Judge Rules Against Nation

Nation asks judge to reconsider decision on reservation status

By Shannon Shaw
Osage News

The Osage Nation has asked a federal judge to reconsider his “lousy decision” on the reservation status of Osage County that has Nation officials rushing to place tribal casino land into trust.

U.S. District Judge James Payne’s Jan. 23 decision said Osage Nation employees are not exempt from paying state income taxes and that Osage County is not the Osage Reservation’s boundaries. His decision came by summary judgment, which prevented the Nation from going to trial.

“That was a lousy decision,” said Chief Jim Gray in an interview. “This is the first legitimate setback we’ve ever had [in the nearly eight-year-old case]. We intend to fight, we intend to prevail.”

The Nation filed a “motion for reconsideration” on Feb. 6. If Payne’s decision stands, the tribe can appeal to the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver.

Worst-Case Scenarios

However, Gray acknowledged that all worst-case scenarios could be possible: The Tulsa, Skiatook and Ponca City Million Dollar Elm casinos could close because they are situated on land that is not held in trust or, under Payne’s decision, deemed the Osage Reservation.

“There’s no reason to think that we can’t get the land into trust,” Gray said in the interview. The Nation is in the process of filing the trust applications, said a source in the Chief’s office who asked not to be named. Approval of a trust application could take between six months to three years.

The Nation didn’t immediately put the land into trust when it first bought the land because the federal National Indian Gaming Commission approved the Osage’s claim that Osage County was also the reservation, the source said. The state signed the compact as well, a de facto recognition that the county is also the reservation, the source said.

“It wasn’t necessary to put [the land] into trust,” the source said. “We’ve been abiding by the compact, and they’ve been cashing our checks.”
Advisory Board Meets
Proposes Changes for Osage News

By Denny McAuliffe, Osage News editorial board member

This issue of the Osage News contains the first small imprint of the new Editorial Board: the launch of the paper, in answer to the desires of readers, both in and out of the Osage Nation government, to make the Osage News more free and independent.

“The board envisions…a service that seeks to develop, educate, raise awareness and bring important issues in Indian Country to the forefront of the larger public…”

The board’s proposal, which it plans to present to Congress in March, would move the newspaper out of the Osage Nation Executive Branch by creating a tribally owned but independent nonprofit organization. The Osage Nation would provide funds. As a section 501(c)(3) organization, the proposed nonprofit also would be able to apply for foundation and federal grants and to accept donations.

The Osage News will continue to publish a monthly newspaper distributed free to Osage tribal members. But the board also will launch an independent Web site that will publish news and information daily.

All registered users will be able to post comments to all stories and features published on the Web site, including videos, and to publish their own blogs. The online Osage News will link to blogs by tribal members, published elsewhere, as well as to other news organizations’ stories about Native American tribes and issues.

“As an independent, nonprofit news organization, we strive to report news and information with fairness and balance,” the board wrote in a draft mission statement. Addressing free-press concerns raised by Congress and acknowledging the news media’s government watchdog role, the board added: “While being the official news organization of the Osage Nation, we base our news judgments on our loyalties to our readers and Osage citizens, and we are not directly beholden to the Executive, Legislative, or Judicial branches of the Osage Nation.”

The board envisions the nonprofit that will publish the Osage News to be a social and community service that “seeks to develop, educate, raise awareness and bring important issues in Indian Country to the forefront of the larger public,” as the draft mission statement said.

For example, outside grants might allow the proposed nonprofit to partner with Osage Nation health, nutrition or education programs. The paper and Web site would not merely publicize their news, events or advice but help organize and launch community projects.

The board also made initial decisions on newspaper policy. It will adopt a code of ethics based on those of the Society of Professional Journalists and the Osage Nation, and it stipulated that the paper would not endorse any political candidates.

The newspaper would devote limited space each issue to opinion pages, and the draft policy set a 750-word limit on guest editorials. Each issue of the newspaper—which would distill the most informative and interesting stories from the daily Web site—would devote one column each to the Executive Office and Congress. The Osage News Web site would publish a greater number of op-ed articles.

By Jennifer Holding, scholarship coordinator

January through December of 2008 proved to be a remarkable year for the Osage Nation Scholarship Program! More than $1.8 million was awarded in scholarships for the 2008 spring, summer and fall semesters. This is the most scholarships to date. More than 1,000 students received scholarships throughout the year. According to our records, Osage college students attend over 200 schools nationwide with some students that study abroad in other countries.

The scholarship amount increased along with students. Full-time students will now receive $2,500 for the spring and fall semesters plus an incentive for previous semester grades. Full-time summer students receive $1,600 plus the incentive. Awards and incentives are pro-rated for part-time students.

The next deadlines for the Osage Nation Scholarship program are May 1, 2009 for the summer semester and July 1, 2009 for the fall semester. Renewal packets will be mailed out at the end of March. Please call Jennifer Holding at (918) 287-5301 or email jholding@osagetribe.com with any questions. If you need an application, please call 1-800-390-6724 or you can print one from our website, www.osagetribe.com/education.

NIGA awards Nation with Chairman’s Leadership Award

By Shannon Shaw

Ernie Stevens Jr., Indian Country’s colorful National Indian Gaming Association chairman, visited the Nation February 2 and spoke about why Indian gaming might be America’s saving grace, and the Osages role in it.

“Is it a coincidence that Oklahoma’s holding their own in one of the toughest economic climates in America?” Stevens said. “No, it’s no coincidence.

“I’ve come [to the Osage Reservation] to recognize what [the Osage] have done for the Nation, the community and Indian Gaming.”

“When I walk in [Washington] D.C. and the Osage Nation is backing me, that says something,” Stevens said. “If [Gray] wasn’t behind me and behind [NIGA] I wouldn’t be where I am today.”

NIGA is a non-profit organization made up of 184 tribal nations. Established in 1985, NIGA acts as an educational, legislative and public policy resource for gaming tribes, policy makers and the public on Indian gaming issues.

According to the NIGA Web site, Indian gaming employs 670,000 people in which 75 percent are non-Indian. Currently, 225

Inauguration Showcases Native American Solidarity

By Shannon Edwards, ON Congresswoman

When the Chief and Assistant Chief extended invitations to all Congress members to join them in Washington D.C. to attend meetings and events planned to honor our democracy and change of leadership, I felt grateful for the opportunity and a little apprehensive. I wasn’t sure how it would feel to be traveling in the company of an estimated 1.8 million people.

