his audience well. Most people who attempt new diets, have tried others before without much, if any success. Talk to anyone who has been on a diet and they'll often tell you that afterwards, they gained more weight than they previously had lost! Yet the search goes on for the perfect diet—one that delivers results without taking away one of life's greatest pleasures. How could any dieter resist?

Here's how copywriter, Jerry Fisher created a dream solution:

- “Lose 30 Pounds In 30 Days On Strawberry Shortcake!”

In the next example, direct marketer, Ted Nicholas shows his thorough understanding of the prospects he wanted to target. Anyone who has ever given a speech, has the goal of delivering a stellar performance. What better way to feel the accomplishment than with a standing ovation?

- “How To Get Enthusiastic Response --Even A Standing Ovation— Every Time You Speak!”

In the next example, marketer Gordon Alexander knew something about his audience before he conceived the headline below. I’m sure you’ve heard the line, “Give a man a fish, you feed him for a day... but, teach him how to fish, and you feed him for life.” Learning how to make extra money one time, is appealing to many opportunity seekers, but... learning how to do it as often as they’d like has much more appeal.

- “12 Weeks To Freedom. Make $5,000 Within The Next 3 Months— And Never Look Back. Learn How You Can Earn $5,000 In The Next 12 Weeks, And Then Make $1,000 or $2,000 or Even $3,000 Or More --IN CASH-- Every Week For The Rest Of Your Life!”

Be a dream provider and your headline will attract more qualified and interested prospects and your sales will skyrocket as a result.

Formula #6: Use Your Customer's Own Words

The actual words of satisfied customers holds a lot of weight with prospects in virtually all markets. Somehow, the words of others --people who once were in the same situation, as the prospects themselves--has greater power to influence a prospect's decision to buy.

Gather any feedback that you may have already collected from customers. Review all the letters, faxes, words or appreciation and general comments you've heard in the past. Survey past customers for additional feedback or solicit a review by a well-respected authority in your field. The more material you have to draw from, chances are, the better and more explosive your headlines will be.

If you don't have such a collection, now would be a good time to start one. Record all words, phrases, reviews and comments and attach the attributed real name of the actual person who made the statement. Jot these comments down on a card, and send it off in the mail to the customer requesting permission to use their words in your marketing material. Most customers are happy to help out this way and they appreciate being asked for their permission first.

Using testimonials gives you a different perspective; one that prospects can more easily relate to. A good testimonial headline speaks to the prospect in a language he understands, about something he truly desires.

Examples:

Let's start with an actual excerpt I received from a customer who had just received my booklet on writing successful classified ads.

- "One of, if not the best investments I have ever made! This information is not only timely and informative, but it actually works. I learned more from your advertising book than all of those $39.99 to $200.00 courses you see on TV!"

Some additional examples:

- "WalkFit Is The Best Thing That Ever Happened To Me!"
- "I lost 33 Pounds In 30 Days With This Simple Plan. I Have More Energy And I Look And Feel Better Than I Have In Years. Thank You Miracle Diet!"
- "I've Tried Every Other Cleaner On The Store Shelf. Nothing Even Comes Close To The Shine I Get With SuperClean!"

Another form of endorsement headline you could try, is an indirect testimonial headline. It works best in cases where there's a "voice of authority" suggesting an endorsement.

- "Police Say Buy It"
- "8 out of 10 Dentists Surveyed Actually Recommend EasyChew Gum For Cleaner, Whiter Teeth."
- "All-Night Donuts—Rated Number One For Taste By Those Who Ought To Know: Police Officers and Tow-Truck Operators"

Formula #7: Fill In The Blanks

This formula is amazingly simple to use. Just take any or all of the samples provided and adapt them for your own use. Simply fill in the blanks with the appropriate description, expression, action word, or benefit. Once you get the hang of it, you'll want to refer to this section again and again. Not only is it easy, it's also a lot of fun.

Don't feel limited by these suggestions. You could literally adapt any headline found anywhere, and do the same thing. Simply transfer your benefits, offers, guarantees, etc., to a headline that grabs your attention. This is a great way to generate a dynamite headline in a matter of minutes. Any one of these fill-in-the-blank formulas could help you create a winning headline for your product or service.

We'll start with the easiest first. All of these formats assume that you've clearly identified the major benefits of your product. If you don't know what the big benefits are, you'll have a tough time—even with these easy, fill-in-the-blank headline formats. Several examples are provided immediately following each headline format.
