Welcome to Our Worship

Sunday Morning Message: Christ is Preached

Sunday Evening Message: The Faith of a Canaanite Woman

As we continue to examine that family relationship, we come to corrective discipline. What happens when children disobey the laws of their parents? How should parents react? This is one of the crucial areas connected with discipline. Whatever the parents do when the child blatantly defies parental authority can leave lasting impressions with the child. Those impressions can be good or bad; it all depends on how the parent handles the situation and how the parent corrects the inappropriate behavior. Also, in particular, it depends on how the parent handles the situation through the years of that child's development. If parents are inconsistent in dealing with disobedience, the children develop no respect for any authority figure in their lives, and that includes God. But if parents lovingly and consistently correct their children when they violate parental laws, then the children develop a respect for and an appreciation for authority in their lives.

Think of the consequences of some common reactions to children's disobedience. Some parents respond to their children's disobedience by ignoring it. Their reasoning is that if they respond in some way to the misbehavior, they will reinforce it and thus encourage the child to repeat the action. But what do they really teach the children? They teach them that disobedience is inconsequential. How sad for the children.

Another common way that some parents respond to their children is by making empty threats. This teaches children that the word of those in authority means nothing. Second, it teaches children that if they act badly enough, they can get their own way. Many parents unintentionally teach those very principles by the kind of action just described.

Consider what the Bible teaches regarding correcting disobedient children. "He that withholds his rod hates his son, but he who loves him disciplines him diligently" (Prov. 13:24). "Discipline your son while there is hope, and do not desire his death" (Prov. 19:18). "Foolishness is bound up in the heart of a child; The rod of discipline will remove it far from him" (Prov. 22:15). "Do not hold back discipline from the child, although you strike him with the rod, he will not die. You shall strike him with the rod and rescue his soul from Sheol" (Prov. 23:13-14). "Correct your son, and he will give you comfort; He will also delight your soul" (Prov. 29:17).

Let us also take the word of God into consideration with the raising of our family.

For His glory—Elvis Galbreath