Having made the journey, I can report that I have never attended any meeting, conference, seminar, social or sporting function where the entire group exerted such good will and feeling of unity. I was particularly impressed with the solidarity of tribal officials and tribal people who seemed devoted to a common cause. It was a proud moment for our country and for Native Americans.

It all started on an early Sunday morning flight from Oklahoma City which was delayed because a local television wanted to film the flight as it was taking off. The pilot told us to “wave” as we traveled at a high rate of speed down the runway. I don’t think that worked out as the film crew had planned, but the passengers complied. The flight was abuzz with groups chatting and telling their stories. The woman seated next to me was a career military who had previously worked at the Pentagon but been back in Oklahoma for many years. She was invited to celebrate at an Army base with her General husband and daughter. The real reason she was going, however, was to facilitate her pre-teenage daughter’s participation in a children’s event hosted by the Obama girls. Her daughter, who suffers from cerebral palsy and is mostly confined to a wheelchair, was invited to represent Oklahoma and the local Cerebral Palsy Association because of her attitude and inspiration to others. I thought it was a testament to the incoming administration that they sought to include many diverse people not because of race or social or economic background, but because of their “can-do” spirit.

At baggage claim, I started to realize that Native Americans were coming in large numbers. I saw Chief Haney of the Seminole Nation, a Cherokee council member, the directors of the Native American Journalists Association and the American Indian Cultural Center, a drum group, and a woman officer of one of the tribally owned banks. Those I spoke with were truly excited about participating and looking forward to networking and learning more about what the change of Administration means for Indian Country.

The next two days were a whirlwind of meetings, meet and greets, and participation in what was truly a gathering of Nations. The Oklahoma State Society hosted a reception at the National Museum of the American Indian (“NMAI”) for all Oklahomans who wanted to attend, and attend they did! Our intergovernmental liaison David Conrad was busy all evening making introductions to our federal congressional delegation, Governor Henry, other tribal leaders and Oklahoma businessmen and women who are interested in moving our state and Nation forward in a cooperative fashion. The next day the National Conference of American Indians held meetings and briefings of subjects important to the tribes at the Native American base hotel and conference center in Virginia, the American Indian Society of Washington D.C. hosted a powwow, and the American Indian Inaugural Ball. All events were open to the public, and all had record setting attendance.

Additionally, the Seminole Tribe of Florida joined with the American Indian Alaska Native Tourism Association to host “Native Music Ball.”

Former Oneida Nation GM to be new Million Dollar Elm CEO

By Shannon Shaw
Osage News

The Nation has named Neil Cornelius, former Oneida Nation gaming general manager, as the new Million Dollar Elm CEO.

“Neil [Cornelius] comes from one of the most successful gaming tribes in the country. His leadership program for the Oneidas allowed their nation to fulfill management opportunities for tribal members without sacrificing profits; that is what excites me the most,” Chief Jim Gray said in an email. “He also has done resort and hospitality development, added amenities to build the entertainment around the casino brand. Oh, yes, I’m very excited about his desire to bring that kind of talent and skill to the Osage Million Dollar Elm.”

Cornelius, Oneida, will fill the vacant post left by Phillip Glass who left in March of 2008. Cornelius told the Oneida Business Council he was leaving to pursue a CEO position which is currently not available within the Oneida tribal structure, according to the Oneida Nation’s Web site. Under Cornelius the Oneida’s expanded its table games to include craps and poker. Also, off-track betting became available after a new gaming compact was reached with the state of Wisconsin in 2003, according to the Oneida’s Web site.

National Indian Gaming Association chairman Ernie Stevens Jr., Oneida, expressed his congratulations to Osage tribal employees Feb. 2 for hiring Cornelius for the CEO position.

“I’m proud of the teamwork; the work and [OME’s] team that runs the casino,” Stevens said. “[Cornelius] is going to build on success.”

Cornelius will be starting his new post March 1.

“The Osage Ten”

This major project between now and 2009 will be wonderful additions to the ever-growing museum called “The Osage Ten”!

You may recall that we have a bust of Albert Penn, located in the east wing, which was donated by the Smithsonian back in 2005, and Shun-Kamolah was just unveiled at the museum’s 70th anniversary, this past May 2, and we are asking for your help in having all ten busts completed.

The people who had casts made for them are: Albert Penn, Shun-Kamolah, Fred Lookout, Charley Wachrici, Henry Pratt, William Fletcher, Wah-Hrah-Lum-Pah (Margaret Dodd), Charles McDougan, Che-Sho-Wa-Ke-Pah (Fidelis Cole) and Ah-Hu-Shin-Kah (Little Wing).

A plaque will be placed under each bust for those who have donated.

Send your donations to:
Osage Tribal Museum
PO Box 779
Pawhuska, OK 74056

If you are sending a check or money order, please make it out to the “Smithsonian Institution” (not “Osage Tribal Museum”) and please put “The Osage Ten” in the memo section. Thank you!
A Message from John D. Red Eagle Ki-he-kah O-wah-ta
—Assistant Principal Chief of Osage Nation

On January 20, 2009, I had the privilege of attending the Presidential Inauguration in Washington D.C. along with Chief Jim Gray on behalf of the Osage Nation. Millions of people gathered to watch this transition of presidents from past President George W. Bush to the new 44th President of the United States, Barack Obama. Throughout the celebration the atmosphere was fired with excitement and great hope that President Obama will lead the nation with strength and integrity. It was a historic event I will never forget.

While we were there we attended a few inaugural functions. The chief and I attended a private reception hosted by the Oklahoma Delegation and held at the Native American Indian Museum. Oklahoma Governor Brad Henry and Representatives Tom Cole and Dan Boren were present. The second reception was hosted by the Native American Caucus and revealed a surprise to me. Of course I expected to meet and talk with numerous Tribal leaders across the United States, but I was surprised to see Indian Tribes from Canada, who had come with the goal of building relationships with us. The American Indian Inaugural Ball was attended by Tribal leaders and their delegations from across the United States.

At the Tribal Leaders Strategy Meeting, which was hosted by the National Congress of American Indians, we heard the new Secretary of the Interior former Colorado Senator Ken Salazar speak; discussed strategies and goal setting, and listened to President Obama’s Transition Team talk about the challenges a new administration faces. I was happy to hear the Senator state that he hopes to treat Native Americans with greater respect than past administrations and to pay more attention to our issues, such as economic development, Indian health care, increased appropriations for Indian Country, and trust reform.

