MESSENGER

Welcome to Our Worship

Sunday Morning Message: The Good Confession and the church—Part II
Sunday Evening Message: Making Room for God Every Day

What Have Others Seen in Our Homes?

It would seem that the Creator of homes has witnessed some drastic alterations in his original intention for the home (Gen. 2:18-24; Matt. 19:4-6). The contempt that is often expressed for the traditional family is largely defiance directed against the Biblical teaching for the home. We are often reminded that the traditional family is no more the norm for the home today. We are told that the television image of the family epitomized by “Ozzie and Harriet,” and “Leave It To Beaver” is a relic of the past.

Now, events may re-arrange the number of family members living under one roof, thus making for different realities than those mentioned above. Death may claim a spouse or a child. Tragic divorce may break up a home. Children grow up and leave home. Still God’s design for the family structure is our pattern for the home, and if it is not seen in the homes of Christians today it is becoming less likely that it will be seen anywhere.

The word family means different things to different people today. The debate over family values generally finds advocates in two main camps: First, the traditional family (dad, mom, and the kids [if any]). This would include widowed and divorced people, and extended families that might include grandparents or guardians. Second, is the alternative family. This camp says that one should append a strict definition to the family because people disagree on a definition and deviant idealists might be excluded. Many different living arrangements are considered to be families.

Regardless of how societal standards for home and family may change, it is true that the design of God in this realm remains unchanged. There is no amount of cultural deviation from the divine plan for the family that either can or will make a better home than the one that is patterned after God’s design.

God appointed different roles for men, women, and children in the home. A family begins with a man and a woman—one man for one woman in a life-long marital relationship (Mt. 19:3-9). This is God’s arrangement. The world must see the truth of God in our families and in our Homes. If the world does not see the word of God in Christians, it will not see it anywhere. We are the light and salt of the world.