Educating you on the Legislative Process

The election of an Osage Congress three years ago catapulted the Osage Tribe into a new era of change and challenge. The Executive Branch and Congress have been learning how to work together focusing on the important goal of creating a new and strong Osage Nation. You have the opportunity to have a voice as an Osage Tribal member in the decisions we are faced with every day. That’s why I am writing this article to educate you on how to advocate (promote or encourage) a bill you would like to see pass and how a bill becomes law. In the near future, plans for classes in governance will be held so that you can attend and learn more about how laws are made.

This spring the Hun Kah Session convenes and Congress will bring into play powerful forces of advocacy to shape the laws for the greater good of the new Osage Nation. Advocacy is one of the building blocks of the legislative process, and it allows you to present to Congress or congressional committees detailed pro-con research and argument.

Osage Nation Shares Prestigious Honor

By Paula Stabler, ON Communications Officer

Despite a bad weather postponement and frigid temperatures, the Nation held a reception to recognize the dedication and work of so many that resulted in the reformation of the Osage government. The accomplishments resulting from this work and dedication were recognized nationally when the Honoring Nations Awards Program of Harvard University presented the Osage Nation with the award of High Honors during their awards ceremony held every two years and hosted in Arizona this past year.

“The Award of High Honors from the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University is considered one of the most prestigious awards given in Indian Country,” stated Chief Gray to a crowd of about 80 at the Osage Tribal Museum. Of the 10 honors received from 110 applications, the Osage Nation was one of only five tribes in the United States to receive the award for High Honors. The local reception in Pawhuska was an opportunity to share the distinguished award with the Osage people and honor those who made the award possible.

Through a grant from the Ford Foundation, the Honoring Nations program identifies, celebrates and shares outstanding examples of Tribal Governance. Although unable to attend the rescheduled event, Stephen Cornell, a Professor of Sociology and Public Administration and Policy and co-founder of the Harvard Project on American Indian Economic Development, sent a message to the Osage people regarding the award, stating “throughout the United States, American Indian nations face daunting tasks. They have to repair the damage caused by colonialism. They have to end the poverty of their peoples. They have to solve complicated social problems. They have to free themselves from economic dependence on the federal government. They have to find ways of maintaining culture and community. And they have to build governments that work, that last, and that serve all of their people. Across the country, American Indian nations are not only addressing these challenges – they are solving them. Honoring Nations celebrates the achievements of these nations. This year, it celebrated the remarkable achievement of the Osage Nation. Faced with a governmental structure that had been imposed from outside, faced with a government that did not embrace all of its citizens, and faced with the complex task of respecting the past but at the same time preparing adequately for the future, you – the Osage Nation – responded.”

Chief Gray acknowledged that while the recognition may seem late, the feeling is sincere and went on to say that an enormous amount of credit goes to the 31st Tribal Council for having the political will and courage to carry out this endeavor.

Honorees were:
Congressman Frank Lucas, recognized for his work to introduce and sponsor House Bill 2912 which was signed into law as PL 108-431, the Osage Sovereignty Act;
Wilson Pipestem, recognized for his contributions in drafting and lobbying for the passage of PL 108-431, the Osage Sovereignty Act;
Dr. Jean Dennison, PhD, recognized for her tireless work to document and record all of the Osage Govt. Reform meetings and discussions for historic record;
The 31st Osage Tribal Council, recognized for their bold leadership in government reform for the Osage Nation as follows: Jim Gray, Kenny Bighorse, Mark Freeman, Terry Mason Moore, Harry Red Eagle, Jodie Revard, Jerry Shaw, Paul Stabler, Dudley Whitehorn, John Williams.

The Osage Government Reform Commission, recognized for listening to the Osage people and leading the process of establishing a constitutional government as follows: Joe Conner, Jerri Jean Branstetter, Tony Daniels, William Fletcher, Priscilla Iba, Edward Lookout, James Norris, Charles Red Corn, Doug Revard, and Mary Jo Webb.
Proposal to Increase Fiscal Accountability

By Debra Atterberry, ON Congresswoman

Our tribal income has risen dramatically over the past few years. As a result, there are more employees, more services and more tribal expenditures. It is more important than ever for Osages to know where the money is going.

In order to accomplish this, we must implement a system to assist Congress in making the best decisions regarding tribal dollars. The same system will also help the Executive Branch create, evaluate and run successful programs.

When the 2009 Hun-kah Session convenes, I'm looking forward to drafting this system into a bill. This will drastically improve the internal management of the Osage government.

You can help by contacting your congressional members and letting them know you support this effort. As usual, you can visit the Osage Nation Web site during the session to follow the process of this and other legislation. You may even consider attending a committee meeting to observe, learn or offer input.

Your Osage Dollars at Work

As an elected official, I am frequently asked, “What does the tribe do with all the money?” While there are many programs available to Osage members, these services won’t come to you – you have to go to them.

I recently attended a benefit handgame for an Osage family. As the afternoon concluded, this tribal member encouraged her fellow Osages to take care of themselves. She urged them not to wait until it is too late, and she stressed the importance of eating right and abstaining from drugs and alcohol.

As I listened, it occurred to me that health is on the forefront of the Osage Nation’s agenda. Tribal members emphasized the importance of wellness and prevention during the 25-Year Vision and Strategic Plan Effort. As a result, millions of tribal and federal dollars are being spent on health.

The Osage people are fortunate to have fitness centers in Pawhuska, Hominy and Fairfax. These facilities are staffed with personal trainers who will help you attain a healthier lifestyle by creating a customized fitness program. This service is free to fitness center members.

The Osage Nation also has a Community Health Nutritionist. This employee can assist you in weight loss and healthier eating habits.

The Tobacco Prevention Program not only promotes tobacco prevention in youth but also provides help for those who want to quit smoking.

The Drug Free Communities Program focuses on drug prevention and intervention needs of the community. The Osage Nation also provides drug and alcohol counselors who will assist you in becoming drug and alcohol free.

First Indian Health Service Drive-Thru

By Wehnona Stabler,
IHS Facility Unit Director

On February 2, the Pawhuska Health Center officially opened the new Pharmacy drive-thru window. We will be the first pharmacy drive-thru at an Indian Health Service facility. The goal of the new service is to improve patient flow, decrease clinic congestion and improve customer satisfaction.

We wanted to share the “Drive-Thru Window Policy” with the community as this is a significant change for the Pharmacy:

The drive-thru window will be used for patients to pick-up medication refills only.

In regards to new medications, patients whom have been prescribed a new medication or have a significant modification to an existing prescription will be required to pick-up this medication at the interior pharmacy window or pharmacy counseling room. This is to ensure proper counseling and allow the pharmacist to verify the patients understanding of the medication. Counseling will include indication, name, strength, how medication is to be used, what changes to expect, visual identification of the drug and other elements.

With same-day refills, a patient requesting a same-day refill must still go to patient registration and request their chart be sent to pharmacy. The patient may then choose to wait for the refill and pick up at the interior pharmacy window or may use the drive-thru window for pick-up.

The drive-thru hours will be from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. At the pharmacist’s discretion, the drive-thru window may be closed when deemed necessary (ie; insufficient staffing, excessive patient volume, etc.).

The pharmacist may use his or her professional judgment and refuse to dispense medications through the drive-thru window at any time.

It should be noted that because this is a new service, this policy is subject to change as the program evolves.

The Indian Health Service Pharmacy staff of the Pawhuska clinic stands in front of the first federally run clinic drive-thru window. They are from L to R: Chief Pharmacist Jodi Goodfox-Jones; unit director Noni Stabler; pharmacy technicians Elmira Peterson and Christy Gay; pharmacist Carl Murray.

The covered entrance of the remodeled IHS Clinic in Pawhuska is nearly finished. Patients can now be sheltered from the elements and elders don’t have far to go when visiting the doctor.
Setting the Record Straight

My great uncle was Sylvester Tinker and I was thrilled to see the story on him, but when I read about his relatives I was displeased with the incorrectness of his family. I know these things happen.

To get the record straight, when Frank Tinker married Mary Louise Revard, she had two children, my grandmother, Ora Dennison Colby and Bert Dennison, not Buster Dennison and Colby Dennison. There are not very many of us left and I like to keep the record straight as I am very proud of my heritage. I live in the Ponca area as does many of Bert Dennison’s family. My dad was Walter Colby and his brother, Joe Colby, was a former council member. Thank you for reading this.

More on Tinker Article

My name is Sammie Dennison-Harmon and George Allen Dennison was my paternal grandfather. I wanted to clarify a few facts in your article about Sylvester Tinker in the recent issue of the Osage News. Sylvester was my father’s first cousin, their mothers being full sisters. Louise Revard Dennison Tinker married George Allen Dennison and they had two children, Bert Dennison and Nora Dennison Colby. Louise’s sister, my grandmother, Eliza Ursula (Minnie) Revard Fugate Rector was George Allen Dennison’s second wife and they had the following children: *George O. Dennison (Buster), Eva Dennison (deceased at a young age), Nellie Dennison Whitlatch, Charles T. Dennison, Everett Dennison.

Louise Tinker divorced George Allen Dennison and I know for a fact he did not abandon them on the prairie. I am not certain how such a fabrication of the facts became so distorted; however, this is an unfair mark on my grandfather’s character. My grandmother lived with my family during my childhood and I was very close to her. I was also very close to the Tinker family and I have never heard this story. My mother is 93 years old and knew all parties involved and she has never heard this rumor until now. My Aunt Nora and Uncle Bert were close to their father, George Allen Dennison, which is proof he did not abandon them.

I do appreciate the fact that you were only reporting what information was told to you and this is by no means an indication of displeasure regarding you personally; however, my family would appreciate a retraction.

Thank you for your time.

“Long History of Intrusion...” COURT DECISION

Speculation Over Big Tax Bill
The source also disputed speculation that the Nation would face a big tax bill from the state if Payne’s decision stands—“the issue that seems to be of the greatest concern to many discussing the issue,” the source said.

“What people concerned about this need to understand is that the state doesn’t ‘tax’ the casinos, but rather, the tribe and the state have agreed to a revenue sharing agreement with the state in exchange for a right to operate in that location,” the source said. “If the Payne decision were to have an effect upon the Nation’s casinos it would be this: in accepting X amount in revenues from casinos operating on fee land for the past X years, it seems it would be the state that owes the tribe, not the tribe that owes the state. As to tribal business tax liabilities, nothing about this decision changes the law regarding [the] ability of state or local entities to levy taxes on tribes.”

In his 27-page decision in Osage Nation v. Oklahoma Tax Commission, Payne cited the Oklahoma Organic Act, the Oklahoma Enabling Act and the Osage Allotment Act as proof that the U.S. Congress intended to dissolve the Osage reservation and leave only ownership of the mineral estate and small tracts of trust land to the Nation. Payne’s decision said that because Congress gave the State of Oklahoma jurisdiction over tribal members not living on trust land, they are not exempt from state income taxes.

Another Look at the Evidence
The motion for reconsideration asks Payne to take another look at the evidence the Nation provided. “Osages have never consciously given up their boundaries, ever,” said Gray told a crowd of employees and tribal members Feb. 2.

“We’ve made significant impacts in the tribe and the community, and all of these things the judge didn’t even consider.”

Payne’s decision said that establishing Osage County as a reservation “deprives Oklahoma of the ability to fund services in Osage County through income taxes” and that “the State’s provision of services would be severely threatened.” The decision also pointed out that the Nation has “left unchallenged the State’s taxation of the income of its members for more than seventy years.”

Payne also said that removing Osages from the state tax rolls “would have significant practical consequences not only for income taxation, but potentially for civil, criminal and regulatory jurisdiction in Osage County.” The judge mentioned that the county is majority non-Indian and non-Osage.

In its new motion to Payne, the Nation pointed out the numerous times that the Oklahoma Organic Act, the Oklahoma Enabling Act and the Osage Allotment Act use the phrases “Osage Reservation” and Osages shall “reside on their Indian Reservation.”

The Nation also argued that the evidence the Nation provided. “Osages have never consciously given up their boundaries, ever,” the source said. “What people concerned about this need to understand is that the state doesn’t ‘tax’ the casinos, but rather, the tribe and the state have agreed to a revenue sharing agreement with the state in exchange for a right to operate in that location,” the source said. “If the Payne decision were to have an effect upon the Nation’s casinos it would be this: in accepting X amount in revenues from casinos operating on fee land for the past X years, it seems it would be the state that owes the tribe, not the tribe that owes the state. As to tribal business tax liabilities, nothing about this decision changes the law regarding [the] ability of state or local entities to levy taxes on tribes.”

In his 27-page decision in Osage Nation v. Oklahoma Tax Commission, Payne cited the Oklahoma Organic Act, the Oklahoma Enabling Act and the Osage Allotment Act as proof that the U.S. Congress intended to dissolve the Osage reservation and leave only ownership of the mineral estate and small tracts of trust land to the Nation. Payne’s decision said that because Congress gave the State of Oklahoma jurisdiction over tribal members not living on trust land, they are not exempt from state income taxes.

“We will continue to pursue a full and fair consideration of our claim, no matter how long and how difficult the struggle may be.”

Osage Nation Foster Care PRIDE Training Information

By Jenny Rush-Buffalohead,
Family Preservation/Foster Care Specialist

The Osage Nation Social Services will be presenting the OK PRIDE Training beginning Tuesday, February 17, 2009 at the Osage Nation Social Services Building beginning at 6 p.m.

This training is for all new certified Osage Tribal Foster and Adoptive homes. If you have ever been interested in providing a foster home or interested in adopting a foster child, you are also welcomed to attend. The ONSS continues to recruit and need Osage Indian Foster/Adoptive homes.

OK PRIDE stands for Oklahoma’s Parents’ Resource for Information Development and Education. OK PRIDE Training is for prospective foster, adoptive and kinship families. We’ll help you learn the knowledge and skills you need to support you in your role as a kinship, foster or adoptive parent and to get you off to a good start. PRIDE training will assist you in gaining the skills and knowledge needed to meet the needs of children in the child welfare system.

PRIDE Training is a nine session, 27 hour training program that provides a great deal of helpful information to assist in understanding and caring for children who have suffered abuse and neglect.

The curriculum will be taught by the Osage Nation Social Services staff, Jenny Rush-Buffalohead, Foster Care/Family Preservation Specialist and Rebecca Fish, Adoption Specialist.

The training dates and time are:

February 17 ......................................................... 6-9 p.m.
February 23 ......................................................... 6-9 p.m.
February 24 ......................................................... 6-9 p.m.

44th Inauguration Celebration

Osage stand with millions to usher in a “New Era”

By Paula Stabler, ON Communications Officer

For decades Osages have traveled to Washington, D.C. to communicate the Nation’s interests and participate in national celebrations. The most recent trip to the Capitol was for the Inauguration of the 44th President of the United States, Barack Obama. Among the millions of visitors, more that 400 tribes sent delegations Washington for the historic event, and take the opportunity to let the new president know we are looking forward to a positive and strengthening reform of the United States government.

The National Congress of American Indians and the National Indian Gaming Association hosted tribal leader meetings; and the American Indian Society of Washington, DC hosted an Inaugural Ball at the Crystal Hyatt in Crystal City, Virginia. The ball took over three floors of the hotel and every floor was packed with Native Americans.

During our trip we were able to visit with Congressional representatives Dan Boren and Tom Cole from the State of Oklahoma, as well as national leaders such as Secretary of the Interior Ken Salazar, who in his keynote address told tribal leaders, “First Americans will have their place at the table in the Obama Administration and the Department of Interior.” A great opportunity came in visiting with other tribes and their leadership and staff such as the Chickasaws, Cherokees and Alaskan Villages. Surprisingly, even Canadian tribes made a prominent presence at this American event. Present at the event was Congresswoman Shannon Edwards, “This was a once in a lifetime opportunity to take part in ceremonies and events which celebrate our form of government and the peaceful transition of leadership. I am especially thankful to have represented our Osage government and people and to participate in so many activities with diverse Indian people who shared a common vision and goal during that time.”

The new President’s stimulus for America includes Native American housing, energy, roads, and economic development. Indian Nations with the governmental and corporate/industrial capacity and viable projects are in the best position to take advantage of these opportunities. Chief Gray, “In the area of renewable energy, the Osage are also involved in these discussions as they more forward. This can make a positive change in employment and diversification of our economy that can benefit everyone living on the reservation.”
Assistant Chief John Red Eagle visits with Canadian Tribal leaders, Chief Lawrence Joseph of the Federation of Saskatchewan Indian Nations and standing behind is Shawn Atleo, Regional Chief for the British Columbia Assembly of First Nations. Seated next to Assistant Chief is Shari Loanne (Osage).

Why didn’t my kid get his scholarship?

By Butch Marchesoni, education director

Wow, how many times have I heard that in the Education Department! I’ve been here three months and I marvel at Jennifer Holding’s patience. The office gets five to ten calls a day, sometimes more, asking this same question over and over. She never gets rattled or loses her cool, but simply says, “What’s your name?” She then finds it on her computer and tells them she needs one or more pieces of information before she can mail their checks. “We will not send any money until all the information is sent in and complete,” said the education director.

One of the problems is schools do not handle scholarships in the same way. Some schools send out grades early, while others wait until the last minute. Some only send verification of enrollment on the first day of the next semester, or wait until the add/drop deadline happens, while others send it immediately. Therefore, checks go out at different times for the same semester as student information is received and the application completed. Parents feel the need to help, as it will become their financial problem if the student fails to secure their scholarship.

We’re here to help and answer your questions as they come, but please be patient and understand we are not holding your student’s money hostage or gaining any advantage by not paying it out. This fall semester alone, we gave out almost 500 scholarships and expect more in the future. Please help us out by applying on time and get in all your paperwork as soon as possible. The following deadlines are the same every year: fall semester application deadline is July 1, the verification of enrollment and grades is due August 1, spring semester application deadline is December 31, and the verification of enrollment and grades by January 31, the summer semester application deadline is May 1, the verification of enrollment and grades by June 1.

If you make an application for the fall, you only need verification of enrollment and grades for the spring and summer. The next fall, you must make a complete application again. Every year you make one application and then you can follow it with only a verification of enrollment and grades for the next two semesters.

Yellowfish Receives Indian Educator of the Year Award

Sydna Yellowfish was recently awarded the Indian Educator of the Year award by the organization, Oklahoma Council for Indian Education. The awards banquet took place December 9, at the Hilton Tulsa Southern Hills.

Sydna is employed by the Edmond Public Schools. She has been the Indian Education Coordinator for 24 years. She is a graduate of the University of Oklahoma. She also attended Oklahoma State University and Oklahoma City University.

Sydna is enrolled with the Otoe-Missouria tribe and is also a descendant of the Osage, Pawnee and Sac Fox tribes. Her parents were the late Ted “Bravescout” Moore and Isa Moore of Pawnee. Her late mother was Thomasine Green Moore of Fairfax. Her paternal grandparents were Sidney and Pearl Peters Moore. Maternal grandparents were Gomas and Mary Osage Green.

Osage Nation Home Health
—Setting the Standard

By Brenda Brunger,
Home Health Office Manager

Leadership, Vision and Diligence. These are three of the many characteristics required to be successful in the Home Healthcare business. During a time of Medicare Reimbursement changes coupled with increased costs of providing care, makes setting up the infrastructure for current and future success paramount. With the Vision and Leadership provided by the Osage Nation Enterprises, Inc. Board of Directors, all of these characteristics now exist within the Osage Nation Home Health.

Chairman of the Board, Cecelia Tallchief with fellow Board Members, Danny Scott and Teresa Hudgins has provided the required leadership for a successful operation, which sets the stage for what lies ahead. Setting the Standard for Quality and Efficient Healthcare.

We are very proud to have been a part of this program that is establishing the high standard of efficient operations and quality care. Both of which this community greatly deserves. We are excited about what lies ahead.” Teresa Hudgins, Member of the O.N.E. Board of Directors.

Advanced technology, equipping nursing staff with tablet PC computers in a quest to establish a much more efficient process for billing and patient information management has begun as of this month. Research towards telemedicine, which allows patient monitoring on a daily basis for better nursing management and clinical outcomes has started with a desire to have telemedicine in place by mid year. A program for Hospice services will also be high on the list of service areas that the O.N.E. Board is considering establishing. All of which have been made possible by the Leadership, Vision and Diligence of the O.N.E Board of Directors and the staff at Osage Home Health.

“The year 2008 was very productive with the help of The Ganter Group and staff. We were able to accomplish great things in restructuring our organization for future success and we are looking forward to a great year to come,” says Cecelia Tallchief, Osage Home Health Chairman of the Board.

The staff at Osage Home Health welcomes visitors to stop in and learn about the services of home health. Office Hours are from 8:30 to 4:30 Monday through Friday, or call for information to learn more about the Home Health benefit.

Osage Home Health is a Medicare Certified Home Health Agency, providing Skilled Nursing, Physical Therapy, Occupational Therapy, Speech Therapy and Home Health Aide services all performed in the comfort of the patient’s home. For more information about the services provided by Osage Home Health, call the friendly staff at 866-671-3700.

Osage students at the Battle of the Plains Youth Powwow

Osage Nation JOM Wins at Powwow Competition

By Avis Ballard, JOM coordinator

The Osage Nation JOM program traveled to Dewey Fairgrounds with more than 20 student dancers and their families to compete at the “Battle of the Plains” youth powwow competition and won second place for the overall group contest. The powwow event is sponsored by the Operation Eagle/Indian Education program at Bartlesville Public Schools and is open to all Indian Education/JOM Dance groups. The contest dancing is for fun only and the winners receive ribbons for their effort and bragging rights for the year.

Dance groups traveled from all directions to attend the cultural event that promotes teamwork and friendly competition in the powwow arena. Royal Valley School, from Mayetta, Kans., brought over 60 Prairie Band Potawatomi students to the powwow and won first place in the group competition. The third place trophy went to a group of intertribal dancers from Owasso. The Poarch Creek Nation also brought a large group from Atmore, Ala., and received participation trophies along with Operation Eagle, Jay and Shawnee Schools.

More than 100 dancers filled the arena at the Dewey Fairground building during the grand entry ceremonies. Almost all dance styles were represented during the powwow including: fancy feather, northern traditional, straight, grass, fancy shawl, jingle and northern and southern cloth categories. The categories were broken down by dance style and ages to make it fair for the youth dance contestants.

The Osage Nation JOM group won second place at the powwow event with the help of six students finishing first, two students finishing second and five students receiving third place for individual honors in the fancy feather, straight, cloth, fancy shawl and jingle categories. The student dancers and their families felt proud to represent the Osage Nation at the intertribal contest powwow. They received hooded sweatshirts, gift cards and dinner at Chili’s Grill & Bar as reward for their participation in the all-day event. The Osage Nation JOM program hopes to continue this event and take first place next year!
Action in Historic Preservation: Sugarloaf Mound, St. Louis

By Dr. Andrea A. Hunter, Tribal Historic Preservation Officer

The Osage Nation Historic Preservation Office is dedicated to meeting the mandate of our department’s mission to identify, protect, and preserve cultural resources on the Osage Nation Reservation and throughout our ancestral lands. In this endeavor, our office is presented with a vast array of situations and opportunities to engage in the management of cultural resources affiliated with and significant to the Osage people. In an effort to keep our community informed of our activities, the department will highlight current projects in the Osage News on a regular basis. This month the focus is on Sugarloaf Mound, located on the bluffs of the Mississippi River in south St. Louis.

St. Louis once possessed more than 40 mounds and was referred to as Mound City. It appears that all of these mounds, except Sugarloaf Mound, were destroyed by urban development by 1904. The mounds in the St. Louis area, including the extensive mound complex across the river at Cahokia, were built by our ancestors.

Sugarloaf Mound today is oblong in shape with a conical peak at one end, from which a stepped slope or platform exists. The mound is about forty feet high and approximately one hundred feet in a north and south direction and seventy-five feet east and west. The full mound covers three city lots. At present there is a residence built on the top of the mound, one on the step, and one on the base slope.

Sugarloaf Mound was used as a survey landmark when St. Louis was incorporated in 1809 and during the following 150 years, its position above the riverfront protected it from industrialization. In 1928, did not allow looters to dig into the mound. However, Sugarloaf Mound is now for sale.

In November of 2009 I was contacted by Missouri Congressman Russ Carnahan and invited to join a task force to preserve and protect Sugarloaf Mound. The task force is made up of historic preservation specialists and organizations, archaeologists, and city officials. The members of this committee recognize the affiliation of the Osage to the mounds. I have been meeting with the task force developing strategies for preservation and for the future of the mound. If we are successful in purchasing the mound, the intent is to remove the houses, protect the mound, and develop the location as an interpretive, educational center to relate the significance of Sugarloaf Mound and the history of Mound City from the Osage’s perspective.

The tremendous amount of our history lost due to the destruction of our ancestor’s habitation area and most significantly all of the mounds in the St. Louis area is devastating. Hundreds of years of our people’s past were erased from the landscape. There is nothing that we can do to bring back what was so mindlessly destroyed, but we can impact what happens to Sugarloaf Mound today and help educate the citizens of St. Louis about where they live. I am extremely thankful to Congressman Carnahan for including the Osage Nation in this project and allowing us a lead voice in the process.

Although difficult to assess the true value of the mound, the property has been appraised at $250,000. The task force is now attempting to raise funds to purchase the mound. Tax-deductible donations can be made to the Landmarks Association of St. Louis, http://www.landmarks-stl.org/donate/. Donors should specify “mound preservation.”

Thank You Regarding the Benefit Hand Game

I would like to thank all the wonderful people who were part of the Benefit Handgame held in honor of Bob and me. I know many hours were spent putting this event together. Thanks to Bruce Cass, Archie Mason and Uncle Dan Cass. Singers; Vann Bighorse, John Bighorse, Larry Cozad, Myron Red Eagle, KC Bills, David McNeely, Ed Shaw, Jasper Clark and Ryan Red Corn. Many thanks to Cheryl Nelson, Shannon Cass, Debbie Simpson, Kathy Baker, Donna Patterson, Sarah Patterson, Abby Pryor, Dana Young and Laura Frazee. To all the individuals who attended and those businesses and individuals who donated items thank you so much.

Bob is doing much better. He has begun speech and physical therapy and we have already seen some improvements. Again thank you to all the people who honored us with their prayers and support. I sincerely hope that some day Bob and I can repay each and every one of you. —Sincerely Bob and Renee Harris.
Child Care Bucks Winners Announced

By Jennifer Easley, Child Care Program

The Osage Nation Child Care Program kicked off its first Child Care Bucks Trivia contest in November in an effort to aid more clients and providers as well as track how many clients and providers are using our newsletter as a resource each month.

Each month, the trivia question, the answer for the previous question and the winners will be named on the last page of our newsletter next to the Comments/Suggestions portion of the newsletter.

Currently we have four methods of submitting your response each month. You can write to us at ONCCP, Attn: Child Care Bucks, 1301 Grandview, Pawhuska, OK 74056; email Jennifer at jeasley@osagetribe.org or Gina at gblankinship@osagetribe.org (be sure to put “Child Care Bucks” in the subject line of your email). You may fax us at (918) 287-5220, attention “Child Care Bucks;” or visit us at the office at 1301 Grandview in Pawhuska and jot down your answer.

We are in the process of working on making it possible to submit your responses on our website. At this time that option is not available but as soon as it is, we will be sure to let you know. Each month the question is posted on our website at www.osagetribe.com/childcare and can be viewed by clicking on the “Child Care Bucks” link.

Each month the deadline for entries will be set around the 20th of the month to ensure time for presenting and photographing award recipients.

Congratulations to our winners for November: Samantha Tapp and Glenda Oleson; December client winners: Katie Hughes and (Diana) Susie Myers.

For more details about the contest, check out the website listed above or give us a call at (918) 287-5306 Monday through Friday between the hours of 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

ON Food Distribution Program Newsletter

By Katy Tingtella, Certification Specialist/Office Manager

The Osage Nation Food Distribution Program is a Federal program that provides commodity foods to low income Native American families residing in Osage County. The program has six employees: Fi Davis, Director, Katy Tingtella, Office Manager, Stacey Piearcy, Certification Specialist, and three Warehouse Workers, Peggy Oyster, Shannon Mitts and our newest employee, Tammy McGrory. We are located in the Osage Industrial Park, north of Hominy.

Improvements to the FDPIR food package: A workgroup made recommendations to make more healthful commodities available through the FDPIR food package. We are committed to helping all program participants, particularly children and the elderly; receive nutritious, healthful foods.

We have been offering healthier commodities such as tuna canned in water, reduced fat bakery mix, reduced fat processed cheese blend, canned fruits packed in juice or lite syrup, canned diced tomatoes, canned turkey, ground beef with no more than 15 percent fat, smoked turkey, ham and beef roast. Starting in February 2009 whole grain rotini pasta is available in our food package. Among other positive impacts, the changes will reduce the amount of total fat, saturated fat and cholesterol in the food package. If you have any questions about our program or would like to know how to participate, please give our office a call at 1-800-474-0996.

2009 calendars are still available; pick one up while supplies last.

Healthy Eating in Indian Country

Making Fruits and Vegetables available and accessible

Want your kids to reach for a healthy snack? Make sure fruits and veggies are in reach. When they come home hungry, have fruits and veggies ready to eat. Keep a bowl of washed fresh fruits on the kitchen table. Put washed and cut fruits and vegetables on a shelf in your refrigerator where your child can see them.

Make-ahead Fruit and Veggie Snacks from the Fridge

Toss veggies with cooked pasta and fat-free Italian dressing. Slice apples. Dip them in pineapple or orange juice to keep them from turning brown. Store apples in plastic snack bags or covered bowls in the fridge. Kids love to dip fresh veggies in low-fat ranch dressing. Cut up veggies and store them near the dip on a low shelf in the fridge.

Visit your Indian Health Service doctor or clinic to find out about the right nutrition and exercise program for you.

It’s a boy!

Colt and Sara Herren, of Skiatook, would like to welcome their first son, Cash Tyrel Herren. He was born December 31, 2008 at 9:15 pm at St. John’s hospital in Tulsa. He weighed 6 pounds, 12 ounces and was 19-3/4 inches long.

Maternal grandparents are Andy and Sylvia Goodell of Skiatook. Paternal grandparents are Janey Reynolds of Skiatook, and Chet and Sylvia Herren of Pawhuska, OK.

Cash was welcomed home by many aunts, uncles, and cousins.

It’s a girl!

We would like to announce the arrival of Jacee Leach. She is the daughter of Cherie Leach, Clinical Director of Osage Home Health. Jacee was born December 22, 2008 at St. Francis hospital. She weighed 5 pounds, 12 ounces and was 19-1/2 inches long at birth.
A very special “thank you”

Russell and Karie Mashunkashey wish to extend our sincerest gratitude to all of those who helped, attended and those who could not attend our wedding on December 31, 2008. We also wish to thank you for all of the gifts received. You made our day very special.

Storm Spotter Training Class March 19

Throughout Eastern Oklahoma and Northwest Arkansas, dedicated individuals risk their personal safety to provide first-hand severe weather reports to their local officials and the National Weather Service in Tulsa.

Being a storm spotter not only means dedication, but also training. Each winter and spring the Tulsa office of the National Weather Service trains members of police and fire departments, emergency management officials and amateur radio operators on spotting techniques. Typically the training is coordinated by a local group (such as an emergency management agency) and a NWS meteorologist serves as the guest instructor. The goal of the training is not just to recognize tornadoes, but to have some understanding of storm structure, which in turn better prepares the spotter for the extreme and unusual circumstances they may encounter. Other topics covered include an update on the latest NWS technology and procedures, and ideas for organizing/coordinate spotting groups. No prior training is required, just a desire to serve the public.

The class will be held in the Dave Landrum Community Center, 520 Lynn Avenue, Pawhuska, on Thursday, March 19, 2009 from 7 p.m.-9 p.m. Everyone is welcome and we hope to see you there.

Diabetes listed as one of top three “killers” of Native Americans

Type 2 Diabetes is attacking our Native American Community in epidemic numbers. We as Native Americans are “at risk” just because of who we are. Diabetes is listed as one of the top three “killers” of Native American People, with the other two being Heart Disease and Cancer. Diabetes and Heart Disease are related and, in most cases, can be prevented or delayed with good nutrition and exercise. It has also been reported that Native American People who already suffer from Type 2 Diabetes can prevent or delay deadly complications with good nutrition and exercise, as well.

Through our Diabetic and Community Health Program, Native Americans, who reside within the reservation, can receive free glucose monitoring supplies, diabetic, fitness and nutritional education, free membership to our Fitness Center, free blood pressure monitors, diabetic socks and assistance with eyeglasses, dentures and shoes.

Let’s work together to improve our quality of life and prevent our children from suffering from these debilitating diseases.
that shows both sides of the issue. This information is important in that it helps Congressional members with the many, many bills to be considered. Creating legislation is an exciting process, and I want you to participate.

Each day brings individuals and groups hoping to sit down with a congressional member to influence his decision. The key fact is how beneficial the information they wish to impart will be to serve the Nation.

How to Advocate

Here are some basics to help you get started. (1) Get acquainted with congressional members in advance, especially the congressperson you hope to influence; visit their offices if possible. (2) Prepare a 15-minute presentation with detailed information about both sides of your issue. Be precise, honest, direct, and accurate. Show how legislation would affect your business or the Osage Nation. Demonstrate integrity and qualifications. Project a constructive, respective attitude. Prepare a prioritized list of desired outcomes. (3) Leave a package of fully documented materials. Use email with attachments if a meeting is not possible. Follow up with detailed answers to questions.

How a Bill Becomes a Law

Following are the four steps showing how a bill becomes a law. (1) A member of Congress introduces the bill. A short description is read aloud. (2) Committee action. The presiding officer, Speaker of the Congress Archie Mason, assigns the bill to a committee. Typically, the committee hears public testimony. Afterwards they either decide to take no action or to issue a report on the bill with recommendations. A bill can stay in committee for a period of time. (3) Floor action. A bill is read three times in chamber and debated. Amendments may be added. A bill that receives a majority vote is considered passed. Differences are worked out. The bill is put in final form, signed by the presiding officers, and sent to the chief. (4) The chief may veto a bill; if not, the bill becomes law with the chief’s signature. The chief may also allow the bill to become law without his signature.

Rejected: Osage Nation’s Lawsuit for State Income Tax Exemption

On Friday, January 23, 2009, U.S. District Judge James Payne ruled against the Osage Nation’s lawsuit on whether Tribal members living in and working for the Tribe in Osage County should be exempt from paying state income taxes. What Judge Payne declared was that land in Osage County was not Indian Country unless it was one of the scattered parcels of trust land. Let me clarify the meaning of “Indian Country.” Though we use the term informally, the specific definition implies to only the following three: (1) all lands within the boundaries of the Indian reservation, (2) dependent Indian communities, which is land set aside by the federal government for the use, benefit, or occupancy of Indian communities, and (3) trust or allotments. When land is declared Indian Country, the Tribe has jurisdiction. The Osage Nation’s desire was to have Osage County judicially declared Indian Country. Contrary to what some Osage County residents believed it was not our desire to take over the county. We hoped to work and to build intergovernmental relationships at county and state levels.

Moving Forward

Osages are simmering, and Chief Gray and Nation’s legal counsel plan to move forward with pursuing our claim. We realize the state has had jurisdiction over Osage County for over 100 years, but we have not exerted our sovereignty except on trust land, excluding the mineral estate. Payne noted that 2,296 square miles make up Osage County and only 5.4 percent of the 44,437 residents identify themselves as Osage. First, let me remind you that in 1808, the Osages gave up 30 million acres in a treaty signing to the U.S. government. Sixty-one years later and 79,997,704 acres poorer, the Osages were moved to Oklahoma and placed on 2,296 square miles, which we shared with other tribes. Second, let me mention the economic impact the Osages — the 5.4 percent — contributed to the State of Oklahoma. In statistics shown in 2007, the Osage Nation made an economic impact of $222M, employed more than 1,800 people with a payroll of $29M, and $79M was paid out to non-Indian suppliers for goods and services supporting our administrative operations. The Osage mineral estate paid $56M in royalties to the Nation’s headright shareholders. The majority of those shareholders live in Oklahoma buying gas and groceries, paying housing costs and utilities, and sending their children to public schools.

Jurisdiction and Indian Country

Regarding those “scattered parcels of trust land” referred to by Judge Payne, my point of view is that the government has been attempting to disestablish the Osage Reservation since allotment distribution. Once the allotments were handed out, many Indians sold their land to non-Indians and the trust was lost. In fact, had it not been for the mineral estate, which is in trust to the federal government, we would not have our Osage Reservation today. But what I believe is that if an Osage member or the Nation buys a parcel of land in Osage County, then we should have jurisdiction over it and it should be called Indian Country. What’s more, Osage County is recognized federally as the only Indian reservation in Oklahoma. I’m not sure where Judge Payne got his facts.

Ruling Serves No One

In 2000, the Osage Nation began an economic renewal with the establishment of our gaming and tobacco enterprises. With the formation of the Osage Constitution, we began to exert our sovereignty. In summary, because of our economic renewal and its impact to the state and because the federal government recognizes the Osage Reservation, my point of view is that Judge Payne’s ruling does no one a service.
